Health Officer Rips Inspection Policies

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Health Department Director Dr. Marjorie Orr alleges in a letter to the Lubbock Health Board that former city officials have instructed Health Department officials not to inspect certain food service establishments.

The letter, dated Nov. 7, precedes an ordinance on the inspection of food establishments which Dr. Orr will ask the Health Board to approve today.

"In the eight months I have been Health Director the lack of general sanitation has been dramatically brought to my attention and I have relayed much of it to you," the letter says.

Specifically, Dr. Orr mentions a restaurant patron discovering a live baby mouse in a bowl of Chinese noodles as well as complaints regarding rodent contamination at the airport restaurant, a dirty Civic Center kitchen and non-inspection of the Health Sciences Center Hospital.

"Other complaints brought to light food service establishments in which the food service ordinance has not been enforced for years due to a 'hands off' directive from some former city government officials. These kitchens, when inspected, were found to be comparable to the one in which the mouse was delivered," Dr. Orr says.

"There have been complaints regarding convenience stores and grocery stores with unbelievable findings — one of these operations have been under the food ordinance, not routine inspection."

"The excessive infant deaths for which Lubbock has received national notoriety is, in my opinion, partially due to a lack of general sanitation as much as a lack of maternal and child health services," the letter states.

"The food sanitation problem as shown above is serious and well defined. However, solutions to these problems are well known to public health practitioners."

"They include a system of frequent, regular inspections, education and prompt enforcement such as we have in milk sanitation."

Dr. Orr says the new ordinance, which would require City Council approval, "encompasses many establishments that have not been covered in the past and provide for quarterly inspections. Inspection fees are increased to somewhat offset the cost of additional inspections."

A staff of 15 sanitarians and their supervisors are needed to police food sanitation in a city the size of Lubbock, Dr. Orr says.

"It is time that the Board of Health, city government, Home Owners Association and citizens decide the level of protection from food-borne diseases they want and are willing to pay for," Dr. Orr says.

Israeli Leaders Study Proposal

By United Press International

Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin today summoned Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan and Defense Minister Ezer Weizman to Canada to give him an emergency briefing on the crisis threatening the historic peace talks between Israel and Egypt.

Begin, who is visiting Canada, told reporters his two cabinet ministers would detail the new proposals from the Egyptian government that were presented to U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus Vance Thursday in Washington by Egypt's Acting Foreign Minister Butros Ghali.

"There are problems. Now we have to know what the problems are," the 66-year-old prime minister said. "We will consult, and next week we may all be in Jerusalem for a special government session."

Despite the latest snag in the peace talks, Begin was confident a treaty would be signed.

"I believe there is no obstacle whatsoever to completing the negotiations," he said on the fourth day of a six-day Canadian visit.

The latest difficulties in the four-week-old negotiations reportedly center around language linking a peace treaty between Israel and Egypt with the fate of Palestinian Arabs in Israeli-occupied territory.

Dayan and Weizman met with U.S. Ambassador Alfred Atherton in Washington today before flying to Toronto. American mediators are trying to persuade Israel to accept compromise language that would bind both Israel and Egypt to continue negotiations on a broad Middle East agreement.

President Carter Thursday criticized both Israel and Egypt for stalling over technicalities and urged them to accept the compromise wording already agreed to by their negotiators. Reports from Cairo had quoted Egyptian President Anwar Sadat as saying he would not be surprised if the talks broke off.

"Some speak of a judicial linkage — I say there is none," Begin told reporters. "There is a linkage of continuation. This will be a first peace treaty, not a separate treaty with Egypt, but a first one. Then, there will be an invitation to (other Arab nations) to join us in the peace process."

City, County Aid Sought For EMS

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

It takes too long to get emergency medical help to the city's far south and southwest neighborhoods, a Lubbock County Hospital District study confirmed today.

Because of the present location of Emergency Medical Services (EMS) stations, district-run ambulances generally are two to three minutes slower in getting to the far south or west side than in responding to inner-city calls.

Hospital district officials say they can alleviate some of the problem by relocating two of the three stations. But they feel the ultimate solution is to establish another station — something the district cannot afford.

So while short-term measures are being taken, the district intends to ask other local governmental entities — notably the City of Lubbock and Lubbock County — to help fund EMS.

"I think we ought to go all out and get the city and county to take it over," said Jack Strong, chairman of the administrative committee of the hospital district's board of managers.

Board member Jack Flygare agrees. "We're going to have to demonstrate to them that it is their responsibility." He fears, though, that city and county officials may not be receptive.

The hospital district provides the only emergency ambulance service in Lubbock County. The district staffs three EMS stations in Lubbock and has volunteers manning outlying units at Abernethy.

Pioneer Gas Official Challenges Figures

By BOB CAMPBELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A sedate city hearing on Pioneer Natural Gas Co. rates flashed with anger today when a Pioneer official objected to the analysis of city rate expert Ervin Looney and asked that the hearing be dismissed.

Looney had just said Pioneer already has $808,664 in excess annual revenue when Pioneer Senior Vice President M.D. La Grone rose abruptly and said Looney arbitrarily had left out $800,000 that the company pays to Lubbock in city franchise taxes.

When La Grone referred to Looney's "Mickey Mouse allocations," City Attorney John Ross cut him off with an objection to Mayor Pro-tem Alan Henry that such an epithet was inappropriate.

La Grone withdrew the statement, and the first 1 1/2-hour segment of the hearing was adjourned at 10 a.m.

Highly technical testimony from Texas Tech University economics professor Robert Rouse began when the hearing resumed at 10:30 a.m.

Henry denied the first motion to dismiss and another by a Pioneer attorney when the hearing resumed. He said the

SBA Employees Target In Probe

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Investigators probing a multi-million dollar Small Business Administration minority loan program scandal are trying to determine if SBA employees conspired to defraud the agency.

"So far, what we see is a failure of our own people to follow our regulations," SBA administrator A. Vernon Weaver told a news conference today, following disclosures $26 million to $27 million in taxpayers' money may never be recovered.

"If I thought it was just carelessness, I wouldn't be sending 10 people to New York to investigate," Weaver said.

Weaver met with President Carter Wednesday and advised him that dozens of minority businesses failed to repay the low-interest SBA loans they received to help them win government contracts.

He said Carter told him to "get to the bottom of it" and Attorney General Griffin Bell promised help from the Justice Department.

Weaver told reporters the scandal in the 10-year-old advanced loan program appears to involve the failure of SBA employees to properly monitor minority groups to ensure the loans were used for the stated purpose and properly repaid.

In one case, he said, a group used some of the proceeds of the advance to purchase a race horse, which certainly violates a principle of the law. The horse died.

In other cases, Weaver said, second advances were approved by SBA employees before the first advance had been repaid.

He said as much as $3.5 million may have been lost among 35 disadvantaged groups in New York, which will become the initial target of the probe.

Weaver said that since the first indications of wrongdoing in the program were discovered, SBA investigators began reviewing "company by company" every advanced loan granted by the SBA, totaling $137 million over 10 years.

He said he went to Carter to request more investigators, and was promised he would get whatever manpower he needed.

The president asked the attorney general to ensure that the matters receive the proper attention and that the Department of Justice be available to assist in whatever way it could," a department spokesman said.

He said five cases have been referred to the SBA, one of them from New York.

"We are carefully looking at the overall situation and developing a plan of action to be on top of the overall matter as we did with the GSA investigation. Nothing ... will be finalized until sometime next week."

An SBA spokesman said between Sept. 20 and Oct. 20, the agency sent four representatives to New York City and selected at random 35 companies and studied 54 advance payments made to them.

He said $54.6 million in advance payments have not been repaid. Of that amount, he said, $28.6 million "are in contracts currently being performed. We assume they will be paid back."

He said Weaver told Carter "we have a rather serious problem" and additional investigators are needed.

First Big Winter Storm Pounds Rockies, Plains

A-J News Service

The first major snowstorm of the season bowled across the Rockies and pushed into the Great Plains today, heaping snow on the mountains and clogging roads and passes with deep drifts.

Howling winds whipped up a blizzard in portions of Wyoming and Montana, filling the air with dense clouds of blowing snow. Temperatures plunged well below zero in much of the area.

Winter storm warnings were extended into the southern Rockies. New Mexico was alerted for snow and gusty winds across the northern third of the state late tonight and Saturday.

Meanwhile, a developing low pressure system in the Panhandle was cooking up a warm, windy day for Lubbock and the South Plains.

Winds were expected to hit 20 to 30 mph this afternoon, stirring some blowing dust, while the temperature was due to climb near 80. Tonight's low should be in the middle 40s.

Cooler weather is expected on Saturday, with a high in the lower 60s.

Today's gusty southwesterly winds were expected to shift to the northwest and diminish to 10 to 15 mph tonight.

The extended forecast calls for occasional light rain and cooler weather the first of the week, becoming partly cloudy by Tuesday. Highs should be in the 50s and lows in the 30s and 40s. No freeze is predicted.

Elsewhere in the state today, winds in the Guadalupe Pass area of far West Texas hit 35 to 45 mph this morning and were expected to top 60 mph later today and tonight.

Motorists, especially those driving high profile vehicles, were warned to exercise caution.

Football fans attending the Texas Tech-Christian University game in Fort Worth Saturday can expect a kickoff time temperature near 60 degrees with northerly winds of 10 to 20 mph. Skies will be cloudy.

At least three traffic deaths were blamed on the storm in the Rockies and rescue crews were searching for a single-engine plane with four persons aboard that reportedly went down in the wilderness of northwest Wyoming.

The storm dumped more than a foot of snow in the higher mountains of Utah, Wyoming and Montana and piled nearly a foot in the canyons and foothills.

Lander, Wyo., reported 12 inches of snow. Logan, Utah, reported 6 inches and 8 to 10 inches piled up in the canyons west of Salt-Lake City.

The mercury dropped to 10 below zero at Cut Bank, Mont., and 7 below at Havre, Mont. Temperatures near the See BLIZZARD Page 18

Nuclear Plan Draws Blast

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (UPI) — Opponents of a proposal to build a nuclear waste disposal site in southeastern New Mexico said the government is proceeding with the project even though a government agency recommends a different approach.

Representatives of Citizens for Alternatives to Radioactive Dumping spoke Thursday at Albuquerque, Carlsbad and Las Cruces.

Spokesmen said a recent report by the Interagency Review Group recommends a systems approach to disposing of nuclear waste, but also recommends that the proposed project be constructed outside this system.

City officials were hopeful but not optimistic that it would be concluded today.

Looney testified he did not think the inclusion in the rate base of $1.65 million of construction work in progress by the company is necessary "to raise capital or to prevent the impairment of Pioneer's service."

He said the company had not justified the inclusion under Railroad Commission rules but had offered only "general assertions."

Pioneer will have the option of appealing the outcome of the hearing to the Railroad Commission.

GROWING OLDER

Elderly Warned About Rip-Offs

By HAROLD BLUMENFELD

We have survived another Halloween, that night when witches fly on broomsticks and doorbells are rung by trick-or-treaters. As we approach the Christmas season, more doorbells will be rung. But there may be more tricking and little treating in store for the person who answers the bell.

Fraud — as well as fall — is in the air this time of year. Of course, we should not permit strangers to come into the house. But even if a door-to-door salesperson seems trustworthy and has been recommended, listen carefully to what he or she says.

Then, if you're in the mood to buy, get a written statement or guarantee containing all the facts the salesperson provided orally. If you buy something that costs more than $25, you can cancel the order within three days. And your reimbursement must include the sales tax.

Many of us don't listen attentively to a sales pitch or read the fine print in a contract. We should make an extra effort to do so at this time of year.

Don't accept a c.o.d. delivery unless you are sure you ordered the merchandise.

Before Christmas, your mailbox may be crammed with books, calendars, trinkets and other items from those who hope you will respond with a check.

You don't have to pay for unsolicited merchandise that arrives in the mail. And you don't have to spend postage to return it. Keep it as a gift. If you are badgered to pay for an unordered item, write to Consumer Advocate, U.S. Postal Service, Washington D.C. 20260.

Be wary of the person who phones you, stops you on the street or catches you in the supermarket offering a wonderful product at a cut-rate price. That mink fur wrap might have been made from the hides of a quartet of cats who were singing recently on someone's backyard fence. And when you uncork the bottle, that imported perfume may be nothing more than lightly-scented tap water.

This is also the time of year when empty stores are occupied by fly-by-night operators displaying merchandise ranging from toys and clothing to large appliances. Will they still be around December 26 to replace defective merchandise, make minor repairs or offer refunds for unsatisfactory products?

Don't be taken in by the sweet-talking voices of telephone salespeople. After you discover the goods you ordered don't measure up to the description, you might think you have no responsibility to pay because you didn't sign a sales contract.

But the seller may have recorded your phone conversation to pressure you later into paying for the wares. In some states, it is illegal to record a phone conversation unless the party being taped is notified in advance.

Remember, you are better off doing your Christmas shopping with reputable local merchants. They will still be around after the holiday and will probably make exchanges cheerfully or give you a cash refund or credit to apply to another purchase.

When you have problems with shoddy merchandise, uncooperative merchants or questionable sales techniques, take your complaints to your local Better Business Bureau.

Soviet Newsman's Wife Loses Purse

CHICAGO (AP) — About $2,000 in jewelry and $21 in cash was stolen from the wife of the New York bureau chief of Tass, the Soviet news agency, when her purse was stolen in a downtown budget restaurant that features $2 dinners, police say.

Mrs. Matysk Matyash and her husband, Vladimir, were dining with another Soviet couple at Ronny's Steak House Tuesday when, police think, three youths between the ages of 12 and 17 took Mrs. Matyash's purse after distracting her by asking the time. She said a gold diamond-and-emerald ring and matching earrings were in the purse.

Productivity Boost Cited

WASHINGTON (AP) — State and local governments could provide better service for their tax dollars by adopting management and personnel practices like those used in private industry, a business research group has concluded.

The Committee for Economic Development said in a report Wednesday that the key to improving governmental efficiency within a limited budget is to increase worker productivity, a goal that requires new labor-management techniques.

The committee, an independent research group composed of 200 business executives, proposed that state and local governments:

—Replace rigid civil service systems that base advancement on seniority with systems that determine assignments, promotions and compensation on the basis of performance. Such merit systems are the rule in business.

—Give managers more authority to direct their subordinates, set specific objectives for the managers and hold them responsible for meeting those goals.

—Protect employees from political abuse and arbitrary bureaucratic actions, treat them with fairness and dignity and assure them that they will be judged on the basis of their job performance. —Improve the quality of work life by providing adequate compensation.

Singer Pleads Guilty

NEW YORK (AP) Jazz singer Nina Simone faces a possible fine and jail term after running into trouble with the Internal Revenue Service.

The 45-year-old singer pleaded guilty Thursday to failing to file a federal income tax return on $36,288 she earned in 1971.

After the hearing, she was freed on $10,000 bail with permission to fulfill engagements in Geneva, Switzerland, and Paris before sentencing. Miss Simone faces up to a year in jail and a $10,000 fine. Sentencing was set for Dec. 15.

Miss Simone, who lives in Geneva, also was charged with failing to declare gross income of $75,960 in 1972 and $91,612 in 1973. But the government agreed to drop these counts in return for her guilty plea to the 1971 charge.

Model Files Claim

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — A male model has asked for half of actor James Daly's estate on grounds, he says, that the two maintained a homosexual relationship for two years until Daly's death.

"It was an open and notorious relationship," said Ed Ross, lawyer for Randal Jones, who filed the claim. "They traveled together. This was no closet relationship. Except for their gender, they were married." Jones filed a creditor's claim Nov. 1 in Santa Monica Superior Court.

Daly, who played Dr. Paul Lochner on the television series "Medical Center" from 1969-1976, died July 3, leaving an estate estimated at between $1 million and $2 million. His will, filed in 1964, specified that his estate be divided evenly among his former wife and his four children.

Hearst Raps Judge

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Patricia Hearst's father says the federal judge who sent his daughter to prison and refused her petition for early release is "bent on making the world safe from kidnap victims."

Randolph Hearst, president of the San Francisco Examiner, focused his attack on U.S. District Judge William Orrick Jr., who, in a 36-page decision released Tuesday, said Miss Hearst's appeal for early release was "plainly without merit."

Miss Hearst is serving a seven-year sentence for joining her terrorist kidnappers in a 1974 bank robbery and will be eligible for parole next July.

Hearst said keeping his daughter in jail "effectively ruined her as a witness" against William and Emily Harris, the Symbionese Liberation Army members who admitted kidnapping Miss Hearst on Feb. 4, 1974.

"Patricia was kidnapped and abused by the SLA and she is still being mistreated," Hearst said.

Percy Called Actor

CHICAGO (AP) — A Democratic party official says Republican Sen. Charles Percy, narrowly re-elected this week, "is an excellent actor" and faked a fainting spell to win sympathy votes.

Percy collapsed momentarily last Friday after a debate with Democratic challenger Alex Seith. Percy won Tuesday's election 54 percent to 46 percent.

"I don't think there was anything physically wrong with him," George Dunne, chairman of the Cook County Central Democratic Committee, said Thursday while taping a radio program at WMAQ-AM.

Asked if he thought Percy's fainting was "less than medical," Dunne replied, "Yes, I do. He is an excellent actor."

Dunne noted that Percy "came out of it very quickly and went over to take a swim" at the Racquet Club.

Percy's press secretary, Pat Yack, denied the allegation, saying Percy "was pressured up against the wall by numerous reporters" and that "after a very tense exchange with Mr. Seith, it was very hot, he'd had a long day and he just swooned."

Slippery Inmate

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Authorities are having trouble getting Tommy Adams into court to stand trial on escape charges. He keeps escaping.

Adams, 27, was to appear Thursday in Fayette District Court on a second-degree escape charge, but he escaped. He was captured a short time later, charged with first-degree escape, and lodged once more in the Fayette County Detention Center, said Col. Eugene Harper of the Fayette County Sheriff's Department.

Adams was being held on the original escape charge for Mercer County authorities, Harper said.

Merger County Jailor Cleo Baker said Adams was being held in jail on a first-degree burglary charge when he escaped the first time.

"He's slick," Baker said.

Lost Murals To Be Part Of Exhibit

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Two large oil paintings found five years ago under 14 coats of paint at Newark Airport will appear at a nationwide exhibit starting next week, a tribute to the detective work of a local art historian.

The murals, on the general theme of aviation, are the only two remaining of 10 completed by the late Arshile Gorky in 1937 for the then-new airport administration building, said Ruth Bowman.

"In a way, I can't quite believe it," Mrs. Bowman said Thursday. "Every major art text since 1948 says the murals are lost."

It was her curiosity about the long-lost works of art that led to their restoration. "Murals Without Walls," an exhibit of Gorky's works, opens here Nov. 16.

Gorky, an Armenian-born artist who killed himself in 1948, was paid $37.38 a week by the Depression-era Works Progress Administration for his work, plus an additional allowance of 60 cents for every square foot of canvas, Mrs. Bowman said.

Five years after their completion, the Army Air Corps took over the building as part of the war effort and the paintings were given the first of 14 coats of white-wash. "They did it every year," Mrs. Bowman said. "I guess it was their way of keeping a place neat."

Later, eight of the painted-over panels apparently were torn from the walls when radiators were installed. The murals that survived were probably spared because they did not interfere with the heaters, Mrs. Bowman said.

Her detective work was rewarded in 1973 when an employee of the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey, which owns the building, now an air terminal, noticed a thread from a canvas sticking out of the wall, she recalled. "He scratched it with a key, and we could see the paint underneath."

Costly Generator Damage Delays Plant Completion

GRAND COULEE, Wash. (AP) — Some $500,000 in damage to three giant electrical generators has indefinitely delayed completion of the Grand Coulee Dam hydroelectric project, planned as the largest power plant of its type in the world.

The FBI has joined Okanogan County authorities in investigating the damage, which plant officials say could only have been done by someone who was familiar with the huge electric plant.

Robert Mueller, superintendent of the area housing the damaged generators, said the gouging of the coil bars in the generators could have been done with a small crowbar or chisel.

"He has access," said Mueller. "It has to be an inside job."

Okanogan County Sheriff Jerry Beck said police have no suspects.

An FBI spokesman said the crime involved would likely be destruction of government property because one of the 700,000-kilowatt turbine generators had been completed and turned over to the federal government. The generator had been shut down for maintenance when the damage was done, officials said.

The other two damaged generators were still under construction.

Construction workers and Bureau of Reclamation personnel were being interrogated and their records reviewed. The bureau operates the dam. About 250 people work in the third powerhouse.

Gene Tollefson of the Bonneville Power Administration, which sells power from the dam, said the temporary loss of one generator would not effect the availability of electricity.

The Grand Coulee project supplies 14 percent of the power to Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Montana and can send power as far east as Chicago and as far south as Mexico.

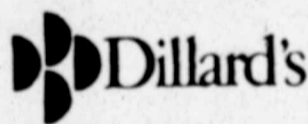

Damage was first discovered Oct. 30 at Unit 23, which was nearing completion. The damage involved 12 coil bars, and ranged from scratched paint to severely gouged insulation, said Bureau of Reclamation spokesman Ted Hoffman.

Workers Monday discovered damage to a coil bar in the generator of Unit 22, the only generator which had been in production. It was brought on line last May.

Six damaged coil bars were found Tuesday and Wednesday at Unit 24, said Mueller. The estimated cost to replace a coil bar is $30,000, Hoffman said.

TODAY'S EDITORIAL:
No News Is Bad News

A RUSSIAN-BACKED effort to destroy the free flow of international news by slanting it to suit governmental censors has drawn Canada's opposition.
The United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization has been playing footsie since 1972 with a resolution that would "encourage" journalists and news organizations to combat warmongering, racism and apartheid.
More accurately put, the resolution would effectively require news-gathering organizations such as the Associated Press to abuse their wire services by force-feeding American readers only what UNESCO's rulers wanted them to read.
In this case, the "news" would be colored decidedly Red.

WE ARE UNEASY about the politicalization of associated agencies of the United Nations. Canadian cultural affairs spokesman John Roberts said "We feel politicalization is harmful to their essential purposes."
He thus joins the United States position that the proposed resolution represents a threat to international press freedom.
Russia and the satellite countries which she controls or influences think that journalists should write what they are told to write, as is the case in the Soviet Union and other repressed countries.

They are allied with Third World racial activists who are frustrated over what they perceive to be "cultural imperialism" by the Western press.
By contrast, many in this country—including a number of newsmen themselves—believe that even without official sanctions much of the news that comes out of Africa and Asia is distorted.
A Utopian world in which opinion never creeps into a news story will never occur, but making the press a mouthpiece for an official viewpoint destroys any hope for a balanced and objective presentation of the news.
DESPITE ITS objections to the controversial draft declaration on the mass media, Canada made it clear that "no matter what UNESCO does, Canada stays on."
"Obviously, we would not like to see this passed, but if it is we have to deal with the real world," Roberts said.
The United States, however, should take a firmer position than that. UNESCO is funded to a large extent by this country.
It should not be a party to suppression of the news, especially while we have in the White House an administration which professes to be deeply concerned about the human rights of people everywhere.

Paul Scott:
Guerrillas Enjoying U.S. 'Aid'

WASHINGTON—Britain's decision to rush surface-to-air missiles and radar equipment to Zambia, struck recently by Rhodesian air raids against guerrilla forces based there, raises some pressing moral questions for both London and Washington.
The Viscount airliner which crashed near Lake Kariba late in September, provoking the present escalation of the Rhodesian guerrilla war, was brought down with a British Rapier missile fired by Zambian troops and not guerrillas using Soviet-made weapons.
While Joshua Nkomo, a leader of the guerrillas, on the urging of Zambian officials claimed that his forces brought down the aircraft, both Rhodesian and British intelligence have confirmed that it was shot down by Zambian troops using the British missile.
A TOTAL OF 38 civilian passengers and crew members were killed in the crash and the survivors, including the injured, were killed in cold blood afterward by members of the Zimbabwe African People's Union Army, the Marxist led guerrilla forces trying to overturn the present black-white government of Ian Smith.
Since the hit-and-run guerrilla forces are being trained by East German and Cuban forces on Zambian soil and near that government's military installations, the new surface-to-air missiles and radar equipment will be used to attack any Rhodesian aircraft striking inside Zambia, regardless of their targets.
In other words, the British missiles will be used by the Zambians to protect the guerrilla bases from which the hit-and-run "killer" raids are being carried out against black and white farmers in Rhodesia.
SINCE U.S. HERCULES transport planes supplied to the British Royal Air Force are being used to airlift the missiles, the U.S. is indirectly involved in helping to provide arms to protect the Marxist-led guerrillas.
Rhodesia hit 12 black nationalist guerrilla bases in Zambia in October and killed between 1,000 and 1,500 guerrillas.
The strike force did not hit any of the Zambian forces, despite the evidence that some of these troops fired the missile that brought down the civilian aircraft.
During the across the border raid, Rhodesian fliers were in contact with the Lusaka International Airport control tower to assure the Zambians that they had no intentions of bombing them as long as they did not attack their aircraft.
"WE HAVE COME only to deal with the terrorists. If you let any aircraft military or civilian so much as move an inch, we shall blast it off the face of the earth," the lead Rhodesian pilot warned.
Time and again the Rhodesian aircraft swooped overhead at the airport.
Obviously not a Zambian aircraft moved while the attack against nearby guerrilla bases went on.

ONE MAN'S OPINION

No-HALT Insurance

MY NEIGHBOR Twice Removed says we've just about reached that Promised Land in which the Gov't protects the consumer from everything but the Gov't.
The Community Pundit says politics is funny: "Bill Clements spent $2 million trying to create an image in the governor's race—and then spent another $4 million trying to change that image."
Temperatures dropped below freezing in parts of the South Plains Tuesday, election day. It proved predictions that it'd be a cold day in somewhere before some guys were elected.
"Roots" author Alex Haley is defending himself again against claims that he copied his ancestry from the writings of others. If they prove nothing else, the lawsuits show that the love of money is the "roots" of all litigation.
PUBLIC CONCERN over what U.S. News and World Report calls "ruinous legal costs and excessive power of the legal profession" should have lawyers looking at their hole cards.
An organization called HALT (Help Abolish Legal Tyranny) is promoting no-fault insurance, no-fault divorce and probate law reforms.
This is a typical over-reaction to a problem. As USN&WR itself points out, lawyers are necessary and many do good deeds. Their advice and services can save you a bundle.
But the lawyers' stubborn refusal to modernize courtroom practices so that there aren't so many delays, combined with the "activist" philosophy of the newer breed which heads straight for the courthouse instead of trying to settle disputes by less expensive means, are alienating growing segments of the public.

Too often, members of the legal profession act as though the courts are their private domain. They want and expect the public, for example, to pick up the tab for more and more courts without the lawyers cooperating to save the time of the courts we already have.
I, for one, have never been convinced that no-fault insurance is good. But I am convinced that lawyers abuse the jury system and I wish they'd admit it and quit it.
Now that the elections are behind us, we can forget about the $100-a-plate campaign dinners and settle down to our $2-apiece hamburgers.
No, Virginia, a 4-year-old saying darn isn't the answer to the question, "What is a precursor?"
Too many politicians who take stands on the issues begin-tearing down the stands as soon as they're sworn in.
Note to Mayor Dirk West. In your traffic safety campaign, I've noticed that a lot of drivers turn the wrong way on a one-way street. Have also noticed that the one-way signs are not placed uniformly, sometimes, they're on the driver's side of the intersection, sometimes on the other side of the intersection.
It'd sure help if the City would do its share of promoting traffic safety.
Note II to Mayor: Any thought been given yet

Holmes Alexander:
Voters Tired Of Horse Around

WASHINGTON—"Whatever happened to the United States of America?" asked the Returning Traveler who'd been away for awhile. "And what's that animal I keep seeing that looks like a white horse?"
More persons than you are having such dreams the traveler was told. Popular discontent is the one interpretation that is common to dozens of public and private polls.
The image of a white horse is the forbidden, un-American belief that it's going to take something supernatural to pull us through.
The Traveler gasped at these words.
"Are you telling me that this country has started to look beyond its traditional methods for relief? That is more than I find possible to believe. It may have happened just about everywhere else, but it can't happen here."
NO, IT COULDN'T happen to a nation under God if we kept the heritage that heaven blessed us with, the Traveler was told.
I don't mean the seemingly divine coincidence of turning up just the man for the crisis—Lincoln, of course, Roosevelt if you like, Eisenhower, when we needed to seek a clean and strong version of the down-rated condition called normalcy. Yes, and Truman, when the times called for bounce and guts.
"It just seems we don't breed that sort any longer," said the Traveler.
But it isn't for the lack of these, he was informed, that America is getting the white horse in the mind's eye. Although great men make history, and we owe them much, our country is not one that depends on the Indispensable Man.
When all is said and done, it has been the cogs and the pistons of the American system that has made us what we were.
AND IT IS the malfunctioning of these inner workings of the system that brings about our failure and self-betrayal.
For instance, it's been noted that no President since Eisenhower has completed the normal two-term. Before that we had, with Truman in between, the four-termer, Franklin Roosevelt, the equivalent of a monarch who reigned for life.
"You're saying that the Presidency is failing us—either too little strength or too much," the Traveler interjected. "Once was a time of least governed, best governed."
It's too early to be sure about President Carter, but the 94th and 95th Congresses have disgraced the name of self-government by turning into a den of thieves and pork-barrellers.
That's bad enough, but what can be said for a bureaucracy that steals from the public which employs it at generous wages? And the cogs and pistons have fallen into such disrepair that the productivity of the labor force is too snarled to turn out the goods and services which the country needs.

We manufacture American goods so shoddy that they don't sell on the world market. We get the back-wash of double-digit inflation which historically has wiped out nations as devastatingly as hostile armies have.

the small society by Brickman

Sylvia Porter:
Answers Are Plentiful, But Solutions Are Few

(Last in a series)
ASSUME THAT the power centers in business and labor decide to comply with President Carter's voluntary price-wage guidelines and that the guidelines are at least a modest restraint on today's intolerably high rate of inflation.
Assume, too, that President Carter uses his clout to force compliance—by awarding or withholding juicy government contracts, by permitting breakthroughs above the ceilings to trigger relaxation of import quotas, changes in government regulations, etc.
Assume, third, that Congress follows through and in 1979 debates and finally votes a form of Tax-based Income Policy.
And finally, assume that today's frightening combination of an aged upturn, a demoralizing rate of inflation and skyrocketing interest rates leads to a business recession which, in itself, is the most effective anti-inflation weapon any nation has.
What else? Obvious proposals have been and are:
* SLASH AND THEN eliminate the federal budget deficit, "an engine of inflation" all along.
* Continue to tighten credit to squeeze demand across-the-board, even though this easily could speed the business downturn.
* Put a lid on raises for business executives, federal employees, and hold down state pay and payrolls as well.
* Use the tax system much more effectively to spur business investment that would boost productivity in the U.S.
* Limit both Social Security tax hikes and Social Security benefit increases beginning next year.
* Revise the minimum wage law to postpone the jumps already scheduled (up to $3.35 an hour in 1981) and pass a "two tier" minimum wage under which the young unskilled are not entitled to as high a minimum wage as the adult untrained.
* Take giant steps to control the powers of regulatory agencies to impose restrictions that send business costs into an up-spiral and are not sufficiently vital to the nation's interest to warrant the inflationary impact.
AND ANY OTHER anti-inflation steps? Yes—yes, indeed!
From a multitude of sources—the Federal Reserve Board's chairman and many of its governors, the Brookings Institution, university economists, many other experts (and our own heads), my Washington associate, Brooke Shearer, and I have picked out a packet of proposals worth far more consideration than they are getting.
* Reform current agricultural programs, under which farmers are paid not to plant and minimum prices are set for certain crops to boost farmers' income by raising our grocery bills. This is a take-from-Peter-to-pay-Paul system which fuels inflation and brutally squeezes America's urban consumers.
* Far superior would be a support program that would provide direct income supplements to neody farmers. These payments would come out of the federal budget, and would save food shoppers up to $3.5 billion a year.

* SUBSTITUTE DIRECT subsidies for meat, steel and sugar tariffs, quotas and other restraints designed to protect U.S. producers from foreign competition.
Trade protection is not only an expensive but also an inefficient way to protect American jobs. We, America's consumers, pick up the tab through higher prices.
As just one illustration, the relief from imports given to sugar producers, already costs us, as consumers, an estimated $660 million a year.
A much less costly, less inflationary and more efficient way to help workers in this industry move into new jobs would be to provide them with temporary payments. These direct subsidies would slash prices by at least $2.3 billion.
* Write into law hospital cost containment, a policy the Carter White House advocated back in 1977, but was given back-of-the-hand treatment by Congress. Even a limited program to control hospital costs, could reduce prices by $1.5 billion a year.
* SPUR DEREGULATION of such industries as the airlines, trucking, coastal maritime trade.
If more firms were allowed to enter these fields and fares were more competitive, transportation costs could be slashed by at least $5 billion a year—and maybe by as much as $10 billion.
And services might not be hurt one bit.
This is merely a sampling of the ideas. They tumble out, one on top of the other. And they add up to one giant achievement: a return to tolerable inflation.

Biloxi To Give Nixon Rousing Welcome

By TOM MADDEN
 BILOXI, Miss. (UPI) — Sen. James O. Eastland says he hasn't forgotten that Richard Nixon was there to help when Hurricane Camille cut a deadly swath through the Gulf Coast and neither have the victims of that vicious 1969 storm.

The crusty Democrat, a friend and confidant of the former president, says Gulf Coast residents will give Nixon a rousing welcome Saturday night when he speaks at a Veterans Day rally.

"Yes sir, Richard Nixon was there when we needed him. The man went out of his way to help us. I haven't forgotten and I don't believe the people have either," said Eastland, who is retiring after more than 30 years in the Senate.

Nixon, in one of his rare public appearances since resigning under threat of impeachment in 1974 during the Watergate scandal, is scheduled to address more than 12,000 at Gulf Coast Coliseum in Biloxi during a Veteran's Day program.

Nixon was invited by a Gulfport American Legion post with the invitation being extended through Eastland.

Thousands turned out in 1969 when Nixon made a brief visit to the coast to get a first-hand look at the devastation caused by the hurricane. He promised federal aid and millions of dollars were pumped in to rebuild the stricken area.

"Mr. Nixon was a friend who went the extra mile to help the victims of Camille," said John Bell Williams, who was governor at the time. "I, along with others in the state, will always have a friendly feeling toward him because of that. His visit gave us a real boost when we needed it."

Nixon plans to speak Saturday night after a stopover Friday night in Louisiana.

Paul Trehern, of Joe Graham Post 119, said 12,500 free tickets have been distributed for the activities, with requests for tickets coming in from across the nation.

THE WHITE HOUSE

Russians' Phone 'Bugged'

By JAMES GERSTENZANG
 WASHINGTON (AP) — The Russians' telephone at the White House is still bugged.

Among the dozen or so telephones mounted on a wall in the White House press room for news organizations which regularly cover the president is one for Tass, the Soviet news agency.

More than a year ago, a waggish radio reporter picked a dead cockroach from a loudspeaker in the press room — it had been caught on the speaker's fabric front for weeks — and placed it in the telephone mouthpiece.

His gag was widely reported at the time, but it apparently went unnoticed by his Soviet colleagues. With White House press secretary Jody Powell looking on, a recent check by reporters determined that the "bug" was still in place.

President Likes Sausage

Beware of two Southern gentlemen bearing rooster pepper sausage.

That may sound like reasonable advice, given the name of the concoction. But two Southerners presented some to President Carter recently and the president proclaimed it the best sausage he ever tasted.

He may have been the butt of a bit of put-on.

It seems that his friends Griffin Bell, the attorney general, and Charles Kirbo, an Atlanta lawyer, called on Carter with something they called "rooster pepper sausage." Carter had it for breakfast one morning with homemade biscuits and grits.

Prior to sampling the Bell-Kirbo offering, Carter had said the sausage his father made on their south Georgia farm was the best he ever ate, according to Powell. But now, says Powell, the president has changed his tune and declared rooster pepper sausage No. 1.

But Powell expresses a bit of skepticism about the existence of rooster peppers, let alone rooster pepper sausage. He suggests two possibilities must be considered:

"One, the president is putting me on."

"Two, Judge Bell and Squire Kirbo are putting on not only the rest of the country, but the president, too."

Good Poker Player

Beware of a Southern lady playing poker.

William Fitzgerald, a Michigan state senator, didn't take that advice and now he's sorry. The Southern lady in this case was Lillian Carter, the president's mother.

The president, speaking at a Democratic rally in Flint, Mich., disclosed his mother's poker-playing skills while urging voters to support Fitzgerald's gubernatorial campaign, which turned out to be unsuccessful.

Fitzgerald and Miss Lillian were members of the U.S. delegation at the funeral in Rome of Pope John Paul I. On the flight home, someone started a friendly poker game and Miss Lillian joined in. So did Fitzgerald.

"He shouldn't have done it," Carter said. "As a result, his campaign finances have been reduced by my own mother."

SOUTH KOREAN RETURNEES
 WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army announced Wednesday its decision to station a 500-man battalion of the 2nd Infantry Division temporarily at Fort Riley, Kan., after it returns from South Korea next month. The Army said it has not yet made a final decision on where to station the entire 2nd Infantry Division as it is withdrawn from Korea, along with all other U.S. ground troops there, over the next four years or so.

"We've been receiving calls from all over the country from people trying to get tickets," Trehern said. "Most are congratulating us for the undertaking."

Nixon will pay his own expenses and receive no honorarium, organizers of the program said.

Mississippi was a political stronghold for Nixon. In the 1972 election, state voters gave him 79 percent of the popular vote over Sen. George McGovern.

Nixon earlier this year abandoned his self-imposed exile at his San Clemente, Calif., villa to speak in Kentucky and in September hosted a Republican fundraising affair at his home.

Parties Display Lack Of Strength

By WALTER R. MEARS
 WASHINGTON (AP) — At the White House, they're boasting of President Carter's achievements in support of Democrats in the mid-term elections. Such beneficiaries as Wendell Anderson and William D. Hathaway, soon to be former senators, presumably do not share this enthusiasm.

By the same token, Senators-elect Carl Levin of Michigan and Paul E. Tsongas of Massachusetts, and Governor-elect Robert Graham of Florida probably do. Carter campaigned for them all, with totally predictable results. The Democrats who got his personal campaign help won some and lost some.

Nationally, the numbers indicate that Carter's impact on the election returns was negligible.

"It's one of the best off-year elections that any president has ever had," said White House Press Secretary Jody Powell, assessing the outcome while the votes were being counted Tuesday night. "No president in recent history has been so in-involved in the re-election of Democratic candidates.

That involvement didn't do much for Anderson of Minnesota, Hathaway of Maine, or for senators Floyd K. Haskell of Colorado or Dick Clark of Iowa. They all lost.

So did Republican Sens. Edward W. Brooke of Massachusetts and Robert P. Griffin of Michigan.

In terms of overall party strength, the story of the 1978 elections is that there isn't any. Senate and statehouse incumbents suffered some surprise defeats. But the Democrats are only slightly less dominant than before.

The Republicans picked up two Senate seats, and could wind up enlarging their minority by three.

Their House gains were modest, a pick-up of 10 seats with the possibility that the final net change add another seat or two.

But a 60-40 Senate split isn't that much different from the 62-38 count in the last Congress.

And if the Democratic margin isn't two-to-one in the new House, it is still vast.

By gaining governors in at least six states, the Republicans strengthened their position going into the 1980 presidential campaign.

They picked up one of the big electoral vote states with the election of Richard Thornburgh as governor of Pennsylvania.

And William Clements won a narrow, nonetheless surprising victory in the Texas gubernatorial contest.

The real movement wasn't national. It was in the upheaval that occurred in states like Minnesota and New Hampshire.

Republican Rudy Boschwitz beat Anderson, for what used to be Vice President Walter F. Mondale's Senate seat. Republican David Durenburger won the seat once held by the late Hubert H. Humphrey. Republican Rep. Albert Quie defeated incumbent governor Rudy Perpich. And overnight, Minnesota was a GOP state again, as Humphrey found it years ago.

None of that has much to do with Carter or national issues. Anderson arranged as governor to have himself appointed to the Senate, and only once has a man who gained the office that way managed to gain it by election. Democratic division helped open the way for Durenburger. Quie defeated a Democratic governor who had a reputation for being amiable but rather disorganized.

New Hampshire ousted its ardently conservative Republican governor, Meldrim Thomson, in favor of a Democrat named Hugh Gallen. Gallen taught Thomson that two could play the campaign game of opposing a state income or sales tax, and denounced an electric utility rate increase the governor had approved.

Scratch one conservative, but don't try to read it as a trend, even in Thomson's state. For Republican Gordon Humphrey bows to no man's conservatism. And the airline pilot from Sunapee beat Democratic Sen. Thomas J. McIntyre.

The Kansas voters who elected Republican Nancy Landon Kassebaum, Alf's daughter, to be the only woman senator also turned out their Republican governor, Robert Bennett, in favor of John Carlin, Democrat, dairy farmer and speaker of the state House.

For the record, Carter campaigned personally this fall in 19 states. In those states, as elsewhere, there was no clear pattern in the outcome.

Gerald R. Ford claimed he had "a better batting average" than the president in campaigning for winners. He struck out in the effort to elect his old friend Griffin, who retired, then changed his mind, then got retired. "He regrettably said he was tired of being a senator," Ford said. "Those words came back to haunt him."

That scorekeeping system doesn't work in mid-term elections. In an Associated Press-NBC News survey of voters outside their polling places, three out of four said Carter had no impact on their election decisions. Among those who said the president was a factor, about half said it influenced them toward voting for Democrat and about half said they were swayed to vote Republican.

Next election, the national figures won't have to debate about their relative impact. They'll measure it in presidential competition. Carter will have no shortage of would-be opponents. Republican Sen. Howard H. Baker Jr. of Tennessee won as expected and nourished his prospects as a likely candidate for 1980 nomination. So did Gov. James R. Thompson and Reps. Philip M. Crane and John Anderson, all of Illinois. Crane is the only declared candidate for the GOP nomination, but the list will be a long one by pri-

Bolger Knocks Postal Rates

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Postmaster General William F. Bolger says postal rates "have risen too high, too fast" and that general postal rates should not increase for at least another two years.

In a speech to the National Newspaper Association convention, Bolger said the Postal Service is trying to adjust to changing times and to reclaim business lost to private firms by reducing rates and boosting efficiency of mail distribution.

Operating costs have been cut, Bolger said.

"Postal employment has gone from 714,000 in 1970 to 655,000 in 1978, while mail volume rose by 10 billion pieces," he said.

He said he would continue to seek ways of cutting costs, but "I don't believe the correct answer is to look to Congress for subsidies and I'm not an advocate of a five-day delivery week."

The postal service recently introduced such new services as mailgrams and express mail, Bolger said, and "we'll continue to increase our competitiveness in meeting customer desires for different services."

Bolger, named to the position seven months ago, said he is trying to give local postmasters more authority.

"The postal service is more operationally sound and efficient than it has ever been, and it's going to get even better," he said.

Students May Attend Saturday Classes

CLEVELAND (AP) — Students in the financially strapped Cleveland school system may have to attend classes on Saturday next spring and their teachers face the loss of a 6 percent pay raise.

Superintendent Peter Carlin told the school board Wednesday that three Saturday classes, one each in April, May and June, will have to be held to make up days lost during a five-week teacher strike. The classes will cost $200,000 per Saturday in employee overtime pay, he said. Board President John Gallagher Jr. said the system cannot fund any further employee raises since a school levy that would have raised $8.5 million for employee raises failed to win approval Tuesday.

Study Backs Women's Intuition

FOR YOUR WANT ADS CALL 762-8821

By MARY ELLEN HASKETT
BALTIMORE (UPI) — A Johns Hopkins University researcher has found a possible scientific basis for so-called feminine intuition.

Judith Hall, an assistant professor of psychology, said her studies have shown women to be superior to men in non-verbal communication.

Based on testing and review of studies in the same field, Dr. Hall found that in 51 of 61 studies, involving more than 10,000 people, women perform better than men in interpreting non-verbal cues conveyed through facial expressions, tone and rhythm of voice, body gestures and posture.

Dr. Hall developed a test in which more than 200 non-verbal cues are presented in brief segments in a film and subjects are asked to decide whether the sender of the cues — who is Dr. Hall herself — is behaving dominantly or submissively.

More than 75 percent of the tests, she said, were scored higher than males. The sex and age of the cue sender was also noted.

The age of the female subjects also was noted. The difference — elementary school female students scored higher than their male counterparts to the same degree as adult women achieved better scores than adult men.

"This raises all kinds of intriguing questions," Dr. Hall said. "Why are women more sensitive to non-verbal communication than men? Is it genetic?"

or does it come as a result of social pressures that women have been subjected to more so than men? What will be the effect of the current feminist movement on women's superiority in this area?"

She is continuing her studies to try to find answers to these questions.

Women are often thought of as being more empathetic and more sensitive than men. This might be considered part of intuition but Dr. Hall said that term is scientifically useless.

She said, however, that a better understanding of non-verbal communication will add to knowledge of personal relationships and cultural differences.

"A lot of the implicit understanding of what happens in a relationship is not a matter of what people say to each other," she said. "It's how they say it, how they use their voice, where they direct their eyes, and the distance they put between one another."

Dr. Hall said possible answers to women's superiority in picking up non-verbal cues could be theories of oppressed people and women's desire to be what society expects them to be — sensitive and intuitive.

Under the theory of oppressed people, women who believe they are dominated by men are forced to pick up non-verbal cues as a method of protection and a weapon to counter male dominance, she said.

Dr. Hall also said it is possible women have developed better abilities in interpreting non-verbal communication because it is expected of them by society.

Some of the studies Dr. Hall encountered indicated that when people have a choice between verbal messages and non-verbal communication, they often weigh the non-verbal information more heavily.

She said people seem to have a "gut sense" that there is truth in non-verbal cues.

DR. LAMB

LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.
DR. LAMB — I would like to know if you have any information on the drug insulin? What diseases does it treat? What are the side effects of insulin and what happens if you have an overdose?

READER — Insulin is not a drug. It is a hormone. It is a protein. Insulin is made up of a chain of many different amino acids. Its chemical structure is relatively simple.

Islets of Langerhans in your pancreas produce insulin. The islets are responsible for controlling the level of glucose (sugar) in your blood. If you have too much insulin, that is, if you are diabetic, meaning a high glucose level. This is the result of giving insulin to anyone with diabetes.

Small amounts have a stimulatory effect on the appetite, or larger amounts are used to induce unconsciousness in psychiatric therapy. The main purpose of insulin is to help individuals who don't produce enough insulin hormones. This means that insulin can cause you to gain weight and sugar. You can also have side effects with insulin, such as hypoglycemia, or the symptoms can progress to the point of being in shock. To give you a better understanding of insulin's role in diabetes, I am sending you The Health Letter number 3-11, Diabetes: Diagnosis, Prevention and Management.

Other readers who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Address your request to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — About two years ago I was cutting grass with a gas lawnmower. In order to start it I would have to wind up the arm of the mower. It was not easy to do and I had to do this several times a day with my right arm.

That summer I noticed that the right side of my chest was larger than the left side. I also noted that the left side went in, especially at the top, under the collar bone to the left of my breast bone. My pediatrician said I have a pigeon chest. Could this have been caused by the excessive development from starting the lawnmower? I am 14 years old, 5-feet-8 and weigh 110 pounds.

DEAR READER — A deformity of the breast bone (sternum) and chest area is not uncommon. This can be with the breast bone bowed forward causing the chest cage to be in the shape of a chicken's breast, which is the source of the term pigeon chest, or, the breast bone could be depressed inward, called pectus excavatum. Then it is quite common for one side of the body to be a bit larger than the other side.

As long as these are minor variations, they usually cause no disorder in body function. But they can cause a person to be concerned about his physical appearance, usually more concerned than the condition warrants.

If they are simply minor deformities, you are probably better off not to worry about them, or to do anything about them. If there is a major distortion, particularly a depression of the sternum, the deformity can dislocate the normal position of the heart, and perhaps cause changes in the normal dynamics of breathing. These sometimes need surgical correction.

I don't believe your condition was caused by running the lawnmower. The fact that you are able to do that amount of physical exertion suggests to me that the deformity you have does not limit your physical capacity. You will probably always have a disproportion in the size of your chest and some deformity.

Tube Baby Doctors To Open Clinic

The men who pioneered for the world's first test-tube baby want to open a clinic and expand the birth century castle at Cambridge, 50 miles from London. The clinic will be run by gynecologists and physiologists who developed the technique of a laboratory-fertilized egg of a woman who normally because her fallopian tubes were blocked.

The first test-tube baby was born in India in 1968. The first in Scotland in 1976.

The clinic will get planning permission in the next few weeks. It will be a wonderful addition to the area. The men who pioneered for the world's first test-tube baby are said to be in the clinic area. The clinic will be built, local authorities will have to be consulted.

Wallsend, the area was a residential area, a company of 100 people.

connected with the London Daily Mail. The newspaper bought world rights to Lesley Brown's story of how she gave birth to Louise, the first test-tube baby, born in Oldham in north England.

Associated Newspapers Group Ltd., the parent company of the Daily Mail and the investment company, said both doctors received offers to continue their work abroad but wanted to remain in Britain.

"They have now decided that, with the financial backing of Associated Newspapers Group Ltd., they will continue their work in this country in helping women who cannot have children by any other known method apart from embryo transplants," the company said.

Parties Display Lack Of Strength

By WALTER R. MEARS
WASHINGTON (AP) — At the White House, they're boasting of President Carter's achievements in support of Democrats in the mid-term elections. Such beneficiaries as Wendell Anderson and William D. Hathaway, soon to be former senators, presumably do not share this enthusiasm.

By the same token, Senators-elect Carl Levin of Michigan and Paul E. Tsongas of Massachusetts, and Governor-elect Robert Graham of Florida probably do.

Carter campaigned for them all, with totally predictable results. The Democrats who got his personal campaign help won some and lost some.

Nationally, the numbers indicate that Carter's impact on the election returns was negligible.

"It's one of the best off-year elections that any president has ever had," said White House Press Secretary Jody Powell, assessing the outcome while the votes were being counted Tuesday night. "No president in recent history has been so involved in the re-election of Democratic candidates."

That involvement didn't do much for Anderson of Minnesota, Hathaway of Maine, or for senators Floyd K. Haskell

Their House gains were modest, a pick-up of 10 seats with the possibility that the final net change add another seat or two. But a 60-40 Senate split isn't that much different from the 62-38 count in the last Congress.

And if the Democratic margin isn't two-to-one in the new House, it is still vast.

By gaining governors in at least six states, the Republicans strengthened their position going into the 1980 presidential campaign.

They picked up one of the big electoral vote states with the election of Richard Thornburgh as governor of Pennsylvania.

And William Clements won a narrow, nonetheless surprising victory in the Texas gubernatorial contest.

The real movement wasn't national. It was in the upheaval that occurred in states like Minnesota and New Hampshire.

Republican Rudy Boschwitz beat Anderson, for what used to be Vice President Walter F. Mondale's Senate seat. Republican David Durenburger won the seat once held by the late Hubert H. Humphrey. Republican Rep. Albert Quie defeated incumbent governor Rudy Perpich. And overnight, Minnesota was a GOP state again, as Humphrey found it years ago.

None of that has much to do with Carter or national issues. Anderson arranged as governor to have himself appointed to the Senate, and only once has a man who gained the office that way managed to gain it by election. Democratic division helped open the way for Durenburger. Quie defeated a Democratic governor who had a reputation for being amiable but rather disorganized.

New Hampshire ousted its ardently conservative Republican governor, Meldrim Thomson, in favor of a Democrat named Hugh Gallen. Gallen taught Thomson that two could play the campaign game of opposing a state income or sales tax, and denounced an electric utility rate increase the governor had approved.

Scratch one conservative, but don't try to read it as a trend, even in Thomson's state. For Republican Gordon Humphrey bows to no man's conservatism. And the airline pilot from Sunapee beat Democratic Sen. Thomas J. McIntyre.

The Kansas voters who elected Republican Nancy Landon Kassebaum, Alf's daughter, to be the only woman senator also turned out their Republican governor, Robert Bennett, in favor of John Carlin, Democrat, dairy farmer and speaker of the state House.

For the record, Carter campaigned personally this fall in 19 states. In those states, as elsewhere, there was no clear pattern in the outcome.

Gerald R. Ford claimed he had "a better batting average" than the president in campaigning for winners. He struck out in the effort to elect his old friend Griffin, who retired, then changed his mind, then got retired. "He regrettably said he was tired of being a senator," Ford said. "Those words came back to haunt him."

That scorekeeping system doesn't work in mid-term elections. In an Associated Press-NBC News survey of voters outside their polling places, three out of four said Carter had no impact on their election decisions. Among those who said the president was a factor, about half said it influenced them toward voting for Democrat and about half said they were swayed to vote Republican.

Next election, the national figures won't have to debate about their relative impact. They'll measure it in presidential competition. Carter will have no shortage of would-be opponents. Republican Sen. Howard H. Baker Jr. of Tennessee won as expected and nourished his prospects as a likely candidate for 1980 nomination. So did Gov. James R. Thompson and Reps. Philip M. Crane and John Anderson, all of Illinois. Crane is the only declared candidate for the GOP nomination, but the list will be a long one by pri-of Colorado or Dick Clark of Iowa. They all lost.

So did Republican Sens. Edward W. Brooke of Massachusetts and Robert P. Griffin of Michigan.

In terms of overall party strength, the story of the 1978 elections is that there isn't any. Senate and statehouse incumbents suffered some surprise defeats. But the Democrats are only slightly less dominant than before.

The Republicans picked up two Senate seats, and could wind up enlarging their minority by three.

Study Backs Women's Intuition

By MARY ELLEN HASKETT
BALTIMORE (UPI) — A Johns Hopkins University researcher has found a possible scientific basis for so-called feminine intuition.

Judith Hall, an assistant professor of psychology, said her studies have shown women to be superior to men in non-verbal communication.

Based on testing and review of studies in the same field, Dr. Hall found that in 51 of 61 studies, involving more than 10,000 people, women perform better than men in interpreting non-verbal cues conveyed through facial expressions, tone and rhythm of voice, body gestures and posture.

Dr. Hall developed a test in which more than 200 non-verbal cues are presented in brief segments in a film and subjects are asked to decide whether the sender of the cues — who is Dr. Hall herself — is behaving dominantly or submissively.

More than 75 percent of the tests, she said, were scored higher than males. The sex and age of the cue sender was controlled.

The age of the female subjects also was controlled — elementary school female students scored higher than their male counterparts to the same degree as adult women achieved better scores than adult men.

"This raises all kinds of intriguing questions," Dr. Hall said. "Why are women more sensitive to non-verbal communication than men? Is it genetic?"

Science Today

or does it come as a result of social pressures that women have been subjected to more so than men? What will be the effect of the current feminist movement on women's superiority in this area?"

She is continuing her studies to try to find answers to these questions.

Women are often thought of as being more empathetic and more sensitive than men. This might be considered part of intuition but Dr. Hall said that term is scientifically useless.

She said, however, that a better understanding of non-verbal communication will add to knowledge of personal relationships and cultural differences.

"A lot of the implicit understanding of what happens in a relationship is not a matter of what people say to each other," she said. "It's how they say it, how they use their voice, where they direct their eyes, and the distance they put between one another."

Dr. Hall said possible answers to women's superiority in picking up non-verbal cues could be theories of oppressed people and women's desire to be what society expects them to be — sensitive and intuitive.

Under the theory of oppressed people, women who believe they are dominated by men are forced to pick up non-verbal cues as a method of protection and a weapon to counter male dominance, she said.

Dr. Hall also said it is possible women have developed better abilities in interpreting non-verbal communication because it is expected of them by society.

Some of the studies Dr. Hall encountered indicated that when people have a choice between verbal messages and non-verbal communication, they often weigh the non-verbal information more heavily.

She said people seem to have a "gut sense" that there is truth in non-verbal cues.

causing the chest cage to be in the shape of a chicken's breast, which is the source of the term pigeon chest, or, the breast bone could be depressed inward, called pectus excavatum. Then it is quite common for one side of the body to be a bit larger than the other side.

As long as these are minor variations, they usually cause no disorder in body function. But they can cause a person to be concerned about his physical appearance, usually more concerned than the condition warrants.

If they are simply minor deformities, you are probably better off not to worry about them, or to do anything about them. If there is a major distortion, particularly a depression of the sternum, the deformity can dislocate the normal position of the heart, and perhaps cause changes in the normal dynamics of breathing. These sometimes need surgical correction.

I don't believe your condition was caused by running the lawnmower. The fact that you are able to do that amount of physical exertion suggests to me that the deformity you have does not limit your physical capacity. You will probably always have a disproportion in the size of your chest and some deformity.

Fast-Food Workers Rate Jobs Low

MILL VALLEY, Calif. (AP) — The people behind the counters of the nation's fast-food outlets rate their jobs above those of garbage collectors, but below most other jobs, a survey shows. The fast-food bosses aren't much happier. They rate their jobs below those of embalmers, real estate agents and technical teachers. Systems for Human Resources says its survey shows the industry, which has more than 4 million employees and managers, has a 300 percent annual turnover rate.

was presented to a recent convention of food service operators in Kansas City. "The more enlightened" of the firms are now trying to do something about it, said White. He declined to name any of the operations. The report said employees quit their jobs or were fired not because of inability to perform their jobs, but because of low morale. The survey found that employees of food chains were happier in stores where sales and profits were down. "That's because everybody likes to get attention," White said. "When things aren't going well in a chain operation, headquarters sends in its heavyweights to see what's wrong. They pay attention to the employees, they give them good strokes and that makes for happiness." The firm found that employees over 35 years old who work 40 hours a week or longer tend to be much happier and think much more highly of themselves than younger, part-time workers. "The older group has a longer-term commitment to their jobs," said White. "They don't view the job as a temporary stopping-off place."

The New Hebrides, a chain of 80 islands in South Pacific, is governed jointly by France and Britain.

New Studies Dispel 'Proof' of Mental Superiority In Whites

NEW YORK (UPI) — British psychologist Cyril Burt already was famous as the founder of educational psychology when he produced "scientific proof" in 1961 that intelligence is the genetic inheritance of the social upper crust. But new studies prove "beyond reasonable doubt" that he made the whole thing up.

Burt's classic paper, "Intelligence and Social Mobility," frequently was used by white supremacists as "proof" that whites inherently are more intelligent than blacks, and in public appearances, Burt himself held that Jews and the Irish were less intelligent than the English and that slum children were mentally inferior to children of the upper classes.

He also contended men were smarter than women, but it was his painstakingly prepared set of IQ tables showing common laborers at the bottom end of the spectrum and his assertion that heredity determined their place in that position that won acclaim.

The September issue of Science magazine cites the work of two professors who have been engaged in a study of Burt's controversial findings and concludes that the eminent psychologist fabricated his figures.

Prof. Leon Kamin of Princeton University was one of the first to suspect figures cited in published reports by Burt, who died in 1971 after rising to the heights of his field, becoming the first psychologist ever to be knighted.

According to the magazine, Kamin said in 1976 that Burt's classic paper, "Intelligence and Social Mobility," contained several "extremely improbable statistics." Further digging by Prof. D.D. Dorfman of the University of Iowa turned up evidence that figures Burt allegedly had obtained from IQ tests actually given were identical with figures published more than 30 years earlier and based on another survey.

Dorfman also proved that Burt obtained the IQ figures he claimed proved the intellectual superiority of upper classes, not through IQ tests, but by selecting evenly distributed points on a bell-shaped curve, which he called "a curve of normal distribution." Row to column tables then were concocted from the figures and passed off as data actually derived from tests.

Science magazine concludes: "These findings show, beyond any reasonable doubt, that Burt fixed the row and column totals of the tables in his highly acclaimed 1961 study."

DuPont Estate Trustee Says Assets Mismanaged

By PHILIP GREER
And MYRON KANDEL

Assets of an estate that was valued at $1.5 billion today are being sued — for mismanagement. And, as strange as it may seem, the action might have a case. The suit is pending in a Jacksonville, Fla., court. It was filed two years ago by a trustee of the Alfred I. duPont estate, who claims that while the assets have grown enormously over the years, they aren't being used properly and some of them should be sold so that the money can be reinvested for a higher return. The focal point of the argument is the St. Joe Paper Co., 80 percent owned by the estate (the rest owned privately and by employees), which in turn owns two railroads, a sugar company, more than a million acres of land in the northern Florida panhandle, payfont land in Miami and other assets (last year it sold the last of its shares in Florida National Banks, which it once controlled).

The complaining trustee, William B. Mills, says the St. Joe Paper Co. is worth about $500 million, but pays the trust an annual income of only $252,000. His lawyer, John H. Wilbur, says, "If you invest that money in government bonds at 5 percent (government rates are a lot higher than that now) it would produce $25 million a year for the trust."

The suit grew out of a petition filed by the trustees in 1976, asking the court to approve the election of trustees who had been added to the board in 1965 and 1967. They, in turn, had to build an $80 million hospital in Delaware and, their lawyer says, wanted to make sure their vote was legal. Mills refused to join in the petition, saying he didn't think the new trustees were legal because the original duPont will provided for only three members.

Warning Given On Beryllium

WASHINGTON (AP) — Workers' exposure to the metal beryllium, used in the aerospace and nuclear industries, should be limited because it causes cancer in laboratory animals and may do so in humans, according to the U.S. Public Health Service.

However, industry has opposed stricter standards for the strong, ultra-light metal used to make weapons, rocket motors, nuclear reactors and heat shields.

And Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger told Labor Secretary Ray Marshall last summer that tighter standards, which would be costly for manufacturers, may hurt national security.

However, in a letter released Wednesday, Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. told Marshall that a panel of experts has confirmed the potential danger.

The Labor Department's Occupational Safety and Health Administration has announced plans to cut the allowable worker exposure to beryllium from two parts per million in the air at the workplace to one part per million.

Califano said Dr. Julius Richmond, surgeon general of the Public Health Service, and Dr. William Foege, director of the national Center for Disease Control, recommend that "OSHA proceed to set standards that limit exposure to beryllium in the workplace."

Beryllium is made by Kawecki-Berylo Industries Inc., of Reading, Pa., and the Brush Wellman Co. of Cleveland.

family's giant chemical company in 1916. Four years later, with his second wife, he moved south and began buying real estate. When he died in 1935, his wife, Jesse Ball duPont, was named sole beneficiary for as long as she lived. Her brother Edward Ball, who had managed duPont's business affairs, was named a trustee. Ball, an arch conservative, is very wealthy in this own right.

While Mrs. duPont was alive, the estate's holdings were vastly expanded. When she died in 1971, the income was shifted to the Nemours Foundation, a charitable fund set up by duPont (and named after his Delaware home) — to operate a hospital for curable crippled children in Delaware. It's at that point, Mills claims, that the mismanagement began.

Fred Kent Sr., the attorney for Ball and the estate, told us that most of the growth in the estate came from stocks it has owned since duPont was alive. Two-thirds of the assets, he says, are in duPont and General Motors stock. "It's the same stock Mr. duPont owned," he says. "They never sold a share." (The General Motors shares come from the court-ordered divestiture of duPont's controlling interest in GM.)

Mills doesn't have any argument with the stock holdings. At current prices, duPont yields a little over 4 percent, including extra payments this year. General Motors, whose total payout can vary widely from year to year, has paid $6.75 a share in the last 12 months, well over 10 percent at current prices.

The paper company, he says, is another thing. According to Wilbur, for as long as Mrs. duPont was alive, the estate could be handled any way that she and the other trustees wanted. Once she died, though, he says, the assets should have been put to work producing income. The purpose of a trust, Wilbur says, "is to produce income for the beneficiaries, not to run big companies."

The case may never reach a conclusion. Ball, who has had a history of heart problems, is 90 years old. Mills is 75 and, says lawyer Kent, "they're both swearing they'll outlive each other." (Kent says he's the "youngster" in the case; he's 72.)

Wilbur concedes he's fighting an uphill battle because of Ball's huge power in Florida. He says that, when the estate was under orders to sell its bank holding, it received an offer of $18.50 a share. The banks themselves offered 50 cents a share less, but after Ball (who owns 6 percent of the banks' stock) used some of his influence, the Federal Reserve approved the sale at the lower price.

The Almanac TODAY IN HISTORY

By United Press International
Today is Friday, Nov. 10, the 314th day of 1978 with 51 to follow.

The moon is between its first quarter and full phase.

The morning stars are Venus, Jupiter and Saturn.

The evening stars are Mars and Mercury.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Scorpio.

Martin Luther, founder of Protestantism, was born Nov. 10, 1483. This is actor Richard Burton's 53rd birthday.

On this day in history:
In 1871, journalist Henry Stanley found missing Scottish missionary David Livingstone in a small African village and asked: "Dr. Livingstone, I presume?"

In 1917, 41 women from 15 states were arrested outside the White House for suffragette demonstrations. American women won the right to vote three years later.

In 1919, the American Legion held its first national convention in Minneapolis.

In 1975, despite strong U.S. opposition, the United Nations General Assembly adopted an Arab-inspired resolution defining Zionism in the Middle East as a form of racism.

A thought for the day:
Martin Luther said, "There is no more lovely, friendly and charming relationship, communion or company than a good marriage."

Texas Couple's Generosity Draws Praise At Reception

WASHINGTON (AP) — A unique gathering of international educators and scientists heaped praise and thanks on a Texas couple Thursday night whose generosity has aided universities on three continents.

More than 185 guests representing 32 organizations gathered at the National Academy of Sciences to honor Dallasites Cecil and Ida Green.

The Greens, who helped found Texas Instruments in 1945, have donated undisclosed millions to educational organizations in this country as well as Canada, Australia and England.

President Carter's science adviser, Dr. Frank Press, was the guest speaker.

Former Texas Gov. Allan Shivers, currently chairman of the Board of Regents for the University of Texas system, was another speaker lauding the Dallas couple for their "creative international philanthropy" along with Peter S. Bing, president of the Stanford University board of trustees. Marjorie Bell Chambers, president of the American Association of University Women, and Harry Messel, head of the school of physics at the University of Sydney.

Charles A. LeMaistre, president of the University of Texas system's Cancer Center in Houston, presented the Greens with a silver tray engraved with the names of the 32 participating institutions.

Dr. Jerome B. Wiesner, president of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, headed the group that planned Thursday night's fête.

The Greens have been responsible for such projects as:

- Green Fellowships at three universities and a medical center to encourage women in science and engineering, biological sciences research and geophysics.
- A 275-ton, ocean-going research vessel, the Ida Green, used by the University of Texas for geophysical and oceanographic research.
- A global system of earthquake detectors headquartered at the University of - California in San Diego;

- and 20 fully endowed professorships, largely in the sciences and engineering.

Included among the 15 major university and hospital facilities built by the Greens are:

- The Cecil H. and Ida Green Professional Center at the Colorado School of Mines.
- The Ida Green Communication Center at Austin College.
- The Cecil and Ida Green Building for Earth Sciences at MIT.
- The Green College for postgraduate medical students at Oxford University.
- The Cecil H. and Ida M. Green Hospital in La Jolla, Calif.
- The Cecil H. Green Center at the University of Texas at Dallas.
- The Cecil Green Park which headquarters the University of British Columbia Alumni Association.
- and the Cecil H. Green Library at Stanford University scheduled for completion next year.

Husband Says Victim Safe

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — The husband of kidnapped heiress Brianda Domecq told police today he received a note from his wife saying she was well and that her Marxist captors had cut their ransom demands from $4.3 million to $1 million.

Family sources said the ransom money already has been gathered and that they were awaiting final instructions from the kidnappers.

"Don't worry about me," Brianda Domecq said in the note to her husband, physician Fernando Rodriguez Campillo. "I am well, very well taken care of. Please look after my children and tell them not to worry about me."

"If there is any police vigilance around the house, have it withdrawn so as not to hinder the communication."

Mrs. Domecq de Rodriguez, the 36-year-old daughter of brandy maker Pedro Domecq, was abducted Tuesday by five masked men near a shopping center outside Mexico City.

Police Arrest Suspects In Restaurant Burglary

Three men were arrested shortly after 5 p.m. Thursday after they reportedly were caught burglarizing a Mexican food restaurant on 50th Street.

Police say the suspects' two vehicles parked behind Acapulco Red's at 3838 50th St. contained two guns, a blood-stained hunting knife and about $5,000 in property from the restaurant.

The three men, a 29-year-old from Lubbock, a 32-year-old from San Antonio and a 22-year-old Slatonite, were taken to the county jail. The San Antonio man's 5-year-old son, found inside one of the impounded vehicles, was turned over to a Child Welfare agent.

The suspects were caught in the act of the crime by several restaurant employees, according to reports. The weapons confiscated were a .38-caliber revolver, 357-magnum pistol and a blood-stained knife.

Police said the knife will be analyzed to see if it could have been used in several recent stabbings in the city.

In a reported assault early this morning, Tony Henry Taylor, 18, said he and four friends were watching television inside his trailer house about 12:15 a.m. today when three boys and a man armed with clubs and knives forced their way into his residence.

The intruders accused one of Taylor's friends of stealing $3 from them, and then started pushing Taylor, reports show.

The suspects left before anyone was injured, but they promised to return, Taylor said.

Burglars continued to hit vending machines, breaking into two early this morning.

Reports show that a coin machine at Stop & Shop at 7402 Quaker Ave. was broken open and $162 taken between 3:30 a.m. and 6 a.m. More than $200 was reported taken when a vending machine at a service station at 29th Street and Slide Road was burglarized between 4 a.m. and 5:50 a.m. today.

Herman Rijoos of 5670 16th Place said he lost three TV sets and rifles, phones and calculators when his residence was broken into between 4 p.m. and 11 p.m. Thursday.

Sheriff's deputies Thursday were investigating the Wednesday night break-in at Great Plains Manufacturing Co., 4901 Clovis Road.

Freddie Shipley and R.J. Walls told deputies that the burglars cut a 15-foot section of wire fence surrounding the business and then apparently drove a vehicle into the company yard. Once inside, they said, the intruders cut the bolts on the warehouse door and took $6,535 worth of farm implement tires and axles.

Hubcap thefts made off with $1,000 worth of wire wheel spokes from three vehicles parked on the lot of Pioneer Lincoln-Mercury, 4801 South Loop 289, according to reports.

Contractor Lonnie Duane St. Clair told police that someone broke into a house under construction at 5204 91st St. and took $361 worth of building materials.

Betty Wright, principal of Harwell Elementary, 4101 Ave. D., said someone broke a window in a barracks south of the main school building and took at least $240 worth of property, including a television, calculator and three cassette tape recorders.

Dennis D. Recker, manager of Lubbock Ford Tractor, told police someone took a $195 rotary tiller from the company's fenced yard at 228 Northeast Loop 289.

Dorothy Carroll Evans of 2317 Auburn, No. 21, said someone removed $77 worth of clothes taken from her clothes line sometime Wednesday night or early Thursday.

Teamsters Try Averting Steel Haulers' Strike

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A union representing 30,000 steel haulers is asking its members to park their rigs in a strike this weekend, but the Teamsters union expects to keep the big-wheel trucks rolling.

"We will do whatever is necessary," Thomas Fagan, president of Teamsters Joint Council 40, told a union and management meeting Thursday. "We know there is a certain amount of danger."

William J. Hill, president of the Pittsburgh-based Fraternal Association of Steel Haulers, said the strike was set to begin at midnight tonight.

"This is the big one," he said, adding the strike would continue until the independents were allowed to break away from the Teamsters union.

Hill estimated that 60 percent of the 30,000 steel truckers east of the Mississippi River will participate in the work stoppage. But he said "nobody knows" the extent of membership in his union because there are chapters throughout the country.

Many FASH members, who primarily deliver steel from mills to industries where it is fashioned into products, also belong to the Teamsters because they haul for companies under contract with that union.

Teamster officials have called the impending shutdown "a reckless defiance of the law" and have told union members that taking part in a strike subjects them to instant dismissal.

Thursday's meeting was attended by state police and about 400 truckers and management representatives.

"We're in the trucking business and we are going to keep running," said James Hutchinson of the Western Pennsylvania Motor Carriers Association. "We're not going to send you into the guns of hell, but you will be asked — you will be ordered — to run. All it takes is a little guts."

However, Michael Parkhurst, editor of Overdrive, a magazine for independent truckers, says the planned shutdown is a fake.

British Follow Mythical Family In Classified Ads

LONDON (UPI) — Friends of the Ashbrooke-Pemberton-French family will be delighted to learn that Julian "is slightly in disgrace" again. Halloween did it.

But it means that Britain's most mystifying family is back living it up in the classified ads of the sober-sided Times of London. Those ads seem to be the only place the family exists.

For months now sharp-eyed Britons have been delighted by subtle, tantalizing and often hilarious advertisements in the Times' "announcements" columns about the oh-so-British Ashbrooke-Pemberton-French family. The ads, like the family, are a total mystery, though an expensive one. They have cost an estimated $1,500 so far.

What matters is that the probably mythical A-P-Fs, as they often style themselves, go on living the kind of lives most Englishmen would love to lead.

"Mrs. Ashbrooke-Pemberton," said one early ad, "would like to ask the young man who attended their party on Friday to immediately return the Land Rover and kindly remove the Lamborghini from the croquet lawn."

"Ashbrooke-Pemberton," retorted an ad four days later, "kindly remove your Land Rover from our duckpond and return our Lamborghini."

Halloween apparently gave rakish but trouble-prone son Julian another chance to do his inimitable stuff.

Said an ad just after Halloween: "The Ashbrooke-Pemberton-Frenches would like their friends to know that they are recovering from Julian's Pumpkin Punch."

No one has yet claimed authorship of this long-running, Pythonesque joke, which sometimes reads like vintage P. G. Wodehouse, and no one knows what the whole thing is for. Spokesmen at the Times loftily say "it is never our practice to reveal who places personal ads" and deny that the saga is an in-joke within the Times advertising department.

But by now all their many friends know that Mr. and Mrs. Philip Ashbrooke-Pemberton-French — they added the "French" part when impostors butted into their chronicle-by-classified — live at Bembury Manor, Bembury, give piles of parties and have hordes of friends named Charles and Geoffrey and Jinks and Brevington-Slaughter.

The three A-P-F children are: dashing but feckless Julian, who had an altercation with Inga ("you faithless creature," he called her in one ad); flighty Amanda, who gave a party in Monte Carlo to coincide with Princess Caroline's wedding but "failed to avoid an invasion of helicopters"; and the mysterious Nancy, mentioned only once.

The A-P-F saga began last April 20 with a slightly incongruous sentence sandwiched into the $5-a-line Times classifieds:

"The Ashbrooke-Pembertons would like to apologize to everyone for their absence from Badminton this year."

Thereafter ads relating the family's madcap, name-dropping adventures appeared almost daily. Britons took the uppercrust soap-opera-in-print so much to heart that a vocal opposition developed. Said an ad on July 13:

"We who have to work for a living resent the sort of life your announcements portray — Percy Shudworth."

Immediately other ads demanded that readers "Ignore Percy Shudworth." Said the most extreme reply: "Percy Shudworth you unspeakable cad take back all you said about A-P-F or it's pistols at dawn in Richmond Park."

After that the A-P-Fs disappeared for months. Then in mid-October a 23-line ad, costing $115, gushed: "How nice to be back in England." Three days later a fan paid for an ad to welcome back the A-P-Fs, saying: "For weeks we have searched in vain for you. You made our day."

The back-again ad noted chattily that "Julian is slightly in disgrace" and "Amanda has returned from abroad." Now that the serial is in full flood again these hints are being followed up.

Oct. 18 — "In desperation: Does anyone have a brilliant scheme that Julian could immerse himself in? A veil had best be drawn across the Cirencester escapade."

Oct. 31 — "To avoid confusion, Julian Ashbrooke-Pemberton-French is not seeking a position in the motor trade."

Insurance Agents Given Wrong Information By Homeowners

By ANDY LANG
Associated Press Writer

You've heard it before and here it is again: many persons under-insure their homes.

But did you know one of the most common causes of this? It's because homeowners often give insurance agents erroneous information. Not deliberately, but from lack of accurate knowledge.

As an example, do you know the size of your house? A house should be insured for what it would cost to rebuild on the same lot. That amount is estimated in part by applying a formula to the square footage.

An authority for the fact that this square footage often is given inaccurately is Charles Rinehart, vice president of the insurance companies under the Fireman's Fund banner.

"Clearly," he says, "if the square footage is misstated — and it generally is — estimates of replacement costs will be wrong, too."

Naturally, other factors affect replacement cost estimates, including the location of the lot and the type of construction. Yet a misstatement of as little as 300 square feet can throw off the estimates anywhere from $7,000 to $12,500. Thus, a house may be over-insured as well as under-insured.

When it is under-insured, a policyholder may discover, when trouble occurs, that he has to dig into his own pocket to complete repair. In this connection, be sure to ask your agent about the 80 percent "must" clause that protects you in the event of partial damage.

Some of the most common errors causing incorrect replacement cost estimates, in addition to misstating square footage, according to Rinehart, are:

—Failing to note that the property has more than one level. Replacement costs for a 2,000-square-foot, two-story home are less than for a 2,000-square-foot, single-story home.

—Misstating the grade of construction.

Most insurance companies recognize three grades of construction — standard, custom-standard, and custom. Standard homes are tract homes, built "on spec" by contractors. Custom-standard homes are also tract homes, but with some special features, like hardwood floors and above-average fixtures. Custom houses are built specifically for an individual buyer, from architect's plans, and are one-of-a-kind homes.

Replacement costs for "custom-standard" homes may be 50 percent higher than for standard houses of the same size, and replacement costs for custom homes twice as high as standard homes.

—Including an attached garage in the total area of the home. The homeowner should only measure living areas. Attached garages should not be included. Replacement estimates for garages are provided by estimator services available to insurance agents.

—Misstating the kind of construction materials.

Subaru Official Harried Over New-Found Fame

By FRED T. FERGUSON
NEW YORK (UPI) — Women consider Alan B. Ross a gorgeous hunk of man. He's found that out the hard way.

In fact, Ross admits to winding up a bit harried and haggard after it was revealed to the world that he was a very eligible bachelor.

He joined the gambit that brought about this revelation with some carefree daring: partly for kicks, partly for revenge, partly for some extra publicity that might accrue to his company.

Ross is a slender 6-foot-1. He wears his English-cut vested suits as well as a male model for clothing ads. He goes in for bright-striped shirts but conservative ties — they match.

He has a dimpled chin, crinkly smile, strong features, good teeth. His large blue eyes are wided beneath heavy brows. He's topped with an exuberant head of brown hair, parted on the left. It is blown but neat in a mod style that makes him look younger than his 39 years.

His charms were evident in a Subaru of America, Inc., television commercial in which he and two other top executives of the firm appear pitching the line, "while others stand behind their product, we stand in front of ours."

What was more natural than for the wife of an executive of his company's ad agency to think to mention him over lunch to a woman friend who is editor of a national magazine with a penchant for picking "Bachelors of the Month"? Subaru-

America's dashing vice president for advertising and public relations, she suggested, would make a perfect candidate for Cosmopolitan's bachelor.

"So I got a call from Cosmo," said Ross.

With a near sheepish smile, he embarks on the story of his epic adventure with what now totals well over 2,300 lusting women. He tells it with the same eager enthusiasm that accompanies his Subaru sales pitch. The latter comes first, of course.

"What the hell, why not," I said to myself. I'm a corporate executive in advertising and public relations. If I have the opportunity to talk about what I do, I'll take advantage of it.

"And, frankly, I was intrigued by the prospect.

"And, quite honestly, there was something else, I had just been through a separation. (It came during a relatively brief marriage and it ended in divorce.) This is painful for both parties. No one comes out of it without feelings of inadequacy, insecurity.

"So I thought, 'What the hell, why not, if there is a way of showing this gal that, if I'm not important to her, I am important to a magazine that has three million readers.'

"I guess it was a kind of feeling of revenge, though frankly today, I have no feelings like that at all. Time heals all wounds."

He laid the offer out for his corporate board chairman and to his company president. They told him to go ahead, if he wanted.

Sixteen months later, Subaru-America's sales and ad veep appeared in the magazine's September issue.

"Then it started," he said. "It was almost as if someone had turned on a faucet. At 10 o'clock one morning there was a stack of letters this high." He holds his hand a foot above the table.

"There were letters and pictures — pictures in black and white and in color, pictures on beaches, in every sort of pose, pictures in the nude. It was more graphic than that. At last count, I've had 2,350 letters. They've come from everywhere — from abroad; from England, France and Iran."

Born in Maine, raised in Newfoundland, schooled in Halifax, Nova Scotia, and at Boston University, he operated family auto-truck dealerships in Canada before working in New Jersey for American Motors and Alpha-Romeo. He's been with Subaru for six years.

"Despite my background in Maine and Canada, I had been around a lot since and I believe I'm not normally naive. But nothing prepared me for this."

After five weeks, he said, the letters began to taper off. He felt more relaxed. It was easier to talk about the experience.

"The women ranged in age from 15 to 53.

"The 15-year-old suggested I might be interested in her mother who was 37, good looking and liked a good time and dancing."

Study May Affect City Health Department

By TOM GRIESS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A statewide study of local health departments for the Texas Department of Health could have far-reaching consequences for the Lubbock City Health Department if the recommendations of the study are adopted by the state Legislature.

The study defines minimal staff and service requirements, and according to Dr. Marjorie Orr, city health department director, Lubbock is currently lacking in both areas.

Dr. Orr said the city fails to provide the following minimal programs:

- Infectious disease control and prevention of tuberculosis and other communicable diseases.
- Basic epidemiological services.
- Detection, referral and follow-up of cardiovascular problems, kidney problems and cancer.
- Child health care for infants and preschool children.

She later qualified the statement, saying United Way provides a well-baby clinic and the Heart Association screens for high blood pressure.

Dr. Orr also pinpointed the city health department nursing staff as a trouble spot. The study recommends the ratio of licensed vocational nurses to registered nurses on a staff never exceed 1 to 5. She said the department currently employs nine nurses and three of them are licensed vocational nurses.

Four additional nursing positions are budgeted in fiscal year 1978-79, Dr. Orr said, but three of those can not be filled until January.

The one-year study, which was completed in May by a steering committee appointed by Texas Commissioner of Health Dr. Fratis L. Duff, applies the minimal staff and service requirements to the population and "need" of each community to determine a minimal budget for each local health department. The "need" factor is calculated by dividing the Texas per capita income by the per capita income of the community.

The study recommends an $848,403 minimal Lubbock health department budget, with $348,531 to be provided by the state.

In comparison, the study says the proposed fiscal 1978-79 minimal Lubbock budget was only $430,667, with $222,862 to be provided by the state.

Thus the study concludes local funding should be increased $292,067 and state funding increased $125,669 for Lubbock to comply with the suggested minimal budget.

The hefty increase in local appropriations is based on the wealth of Lubbock relative to other population centers in Texas.

The study ranks Lubbock 13th among the 30 largest state health departments in order of need. Ranking ahead of Lubbock, in order of greatest need, are Hidalgo, Laredo-Webb, Cameron, El Paso, Bell, Corpus Christi-Nueces, Waco-McLennan, San Antonio, Abilene-Taylor, Denison-Sherman-Grayson, San Angelo-Tom Green and Tyler-Smith.

Of the 10 local health departments in greatest need, six of them would be expected to provide less local funding under the recommended system than in their proposed fiscal 1979 minimal budgets.

The threat posed to the Lubbock tax base by the study may be exaggerated, however. According to information provided by the City of Lubbock, local appropriations to the city health department amounted to $888,891 in the revised fiscal 1977-78 budget and $1,048,583 in the approved current fiscal budget.

Those figures are four times greater than the $207,805 listed in the study as the proposed local contribution to the minimal current Lubbock health department budget.

The explanation for this discrepancy goes back to the definition of minimal services.

The study does not include laboratory programs as a minimal service. Lubbock appropriated local funds for laboratory services totaling $75,852 in the revised fiscal 1977-78 budget and $115,253 in the approved current budget.

More important, Dr. Orr said the study does not consider vector control programs — insect and rodent control — essential.

She estimated that $225,000 of the current city health department budget is earmarked for vector control. She added that, based on conversations with Dr. W. R. Ross, chief of the bureau of community health services in the state health department, she did not believe the state would contribute more than $15,000 to vector control.

Asked whether he interpreted the study to require a single county health department for each county, Ross said, "As far as we are concerned, there is a semblance of a city-county health department (in Lubbock)."

"This is by no means the full coverage of health services and we are not happy about it," he said, "but it is a trend."

Before legislative approval of the study can be sought, the state health department must decide upon formal legislation to present.

Dr. Raymond T. Moore, deputy commissioner of the Texas Department of Health, said last week the department was awaiting full input from the local health departments and local directors before making any final decisions.

Local health department responses to the study have been "generally good," Ross said, but he added that most departments have yet to report their opinions.

The Lubbock County Health Board, according to Dr. Orr, should be formulating a response at its next meeting.

121 Indictments Returned

Multiple indictments were returned by a Lubbock County grand jury Thursday against both an armed robbery suspect and an accused sex offender.

A man accused of taking part in the recent daylight holdup of a local insurance firm also was indicted by jurors.

The indictments were among 121 returned by the panel, which had convened Monday, to Judge John R. McFall's 237th District Court. There were four no-ills. Four aggravated robbery indictments were returned against Jose Duran, Jr., 22, of 3103 Baylor St.

Duran is accused of robbing three restaurants and a convenience store within the last two months.

The defendant was indicted in connection with a reported Sept. 14 holdup at a 7-Eleven store at Detroit Avenue and Colgate Street.

He also was cited in connection with the Oct. 16 robbery of the Rodeway Restaurant at 2401 4th St.; with the Oct. 23 holdup of the Taco Bell restaurant at 908 Slide Rd. and with the Oct. 30 holdup of the Poco Taco restaurant at 120 University Ave.

Larry Donell Perryman, 19, of 1812 E. 2nd St., was indicted for aggravated rape.

In addition, two burglaries of a habitation with intent to commit rape indictments were returned against him.

One of the two burglaries of a habitation with intent to commit rape indictments is the result of a reported Oct. 16 break-in at the apartment of two sisters near the Texas Tech University campus.

The two women, ages 22 and 18, reportedly sustained cut wounds during the break-in. The older sister was treated and released, while the younger was first listed in serious condition before subsequently being released.

The aggravated rape indictment accuses Perryman of the Sept. 7 rape of a 21-

Aderton Persuades Council To Update Waste-Fuel Study

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The 400 tons of garbage discarded by Lubbockites each day could be transformed from a liability into a money-maker for the city, Councilman Bud Aderton believes.

So Thursday he persuaded other members of the council to sweep the cobwebs off a 1975 study on the use of municipal solid waste as a fuel and update it.

Aderton said there are 260 solid waste plants around the world, but only six are in the United States.

"Economics didn't justify construction of the plants before the energy crisis," Aderton explained. But with the increased cost of energy and the Environmental Protection Agency restrictions on landfills, the plants are now "viable, feasible projects," he said.

To illustrate his point, Aderton showed a film of a solid waste plant in Duesseldorf, Germany, which produces $3 million a year in revenues from its operation.

Burning the refuse produces superheated steam which generates electricity. Metal is separated from the other trash and sold as scrap. Ash from the burned refuse is sold for use in cinder blocks and a road base and the heat is used to heat water.

A similar plant in Lubbock could generate enough energy to power all city services, Aderton predicted.

"I envision it as a regional thing," he said, adding the city could get refuse by rail from towns within a 30-mile radius of Lubbock.

Federal grants totaling $15 million are available for construction of such plants and the council seemed in agreement that the city should apply for some of the monies — at least for updating the feasibility study.

Also at Thursday's meeting, council members discussed parking problems at the Lubbock International Airport.

Post Mayor Giles McCrary told the council residents of outlying areas depend on airport parking possibly more than Lubbockites.

Although he had kudos for much of the airport's operations, McCrary said something needs to be done about airport patrons who block entrances and exits to

Youth Wins Delinquency Case

By FRANK PATRICK
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A jury determined Thursday that a 14-year-old Lubbock youth, accused of killing a young woman during a gang fight at a local junior high school, had not engaged in delinquent conduct.

The panel in Judge William R. Shaver's 140th District Court deliberated approximately two hours and 20 minutes before reaching its decision.

In doing so, the nine-woman, three-mon panel apparently agreed with the youth's attorney, Phil Gamble, who argued that the state had not proven his client killed the woman.

Marie Booker Lyons, 20, was killed around 5 p.m. Oct. 10 during fighting at the Alderson Junior High School baseball diamond.

Dr. John Ray, a local pathologist, said in his opinion Mrs. Booker was killed as the result of a skull fracture consistent with a blow to the head.

He said the young woman could have died instantaneously.

According to testimony during the two-day hearing, numerous fights engaged in by young combatants armed with makeshift weapons had taken place or were in progress when Mrs. Lyons was fatally injured.

Testimony indicated the deceased had attempted to help out a brother, who reportedly had been involved in the fighting.

At one point, a crowd estimated at up to 200 had gathered on or near the school. See DELINQUENCY Page 14

CAMEL CHIC — The cloth is luxurious camel hair and the feeling throw-away chic. What could be more elegantly "sportif" than this camel combination — a long sleeved pull-over sweater and fly front pants? The color, of course, is rich golden camel and you can wear it just about anywhere you want to look luxurious.

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: If a doctor is not stable in his personal life, would you lose confidence in him as a physician?

I think my doctor is the best for miles around, but now that he is in the process of getting his fourth divorce, I wonder if it's possible for his judgment to be so bad in one department but not in another.

His first wife was a fine, attractive woman. He simply tired of her and found a new love. It was the same story with the other three. He made generous settlements on all of them.

How would you feel, Abby? Would you still have confidence in him as a doctor?

WONDERING IN TEXAS

I know it's possible for some people to be brilliant in their own fields, but inept, inexperienced and hopelessly naive in other matters. Personally, as long as my physician provides me with competent professional care, how he handles his personal life is his own business.

DEAR ABBY: I am 42 and very much in love with a beautiful 27-year-old model. Her divorce (for which I am paying) is now pending. She has three children.

I bought her a new car, and have spent more than $15,000 on clothes for her and her children in the last six months. She says she loves me, but I don't see much of her. I see her only on Monday nights because on Tuesdays she sees an old boyfriend she says she has to "let down easy." On Wednesday night she goes out with her boss. On Thursday night she goes out with the girls. On Friday night she stays home and does her laundry, and she lets her husband come over on weekends because he misses the kids.

My friends say I am being taken for a ride. Am I?

SAMMY IN MIAMI

Not only are you being taken for a ride, you'll be lucky if you aren't killed in the traffic.

DEAR ABBY: My conscience is bothering me and I have other problems, too.

I'm a 15-year-old who everybody thinks is a "very nice" girl. But I'm not as nice as they think.

My girlfriend and I went to a movie one Saturday and let ourselves be picked up by a couple of guys. They had a car so we went for a ride afterwards. We parked and made out (only light necking — nothing serious). We really aren't pickups and don't know what made us act like that.

Well, I've seen this guy a couple of times on the sneak since then, but he never wants to come in and meet my parents. All he ever wants is to park and make out. I really like him, Abby. How can I make this a respectable relationship? I feel ashamed and dirty.

AIRES

Even nice girls sometimes act on an impulse, so don't be so quick to put yourself down. You can make your relationship respectable by telling the boy that you (a) are through sneaking around to meet him, (b) insisting that he meet your parents. If he doesn't agree, lose him. He's only interested in using you.

The bidding:
South West North East
Pass Pass 1 ♣ Pass
2 NT Pass 3 NT Pass Pass Pass
Opening lead: Five of ♣.

Sometimes deciding which suit to develop first is pure guesswork. More often than not, though, there will be a major consideration which dictates your choice.

South's jump to two no trump as a passed hand showed 11-12 points. Obviously, therefore, the bid was not forcing to game. However, with 14 high-card points and good fillers, North's decision to go on to three no trump was eminently sound.

West led a low diamond and declarer played the queen from dummy. This was technically correct—declarer wanted to discover who held the king of diamonds. If East held that card, he would surely cover, for his partner might be leading from a combination that included the jack. So when East followed low, declarer placed West with the king.

Declarer had only six fast tricks, and it was obvious that he had to develop the major suits if he was going to make his contract. He could take finesses in both majors. Which should he tackle first?

Since West was marked with the king of diamonds, it was obviously to declarer's advantage to have West on lead whenever possible to prevent declarer's diamond tenace from being attacked. Therefore, declarer led the jack of spades at trick two, and ran it when East did not cover.

West won the queen of spades and, since he could not continue diamonds, he shifted to a heart. Declarer was not tempted by the finesse—he won the king of hearts and led the ten of spades, running it when East again did not cover.

A spade to the ace brought declarer to his hand and set up the long spade in dummy. Now declarer finessed the jack of hearts. East won and reverted to diamonds, but declarer was home with three heart tricks, three spades, two diamonds and the ace of clubs.

Note that if declarer starts hearts before spades, he will be defeated when East wins the queen and returns a diamond. That sets up West's long suit before his entries have been driven out.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal format. Do they know something you don't? Charles Goren's "Four Deal Bridge" will teach you the strategies and tactics of this fast-paced action game that provides the cure for unending rubbers. At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK

When the story of the courageous women of our times is being written, the Three-Piece Polyester Slack Suit Group will deserve an entire volume.

The TPPSS (may their tribe increase) began as a small, non-violent task force of women who got sick of hemlines going up and down like a yo-yo, so they switched to slacks. When their stomachs strained at the polyester, they added an overblouse and over that a jacket. It was to become the marching uniform of the women who had had it with fashion dictators.

I have not seen my mother's legs in 10 years.

When you think about it, no other group in our times has dared defy the trend-setters from Paris, London, and New York. Their tactics are some of the best in the world. They don't demonstrate, protest, lobby, burn anything, intimidate, or take their cause to the White House. They just ignore whatever fashion goes in or out.

Mother has remained firm but drip-dried through mini-skirts, maxi-coats, vests, gauze, wrap-arounds, layers, jump suits, tents, jumpers, bush jackets, Chinese quilted tops and caftans.

She has weathered wedgies, berets, scarfs, pleats, padded shoulders, cowl collars, satins, denims, pajamas, and signature blouses.

That takes a special kind of guts.

CHINNY CHIN

To firm a double chin, stick out your lower jaw and chin so that your lower front teeth protrude just beyond your upper teeth. Gently rotate your jaw, ten times clockwise, ten counterclockwise.

The other day I said to Mother, "What do you think of the new styles?"

"Tell me what they are and I'll tell you what I think of 'em."

"They're bringing stockings with seams back."

"It's all right if your legs haven't grown together, then they look like they're sectioning off meat at the butcher's."

"Shoulder pads are going to be in and so are culottes."

"That's nice," she said, "come see what I'm making."

On her sewing table was another TPPSS. "Mother, why do you limit yourself to just one style?"

"I'd like to change 'em once in awhile, but if I put the zipper on the side, and tucks in the front, next year some designer would say the zipper has to be in the back and tucks are out. If I tucked the blouse in, next year designers would put it out. The jacket with the big patch pockets would be redesigned to be shorter and with puffed sleeves and the whole suit would be made out of foil or something. If I left the hem at the ankle, some smart-aleck would say it had to drag on the floor. We're hanging in there because we dress to be comfortable."

I wish I had the guts to join her...but I'm weak.

Now these are the makings of the perfect dollhouse and you can almost smell the turkey and pumpkin pie when you see it. This exclusive Victorian dollhouse will make an ideal long-treasured gift for any child. It also is a delight for miniature collectors since it is scaled to the standard 1 1/2 to 1 in. detailed perfection. Don't get visions of unreadable instructions, unwieldy pieces and power tools. This sturdy yet light-weight dollhouse is constructed of 1/2" miniboard and requires no tools other than a knife and glue.

The finished dollhouse measures 20" x 10" x 14" and boasts three rooms, porch, and oval window on the front door. It is easy to handle and carry so you can work on it in your spare time on the kitchen table or in the work room. But you'll have to guard your project carefully so the surprise isn't realized before Christmas morning.

There are times when it is necessary to find the center of a floor, most especially when preparing to install resilient tiles. While there are several ways of doing this, the professional and accurate way is with the use of a chalked string.

Chalked String Recommended For Locating Center Of Floor

You can coat a string with ordinary chalk or you can buy one all set to use. Begin the measuring procedure by marking the centers of the two end walls of the room, using only the main dimensions and ignoring irregularities of contour. Connect these two centers with the chalked string, held taut by attaching each end of it to a nail driven slightly into the floor at the two points you have marked. Be sure not to drive the nails too deeply, as they should extend about one inch above the floor. If the string is tight enough it will leave a chalk mark on the floor as you snap it with your fingers. Do it more than once until it "takes" properly. Now do exactly the same thing on the two other opposite walls. The place where the chalk lines meet will be the center of the room for your purposes. The lines should be at an exact right angle for the proper placement of the starting tiles. To be sure that it is, measure 4 feet from the intersection along one line and make a dot. Then measure 4 feet along the same line but toward the opposite side wall and make another dot. Now measure 3 feet from the center along a line going toward an end wall and make a third dot. When you measure the distance between dots 1 and 3, and between 2 and 3, each should be 5 feet. If they aren't, you have made a mistake somewhere. Sound like a lot of trouble? It isn't. The entire test won't take more than a couple of minutes and it's good insurance against an error that might throw everything out of line. (For the technique of installing resilient floor tiles, send for Andy Lang's floor tile booklet to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, N.Y. 11743, enclosing 25 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.) Once you know the chalk lines are accurate, begin at the point where the chalk lines meet and lay unceremented tiles singly in two rows, one to a side wall, the other to an end wall, stopping in each case when a full tile will not fit. Measure the distance between the wall and the last tile in each row. If the distance is less than 2 inches or more than 8, move the chalk line opposite that wall 4 1/2 inches closer to it. Repeat this procedure on the other row of tiles. Not only are you now assured that you will have borders of equal width, you will find it much easier to cut and place the tiles against the walls.

Firm Base Needed For Tile

By ANDY LANG, Associated Press Writer. Q — We have an old-fashioned type of linoleum in our kitchen. It still is in fairly good condition, although somewhat worn. We are redoing our kitchen and have decided to put down ceramic tile. Can this be laid right over the linoleum? A — No. Because anything that happens to the linoleum in future years will also happen to the tile. For a good result, you will have to take up the old floor covering. Also, if there is no underlayment under the linoleum, it should be installed to give the ceramic tile a firm base. The underlayment can be hardboard or plywood. Ask for it that way. It is made especially for such purposes.

U.S. Postal Service Issuing $2 Stamp

By SYD KRONISH, Associated Press Writer. Don't go into a tizzy when you hear that the U.S. is issuing a new $2 stamp. The rates have not increased that much this year. The new $2 regular postage stamp in the Americana series will be issued in New York City Thursday with first-day ceremonies taking place during the annual National Postage Stamp Show of the American Stamp Dealers Association at the New York Coliseum. Stamps in the Americana series are replacing stamps in the Prominent American Series. The USPS says it expects to complete the Americana series with additional stamps in 1979. The vignette of the new stamp features a kerosene lamp manufactured shortly after the Civil War. The inscription "America's Light Will Shine Over All The Land" complements the lighting-device theme of the stamp. The designer of the stamp, James Schleyer, used a kerosene table lamp owned by his grandmother as the subject for his work. Schleyer also designed the 16-cent Lighthouse stamp. Here are the procedures for ordering first-day cancellations: If you prefer to purchase your own stamps at your local post office and affix them to your own envelope, address them to "First Day Cancellations, Postmaster, New York, N.Y. 10001." The return address should be placed on the right side of the envelope at least 3/4 of an inch from the bottom. No remittance is required. Orders must be postmarked no later than Dec. 1. Should you wish the old method of having the USPS affix the stamps, then you must enclose a money order for $2 (no cash) with your request to "Lamp Stamp, Postmaster, New York, N.Y. 10001" prior to Dec. 1. Scott's 1979 Standard Catalogue, Vol. IV, Countries P-Z (Panama to Zambia) is the biggest — with the most price changes — in the history of this philatelic work. The record total of 46,317 price alterations compares with 31,743 for the 1978 volume. About 1,200 new issues help to enlarge it. Most of the new prices are increases of 15 percent to 50 percent higher in some 19th-century classics of popular European countries. There are some decreases, however. — San Marino, Vatican and Italian Colonies as well as recent stamps of newer countries. According to the new catalogue, Russia leads the parade with 4,547 changes, mostly upward. Spain follows with 3,710 and Switzerland with 3,450. An indication of how stamp prices have increased recently came at an auction in London of British stamps last month where purchasers paid double and triple the catalogue prices. For example, a block of four 1913 unused 1-pound dull blue-green stamps realized about $25,000, nearly double the expected amount, and an unused 1840 Plate 5-Penny Black sold for $8,000 with the estimate at $3,500. Here's a tip for new collectors. When your stamps get stuck either back-to-back or back-to-face, do not attempt to pull them apart. You will ruin the stamps. An old trick is to take a flat cork and float it in a pan of hot water with the stamps on the dry top of the cork. The steam will loose them enough to pull the stamps apart without causing damage, if done carefully. You can use this same method to remove paper from the backs of stamps, especially if you think the colors will be soluble in water.

Work Crews Hurry To Clean Up Oil

FARMINGTON, Utah (AP) — Amoco Co. crews were working around the clock to clean up a 42,000-gallon oil spill in marshy grasslands along the Great Salt Lake, an Amoco spokesman said. Spokesman Richard Murphy said the oil, equivalent to 1,000 barrels, spilled Wednesday when an Amoco pipeline ruptured. He said the oil did not spill into the Great Salt Lake. State and Amoco officials were able to contain the oil shortly after the spill.

Spotlight on Hobbies/Crafts '79 Photography Annual Arrives

By IRVING DESFOR, Associated Press Writer. With the arrival of "Photography Annual 1979" comes the realization that 1978 is on its way out, that it's time to work on our personal photographic holiday cards and finish up this year's vacation albums, negative files and pictures. That must all be tidied up before starting afresh on the clean, blank pages of the New Year. With that good resolution to placate consciences, the chores can be put aside long enough to browse through the 17 portfolios in the Annual gathered by the editors of Popular Photography for the Ziff-Davis publication.

The issue spans a diverse range of viewpoints, from a six-year study of carnival personalities to a spiritual conception of the female form, and from the pick of the year's press pictures to the bizarre trend in color pictures. Editorial director Arthur Goldsmith, who worked on his first Photography Annual in 1952, compared it with the latest publication. "How much photography has changed," he said, "and how little things have changed." In 1952, photography was influenced strongly by pictorialists, photographers who went in for "art for art's sake," beautiful pictures that followed the rules of good paintings. The annual featured mostly strong individual pictures. In 1978, photography is influenced greatly by a different kind of "art for art's sake" photography, much of it originating from contemporary academic teachers with emphasis on abstract expressionism and schools of minimalism and conceptualism. Their work is called fresh, different and innovative. Now only portfolios are shown, no individual pictures. Personally speaking, perhaps I'm a bit old-fashioned. Much of the new expressionism leaves me bewildered and searching for a hidden message. The subject matter often seems pointless and insignificant, the cropping is cruel in the way heads, limbs and bodies are cut off at the edges and finally, why they are printed is another mystery. There's some of it in "Photography Annual 1979," but fortunately it's at a minimum. I find no pleasure, message, or significance in a view of a cropped-off propane tank with leaf shadows, or of a woman's back with her head cut off and cropped at the waist to show only protruding shoulder blades. Now listen to the photographer's explanation when photographing such subjects: "Somewhere en route from the real to the surreal, a mindless, wordless state takes over that connects me to my creative center, and the photographic medium becomes a vehicle for intuitive response, allowing insight past the surface of things." I looked again at the round, spotted blob (propane tank) and the shoulder blades and I fail to see the insight or the intuitive response. But it must be my failure as a viewer, not hers. After all, she did get them published. I did respond, however, to Randal Levenson, who has been photographing carnivals for the past six years. He became friends with the sideshow people and photographed them with respect and dignity. When not working in carnivals, he taught the fine art of platinum printing at seminars at Harvard, McGill University, the University of Toronto and other schools. Levenson is an example of many photographers pursuing documentary work aided by grants from corporations and institutions. Mary Lloyd Estrin is a photographer with a personal commitment, but without a grant. She spent two years photographing people in her home town of Lake Forest, a Chicago suburb.

The Slim Gourmet

When the frost is on the pumpkin, there's a certain chill in the hearts of us poundage-prone types...calorie-laden seasonal sweets are sure to follow! So, this month, a New Jersey reader is the winner of our Slim Gourmet Reader Recipe contest, for her decolorized pumpkin and cranberry treats.

With Thanksgiving just a few short weeks away, you might like to clip and save these winning ideas for the dieters who join your dining table over the holidays.

Mrs. Helen Bielski of Bloomingdale, N.J., has been awarded a $13.95 hardcover copy of my just-published "International Slim Gourmet Cookbook" for timely tips for cutting calories from some Thanksgiving dinner trimmings.

Her first is a delicious and nutritious pumpkin-cheese chiffon made with high-protein, creamy-smooth, part-skim ricotta cheese (the cheese that's usually used in Italian dishes like lasagna). The chiffon is firm enough to be baked in a round pie plate, and cut and served in pie-like wedges...no fattening pastry needed!

Her next recipe is an alternative to sugar-packed commercial cranberry sauce (100 calories a ¼ cup serving). You can make it totally sugar-free for dieters or diabetics by using sugarless gelatin dessert mix and sugar substitute...or low-sugar by using the regular gelatin. To turn Mrs. Bielski's cranberry sauce into a chiffon dessert, beat in some vanilla yogurt, according to her alternate directions, given below.

CHUNKY CRANBERRY SAUCE

4 cups fresh cranberries (1 lb. pkg.)
1 ½ cups water, divided
4-serving pkg. gelatin dessert, regular or sugar-free: raspberry, strawberry or cherry
1 pkg. unflavored gelatin optional: 3 tbsps. sugar, or equivalent sugar substitute

Boil cranberries in 1 cup water 10 minutes. Remove from heat; stir in flavored gelatin.

Soften unflavored gelatin in ½ cup water 1 to 2 minutes. Stir into cranberry mixture. Chill until set. Makes three cups (12 servings) at about 50 calories each, sugar-free; 55 calories each with sugar.

CRANBERRY DESSERT

Prepare cranberry sauce according to preceding directions. When slightly thickened, beat cranberry sauce with 3 cups vanilla yogurt. (4 to 8 tablespoons sugar, or equivalent substitute may be added, if desired.) Chill. Serve as a chiffon dessert, or use as pie or cake filling. Or, use to fill miniature commercial sponge cake tarts. Makes six cups chiffon, 55 calories each ½ cup serving without sugar; 125 calories each with sugar; 85 calories each miniature sponge cake tart.

NO-CRUST PUMPKIN-CHEESE 'PIE'

2 eggs
1 cup part-skim ricotta cheese
¾ cup skim milk
2 cups canned pumpkin, plain
1 tsp. vanilla
½ tsp. salt
1 tsp. cinnamon
½ tsp. nutmeg
optional: 6 tbsps. sugar (or equivalent no-calorie sweetener)

Combine all ingredients in blender or mixer bowl and beat together well.

Pour mixture into a baking dish or deep pie plate, sprayed for no-stick baking.

Bake 1 hour at 350 degrees, or until firm. Chill thoroughly. Slice into pie-shaped wedges. Makes eight servings, 80 calories each without sugar, 115 calories each with sugar.

SWEATER FAVORITES — Shetlands, with their appealing wool softness, are the perennial sweater favorites. These sweaters feature exciting patterns and styling made from Scottish spun and dyed yarn. The classic crew pullover, left, is enriched with an argyle pattern in hand-intarsia. The shirt-neck pullover features a collared v-neckline.

ONE OF FBI'S TOP 10 — Mike Thevis, fugitive pornographer on the FBI's 10-most-wanted list, was captured Thursday in a Bloomfield, Conn., bank. Thevis is being led to a magistrate's hearing in U.S. District Court in Hartford where he was held off without bond. (AP Laserphoto)

Banker Helps Arrest Of Pornography King

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — A pornography king accused of murdering two rivals planned to flee the country with a girlfriend, but a banker's suspicions led to the pair's arrest in a suburban bank, prosecutors say.

At a bond hearing Thursday, U.S. Attorney Richard Blumenthal said Atlanta pornographer Michael Thevis, 46 — on the FBI's 10 most-wanted list — and Jeanette Evans, 40 — a Marietta, Ga., real estate agent — were found Thursday with a car containing $550,000 in cash and seven handguns.

Thevis was arrested in the Bloomfield State Bank, police said. Miss Evans was picked up in the bank parking lot in the car, authorities said. Thevis had been using the alias Arbie J. Evans, which is the name of Miss Evans' brother, Blumenthal said.

Thevis had arranged with the bank Wednesday to withdraw about $85,000 from two recently opened accounts, police said. Checks used to open the accounts had already cleared, but bank president Joseph Gozzo became suspicious "because here's a guy, that nobody seems to know, asking for $85,000 in cash," said Anthony Toce, deputy police chief in Bloomfield.

Police said Thevis' identity was discovered only when authorities checked FBI wanted posters.

Miss Evans is charged with harboring a fugitive. Bail was set for her at $2.5 million, and ordered Thevis held without bail.

The FBI said Thevis, who got into pornography with a single Atlanta bookstore, reportedly built a web of some 238 corporations through which he controlled approximately 40 percent of the country's pornography business.

Until April, when he escaped from temporary custody at a county jail in Indiana, Thevis had been serving an 8 1/2-year sentence for interstate transportation of obscene materials. Agents said that shortly after his escape, he was indicted for the murders in Atlanta of two former employees turned rivals and attempts to kill a government witness.

The witness, Roger Dean Underhill, was killed last month in a daylight am-

Oil Strike May Increase Prices

By RICHARD BLYSTONE
Associated Press Writer

The Iranian oil workers' strike, which has tightened the spigot on a 10th of the world's oil supply, won't affect industrialized Western Europe in the short term, an Associated Press survey indicates.

But the longer-term result could be higher oil prices.

American oil industry spokesmen say the strike won't be felt in the United States for up to eight weeks and possibly not at all if other oil producers increase output.

The United States gets about 5 percent of its total oil, 900,000 barrels a day, from Iran.

A two-week-old strike by most of Iran's 37,000 oilfield and refinery workers has clipped Iran's oil exports, normally about 5 million barrels a day, by 40 percent. The strikers seek an end to martial law and other political concessions as well as wage increases.

A glut this year on world oil markets, increased national stockpiles and a four-to-six-week supply en route to consumers from the Persian Gulf combine to temper the effects of the strike, according to reports from Western capitals.

"Our tankers aren't even home yet," said a spokesman for the Federation of Mineral Oil Trade in Hamburg, West Germany. Germany gets more than 18 percent of its oil from Iran but has stocks that could make up for the missing Iranian supply for almost two years.

Saudi Arabia and Kuwait alone have the capacity to make up more than half the missing Iranian oil.

Even Israel, which cannot hope for oil from the Arabs, says it is not worried. After diversifying its sources to include more African and Latin American oil, Israel gets about half its supply from the Moslem but non-Arab Iranians.

Besides having stockpiles believed good for up to six months, Israel has a guaranteed supply from America. The U.S. pledge was made when Israel gave Egypt back the Abu Rudeis fields in Sinai in 1975.

In Paris, an official of the International Energy Agency who did not want his name used said: "All the winter oil supplies have already left Iran."

He said the IEA, established after the 1973-74 oil crisis, has no plans to trigger its emergency plan for sharing oil among its 19 major-consumer members.

The strike is costing Iran an estimated $60 million a day. He said it is in Iran's interest to get the flow started again.

In France, where 10 percent of imported oil is Iranian, Industry Minister Andre Girard says the country's 90-day strategic stockpile could enable it to carry on for 30 months without Iranian supplies.

"If the strike lasts longer than three months, the situation will get very complicated," Nicolas Sarkis, director of the Arab Center for Oil Research, said Tuesday in Brazil.

A British oil industry source who requested anonymity said of his country's situation: "You're looking at a period of maybe three weeks before things really get more difficult." About 14 percent of Britain's imported oil is Iranian.

State-owned British Petroleum's spokesman Michael O'Hanlon said, "The only thing we've done so far is put out a letter warning customers there may be a possibility of a shortfall in the fourth quarter."

"Everybody is waiting for a price increase as of Jan. 1, and oil companies have stockpiled. Thus the stock situation is far better than normally," said Lars Pehrzon, spokesman for the Petroleum Institute of Sweden. Fifteen percent of Sweden's imports are from Iran.

Norway, with newly tapped North Sea oil resources, will use that oil to make up for the 43 percent of imports that come from Iran, said Energy Ministry official Erik Himle.

The most serious effect of the strike appears to be on new oil prices to be set by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries next month.

U.S. Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger said in Tokyo Tuesday that if Iranian disturbances last several months "there would be a marked impact on availability and on price."

Saudi Arabia has suggested a 5 percent increase in oil prices, but other producers are pushing for 10 percent or more.

A 10 percent increase would increase gasoline prices in the United States by about a cent a gallon. The OPEC price for crude oil now is $12.70 per 42-gallon barrel.

A reduction in the world surplus likely would strengthen the hand of OPEC hard-liners such as Iraq and Algeria who favor large price increases and mean the loss of Iran's support for moderation. Iran normally follows the recommendations of the powerful but moderate Saudis.

Files On FBI Break-Ins Still Intact

WASHINGTON (UPI) — FBI files on the bureau's illegal break-ins during the early 1970s are "intact" and 47 file folders destroyed by a top agent two years ago were mostly duplicates of official documents, federal prosecutors say.

In a federal court brief, prosecutors contended Thursday none of the files that were lost was critical enough to justify dismissal of conspiracy charges against former FBI Director L. Patrick Gray and two of his top lieutenants.

Gray, W. Mark Felt, former No. 3 man at the bureau, and former FBI intelligence chief Edward S. Miller are to stand trial Jan. 22 on charges they authorized warrantless surveillance in an effort to track fugitive members of the radical Weatherman group.

Defense lawyers have asked a federal judge to dismiss the charges on grounds the missing files may have exonerated their clients.

Chief U.S. District Judge William Bryant set a hearing next Thursday to consider the motions, and to get a further explanation of the contents of the missing documents.

Prosecutors Barnett Skolnik and Francis Martin denied the documents were destroyed in an effort to hide evidence clearing the defendants.

They said Robert Shackelford, the now-retired FBI section chief who destroyed the documents in 1976, "was himself a subject of the then ongoing criminal investigation" into surveillance of friends and relatives of the radical Weatherman group.

Skolnik and Martin said the files Shackelford destroyed were "for the most part what are referred to as 'tickler' files — that is, files containing copies of documents, the originals of which are in official files."

"All of the official FBI files on the Weatherman are fully intact and available to the defense," they wrote.

The first American daily newspaper, the Pennsylvania Evening Post and Daily Advertiser, began publishing in 1783.

Presidency Lonely Job, Carter Tells FFA Group

By BROOKS JACKSON

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — President Carter has found the old saying true: It is hard and lonely at the top.

Ridicule and scorn are the risk of failure, and continued criticism is the reward for progress. Hard work and tenacity are the keys.

Leadership would be easier if the nation were in crisis, or if he could satisfy himself with half-baked decisions.

Life used to be a lot simpler back on the farm.

For the first time since his political popularity was reborn in the Camp David summit, Carter spoke publicly at length Thursday about his thoughts on himself and the presidency.

For 27 minutes he delivered his soliloquy to a rapt audience of several thousand rural youths, delegates to the national convention of Future Farmers of America.

It was a sort of homecoming.

As a boy, Carter was secretary of the FFA chapter in Plains, Ga., when the organization was but seven years old. Now he was congratulating the national group in its 50th year.

"The first thing I joined in my life was the Baptist Church," Carter recalled. "The second thing I joined in my life was the FFA."

Carter is the first FFA member to become president, and the delegates gave him a loud ovation when he arrived at the 12,000-seat Municipal Auditorium, which was jammed with youths wearing the gold-lettered blue windbreakers which are the FFA uniform.

In the balconies, hundreds of flash cameras popped in a brilliant staccato as the president spoke, using no notes, and sometimes clutching both fists in his emotional intensity.

He spoke of his youth, of the problems of leadership and of his occasional loneliness and frustration.

Here are excerpts:

—On leadership. "As a young man, and as president, I have learned some things about leadership. One is that the fear of failure is one of the greatest obstacles to progress. How timid we are when we challenge some obstacle or engage in some contest or set a high goal for ourselves. How timid we are that we might fail in the effort and perhaps be the subject of ridicule or criticism or scorn."

—On controlling inflation. "There is no way to win because when you try to control inflation, control spending, it is inevitable that you aggravate very fine special interest groups, perhaps students, perhaps farmers, perhaps the aged, perhaps some who are unemployed, because there has to be a limit to federal spending ..."

—"Even when you are successful partially ... you become identified with not necessarily the solution, but you become identified with the remaining portion of the problem."

—On pleasing everybody. "It is always a mistake to try for universal approbation, universal approval, because if you fear making anyone mad, then you ultimately probe for the lowest common denominator of human achievement."

—On the loneliness of command. "The most difficult decisions of all, the toughest decisions almost invariably, I have found, must be made alone."

—On the need for hard work. "As a candidate, as a young leader, and now as president, I have also found that there is absolutely no substitute for detailed knowledge, nor for hard work. I planned my presidential campaign for two years before I made my plans public, and I campaigned, I and my family and many helpers, for two more years ..."

"Only with tenacity and knowledge and hard work can any achievement be reached. I have never seen an exception to this, at least in my own life."

—On crisis. "I have found it much more difficult to be a leader in a time of calm than in a time of crisis. Leaders are very popular in a time of crisis, because it is easy to arouse support for the interests of those who are concerned with the crisis itself. But to take action to prevent a future crisis that can't be easily detected nor proven is a very difficult task indeed."

—On chauvinism. "It is very difficult for Americans to realize that we are not superior to other people."

—On an informed public. "The font of power in our country rests in an informed public. An informed public, a public that is aware of the alternatives that we have available to us, to explore those alternatives through open debate, through democratic processes, through freedom of speech and then shape common goals that are worthy of a great nation like our own."

—On his youth. "In 1937, when I joined the FFA, farm life was much more similar to farm life in the time of Christ or the time of pharaohs thousands of years ago than it was similar to farming today."

"We had no tractors on our farm. We had no hybrid seed to plant. Fertilizers were very limited ... We had no indoor plumbing. We had no running water."

"We didn't have electricity until I was 14 years old. Our life was confined to a tiny community. At the center of my own existence was my family: close-knit, mutually dependent on one another. Americans were not mobile then. It was a very rare occasion for a family to move. How different it is today."

Bilingual Meet Set Saturday

Teachers, administrators and university students will meet Saturday at the Texas Tech University Center for the second annual West Texas Bilingual Education Conference.

Keynoting the conference will be Charles Miller from the U.S. Office of Bilingual Education, who will discuss recent changes in bilingual education on the national level and where it is headed.

The gathering, using the theme "Success for the Bilingual Child," will feature several presentations from experts throughout the state addressing the topics in bilingual education based on identified needs. These sessions will emphasize instructional methods, classroom management and new approaches to teaching the bilingual child.

Participants are asked to register for the conference, which is free, at 8:30 a.m. Sessions are scheduled to run until 4 p.m.

Carter Faces More Conservative Congress

By WALTER R. MEARS

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is going to have to get along with a more conservative Congress, but on a good many issues he may not find it all that difficult.

If the Senate is a bit more conservative than it used to be, so is Carter, by his own account.

He'll get no argument from conservatives on his call for government austerity, his promise to veto what he regards as excessive spending and his vows to cut the federal budget deficit.

There will inevitably be ample argument about where to cut spending, but Carter may be debating that with liberals in his own Democratic Party about as often as with the Republicans.

So Carter the economist is likely to find the new Congress a compatible one. After all, it wasn't only conservative Republicans who told the voters they would put the brakes on government spending. Democrats did, too.

It's Carter the would-be reformer who is likely to have trouble. His plans for tax and welfare overhauls, and for labor legislation, founded in the last Congress, and will have less of a chance next time.

He may also have difficulties on foreign policy, notably on a new Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty with the Soviet Union, since the election cost him some key Senate allies on that issue.

Still, it is worth noting that an Associated Press-NBC News poll showed 70 percent of the voters favor a new SALT treaty. That isn't likely to budge ardent conservatives who don't want to deal with the Russians, but if the public support holds, it will spare wavering senators the political agony that went with that difficult.

Analysis

the Panama Canal treaties. Even now, the voters line up 50 percent to 37 percent against the canal deal.

"I think the Democrats did fairly well on a nationwide basis," Carter said Thursday in appraising the mid-term elections. He said there was general approval of Democrats and their policies.

Carter noted that the Democrats emerged holding more than 60 percent of House seats and about 60 percent in the Senate.

The new lineups apparently will be 276 Democrats and 159 Republicans in the House, a gain of 13 seats for the GOP, and 59 to 41 in the Senate, a three-seat Republican gain.

That's a handy way of keeping score, but it really doesn't mean very much. Those party lines will be solid only on the question of organizing the new Congress. Once House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. and Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd have been re-elected and committee lineups have been set, party affiliation will have more to do with where the members sit than how they vote.

Republicans go to the right of the aisle, Democrats to the left. But the days of party discipline in Congress are long gone. Carter and his lobbyists must put together coalitions, with votes from both sides, to get approval of administration proposals, and the coalitions vary depending on the issue.

The temper of the new Congress will be troublesome for Carter when he tries again to match 1976 campaign promises for an overhaul of the tax code and the welfare system, or proposes energy or labor legislation.

Furthermore, the elections probably cost the administration three votes for a new SALT treaty with the Soviet Union, which would have to be ratified by two-thirds of the Senate.

Carter said he always expected a tough fight on that issue, but does not think it will be a partisan matter.

The president said he thinks a well-balanced treaty that protects U.S. interests would be supported by both Republicans and Democrats, liberals and conservatives.

He's probably right, but that is not the way the question will be put. Carter faces an enlarged cadre of conservative senators who won't be convinced that the Russians can be trusted, that the treaty terms are right, or that the administration can negotiate a deal that adequately guards American security.

Unloading Of Oil Tanker Begins

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Pumping operations began today to unload some of the 20 million gallons of crude oil from the Norwegian tanker Evita aground near the mouth of the Mississippi River, the Coast Guard said.

The 918-foot Evita ran onto a mud flat near dawn Thursday in Southwest Pass, blocking part of the main river channel.

Other large vessels were forced to use other entrances to the river.

Three tugs failed to free the ship Thursday, and some of its cargo was to be pumped into barges in efforts to lighten it enough to refloat it.

The Coast Guard said there was no damage when the Evita hit the mud flat, and no oil leak.

The ship was bound upriver for St. James Parish, about 30 miles upstream from New Orleans.

Southwest Pass is some 75 miles south of New Orleans. The Evita ran aground only minutes before two cargo carriers collided on a foggy stretch of the river near New Orleans.

Celebrities Praise Former First Lady

By JURATE KAZICKAS
NEW YORK (AP) — Henry Kissinger said Betty Ford "gave class to the White House." Flip Wilson called her "First Mama" and Tony Orlando said it doesn't "take cosmetic surgery to make a beautiful woman."

The accolades poured in for Betty Ford, wife of former President Gerald R. Ford, guest of honor Thursday night at a black tie dinner celebrating publication of her autobiography, "The Times of My Life."

Her recent facelift was the No. 1 topic of conversation as Mrs. Ford, in a chiffon dress of sunset hues, circled the hotel ballroom. Some 200 people turned out, including Nelson and Happy Rockefeller, Mrs. Bob Hope and Art Buchwald.

"I think she looks beautiful, but then I thought she was beautiful before," said Ford.

"She has done a fabulous public relations job for plastic surgery," said Princess Luciana Pignatelli Avedon, who has had her nose and eyes surgically altered. "I look at it as a form of upkeep. When your house needs repairs, you fix it, so why not repair your face? It's the opposite of being a slob."

"She looks exquisite," said Mrs.

George Feldman, whose husband is a former ambassador to Malta and Luxembourg. "She has always been a beautiful person inside but this has been a great lift for her, so to speak."

Former Secretary of State Kissinger, who served as master of ceremonies, in a lengthy repartee — mostly about himself — said, "Betty Ford and I have a lot in common — an uncommon reluctance to see our name in print."

He spoke of his forthcoming book, saying he opened with the words, "I was born in a log chalet that my father built," a parody of the first sentence of Richard Nixon's memoirs.

The mostly Republican gathering laughed when Kissinger declared that there was no truth to stories that the Republican party was dying. The Young Republicans had doubled their membership, he said, since raising their minimum age to 70.

Later, Mrs. Ford danced a soft shoe with Pearl Bailey, who said, "Your book is about the times of all our lives."

Orlando, the entertainer who suffered a nervous breakdown last year, said Mrs. Ford was "a constant light of hope for me. When I asked her, 'What do I say?' she said, 'Tell the people the truth.'"

As Orlando sang "You Are Beautiful," Mrs. Ford danced with her husband.

She kissed him, saying, "That's where my strength is."

Charge Filed Over Firing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Northwestern University has 20 days to appeal a federal accusation that it fired a qualified employee because she had cancer.

The Labor Department alleged Thursday that the university dismissed technical researcher Mary L. McLane in 1976 shortly after she returned to work following a cancer operation. Northwestern contends the woman was not qualified for the job because she lacked strong secretarial skills.

But the Labor Department said the woman had been given a satisfactory job evaluation three months before her operation and secretarial skills were not included on the original job description.

"In this case, equal job opportunity was denied to a qualified employee because of an unrelated handicap," said Weidon J. Rougeau, director of the Labor Department's Office of Federal Contract Compliance Programs.

Northwestern could lose more than $500,000 in federal research contracts and be barred from consideration of future contracts if the charge is upheld. An appeal by the university would be heard by an administrative law judge.

Roots Of Gardening Run Centuries Deep

By GREGORY JENSEN
 LONDON (UPI) — When winter returns, tens of millions of enthusiasts will dig into gardening, a hobby whose antiquity would astonish most of them.

Gardens and gardening, says Anthony Huxley, have been with us for at least 3,500 years. More than that, he says, nearly every tool and technique used today, every gardening idea and notion, has roots thousands of years deep.

"The student of the ways and means of gardening cannot fail to be amazed by how little is really new and how much is astonishingly old."

Huxley's massive new "An Illustrated History of Gardening" leaves the conviction that there's nothing new under the gardening sun. The British edition was published recently in association with Britain's Royal Horticultural Society and the American edition by New York-based Paddington Press (distributed by Grosset & Dunlap $24.95).

Huxley's is not a "how-to" book, but its blend of scholarship and delightful incidental information should appeal to the amazing number of people who give in to that "instinctive urge to have plants around."

He says 51 percent of American households "carry out some gardening" this means roughly 80 million gardeners.

In Britain "80 percent of all households have some kind of private garden" and other countries are not far behind — 70 percent in Ireland, 67 percent in Holland, 63 percent in Denmark.

Huxley, a member of a world famous scientific and literary family, says apart from plows "we can trace our gardening tools right back to the bone-digging implements of later Paleolithic times, from 40,000 B.C."

The ancient Egyptians used tools and techniques still in everyday use. Homer wrote about gardening. Ancient Romans, like today's city dwellers, "grew plants on windowsills, balconies and roofs."

"In recalling primitive beginnings of cultivation, one is reminded of man's constant instinctive urge to have plants around him, to select those that are most attractive to him, and to grow them to the best of his ability," Huxley says.

"Our gardens are echoes of the primal green world in which our ancestors lived and evolved, a world which we are

Experts Give Gardeners Advice

By EARL ARONSON
 Associated Press Writer
 "The world's longing for natural greenery is greater than ever before."

That's what F. Leon Herron Jr. said as O.M. Scott & Sons dedicated a new research center at Marysville, Ohio, in 1977. Greenery is the company's business and 100 researchers — pathologists, chemists, entomologists, agronomists, chemical engineers and geneticists — are working at the center to help make and keep things green.

During a recent tour of the facilities, some of these experts offered advice for the home lawnkeeper and gardener. For instance:

Grass response to slow-release fertilizers depends on the weather, rainfall, soil temperature and soil moisture. Some weeds don't come under control in the spring and return in the fall. Fall application of weed killers knocks out weeds or sets them back, and winter adds another blow to them.

Apply weed control in the morning when the dew is heavy and don't water for 24 hours. Fertilize at any time. If you have a thick turf you have less trouble with weeds.

If you overfeed your lawn, leaf spot and crown rot can result.

Testing is under way on house plants for growth regulators to control insect hormones, and thus the ravages by insects. Ferns, very sensitive, are being used in testing insecticides.

Drastic changes in light intensity could kill plants. Move them gradually to the light.

In seeking long-lasting, long-working plant food, one that costs several hundred dollars a pound has been developed, but not many would buy it at that price.

One objective is to develop a grass that does not need much mowing. But much of the beauty of a lawn is in the neat, fresh cut.

What do you consider a "perfect grass?" It should be disease resistant; respond to mowing heights; blend with other grasses and have an attractive color and texture. Other factors include how it responds to low or high fertility, how hardy it is under rough conditions, how much seed it produces and how it performs all year.

In adding seed to an established lawn, the gardener should make sure the new seed makes contact with the soil. Don't let it dry out. You can't revive dead seed.

Grass seed you don't plant this season will last a while — Bluegrass 8-10 years in a controlled, cool, dry environment, otherwise 2-3 years; fescue and rye not as long.

There are six million seeds in three pounds of Kentucky Bluegrass; one million in two pounds of rye grass. Bluegrass provides many more seeds for the money and will last many years longer. Stay away from junk stuff, advised Dale Kern, president of the independent, unaffiliated Seed Technology Inc.

A "season long" fertilizer is being testing in Minneapolis market. Use a fertilizer that has ball particles the same size for even release of ingredients, for even feeding.

If you fed your lawn only once a season when would you apply? Early in the fall. Twice? Spring and fall.

Don't blame thatch for all your lawn problems. Thatch is detached portions of plants that have not been broken down quickly enough by nature. Lawns that thatch need more water than others because they dry out more quickly. They are more prone to disease.

In 1977, Scott consumer services had 209,000 inquiries from the public; through May this year 141,000. These included 17,

Adultery Troubles Navy

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Adultery is a big problem for sailors and is "one of the things that busts up the Navy family," says retired Rear Adm. Jeremiah Denton Jr.

Denton, a former prisoner of war in Vietnam and former commandant of the Armed Forces Staff College, told a Navy family awareness conference Wednesday that the Navy should be more candid about its family problems.

"One of the things that busts up the Navy family is adultery," he said. "Let's talk about it. Let's talk about it before you go on a cruise. That's really a major Navy problem, so let's have the guts to discuss it."

Denton said that when sailors go to sea, the separation causes temptation for both the men and their wives. This is aggravated, he said, by suggestive literature and movies, and that such material shouldn't be circulated on ships.

"That's not censorship," he said. "To allow that stuff is just to underline deprivation in an already deprivational situation."

The conference, the first of its kind in the Navy, is designed to help improve the lot of Navy men and women and their families.

Also speaking was Navy Secretary W.

Graham Claytor Jr., who said sailors returning from long cruises no longer can be ordered to work 72 hours a week "getting ready for some inspection or additional commitment."

The extra work "understandably destroys morale. ... In wartime or where there's a real emergency, it's necessary and understood," said Claytor.

"In peacetime, however, it's just plain unacceptable and will drive many of our best people out of the Navy."

Claytor said the 72-hour week should not be imposed except in emergencies.

Rock Magazine Sees Success

By LeROY POPE
NEW YORK (UPI) — If the great rock music era that began 25 years ago doesn't suddenly fade, Richard Branciforte should be a rich man someday.

Even if rock music gives way to something much mellower and tamer, Branciforte, who is 32, still might make the big time. He hasn't done at all badly riding the rock music tide with a free distribution semi-monthly entertainment newspaper called Good Times since graduating from Columbia's graduate school of business 10 years ago.

He was holding down a dull sort of MBA status job with American Telephone & Telegraph Corp. and remembering all the fun he had had editing The Castle, an independent undergraduate social activities journal on the campus of Queens College.

He decided he wanted to get into journalism but he also decided that profitable new journalistic ventures have to be very special in orientation, have free distribution and be geared to very high volume advertising. So he started a local rock music monthly on Long Island called Action World.

Others had the same idea. Scores of small newspapers and magazines, some free distribution and some for newsstand sale, cropped up around the country. But Branciforte was the one to see that such a paper had to be both extremely comprehensive and very sophisticated technically, politically and psychologically if it was to grow.

Changing the name of Action World to Good Times in 1972 was one of Branciforte's best strokes. The title was broad enough to cover many phases of entertainment and to appeal to restaurants, small night clubs and similar establishments from which a lot of the advertising had to come.

Good Times now is published in three editions, for the greater New York market, south Florida and parts of Ohio. It has a circulation about 100,000 and grossed $500,000 last year.

It publishes around 88 pages every two weeks. The printing is contracted out. The advertising solicitors are salaried; the writers both salaried and free lance.

The paper reviews films and local stage efforts as well as music groups and recordings and devotes a lot of space to feature stories about young rock performers and other entertainers around the country. It is distributed at music stores, clubs, movie theaters, restaurants and the kind of clothing shops that draw pop music lovers.

Branciforte now has a definite plan for a coast-to-coast circulation of about 850,000 with 16 editions in nine states by 1982. He says that should bring in revenues of $4 million. Key to getting the big plan rolling is launching a Los Angeles edition.

"That will cost at least $183,000 whereas the average cost of launching the other editions was only $25,000," he said.

"But the California edition will require printing out on the coast instead of the Roslyn, N.Y., headquarters," he said, and it will have to have more local business and editorial employees.

Branciforte has set next June as the debut target for the Los Angeles edition. Other cities where he hopes to launch new editions of Good Times comparatively soon are Savannah, Orlando and Tampa (the present Florida edition is geared to Miami and Fort Lauderdale), the Denver-Boulder region in Colorado and Charleston, S.C.

HAPPY 30TH MERRY YOUNG

Cost Of Driving Figures Released

WASHINGTON (AP) — It cost an average of 19.8 cents per mile to own and operate an intermediate-sized car during the third quarter of the year, according to the American Automobile Association's quarterly study on the cost of driving.

The third-quarter report compares with 19.6 cents per mile for the first half of 1978. The increase of two-tenths of one cent per mile would mean an additional $20 per year for the motorist who drives 10,000 miles a year. It reflects rising gasoline prices and insurance costs, the association said.

FORD'S FUTURE
HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Harrison Ford, who rose to fame from obscurity playing Han Solo in "Star Wars," will star in "No Knife" for Warner Bros. on locations in Colorado and Arizona.

CHRISTMAS OPEN HOUSE

THE ORIGINAL CHRISTMAS PLACE
CHRISTMAS

Holland Gardens' ORIGINAL CHRISTMAS PLACE becomes a Christmas fairylane tonight at 6:30. The store is expanded... bigger and even more beautiful than ever before. We've spent the last TWELVE months shopping the markets of the world to bring you what we believe is the most complete display of Christmas decorations ANYWHERE! Over 15,000 hours of labor, a labor of love, went into putting it all together for you. From OUR HOUSE TO YOURS... we're delighted to invite you and your family to our very special OPEN HOUSE for 1978.

MORE THAN 80,000 PEOPLE visited our ORIGINAL CHRISTMAS PLACE the past three holiday seasons. They came to see a fairylane. A Christmas wonderland. A land of pure enchantment. A place where "visions of sugarplums" danced to life. Where fantasy and frivolity were found nestled right next to old fashioned Christmas memories. Our visitors saw scores of decorated trees. They saw items from virtually every nook and cranny of the world. Ornaments this season include those hand-made of wood, spun glass, china, silk, stained glass, paper, dough, brass, straw, leaded glass, velvet, feather, and other materials. Come see our fabulous fairylane. Share a memory!

- SEE A Fantasyland of animated figures to delight all ages.
- SEE Thick and lush tinsel garland made especially for us!
- SEE Trees from one to 12 feet tall, many fully decorated.
- SEE Poly garlands and picks in hundreds of varieties.

Valuable Coupons
Special money-saving COUPONS and CHRISTMAS IDEAS will be given to everyone who attends OPEN HOUSE!

SANTA CLAUS
The JOLLY OLD GENTLEMAN will be here to talk to the children and see what's on their list for Christmas. Santa loves to pass out Candy Canes. PARENTS... bring your cameras.

Refreshments
There's always room for steaming hot OLD SAN FRANCISCO CINNAMON ORANGE TEA, a favorite Christmas drink. Enjoy JACK & JILL DONUT HOLES made from their famous "secret recipe", too!

Door Prizes
REGISTER FOR DOOR PRIZES which include ELVIS CHRISTMAS ALBUMS, poinsettias, freshcut & flocked Christmas trees and other Christmas items. Winners will be announced in next week's newspaper.

I'm afraid all this joy and good-will is finally going to get to old SCROOGE after all.

Mats Try Levelland; Eagles Host NMMI

By BOB BAJACKSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

The way Estacado coach Louis Kelley tells it, the Dunbar Panthers did his Matadors a big disservice.

Now, before you dig your paper out of the trash to check, the score is correct. Estacado blanked Dunbar 28-0.

So, what's the problem?

Well, according to Kelley, it goes back a lot further than last Saturday. In fact, back to the Panthers' first district encounter. Dunbar opened the loop race against Levelland.

"By beating Dunbar as bad as they did (27-9), Levelland got generated momentum," said Kelley. "Yep, that's what got them started."

And tonight, the Matadors host Levelland at Lowrey field, beginning at 7:30 p.m.

It doesn't take a genius to realize that the Matador coach had made a proper assessment once the Lobos' past football fortunes had been revealed.

Until this season, all of Levelland's recent gridiron accomplishments had been few. In fact, a Lobo district win has been as rare as finding water on the South Plains: Levelland hadn't been able to accomplish the feat the last two seasons.

But then the Lobos drubbed the Panthers and now Levelland is still in the district title chase.

The Lobos sport a 2-1 mark in 1-AAA and are 4-4 on the season. Meanwhile, Estacado and Canyon lead the pack with 3-0 district marks. The Matadors will also put a seven-game winning streak on the line. Estacado is 7-1 on the season.

"I'd agree with Kelley's assessment that the Dunbar win put us on the right road," said Levelland coach Bert Gravitt. "But to have a shot at the district title, we're going to have to beat Estacado and then get some help."

Other city high school football action, will have Dunbar at Berger, Lubbock High visiting Plainview, Lubbock Christian entertaining New Mexico Military Institute and Western Hills Baptist Academy trying to spoil Grace Christian's championship hopes in Amarillo.

Two schools, Monterey and Christ the King, have the week off.

Although, there is a lot at stake, the Matador mentor isn't hiding his game plan.

"We're doing the same thing we've been doing all year," said Kelley. "That's run the sweep, trap, dive, lead and throw some."

But Gravitt may alter the Lobos' offensive plans just a bit.

"I really believe to beat Estacado, we're going to have to throw the ball more," said the Lobo coach. "Against Dunbar, we put the football in the air twice and scored two touchdowns. Then, against Dumas, we threw three times for three scores."

Both coaches have their philosophies on stopping each others' offenses.

"Their quarterback, No. 13 (Rob Williams) is an excellent passer," said Kelley. "And we're going to have to stop Sanchez (Jesse). He's a real go getter."

And as for Gravitt...

"No question, we're going to have to stop Kevin White," said the Lobo coach.

"White has good speed and we're going to have to stop him from turning the corner if we're going to have a shot of winning."

Championship Tilts Abound

By RUSS PARSONS
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

With only two weeks left in the regular season, there are still a bunch of district races undecided. But that number should go down considerably after tonight.

There are key showdowns all over the area and more than one district championship game on tap.

Leading off the list of matchups is Fort Stockton and Andrews.

Fort Stockton, if you've been in a cave all season, has yet to allow a point. The Panthers, with a shiny new 8-0 record after last weekend's 21-0 win over Pecos, will fight Andrews for the District 2-AAA championship.

The Mustangs are 2-0 in district but have lost twice (to Snyder and to Kermit) in the regular season. But don't think the Panthers are going to take them lightly.

"We felt like that in this district there were going to be two teams we were going to have to beat," head coach John Blocker said. We beat one of them last weekend and we play the other tomorrow night (tonight)."

And it won't be easy.

"Shoot, ol' Andrews is tough," Blocker said. "They're just as tough as they can be."

Folks down around Fort Stockton are so excited they're answering the phone "Beat Andrews" at the high school. With all the hoopla surrounding their defense, you might expect them to say "Shut 'Em Out."

"We're not worrying about that," Blocker said. "We're just playing to win. It seems to be a bigger deal to everybody else. But I think somebody's going to score on us — by accident or by design."

"Some people don't believe me when I say it's not that big a deal," he continued, "but it's the honest-to-God truth."

There's another biggun going on down in Seminole.

Slaton, 4-1 in District 5-AA, travels to meet the Indians, also 4-1, in a game that should eliminate the loser from contention in the crowded district.

As of this morning, there are three teams tied for first. In addition to Slaton and Seminole, Frenship is also 4-1 and has already beaten Slaton.

But the Indians beat Frenship and a win tonight would just about lock up the district. The only way it wouldn't is if Frenship won both of its remaining games while Seminole lost to Cooper (0-5 and only 6 points scored in loop play) next weekend.

And if it didn't seem so improbable, one could almost suspect Seminole boss David Bornstein of a little germ warfare.

"We've got a bug going through our place," said his opposite number, Slaton coach Ed Cook. "All of our kids have been out at least a day but I don't think it will bother us. They were all back today. I didn't say they practiced. I said they were back."

"They're coming down out of AAA," Cook said. "They've got a real good program. They've got good size and they've got 13 or 14 coaches. We're not blessed with that many."

"We're going to have to play good sound football to beat them," Bornstein said. "They have several good running-backs, (Quarterback Ricky) Davis is exceptional."

Cook's prescription is strangely similar.

"We're going to have to stop their running," he said. "Like I said, they've got good size."

"I think we can run what we've been running on them. It's worked in the past and it's worked so far this year."

"We just need to execute well. That will be the key. And no turnovers. We've got to cut down on turnovers."

Down in Seagraves, the Eagles will be meeting Stanton for the District 5-A championship.

And pushing Seagraves along is a No. 1 ranking in the United Press International's Class A state poll. That might be important to the townspeople, but defense is what has gotten the Eagles this far.

So far Seagraves has given up exactly 24 points. That's in eight games.

All of the area Class B races are settled and this week there's nothing but tune-ups for next weekend's bi-district play-offs.

Amherst will meet Valley for the District 2-B crown while Wilson faces Jayton for the 3-B championship. In six-man action, it looks like Cotton Center will play Vernon Northside in the first round of the playoffs.

Hereford Trips Ponies, Hands Title To PHS

By JIM FERGUSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Little did Greg Sherwood know when he came to Lowrey Field Thursday night that he'd walk away with at least a share of the District 4-AAAA title.

But that's what happened, folks.

And what makes things even kinkier, is the Plainview head coach just sat and watched; maybe taking a note or two along the way.

Hereford may have beaten Coronado 13-9 in high school football action, but it was Sherwood and his Plainview Bulldogs that came out the real winner. You see, a Hereford victory meant that all Plainview has to do now is beat Lubbock High tonight and the loop crown is their's outright—no questions asked.

"We've got to beat Lubbock before it's really ours," said Sherwood, knowing full well the Bulldogs are heavy favorites to do just that.

If Lubbock High does pull an upset, Plainview—the only unbeaten team in the district—can still clinch the title by beating Coronado on the final night of action.

Asked if he was glad Hereford had upset the Mustangs, nixing a possible showdown for the crown, Sherwood smiled and said: "I'd be crazy if I wasn't."

An out-and-out looney tune, most would probably say.

Coronado, which had everything to lose going into the game, managed only a 35-yard field goal from quarterback Richard Davis and a 13-yard pass from Alan Harp to Russell Murrell against a surprisingly stout HHS defense that held their hosts to only 138 total yards.

But those two CHS scores just weren't enough to offset a pair of 26-yard field goals by Herd signal caller Jackie Mercer and a 9-yard scamper for a touchdown by running back Paul Bell.

"I was extremely pleased with the play of our defense," said CHS head coach Jack Quarles. "I thought they played a heck of a game. We knew what we needed to do against them and I felt we did it on defense."

The problem was Coronado, which was limited to only 8 points last week in a loss to Monterey, couldn't get untracked on offense. Harp's TD pass came with 21 seconds left in the game after HHS had already built a comfortable 13-3 lead.

In the first quarter alone, Hereford turned the ball over its first three possessions. However, Coronado could only get three points—the field goal by Davis which gave CHS a 3-0 lead—despite the excellent field position.

On Hereford's second play of the night, Mercer fumbled the ball away to linebacker Steve Cox, putting the Mustangs in good shape at the HHS 49. But Coronado was unable to move and punted it away.

After taking the punt, Hereford again lost the ball—this time by Bell. Again Cox was the man of the hour, hopping on the lose ball. However a 36-yard field goal attempt by Davis was well short of its mark.

Finally, after Eric Santos intercepted a Coronado pass and returned it to the HHS 4, Coronado was able to cash in as Davis' second attempt of the night was on target.

It appeared that the Mustangs were content to take a 3-0 lead into the locker-room at haltime, but the Herd, which had a hard time mounting anything that resembled a drive for much of the night, wasn't.

A 64-yard run by Bell, the game's leading carrier with 110 yards on 25 totes, moved the ball all the way down to the 16, setting up Mercer's first field goal. Before the 20-yarder, Hereford did get to the 1 before the CHS defense stiffened, forcing Mercer to come on with only a couple of ticks left.

Only a last-ditch effort by Cox kept Bell out of the end zone as he was able to catch up to the Whiteface speedster and push him out of bounds.

Using a 52-yard punt return by Robert Graves, Hereford moved into field goal range again with 11:19 left in the game. Again Mercer, who had a hard time in the passing department as he connected only three-of-11 tosses for 29 yards, came in, upping HHS' lead to 6-3 with a perfect kick.

Both teams scored their only TDs late in the game. But by that time the game had been decided.

Coronado stands 4-5 overall and 1-2 in loop play, while Hereford is 3-5-1 and 1-1-1.

The Mustangs end their season against Plainview next week. Meanwhile, Hereford hosts Monterey in its season finale.

Dooley Denies Leaving Georgia

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — University of Georgia football Coach Vince Dooley has denied reports that he is unhappy and would accept offers from other schools.

Dooley issued a joint statement with university officials Thursday to quell the rumors.

"The University of Georgia is my home and my future," he said. "I plan to be in Athens for several years to come."

Reports have said Dooley was unhappy with a proposal that would make him share the athletic director's job with another person after Joel Eaves retires.

Evangelista Tries To Take Holmes' WBC Crown

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Larry Holmes, who for much of the week has had to share attention with the great Joe

HE'S CONFIDENT — Spain's Alfredo Evangelista indicates victory Thursday, as he's given a prefight physical in Las Vegas. Evangelista will go against WBC heavyweight champion Larry Holmes in a 15-round title fight at Caesars Palace. (AP Laserphoto)

Louis, gets the spotlight all to himself tonight when he fights Alfredo Evangelista. The scheduled 15-rounder for the unbeaten Holmes, considered by many boxing people the most talented heavyweight in the world today, will be the first defense of the World Boxing Council title he won from Ken Norton on a decision last June 9.

Louis, the feared Brown Bomber of another era, was honored at a testimonial dinner Thursday night attended by stars of sports and show business.

Holmes is an overwhelming favorite to beat Evangelista, who went 15 rounds with Muhammad Ali in a losing title bid in 1977.

"I don't think it will go farther than eight or nine rounds," said the 29-year-old Holmes, who has a 28-0-0 record with 19 knockouts.

The smart money agrees with the champion. Evangelista is a 4-1 underdog if you like his chances. But there is no betting line on Holmes to win.

The show at Caesars Palace will be televised by ABC from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m. CST.

Also featured on the card will be Norton, who meets Randy Stephens in a 10-rounder, and Alexis Arguello, who will defend the WBC junior lightweight title against Arturo Leon.

Norton will kick off the show in a fight he needs — and figures — to win if he wants a rematch with Holmes. A Holmes-Norton rematch shapes up as boxing's most competitive big-money fight since it doesn't appear that Ali, who is recognized as champion by the World Boxing Association, will fight either of them. There is considerable doubt that the 36-year-old Ali will fight again.

"Well, I haven't a lot to say because I'm a supporting actor on this show," Norton said at a news conference. But he is a well-paid supporting actor, getting $250,000 which is $100,000 more than Evangelista is receiving. But Evangelista is where Norton wants to be.

Holmes, who calls his $300,000 purse for his fight with Norton "chump money" is getting $1.5 million.

Evangelista, the European champion, feels "that Larry Holmes will find I'm a different fighter than the one who fought Ali."

But he will also find a man who reminds many of a younger Ali. Holmes doesn't have the blazing foot speed that Ali once possessed, but he does have the hand speed and an excellent left jab. He also has Ali's size. He outweighs Evangelista 214 1-2 to 208 1-4 and has a four-inch reach advantage over him. And Holmes hits harder than the Ali who fought Evangelista.

Holmes, who fought mediocre fighters for much of his career which began in 1973, rose to prominence this year and answered questions about his poise, heart and ability to take a punch. Last March 25 he pounded out a one-sided 12-round decision over hard-hitting Earnie Shavers.

Then in his fight against Norton, he needed the last round to win... and he got it on the cards of two of the three officials for a split decision victory.

Evangelista has won all of his eight fights since his loss to Ali for a record of 22-1-1, with 18 knockouts. The 23-year native of Uruguay, who is a citizen of Spain, knocked out Lucien Rodriguez in 11 rounds in 1977 and has defended the title twice.

Norton, 33, has a record of 40-5-0, with 32 knockouts. The 25-year-old Stephens of Dallas, is 10-4-0, with six knockouts. Arguello has knocked out 47 opponents in winning 56 fights against just four losses. The 26-year-old Nicaraguan won the world featherweight title in 1974 and gave it up following his fourth title defense in 1976 because of problems in making the 126-pound weight limit. He won the 130-pound class title last Jan. 28 by stopping Alfredo Escalera in the 13th round and has defended it twice.

The 29-year-old Leon, a Mexican native who lives in Tucson, Ariz., had a record of 24-13-2, with nine knockouts. He has won his last six fights.

Irwin Loses Aussie Lead

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — "What a difference a day makes," Hale Irwin remarked calmly after following a course record 64 with a dismal 4-over-par 75 in the second round of the Australian Professional Golfers Association championship on the Royal Melbourne layout today.

Irwin had in mind the lyrics of a well-known song as he told of the extraordinary difference between his two rounds that saw him relinquish his overnight 4-shot lead to Australia's Graham Marsh.

Marsh fired a remarkable 5-under-par 66 — going out in 30 — to finish at the halfway mark with a 2-stroke lead over his American buddy. The two men are close friends.

Irwin blamed his dramatic loss of form on his putting. On the first day he made only 26, compared with 38 in the second round.

"I had downhill putts all day. Still I'm happy enough. It is good at this stage to get a lousy round behind me," he said.

"It's hard to follow up a first round course record with a score almost as good," Irwin said. "I reckon Graham's round in the windier conditions was better than my 64 Thursday, but he will find it hard to follow that up tomorrow."

Irwin had two three-putt greens, but not any one-putt greens all day. By comparison, Marsh, who has never won a top tournament in his own country but a handful overseas, had an extraordinary putting sequence on the first nine.

He eagled the par-5 second hole, sinking a putt from 30 feet, and birdied three others with long distance putts.

Hoople Predicts Victories For Cougars, Nebraska

By Maj. AMOS B. HOOPLE
Peerless Prophet

Egad, friends, if the seismographs are dancing wildly this Saturday in the areas around Lincoln, Neb., Birmingham, Ala., and Austin, Tex., they won't — kaff-kaff — be recording earthquakes.

Rather, it will be the huffing and puffing and thumping and bumping as Nebraska challenges Oklahoma for the Big 8 crown. Alabama tangles with LSU in a Big Southeastern Conference showdown, and Texas jousts with Houston for the Southwestern Conference title. Jove! What dream matchups!

OFFENSE is the name of the game for both Nebraska and Oklahoma. They score points like a kid — heh-heh — with a hot hand on a pinball machine. For the season they're average better than 40 points per game.

Leading the offensive charge for Oklahoma's Sooners are quarterback Thomas Lott and fleet-footed Bill Sims (Oh, he can fly!). Nebraska counters with hard-running I.M. Hipp and passer Tom Storey.

On defense, the edge goes to the home forces. Nebraska. And so does the Hoopole nod. Yas, dear readers, your Peerless Prophet sees the Cornhuskers turning back this great Sooner team by a 28-24 count — har-rumph!

Alabama's Crimson Tide will continue its relentless march toward the SEC throne by defeating a good LSU club in another bruising battle.

The combined passing-running attack spearheaded by Tony Nathan for Alabama will outscore the ground attack by infantryman de luxe Charles Alexander of LSU. Make it Alabama 33, LSU 21 — um-kumph!

In Texas, the SWC crown will be on the line as invading Houston meets the Longhorns. The Cougars are hot and — hak-kaff — when you're hot you're hot, as the saying goes. And you faithful correspondent, having seen the heat the Cougars can generate when they are moving at full-steam, confidently predicts Houston will win 27-24. And remember, you read it first in Hoopole.

If that trio of crowd-pleasing contests isn't enough to satisfy you football filiberts, how about these contests: Southern Cal vs. Washington; UCLA vs. Oregon State; and Arizona State vs. Stanford in the Pacific 10. And this pair in the Big Ten: Michigan vs. Northwestern and Purdue vs. Wisconsin.

The Southern California Trojans-Washington Huskies game is the most important one in the Pacific 10 this week. The loser will fall out of title contention. The Huskies are getting better every week, but, in — ahem — our humble opinion (Ed. Note: Hoopole, humble!), the Trojans have a more solid team and should win a squeaker 35-28.

Terry Donahue's strong UCLA eleven will stay on course for its showdown with Southern California, by whipping the Oregon State Beavers 38-17. And Arizona State will play up to its potential in defeating Stanford 42-24.

McGinnis Leads Nuggets Win

By The Associated Press

"He's a great player." Denver Coach Larry Brown said of George McGinnis who has been a key performer in the Nuggets' 8-4 start, good enough for a 1 1/2-game lead in the National Basketball Association's Midwest Division.

McGinnis, obtained in a controversial offseason trade that sent popular Bobby Jones to Philadelphia, scored 25 points, grabbed nine rebounds and had seven assists Thursday night to lead the Nuggets to a 116-109 victory over the sluggish New York Knicks.

"We're asking George to do things he's never done," said Brown. "He's even better than I thought he was and I've always respected his ability."

"He is so good and everything comes so easily to him that he has never had to work. We are asking him to do that now and so far he has responded."

In the only other NBA game played Thursday, the Atlanta Hawks beat the San Diego Clippers 125-101.

Brown said the Nuggets played as well as they have all season in the first half as they amassed a 64-38 lead. "But the second half we just looked at the clock and tried to get it over with," Brown said.

Knicks coach Willis Reed was a bit puzzled after the defeat, which ended New York's longest road trip of the season. The Knicks were 2-4 on the Western swing and are 6-8 overall.

"I'm not sure why we didn't seem to come to play, but there could be a couple of reasons," said Reed. "Sometimes it's hard for a young team like ours to come back after a good win-like last night's in Seattle."

The Knicks beat the SuperSonics 104-100 Wednesday night.

Our players were really high after beating the team with the best record in the league and we didn't get into tonight's game for a long time," observed Reed.

Hawks 125, Clippers 101
Forward John Drew topped the Hawks with a season-high 35 points and guard Eddie Johnson added 24. Center Steve Hawes handed out 10 assists, a career high.

Steelers Picked Over LA; Cowboys Get Nod

By HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer
Okay, folks. Gather 'round while the Pro Picker lets you in on a little secret. He has located the key to this crazy-quilt National Football League season. To win, you simply have to play at home.
Careful studies of computer printouts and the weekly scores reveal that through 10 weeks, NFL home teams hold an 83-57 edge over visitors. That's a .593 percentage compared to .407 for clubs playing on the road.
Armed with this vital piece of data, the Pro Picker steps forth boldly and picks the home and road teams to split down the middle this week. Last week's 9-5 made the season's mark 81-58, for .583, which is better than road teams but not quite as good as those playing at home.

Pittsburgh 27, Los Angeles 20 — The Rams want to fool around? Okay, try fooling with the Steelers.
Denver 17, Cleveland 14 — The Browns gained 28 yards rushing last week against Houston. That's all for the Browns. And Denver's defense has some making up to do for that debacle against the New York Jets.
Dallas 23, Green Bay 14 — The Cowboys simply can't afford anymore setbacks. And the Packers are starting to hear Viking footsteps over their shoulders.

New England 27, Houston 17 — The Pats love that Foxboro feeling. They're on a seven-game tear and won't let the wild card hopeful Oilers interfere.
Miami 31, Buffalo 7 — The Dolphins have it rolling now and can't afford to stop because New England keeps right on winning.
Washington 24, NY Giants 10 — The Redskin reward for dragging their weary, old players out for a Monday night game is a Sunday picnic against the Giants' weary, young players.

Minnesota 17, Chicago 7 — That's play-off-land up ahead and the tough, wise, old Vikings see it.
Seattle 34, Baltimore 13 — The Colts made Washington's Billy Kilmer look silly Monday night but Seattle's Jim Zorn doesn't throw those lazy pop flies.
San Diego 23, Kansas City 17 — The Chargers have won two straight for new Coach Don Coryell and are threatening to salvage what once seemed a lost season.
New Orleans 16, Atlanta 13 — The Battle of the South belongs to the Saints, mostly because of reborn Archie Manning, who leads the NFC in passing.

NY Jets 20, Philadelphia 17 — Upset special. The Jets believe they can do anything after wiping out a three-TD deficit against Denver last week. Maybe they can.

Detroit 14, Tampa Bay 10 — If the Bucs weren't so banged up... but then again, the Lions beat them early, when they were healthy.
St. Louis 19, San Francisco 7 — Look who's on a winning streak. Bud Wilkinson knew his Cards wouldn't lose 'em all.

TRIPLE WRITTEN LIMITED WARRANTY

- LIMITED FREE REPLACEMENT WARRANTY
Whites tires will be replaced free within 30 days, excluding repairable punctures, when used under normal conditions. This free replacement limited warranty covers tire failures due to BLOW OUTS, CUTS, BRUISES, TREADWEAR, or separations resulting from usual wear and tear in road use under normal conditions, providing the tire is not repairable.
- LIMITED MILEAGE SERVICE WARRANTY
Whites tires are warranted for the number of miles (or months) indicated against BLOW OUTS, CUTS, BRUISES, TREADWEAR, RUT WEAR, and all other road hazards except running flat or use on misaligned wheels. Any tire failing from any of these causes will be replaced on the basis of service rendered or repaired free of charge if repairable, providing failure resulted from usual wear and tear in road use under normal conditions.
- LIMITED LIFETIME WARRANTY
We further warrant all Whites tires for the life of the tire against defects in workmanship and materials during and after the above warranties have expired, without limit as to time or mileage pro-rated on tread wear.

OU, Nebraska Reach For No. 1

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Nebraska I-back Richard Berns, who scored the only touchdown against Oklahoma during last year's meeting in Norman, will bring a bruised thigh and a haunted memory to this Saturday's annual Big Eight challenge.

Berns, who says "injuries don't mean anything in this game," says the eight-game winning streak No. 4 ranked Nebraska brings to the nationally televised contest has built up the Husker's confidence.

But he is haunted by the memory of the 1976 game that Oklahoma won 20-17 in the closing seconds with a flea-flicker pass.

"When a team like Oklahoma pulls something like that, it makes me madder than anything," Berns said. "I have all the respect in the world for Oklahoma, but you can't let them go on taunting you like that for four seasons."

Whites Win Scrimmage

Tommy Parks wasn't doing any dunking like his taller teammates. He was just shooting over and around them.

The Raiders' senior guard from Fort Worth hit 10 of his 12 field shots for 20 points as the Whites scored a 104-96 win over the Reds in Thursday's intrasquad scrimmage at Texas Tech.

Cocher Gerald Myers interchanged his players in their final game-type warmup for next Tuesday's exhibition game against the Bulgarian National team.

Freshman Jeff Taylor scored 22 points in the contest, and guards Parks and Geoff Huston hit 20 each. Sophomore Ralph Brewster followed with 18 points, and another sophomore, Ralph McPherson, who was high point in last Friday's scrimmage, hauled down a game-high 16 rebounds.

This will be Bern's last chance to beat Oklahoma, and Husker mentor Tom Osborne will be looking for his first win in six outings against the No. 1 ranked Sooners.

"We're glad Oklahoma won its game over Colorado," Osborne said. "I hope Colorado pressed them enough so they had to use their regulars for the full 60 minutes. That might work in our favor Saturday."

"I don't think that Oklahoma has a jinx on us," he said. "It must be remembered that in the last six years, we also had our chances to beat those same Sooner teams, but could never really take advantage of our breaks."

The Colorado game is also a factor in the mind of Sooner Coach Bary Switzer.

"If we make the same mistakes against Nebraska that we made against Colorado, we'll find ourselves behind for the first time this season," he said. Last Saturday OU fumbled eight times, losing five and throwing one pass interception.

At stake Saturday is a share of the Big Eight title, a probable trip to the Orange Bowl and possibly the national championship. It will be the 99th consecutive sell-out of a Nebraska home game and the sixth consecutive time the battle has been on national television.

Oklahoma leads the series that began in 1912 and has been an annual meeting since 1928. Nebraska's last victory was the 35-31 "Game of the Century" thriller in Norman in 1971.

It will be the third time this year that Nebraska has faced a Wishbone offense. The season opener against Alabama turned into a 20-3 loss to the Crimson Tide, while last week Nebraska took the Kansas Jayhawks for a 63-21 ride.

Which part of the Wishbone the Huskers break off Saturday will depend a lot on how the defense handles OU's classy quarterback, Thomas Lott, who will make his third outing against Nebraska.

Lott, who has more career yards rushing than Husker I-back I.M. Hipp, is viewed as more of the key to the Sooner offense than explosive back Billy Sims. The Sooner halfback already holds sixth place in the Big Eight all-time season rushing category with three games left.

Husker frosh coach Guy Ingles feels that to beat OU, the Nebraska defense will have to hold down the Sooner running attack and force Lott to throw the ball.

"They don't want to throw," he said after scouting last week's Oklahoma-College game that OU won 23-7. "We want to keep them off balance," he added, calling the pass a "surprise tactic" in the Wishbone.

"We're the only team in the country that can beat 'em," Ingles said. "If we can't beat 'em, nobody else can."

That comment is echoed in the respect for Nebraska voiced by Oklahoma sports information director Johnny Keith.

"I guess if you're going to lose to anybody, you might as well lose to Nebraska," he said.

I-back Berns can't wait to offer Oklahoma that chance.

"I only wish it would be played right now instead of Saturday because there's so much press, so much publicity," he said. "In the training room, all I look at are the comies and the Sunday papers because of the game statistics. Anything else, and I feel I'd start reading into the game what isn't there. You can get things in your head all out of proportion otherwise."

In another top game Saturday, second-ranked Penn State plays host to North Carolina State, which uses an option attack built around the running of Ted Brown, who has helped the Wolfpack to a 6-2 record.

"North Carolina State sends a lot of players along the line on those options," said sophomore defensive end Larry Kubin of Penn State.

Louis Gets Standing Ovation, Honors At Las Vegas Banquet

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — The people stood as one — clapping, whistling and cheering for Joe Louis, a man who heard the throaty roar of crowds through countless fights as boxing's legendary Brown Bomber.

It was a testimonial dinner for Louis, who appeared in a wheelchair, a physical shadow of the man many consider the greatest heavyweight champion of all time. But the appearance could not diminish the legend.

The Rev. Jesse Jackson called Louis "a messenger to the people... an authentic hero, not a surplus hero."

But the mood of a gala evening at Caesar's Palace was perhaps best expressed by Eddie Futch, a fight trainer who was lost amid the glitter of a crowd that included such figures as Muhammad Ali, Frank Sinatra, Cary Grant and Joe DiMaggio.

Futch, a lightweight on the amateur boxing team on which Louis was the light-heavyweight, said, "He was the champion, is the champion and will always be the champion."

The 64-year-old Louis did not address the crowd of 1,500 at the $500-a-plate "A Night with the Champ." He didn't have to: his career spoke for him.

The star-studded affair opened with a film of Louis' one-round destruction of Max Schmeling, who was present, in 1938 and his 13th-round knockout of Billy Conn, the light-heavyweight who tried to outslug Louis in their memorable bout in 1941.

The film touched off numerous conversations about Louis' career and life, many of them involving people too young to have seen him fight.

"He is my idol, he's many people's idol," said Ali, who for one of the few public occasions in his illustrious career had to — and was satisfied to — play second fiddle.

"He was the greatest heavyweight champion I have ever seen. He is a great guy," said Sugar Ray Robinson, the former welterweight and middleweight champion who as a kid in Detroit carried Louis' ring gear and who developed into, according to many boxing people, the greatest pound-for-pound fighter that ever lived.

Conn, still carrying a boyish Irish face over a figure that is now many pounds heavier than when he fought Louis, said, "If Joe was fighting today he'd be the heavyweight champion for the next 20 years. Who the hell would beat him?"

But Louis was honored Thursday night for more than just his ring ability. Roosevelt Grier, a huge former professional football star, said, "I think Joe Louis has demonstrated over the years he's a great man. He's been through a lot of things and always come out on his feet."

"The dignity that existed when he was champion is something everyone wants to hold onto," said actor Jack Klugman.

Louis was toasted by the likes of Grant and other show business stars such as Robert Redford and Walter Matthau, former boxing champions Ingemar Johansson and Leon Spinks, heroes of the sports world such as Joe Namath and Roger Maris and sportscaster Howard Cosell.

There was entertainment — Tom Jones sang, Milton Berle and Red Buttons got the crowd laughing, on and on.

Louis missed the entertainment. He was gone. But it was definitely his night. Berle, the Uncle Miltie of the early years of television, focused on one of the least known but most important contributions made by Louis — his quiet fight for racial equality.

Berle said, "I would like to repeat what James J. Walker, the flamboyant late mayor of New York, said of Joe: 'Put a rose on Lincoln's grave.'"

HARVESTING SOYBEANS — The conventional reel-type header common on Panhandle and South Plains grain farms was not used in harvesting these soybeans on the Charles Schlabs farm.

The new type of header cuts harvesting losses of beans substantially, and could open a major new option in soybean production to the area's farmers.

Record Corn Crop Near Completion

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 1978 corn harvest, now approaching its final stages, is estimated at a record of 6.89 billion bushels, the Agriculture Department said. That will be more than enough grain to meet all domestic and export demands in the coming year...

The report did not include new estimates for 1978 production of wheat and some other crops harvested earlier this year. Corn inventories, already at a six-year high when the new marketing year began Oct. 1, are expected to swell further because of the huge new harvest this fall...

50-Bushel Soybeans Believed Possible

By JIM STEIERT A-J Correspondent
HEREFORD — Charles Schlabs still isn't certain that farmers in the Hereford area can consistently raise 50-bushel-per-acre soybeans. But after a "small" trial on 300 acres currently under harvest, he feels there's a good enough chance of meeting the magic 50 mark...

Now, people are beginning to look around for something other than corn, and beans could prove a better crop than either corn or grain sorghum in some situations, if prices remain in relation to what they are now, said Schlabs. Soybeans have remained only a minor crop in the northern Panhandle for many years...

gation and other production inputs as well. Beans won't be a real short-water crop, but then I've heard of some 25 and 30-bushel beans grown under dryland conditions right here in this area this year. Beans would probably work in a semi-irrigated situation...

been uncommon in many areas during harvesting operations. Regular reel-type combine headers often compound this field-loss problem, and Schlabs has taken measures this year to make sure that he harvests every valuable bean possible.

"A lot more uses have been found for soybeans over the past few years. They are in demand worldwide as an excellent source of protein, and projections are for continued good prices for the crop," said Schlabs.

Texas Grain Stocks Up Sharply

AUSTIN (Special) — If all of the grain currently in stock in Texas were stacked on a standard-sized football field, it would make a grain pile over 4,000 feet high, according to a Texas Department of Agriculture estimate.

Networks' Election Coverage Fails To Grab Big Audience

By JOAN HANAUER
 NEW YORK (UPI) — No matter whether the listening audience voted Republican or Democratic, in large numbers they elected not to watch the proceedings on television.

The national Nielsen ratings for election night have not yet been totaled, but the "overnights" — the ratings in New York, Chicago and Los Angeles — show that the three networks combined earned a 37.2 percent share of the audience. A decent percentage of viewers for a single network entertainment show would be 30.

Where was everybody? Lured away by big-time theatrical movies on local independent stations in the three cities.

In New York, election night returns on the networks were up against "Pink Panther," "Day of the Dolphin" and "The Graduate." In Chicago the election had to compete with "The Great Waldo Pepper," and in Los Angeles, where the time difference meant most of the election excitement was over early, scheduled movies included "Bonnie & Clyde" and "High Noon."

CBS has cancelled its "People" show and yanked "WKRP in Cincinnati," possibly for good or perhaps for a new time slot. Special schedules go into effect for a couple of weeks, then a new dramatic series will premiere in the 7-8 p.m. slot on Nov. 27.

Ken Howard will star in "The White Shadow," as a former professional basketball player who becomes the coach at a racially mixed high school.

WWII Adversaries Meet At Barbeque

BELLEVEILLE, Ill. (UPI) — Two four-star generals who fought on opposite sides in World War II met recently over a backyard barbecue.

Gen. William G. Moore Jr., commander of the Military Airlift Command at Scott Air Force Base east of Belleville, entertained West German Gen. Franz-Joseph Schulze.

Moore flew 35 combat missions over Italy during the war, and Schulze served in the Luftwaffe's anti-aircraft batteries which shot down American flyers over Italy.

Schulze, now commander of Allied Forces Central Europe, visited Moore to make preparations for NATO's annual fall exercises. Both generals take part in the joint maneuvers.

Television Critic Rates ABC's Election Night Coverage Best

By JAY SHARBUTT
 LOS ANGELES (AP) — NBC's David Brinkley was in fine, wry form, CBS' Walter Cronkite was as steady as ever, but I'd say ABC's Election Night show was the best on TV, despite the night's only wrong call.

ABC's troops, their main man Frank Reynolds, projected GOP Gov. Meldrim Thomson of New Hampshire a winner, then, at 12:57 a.m. EST Wednesday, emitted a discreet oops and withdrew the call.

But their work seemed the most concise, the most visually interesting with brisk scene changes and occasional candidate profiles. And back-and-forth anchor talk in the studio was at a merciful minimum.

Such chat appeared a major flaw at the NBC and CBS studios in New York, where 10 featured anchors — four at NBC, six at CBS — evoked a sedate seminar atmosphere more suitable for Princeton than public.

And their frequent voter-poll results, fine for print and the reflection it allows, further slowed the proceedings. ABC had its polls, but whisked them on and off with little fuss.

Occasional levity did brighten NBC's night, as when Tom Brokaw noted that one millionaire candidate who owns a mansion with 13 bathrooms might move into a governor's mansion with only six.

Mused Brinkley: "He obviously has decided to sacrifice himself on the altar of public service."

Such moments were rare at CBS, where retired-but-recalled commentator Eric Servareid gravely suggested a very "middle" election was afoot, "middle-class, middle-age and middle-brow."

ABC also was mostly business, but much crisper about it.

That network's $1 million inquirer, Barbara Walters, sat next to Reynolds all night, keeping busy with 11 interviews — on the phone, on long-distance TV or simply saying what various worthies told her.

Oddly, her on-camera phone chats were the most effective. Not so her only in-studio interview, with New York Gov.

Hugh Carey, where she appeared both rushed and flustered.

She also made a wee goof in introducing Sen. Strom Thurmond as from Mississippi (South Carolina, he said sternly. His manner suggested she'd never say Anwar Sadat hails from Israel).

No headline news came from the interviews, but they enlivened ABC's night. Another plus: its good, quick Capitol Hill reports on key House and Senate changes and meanings thereof.

NBC had former President Gerald R. Ford, its paid guest lecturer, on several times. Alas, his major contributions were to detect no national trend midway in the returns and to stay vague about his 1980 plans.

For the record, CBS says its Election Night ended at 1:06 a.m. EST Wednesday. ABC closed at 1:30 a.m. and NBC retired 15 minutes later.
