New Branch Library Plan Backed

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff
ALTHOUGH Lubbock City-County Library Board members are skeptical of a city council plan to exchange the Godeke Branch Library for a Southwest Lubbock facility, they tentatively gave the trade-off their blessing Wednesday.

The project was more enthusiastically received by representatives of Lubbock senior citizens organizations who stand to inherit Godeke as a senior citizens center.

The city council wants to build a new branch library on park land already owned by the city at Quaker Avenue and South Loop 289 to avoid the "prohibitive" cost of acquiring additional land.

Then Godeke, also owned by the city, could be remodeled for the senior citizens center.

Two For One Bargain
"It's like getting two for the price of one — and that's not often the case," Councilwoman Carolyn Jordan told the library board.

Jim Weston, city community facilities director, said a branch library "needs to be located near a thoroughfare so there will be drop-in traffic."

"But land costs on major thoroughfares are prohibitive," Weston said.

He estimated construction of the library building alone would cost between $360,000 and $400,000, not including parking, landscaping or equipment.

Funding for the library construction would come from a complex trade-off of money.

The $530,000 in Community Development money, earmarked for a new senior citizens center, would be used to remodel Godeke and to build a softball complex in North Lubbock.

Revenue Sharing Helps
Revenue sharing funds totaling $218,525, which were tagged for construction of a softball complex in the Southwest Lubbock linear park that never materialized, would be used to begin construction of the library.

However, additional funding would be required to complete the 10,120,000-square-foot facility. Mrs. Jordan explained the council is examining the possibility of using future revenue sharing monies to finish the construction.

The major concern of library board members was the quality of the facility which would be built compared to that of the Godeke Branch.

"We know what we have with Godeke, but we don't know what we're going to have out there," board chairman Tom Johnson said.

"Potentially it could have a very positive effect as a stepping stone to having more (branch libraries)," he said. "My question is whether it can be built for $360,000."

Library director Bill Stewart noted the chosen site of the Southwest Lubbock branch is "fairly remote and on a park site which is generally one of the worst sites for a library."

Expensive modifications may have to be made to the building to prevent flooding. See NEW BRANCH Page 16

Police List Six Dead, 100 Hurt

A-J News Service
MEXICO CITY — Two sleep earthquakes and two aftershocks struck Mexico City Wednesday, killing and injuring scores of people and causing damage to swaying high-rise buildings that swayed precariously with jagged windows.

Police said at least six persons died and 100 others were injured. At least two older buildings collapsed and 700 others sustained damage, forcing the evacuation of thousands of other residents and students.

The nine-story building housing many offices was severely split in two, but two halves remained by some six feet. The freeway building tilted on one side, sliding about two feet, according to the men who helped evacuate the area.

Epicenter in Pacific
Authorities put the strength of the first quake at between 7.5 and 7.9 on the open-end Richter scale, with epicenter located 400 miles south-southwest of Mexico City at the entrance to the Gulf of Tehuantepec to the Pacific Ocean.

It was the world's strongest since a quake reaching 8 on the Richter scale hit Indonesia Aug. 18, 1976.

The first quake struck at 1:45 p.m. CST and lasted for two minutes and 50 seconds. It was followed by a second, weaker quake some five minutes later. About an hour later, an aftershock rattled through the city. A second, weaker aftershock was felt at about 4:15 p.m. CST.

Police said two persons were killed by a falling lamp post, two others died of heart attacks, one man was crushed by a falling wall and the sixth person to die from a third floor window, apparently landing the building in two in one about an hour later.

Buildings Crumble
In a downtown Mexico City hotel "the bed started moving and a large opening came between the walls," said Yvonne Nunez of Puebla, Colo. "The new and old parts of the building came apart about a foot and a half. I jumped over the opening to get to the stairs."

Vivian Garner, 35, of Hutchinson, Kan., said she "saw everything shaking" and there "was a fall near the swimming pool" at her hotel.

The Red Cross had said it had reports of some buildings destroyed in the heart of Mexico City. However, federal inspectors said later some buildings were only damaged but some was destroyed. They said damage was minor for an earthquake of such magnitude. The inspectors said some buildings twisted on their foundations, but did not cave in.

Balconies Hang Crusty
Cornices and masonry fell from many buildings. Some balconies hung crazily. The subway system stopped temporarily but was back in service soon after the tremors stopped.

In Mexico City, hospital emergency rooms reported more than 100 injuries. A nurse at one huge medical complex said, "We have 11 people in the emergency room and they are still coming in." American tourists in high-rise hotels See MEXICO CITY Page 16

U.S. Trade Deficit Soars

WASHINGTON (AP) — A sharp decline in exports of food, chemicals and gold pushed the nation's trade deficit to $2.1 billion in October, the worst in three months, the government said Wednesday.

Both the U.S. stock market and world currency markets reacted negatively to the news. The Dow Jones Industrial Average closed down by 14.03 points to 790.11 in slow trading on the New York Stock Exchange, while the dollar fell against most other major currencies.

Meanwhile, the index of economic indicators increased by a moderate 0.5 percent in October, pointing to continuing economic growth even though it was below the 0.3 percent advance in September.

The index is designed to indicate future economic trends. A big increase in contracts and orders for plant and equipment was the major contributor to the October gain.

The Labor Department said worker productivity in the third quarter actually rose at an annual rate of 1.4 percent instead of the 4.5 percent it previously had estimated. Recent sharp declines in productivity have been blamed as one of the causes of continuing inflation.

The U.S. trade deficit, which now totals $2.8 billion for the first 10 months of 1978, has been a major cause along with inflation of the steep decline in the dollar during the past two years.

Officials estimate there already are about $500 billion in U.S. dollars held abroad, most of them from past trade deficits. As the supply of dollars outpaces foreign demand, which it has, the value declines.

Chairman G. William Miller of the Federal Reserve Board said Wednesday the decline in the dollar has added about 1 percent to the nation's inflation rate in 1978, and will raise it even more in 1979.

The dollar decline alone, he said, is costing Americans between $10 billion and $15 billion a year in lost purchasing power.

The October trade deficit followed two months of shrinking deficits and was the worst since a deficit of just under $3 billion in July. The deficit for September was $1.7 billion.

U.S. officials sought to put the best possible face on the figures. Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal said they were "consistent with, if not below, our expectations."

Exports in October declined $415 million or 3.1 percent to a total of $13 billion, down from $13.4 billion in September, while imports were virtually unchanged at $15.1 billion.

The size of the decline in exports was the largest in 10 months. But Blumenthal said much of this was due to a $224 million decline in gold exports that reflected what he described as erratic overseas

School's Enrollment Boost Snagged By Desegregation Case

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff
LUBBOCK High parents, who still are lobbying hard for a means to boost their campus' enrollment, may find school officials reluctant to do anything until the federal courts settle the school district's desegregation case.

Attempts to turn more students into Lubbock High could be damaging to the desegregation case pending before the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, according to some district officials, including school board president Charles Waters.

"It is a troublesome issue," Waters said. "In my opinion, we definitely will need our attorneys' advice before we make any decisions on Lubbock High."

Parents Ask Extension
Last Tuesday Lubbock High parents asked the board to enlarge their school's attendance area, thus increasing its enrollment, so that Lubbock High could better compete in academics and athletics with larger Class AAAA schools.

The school district's staff hopes to complete by early January an analysis of the number of students living in areas surrounding the existing Lubbock High zone, said Dr. E.C. Leslie, assistant superintendent for administration.

At their Jan. 18 meeting, school trustees are scheduled to discuss the matter.

Lubbock High parents say their school, with a present enrollment of 1,240 students, has room for about 800 more pupils. In contrast, they say, the city's other Class AAAA high schools are overcrowded — Monterey with 1,960 students and Coronado with 1,895.

School Board Sympathetic
School board members generally are sympathetic to Lubbock High's problem. Said board vice president Monte Hasie: "I think we need to do something. Lubbock High needs more students." A logical solution, board members say, is to zone parts of the Monterey and/or Coronado attendance areas into Lubbock High.

Because it is under a court order to desegregate, the school district would have to submit any such proposed change in attendance boundaries to federal Judge Halbert O. Woodward.

By itself, the suggested expansion of the Lubbock High zone probably would not be opposed by the U.S. Justice Department or Woodward, school officials and parents say. Indeed, the change would enhance desegregation by bringing more whites into what is now a 60 percent minority school.

But returning to the federal courthouse — even with such a "safe" request — could be risky, Waters said.

He fears that the Justice Department could use the request as an opportunity to "introduce new testimony" concerning desegregation in general. And that testimony "might hurt us" at the 5th Circuit level, Waters said.

"I am not in favor of anything that would jeopardize our desegregation case" before the New Orleans-based appeals court, he said. "In my opinion, reopening testimony could be damaging."

Administrators Share Concern
Leslie added that school administrators, too, "share this concern. We don't really know for sure what the effect (of returning to Woodward with a Lubbock High zone change) would be. This is one of the factors the board will have to weigh."

"Anything you go to court, you don't know whether what comes up will hurt you or help you," he said.

Though there may be some confusion over the legal ramifications, school trustees should have plenty of data on the student numbers involving in any redrawing of attendance boundaries.

Leslie said the report being prepared will show the school board the scholastic population in 17 different geographic segments of the city.

The "dot study" is being based on curriculum See SCHOOL BOARD Page 16 purchase of U.S. gold, which were up sharply the previous month.

"Significantly, the volume of trade in the form of commodities, goods and industrial materials is continuing to show substantial improvement," he said.

On the import side, Americans continued to buy more foreign automobiles and electronic equipment than before.

It seemed certain the trade gap for the year will surpass last year's record $38.5 billion deficit. However, the administration expects the trade deficit to decline substantially next year, perhaps by half, as other countries increase their imports of U.S. goods.

The value of oil imports in October dropped by $125 million to a total of nearly $3.5 billion, following an increase in September.

Coupon Flow Welcomed By Goodfellows

THEY HAVE begun to trickle in — Goodfellow coupons bearing the names of boys and girls of Lubbock, who may be misled by Santa Claus at Christmas unless they get some help.

They are expected to increase in volume rapidly, and they must, because time is important to one of Lubbock's most worthwhile Christmas programs—toys, candy, fruit and nuts delivered to the doorsteps of needy children Christmas morning by Goodfellows.

The coupons will appear daily in The Lubbock Avalanche-Journal through Dec. 13. Then will come the tremendous job of screening names, preparing lists, packaging of Christmas gifts, and finally, the delivery to doorsteps of the city's children on Christmas morning.

Children, parents and interested persons may mail the coupons to Chief Goodfellow, P.O. Box 491, Lubbock, Texas, 79408.

The Goodfellows program, now in its 44th year, is designed for boys and girls under the age of 14 who live within the city limits of Lubbock.

There are two other important segments of the Goodfellow program: 1. Financing through donations of Lubbock citizens; and 2. Distribution of the Christmas sacks.

Donations and volunteers' communication should be addressed to the above address for Chief Goodfellow.

The coupon may be found on Page 10, Sec. A.

Ruling Favors Advertising By Doctors

WASHINGTON (AP) — The American Medical Association, by prohibiting doctors from advertising, has fostered an illegal price-fixing conspiracy that has inflated medical bills, an administrative law judge ruled Wednesday.

Federal Trade Commission Judge Ernest G. Barnes said the AMA's policy against doctors advertising for patients, adopted early this century to stamp out medical quackery, has developed into a device for insuring physicians' profits.

Barnes ordered the 200,000-member

AMA, the largest professional association in the world, to rescind its rules that keep physicians from advertising or otherwise soliciting patients.

The AMA said in a statement it will appeal the order.

Barnes said the AMA rules prevent doctors from giving patients information about what alternative health services are available. "The costs to the public in terms of less expensive or even, perhaps, more improved forms of medical services, are great," he said.

His decision is not final until the five-member commission has a chance to review it. If the commission approves it, as expected, the AMA could appeal to a federal appeals court.

Robert B. Hunter, chairman of the AMA board of trustees, said in Chicago that "the most shocking and pervasive attack on professionalism" in the ruling is a provision that the AMA will be permitted to participate in the setting of ethical guidelines for doctors' advertising after first obtaining FTC approval.

"We don't feel that lawyers, dentists, engineers, and other professionals, labor unions, business entities, charitable organizations, state and local governmental entities should have to ask the federal government if they can issue ethical guidelines to their members and what those guidelines should say," Hunter said.

He insisted that the AMA favors physician advertising and a free flow of public information about health care services. "We are opposed to false and misleading advertising and its adverse impact on the quality of health care available to patients," Hunter said.

The decision comes after a series of rulings in recent years that have given lawyers, engineers, druggists and optometrists the right to advertise.

The pivotal ruling in this series was a June, 1977 decision by the Supreme Court, striking down the American Bar Association's restriction on advertising. See JUDGE Page 16

Atlantic Hurricane Season At End; Forecasters Fret About Complacency

MIAMI (AP) — The 1978 Atlantic hurricane season, one of the busiest in recent years, ends today. But forecasters will be working through the winter to end the complacency of millions of coastal residents who have never experienced a major storm.

"We're trying to do everything we can to make people aware of the dangers that they encounter when they come to the coastline," said Dr. Neil Frank, director of the National Hurricane Center.

"It's not that I'm anti-beachfront living. It's a great way of life," Frank said. "But so many people are not knowledgeable about the property they are buying."

There were 11 tropical storms during this last Atlantic season, which runs from June 1 to Nov. 30, and five developed into hurricanes. A tropical storm is upgraded to hurricane status when its winds exceed 74 miles an hour.

In the average year, about eight storms will develop.

The first storm of the year, Amelia, did not reach hurricane strength but it spawned floods in Texas that claimed about 30 lives and caused millions of dollars in damage in early August.

Later that month, tropical storm Debra struck the Gulf Coast. Accompanying tornadoes, heavy rains and floods caused severe damage to crops.

Most of the storms, however, blew themselves out in the North Atlantic without ever touching land.

"This was a continuation of the pattern of the last several years," Frank said. "In recent years, we've been pretty lucky."

South Florida, one of the most heavily populated coastal regions in the United States, has not had a major tropical storm in 13 years. In that time, the population has more than doubled.

"If you take the total U.S. coastal areas on the Gulf and Atlantic, there were 36.5 million people living there in 1970 (the last year for which figures are available) and 28 million of them had never seen a major hurricane," Frank said.

He and other hurricane experts are concerned that many of those residents — some living on dangerously low land — have been lulled into a false sense of security and will not react quickly when endangered by a major storm.

Frank said he and his aides would be visiting nearly every Gulf and East Coast state during the winter to speak at local meetings about the terrifyingly destructive power of hurricanes.

"We've got a lot of work to do," Frank said. "The message is: If we get a big one coming, get ready to take action. We don't want people to say we haven't had a big one for a long time and therefore there's nothing to worry about."

Assault Convictions Net Two Lubbock Women 10-Year Terms

By FRANK PATRICK
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A jury Wednesday meted out 10-year prison terms to two young Lubbock women found guilty of aggravated assault in connection with the shooting of a convenience store clerk.

The terms were assessed to Mary Helen Garzes, 23, of 1959 Ave. H, No. 2, and Sylvia Rodriguez Sepeda, 18, of 1959 Ave. H, No. 3.

The seven-man, five-woman jury in Judge Robert C. Wright's 137th District Court deliberated approximately 40 minutes before returning the 10-year terms. Ten years is the maximum penalty for an aggravated assault conviction.

It had taken the panel about 20 minutes to return the guilty verdict.

The two defendants, tried jointly, were convicted as a result of the Aug. 31 shooting of 18-year-old Todd Jay McClellan, a former clerk at the Preston Milk Store at 1101 34th St.

Earlier during the three-day trial, McClellan had offered dramatic testimony concerning the incident in question.

He had stated that the two defendants were near the counter, and that he had bent down to check for an item at the request of Miss Sepeda.

"When I came back up I heard a loud boom and heard blood rushing. My arm went numb and then my arm started hurting terribly."

"I looked up and I saw Garzes standing there and she was laughing."

McClellan indicated the bullet entered the right side of his throat and exited the back of the neck.

"I could hear my own blood rushing ... I don't know how to describe the sound, but I knew it was my own blood," McClellan elaborated.

Asst. Dist. Atty. Everett Seymore asked McClellan if he had said anything. "After I was shot, I said 'God, please don't let me die. Please forgive me for my sins,'" McClellan answered.

The husky teen-ager said he never saw a weapon and did not know who had shot him. He said the shot seemed to him to come from Miss Garzes' direction.

Testimony indicated the two defendants were apprehended moments after the approximate 4:30 a.m. shooting by police Sgt. Jim Little, who reportedly had the store under surveillance as a possible armed robbery target.

Little indicated he saw two women leave the store, and that one of them, identified as Miss Sepeda, threw a dark object over a fence.

According to testimony, a .38-caliber derringer pistol was subsequently found in the area.

Miss Sepeda took the witness stand to blame her co-defendant for the shooting. She said she was bending down to look at some doughnuts when she heard "something pop."

"I stood up and saw the man bleeding," she said.

"Who shot Todd McClellan?" Mike Brown, Miss Sepeda's appointed attorney, had asked earlier.

Miss Sepeda was silent for several seconds. "Do I have to answer that?" she finally asked. When Brown told her to go ahead and answer, she said Miss Garzes had fired the shot.

She also testified that she had no prior knowledge the shooting would occur.

Miss Sepeda indicated she thought Miss Garzes had handed her an object inside the store after the shooting, but indicated events happened so quickly that the episode was not clear in her mind.

Testimony indicated that the gun belonged to a boyfriend of Miss Sepeda's.

Testimony also indicated McClellan had been involved in an altercation inside the store with one of Miss Sepeda's brothers the day before the shooting.

During a rugged cross-examination, Miss Sepeda indicated she and Miss Garzes had earlier discussed possible action against McClellan.

"Isn't it true that you forced Mary Helen Garzes to shoot that man under threat of death?" Seymore asked. "No. I didn't force her," Miss Sepeda replied.

Fair, Dry Days, High In 60s Seen Through Friday

The continued presence of a weak surface pressure gradient will mean fair and dry weather for the South Plains through Friday.

The gradient will last through tonight, when a surface trough is expected to develop along a north-south axis across the area, according to the National Weather Service.

About eight hours of warm sunshine will cause the afternoon high to reach the low 60s both today and Friday.

Tonight's low will dip into the mid-30s as the relative humidity climbs to 80 percent after an expected afternoon reading of 35 percent.

Light frost will coat low-lying areas Friday morning, as it was expected to do today.

West to southwesterly winds blowing to 15 mph will buffet the Lubbock area this afternoon and Friday.

Mostly fair skies and warmer temperatures will prevail across the state today, with a chance of showers and thunderstorms in Southeast Texas, forecasters predict.

Light showers, in which rainfall amounts generally were less than a quarter of an inch, dotted the coast and Southeast Texas Wednesday.

'Whitewash' Denied In Utilities Probe

AUSTIN (AP) — A Texas Public Utility Commission attorney vigorously denied Wednesday that an investigation of three electric companies will be a whitewash.

"If anyone has any evidence that the staff is whitewashing this thing, I want to know about it right now," said John Bell, commission general counsel.

The commission has ordered a hearing into business dealings between the sister companies of Texas Electric Service Co., Texas Power & Light Co. and Dallas Power & Light Co.

All three are subsidiaries of the Texas Utilities system, which also has fuel, service and generating ofshoos.

Bell commented during a preliminary conference on how the Feb. 19 hearing will be conducted. Examiner Phil Ruckelshaus reset the date from Jan. 15 because the city of Irving and another party recently were included in the proceedings.

Alleged improper transactions between the companies could mean refunds to TESCO and TPL customers.

However, Irving officials protested being thrown into the inquiry.

"The Irving City Council does not want to be brought into it," said Don Rorschach, Irving city attorney. The city's appeal of TPL rates is stalled until the inquiry is finished.

Ruckelshaus said he had no choice about including the Irving case in the investigation because of an order from State District Judge Herman Jones of Austin. Jones returned a TPL rate case to the commission and said a final rate order must await the commission probe.

"As far as evidence of a whitewashing, I don't think that's going to be known till this hearing is complete," Rorschach said.

Bell argued that Irving's position is too self-serving.

"No one seems to be really interested in what justice is, or what the public interest is," the commission lawyer said. "Everyone is jockeying for their own procedure to stand."

Company customers might be paying improper or illegal charges every month, he added.

Among transactions under scrutiny are

'Most Wanted' List Member Held In Dallas

DALLAS (AP) — FBI agents have arrested James Hoyt Powell Sr., 43, of Greenville, S.C., on the FBI's most wanted list, and his son, James Hoyt Powell Jr., 18.

FBI Special Agent U.H. Specht said Wednesday the two men were arrested Tuesday night at a busy intersection in North Dallas. He said the elder Powell was armed with a .44-caliber Magnum revolver and had more than $70,000 in cash and travelers' checks in his possession.

Powell was convicted in his absence on Aug. 9, 1976, of the July 10, 1972, robbery of a Greenville branch of the South Carolina National Bank.

A warrant was issued for his arrest for failure to appear for trial and for bond default.

The younger Powell is an unemployed carnival worker.

The elder Powell and Willie Foster Sellers, on the FBI's 10 most wanted list, have been the object of an intensive nationwide investigation since both were convicted of bank robbery in August 1976.

The 1972 robbery was one of an estimated 30 bank robberies attributed to members of a loose-knit group known as the Dawson Gang, which staged holdups with military precision.

The senior Powell is wanted in a chain of similar bank robberies in Tennessee, Arkansas and Texas, including the Oct. 12 armed robbery of Chireno State Bank in Chireno, Texas.

Specht said the FBI is trying to determine if Sellers is in the Dallas area.

Gas Well Controlled; Evacuees Return Home

MINERAL WELLS (AP) — Fifteen families from the nearby community of Cool have been allowed to return to the homes they evacuated after a gas well blew out last weekend, authorities said.

Oil company officials were able to cap the leaking well late Tuesday night.

No one was injured in the Saturday night blast and damage was confined to the well site, officials said. The blowout forced authorities to close U.S. 180 between FM 113 in Cool and FM 1195 in Mineral Wells.

AN EDITORIAL:

Tax Revolt--On The Potomac

TAXPAYERS' HOPES that a family squabble between cities of the Snow Belt and the Sun Belt would result in less of their federal taxes being squandered were dashed when President Carter appeared on the scene as mediator.

"I promise that the cities will bear no more and no less than a fair share of budget restraint," Carter told the National League of Cities convention in St. Louis.

Earlier, there had been some indications that the $80 billion in federal taxes doled out each year to states and cities might be a juicy plum for the President to squeeze in getting the federal deficit down to "only" $30 billion as he has promised.

FORT WORTH MAYOR Hugh Parmer, expressing the view of Sun Belt cities, had warned a day before the President's talk that continued money grabbing by the Snow Belt could damage the "urban coalition."

He noted that the big cities have been especially successful in lobbying Congress for vast sums of money. A North-South split over which will get the biggest piece of the expanding pie could cause the whole pie to get smaller, Parmer warned.

In fact, federally allocated tax funds now provide 33 percent of the revenues spent each year by state and local governments. That's double the 16.5 percent share recorded in 1963.

Mayors and city councils, on the front line of the tax revolt, are turning to Washington more and more for operating revenues rather than cut back on services and programs.

AN EDITORIAL:

A Matter Of Common Censur

WITH THE BIGGEST head count in American history little more than a year away, the U.S. Census Bureau is wrestling with a $50 billion problem—how to insure the most accurate tally possible.

Although the man on the street probably couldn't care less whether he's counted, the stakes for him, his community and his state are enormous. The federal government alone allocates an estimated $50 billion a year to state and local governments on the basis of population figures.

"OUR MAJOR EMPHASIS this time is on eliminating the undercount that has plagued us in the past," Census Director Manual Plotkin said in a news service interview this week.

"Twenty or 30 years ago, nobody cared if we were off by a few percentage points in our count. But with the growth of government largesse over this past decade, it makes a difference now."

For 1980, the Census Bureau is undertaking a massive effort to improve its coverage through use of its own community service representatives, advisory panels, "indigenous enumerators" and other techniques.

ART BUCHWALD:

Buck-Passing Is Fine If You Can Afford It

NEW YORK—It started off as a joke. What would happen if Europeans, Japanese and OPEC-rich zillionaires decided to buy up everything they could get their hands on in the United States? But no one is laughing anymore.

The United States is now holding a garage sale for the rest of the world.

I hadn't realized how serious it was until I met a friend of mine from Paris named Alain at the Pierre Hotel. We embraced, kissed on both cheeks and headed for the bar.

Alain owns a grocery store in Paris and I assumed he was in the United States to replenish his shelves with Kellogg's Corn Flakes.

But when I asked about it he was uncertain. "I don't know whether to buy Kellogg's Corn Flakes or Post Toasties."

"THEY'RE BOTH very good," I said. "Of course I also like a bowl of shredded wheat once in a while."

"I don't want to buy a bowl. I want to buy the company."

"The company?"

"Of course," he chuckled. "Why do you think I am in the United States?"

He showed me the valise full of Eurodollars he was carrying.

"Don't they remind you of Kleenex?" he asked.

"What a thing to say about the American dollar, Alain!"

"That's what you Americans used to say about the French franc."

"It was a joke," I protested. "Can't you let bygones be bygones?"

"ALL RIGHT," Alain said agreeably. "You see those Japanese businessmen over there? I heard them talking in the elevator. The little fellow with the Nikon camera just bought some land in New York."

"How many feet?" I asked.

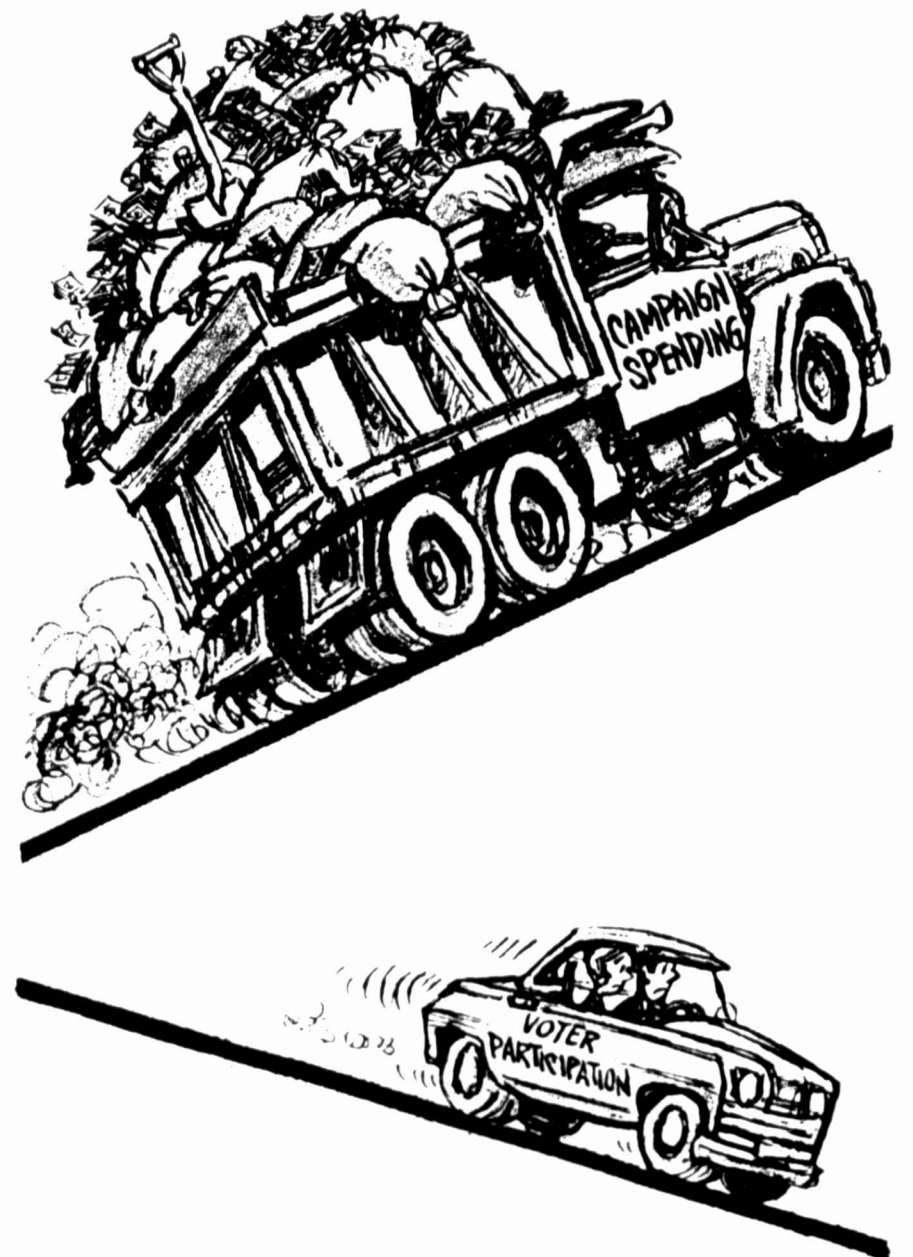

"I'm not sure. I think he said it was 60th Street to 83rd Street on Park Avenue. How many feet would that be?"

"Both sides of Park Avenue?" I asked.

"Of course. He had to protect himself from any Arabs moving across the street."

I ordered a rum and Coca-Cola.

ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK:

Foreboding In Korea

ON THE DMZ WESTERN FRONT, South Korea—all the public reassurances from Washington cannot dispel the foreboding among U.S. and South Korean generals that President Carter's planned withdrawal of U.S. infantrymen from Korea will bring Communist legions down across this most heavily fortified border in the world.

If there are no American foot soldiers as a trip wire on the demilitarized zone (DMZ) separating North and South Korea, will the President of the United States unhesitatingly dispatch U.S. bombers? Without them, superior Communist firepower will surely sweep through South Korean defenses into the sprawling capital of Seoul.

Doubts here about the U.S. commitment must be shared by Marshal Kim Il Sung, North Korea's dictator who at 66 sees time running out on his dream of unifying the Korean peninsula by force.

His last opportunity may be 1982, when Carter plans to withdraw the last battalions of the U.S. 2nd Infantry Division. That makes the mood among the military here even bleaker today than on our last visit here in 1975, just after the fall of Saigon.

Kim Il Sung's intentions seem less cloudy when viewed from the DMZ than from Washington. The continuing military buildup has widened the Communist lead in tanks, artillery and overall firepower.

This, added to North Korea's extensive defense industry, enables Kim to invade without permission of either Moscow or Peking.

His plan, capture Seoul even more quickly than the three days it took in the 1950 invasion, then seek negotiations to unify the peninsula on Communist terms and radically transform Northeast Asia's balance of power.

ANDREW TULLY:

Perking Lot Full

WASHINGTON—"Sometimes it seems like the Washington federal bureaucracy does everything it can to make the taxpayers sore," said the General Accounting Office man with a weary sigh.

The GAO's Congress watchdog over the executive branch of the federal government.

That time it's parking spaces for those who feed at Uncle Sam's trough. Kindly do not scoff. There are 28,300 spaces set aside for federal employes, and the rental value of those spaces is $17 million a year.

Moreover, the government charges for only one-third of the 17,700 spaces set aside for car pools at rates of approximately $10 to $15 a month. Commercial rates average $50 a month.

ANYWAY, THE GAO inquiry was requested by outgoing Sen. James Abourezk, D-S.D.

GAO's report said there was a big but undetermined number of "phantom" car pools through which employes reserve parking spaces by overstating the number of occupants per car.

Officials of the Office of Management and Budget say they're "studying" the federal parking issue. But private citizens who pay their right arms for commercial parking should not hang by their thumbs waiting for action.

For in this town of the career hustler free or low-rate parking is considered one of the "perks" of their employment—and, perhaps more important—a status symbol.

A BUREAUCRAT forced to cough up even a measly $10 a month to park his car can't hold up his head in the company of his peers.

Then there are the lower-level federal workers. They argue that low parking rates are one of the reasons they went to work for Uncle Sam.

Unfortunately, they don't threaten to quit, thus reducing the cost of big government, if denied such "perks."

In any case, the issue is politically dangerous because of the potential danger of hurting the feelings of tens of thousands of federal workers who vote.

But bureaucrats are not the only offenders. Congress oversees 9,100 parking spaces on Capitol Hill for the Senate, House, the Library of Congress, and the Supreme Court.

A REPORT BY the Architect of the Capitol said that 11,400 Capitol Hill workers drive their cars to work, and only about 700 are members of car pools.

The Washington area now has a new subway, still unfinished, that is 31 miles long.

The Council of Washington Governments wants federal agencies to charge commercial rates for parking spaces to help raise additional revenue to pay for the subway and to encourage its use.

No way, fellows. Nobody's brave enough to challenge all those voters.

Peanuts? Not exactly. Those bureaucrats on Capitol Hill are part of a government that is constantly harassing the faceless citizen to conserve energy by the use of public transportation and car pools.

And, as usual, they are lolling in the comfort of special privilege. The slogan lives on: Do what we say, not what we do.

JAY HARRIS:

The Man And Goal

THERE ARE SOME people in the world who have a gift for tying up the loose ends.

They are the ones who most often are willing to accept a challenge, the chore others shirk, the chance to do something with little fanfare.

J. C. Rickman is one of those persons.

We have known J. C. for almost 20 years. For most of that time he has been business manager of The Avalanche-Journal. It has been a most pleasant relationship, to say the least.

But, it is in another capacity that we write about the man today—not as an efficient business manager; not as a family man; not as a man who enjoys hunting, not as a sports fan, or a man with a knack for listening—but, as a man who stepped into the fire without stopping to see how hot the frying pan might be.

MR. RICKMAN has just concluded a near three-year stint on the board of the Lubbock County Hospital District.

When he joined the beleaguered brigade, which at the time faced problems to the right, left and from the front and rear, it looked as though a viable Indiana Avenue, the Teaching Hospital and the Tech Med Complex would never open.

Now, less than three years from that January, 1976 initiation, J. C. voluntarily has stepped down from the board of which he was chairman the past two years. And not only Indiana, but the Health Sciences Center Hospital and the Med School are open, healthy and going strong.

J. C. will be the first to say that it took a lot of people, on the Lubbock County Hospital Board, the Med School, Tech Board, the County Commission and the Legislature to make the dream come true. But others will just as quickly give Mr. Rickman a lion's share of the credit.

IN HIS QUIET, efficient, forthright manner, J. C. helped guide what at the time was a night-mare to that dream.

He is quick to give much credit to his predecessors on the board and to the Lubbock County Commissioners Court, which fought many of the early battles.

When he stepped down, the board presented Mr. Rickman with an appropriate metal plaque and a book of color photos of various scenes in the impressive hospital. He also has two huge loose-leaf folders crammed with stories and occasional editorial comment which charted the winding, sometimes rocky path which made the whole thing possible.

And he has a vision that both the Teaching Hospital, with its fancy name, and the Med School, with one of the largest buildings in the state, will someday have "an even greater impact on Lubbock and this area than anyone dares dream."

WHEN THE distinguished looking Mr. Rickman offered his resignation recently, he did so only after the LCHD Board had reached "some goals we had set a way back there ..."

Here they are, just as he listed them on a yellow sheet of legal paper:

1. The Hospital has been opened and started on schedule.
2. State funding of $8 million has been obtained to help in defraying start-up expenses over a two-year period.
3. State legislation to provide funds for residency programs within Teaching Hospitals is now on track and should receive early consideration in the next Legislature.
4. The partnership between the Texas Tech University School of Medicine and the Lubbock County Hospital District is operating very satisfactorily.
5. The HSCH staff is strong and capable.
6. The operating agreements between Texas Tech and the LCHD have been written, signed and are operational.
7. Blue Cross-Blue Shield contracts have been negotiated and are now operational.
8. The community's acceptance of the Hospital has been great.

AS HE CLOSES this chapter in his life and his role in the huge complex at Fourth St. and Indiana J. C. sees even bigger mountains to climb.

"It is my feeling at this point, the board perhaps needs to be taking a long-range look to meet the demands which will face the Hospital and Med School within the next five years," he says.

Mr. Rickman is most optimistic about the next Legislature coming up with some sort of permanent funding plan for the residency program in all state teaching hospitals, a top priority item for such hospitals. He envisions both the Teaching Hospital and the Med School growing and continuing "their tremendous impact on the whole South Plains area."

The biggest challenge over the next two years, "the man who has become an expert of sorts on teaching hospitals, says, "is to find an adequate nursing staff. We have a fourth floor equipped and ready for occupancy, but we don't have the nurses," he notes. He sees a nursing school in conjunction with the Med School as a must to help solve the problem.

TODAY, THE 254-bed Health Sciences Center Hospital is far ahead of its schedule in taking patients and contributing to the Med School's training program.

A large number of doctors, both local and those who have moved here, now offer top quality medical care. The Hospital's neo-natal center for handling babies is fully operational with 30 units, and is rated as among the best.

The Med School is expanding into other portions of the huge complex as state funds become available. Some day, an area for emergency helicopter landings, will be finished.

The Hospital is not a charity-free type setup. It is a first-class, highly specialized and staffed entity able to meet the needs of the public at all levels of health care. Its mission is simple.

Summing it up, J. C. Rickman says, "The only reason that the Teaching Hospital exists is to support the Med School and to provide quality medical care to this vast area."

Comic Book Campaign Helps Bag Village's Garbage Problems

WILTON, N.H. (UPI) — Wilton has borrowed a page from the cartoon characters who plugged for U.S. savings bonds during World War II. The southern New Hampshire town of 2,700 is printing comic books to promote good garbage habits.

Last fall, Wilton published a comic book called "Dump Hassle." Its cover featured an evil-looking rodent clutching a bundle of money.

The drawings, more enthusiastic than slick, were done by volunteers at a cost to the town of $350.

The comic book was aimed at persuading voters to ante up $360,000 for a regional recycling program. It worked.

"One side effect was that the kids asked for it to color them," said Dump Committee Chairman Greg Bohosiewicz. "We got some mileage out of that."

Now Wilton is trying it again — this time to encourage people to sort their garbage for the recycling effort.

"We have a very fancy ordinance in town — what's supposed to go where," said Bohosiewicz, author of both comic books.

"We thought about typewritten single-spaced documents," he added. "Nobody, but nobody, would read it."

"Then we thought: let's try to simplify it. We thought we'd try to put in some people — the obstinate old gentleman and so forth — that we thought people could identify with," he said.

The town has printed 3,000 copies of the new comic book, enough for Wilton and the surrounding towns that will join it in the recycling program. The comic book, called "Sort Trash," features an all-star animal cast.

A sly fox appeals to the rural town's Yankee frugality: "sell all the trash and we can reduce taxes." An angelic kitten describes how to sort trash into piles of glass, cans, paper and compost materials. Stern-looking dogs outline the rules of the dump. Flip the page and a crying pothole pleads for help in making the program work. If that doesn't get sweeping, residents are warned they will be fined for bringing unsegregated garbage.

Bank's Error Makes For Good Reading

ELGIN, Ill. (UPI) — Richard Thornton didn't really believe it when his bank book told him he had saved more than $500,000 from his job as a supermarket bag boy.

But he had a good weekend thinking about it.

The adventure began Friday, when Thornton, 17, a senior at Elgin High School, took his weekly paycheck to the Home Federal Savings and Loan Association of Elgin.

He didn't realize it at the time, but a teller's error had run the serial number of the check together with the amount payable. By the time the resulting figure was added to his account, his bank book showed a balance of $545,754.73.

"I didn't notice it until that night. I was stunned," Thornton said.

"I knew it wasn't right. I just knew it."

So did Home Federal.

Kenneth L. Moran, vice president and savings manager, said the mistake never got into the computer and the extra money never was formally credited to Thornton's account. It just took them a while to find Thornton and tell him.

"They caught the mistake immediately because the totals went way out of whack," Moran said.

Cult Witch Hunt Feared

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Aryeh Neier, the executive director of the American Civil Liberties Union, says he is worried about a potential witch hunt against religious cults as a result of the mass killings and suicides at Jim Jones' Peoples Temple encampment in Guyana.

"Obviously after the tragedy of Guyana everybody is going to be a great deal more suspicious of the various religious groups," Neier said before lecturing at Syracuse University Tuesday night.

"I hope this doesn't turn out to be a precedent for a witch hunt into all kinds of religious groups," he said.

Neier specifically warned against any legislation requiring religious groups to disclose the sources of their finances.

Ford's Hubcap For Sale

ROCKLAND, Maine (AP) — They've got a reputation for being sharp traders in New England, but John E. Lohnes has gone one step further.

Lohnes has a hubcap he wants to sell for an undisclosed price — and it comes from former President Gerald R. Ford's limousine.

Lohnes, a 39-year-old campground owner, found the hubcap beside the road in Falmouth in September 1975. Secret Service officials confirmed the hubcap had spun off Ford's Lincoln Continental.

Lohnes has put an advertisement for the hubcap in "Uncle Henry's Weekly Swap-It or Sell-It Guide," a local publication. Although he has received several offers, only two "come near to what I consider reasonable offers," he said.

Woman To Share Prize

NEW YORK (AP) — Sylvia Aguilu was grateful anyway when she was told that "due to a mistake" she would have to share the $41,735 she won from the state lottery with two other people.

Mrs. Aguilu, a 40-year-old Colombian-born Bronx housewife, was introduced to the press Tuesday by Games Management Services, the company that runs the "Lotto" game for the New York State Lottery, as the only winner of $41,735. That was the largest payoff to date.

"I can't believe it," she said at the time, the tears falling from her eyes. "I have four children living in Colombia, and I always wanted to have some money to provide them a proper education." She said she also wanted to help her 74-year-old father who has a heart condition.

But Wednesday the New York State Lottery announced that Mrs. Aguilu was not the only winner, and that she would have to share the prize with Ann Danuis and P.M. Capaffo. The winners will get $13,911.50 each.

When notified of the error, Mrs. Aguilu said, "Well, if God decided that I share the money, so be it."

Funny Characters Get Votes

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Among the lesser-known politicians in Connecticut are Casper the Ghost, Michael and Minnie Mouse, Kermit the Frog and Zonker Harris.

Their names turned up Wednesday among the write-in candidates in official results of the state's Nov. 7 general election.

Duo Arrested In Woman's Abduction

SHERMAN (AP) — A Bonham woman is in critical condition at Texas Medical Center and two men are in the Grayson County Jail as a result of the woman's alleged abduction, authorities said.

Shirley Brock, 32, was found about two miles south of the Texas-Oklahoma border near Denison Dam Tuesday. Grayson County Sheriff's Deputy Y.Q. Tillery said he found Mrs. Brock in a wooded area just off State Highway 75A. She had been severely beaten and was nude from the waist down.

Authorities said Jimmy Christian, 34, of Sherman and Freddie Brock, Mrs. Brock's husband, appeared before a justice of the peace Wednesday. Christian was held in lieu of $35,000 bond. Brock was held on $25,000 bond.

It was at first thought Mrs. Brock had been shot in the temple, but a spokesman at Texas Medical Center said x-rays did not confirm a bullet wound to the head.

Bryan County deputies said they followed a pickup carrying the three persons because they thought Christian might lead them to a suspect in an assault case.

They said Brock got out of the truck, then Christian and Mrs. Brock turned off the highway onto a dirt road. They said they became suspicious 20 minutes later when Christian drove back onto the highway and Mrs. Brock was not in the pickup truck.

Minister Sentenced For Ad

ALBANY, Ga. (AP) — The Rev. Clennon King, a black minister whose attempt to integrate President Carter's hometown church brought him national attention, was sentenced Wednesday to 12 months probation for offering to buy votes.

King was convicted Nov. 20 on charges that he placed a newspaper advertisement offering $100 to voters who would vote for him in the Aug. 8 primary election. King, often an unsuccessful candidate for local office, ran for three different posts, losing all three.

"I appreciate the sentence a whole lot," King told Judge Asa D. Kelley Jr. of Superior Court. "I would prefer not to do the probation. I prefer to pay the price in terms of the time."

King, who faced up to five years in prison, argued during his trial that his offer was no different from other candidates' campaign promises. He said he only promised to pay the $100 if elected.

Christmastime Never Ends

MILLVILLE, N.J. (AP) — It's always Christmastime at Dan Fenton's holly orchard in the "Holly City of America."

Fenton's 55-acre orchard has about 4,400 holly trees and produces more than 250,000 holly plants a year for mail-order houses, garden centers and supermarkets around the country.

His "Hollyland U.S.A." includes a museum and gift shop featuring 1,500 pieces of holly china donated by customers, nativity scenes of holly wood, holly wreaths, holly honey, holly candles, holly perfume, holly soap and holly air fresheners.

And if Fenton is the unrivaled holly champ, then this quiet South Jersey industrial city of 23,000 follows is the right place for him to be.

Millville has a Holly Drive, Holly Heights School, Holly City Cab Co., Holly City Hess gas station and a Miss Holly City pageant. City parks, schools, churches, the library, the YMCA and the American Legion hall sport holly trees.

In the 1960s, a local radio station owner started a campaign to change the name of the place to Holly City, but the move failed.

CINCINNATI (AP) — The fashion world is predicting higher hemlines are on the way — uplifting news to the U.S. Shoe Corp.

With leg and ankle on display, women pay more attention to footwear, says corporate chairman Philip Barach, and "the bright collars and shortening of dresses and skirts give cause for optimism."

Thomas H. Voss, a corporation vice president, suggests that disco dancing may also have something to do with the heightened interest in shoes.

"Let's put it this way. How often have you seen a disco picture without high heels," he said.

Boys Lost In Snow Found, One Dead

JACKSON, Wyo. (UPI) — An elk hunter who carried one of his young sons through deep snow and rugged forestland to their campsite in the northwest Wyoming wilderness returned to the camp by helicopter Wednesday to find the boy dead and his 12-year-old stepson barely alive.

The fire he had told the boys to keep burning was out, said Teton County Sheriff Steve Rogers.

Nick Anastos of Hanna, Wyo., emerged from the Teton Wilderness Area east of Grand Teton National Park Tuesday after he and the two boys had become lost Sunday during a hunting expedition.

"From what I understand, the youngest boy was fatigued so Anastos carried him quite a ways until he couldn't carry him anymore," Rogers said. "Then he made a campfire and told them to stay there until he returned."

"He says he left a good stack of firewood, but I guess they ran out of wood or matches."

Authorities said Glenn Anastos, 9, died in the ordeal and his stepbrother, John Pixley, was rushed to a hospital by an Air Force helicopter from Hill Air Force Base in Utah.

Another military helicopter carried a doctor who attended the Pixley boy on the flight to the hospital.

After a brief rest, Anastos joined the search parties Wednesday. There were 14 aircraft aloft in the morning, five men on cross-country skis and three men on horseback.

After a two-hour morning search, half of the 11 planes returned to Jackson for fuel. Each pilot had been given a nine-mile region to fly.

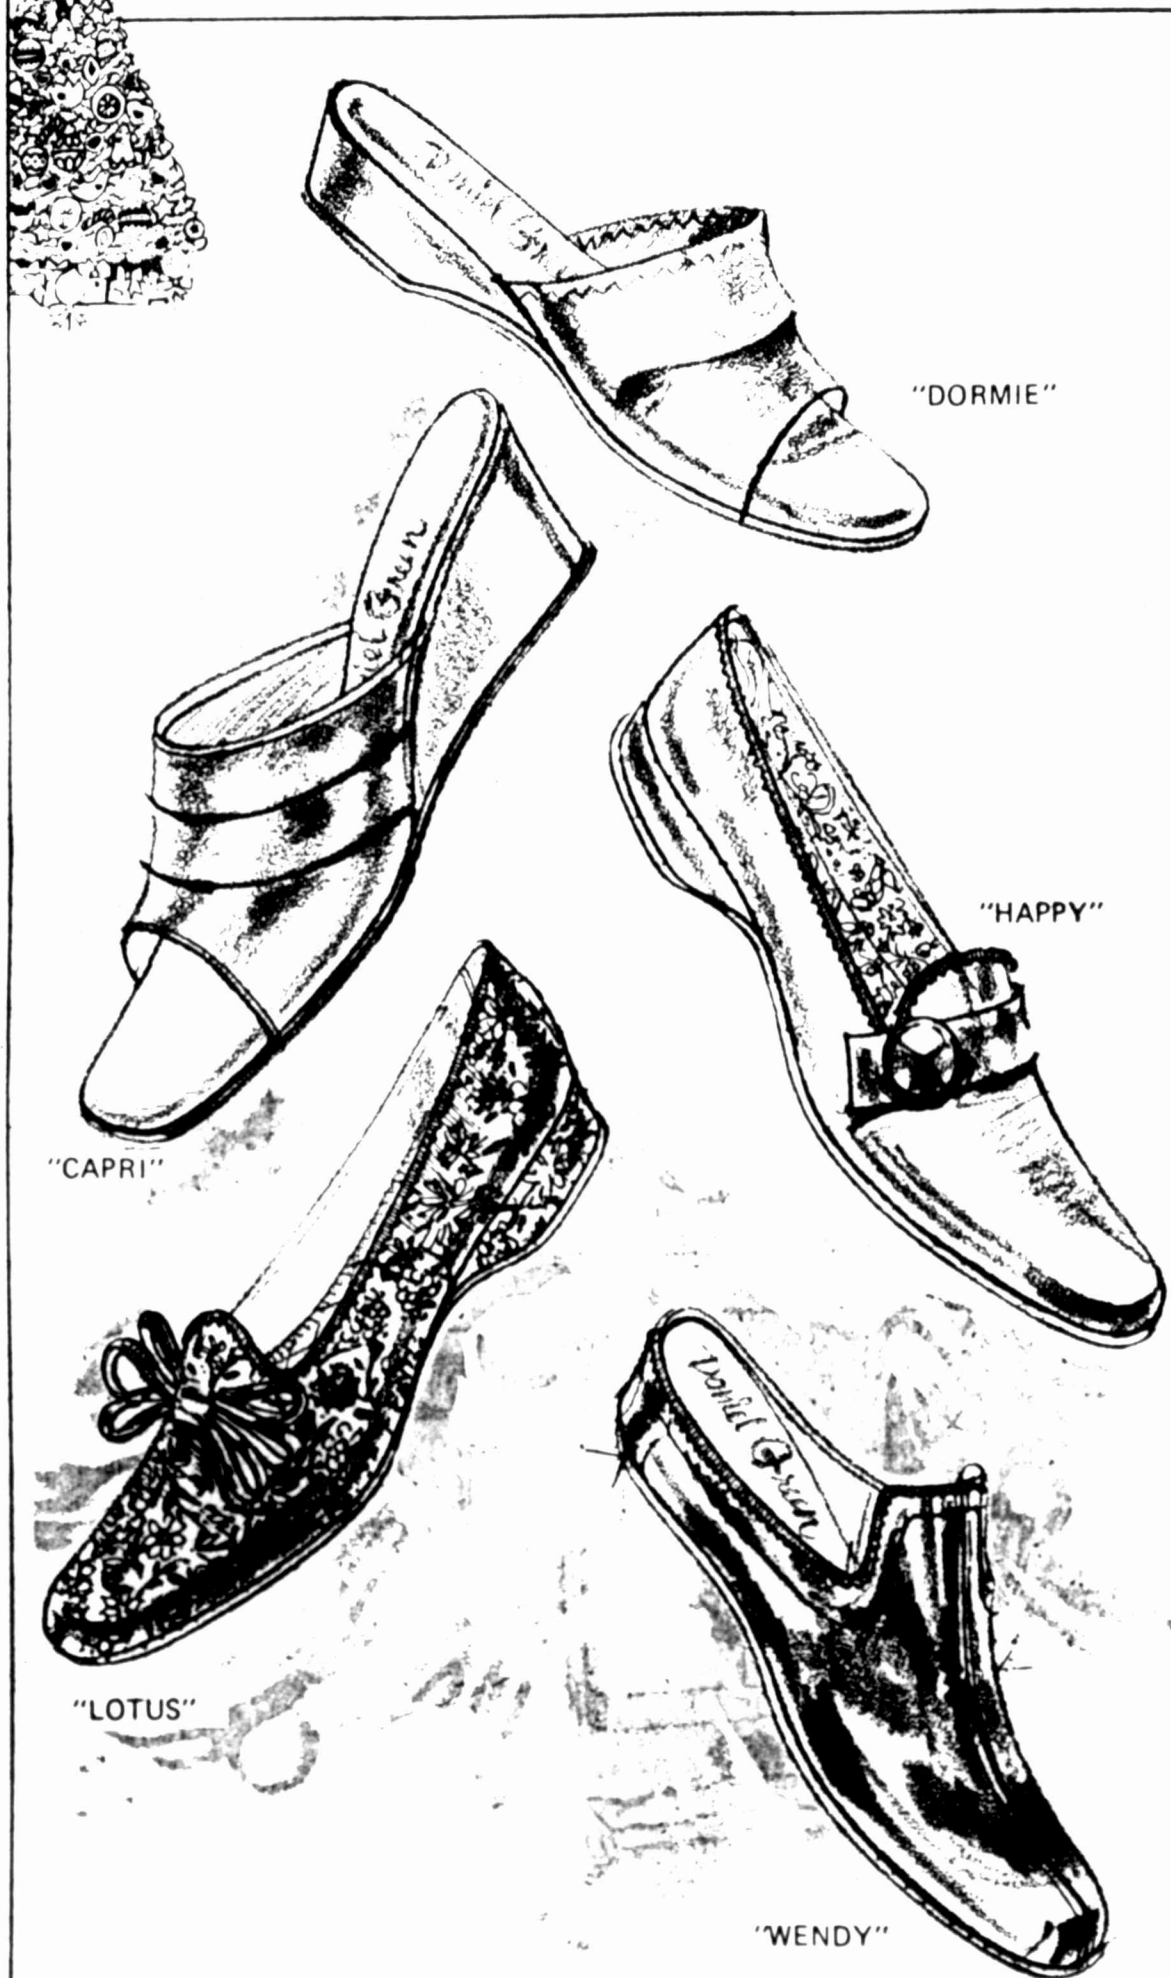

"We searched the area pretty well," said Mike Berstein, a pilot for Imeson Aviation, the local flight service coordinating the air search. "It's pretty rugged out there."

Rogers said the father left the boys Monday morning and emerged at the trailhead Tuesday afternoon.

Romania's Defiant Role In Red Bloc Explained

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) — Romania has once again defied the Kremlin on a matter of Soviet bloc policy, this time vetoing an increase in arms spending by the Warsaw Pact and refusing to condemn the Camp David accords.

Romania's refusal to follow the Soviet lead on the issues at a recent meeting in Moscow triggered a diplomatic flurry, although reports that East European nations called their envoys home from Bucharest for consultations apparently were unfounded.

A Moscow "satellite" refusing to take orders? How is that possible? What does it mean? Here are some questions and answers on the background of Romania's maverick role.

Q: What relation does Romania have to the Soviet Union?

A: Romania — like Poland, East Germany, Czechoslovakia, Hungary and Bulgaria — is a member of the Warsaw Pact, the East European equivalent of NATO, and Comecon, the Communist common market. Moscow dominates both associations of the East European countries, all of which fell into its sphere after World War II.

Q: How has Romania previously demonstrated its independence from Moscow's foreign policy line?

A: It has kept diplomatic relations with Israel since the 1967 Mideast war, and has sought to steer a middle course in the Arab-Israeli dispute. Romania refused to take part in the 1968 invasion of Czechoslovakia and condemned the Warsaw Pact's interference in Prague's internal affairs. It has endorsed independent-minded Communist parties in Western Europe.

President Nicolae Ceausescu invited President Richard M. Nixon to Romania in 1969 on the first visit of an American chief executive to a Warsaw Pact country. Ceausescu has close ties with China, visiting Peking in 1971 and 1978, and hosting Chairman Hua Kuo-feng on his first visit to Europe last August. This infuriates the Soviets, who have been in ideological and border disputes with China since the early 1960s.

Q: Why does Romania take a more independent stand than its East European allies?

A: The Romanians did not win independence from Turkey until a century ago and vigorously defend their sovereignty. Since coming to power in 1965 Ceausescu has stressed Romania's heritage and independent political role. This is well-received by Romanians, who have for centuries been dominated by other countries. Western diplomats and observers say his independence has helped him keep tighter personal control over 22 million Romanians.

Q: Has Ceausescu been subtle about his opposition?

A: No. He has been direct and forceful, at times enraged, in speeches outlining his position. In a fiery 1968 speech before 250,000 in Bucharest's Palace Square, Ceausescu said:

"We categorically disapprove of the attack against Czechoslovakia, where, they say, socialism was in danger. Maybe there will be some who will say socialism is also in danger in Romania.

"I want to assure you about one point. We won't stand still if the same thing happens to Romania. We will fight and defend our homeland and the construction of socialism."

Q: How does he get away with it?

A: No one is sure. One Western diplomat said "Ceausescu is a master of judging the limits of Soviet tolerance. The Soviets must feel their basic security interests are not in jeopardy." The strict control he maintains over the Romanian people means the Soviets need not fear the Communist Party will lose control over the country, as Moscow feared in Czechoslovakia in 1968.

Q: Does this mean that Romania is likely to become more democratic?

A: Quite the opposite. Many diplomats say Ceausescu's independent stance strengthens his personality cult and enables him to continue his totalitarian control. He demands sacrifices from the Romanian people in his campaign to develop the country's heavy industry. There is a 48-hour work week and consumer goods are scarce. Romanians are probably the most restricted in East Europe in freedom of travel. They have trouble traveling not only to the West, but also to other East European countries.

Q: Does the independent role mean Romania might be expelled from the Soviet sphere as Yugoslavia was in 1948 after President Tito rejected Stalin's attempts to control internal affairs?

A: It's possible, but Kremlin controls over Soviet bloc countries have eased since Stalin's death. Romania, unlike Yugoslavia, borders the Soviet Union, and Moscow might be reluctant to cut ties with a country so close to home.

Q: Why did he refuse to increase military spending?

A: He knows anything spent on military hardware will be at the expense of economic development for his country. The Romanians also fear international disputes "will be settled on their backs," Western diplomats said.

In a speech welcoming Hua last Aug. 16, Ceausescu said:

"As two world wars started in Europe this country and the Soviet Union, military spending was not increased. We are concerned that the same fate of security and peace.

Racketeers, 'Boat People' Link Charged

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP) — The mounting exodus of Vietnamese "boat people" across the South China Sea to Malaysia is big business involving racketeers and perhaps even the Vietnamese government, Malaysian officials claimed Wednesday.

Ghazali Shafie, the country's home affairs minister, addressing a dinner of Southeast Asian security officials Wednesday, said refugees paid about 15 ounces of gold, or about $3,000, to get out of Vietnam.

Officials said about 500 Vietnamese refugees have swarmed to Malaysia's northeastern coast in the past fortnight, pushing the refugee population here to more than 42,000. Most are said to be ethnic Chinese who China claims are persecuted in Vietnam.

Malaysian officials spotlighted the problem recently by refusing to allow the freighter Hai Hong and its 2,500 refugees to land, saying they had paid their way out of Vietnam and therefore were not refugees.

The Hai Hong case "clearly demonstrates that a new dimension has been added to the problem we are facing," said Zakaria Ali, secretary-general of the Malaysian Foreign Ministry, speaking to a conference of officials from 30 Commonwealth nations Wednesday.

Shafie in his speech pointed a finger at the Vietnamese, saying, "One could well suspect that the ejection of overseas Chinese and even Vietnamese citizens of Chinese origin from Ho Chi Minh City (formerly Saigon) might be motivated by the desire of Hanoi to remove the 'wooden dragon' — not just Chinese merchants of Cholon (Saigon's Chinatown), but Peking-oriented Communists."

Western diplomats have said Vietnam is only too glad to be rid of the ethnic Chinese, whose increased immigration to China created tensions that led to closing of the Vietnam-China border. But they say the racketeering is not large-scale and many "boat people" are refugees.

The diplomats said it was difficult to tell whether the Vietnamese government had a hand in the rackets, or whether Hanoi was simply ignoring bribery of local officials.

A Vietnamese Embassy official has denied any involvement, noting it is easy for refugees to escape the country's 1,000-mile-long coastline. Hai Hong Capt. Susun Srigar has said the refugees climbed aboard when his ship was off Lincoln Island enroute to Hong Kong from Singapore.

State Court Issues Key Ground Water Ruling

AUSTIN (AP) — Corporations and persons who cause land to subside by negligently withdrawing ground water in the future must pay for the damage, the Texas Supreme Court ruled Wednesday.

It was a precedent-setting decision of major importance to certain coastal counties where land subsidence is a major problem.

The court declined, however, to apply its new doctrine to previous withdrawals. It specifically declined to force Exxon Corp. and its subsidiary, Friendswood Development Corp., to compensate landowners in the Seabrook and Clear Lake area of Harris County. Until now, the court has followed an English rule that said one was not liable for damage done to another by taking water from the ground, unless the act were malicious.

"Even though good reasons may exist for lifting the immunity from tort actions in cases of this nature, it would be unjust to do so retroactively," said the court's majority opinion, written by Justice Price Daniel Sr.

The court said its new rule will apply to cases arising from "future subsidence proximately caused by future withdrawals of ground water."

It said, "If the landowner's manner of withdrawing ground water from his land is negligent, willfully wasteful, or for the purpose of malicious injury, and such conduct is a proximate cause of the subsidence of the land of others, he will be liable for the consequences of his conduct."

Smith-Southwest Industries, Inc., and other landowners sued Exxon and Friendswood Development Corp. in 1973, alleging that withdrawal of huge amounts of ground water caused their land to sink.

The court noted that the wells were drilled from 1964 through 1971 "even though previous engineering reports to defendants showed that production therefrom would result in a certain amount of land subsidence in the area."

Plaintiffs in the case said the subsidence caused erosion and flooding, as well as damage to homes, businesses and other improvements.

Justices Jack Pope and Sam Johnson dissented. Pope said he would have held Friendswood and Exxon liable.

"I do not believe it is sound law that the right to pump water is the power to destroy the surface of surrounding landowners," Pope wrote.

In other cases, the court: — Reversed a jury verdict that Mary Stephenson Baker and her children were entitled to $64,900 for damage to their irrigated farm in Lubbock County by the widening of Interstate 27.

— Upheld a $38,806 judgment against the city of Houston in favor of a Chauncey Riggins, who was injured when a motorboat went over the spillway of the dam at Lake Houston. A jury found the city was negligent in not marking the spillway better.

— Reversed a verdict that Doris Bowie was entitled to $7,500 in insurance on the life of her husband, who was killed when his plane crashed near Garland. It said Loren Bowie deliberately withheld from the Federal Aviation Agency the fact that he had had a heart attack, thus invalidating his license. The insurance applied only when Bowie's plane was flown by a validly licensed pilot.

Interpreter Lack Brings Reversal Of Conviction

AUSTIN (AP) — Interpreters should be provided for non-English-speaking defendants even if they do not request one, the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals ruled Wednesday.

The appeals court reversed a Mexican national's theft conviction because of the failure to provide her with a Spanish-speaking interpreter.

The court said the case record of Rosa Baltierra did not show whether she or her lawyer had requested an interpreter, but it was pointed out to the trial judge that the woman could not speak English.

The woman was convicted of stealing jewelry valued at less than $20 from a store in downtown El Paso in October 1976 and received a 60-day jail sentence. However, she was placed on unsupervised probation for 180 days. She had recently moved from Chihuahua to Ciudad Juarez, across the border from El Paso.

"The court said it had never before considered whether the failure to request an interpreter 'waives the right to an interpreter, and necessarily the constitutional rights' of confrontation.

Court records show that the interrogation of Miss Baltierra at the time she was arrested was conducted in Spanish through an interpreter. Also, an interpreter was furnished to present the woman's testimony "but the record does not reflect that there was an interpreter at any other time during the trial."

It is basic under the Sixth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, the court said, that a defendant has the right to cross-examine witnesses. "The right of confrontation certainly is not altered by the fact that this proceeding was against a resident of the Republic of Mexico," the court added.

In other cases, the appeals court: — Overturned seven drug convictions against Steven Jewell in McKinney because the judge erred in advising the jury that the sentences would necessarily run concurrently.

— Reversed Hilton Armstrong's forgery conviction in LaPorte because the date and the bank transit number were incorrectly stated in the indictment.

Man Convicted Here To Get Another Trial

A-J Austin Bureau
AUSTIN — By a 2-1 vote, a Court of Criminal Appeals panel Wednesday ordered a new trial for Willie Lee Faulk, convicted of a July 19, 1975, armed robbery in Lubbock, holding that the evidence used to convict him was "illegally seized."

The court's opinion relates that the robbery victim, a convenience store employee, told police she had been robbed by "a young black male wearing a multi-colored shirt." No further description was given.

She also reported the robber had run north in the direction of 50th Street.

The court said "this even less than general description" was radioed by police to patrolmen, and an officer subsequently stopped a car occupied by Faulk, as it was traveling on 50th.

The court reports the officer testified he made a U-turn to follow the car, which increased speed slightly, and then reduced speed, but with no traffic or other offense being committed.

A weapon and money pouch were found in the car.

Faulk appealed his conviction and seven-year sentence on the grounds there was "no probable cause" for stopping the vehicle.

The majority opinion by W.T. Phillips agreed, saying the court "cannot conclude that the use of this illegally seized evidence was harmless beyond a reasonable doubt."

Justice Jim Voliers, however, dissented, saying the officer "properly made an investigatory stop" and was "doing the job as an investigator that he was paid to do when he stopped the vehicle for further investigation."

Court Upholds Area Man's Conviction

A-J Austin Bureau
AUSTIN — The Court of Criminal Appeals Wednesday affirmed the conviction and 20-year sentence of Jay Doug Ingram in a shotgun killing at a Howard County party April 10, 1975.

The court's opinion indicates Ingram was questioned about his use of marijuana prior to going to a party where the shooting occurred, with a witness testifying he had not given Ingram any marijuana but that "Ingram may have stolen it from him."

Ingram also complained of an exclamation by the victim's mother, who said, as she was leaving the witness stand, "That's the gun that shot my boy! Oh dear God, oh dear God, oh dear God."

The court held those comments, and the response by a witness that Ingram "tried to shoot the rest of us when he fired through a closed door in a house" did not constitute grounds for reversal.

High Court Reverses Lubbock Water Case

A-J Austin Bureau
AUSTIN — The Texas Supreme Court Wednesday reversed court judgments from Lubbock County and the Court of Civil Appeals, sending a water use case back to trial court.
The case arose when the State of Texas condemned slightly more than five acres of land belonging jointly to Mary Stephenson Baker and her children. The state condemned the land for the purpose of enlarging the right of way for IH 27, and paid $16,662 for the property.
The State appealed the lower courts' award $64,900 for damages to the rest of the property.
The high court ruled that the jury in the case has been led to believe that Mrs. Baker and her children were losing "not just one well, but two wells," their own and the one they already had sold to a neighbor. That evidence was "harmful," the court ruled, and remanded the case to Lubbock County.

Soviets Release Defense Budget

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union announced Wednesday a 1979 defense budget of 17.2 billion rubles — about $26.4 billion — which it said was necessary to counter "aggressive imperialist circles" attempting to achieve military superiority.
The disclosure by Finance Minister Vasily F. Garbutov at the opening winter session of the Soviet parliament makes it the third straight year that reported Soviet defense spending remains unchanged.
But Western experts estimate that the Kremlin's real military budget is probably five times the reported amount.

LUBBOCK AVALANCHE-JOURNAL Thursday Morning, November 23, 1978
Lubbock County Water Control and Improvement District No. 1, Buffalo Springs Lake, has been notified by the Texas Department of Health that the water being supplied by their system exceeds the maximum constituent level for fluoride established by the department's "drinking water standards," which were promulgated as required by the "Safe Drinking Water Act," Public Law 93-523 (U.S.).
The limit for this area has been set at 1.6 milligrams of fluoride per liter of water. The samples of water from the lake system contained 2.6 milligrams of fluoride per liter. There is no immediate health hazard for drinking water containing fluoride at this level.
However, the fluoride may cause mottling (brown staining) of the teeth in children less than 14 years of age.
All dentists in this area are aware of the fluoride level.
The district intends to apply to the Texas Department of Health for a variance from the fluoride requirement while it investigates available treatment techniques to lower the fluoride to allowable levels.

Ailing Soviet Baby, Family Arrive In Austria

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Ailing baby Jessica Katz, the Soviet Union's "littlest refusenik," began her life in the West Wednesday with a smile — and then broke out in tears — as she, her parents and 9-day-old sister Gabrielle arrived at Vienna's airport on a flight from Moscow.

"She will be all right," her father Boris told reporters at Schwechat Airport. "We are all so tired, but also so happy," he added, grinning at his tearful daughter.

The Jewish family was allowed to leave the Soviet Union after a much-publicized struggle to emigrate and to obtain special medical attention for Jessica, which her parents said was not available in the Soviet Union. Soviet officials contended the health care was adequate.

"We like to become American citizens," Katz told reporters.

Katz and his wife Natalia first applied to emigrate more than three years ago but the government turned them down, saying Mrs. Katz had access to state secrets at her job as a computer programmer.

Baby Jessica, who had her first birthday Oct. 2, suffers from malabsorption syndrome, a rare condition that prevents normal digestion in infants.

When the family's plight became known, sympathizers in the West sent Jessica a special formula to help her keep up her strength.

"Jessica is now much better and she looks well," her father said.

Katz said the family was subjected to last-minute harassment by Soviet custom officials as they prepared to leave Moscow. "They even took Jessica's milk powder away," he said. "They were terrible. They tore my cap while searching it. They looked into everything, asking if we had any forbidden literature on us."

After a day or two in Vienna, the family plans to fly to Cambridge, Mass., where Katz's mother, Khaka Landman, lives. His brother Victor is a mathematics professor at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and another brother, Michael, is a student at Harvard.

Katz said he plans to have Jessica treated by Dr. Richard Feinbloom, a Boston specialist.

"At first, I was just a single individual," said Katz. "But now Jessica Katz, not I, has become a symbol of the Jewish movement."

Jewish activists in Moscow said they thought Jessica was the youngest Jewish person refused an exit visa by authorities.

"I think we would have had to wait 20 years or more without the help of Sen. Kennedy," Katz said.

Judge Removes Self From Road Suit

Lubbock federal judge Halbert O. Woodward Wednesday disqualified himself from hearing the civil suit aimed at halting road construction on U.S. 87 and assigned the case to a Dallas court.

In a brief order, Woodward noted that the Texas Department of Highways and Public Transportation is a principal defendant in the case.

"Due to the service of the undersigned judge on the Texas Highway Commission for many years, it is felt that this judge should recuse himself from all proceedings in this case," the order read.

Woodward is a former member and chairman of the state highway commission.

He assigned the case to the court of Dallas U.S. Dist. Judge Robert M. Hill. The suit filed Tuesday asks for a halt in proposed road improvements, claiming state and federal officials did not file a proper environmental impact statement as required by the National Environmental Policy Act.

Burglars Hit Hard At Two Lubbock Businesses

Two Lubbock businessmen Wednesday complained that they had lost substantial amounts of cash to burglars overnight.

Frank W. Lewis said about $700 cash was taken from a desk drawer in an office at his meat market at 1701 Idalou Road. Lewis said the intruder apparently entered a storage shed between 5:30 p.m. Tuesday and 10 a.m. Wednesday and then broke through the wall connecting the shed to the market.

Clarence W. Hill told officers he arrived at his 5002 Slide Road gas station about 7 a.m. Wednesday to find that $106 in cash was missing from the firm's cash register. He said there was no sign of forced entry to the station.

In another business burglary, Sammy J. Burke said he is out $7,670 after intruders broke a window in his auto transmission shop at 1010 Ave. Q between 6 p.m. Tuesday and 8 a.m. Wednesday. Burke listed as missing two calculators, a stereo, tools and a transmission.

Raymundo Villarreal of 908 E. 34th St., No. 5, said a $300 stereo was taken from his home Wednesday morning. He said the burglars pried the padlock from his front door to gain entry to the apartment.

Gary W. Wrinkle complained that car burglars took $362 worth of tools from his car, which was parked across the street from his 2230 Broadway residence.

A Lubbock woman told police she was raped by a man armed with a screwdriver about 7:45 a.m. Wednesday after he climbed through a bedroom window and told her, "Take your clothes off. If you scream, I'll hurt the kids."

The man allegedly raped the 21-year-old woman in front of her 3-year-old boy and 3-month-old girl. The housewife was treated at Health Sciences Center Hospital.

Police were told that after the assault the suspect fled east on foot. The man was described as black, about 5-feet, 10-inches tall, thin and wearing a brown jacket, beige pants and a cap.

In another rape reported Tuesday afternoon, a 14-year-old Lubbock girl told police she was forced into a car and driven to an East Baylor Street residence where she was raped repeatedly by four young black men or juveniles.

The girl said she was walking home from school in the 500-block of North Quirt Avenue about 3:45 p.m. Tuesday when two of the suspects dragged her into an old brown Chevrolet.

She said that after she was assaulted several times by all four of the suspects at the house, one of her attackers warned her, "You better not tell anyone or we will do it worse next time, and maybe kill you."

The suspect also allegedly told her he and his friends had raped other girls, and that they would be by Wednesday to pick her up and she "better be ready."

The girl said she was kept in the house about two hours and then set free. She went to a neighbor's residence and called authorities. No arrests had been made by late Wednesday.

A 20-year-old Lubbock man was arrested about 1:45 p.m. Tuesday after he allegedly struck a female student at Estacado High School.

The girl, 15, told authorities she was working in the counselor's office when the suspect entered, jumped on a counter and struck her in the forehead with his fist.

TAX BITE LARGER

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal, state and local governments raised 17 percent more in taxes in the 1976-77 fiscal year than they did the year before, the Commerce Department said Wednesday. The $61.5 billion increase in taxes was more than double the $26.8 billion increase in 1975-76, the department said. "The large increases...reflected improved economic conditions and, to some degree, inflationary trends," the report on taxes said. Most of the increases were in individual and corporate income taxes, it said.

Farm Bureau Mends Rift Over Policy

DALLAS (AP) — A battle between Farm Bureau traditionalists and more militant members almost split the organization's 45th state convention apart Wednesday.

A conciliatory, last-minute compromise on the major problem area brought the body back together, however, and put the Texas Farm Bureau on record as favoring a flexible parity program.

Everett Miller, a longtime Farm Bureau leader from Tulsa, won support with his 11th-hour resolution that the convention back the so-called Dole Amendment that will allow farmers to get a higher price for their crops depending upon how many acres they keep out of production.

Earlier in Wednesday's windup day of the three-day convention, the more than 1,100 delegates rejected by a three-to-one margin the American Agriculture Movement's bid for a rigid policy calling on Congress to require Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland to implement 90 percent parity.

Police Seek

Motorist Here

Police Wednesday were looking for a motorist who allegedly collided with a motorcycle about 11 p.m. Tuesday at 50th Street and Boston Avenue and then sped off.

The cyclist, William Henry Hodges, 20, of 8101 Kenosha Ave., was thrown 126 feet from the point of impact, police say. He was listed in satisfactory condition Wednesday at St. Mary's Hospital.

A witness to the incident told police that after the collision the driver of the green 1972 two-door Impala kept on traveling south on Boston Avenue.

Reports show police traced the driver's license plates to a 62nd Street residence. But when officers arrived at that home, the person inside refused to come to the front door.

A police radio operator said she contacted the suspect on the phone and that he sounded drunk. The man reportedly hung up and police were unable to phone him again.

The witness said Hodges was traveling east on 50th Street and the vehicle was westbound on 50th and turning south onto Boston Avenue when the collision occurred. The impact knocked the motorcycle 99 feet from the intersection, according to police.

Horsedrawn Hearse Featured In Funeral

U.S. Baby Boom Bust Showing Effects As Children's Population Declining

WASHINGTON (AP)— Santa Claus, take note. Because of lower birth rates, there were about 5.5 million fewer children under age 17 in most American states in 1977 than there were at the start of the decade, the government said Wednesday.

A new Census Bureau report on population estimates in 1977 shows that the under-5 population decreased by almost 2 million or 11.2 percent since 1970 while the total population grew by about 13 million or 6.4 percent.

At the same time, the school-age population, ages 5 to 17, dropped by 3.5 million, a reversal from the 1950s and 1960s when the numbers of school-age children grew by 8.5 to 13 million.

Women born during the post World War II baby boom of the mid-1940s and early 1950s are now having an average of two children each. Their mothers had an average of three or four. Because of changing migration patterns in the country, there was a greater decline of school age children in the North than in any other region.

The report shows that between 1970 and 1977, the North's population of 5-to-17-year-olds dropped at an average rate of 1.5 percent a year, more than three times the rate of decline in the South and West.

However, in faster growing areas of the country, the numbers of school age children increased. For example, figures show that between 1970 and 1977, the largest growth rate of the under-5 population was in Utah where it increased by 36 percent. Utah's population as a whole grew by almost 20 percent.

Other increases in the under-5 population were recorded in the other mountain states of Montana, Idaho, Wyoming, Colorado, New Mexico, Arizona and Nevada. There were also increases in Alaska, Hawaii, Oregon, Florida, Mississippi, Arkansas, Oklahoma and Texas.

The report shows also that in the 65-and-over age group, the largest percentage gains between 1970 and 1977 were in Florida, where the number of elderly persons increased by 46.5 percent or an estimated 460,000 persons.

Also, figures show the number of elderly persons increased by 64.4 percent or about 20,000 persons in Nevada and, in Arizona, by 55.6 percent or about 89,000 persons.

Private, Voluntary Agencies Imperiled

WASHINGTON (AP)—John W. Gardner, a former cabinet officer and founder of Common Cause, is organizing a new group to "ensure the survival of the non-profit sector," which he says is threatened by government encroachment and tax policies.

"Ever since colonial days, foreign visitors have commented on the extraordinary impulse of Americans to form voluntary groups and invent non-governmental institutions to serve community purposes," the ex-secretary of health, education and welfare said Wednesday.

"Out of that impulse has come an incredible variety of American institutions — libraries, museums, civic organizations, great universities, the United Way, the Salvation Army, symphony orchestras, garden clubs, historical societies, adoption services, hospitals, religious organizations, Alcoholics Anonymous, the Y-H Clubs, and so on."

Gardner said the groups and organizations number in the millions and receive $25 billion to $30 billion a year in private contributions, and about the same amount in volunteered time. "But they are in trouble," he told the National Council on Philanthropy and reporters at a news conference sponsored by the council and the Coalition of National Voluntary Organizations.

Gardner said private giving has eroded largely because five increases in the standard income tax deduction in the last eight years have discouraged many from giving to charity because they aren't able to deduct it if they take the standard deduction instead of itemizing their returns.

He noted that 80 percent of the money given to non-profit groups by individuals comes from families with incomes of less than $20,000 a year.

As private, non-profit organizations have accepted money from the federal government, whether as aid to education or grants to neighborhood health centers, they have come under the influence and power of government, he added.

"One obvious reason is that with federal money comes the federal rule book," Gardner said, adding that bureaucracy tends to stifle the independence that traditionally has left the private sector "remarkably free to innovate, create and engage in controversial experiments."

"In fact, virtually every far-reaching social change in our history has come up in the private sector," Gardner claimed, citing the abolition of slavery, the reforms of populism, child labor laws, the vote for women and civil rights.

Gardner said the new, as yet unnamed organization he will head will attempt to study the problems of the vast range of non-profit groups and institutions, improve public understanding of them and establish communication with the various levels of government that affect voluntary interests.

He said his group also will attempt to "foster a spirit and tradition of self-appraisal and continuous renewal" to combat decay, poor management and waste in the private sector.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By BILL DOYLE

Q. Since I bear the credit — or blame — for my wife becoming involved in a variable annuity retirement program, I also claim credit for her discontinuing payments into the program 14 months ago. After paying into that program for some years, the value of her investment is just about equal to the amount she paid in.

This annuity fund hardly ever declares dividends or shows any growth in value. It seems to be stagnant. We have written for consultation with an agent but no one responds. Should we sell now or wait until retirement, in five years?

A. Before you do anything, I urge you to sit down with a good accountant and make sure you understand the tax consequences. Some annuities offered by the organization you named in your letter offer tax shelter, in certain circumstances.

It could be a big mistake for your wife to cash in now and get hit by a big tax bill. Normally, it's better to wait until retirement before taking money out of a scheme such as this.

These are the things "an agent" could have explained to you, if you ever had any response to your letter to that organization. Either the person who sold your wife that plan in the first place — and who collected fat commissions — isn't doing the job he or she was paid for or has left the business.

My guess is that your wife is what is known in the insurance-annuity-mutual fund business as an "orphan account." That means no salesperson feels any responsibility toward her.

Actually, that particular variable annuity fund has not done as badly as you say. The value of its "units" — shares — has increased moderately over the years. Your wife would be ahead, were it not for the big commission charges she paid during the first couple of years she was in the plan.

The real culprits are the agent who took the commission and ran — and his or her superiors who have left your wife's account unattended.

Q. Please straighten out one point. Is the interest rate paid by savings and loan associations and savings banks on Individual Retirement Accounts and Keogh Plan accounts higher than the interest rate paid by commercial banks on IRA and Keogh accounts?

A. No. Commercial banks may now pay the same interest on IRA and Keogh retirement accounts as S&Ls and mutual savings banks. This is one of the few deposit categories in which commercial banks are permitted "rate equality" with thrift institutions.

So, all banks and S&Ls can offer up to 8 percent interest on IRA and Keogh accounts. And, when interest is compounded daily, the yield becomes 8.45 percent. It should be noted, however, that not all banks and S&Ls offer the top rate. Again, it's a case of shopping around.

Q. I lost three months work and pay this year, due to an operation. I have about $10,000 of Series E, U.S. Savings Bonds, which I would like to cash in and put the money in six-month "money market" savings certificates, which pay much higher interest. Would this be a good time to make that move?

A. I would say yes. Your income and your income taxes have been sharply reduced by your three-month layoff. When you cash in your E bonds, you'll have to pay federal income tax on the E bond interest. Even though that move will raise your taxable income, the total tax you will have to pay should still be lower than it was last year or what it most likely will be next year. From a tax standpoint, this could be the most advantageous year for you to cash in your E bonds — until you retire.

Califano Orders Tighter Smoking Rules

NEW YORK (AP) — Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. ordered new federal safety standards Wednesday for industries in which smoking increases a worker's chance of disease.

The new standards would tighten safety restrictions on some companies unless they require workers in certain jobs not to smoke at work.

Cigarette smoke is thought to increase the risk of certain diseases — particularly cancer — when workers are already exposed to a hazardous substance on the job.

For example, studies estimate that asbestos workers run a 3-4 times higher risk of getting lung cancer than people not exposed to asbestos. But for asbestos workers who smoke, the risk rises to 92 times more than non-smokers who don't work with the substance, Califano said.

Califano said he asked the Center for Disease Control and the National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health to work with the Labor Department to prepare the standards "on an emergency basis."

He said he discussed the plan with Labor Secretary Ray Marshall Wednesday.

Califano said the risk of cancer or other diseases rose for smokers who were exposed to talc in the rubber industry, to decay products of the element radon in uranium mining and to fluorocarbons in the plastics industry.

He said those three industries would be the initial targets of the standards.

Califano said he doubted that the Occupational Safety and Health Administration, which eventually would write the guidelines, will be able to exclude smokers from certain jobs. But industries will be encouraged to prevent smoking at work through OSHA standards.

Califano said he did not know how soon the new standards would be ready.

The HEW secretary also renewed his attack on the cigarette industry, charging it with using sinister and sophisticated advertising techniques to get youngsters to start smoking.

The tobacco industry spent $500 million last year "to persuade people — mostly young people — that smoking is glamorous and satisfying," he said.

"We must see that advertising for what it is: a seductive, multi-million-dollar mask designed to hide from America's children and teen-agers the skull and crossbones that lurks in every pack of cigarettes," he said.

Califano made the remarks in a speech at an American Cancer Society luncheon and in an interview afterward.

The society gave him an award for the anti-smoking campaign HEW launched last January.

Califano has criticized cigarette advertisements in similar language before. The industry contends that its ads induce current smokers to switch brands rather than convincing non-smokers to start.

Pair Exhumed In Continuing Pinto Matter

ELKHART, Ind. (AP) — The bodies of two young women — killed in a fiery Pinto crash that resulted in the indictment of Ford Motor Co. — have been exhumed for autopsies "to eliminate any question about the cause of death," the county prosecutor said Wednesday.

Elkhart County Prosecutor Michael Cosentino said the bodies were exhumed late Tuesday for examinations by Dr. James Benz of Indianapolis and Dr. Robert Stein of Chicago, both noted forensic pathologists. The results will be available today, the prosecutor added.

The victims, Judy Ulrich, 18, and her sister, Lynn, 16, both of Osceola, Ind., were killed along with their cousin, Donna Ulrich, 18, of Roanoke, Ill., on Aug. 10 when their Pinto exploded in flames after being struck from the rear on a northern Indiana highway.

As a result, an Elkhart County grand jury indicted Ford Motor Co. on three counts of reckless homicide. The car in which the young women died was among 1.5 million Pinto and Bobcat sedans Ford agreed in June to recall because of government complaints about the fuel tank.

The autopsy order is an apparent attempt to blunt Ford's expected challenge about the cause of death when the case goes to trial. Without autopsy results, attorneys could have argued that there was no proof the victims died as a result of the burns and not from other injuries resulting from the accident.

Cosentino would not say whether he would seek to exhume the body of the third victim, buried in Illinois Cecil Nohl, clerk of Woodford County, Ill., said he had not received any notice of such a request.

Cosentino said exhuming the bodies was necessary "since no autopsies were performed at the time."

Shortly after the crash, county Coroner Marvin Riesecker, who is not a medical doctor, noted that the victims had suffered third-degree burns.

Cosentino said several weeks ago that no autopsy was done on the bodies because their condition would have made it "almost impossible. When I say they were incinerated, that's what I mean."

Asked at the time if that might pose legal difficulties, he said, "No sir, I don't believe that will be a problem."

Ford attorneys have filed motions to dismiss the criminal charges, arguing that the indictment "fails to charge that Ford's conduct was the proximate cause of death."

The indictment accused Ford of recklessly designing the Pinto in such a way that it would "flame and burn upon rear-end impact."

Elkhart Superior Court Judge Charles Hughes won't rule on Ford's motion until Cosentino has a chance to reply. The prosecutor said he hopes to have his response completed by Friday.

Hearing Postponed In Double Slaying

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Former Supervisor Dan White, charged with murdering the mayor and another city official, appeared briefly in a courtroom ringed by police officers Wednesday. His arraignment was postponed one week to allow him time to get an attorney.

White, who would face a mandatory death penalty if convicted under a special statute covering the murder of public officials, bit his lip as he was led into court by two bailiffs. Dressed in a bright orange prison jumpsuit, White did not speak during the three-minute hearing.

A few hours later and about a mile away, 9,000 San Franciscans mourned their slain leaders at a memorial service outside City Hall, where Mayor George Moscone and Supervisor Harvey Milk were shot to death Monday.

"In our sorrow, this lovely jewel of a city seems a dark and saddened place," Acting Mayor Dianne Feinstein told the noon crowd that gathered in thick fog.

With the San Francisco Symphony seated on the steps of City Hall to play the "Ave Maria," and hundreds of police officers standing guard around the building, Miss Feinstein called for an "emotional reconstruction" in the life of the violence-torn city.

"In the wake of the tragedies in Guyana, a, this additional senseless monstrosity seems simply unreal," she told the crowd, which included office workers from nearby buildings, executives in business suits, mothers with babies in strollers and scruffy derelicts.

White nodded his head when Municipal Court Judge R. J. Reynolds asked if he waived immediate arraignment, but he did not even glance toward the spectator section where his wife, Mary Ann, sat with other relatives.

White's temporary attorney, Gilbert Eisenberg, did not seek bail for White. He requested the continuance in White's behalf so he could get a regular attorney.

"Family Needs Time"

"The family needs time. He needs time," Eisenberg told a crush of reporters and cameramen outside the courtroom. He refused to comment on White's emotional state.

White, a 32-year-old former fireman and policeman, was charged with two counts of first degree murder the slayings of Moscone and Milk, the city's first avowed homosexual official.

District Attorney Joseph Freitas charged White under a "special circumstances" statute. This means that if a jury convicted White of murder and then also found that the murder took place under "special circumstances," the death penalty would be mandatory.

California voters earlier this month approved a measure extending the death penalty to the murder of public officials. The death penalty already applied to multiple murders.

Hearing Set Dec. 6

Judge Reynolds set White's hearing for Dec. 6 and said the defendant should be prepared to enter a plea at that time. A preliminary hearing would then be scheduled.

"That's all we can do this morning," the judge said as he adjourned court.

White was returned to a jail cell five floors above the courtroom in the Hall of Justice where he is being watched around the clock.

While White was in court, the bodies of Moscone and Milk were transferred to City Hall, where they lay in state all afternoon with the public allowed to file past the flag-draped caskets. Mourners had to first pass through a metal detector, and big packages were searched.

Caskets in Rotunda

The caskets were placed under the gold and marble rotunda on red plush carpeting that had been laid over the marble floors. Dignitaries, businesses and civic groups had sent wreaths and sprays but there were more humble remembrances as well — a bunch of marigolds in a jar, daisies in a yellow plastic mustard container, and a single red rose left by a silent young man.

Moscone's burial is scheduled for today and Milk is to be cremated Friday night.

The city will virtually close down today as a day of mourning for the slain leaders. Schools, courts and city offices were ordered closed for the day.

The killings came just as the city was recovering from news of the mass murder-suicide of more than 900 people at the San Francisco-based Peoples Temple commune in Guyana.

White, the youngest member of the Board of Supervisors, resigned his post Nov. 10, saying he could not live on the salary of $9,600 a year. Later, he decided he wanted his job back, but Moscone refused.

Pair Gunned Down

The mayor and Milk were gunned down in their offices minutes before Moscone was to go before television cameras and announce White's replacement. Witnesses told of hearing gunshots, and of seeing White run through the corridors of City Hall.

Moscone, 49, was shot four times and Milk, 48, was shot five times, indicating the assassin had to reload the .38-caliber revolver between the two offices — a distance of about 100 steps.

White surrendered to police about 45 minutes after the shootings.

SURVIVORS DEPART—Two survivors of the Jonestown, Guyana mass suicide-murder, Hyacinth Thrash, 84, left, and Grover Davis, 79, sit in a van at Georgetown's Park Hotel Wednesday as they wait to be taken to the airport for return to the United States. The Guyanese government allowed seven members of the Peoples Temple cult to leave the country, but gave no indication of when the other 72 survivors would be allowed to leave. (AP Laserphoto)

Ruling Against Bell Reversed By Court

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A state appeals court Wednesday overturned a jury's finding that Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. slandered two executives with an internal investigation, and it threw out the jury's $3 million damage judgment in the case.

The slander suit was the subject of a long and lurid trial last year in which the firm, a major component of the Bell telephone system, was accused of corporate misdeeds that compared with Watergate. The executives were accused of sexual and financial abuses on the job.

One executive, James Ashley, was fired in 1974, and the other, T.O. Gravit, committed suicide. They claimed the company had hounded them because they raised objections to the corporate policies — which, according to Ashley and Gravit's widow, included secret political slush funds, dishonest rate practices, and wiretapping of employees.

But the appeals court ruled that Bell had a right to investigate allegations of sexual misconduct and other misdeeds by the two executives when it got such reports — including reports of sex in the executive offices and falsified expense vouchers.

"We agree with appellant (Bell) that the reports of wrongdoing established the defendant's conditional privilege to make inquiries or investigations in order to preserve its own effectiveness," said Associate Justice Robert Murray in the written opinion.

"The judgment is hereby rendered that the plaintiffs take nothing," it added.

Attorney Pat Maloney, representing the plaintiffs, said it would be appealed to the Texas Supreme Court.

Ashley Fired

Gravit was the $80,000-a-year head of Bell's Texas operations until he committed suicide at his Dallas home in October, 1974, during the investigation. Later that month, Ashley was fired from his $55,000-a-year post as head of the San Antonio office.

The case broke with Gravit's suicide — and a note he left in which he said, "Watergate is a gnat compared to the Bell system."

Ashley and Gravit's widow, Oleta Gravit Dixon, later sued Bell for $29 million, alleging that the investigation was improper.

In 1977, the state district court jury found that the investigation was a "proximate cause" for the insanity that led Gravit to suicide, and it awarded $1.5 million each to Ashley and to Gravit's widow.

False Expense Vouchers

At the same time, however, it ruled that Mrs. Gravit should pay Bell $1,771 to reimburse it for false expense vouchers Gravit filed, and it had heard testimony from several female employees that they had sex with Ashley and Gravit in order to earn promotions — in some cases engaging in sex in the executives' offices. The company also said the men had funneled Bell business to a printing company in which they had an interest.

"We view the appellate court's decision as a vindication of Southwestern Bell and its employees," said C.L. Todd, vice president and general manager of Southwestern Bell. "We're very pleased that the courts have upheld the right of a business to deal with internal wrongdoing and allegations of wrongdoing."

"Rich Get Richer"

Maloney, on the other hand, said that "Bell can count on this as their most influential day. The people can count this as their blackest day. The rich get richer. It has always been my experience as an attorney that the further you get from a jury, the less the people prevail."

Mrs. Dixon has since remarried and lives in Oklahoma. Ashley sells real estate in Blanco. They could not be reached for comment.

Ashley and his wife have also lost a $1 million invasion of privacy judgment against Bell in another appeals court, and the Texas Supreme Court upheld that reversal. The Ashley's had alleged that Bell illegally wiretapped their telephone.

New Branch Library Plan Backed

ing from an adjacent playa lake, Stewart said.

The site is good because it is near the Loop and because Quaker Avenue is a "good thoroughfare," he said.

Council members are "being realistic about land acquisition" in suggesting the site, Mrs. Jordan said. "But I guess if we can't do it for the price, we'd back off and look for another facility for the senior citizens center."

"It may allow something to be done which might not be done either way," Johnson said.

Board members tentatively approved the Godeke exchange, but asked for assurances that the new facility would be "comparable" to Godeke.

Following a Wednesday afternoon meeting with a senior citizens committee and City Manager Larry Cunningham, Weston said the representatives were "all thrilled" about the project.

Although the senior citizens wouldn't be able to occupy Godeke until the new branch is built (about 18 months), Weston said they didn't object. "They were just thankful to have any building."

For the past eight months, council members have been scouring the city for a centrally-located site for a senior citizens center because the present center at 26th Street and Avenue P is too small.

Center Plans Applauded

Eunice Stephens, local president of the American Association of Retired Persons, said the idea of making Godeke the senior citizens center is "very fine" and predicted other members of her organization would be enthusiastic about the site.

Cunningham offered to lease a building and remodel it while the new library is under construction, Mrs. Stephens said.

However, the offer was declined because, she explained, "I don't want the money spent that way. We've waited this long. I'd rather see the money put into something permanent."

"Since people know we have a building, they'll be happy," she said.

The delicately balanced trade-off of facilities and funds must withstand at least one public hearing and final deliberations by the city council before becoming more than an idea.

Pair Gunned Down

The mayor and Milk were gunned down in their offices minutes before Moscone was to go before television cameras and announce White's replacement. Witnesses told of hearing gunshots, and of seeing White run through the corridors of City Hall.

White surrendered to police about 45 minutes after the shootings.

"We feel we're fighting not only for our kids but for our neighborhood and property values," Mrs. Turner said.

She said an infusion of students — especially middle-class college-bound students — into Lubbock High will create a demand and justification for "honors programs" and other high-level courses. A stronger academic curriculum, in turn, will retain and attract more middle-class families, Mrs. Turner said.

Lubbock High parents officially are not advocating how to increase their school's enrollment. "That is up to the school board," said Mrs. Turner, adding that voluntary-transfer magnet programs may be an alternative to redrawing attendance boundaries.

School Board In Quandary Over LHS Enrollment Needs

If anything, Mrs. Turner said, bolstering Lubbock High would be in the school board's favor by demonstrating to the 5th Circuit the board's commitment to integration.

Lubbock High area parents have been contacting school board members about the problem of under-enrollment and plan to meet regularly to prepare for January's board meeting.

Property Values Involved

"We feel we're fighting not only for our kids but for our neighborhood and property values," Mrs. Turner said.

She said an infusion of students — especially middle-class college-bound students — into Lubbock High will create a demand and justification for "honors programs" and other high-level courses. The parents feel they may have some leverage — or at least have the school system's ear — as a result of their involvement in Teacher Corps, a federally funded project that will spend $1.2 million over the next five years to address academic needs at Lubbock High and two of its "feeder" schools, Thompson Junior High and Jackson Elementary.

Represented On Council

Parents who have been active in trying to increase Lubbock High's enrollment are well represented on the Teacher Corps community council, an advisory group chosen by adults in the three schools' zones.

And Ellis Loter, who chairs the council and serves on the Teacher Corps policy board, also is a Lubbock High activist.

Mrs. Loter said the focus of Teacher Corps seems to be on providing additional teacher training. From that respect, "we don't know whether Teacher Corps can help us" on the enrollment issue, she said.

But by serving on the policy board with Superintendent Ed Irons and Dr. Robert Anderson, dean of the Texas Tech University College of Education, Mrs. Loter said Teacher Corps "at least will be a way to keep the lines of communication open" with school officials.

Perhaps the federal project will show that "the only thing that is going to help those two schools (she considers Thompson in the same boat as Lubbock High) is to bring in more students," Mrs. Loter said.

It's possible, she added, that the extra teacher training provided by the project could be coordinated with "some kind of magnet-school approach" to bolstering enrollment.

Seven Of Survivors From Cult Return

NEW YORK (AP) — Seven elderly, penniless members of the depleted Peoples Temple cult, said to be "scared" and "not feeling well," returned to the United States from Guyana on Wednesday.

After being questioned for 90 minutes by government officials aboard the Pan American World Airways jet that brought them back, the survivors — three in wheelchairs, the others walking — headed for an airport bus and connecting flights to California.

Only two of the seven actually were at Jonestown last week when Rep. Leo J. Ryan, D-Calif. and four others were killed on an airstrip and more than 900 followers of the Rev. Jim Jones died in a mass suicide-murder.

Questioned By Officials

Regular passengers aboard the flight from Timehri to Kennedy International Airport here were allowed to disembark first, then the plane was boarded by questioners from the FBI, the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, U.S. Customs, Immigration and the Secret Service.

A doctor and nurse also were allowed aboard the plane to examine the elderly survivors because, according to a Pan Am official who asked not to be identified, "They're not feeling well."

Asked how she felt, Hyacinth Thrash, 76, said she was "OK."

Grover Davis, 79, told a reporter, "I feel fine, son."

The Pan Am official said the group had said they were "scared of the crowd" of reporters and cameramen that awaited their arrival.

One Arrives Earlier

One other survivor, 84-year-old Miguel DePina, arrived in this country last Sunday.

"I'm just taking one step at a time," said cult member Raymond Godshalk, 62, of Los Angeles, before leaving Guyana. "I need a few days to think things over. I lost my companion of 38 years. Her name is Viola. She's my wife. Naturally I felt quite badly about it, but you can't cry over spilled milk."

Guyanese authorities said the other 72 survivors of the Jonestown tragedy would not be released until it is certain they are not material witnesses or suspects in the murders of Ryan, other members of his party and cultists in Georgetown. Two survivors already are being held in connection with the Ryan killings.

Mexico City Rocked By Quakes

fled into the streets. "They didn't tell me I would have this on my tour ticket," said Betty Green, 42, of Hillside, N.J.

Fire department officials said at least four fires were caused by the earthquake. Television and radio stations warned about fallen high power electrical wires.

"Getting Many Calls"

"We are still getting many calls about damaged buildings," a fire department spokesman said. "There are many injured, we don't know how many."

There appeared to be little structural damage to buildings along Paseo de la Reforma, but ambulance sirens whined through the center of town. Electricity and other essential services appeared to be functioning normally.

The first tremor lasted 70 seconds, officials said, and was felt strongly in Oaxaca City, Cuernavaca, and in Chiapas State.

Dr. Jaime Yamamoto of the Tacubaya Seismological Station here said all six quakes qualified as earthquakes but that all but the first were "remnants of energy" from the first shifting in the earth's crust. He said residents of the capital and other affected areas should expect additional aftershocks.

Building Tilts

In Mexico City's "pink zone," an area well known to tourists for its boutiques, the 11-story building housing the Mexican offices of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co. was evacuated. A building nearby tilted about eight degrees.

The seismological unit at the University of California at Berkeley said the quake registered 7.9 on the Richter Scale. A reading of 7 is considered a major earthquake.

The geophysical institute in Mexico City said the first quake registered 6.5 on the Richter scale. It was not immediately known why there were discrepancies in the recordings of the magnitude of the earthquake. It said the quake's epicenter was about 400 miles from the capital in the Pacific Ocean off the coast of Oaxaca State in southern Mexico. Oaxaca, a famous tourist area, is the center of the great pre-Columbian ruins at Monte Alba and Mitla.

Most Tremors Small

Seismographs record more than 3,000 earth tremors a year in the Mexican capital but most are so small they are not felt by residents.

A quake that measured 6.5 on the Richter scale hit a 200-mile area of southeastern Mexico on Aug. 28, 1973 and killed 573 persons. That earthquake was felt in Mexico City but caused no serious damage here. It killed 414 persons in Puebla State and 113 in Veracruz State.

In the resort city of Acapulco, a Red Cross spokesman said the tremors were not felt there.

which was similar to the AMA's.

After the high court's decision, the ABA revised its code of ethics and one result has been the proliferation of low-cost legal clinics. In these clinics, relatively simple cases such as uncontested divorces have been handled with the help of legal aides supervised by lawyers at a small part of what such legal services used to cost.

Such a development that could reduce medical fees is a clear possibility if the Barnes decision becomes final.

The AMA's advertising restrictions are embodied in its Principles of Medical Ethics and enforced by the AMA and affiliated state and county medical societies. Two of these affiliates, the Connecticut State Medical Society and the New Haven County Medical Association, Inc., also were cited in the case, which the FTC began Dec. 19, 1975. The case has been the subject of a long series of hearings before the judge.

Barnes said the ethical standards that prohibit advertising are unfair and illegal

Derailed Train Crew Fired

AMARILLO (AP) — Santa Fe Railroad officials Wednesday fired the engineer, conductor and head brakeman of a freight train that derailed a week ago in Canyon, causing more than $500,000 damage.

Santa Fe officials announced previously the train was on a curve going 60 miles an hour — twice the posted speed limit.

In addition to the three men who were fired, railroad officials said the rear brakeman was given 30 demerits.

No names were released by the company.

Santa Fe spokeswoman Susan Metcalf said a hearing was conducted Monday in Slaton, the home base of the train's crew. She said the railroad has concluded the excessive speed caused the derailment of the 92-car train, which was on a run from Houston to Denver.

Military Doctors, Patrons Both Disenchanted

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dotti Gandy isn't giving up on the military medical system, even though it took her five months to schedule a doctor's appointment this year.

She still thinks Navy doctors are tops — even though corpsmen working for them lost results of 19 medical tests, forcing her to retake them. A Navy wife for 22 years, she won't reject overnight the medical establishment that has taken care of her all those years.

But she's no longer surprised at complaints about a system critically short of doctors and unable to keep most of those it has.

The five-month wait to see a gynecologist convinced the Norfolk, Va., woman. "I always argued with them," she said of friends critical of military medicine. "I can't argue with them any more."

Mrs. Gandy's recent experience supports the conclusion of the Association of the United States Army, an organization that studies military issues. "A Deteriorating Benefit" is what it titled a report on the $100 million a year military medical system.

Focusing on Army medicine, the report told of long waits, curtailment of specialty services and use of outmoded equipment.

"There is no question that the military health care system is in a state of crisis ... driven by a growing shortage of the prime health care practitioners — the physicians," the report said.

And Army Secretary Clifford L. Alexander Jr. said this week that the shortage of military doctors was so grave that if there were a war in Europe, there might not be enough Army doctors to treat the casualties.

Physicians on initial duty tours said in interviews that they're fed up — with inequitable pay, broken recruitment promises, overwork and the hiring of well-paid civilian specialists in doctor-short bases.

Col. Neil J. McDonald, the Army Medical Department's director of personnel, said his service is doing all it can to attract and keep doctors. Chances for promotion are better; initial duty tours for some have been reduced from three to two years; desired locations now are granted. And there's an extensive scholarship program that can pay for all or part of a doctor's medical education.

It's not certain these changes will satisfy angry military doctors.

"I didn't think I was obligating myself to indentured slave labor when I got out of training," said an Army radiologist who asked not to be named. The radiologist, who earns about $18,000 a year, said he works 50 to 60 hours weekly but a civilian hired in his department is paid about four times that to work a 40-hour week.

Vernon McKenzie, acting assistant secretary of defense for health affairs, conceded that the pay system "produces a disgruntled group of young physicians."

He said the Defense Department has proposed legislation to correct the main inequity, a $9,000-a-year bonus paid some physicians but not others. The bonus depends on the program under which a doctor joins, but basically is not available under the scholarship plan.

McKenzie said it was "most unfortunate" that past Army recruiting ads made promises not kept, adding: "The Army now realizes this and is more careful."

The issues behind the doctors' frustrations were aired in the early November court-martial of Army Capt. Leon T. Davis, who refused to work on grounds the Army broke recruiting promises. He was found guilty of violating military law but was granted his request for dismissal from the service. Despite the guilty verdict, the military judge agreed that recruiting ads were misleading.

The Army, Navy and Air Force combined have 170 hospitals and 302 clinics worldwide, the Defense Department says. It says the total of 10,552 military physicians is 11 percent under authorized strength and notes shortages are much worse in some specialties.

The alternative to military medicine is the Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services, which is like health insurance, paying most bills. The patient also pays a share.

But the Association of the United States Army estimates that only 50 percent of civilian physicians will participate in that program because payments to doctors are too low.

All the services have problems retaining young doctors. Of doctors ending initial military obligations, the latest figures show only 28.5 percent deciding to stay in the Army and 39 percent in the Air Force. The Navy said it did not keep similar figures.

These numbers compare to a retention rate for all officers of 70.2 in the Army, 44 percent in the Navy and 60 percent in the Air Force.

Doctors say recruiting ads promised bonus pay, promotion in three years, 30 days yearly holiday and a chance to go to medical meetings.

"We post some of the ads on the wall with the comic strips," said Lt. Cmdr. Laning R. Davidson, a physician at the Navy's Bethesda, Md., medical center. "They're so outrageously pie in the sky."

Specialists who would be highly paid in civilian life said they were forced to work in primary care clinics and emergency rooms.

"I loathe it," said Lt. Cmdr. Mark Posner of the Oakland Naval Hospital in California, an anesthesiologist. "If I wanted to see kids with running noses I would have gone into that specialty."

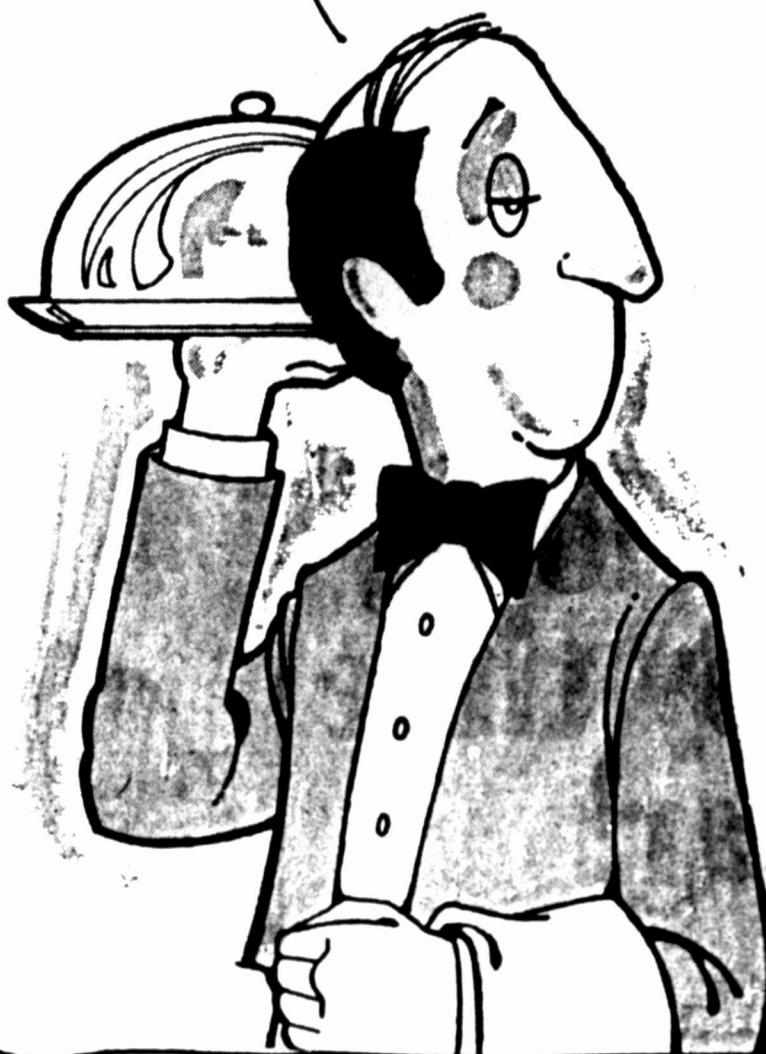

Several doctors said they worked with modern equipment but Bethesda's Dr. Davidson, a nuclear medicine specialist, commented: "It's almost embarrassing at times to develop data on a scan that you realized was poorly done because of poor equipment." "The government has got to get into a situation where it can deal honestly with people," said Capt. John Hanson, an Army radiologist in Washington. "They're not being honest with me."

Iranian Rebels Launch Disruptive New Strikes

TEHRAN (AP) — Opponents of Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi pressured Iran's military government Wednesday with a wave of wildcat strikes aimed at disrupting the oil-rich nation's battered economy and keeping the country on edge.

The walkouts, the latest in a string of stoppages and slowdowns, came amid fears that the labor troubles will soon spread into the streets during the Moslem holy period that starts later this week.

Traditionally, the religious whip themselves and mourn for the martyred grandson of the prophet Mohammed, Iman Hossein. The emotion-charged period, which begins Saturday, reaches a peak Dec. 11.

Conservative Moslem leaders have led the campaign to remove the shah, who has pressed ahead with a modernization drive and reforms that conservative religious leaders find untenable. They have been joined by the shah's political opposition, which finds fault with the shah's authoritarian rule.

Troops took over Tehran's oil refinery west of the city after workers continued a slowdown for the third straight day, causing some shortages. The refinery supplies most of the capital's gasoline and fuel oil.

Many filling stations in the city were open again Wednesday after the military trucked in gasoline during the 9 p.m.-5 a.m. curfew. But long lines of vehicles snarled traffic and hundreds of Iranians jammed stores to stock up with heating and cooking oil.

The state-run National Iranian Oil Co. said it has fuel supplies on hand for three to five months, but admitted its distribution network has been badly disrupted by the strikes and slowdowns.

The official news agency reported workers at the state-run Arvah Shahpour Chemical Co. in southern Iran also struck, demanding political reforms. Employees at Iran Air, the national carrier, staged a three-hour walkout to protest the arrest of leaders of an eight-day shutdown earlier this month that grounded the airline.

The protesters warned the government they will stage a full-scale strike if the detainees are not released by midnight Wednesday.

Troops also were drafted to guard the headquarters of the state-controlled National Iranian Radio and Television Network after employees walked out to protest the government's refusal to allow several national daily newspapers to publish without censorship.

The state-owned network, the only national media operating in Iran, was still broadcasting Wednesday evening, but sources reported an undetermined number of employees still refused to work.

The seven Tehran dailies stopped publishing Nov. 6, the day the shah appointed Gen. Gholam Reza Azhari prime minister with orders to restore stability after 11 months of bloody demonstrations in opposition to the 59-year-old monarch's rule, in which more than an estimated 1-100 persons have died.

The network walkout apparently was aimed at pressuring the government to ease its censorship after the striking journalists realized their action had backfired.

"We saw too late that we had played right into the government's hands by closing the papers," said one reporter. "They wanted us gagged and we did it all for them. Now we'll have to find a way to get ourselves out of the trap we fell into."

Meanwhile, foreign embassies issued warnings to their nationals to stay off the streets as much as possible when the mourning period of Moharram begins.

Strikes By Teachers, Firemen, Police Opposed

By LOUIS HARRIS

Most Americans feel that schoolteachers, firemen and policemen do not have the right to strike. On the other hand a majority feels that city-employed sanitation workers and garbage collectors do have this right.

Attitudes toward strikes by municipal employees have changed over the past four years as strikes have become more frequent and widespread.

In the case of schoolteachers, back in 1974 a clear 58-36 percent majority of Americans felt that teachers had the right to strike. By 1975, the margin of approval had slipped to 54-41 percent. By last year, it had narrowed further to 50-43 percent. In this latest survey, by 50-48 percent, people now want to deny teachers the right to strike.

During this same period, feelings about policemen striking also have changed. Back in 1974, by a narrow 47-46 percent, a plurality supported policemen's having the right to strike. Two years later, a close 49-44 percent plurality opposed it. Now, by a wide 56-41 percent, a majority wants to deny policemen this right.

Attitudes toward firemen's striking have run a similar course. Back in 1975 there was a 47-47 percent standoff among Americans over the right of firemen to strike. A year later, a 49-45 percent plurality opposed it. Now, by 55-42 percent, a solid majority feels that firemen do not have the right to strike.

In the case of sanitation workers and garbage collectors who work for the government, however, a majority of 52-45 percent feel these workers do have the right to strike. However, this latest result is down considerably from a higher 56-37 percent majority who felt the same way in 1974.

An important exception to the overall sentiment about the right of municipal employees to strike is the attitude of union members, most of whom are not government employees. Members of the trade union movement support the right of sanitation workers to strike by a wide 65-32 percent, of schoolteachers by 59-38 percent, of firemen by 54-43 percent and of policemen by 54-44 percent. These results indicate that in the event of a strike by municipal employees, trade union ranks are likely to hold firm.

Behind these conclusions are some general attitudes that people have about why workers go out on strike:

—A high 79 percent of Americans attribute 'the cost of living continuing to go up' as a major reason for strikes. Clearly, in a time of high inflation, the public readily understands the pinch of high prices on wages.

—A substantial 73 percent also feels that 'union members wanting more fringe benefits' is a major factor in triggering strikes.

—A majority of 53 percent feels that 'management's refusing to understand labor problems' is a major cause of strikes. On this score, the public tends to sympathize with the strikers.

—50 percent of the public, however, feels that 'union leaders' encouraging strikes that need not take place' is a major cause of strikes. Obviously, a substantial number of Americans think that union leaders sometimes provoke strikes even though a solution might be worked out through other means. The number of those who feel this way has risen sharply from 25 percent only four years ago.

—41 percent of the public attributes 'rank and file members' being more aggressive than their leaders' as a major cause of strikes, up from only 25 percent who felt that way two years ago.

—40 percent believe that 'management's being willing to take a strike to break a pattern of increased labor costs' is a major cause of strikes, up from a comparable 25 percent two years ago.

—39 percent believe that 'workers' saying they can't improve their lives unless they strike' is a major reason for strikes, up from 25 percent who felt that way back in 1975.

—33 percent feel that 'management's not wanting to raise prices for their products or services' is a major cause of strikes.

These findings show that Americans often can see justification for strikes, and, indeed, they will give support to workers when they feel their cause is justified. In the case of schoolteachers, firemen and policemen, however, the public now draws the line and feels that solutions to labor disputes in these areas should be solved without use of the strike as the ultimate recourse.

Hostesses Get Washington Social Whirl Advice

WASHINGTON (AP) — There's more to entertaining in Washington than having a good time.

At parties, future meetings between diplomats are arranged. Strangers who will meet again and again check each other out. Important information is passed on. Sometimes an exchange at a party can effect the course of world events.

"The sternest purpose lurks under the highest frivolity," intones historian Arthur Schlesinger Jr. in his introduction to the newly published book, "Entertaining in Washington," written by Lucy Moorhead.

Although Mrs. Moorhead, wife of Democratic Rep. William Moorhead of Pennsylvania, calls entertaining in the nation's capital "a significant and useful enterprise," the prominent Washingtonians she interviewed shun the label "hostess."

"Nowadays women want to be involved in serious things, and for a long time, much entertaining in Washington was a meaningless exercise, giving a frivolous connotation to being called a hostess," says Mrs. Moorhead, who has given hundreds of parties during her 20 years in Washington — but wants to be known as a writer.

Entertaining is an art, however, and Mrs. Moorhead's friends who have been around official Washington long enough to know what will succeed, have shared their party secrets from state dinners at the White House to fox hunt breakfasts.

Evangeline Bruce, a writer and the widow of Ambassador David Bruce, suggests inviting a varied mix of guests. "Different groups love gaping at one another," she says. "Mix ages, have several beautiful women, cultural luminaries, writers, painters, stage and screen stars."

Lorraine Cooper, wife of John Sherman Cooper, former ambassador to India and East Berlin, advises hostesses who want to have an outdoor party to check with the Farmer's Almanac for the weather forecast.

To avoid seating crises in case of last minute drop-outs or arrivals — a familiar Washington syndrome — Mrs. Cooper keeps a small table for two or three so place cards can be reshuffled. And she never seats husbands and wives together, because "they all make much more of an effort if separated."

Michael Edwards, an "international bachelor," warns against having "lemon couples" — those boring husbands and wives he says can be "the death of a party."

Mrs. Averell Harriman stresses the importance of the location of the bar, because that is inevitably where people congregate.

Mrs. Harriman also notes, "There is power in the importance of putting people together. If you get the right people together you should be able to let the evening alone, the conversation runs itself."

Author Susan Mary Alsop speeds up the departure of lingering guests by just getting "quieter and quieter. And I stop offering drinks."

For weekend house parties, Polly Fritchey, whose husband, Clayton, is a columnist, says guests should always be informed about such things as what to bring to wear and when breakfast is served.

Mrs. Fritchey also has some advice for weekend guests: "Don't steal the Sunday paper," and, "No matter how much you might be urged, don't stay on for Sunday night supper."

Mrs. Moorhead herself likes to give dance parties with good, continuous music. She also stresses how important it is to greet guests warmly. "Guests who feel wanted begin to come alive, to sparkle," she says.

Mrs. Moorhead advises hostesses not to try too hard or worry about perfection. The perfect guest, however, should make an effort, especially by showing interest in his or her dinner partner.

"There are a lot of people in Washington who can talk," says Moorhead. "But not enough guests who will listen."

Christmas Sales Here Ahead Of 1977's

By LISA PAIKOWSKI
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The threat of increasing inflation looms before the American public and the predictions for the national economy are gloomy. But neither shrinking dollars nor pessimistic predictions will stay the Christmas shopper from his appointed gift-buying rounds, according to a sampling of city retail personnel.

Most of those surveyed foresee a profitable season, with reports of sales figures that so far equal or better last year's figures.

The Christmas buying rush already is under way and two local department store executives reported good business in the opening weeks, though one was hesitant to paint an overly optimistic picture of the entire season.

"Business has been excellent all fall and our Christmas business has started on schedule," said B.E. Rushing, vice president and secretary of Hemphill-Wells. "We're real optimistic about the future and we've planned accordingly. We have ample merchandise and hopefully enough people to serve the customers."

Ira Dunlap of Dunlap's reported good Christmas sales, but avoided any glowing predictions for the future. "So far we've done very well. We're about even with last year's sales. Hopefully, it'll be as good as last year."

The vice president and owner added, "Of course, since I got the cotton cladding report, I can't be overly optimistic. The current economic news is not going to stimulate anyone to do an excess of Christmas shopping. I just think with the local agricultural economy and state and national economy the way it is, people will be more reticent to part with their dollars."

Most of the store spokesmen acknowledged the limited South Plains cotton crop, but expressed little concern over its effect on sales.

Leland Duckworth, store manager of J.C. Penney's, said that the crop has not affected business, which so far is "real strong." The assistant manager of another chain department store said, "It should be a fantastic Christmas if the cotton dries up. It's there — it just needs to come in." He said he doesn't expect that business will be affected. Philip Hixon, manager and owner of Toys by Roy, said, "I don't think the cotton crop influences the toy industry that much. I look at it this way — if I'm down to my last $5, I'll spend at least half of it on my kids."

Rushing expressed little worry over the impact of the cotton harvest on his sales, saying that other factors also affect business.

"Lubbock is dependent on the cotton crop for a large portion of its income," he said. "Last year was a bumper crop, but I still think many farmers will have a reasonable income this year. Business is dependent on other factors too — the people from surrounding towns who come in to shop and also industry. Industry has continued to grow and prosper this year."

One manager of a chain store outlet, however, thought that the success of the season might be partially contingent on the agricultural picture. "We're running about even with last year's figures, maybe a little behind," he said. "We expect to do well during the season if they ever get the cotton fields picked. Then we should do about the same as last year."

If Christmas is for children, as many believe, then Lubbock boys and girls will be enjoying a bountiful one, judging by Hixon's enthusiastic sales report.

"If the past few days are any indication, it should be a great year," said Hixon. "Sales are considerably up this year from last year. I think it's partly because people are buying earlier, and also there are a lot of higher ticketed items this year. The average price is up on many products. I think the average person is spending more dollars to get what they want."

ANN LANDERS

Dear Readers: The following self-questionnaire appeared in the Harvard Medical School Health Letter of August 1978. It was printed with permission from Ayerst Laboratories and recommended as a means of self-testing for those who suspect they may have a drinking problem.

EARLY SYMPTOMS (the first stage of alcoholism):

Are you beginning to lie or feel guilty about your drinking?

Do you gulp your drinks?

Do you try to have a few extra drinks before joining others in drinking?

Must you drink at certain times—for example, before lunch or a special event, after a disappointment or quarrel?

Do you drink because you feel tired, depressed or worried?

Are you annoyed when family or friends talk to you about your drinking?

Are you beginning to have memory blackouts and occasional passouts?

MIDDLE SYMPTOMS (an extension of early symptoms):

Are you making more promises and telling more lies about your drinking?

Are there more times when you need a drink?

When sober, do you regret what you have said or done while drinking?

Are you drinking more often alone, avoiding family or close friends?

Do you have weekend drinking bouts and Monday hangovers?

Have you been going "on the wagon" to control your drinking?

Are memory blackouts and passouts becoming more frequent?

LATE SYMPTOMS (the advanced stage of alcoholism):

Do you drink to live and live to drink?

Are you noticeably drunk on important occasions—for example, a special dinner or meeting?

Do your drinking bouts last for several days at a time?

Do you sometimes get the "shakes" in the morning and take "a quick one"?

Do blackouts and passouts now happen very often?

Have you lost concern for your family and others around you?

If you see yourself in the column today and want help, contact Alcoholics Anonymous (Look in the phone book).

For those who don't know: Alcoholics Anonymous is a fellowship of men and women who share their experience, strength and hope with each other in an effort to solve their common problem. The only requirement for membership is a desire to stop drinking. There are no dues or fees for AA membership. The primary purpose of an AA is to stay sober and help other alcoholics achieve sobriety.

AA does not "recruit" members. The person with the problem should call AA and ask for help. People who man the phones will inform the caller when the next meeting in his or her neighborhood will be held and he (or she) will offer to send someone out to talk about the problem and make plans to bring the prospective member to the next meeting.

AA's definition of an alcoholic is a person who, when he starts to drink, cannot stop until he is drunk. There is a large variety of alcoholic patterns—some drink only beer; others drink only on weekends; still others drink only after 5:00 p.m. (Many never miss a day's work and point to this achievement as proof that they are not alcoholics.) To those who drink to "drown their sorrows," I say—it won't work. Sorrow knows how to swim.

We have a very good way of saving postage on our Christmas cards at our church.

One of the members built a very nice box with twelve cubby holes to hold cards. He painted this white with red and green trim and then lettered each cubby hole with two or three letters of the alphabet.

Those members sending Christmas cards to other members just place them in the appropriate cubby hole. It's lots of fun looking for your mail! — Grace

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY THE LATE GEORGE C. THOSTESON, M.D. IN COLLABORATION WITH PAUL E. RUBLE, M.D.

Thosteson I have a skin problem called vitiligo. For two years I have been to dermatologists and have found there is no cure. In my reading I have seen remedies men have been told that eating liver

In the case of early morning fatigue, any high protein snack at night is best. If your fairness continues you should be examined. The blood glucose matter can be easily determined by a blood test. There is more on this subject in my book "Help for Hypoglycemia," which you can order by sending 50 cents and a stamped self-addressed envelope to Your Good Health, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611. There is a natural tendency for a patient to be psychologically depressed following extensive surgery, but the blood sugar drop undoubtedly contributes to this in many instances.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am 62. I recently developed a numbness in my right hand. I complained to my husband about it, but he shrugged and said he thinks it is just poor circulation. My blood pressure is fine or at least it was at a checkup a few months ago. Do you feel it is just poor circulation? — M.V.

Could be, but I rather doubt it. Numbness of this kind is more often a matter of nerve disturbance, specifically of something pressing against a nerve and closing off supply to the wrist. You need X-rays of the wrist and neck areas to find out if it is a local nerve problem.

Dear Dr. T: A dermatologist gave me an antihistamine pill for a short period, and I was dizzy. Please advise about such reactions and whether this means one cannot use such pills. — C.C.M.

Antihistamines can disturb eyesight, particularly depth perception. They may also cause dizziness. It is well to be extra careful when taking the first one, allowing sufficient time to measure the reaction before attempting to drive a car, for example. Alcohol can compound antihistamine effects. You should report any repeat episode. Other antihistamine preparations might be less disturbing.

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

Steve Knowles probably concocted today's hand. At least we have never seen it up to now.

He calls it the Satan coup and describes how the hero when a young man was given the West hand by a sinister stranger with the remark: "Beware! You will meet this hand some day."

Years go by. Our hero is playing the last board of the world's pair championship. He has a feeling of impending danger, but is delighted when he picks up that nice North hand.

He doubles one spade. South bids two diamonds and our hero jumps to five over West's two spades. West doubles, North redoubles and West leads his deuce of hearts to East's ace.

Back comes a heart for West to ruff. Had West ruffed, South would win the championship, but the Satan coup had developed.

West discarded his ace of clubs. South tried to ruff a club to get back to his hand for a trump finesse, but West overruffed. Now West led his ace of spades. Dummy ruffed, but West who held the Satan hand was certain of another trump trick to defeat.

LP&L Review Committee Undecided Over Fate Of City Utility

The newly formed committee to determine the future of Lubbock Power and Light has not yet reached a decision on what to do with the city-owned power company, Electric Utilities Board members were told Wednesday night.

Study committee member Lonnie Hollingsworth told board members at their regularly scheduled meeting that the committee conducted a general discussion on the matter, but no formal action was taken. Among the alternatives being considered by the committee include selling LP&L to outside interests, leasing it, or buying Southwestern Public Service Company's transmission lines and operating as an exclusive electric dealer. Hollingsworth noted that the city council supplied the committee with "a comprehensive package" to study, and that the members would consider each alternative carefully. The board also learned that LP&L's new utility payment drop boxes were being favorably received by the public, but that two boxes currently located in United food stores would have to be moved. Because Piggly-Wiggly has purchased the United stores, the box in the United at 203 N. University Ave. will be moved to the Piggly-Wiggly at 106 N. University

Ave., and the box at the United at 1720 Parkway will be relocated in the Piggly-Wiggly at E. Fourth Street and the Idalou Hwy. The board agreed to enter into negotiations to place a box in the Hemphill-Wells store in the South Plains Mall, and buy three new boxes to be used as replacements for boxes in need of repair. In other business, the board voted to check into the possibility of acquiring government funds to study the acquisition of garbage-fired boilers. This proposal will be further studied at the next City Council meeting.

The board cancelled its scheduled December meeting, opting to meet Jan. 25.

Step 1 — Year of birth. Read down the left hand column to find the last number in the year of your birth then go across to the appropriate decade. For instance, if you were born in 1942, your number for Physical would be 21, Emotional 17, Intellectual 19. Note whether your numbers are preceded by an A or B; this will be used for Step 2.

Senators Warn

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senators are making a grave mistake in linking a proposed arms limitation agreement with the United States and Russia in Cuba and Africa, two Wednesday.

Sens. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., and Schweiker, R-Pa., said they are wrong to believe that an arms agreement can start.

The senators, members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that met in Moscow recently, said they believe the Russians there is an arms agreement.

"A proposed SALT agreement is a Soviet advertisement for Soviet adventurism," Nunn said.

AUTO SALES DROP

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sales of motor vehicles are expected to drop slightly in 1979 from the 1978 level, says the U.S. Department of Commerce. The decline is due to a combination of factors, including a decline in sales of trucks and a high, the department said.

Plan Called Drug Abuse 'Treatment Alternative'

DALLAS (AP) — Thousands of Texas drug addicts are stepping to a new beat, and the sound is a cadence of hope for those living in the shade of mind-clouding chemicals.

Bob Meehan is the Pied Piper of Houston, leading a parade of drug abusers in search for a place in the sun.

A former drug addict and convict, Meehan founded the Palmer Drug Abuse Program, which its National Executive Director Ed Leach calls the "treatment alternative for drug abuse."

To former drug abusers and their families, working to salvage lives and personalities ravaged by mind-altering drugs, the program represents the last best hope.

"I wanted to kill myself three or four times," said Mark, a 16-year-old Dallas high school student who, pressured by his sixth-grade classmates, began using drugs four years ago.

Free of mind-altering chemicals for six months, Mark credits a feeling of "strength and unity" and "love" at PDAP with his new found sobriety.

"We do not believe the solution to chemical abuse can be found in another chemical," said Leach, a former addict.

"Getting high is a way of life, a coping mechanism. Instead of chemicals we give them friends and relationships and love. The key is the constant affirmation that 'people care about me.'"

Leach said, "There is a lot of healing in caring." Lonely and disconsolate persons find "the feeling that people care is mind-boggling."

"I was living a lie," said Jim, the 20-year-old son of an affluent Dallas family. "I thought people liked and respected me because I was into drugs. I picked friends who were into dope. I burned all my trails behind me."

Jim began "smoking dope" when he was 15. After he graduated to "hard" drugs, he began dealing to supply his habit.

"I had to start again. I had to be rigorously honest, change my morals, and conduct a personal inventory."

AT PDAP, Jim said he found a way to deal with his feelings of fear and inadequacy. "I found hope and trust and love."

Leach said gives drug abusers the strength to overcome their habit.

If sobriety and self-esteem are the gospels of the PDAP, Meehan is the evangelist. PDAP supporters say he struggled alone to find a path back from addiction and prison, and now has dedicated his life to making it a well-traveled highway.

Meehan was digging ditches and shoring up his own self-esteem when an Episcopal priest persuaded him to talk to a group of teen-agers about his battle with drug addiction.

From that talk sprang a program Leach said has now affected more than 20,000 lives and is growing by leaps and bounds.

There are PDAP centers in Houston, San Antonio, Dallas-Fort Worth, Beaumont, Austin, Galveston, San Angelo and Denver. This spring it will expand into West Texas, and future plans call for centers in other states and Canada.

"We are having success problems," said Leach, "we cannot expand fast enough to meet the demand from communities wanting programs."

Meehan refuses to give in to demands until the program is ready to expand. "We are not going to run the risk of damaging this program by being in a hurry."

Former drug addicts now living "chemically free lives" are trained as counselors. Leach said they have more credibility with participants and understand better than anyone else the problems and emotions of a drug abuser trying to follow Meehan's footsteps.

The program does have medical detoxification centers, but for the most part participants are treated on an out-patient, strictly voluntary basis, said Leach.

Who? In civic circles. The program operates on funds donated by individuals, industry and labor unions, said Leach.

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RICHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: After making all kinds of interesting new beginnings to have more of life's benefits, you find delays and obstacles. You will have to pause and work them out before you are able to really understand your problems and solve them.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19): You have ideas now which you should work out right away before confusing conditions arise later. Follow the lead of others at this time. Avoid a tendency to brag so much.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20): Put your bookkeeping and household chores in order, since later you can manage some obstacle that arises. Be of greater assistance to kin.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Handle important communications early in the day. The afternoon could bring a confusing condition. Do not be partners down, no matter what.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): You are able to perform any work at hand efficiently during the day, but later money does not through as you expected. Be patient.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Make recreational plans early and then get busy on a plan you have. Try to please family more. Attend to dull routines. Avoid one who is overly concerned with money.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Plan time early to please family and establish more harmony there. A new project looks very bright until you see the flaws in it.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Use a direct approach with partners and get good results thereby. Find the right ways and means to gain the results you truly want.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): You know how to add to revenue early in the day. Later, you can make progress, despite some delays. Do some studying that will make you more practical and progressive.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): You understand early how to best gain your most cherished wishes and then can work on them in earnest. Make important contacts, especially in the morning and evening.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Go after your most private aims early in the morning for best results. Handle problems intelligently in the evening. Listen to what an adviser has to suggest for greater success.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): See as many persons as you can who could help you in attaining your goals. You have a good friend who is most helpful to you.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20): A good time to get into community work that you like. Improve credit by best means and methods. Take it easy in the evening.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY: He or she will have a highly developed intuitive faculty and should be given a fine education that can be quickly assimilated, including foreign languages. The career will get started much earlier than most, which could very well be in foreign countries.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to YOU.

Members embrace each other with contagious excitement at PDAP meetings in a genuine display of affection that transcends superficial cordiality and cuts right to the core of people who care about people.

"I found peace of mind for the first time in my life," said Jean, an alcoholic mother of a drug abuser. "For me PDAP means that my son will live instead of die."

Jean has been a member of the parent group for 2 1/2 years. Prior to her involvement, she lived in fear of the son she could not understand and felt saddled with guilt because of his problem.

"I meet people with similar experiences; I know now it is not really my fault, and I learned to feel good about myself," said Jean.

It's exactly that sense of self-worth that

Amendments Tallies Due Okay

AUSTIN (AP) — The State Canvassing Board will meet again today to officially count some more of the Nov. 7 ballots, but not the close U.S. Senate and governor's race.

Secretary of State Steve Oaks said the three-member board would canvass and certify the vote totals for the constitutional amendments and for those statewide and district offices that were not certified Nov. 24.

A final meeting of the canvassing board is set for Dec. 7 at which time they will certify results of the Senate race.

Final certification of the governor's race cannot take place until after the new legislature meets Jan. 9 and a canvass is conducted by legislators.

Oaks said Wednesday that a few counties are still recounting Senate and governor's race ballots.

The recount was requested in about 40 counties where voting machines and punch-card ballots are used by the apparent losers, Attorney General John Hill and Rep. Bob Krueger, D-Texas.

Members of the state canvassing board are Gov. Dolph Briscoe, Oaks, and Blake Sparenberg, Austin.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tunisian Prime Minister Hedi Nourra was welcomed to the White House by President Carter. He was expected to seek support for a Middle East agreement during their private talks.

"We have received good advice, good counsel and good support from Tunisia during our own times of effort to bring peace to the Middle East and to the northern portion of the continent of Africa," Carter said during an outdoor arrival ceremony on the South Lawn.

After the arrival ceremony, the two leaders met in the Oval Office, and held a working lunch with other U.S. and Tunisian officials.

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: After making all kinds of interesting new beginnings to have more of life's benefits, you find delays and obstacles. You will have to pause and work them out before you are able to really understand your problems and solve them.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19): You have ideas now which you should work on right away before confusing conditions arise later. Follow the lead of others at this time. Avoid a tendency to brag so much.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20): Put your bookkeeping and household chores in order, since later you can manage some obstacle that arises. Be of greater assistance to kin.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Handle important communications early in the day. The afternoon could bring a confusing condition. Do not be partners down, no matter what.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): You are able to perform any work at hand efficiently during the day, but later money does not through as you expected. Be patient.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Make recreational plans early and then get busy on a plan you have. Try to please family more. Attend to dull routines. Avoid one who is overly concerned with money.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Plan time early to please family and establish more harmony there. A new project looks very bright until you see the flaws in it.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 23): Use a direct approach with partners and get good results thereby. Find the right ways and means to gain the results you truly want.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): You know how to add to revenue early in the day; later, you can make progress, despite some delays. Do some studying that will make you more practical and progressive.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): You understand early how to best gain your most cherished wishes and then can work on them in earnest. Make important contacts, especially in the morning and evening.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Go after your most private aims early in the morning for best results. Handle problems intelligently in the evening. Listen to what an adviser has to suggest for greater success.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): See as many persons as you can who could help you in attaining your goals. You have a good friend who is most helpful to you.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20): A good time to get into community work that you like. Improve credit by best means and methods. Take it easy in the evening.

IF YOU R CHILD IS BORN TODAY: He or she will have a highly developed intuitive faculty and should be given a fine education that can be quickly assimilated, including foreign languages. The career will get started much earlier than most, which could very well be in foreign countries.

Amendments Tallies Due Okay

AUSTIN (AP) — The State Canvassing Board will meet again today to officially count some more of the Nov. 7 ballots, but not the close U.S. Senate and governor's race.

Secretary of State Steve Oaks said the three-member board would canvass and certify the vote totals for the constitutional amendments and for those statewide and district offices that were not certified Nov. 24.

A final meeting of the canvassing board is set for Dec. 7 at which time they will certify results of the Senate race.

Final certification of the governor's race cannot take place until after the new legislature meets Jan. 9 and a canvass is conducted by legislators.

Oaks said Wednesday that a few counties are still recounting Senate and governor's race ballots.

The recount was requested in about 40 counties where voting machines and punch-card ballots are used by the apparent losers, Attorney General John Hill and Rep. Bob Krueger, D-Texas.

Members of the state canvassing board are Gov. Dolph Briscoe, Oaks, and Blake Sparenberg, Austin.

Carter Welcomes Tunisian Premier

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tunisian Prime Minister Hedi Nouria was welcomed to the White House by President Carter. He was expected to seek support for a Middle East agreement during their private talks.

"We have received good advice, good counsel and good support from Tunisia during our own times of effort to bring peace to the Middle East and to the northern portion of the continent of Africa," Carter said during an outdoor arrival ceremony on the South Lawn.

After the arrival ceremony, the two leaders met in the Oval Office, and held a working lunch with other U.S. and Tunisian officials.

Protesters Not Worrisome, Nixon Says

SAYS HE WILL NEVER SEEK OFFICE — Former President Richard Nixon gestures as he talks with French television journalist Joseph Pasteur after Nixon appeared on the French TV program "Television Dossiers," Tuesday night in Paris. He told his French audience he will never run for office again. He left Wednesday for a speaking engagement in Britain. (AP Laserphoto)

LONDON (AP) — Former President Richard M. Nixon told reporters Wednesday he is not worried and will feel "very much at home" if students demonstrate during his speaking engagement at the Oxford Union debating society.

Nixon, who resigned in 1974 as a result of the Watergate scandal, arrived at Heathrow Airport from Paris, where he appeared on a television show and answered viewers' questions.

Nixon said he would speak on foreign affairs and answer questions at Oxford on Thursday, but added he hoped the questions would not be longer than the answers.

American students at Oxford said they planned to demonstrate against Nixon. They code-named their operation "CREEP" — the acronym of Nixon's 1972 Committee to Re-elect the President, which was involved in the Watergate burglary.

Undergraduate student president Charles Parsons said at least 1,000 demonstrators would protest his Thursday lecture because they "remember very well the excesses of the Nixon administration and are opposed to this visit."

Nixon was dressed in a gray topcoat, looking well and rested. He stepped off the sidewalk to wave to onlookers peering from windows of buildings opposite Claridge's, his hotel in the elegant Mayfair district near the U.S. Embassy in Grosvenor Square.

The 64-year-old former president said he had "a nice, dicey meeting" when he last visited Oxford as vice president 20 years ago. He did not explain the comment about his appearance before 400 students at Oxford Nov. 28, 1958.

He kidded with photographers outside his hotel, agreeing to their pleas for more poses and smiles. "Did you get that one?" Nixon asked, adding as the session ended. "Please send a set to my dentist."

After an impromptu 10-minute talk with reporters, Nixon and his entourage of about 20 persons moved into the hotel. An aide declined to give details of Nixon's engagements for the rest of the day or the remainder of his three-day visit.

Britain's Labor government arranged maximum security and minimum courtesies for the arrival of Nixon, on his first visit to Europe since leaving the White House.

An aide to Prime Minister James Callaghan told a reporter, "The prime minister has no plans to see Mr. Nixon."

An attempt to stop the Nixon visit failed last week when Home Secretary

Merlyn Rees rejected a call by Labor lawmaker John Lee for a ban on Nixon as an undesirable alien.

Nixon was met at Heathrow Airport by a British Foreign Office official, Col. Gordon Maxwell, Conservative lawmaker Jonathan Aitken, representing the Speaker of the House of Commons, and U.S. Ambassador Kingman Brewster.

Scores of policemen teamed up with Nixon's Secret Service agents to insure his safety. Nixon shrugged off security men at Heathrow Airport and accepted the challenge of group of baggage handlers to "come and talk to the workers."

When handlers' shop steward Danny Ewing said he been in two world wars, Nixon replied, "I don't believe in wars. We don't want any more of that. This is what I am trying to do, stop wars."

He shook hands with about a dozen of the 50 workers.

Engineers Approve Oil Refinery Plan

PORTSMOUTH, Va. (AP) — The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers says it will approve construction of a $600 million oil refinery that has been hailed as the economic salvation of Portsmouth.

Lt. Gen. John W. Morris, chief engineer, said Tuesday he would recommend approval of a permit to allow the Hampton Roads Energy Co. to dredge a section of the Elizabeth River and construct a marine terminal for its refinery. However, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service of the Department of the Interior has objected to the refinery on environmental grounds and the two federal agencies must work out their differences before construction can begin.

Reagan Suggests Jones Cult Appealed To Democrats

BONN (AP) — Former California governor Ronald Reagan said Wednesday that Peoples Temple cult leader the Rev. Jim Jones appeared to attract more members of the Democratic party than Republicans.

"I'll try not to be happy in saying this," Reagan said. "He supported a number of political figures but seemed to be more involved with the Democratic party. I haven't seen anyone in the Republican party having been helped by him or seeking his help."

Reagan, who lost the 1976 race for the Republican presidential nomination to Gerald Ford, is on a tour of European capitals and was interviewed by The Associated Press in his hotel suite here overlooking the Rhine River.

Reagan described the mass suicide of more than 900 Peoples Temple members in Guyana as "a horrible thing almost without precedent."

"San Francisco has undergone some changes and it's been a kind of Mecca for various kinds of people," Reagan added.

Jones, known to have supported a number of liberal candidates, was appointed to San Francisco's City Housing Authority by Moscone, a liberal Democrat.

Jones also was known to have urged his church's members to attend political rallies. Rosalynn Carter appeared at one rally with Jones during her husband's 1976 presidential campaign.

In London, Reagan met with British Foreign Minister David Owen and Conservative Party leader Margaret Thatcher. In Paris on Monday, Reagan met with France's deputy foreign minister and French business leaders.

The conservative politician slammed Carter's foreign policy, defense strategy and anti-inflation drive.

"I think our foreign policy has been hard to understand. It seems to have no coherence. We have angered a number of our friends and brought us to the brink of the nations that are less friendly to us," Reagan said.

"I'm not sure on his so-called anti-inflation fight because it still seems to be in the long run."

California Democratic Rep. Leo J. Ryan was killed along with three journalists and a cult defector while investigating Jones's cult settlement in Guyana, Jones-town.

Reagan said he has been "campaigning strenuously" for Republican candidates for a number of months.

"I just felt it was time now, after all this campaigning, to get some first-hand information," Reagan said. "What is the attitude toward the United States? What is the image of us?"

Reagan said he will spend three days in West Germany for talks with government leaders. Asked if his trip were in preparation for a presidential campaign, Reagan answered, "You'll have to ask me that question sometime in 1979."

Proxy Fight Involves West Coast Airline

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Pacific Southwest Airlines officials say that Harold C. Simmons of Dallas is trying to seize control of their company.

Simmons, 47, already controls more than 20 percent of the San Diego-based airline with his Valhi Inc. of Dallas, which is engaged in a proxy fight with PSA.

In a meeting with 150 stockholders Tuesday and through newspaper advertisements, PSA has geared up for what appears to be a bitter battle.

"We are convinced that Harold C. Simmons would be wrong for PSA," the ad says.

A special stockholders' meeting was called for Nov. 20 to make corporate changes that would discourage any takeover. But that meeting was delayed until Dec. 12. PSA's present management has proposed that an 80 percent majority be required to approve any business combination with anyone who owns 20 percent or more of PSA stock.

In addition, the proposed changes provide for the end of cumulative voting and for staggered elections, in which three board members would be elected or re-elected to three-year terms at each annual meeting.

Simmons claims the amendments would emasculate stockholders' voting rights and has denied he seeks control.

Attorney Dave Hall of PSA told stockholders, "The net result of this proposal is to keep someone from taking piecemeal steps to get control of PSA and deal with himself."

"Let's talk about a person who is described (as) ... a Texas wheeler-dealer, an economic gunslinger who acquires and strips companies of their assets and abandons, or sells them," said Dwane Wittmayer, PSA's corporate affairs vice president.

"He says he'd like to get to learn the airline industry and evaluate it. He's never managed an airline. This is Harold C. Simmons."

Simmons controls 67 percent of Contran Corp., which owns 100 percent of Valhi, through which he has acquired about 668,600 shares of PSA stock since last May for $12.2 million.

In a series of lawsuits Valhi alleged that the PSA board and current management formed a clique to entrench themselves in control.

Home Mortgage Rate Of 11 Percent Seen

WASHINGTON (AP) — Home mortgage loan rates will rise to 11 percent or more next year, the savings and loan industry predicted Wednesday.

Kenneth Thygeson, chief economist for the U.S. League of Savings, also predicted that housing construction will decline 15 percent to 17 million new buildings next year.

Thygeson said mortgage rates will go up because of strong demand for mortgages and the high cost of the six-month saving certificates.

Savings and loans and the housing industry are usually hit first when interest rates climb. To protect them, the government let savings and loans and banks issue money market certificates whose rates are related to high-yielding Treasury bills.

The lenders say they are paying such high rates on the certificates that they will have to raise mortgage rates also.

"We have little choice but to pass those increased costs along to borrowers," Thygeson said.

As a result, he said, "the outlook is for 11 percent-plus mortgage rates in the new year."

In states with limits on mortgage rates, lending for housing may be shut off, he said.

Last month, the average mortgage interest rate nationally approached 10 percent.

Dawson, Borden Water Studies Issued

A-J Another Bureau

AUSTIN — Another in the series of reports on the Ogallala Aquifer — in this case in Dawson and Borden counties — has been published by the Department of Water Resources.

Report No. 225, "Analytical Study of the Ogallala Aquifer in Dawson and Borden Counties, Texas," is available without charge from the DWR, Post Office Box 13067, Austin, Texas 78711.

The report shows that the aquifer in the two counties contained approximately 800,000 acre-feet of water in 1974, with historical pumpage exceeding 90,000 acre-feet annually — more than twice the rate of natural recharge.

That overdraft is expected to continue,

Davis Linked To Gun; Arrest Scene Described

HOUSTON (AP) — Prosecutors linked millionaire Cullen Davis to a silenced pistol Wednesday and provided jurors in his murder-conspiracy trial a vivid account of his arrest last August.

They also disclosed that a night vision scope was recovered from the trunk of Davis' Cadillac and conducted a courtroom blackout to demonstrate its effectiveness to the jury.

Investigator Morris Howeth told how a wave of officers swooped down on Davis minutes after a tape-recorded meeting with an FBI informant and seized him with pistols drawn.

"Cullen, you're under arrest. Put your hands on the car," Howeth said he shouted at the Fort Worth industrialist as Davis emerged from a phone booth.

He said Davis offered no resistance.

A second investigator testified that the informant had been instructed to place the inoperative but silenced-equipped pistol in the trunk of Davis' car.

"I was afraid if Mr. Davis stepped out of his car with a gun he might be shot," the investigator said.

To cap the long, exhaustive day, a defense attorney said outside the courtroom the ominous-looking night vision scope was purchased on Davis' instructions.

Attorney Phil Burleson said Davis wanted the equipment for a camera he intended to use to conduct nighttime surveillance activities at the $6 million Davis mansion now occupied by the defendant's estranged wife Priscilla.

State attorneys offered no suggestions to the jury as to why Davis had the gun, the silencer or the scope in his possession.

"But it's not the normal thing one would be carrying around," prosecutor Jack Strickland quipped.

Investigators plucked the items from the trunk of the defendant's Cadillac after his arrest Aug. 29 outside a Fort Worth restaurant.

District attorneys investigator Rodney Hinson testified that he and others searched the car several hours after a tape-recorded meeting between Davis and FBI informant David McCrory.

It was at that encounter, the state alleges, that McCrory exchanged the pistol and its homemade muffler for $25,000 earmarked for a nonexistent killer.

Mere possession of a silencer is punishable under Texas law by two to 20 years in prison. Davis is not being tried on that offense at this time.

The darkly hooded 46-year-old oil heir is accused of financing a murder-for-hire scheme that included 18 separate targets.

Jurors were expected late Wednesday to see the $25,000 in $100 bills which the state says Davis paid for the murder of the judge hearing his divorce case, Joe Eidson.

No attempt was made on the judge's life and he subsequently participated in an FBI scenario that led to Davis' arrest.

Prosecutors showed the jury a photograph Wednesday of the defendant in a pool and the night vision scope wrapped in a towel and placed in a bag for him in the trunk of his car.

Clothespin Quota

PORTLAND, Maine (AP) — The U.S. International Trade Commission has recommended that a five-year quota be placed on imports of all wooden and plastic clothespins into the United States.

American clothespin manufacturers have complained that cheap products from foreign countries, especially Taiwan and China, have severely hurt the domestic industry. Tuesday's recommendation must still be approved by President Carter, whose decision can be expected by early February, the ITC spokesman said.

Food Stamp Rules To Change Friday

By NANCY ALLEN
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Poor people who cannot accumulate enough cash to buy food stamps may be eligible to receive them free beginning Friday.

Officials say this change in the federal food stamp program, called the "zero purchase requirement," is intended to help people, especially the aged and disabled, whose limited income prevents them from buying their full monthly allotment of food stamps.

Under the old program, part of a household's food stamp allotment was paid for in cash, and "bonus" stamps were issued free in addition to those purchased. The new system dictates recipients will pay nothing, and receive only the "bonus" stamps.

According to Milynda Walker of the Texas Department of Human Resources, the new law will enable "a person with literally no income to get the minimal nutritional diet established by the federal government."

Eligibility requirements, while easing up on persons with fixed low incomes, are tightening for those at higher income levels, said Mrs. Walker.

Persons receiving supplemental security income, for example, will now be required to meet the same eligibility requirements as all food stamp recipients. Formerly, they were automatically eligible.

Students receiving food stamps will also be affected by the tighter requirements. However, students do not constitute a large percentage of food stamp recipients in the county, Mrs. Walker said.

In August, 1978, there were 1,742 households certified to receive food stamps in Lubbock County, according to Mrs. Walker. How much that figure will change "depends on awareness," she commented, adding, "We're hoping for an increase in aid to the disabled and aged."

The cost to taxpayers under the new program will be about the same per household as before, Mrs. Walker said. However, she noted that increased benefits may cause an increase of perhaps 10 percent in overall output.

Under the new program, the income test will be based on federal poverty guidelines set by the Office of Management and Budget. To be eligible for food stamps, a household must have a net income below the poverty level. Deductions for earned income, and dependent care are allowed, plus a standard deduction of $60.

Formerly, income limits were based on guidelines set by the Secretary of Agriculture. Those limits were higher, and fewer restrictions were placed on who was eligible for food stamps.

The new regulations were formulated following widespread criticism of the food stamp program in Congress during the recent session.

Yuletide Sales Volume Ahead Of Last Year's

season? Jewelry, clothing, particularly women's clothing, computer games and space toys seem to have made the greatest gains so far.

One store manager said his whole jewelry line is selling well. "I think you'll see that across the city," he said. "Gold chains — anything with gold — are doing well."

Rushing said that the sale of women's coats has increased. "It's because of a major change in styles," he said. "Coat lengths and dress lengths have changed and many women feel that their coats aren't quite up to date."

One assistant manager reported that no single item in his store has been more popular than others. He said that just the items that "do traditionally well" are selling electronic games, hand appliances and wearing apparel.

Dunlap said that "we have made great strides in our better china, crystal and gourmet kitchen departments. It may be that we've put more emphasis on those areas this year. But it seems that it's the better merchandise that's moving."

As for toys, the after-effects of "Star Wars" lingers on. In fact, anything having to do with space is a big seller on the toy market, according to Hixon.

Electronic games were apparently at the top of many resident's Christmas lists this year. "Electronic games and computer games are really taking off," said Hixon. "We get 25-30 calls every day for the electronic games." He added that he is already completely sold out of some models.

There seems to be little evidence that Lubbockites are tightening their economic belts this Christmas season. Should the forecast of retail merchants prove true, there will be a lot of presents around the family Christmas tree this year.

Retroactive Divorce Ruled Binding In Tax Treatment

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Tax Court has ruled that tax treatment follows state laws where divorces are considered retroactive.

The decision came in a Louisiana case in which a couple filed for divorce on March 26, 1970 but the divorce did not become final until Dec. 9, 1971. Under Louisiana law the divorce is considered to be retroactive to the date of the original petition.

The Internal Revenue Service had sought to collect taxes from the wife in the case for 1970, considering her responsible for half of the combined income of the couple.

The court ruled, however, that she was not responsible for half of the income after March 26, 1970 as she was legally divorced at that time.

"To hold otherwise would be to tax petitioner on income she was not only unaware of, but was not entitled to under state law," concluded Judge Richard C. Wilbur.

The court noted, however, that even though the couple separated before filing the petition, the wife was still required to report half of the couple's combined income for tax purposes between the separation date and the date the divorce petition was filed, "however unfair that may be."

Common Market School Stresses European View

BRUSSELS (AP) — Twenty years ago the Common Market school was set up with this goal: train young people to think of themselves as "Europeans" first rather than citizens of their individual countries.

It claims some mixed success. The school, with 2,541 pupils and an annual budget topping $13 million, was established to promote European unity through heavy amounts of language training, mixing of nationalities in its classrooms and the teaching of such touchy subjects as World War II from a single, "European" point of view.

Students admit they've learned a lot about each other at the school and get along well. But they haven't forgotten yet that they're French, German or British.

"I suppose I am more European-minded as a result of going here. I've learned to tolerate a lot more things," 17-year-old Anke Middlemann of Osterholz-Scharmbeck, West Germany, said on a recent morning at the combined primary and secondary school near downtown Brussels.

"But I think that to become a 'European' you would have to accept everyone else's mentality. No one is going to do that."

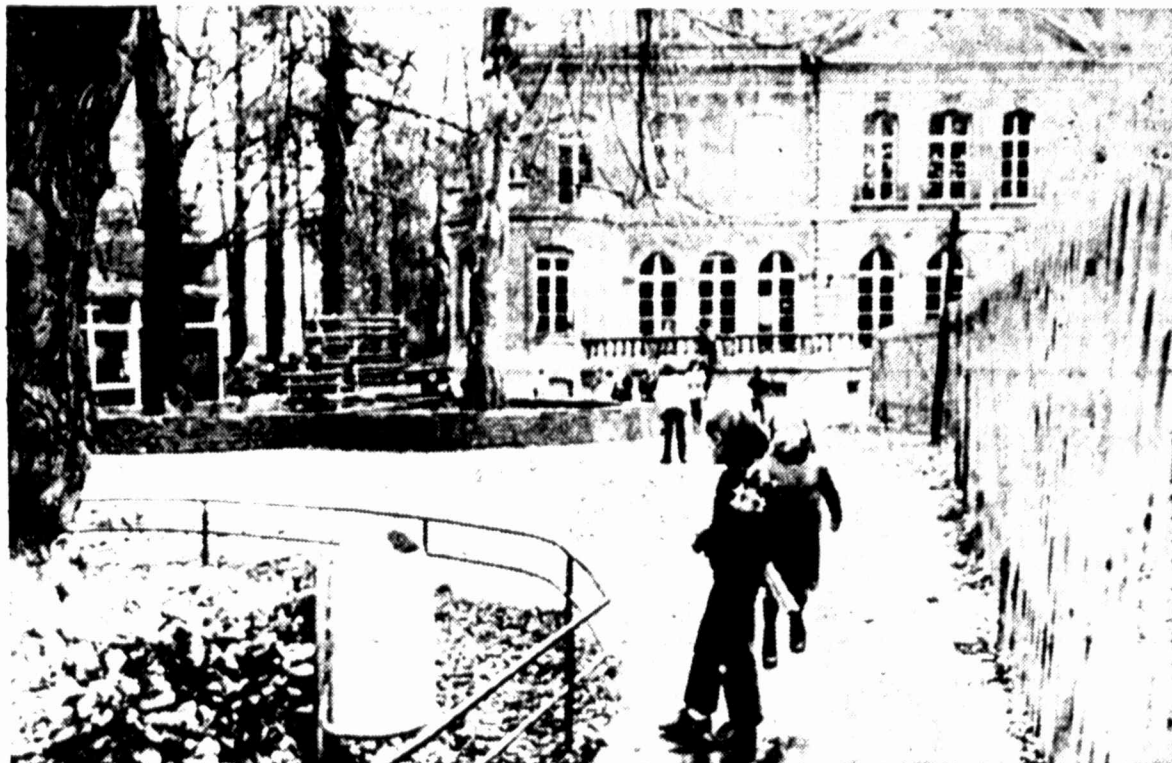

Sergio de Cesare, a 17-year-old from Rome, added that "personally, I don't feel myself primarily a European. I always look at things from an Italian viewpoint."

The school applies identical standards of study and discipline to all pupils, who range from Danish students used to casually calling teachers in Denmark by their first names to British and French pupils taught at home to leap to their feet whenever a teacher enters the room.

"In comparison to my last school in Britain, it's very free here," said Marc Thain, 18, of Kent, England.

The large Brussels school, and a smaller branch across town, are part of a nine-school, 10,550-pupil chain supported by the Common Market in Belgium, Holland, Luxembourg, West Germany, Italy and Britain.

The main Brussels complex, built around a 1958 building of large windows and colored outside panels, is the largest in the system. Director Pierre Goedert, a 56-year-old former teacher from Luxembourg, said in an interview that in subjects like history, the European Schools have to be particularly even-handed.

"We try to stress that, as well as wars, there have been periods of peace and development," he said. "We try not to teach history from national perspectives." But pupils say that when it comes to sensitive parts of history, national feelings can still come out in the classroom.

One student — a non-Frenchman — snipped that in classroom discussions "the French tend to be rather patriotic when it comes to defending French history."

Yet pupils say real hostility among students is rare.

Three-quarters of the school's pupils are the children of "Eurocrats" — Common Market employees. Other children compete for each remaining place in the school, which is known for high academic standards.

Red Nations Bicker On Minorities Issue

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) — Sixty years after Romania gained control of Transylvania from Hungary, the two Communist neighbors are still bickering over treatment of the 17 million ethnic Hungarians who live in Count Dracula's homeland.

The feud has moved in recent months into one of its periodic lulls after months of verbal warfare earlier this year. However, diplomats and others believe it is only a matter of time before another round of mudslinging.

"It is a dispute that comes and goes," one Romanian said. "At the moment it is calm."

The ethnic Hungarians, known in Romania as Magyars, live in a 21,000-square-mile tract of some of the most picturesque mountain and farm land in the Balkans.

The land, known to Westerners as the realm of the storybook vampire Count Dracula, remained under Hungarian control for nine centuries but was given to Romania on Dec. 1, 1919, as part of the dismemberment of the Austro-Hungarian Empire following World War I.

Nazi dictator Adolf Hitler returned much of the land to Hungary during World War II in payment for the loyalty of the country's dictator Admiral Nicholas Horthy. After the war the Allies gave Transylvania back to Romania.

The Romanians supported their claim to the land by arguing that Romanized Dacians, from whom they claim descent, fled into the area after the Romans withdrew from what is now Romania in the Third Century A.D.

Hungarian scholars maintain that the Dacians withdrew, along with their Roman protectors, south of the Danube River, and that the Magyars found largely empty country when they drifted in from Asia in the Ninth Century.

"They did not find an empty country," wrote Dr. Rada Vuipie of the Romanian Academy of Social and Political Sciences. "They found a Dacia strongly populated by its old Dacio-Roman inhabitants, who had never left it."

Although Budapest in effect relinquished any claim to the land by signing the 1975 Helsinki Agreements, which recognized postwar borders, the Hungarian government and people remain deeply interested in the fate of the minority.

Hungarian poet Gyula Illyes claimed in a series of articles in the leading Budapest newspaper Magyar Nemzet last January that "treatment of national minorities in Romania is synonymous with the South African apartheid."

The Romanian government claims its treatment of the "cohabitating nationalities" — as the ethnic Hungarians, Germans, Gypsies and Turks are known — is fair. The government blames the feud on anti-Communist Hungarian emigres who live in the West.

It points to the 32 Hungarian language newspapers in Romania, the 260,000 students who attend classes in Hungarian, and the 2,900 Hungarian cultural groups as evidence that the minority is well treated.

Hungarians complain that there are no Hungarian universities in Romania and that the government is subtly discouraging the use of the language.

Earlier this year, Karoly Kiraly, a leading Hungarian member of the Romanian Communist Party, charged in a series of letters that Romania's minority problem was, in reality, a series of empty slogans.

He especially criticized the practice of using the Romanian language in public signs in Hungarian-speaking districts. He was exiled to the town of Caransebes, far from the Hungarian area.

Students Ruled Out For Work-Related Tax Deductions

WASHINGTON (AP) — Students are not employees and thus can't take such work-related tax deductions as moving expenses, the U.S. Tax Court has ruled.

The decision came in the case of Benjamin Taylor Jr. of Bethesda, Md., who was a student at the University of Pennsylvania.

Taylor had interrupted his education for military service and sought a tax deduction for moving expenses for returning to Philadelphia to complete work on his doctorate.

He contended that he qualified for the deduction as an employee because he had considerable time and effort invested in pursuit of his degree and university rules obliged him to return on completion of his military service.

Florida Convicts Praise Motivational Program

STARKE, Fla. (AP) — It brought to mind a somewhat rowdy school assembly: certificates of achievement handed out; brief, embarrassed speeches by those especially honored; a lot of good-natured ribbing about each other's accomplishments.

After the ceremonies, guests, students and instructors mingled and chatted animatedly, drinking coffee and eating chocolate cake off paper cups and plates while a three-piece combo played old-time favorites.

The scene took place recently behind the tall, electrically charged barbed-wire fences of Florida State Prison — the state's maximum security facility, housing its most dangerous criminals.

It was the institution's awards ceremony for 238 graduates of an inmate-run Growth Orientation Laboratory program. Convicts claim GO-Lab has turned the prison into a more harmonious "community," reduced violence and resulted in greater understanding among the prison population of about 1,500.

There was not an armed guard in sight for the evening ceremonies. Except for specially invited guests, including some prison staff, all of those participating were prisoners. They put the show together, and they were the performers.

GO-Lab's graduates — and some of its instructors — include jewel thief Jack "Murf the Surf" Murphy, Robert "Killer" Blake, life-terminer Henry Grey and assorted murderers, rapists and robbers.

"I hated all this crap when I came here," says Grey, given a life sentence as an habitual criminal when was 18. "I didn't care about myself or anybody 'cause I figured I'd never get out," he says 11 years later. "But I found myself through this program."

"I understand myself and my fellow inmates better," he says. "I've learned from the past. I hope to get out and make it on the streets eventually. But what's important is now. We all have to live here and get along now. GO-Lab has made it possible."

Grey, now 29, is one of the instructors for the motivational program patterned after a successful workshop for executives from private industry and government service.

Since about half the inmates have gone through both the basic two-week and one-week advanced workshops, the benefits extend throughout the prison, says Program Coordinator Bill Woodward, the only prison employee working with the convicts.

Woodward describes GO-Lab as "a basic program in rehabilitation which lets the inmate see himself honestly ... and helps him break the chains that are keeping him from becoming a better person."

The "caring and sharing" sessions are run like encounter groups, allowing participants to talk about themselves in front of 20 or 30 other inmates, expressing themselves freely and overcoming barriers and hang-ups, Woodward says.

The prison's superintendent, David H. Brierton, isn't so sure that the GO-Lab workshops are the rehabilitational panacea some say they are, but he's optimistic about the program's possible long-term results and says it has "a lot of merit."

The program was adapted for prison use by a retired Navy captain, Martin J. Stack, from an expensive motivational course used primarily for corporate executives.

Murphy, the beachboy jewel thief serving two life sentences for killing two California women in 1968, has cited statistics claiming that prison violence has been cut by more than 50 percent since the program was instituted at Florida State Prison. But Brierton says GO-Lab alone has not diminished violence.

"I'm very reluctant to go along with such claims and very skeptical of any statistics like that," he says. "No one program is responsible for turning things around and doing what society has been unable to accomplish in many years."

He says, however, any human relations program trying to reach the hard-core inmate is good.

News Story Leads Girl To New Life

THIBODAUX, La. (UPI) — Tammy Rolando's mother credits a newspaper article about a St. Louis, Mo., doctor and his unorthodox method of treating the ailment "pica" for giving her 6-year-old daughter a new life.

"That article, that saved us," said Paulette Rolando, who read in the Thibodaux Daily Comet a United Press International interview with Dr. Gene Grabau describing his use of liquid cobalt to cure patients with a craving to over-eat or to consume paper, dirt and other non-food matter.

Pica is a condition that pediatricians see from time to time in children, but usually it disappears as the patients age, said Tammy's physician, Dr. Michael Smith.

Several weeks of cobalt doses stopped Tammy from rummaging through trash for scraps of food and hurrying through her school lunch so she could get another serving, her mother said.

Mrs. Rolando, whose five other children were not afflicted with pica, said the sudden cure enabled her family to do routine things such as visit friends that had been given up because of Tammy's condition.

"The child was so confined to this house, and so was I and so was my husband," she said. "After she took that medicine she changed. I sleep at night. She doesn't roam around looking for food at night."

"I was very frustrated for years. I didn't sleep well at night (because) I had to make sure she wasn't up digging. I'd check on her five times every night."

"We couldn't eat in restaurants because she'd take things off every plate that passed her."

The cure also ended a prolonged dispute between the parents and state child care officials who investigated the situation when Tammy's strange eating habits were reported for investigation as a possible child neglect case. The matter resulted in a custody battle and court proceedings, with a state judge ultimately dismissing the action at the request of the investigators.

Tabbed Mayor Hits Citation By Proxmire

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Mayor Ted Wilson awarded Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., the "Golden Hypocrisy Award" Tuesday in retaliation for the senator's pinning a "Golden Fleece Award" on Salt Lake City and a federal agency.

Proxmire said the Bureau of Outdoor Recreation deserved his award, given for alleged waste of tax dollars, because it paid for a wave-making machine for the Salt Lake City Municipal Swimming Pool.

Wilson said when it comes to fleece, what's good for the goose is good for the gander.

He said Proxmire gets his "Golden Hypocrisy" award for relaxing daily in the luxurious Senate Gymnasium.

Wilson estimated it costs at least $200,000 a year to maintain the gym for only 100 senators. He claimed only about 15 senators a day use the facility, so Wilson calculated that Proxmire's daily showers cost the taxpayer $12.35 each. He said that amounts to more than $2,400 a year.

If Proxmire's showers are worth that much, said Wilson, the 180,000 people who will use Salt Lake City's wave-making swimming pool should get $447 million instead of the $145,000 allocated by the federal government.

Wilson said his award is admittedly ridiculous, but he said Proxmire's is, too.

'House Of Israel' Sect Flourishes In Guyana

By GEORGE ESPER
ALBERTTOWN, Guyana (AP) — "Am I your master?" he asks.
His Guyanese followers nod and chant in unison, "Amen."
He is a man of many names, a fugitive, and the leader of the House of Israel, a cult more dedicated to black power than to Judaism and one of many religious sects flourishing in Guyana. "We are Jews by nature, not by religion," said one of his followers.
Born David Hill in Nashville, Ark., he uses the name Omari Oba, but is Rabbi Edward Emmanuel Washington to the public. He says he does not know his age.
He looks about 50, has receding gray hair and a mouthful of crooked teeth. Followers call his wife "the queen," and "my lady."
He started the House of Israel with four people three and one-half years ago after leaving Cleveland, Ohio, where he faced 43 years in prison on charges of blackmail, using the mails to defraud and income tax evasion.

"They said I owed income taxes," he said. "I never had a job that earned a check. My life is the church. In Cleveland, I had a store-front church at 105th Street for $90 a month. I was evicted because I couldn't pay the rent."
The House of Israel supports itself, he said.
All of the 8,000 followers Washington claims to have in Guyana are required to give 10 percent of their earnings, plus other gifts and donations, to the church, he said.
A notice in the temple advertised a day for his wife, "Queen Oba Day in a Big Way," and added: "Bring your gift $."
Members farm 150 acres leased to the House of Israel by the Guyanese government and make and sell pastries, clothes and shoes.
The main House of Israel temple is in a white, run-down four-story wooden building in this Georgetown suburb.

About 70 members live in the 15 rooms and the dormitory above the temple. He, his wife and three children live in the plush Bel Aire suburb among diplomats and government officials.
The mass suicide-murder of more than 900 Americans at the Jonestown settlement of the Peoples Temple, another religious cult, has thrust the House of Israel and its relationship with the government of Prime Minister Forbes Burnham into the limelight. Some critics say Washington is a menace, perhaps a dangerous one, but that he enjoys favors from the government in exchange for political support.
"My relationship to the prime minister and the Guyanese government is that I am a black man the the prime minister is black," says Washington. "I've only seen him about once since I've been in the country."
"I'm not political, ... and that's very difficult in Guyana because if you have a base or if you have what people consider a powerful organization, political parties tend to force you to be one way or another."

His followers wear black, red and green-colored dashikis, African-style robes.
"The black represents the people," says Washington. "The red symbolizes the blood the blacks have spilled ever since the Europeans captured us and made us niggers, coons and other animals. The green symbolizes the earth the divine being has promised to give to the chosen people."
"The purpose of my mission in Guyana is to resurrect the dead people, the African race, that has been slaughtered by white theology."
"The European man has taken the Bible and made everybody white and is preaching a white theology that made slaves of my people throughout the world. My job is to pull them out of these graveyards called white theology and resurrect them."

Washington says a number of his followers are Americans who have taken Guyanese citizenship.
"We do not believe in violence," he says. "We believe violence is the downfall of any people. We teach life, not death. We triumph over death. This is why we follow a very strict diet that God gave to Israel. We do not smoke. We do not drink. We don't use dope or drugs."
At the House of Israel services, the followers sing what Washington calls "revolutionary songs" and hold prayer services.
Tuesday's sermon was titled, "Africa Awake."
He told the congregation blacks in North and South America are oppressed by white theologians, colonialists, capitalists and imperialists.
"I have come that you might be freed from all these things if you will turn away from white theology and become followers of me," he told the congregation. "I will show that the world can be ours."

Professor Calls Cults Middle-Class Weakness

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lower-class teen-agers are less likely than their more affluent peers to get mixed up with religious or racial cults because these youths

"can recognize a street hustle," a California psychiatrist says.

"Very few of the cults are able to recruit lower-class young adults, either black or white," concluded Margaret T. Singer, a psychiatric professor at the University of California in San Francisco.

In an article in a recent edition of "Journal," published by the National Association of Private Psychiatric Hospitals, Dr. Singer asserted: "Lower class youths in the United States, primarily, know there are no free dinners and no free meals. They can recognize a street hustle."

The report was written before the ritualistic mass suicide earlier this month involving more than 900 members of the Peoples Temple church commune at Jonestown, Guyana.

Dr. Singer said there are some 250 different cults and that the larger and more prominent ones use extremely sophisticated recruitment methods which are taught to their followers.

These methods include getting close enough to gaze into a person's eye to determine if the person is a warm, loving person who would be easy to recruit or one who would be hard to get.

"They begin their love-bombing of the new recruit from that point onward," she wrote. "Middle- and upper-class young adults have not had enough experience with street hustlers in growing up to know how artful deceivers on the street can operate."

The psychiatrist said she based her research on interviews with 250 young people with cult experience.

In times of changing social values, these groups offer a lure of simplistic answers that some people find irresistible, said Dr. Singer, who runs group therapy sessions for cult drop-outs.

"For the young adult who is in a mild to moderately depressed period due to what we might term being between things — such as between high school and college, between jobs, between romances — the cults offer seemingly instant solutions to these issues," she wrote.

"Cults supply their members with ready-made decisions about careers, dating, sex and marriage, and the 'meaning of life.' In return, they demand total obedience, which they maintain through various programs of coercive persuasion."

After one flees from a cult, Ms. Singer said, it takes from eight to eighteen months to re-create a sense of personal competence and to feel comfortable in making decisions and getting one's life going again at the level at which the person functioned when first entering the cult.

"They (former cult members) float off before your eyes into diffuse and altered states of consciousness and have difficulty in expressing practical needs concretely," she wrote. "The cult life generally includes incessant repetition of long lectures. These lectures are similar to hypnotic trance inductions...."

Dr. Singer said ex-cult members not only have trouble readjusting to their pre-cult life, but they often harbor resentment toward the cult for having used and controlled them.

'Dog Day Afternoon' Bandit Freed

NEW YORK (AP) — John Wojtowicz, who staged a bizarre bank robbery that was dramatized in the book and movie "Dog Day Afternoon," went free on parole Tuesday, six years and three months after the heist.

He pulled the robbery Aug. 22, 1972, to finance a sex-change operation for his male lover.

He was convicted in 1973 on a federal bank robbery charge and sentenced to 20 years in prison, but later got the sentence reduced to 15 years, which made him eligible for parole now.

On Tuesday, in a Manhattan halfway house where he had spent much of the past three months, he signed the papers giving him conditional freedom. The final hurdle was passed a week ago when he got a job with a social aid agency as a $150-a-week bookkeeper trainee.

Wojtowicz, now 33, had tried to rob a Chase Manhattan branch bank in Brooklyn, but it went sour when police arrived — and turned into a 14-hour drama that ended with Wojtowicz captured, a confederate slain and seven hostages freed at Kennedy Airport.

During the siege, Wojtowicz had his lover, Ernie Aron, brought to the bank, but Aron refused to accompany him in an escape attempt.

Later, after he was imprisoned, Wojtowicz managed to finance an operation for Aron — with a $7,500 advance from the movie company. The rest of the money went to his lawyer and to his wife, Carmen, mother of his son and daughter.

Wojtowicz said he would celebrate his parole by seeing his wife and children, now 10 and 8, and by visiting Aron — now living as Lix Eden — and his jailhouse sweetheart, whom he identified only as George.

Venezuelans Defying Ban On Color Television

CARACAS (AP) — The government of this oil-rich nation is losing its battle to stop Venezuelans from "wasting" their money on color TV sets.

It's a monumental struggle pitting a government stubbornly opposed to a popular consumer spending against a population with money to burn. And the people are clearly winning.

"I know one man who has six color television sets in his home. That is enough to justify a revolution," said a woman reporter in a tone more of envy than disgust.

Importation of color models is banned by the government of President Carlos Andres Perez. To discourage smuggling, the government has modified TV transmissions to filter the color out at the last stage.

What good is a color TV if it can't receive color, right?

Wrong. The government did not take into account that it was dealing with a determined people. "Anti-filter" filters to restore the color are selling briskly in Caracas at $150 each, and the government recently estimated there may be as many as 500,000 color sets in the country.

Many are brought in clandestinely by Venezuelan tourists returning from the United States. If detected, the sets are confiscated. Other sets are slipped into the country by merchants who sell them on the black market. The retailers face heavy fines if caught.

Despite admitting the existence of half a million illegal models, the government has not given up the fight. It has assigned the Consumer Protection Agency to look into the sale of the so-called "anti-filters" to determine if they also should be prohibited. Ads for the devices appear frequently in the newspapers.

The Perez government is convinced that if given the opportunity Venezuelans would trade in their black-and-white sets and buy color televisions, regardless of price. Officials fear that importation of color sets would drain off a large chunk of foreign reserves.

Local manufacturers of black-and-white sets have also expressed fear of a mad rush by Venezuelans to buy color models if the ban is dropped. They say they would need at least a year to prepare for color production and that in the meantime their black-and-white sales would plummet as Venezuelans stampeded to buy color sets.

Until Perez leaves office in March of next year, there is little likelihood of the ban being lifted.

During a recent press conference, when he was once again quizzed on whether he would permit sale of color TV models, Perez said "Venezuelans, who today have great purchasing power, are already inclined to buy any junk that is advertised on television. Propaganda in color would only encourage their corrupting consumer habits and contribute to waste and inflation."

But it is just a matter of time before color television arrives in force in Venezuela, he noted, referring to promises by the presidential candidates of the two major parties to permit sale of color models if elected.

The election is set for Dec. 3, and the candidate of Perez's own party has said that if elected he would request Perez's permission to use color television for his inauguration in March.

CBS Shows Win Top Three Spots In Week's Nielsen Ratings Race

NEW YORK (AP) — It was a coup of sorts for CBS — the week's three top-rated prime-time TV shows, with "60 Minutes" at the top of the heap. But the remarkable event had little effect on the networks' competition for No. 1 status.

CBS, in fact, earned no more than a tie for second place with NBC, behind ABC, which listed five of the 10 most-watched programs for the week ending Nov. 26.

The No. 1 ranking for "60 Minutes" was the highest in the program's 10-year history, an event — involving a news show — that deserves more than routine attention. The program first broke into the A.C. Nielsen Co.'s Top 10 Dec. 12, 1976, and reached its previous high, third place, on Nov. 5 of this year.

The rating for the show of 29.6 was the highest ever. Nielsen says that means of all the homes in the country with TV, 29.6 percent saw at least part of the program.

The current ratings certainly will draw the attention of executives at the competing networks. ABC began a newsmagazine of its own, "20/20," last spring, and NBC premieres its "Weekend" newsmagazine in prime-time this coming Saturday.

CBS' Sunday night lineup — beginning with "60 Minutes" and followed by "All in the Family" and "Alice" — finished just that way in the ratings, nudging out some ABC heavyweights like "Three's Company," which finished fourth, and "Laverne and Shirley," No. 5.

NBC did well, as usual, with "Little House on the Prairie" in eighth place, and with a couple of specials, "Steve Martin: A Wild and Crazy Guy," No. 14, and a movie, "Fire in the Sky," No. 15.

NBC scored, too, with its three-part miniseries, "Greatest Heroes of the Bible," ranked 17th, 20th and 25th for the week.

Mysteries" from ABC in 57th place, followed by "Flying High" from CBS, "Who's Watching the Kids" and "David Cassidy: Man Undercover" from NBC, and CBS' "Paper Chase."

ABC finished the week with a score of 19.9, followed by CBS and NBC at 18.4. The networks say that means in an average prime-time minute during the week, 19.9 percent of the homes in the country with television saw at least part of the show.

The cornerstone of the Jefferson Memorial in Washington, D.C., was laid in 1939.
