Getting More Calcium

By LAWRENCE LAMB, M.D.
DEAR DR. LAMB — I would like to ask if beef bone meal with calcium, phosphorus, traces of zinc, potassium, copper magnesium and manganese is a good medicine to take if the body needs more calcium? The dosage is two tablets per meal, or a total of six tablets per day. And this provides a daily intake of 982 mgs. of calcium and 441 mgs. of phosphorus.

Could these tablets be harmful to one with diverticulosis? They don't dissolve very quickly, and there is a grainy residue quite a while before it all gets soft. How long should these be taken and would there be any side effects?

DEAR READER — I don't have any objections to a person who needs calcium using these. One of the important points in taking calcium is to use substances that contain more calcium than phosphorus, and these do.

Many of our foods contain an equal amount of calcium and phosphorus, actually more phosphorus than calcium. That's why some of these foods don't help much in preventing bone loss from the skeleton.

I see you'd be getting about one gram of calcium a day that's a good amount, particularly for an older person who wants to prevent softening of the bone.

You raised a good question about diverticulosis. We are always concerned about anything a person swallows if that person has these little pockets of the colon. The danger is that something will lodge in them. And there are a number of pills that are prescribed, or that people can purchase for themselves, that don't dissolve very quickly and may, in fact, pass through the entire digestive system without ever dissolving. That also means that some of those pills don't do much good — at least for the person who takes them.

If the pills really don't dissolve very readily, I would suggest grinding them into a powder and putting the pills into a little bit of milk or water and drinking the solution. That would certainly prevent any possibility of small undissolved portions of the pill lodging inside one of the little pockets of the colon.

To give more information about the diverticulosis that you have, I am sending you The Health Letter number 5-6, Diverticulosis. Other readers who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Address your request to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1581, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have trouble getting my food down. It goes down for a while and can't go into the stomach and comes back up. Is there a cause for this?

DEAR READER — Yes, you have an obstruction of some type. Either in the esophagus (food tube), or at the place where the esophagus joins the stomach. This may be a simple muscle spasm. It can be due to scarring of the lower part of the esophagus or it could even be a malignancy of the esophagus.

Your doctor will have to examine the esophagus and upper stomach area to see what is causing the obstruction itself. I would urge everyone who has such a history to have an immediate examination. Only in this way can proper treatment be started.

Los Angeles Detectives Remain Baffled About Hillside Strangler

By BILL GARDNER
LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Hillside Strangler, who terrorized this city for months, killed 13 women between September 1977 and last February. Then nothing. Why not? Is he dead? Lying low? Perhaps somewhere else?

They're tough questions, and the detectives who have been chasing the strangler for a year are just as baffled as anyone.

"You got 20 investigators, you got 20 theories," said Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department investigator Frank Salerno, who has been on the case more than a year.

Of the 13 Hillside Strangler killings, police list one in September, two in October, eight in November and one in December, all of last year, and one last February.

It was a year ago this month that police set up the Hillside Strangler Task Force to track down whoever was strangling young women and leaving their nude bodies on the city's hillsides. At its peak last winter the Task Force had 140 members and occupied a large room where phones were ringing off the hooks with tips from citizens.

Rewards totaling $125,000 were offered by the city and the county, but they have since been withdrawn. Gradually the phones stopped ringing, the tips dried up and the Task Force, reduced to 18 investigators, was moved to a smaller room.

The failure to solve this case has been a sore point with police officials for a long time. Last December, Assistant Police Chief Daryl Gates, who headed the investigation, said, "I'm embarrassed every time I look at myself in the mirror."

Gates, who has since been promoted to chief, has insisted all along that his men would solve the case. The department's top spokesman, Cmdr. William Booth, says the chief still feels the case will be solved. "He does, I do and the investigators do," Booth said.

According to Booth, the Task Force is now "sharpening its focus, separating the wheat from the chaff as to what is a valuable lead and what is not."

He says that even now, nine months after the latest killing, investigators "have a number of good leads."

But sheriff's investigator Salerno tells a different story. "At this point we have no tangible leads," he said. The sheriff has jurisdiction in two of the murders and works closely with the police Task Force.

Booth admits that investigators have never known and don't know now whether all 13 killings were the work of one person or group. At least two of the murders appear to have been committed by two killers together, he said.

Booth said there is no specific trademark of the killer that would definitely link the stranglings. "The totality of circumstances" led investigators to consider the cases together, he said.

All the young women were strangled, most were left nude, several were sexually molested, several were prostitutes or had ties to the Hollywood street scene. But a few were girl-next-door types who lived at home with their parents or in quiet apartment buildings. The victims ranged in age from 12 to 28.

About a year ago women here were scared. Many wouldn't venture out alone, especially after dark. Self-defense classes sprang up at colleges and high schools.

At cocktail parties, bridge clubs, bowling alleys, lunch counters and even neighborhood groceries there was talk of the strangler. Everybody had a theory.

But time has dimmed the fears and interest. There have been other things to think about — heavy rains and mudslides, Proposition 13, mandatory school busing, brushfires that burned 200 homes, the World Series, the deaths of two popes, the San Diego air collision, the election, a new series of killings but this time with victims less worrisome to the public — derelicts, not young women.

Around town today, you won't hear talk of the strangler. That was yesterday's problem.

The case isn't solved, but the killing ended.

As Booth put it: "The fire, so to speak, was put out. For whatever reason, this series of crimes was stopped."

Data Showing Legionnaire's Disease Not Rare

ATLANTA (UPI) — Scientific evidence appears to be mounting that Legionnaires' disease is not particularly rare and strikes more frequently than previously believed, researchers said Monday.

Delegates to an international symposium on Legionnaires' disease at the U.S. Center for Disease Control, numbering 500 and representing 30 countries, also said risk factors are being pinpointed, and that one study showed individuals with Legionnaire's disease smoked more cigarettes and drank alcohol.

Legionnaires' disease, a type of pneumonia, gained worldwide attention in July 1976 when it struck 224 people at an American Legion convention in Philadelphia, killing 34 of them.

Dr. E.D. Renner, assistant director of the state hygienic laboratory at the University of Iowa, said the number of cases identified in his state lead to the conclusion "that Legionnaires' disease infections in Iowa are not rare."

Renner said 47 cases of the illness had been found in 363 blood tests of people with pneumonia.

Dr. George F. Grady of the Massachusetts Department of Public Health said the ability to identify Legionnaires' disease through blood tests had been a principal factor in differentiating Legionnaires' disease from other types of pneumonia.

"Had we not had this Legionnaires' disease serology, we might have been assigning out 20 to 30 percent as mycoplasma (another form of pneumonia) when it might well have been Legionnaires' disease," he said.

Mitchell Cohen, a CDC hospital epidemiologist, said a study of fatal pneumonia infections in 83 hospitals nationwide in a three-year period indicated there had been approximately 2,800 cases of fatal Legionnaires' disease or about 950 cases a year.

He said kidney transplant patients taking high doses of cortisone were seven times more likely to contract Legionnaires' disease in a hospital than other patients.

Dr. Gregory Storch, a physician at the Barnes and Wohl Hospital in St. Louis and a former CDC researcher, reported that individuals with Legionnaires' disease smoked a pack of cigarettes a day and consumed more than three alcoholic drinks a day. He also said there was a high rate of Legionnaires' disease in blacks and people of lower socio-economic status.

Hill, Krueger Win Bids For Local Vote Recounts

By BOB CAMPBELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

John Hill and Bob Krueger, losers in gubernatorial and senatorial elections last week, won court orders Monday for recounts of ballots in Lubbock County. County commissioners must wait out the results of the recount before they can canvass and certify the results. Monday's action was part of a statewide recount initiative by Hill and Krueger. Lubbock County commissioners have tentative plans to start the procedure Friday morning. Under state law the candidates are entitled to a recount because they lost by less than five percentage points. County Judge Rod Shaw contacted Tom Eschberger of Computer Election Systems in Dallas about taking part in the recount and was told Eschberger was not certain when he would be available to help with the procedure. The petitions ask that the same persons who supervised the election oversee the recount. They are Bill McCullough, county computer center director and presiding election judge, County Clerk Frank Guess and Eschberger. Attorneys Don Hunt and Joe Boerner represented Bill Clements and John Tower, the winning candidates for governor and senator, and Johnny Splawn represented Hill at the afternoon session of the commissioners court. On the order by 237th District Judge John R. McFall, representatives of Krueger and Hill are allowed to examine the computer program used in counting the ballots, the materials used in making test counts and the ballot assemblies for all the punch card ballot voting machines. "The ballots for all election precincts... shall be recounted, using the same methods and materials as in the original count, after the above-requested examinations and recount of the test materials have been conducted," Judge McFall ordered. "The recount shall be conducted by and under the direction of the same person who directed the original count of the ballots and on the same equipment as the original count, with the petitioner or his designated representatives present." The order also stipulated that the canvass be delayed until the recount is completed. Guess said it would take about two hours to rerun the Hill-Clements and Tower-Krueger elections after the other procedures are finished. Blair Cherry Jr., a Lubbock attorney who worked in the Krueger campaign, said Monday afternoon that he was concerned about 39,243 votes being counted altogether in Lubbock County while only 35,950 were tabulated in the senatorial race. "It's a curious thing," Cherry said, adding that he was "not suggesting anything improper" occurred. "But machines do break down, and computers don't work," he said. Cherry said the state senate race, far down on the ballot, drew the most votes and that a similar dropoff in total votes occurred in the congressional and gubernatorial races. He said Krueger representatives will be trying to determine "why 1/2 to 2 percent didn't vote in the first three races" on the ballot. He suggested that it could have happened from the cards not being "punched thoroughly." Rex Fuller, a Lubbock oilman who worked for Clements, said Hill and Krueger filed similar petitions in 40 other counties where punch card ballots were used last Tuesday and said Clements representatives will be present in all of them when the recounts are performed. In other business, County Auditor Dale Gallimore presented a complex analysis of what another district court and another county court-at-law could do.

The commissioners received the report without indicating what decision they might reach. They accepted low bids of $6,381 from Smith Ford of Slaton for a new pickup for County Agent Ken Cook and $10,699 from J.D. Hulstедler GMC Truck Sales for a firetruck for the Woodrow Volunteer Fire Department. Monday morning, they approved plans for the new $1 million juvenile detention center to be submitted to the Texas Criminal Justice Division and the federal Law Enforcement Assistance Administration.

Charge Filed Against Man

An aggravated robbery charge was filed Monday against a Slaton man as the result of an incident Thursday. Charged was Linnie Shields, Jr., 29. The Criminal District Attorney's office recommended a $5,000 bond. Complaining witness Heriberto Banda said he was asleep in a trailer house, located near a Slaton plant where he and a companion were employed, when he heard a knock on the door and then observed someone push the door open. Banda said a tall, slender man entered, carrying a pistol. The complainant said the man had a stocking over his head. According to Banda, the tall man picked up Banda's pants and handed them to a shorter man, also wearing a stocking. Banda said he scuffled briefly with the shorter man and then ran to the plant to report the incident. He indicated that, despite the stocking, he recognized the shorter man as a plant employee.

Losing Candidates Await New Totals

AUSTIN (AP) — With a gambler's determination to stay until the last card is played, defeated Democrats John Hill and Bob Krueger await word from 42 Texas counties asked to recount the results of last Tuesday's tight gubernatorial and Senate races. Election officials Monday began to unravel the paper maze that shrouds the recount petitions and threatens to choke off an early resolution.

Checking began in Corpus Christi Monday. But while Nueces County officials got an early start, most counties may not begin new tabulations until later this week. Some have refused the requests outright. "The move for a recount is the result of hope rather than anticipation," said Sam Millsap, Hill's Bexar County campaign manager. "I think at this point what we want is to know beyond a shadow of a doubt that we lost this election." Secretary of State Steve Oaks said Friday an informal telephone survey showed Republican Bill Clements taking the governor's race and U.S. Sen. John Tower re-elected. The apparent losers filed the petitions in counties that used voting machines or punch cards. "We've heard a lot of questions about returns in the machine counties and we just want to be sure," Hill said Monday. The requests encountered stiff resistance in counties such as Harris, Randall and Bee, and ran into some problems in Dallas. Officials in Harris (Houston) County, the most populous, canvassed votes Thursday and say they have "no intention" of recounting unless ordered to do so by Oaks' office. The canvass was also complete in Bee and Randall counties where officials also turned down the request for another count. In Dallas County officials will conduct an official recount of the Hill-Clements race, but only an informal audit of the Krueger-Tower contest. State District Judge Leonard Hoffman Monday denied a request by Krueger for a recount in Dallas County. Tower's lawyers objected to the request because it was not filed before the canvass and was not signed by either the candidate or 25 citizens. But Pat Oxford, director of ballot security for the Tower campaign, said, "We informally agreed in Dallas County that the Krueger people can review the machine count at the same time the Hill people do." Other counties, such as Bexar, Ector, and Midland, are waiting for authorization or guidelines from Austin before setting dates for new counts. Wichita County was to begin its recount today, and Gregg and Nacogdoches county officials said they would begin Wednesday. San Patricio was scheduled to begin Thursday and Lubbock on Friday. Angelina County commissioners will not start checking until Monday. Counties that have accepted petitions but have not set dates for ballot reviews include Tarrant, El Paso, Bowie, Potter, Smith, Fort Bend, Montgomery and Galveston. Krueger campaign manager Garry Mauro said the cost of the recount would be shared by the Hill and Krueger campaigns. Mauro estimated recounting the votes cast on voting machines would cost about $5,200. He said the cost of recounting the punch card devices was unknown.

Math Trick Has Quick Solution

By SHARI LEWIS

Some tricks just perform themselves. Here's a math miracle that anyone can do!

Have your pal write down any two numbers, one under the other. Ask him to add these two numbers, and put the sum under them. Say, "Continue to add the sum of the last two numbers and write that sum under the other numbers. Keep this up until there are 10 numbers in the column. (For example, on my list of numbers I have 1 and 5, which equals 6. Then I add the 5 and 6, which comes to 11. The 6 and 11 make 17, and so on.)

Now tell your friend, "Add up the column of 10 numbers as fast as you can." The surprising thing is that before your friend gets very far, you'll know the answer! Can you figure out how you'll do this? ANSWER: Just multiply the seventh number in the row by 11, and you will get the sum of the column of 10 numbers, no matter what those numbers are!

And here's the shortest shortcut to multiplying low two-digit numbers by 11: Just add the two digits together, and put the sum in the middle! (So, to multiply 45 by 11, I added the 4 and 5, and put the 9 in the middle, to get 495.)

YESTERDAY'S BRAIN TWISTER: Two boys fill out registration forms for summer camp. The registrar sees that they have the same parents, live at the same address and have the same date of birth. The only difference is that one is named John and the other is Adam. When asked "Are you twins?" the both say "No." If their answers are accurate and they both have the same mother and father, how do you account for the fact that they are not twins?

ANSWER: John and Adam are two of a set of triplets.

TODAY'S BRAIN TWISTER: How many words can you think of that contain a double "w"? (Look for the answer in tomorrow's Kids-Only Club column.)

St. John's Body Claimed Intact

CAIRO, Egypt (UPI) — Egyptian newspapers said today monks at a remote monastery unsealed the coffins of St. John the Baptist and the prophet Elisha and found the bodies "intact, undecayed and uncorrupted" by almost 2,000 years.

At least one of the bodies still is attached to its head, discounting the possibility it is the remains of John, the bearded hermit who prophesied the coming of Jesus and then baptized Him, the newspapers said.

However, the Cairo newspaper Al Akhbar said the monks recognized the other coffin as John the Baptist's by a distinguishing mark clearly described in ancient Christian manuscripts.

Vietnamese Ask For Supplies

SINGAPORE (UPI) — The 2,500 Vietnamese refugees aboard a ship that has been refused permission to land in Malaysia today appealed for food, milk and medicine.

"The situation aboard the ship is quite serious," said Ly-Lin We Teng, a spokesman for the refugees who have been ordered to move out of Malaysian waters.

"Most of us are hungry. Please convey our request to charitable organizations to help us. We are badly in need of food, milk and medicines."

"But we will stay put regardless of orders to leave," the spokesman said.

In the Malaysian capital of Kuala Lumpur, a hoped-for change of heart failed to materialize today and the 1,600-ton Hai Hong remained under government orders to leave Malaysian waters as soon as its engine could be repaired.

A spokesman for the National Security Council, which supervises police and military operations, said the orders given the ship Sunday still were in force.

On Monday naval surveyors boarded the Hai Hong, anchored 20 miles southwest of Kuala Lumpur outside Port Klang, and reported to police it would take about two days to repair the ship's engines before it could sail under its own power.

United Nations refugee officials have appealed to the government to change its decision and accept the refugees temporarily until they can be settled elsewhere.

A spokesman who managed to get aboard the Hai Hong reported their conditions as miserable. He said the passengers were a cross section of Ho Chi Minh City residents from moderately well off to those of little means. He said there were more Vietnamese aboard than those of Chinese extraction.

Malaysia and other governments have been particularly unwilling to accept the Hai Hong refugees because of reports the ship is owned by a syndicate that sent the vessel to Vietnam to collect passengers at a reported $2,000 a head in gold.

U.N. officials at first refused to intervene on behalf of the refugees because of the report, but later relented after interviewing some of them aboard a launch near the Hai Hong.

Malaysian officials had declined to permit a U.N. visit aboard the ship for fear the representatives might be held hostages by the refugees.

The U.N. definition of a refugee requires only that an individual be in danger of life or liberty if returned to the land he left.

Students Reject Beer Proposal

HIGHLAND, Kan. (AP) — The price of being able to have beer in dormitories has prompted students at Highland Community Junior College to decide against imbibing in their quarters.

A proposal to allow beer with a 3.2 percent alcohol content in dorm rooms would have caused the school's insurance rates to go up, and the cost — as much as $15 a year per student — would have been passed along in fee increases, students feared.

In addition, passage of the proposal would have prompted school administrators to inspect rooms to make sure that only 3.2 beer was on the premises, said a student spokeswoman who led the campaign to defeat the beer proposal.

"They would have been able to search a room at any time, and nobody wanted that," said the spokeswoman, Christine Henderson. "We value our privacy."

"The discovery was kept secret until proper preparations were made, the priest was quoted as saying.

The bodies were found during renovation work on the ancient monastery, the newspaper quoted Father Youhanna as saying.

"What made us confident that the grave contains the body of John the Baptist is that the old fathers, in their manuscripts, said this grave was marked by a small pillar on top of it as a distinguishing sign," he said.

"We ascertained that these are the bodies of John the Baptist, the prophet Elisha and some other saints," the monk said.

John the Baptist was believed beheaded between 25 and 30 A.D.

According to the tradition of the Coptic Church, the bodies of John the Baptist and the Jewish prophet Elisha were brought from Palestine to the Mediterranean city of Alexandria in the 4th century A.D.

About 600 years later, they were transferred to St. Makar Monastery because of persecution of Christians, so the tradition goes.

The author of Al Akhbar's article, reporter Ezzat El-Saadany, said it was only logical to assume John the Baptist's body would be headless, since he was beheaded by King Herod at the request of the belly dancer Salome.

When the ancient wooden coffin was opened, in the presence of five monks and Abdel Rahman Abdel Tawab, a professor of Christian and Islamic antiquities, the head was joined to the body.

"In the glow of a candle, the face looked kind. It was neither old nor young. The hair was more black than white. The eyes were closed, as if he were asleep. The beard, with its black and white hairs, was long. ... The hands were folded on his chest, and the body was reclining on its right side," El-Saadany said.

A monk said it could be the body of Elisha, a little-known prophet named by Elijah as his successor.

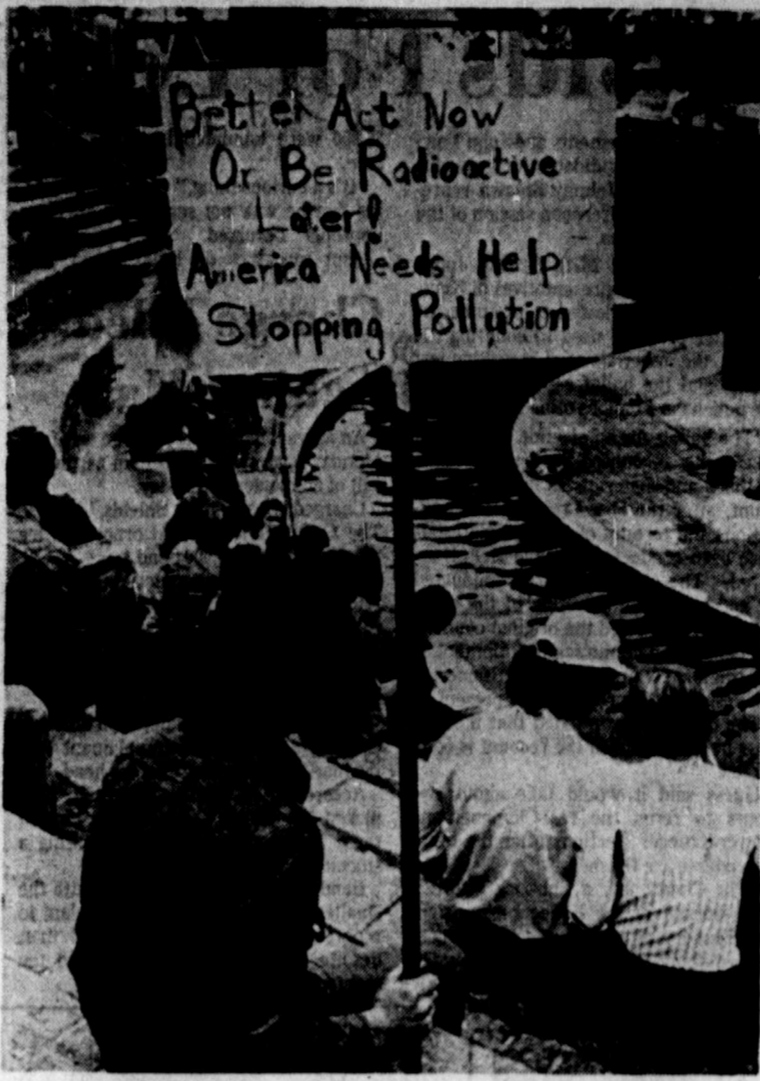

The other coffin, a monk said, may contain the remains of John the Baptist.

"Let's open it," El-Saadany said. But the monks said they could not because they had orders against it from the head of the monastery, Father "Matta, the Poor," who was bedridden.

El-Saadany said the opening of the coffin believed to contain the remains of John will have to wait for some time, but he promised a third article on the alleged discovery Wednesday.

The Grand Rector of Al Azhar Mosque, Sheikh Gad El-Hakk, said if the discovery was true, it would be a "blessing" to the land of Egypt.

Muslims recognize John the Baptist as a major prophet, but refer to him by the name of Yehia.

SILKWOOD PROTEST — Greg Blott of Oklahoma City holds a protest sign as he joined several hundred others to mark the fourth anniversary of the death of Karen Silkwood, a nuclear plant worker and union activist. The peaceful protest was held in downtown Oklahoma City. (AP Laserphoto)

Memorial Rally Held For Activist

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Anti-nuclear protesters mingled with union activists, environmentalists and feminists here Monday night to form a crowd of about 500 at a low-key Karen Silkwood memorial rally.

The event, staged in a downtown park, featured nuclear protest music and passionate speeches invoking the name of Silkwood.

Miss Silkwood worked for the now-closed Kerr-McGee Nuclear Plant near Crescent, about 25 miles north of Oklahoma City.

She was a union activist, and reportedly was en route to meet with a New York Times reporter and an Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Union official to discuss Kerr-McGee safety violations when she was killed in a one-vehicle auto accident on Nov. 13, 1974.

At Monday night's rally, Kerr-McGee representatives circulated through the crowd passing out rebuttal leaflets. Ironically, the park where the rally was held, Kerr Park, was named after one of the fuel company's founders, the late U.S. Sen. Bob Kerr.

A press release from Kerr-McGee earlier in the day labeled the demonstrators "misguided zealots who have a primary objective of publicity for themselves on the evening news."

The Silkwood family is pursuing a federal lawsuit against Kerr-McGee, but the only remaining allegation in the suit is a claim that Kerr-McGee was negligent in allowing Miss Silkwood to be contaminated with plutonium. Two conspiracy counts have been dismissed and the suit is expected to go to trial in February.

Sara Nelson, director of the labor task force for the National Organization of Women, told the enthusiastic protest crowd Monday she believes city police, the FBI and Kerr-McGee conspired against the late nuclear worker.

During most of the event; Miss Silkwood's mother, from Nederland stood nervously off to the side of the podium. She said she firmly believes her daughter's death wasn't an accident, but she isn't sure anything will ever be done about it.

Miss Silkwood's father, Bill Silkwood, said he appreciates the protesters support and thinks nuclear plants should be more strongly regulated.

The Oklahoma City rally was the main event in a week-long series of activities billed as Karen Silkwood Memorial Week by a national coalition including anti-nuclear protest groups.

Three persons were arrested earlier Monday in Washington when they marked the anniversary of Miss Silkwood's death with a demonstration at Kerr-McGee's offices in the nation's capital.

The protesters were arrested when they allegedly blocked pedestrian traffic.

Withdrawal Of Army Ordered By Idi Amin

NAIROBI, Kenya (UPI) — Ugandan President Idi Amin today ordered the unconditional withdrawal of his army from Tanzania, setting the stage for a quick end to the 16-day war that threatened to engulf the entire east African region.

But Amin warned that any further provocations from Tanzania would be dealt with by force and his armed forces would strike even farther into that country in an "act of legitimate self-defense."

Amin's decision to withdraw was a stunning defeat for the Ugandan military dictator and a triumph for his adversary, President Julius Nyerere of Tanzania. Amin had rushed to the battlefield Monday to quarterback his war against Tanzania and found an unexpected ally in the ferocious jungle ants that populate the battle zone, according to Radio Uganda.

Throughout the conflict Amin has offered to withdraw his army only if Tanzania guaranteed never to attack Uganda again and stopped aiding Ugandan exiles trying to oust Amin.

Tanzania scorned the peace offering, refused to give any guarantees, called for the destruction of the Ugandan army and the ouster of Amin himself and on Saturday launched a general offensive to try to recapture the 700-square mile salient held by Ugandan troops.

Under mounting pressure from other African nations, Amin capitulated today after touring the frontlines himself.

He sent telegrams to the United Nations, the Organization of African Unity and the Arab League saying: "Your excellencies, following the events of the last two weeks in which my armed forces, acting in self defense, occupied part of the territory of the Republic of Tanzania,

I wish to inform your excellencies that I have ordered my armed forces to withdraw to the recognized border of Uganda and Tanzania."

But he again warned Tanzania against trying to stir up trouble for his embattled regime or to follow up the withdrawal.

"If there is any attempt by Tanzania to cross into Uganda following the withdrawal of my armed forces into the national boundaries of Uganda, this will be considered as yet another act of invasion against my country which will be dealt with decisively," he said.

Those areas of Tanzania from which "these subversive exiles constantly harass and launch their attacks against my country would be occupied" by his army, Amin warned.

"If this happens," he said, "whatever measures I take will be an act of legitimate self-defense and no one should blame me. This is an appeal as well as a warning and those who have ears let them hear."

Amin ended his telegram by urging Nyerere to cooperate with Uganda "against the common enemy — the imperialists, racists and Zionists."

He urged the OAU to send observers "as soon as possible to confirm that the Ugandan armed forces have withdrawn from Tanzania. Tanzania should also declare to the world that I have kept my word."

He also urged Nyerere to "put an end once and for all to the activities of (former Ugandan President) Milton Obote and other exiles who are based in Tanzania who have mounted subversion against my country."

Spiraling Inflation Ends Family Farms

DENVER (AP) — Spiraling inflation, fueled by ill-conceived government monetary policies, is hastening the death of the family farm, says John Scott, master of the National Grange.
 "America cannot afford to lose the rural values that would be lost with the demise of the family farm," Scott told the opening session of the national farm group's 112th annual meeting Monday. Inflation is placing farmers in a cost-price squeeze, Scott said. Two-thirds of the retail price of food is determined by off-farm costs "and farmers do not have any profit protection," he said.

Doctors, Nurses Testify

CLEBURNE (AP) — Doctors and nurses who saw a West Texas doctor putting tape over his mother's mouth as she lay in a heavily sedated state were the lead-off witnesses in an attempted murder trial that began today.

Killer Arrives At NY Prison

ATTICA, N.Y. (AP) — "Son of Sam" killer David Berkowitz was immediately segregated from the general inmate population after his arrival at maximum security Attica prison, prison officials said. Berkowitz, who shot and killed six persons and terrorized New York City for a year, was transferred here Monday by van from the state's Central New York Psychiatric Center near Utica, officials said.

Following an hour-long interview with Berkowitz, Frances Mills, chief of the prison's psychiatric unit, said, "Right now, he's not psychotic, so he's just like any other inmate."

Nonetheless, Berkowitz, unlike most inmates, will be housed in a one-man cell in the prison's reception center and kept under daily psychiatric observation.

Berkowitz, 25, used a .44-caliber pistol to shoot 13 young persons, six of them fatally, between July 1976 and August 1977. He pleaded guilty to six murders and was sentenced last June to 25 years to life for each killing.

Local Pizza Restaurant Robbed By Two Bandits

Robbers continued their activities early this morning, choosing as their targets in two separate incidents a pizza parlor and an individual.

Tony Gonzales, the assistant manager of Pizza Inn at 2102 Broadway, said he and another employee were locking the doors to the parlor shortly before 2 a.m. today when they were approached by two black men wielding short-barreled .22-caliber revolvers.

Gonzales said one of the suspects said, "Let's go back inside and get some money." The assistant manager was forced back into the restaurant while the other employee was held at bay outside. The second bandit waited a few minutes and then told the employee to go in also, reports indicate.

Gonzales was ordered to open the safe. When he said he was having a hard time remembering the combination the suspect said, "Hurry up...you got five seconds. If they get me, you're going with me," according to police.

The safe was opened and the robbers took $851, reports show. Before leaving, the armed men tore the phone off the wall.

Police this morning were looking for the men, described as tall, thin and in their late teens or early 20s. Both suspects were clad in toboggans.

One suspect was wearing a blue coat, dark shirt and blue pants. His companion was wearing a dark brown coat, dark shirt and blue pants.

Less than an hour later, Lister Earl Young, 33, of Lubbock said he was walking in the 1700-block of Avenue A when he was robbed by a man and woman who called him into a nearby hotel.

He said that when the woman called him into the motel room, a man jumped him and took his pistol and $50 cash. Reports show the suspects then told him to leave or they would shoot him with his own gun. They also warned that if he told police, they would "get him."

Michele Poole told police she was entering her 20th Street apartment about 11 p.m. Monday when a young black man tried to grab her shoulder purse. The suspect ran off after failing to get the purse, reports show, but not before the woman was knocked down, causing several minor injuries.

In one of several recent burglaries, Scott Womack of 4406-B 36th St. said he was gone from home between 6 p.m. and 7:50 p.m. Monday when burglars entered his residence and stole $1,000 in property, including a color television and two electric guitars.

About $900 was the loss reported by Sharon Kay Miller, who said her home at 6801 19th St., No. 124, was burglarized between 6:40 p.m. and 10:40 p.m. Monday and a television set and camera stolen.

In city break-ins, Pat Patterson, the manager of a freight firm at 4201 Quirt Ave., told police that four portable color television sets were taken from the firm sometime late Sunday or early Monday. He estimated the loss at $2,000.

Thieves made off with several items, including $150 in coins, from the home of Antonio Chavela Enriques at 1007 E. 29th St. sometime late Sunday or early Monday.

Roy Blanchard, with a used car firm at 3803 Ave. Q, said someone tore a chrome ski rack from a Datsun 260Z on the lot sometime between 1 a.m. Sunday and 9 a.m. Monday. He told officers the ski rack was worth $300 and that $200 in damage had been done to the sports car.

Lawmakers Rap Council

AUSTIN (UPI) — Lawmakers apparently are not happy with recent activities of the State Advisory Council for Technical-Vocational Education and issued an official criticism of the body for its big budget and discrepancies in a recent council audit.

The House Public Education Committee Monday questioned salaries paid the council staff and arrangements that give the council autonomy from the Texas Education Agency that oversees Texas' public school programs.

"No other Texas Education Agency advisory committee has such a well-staffed and expensive operation," the committee's report said.

The 24-member advisory council was created in 1968 to advise the TEA on vocational programs.

But Alton Ice, the council's $32,400-a-year director, said his salary is not out of line with what his counterparts in other states receive.

Legislators noted the council's 1977-78 budget for an eight-member staff was $134,263 — an average salary of $16,782 per staff member.

"Discrepancies in control systems were found in property and equipment assignment and in banking and accounting practices" in the last audit of the council, the legislators noted in a unanimously-approved report.

Lawmakers said the advisory council closed its office recently and spent $1,500 in public money for entertainment expenses at a Houston meeting attended by the council's staff. They said Texas law requires state offices to be open every weekday except officially designated holidays.

But Ice said the money was spent to host a reception for educators at a national conference of the American Vocational Education.

"It wasn't public funds," Ice said. "It came from the Houston Community College. It's my understanding they got it from a private source."

In the unanimously approved report, the committee also demanded the TEA tighten financial controls over the state's educational bureaucracy.

British Heir Postpones Celebration

LONDON (AP) — Prince Charles, the bachelor heir to Britain's throne, is 30 years old today, but the birthday party won't be until Wednesday night.

The prince's calendar today was too crammed with official duties for much celebrating. After receiving gifts from his family at breakfast, he was to sit for a portrait, welcome visiting President Antonio Ramalho Eanes of Portugal, turn on the Christmas lights in Regent Street and attend a state banquet for Eanes.

But Wednesday night will be Charles' night at Buckingham Palace. His parents, Queen Elizabeth II and the Duke of Edinburgh, invited 20 for dinner and 350 to a birthday ball afterward.

"Tiaras will not be worn," said the invitations.

Charles, whose taste in music usually runs to Berlioz and similar composers, invited his favorite American pop group, The Three Degrees, and a West Indian steel band to entertain.

The guest list for the dinner included the former king and queen of Greece, Princess Elizabeth of Yugoslavia, Prince and Princess George of Hanover and Crown Princess Beatrix of Holland and Prince Claus.

Dancing into the night with his latest girlfriends, including Lady Sarah Spencer and Lady Camilla Fane, polishes the prince's image as a dashing jet-setter and the world's most eligible bachelor.

Whether doing the samba into the early hours in Rio, skiing the Swiss Alps or charging about on a polo pony, the Prince of Wales is known as a fun-loving man of action.

For a bachelor, he's been "unofficially" engaged to a dazzling number of high-born beauties, but rumors in the tabloids have been shot down in rapid-fire succession.

Charles rues the day, a few years ago, he told an interviewer that 30 was the right age to get married.

The running story of Charles' love life, hinted at rather than told in the gossip columns, has helped make the prince a headline-grabbing advertisement for modern royalty. Currently 15 books are being written about him.

Part of his charm is that he mixes dedication with an appetite for goonish humor. He's said to do a devastating impression of starchy brother-in-law, Capt. Mark Phillips.

"Prince Charles at 30 is a more straightforward, unpretentious and dedicated man than we have any right, or reason, to expect of one born to be king. We have been lucky," said The Sunday Times of London in a birthday tribute.

Israel Accused Of Illegal Digs

PARIS (UPI) — The U.N. Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization appeared headed for a new crisis today after the adoption of an Arab motion accusing Israel of illegal archeological digs in Jerusalem.

The threat of a new confrontation arose Monday when a special UNESCO commission voted 59 to 22 with 8 abstentions to condemn Israel's alleged damage to Moslem monuments through archeological digs.

The general conference was expected to confirm the vote within a few days.

The move might plunge UNESCO into the same difficulties it had to face in 1974 when the United States refused to pay its dues after UNESCO condemned Israel for its archeological digs and for depriving Arabs of education in its territories.

The United States voted against the Arab motion, backed by the Soviet bloc. Unlike 1974, however, the U.S. delegation didn't join the heated debate over the draft.

U.S. delegate Russel Heater later said, "I remained silent in order not to further inflame debate in this forum to the detriment of more important negotiations."

He indicated his delegation didn't want to stir any debate that might hurt the touchy Egyptian-Israeli peace talks.

Heater, however, served notice that "My silence does not in any way mean a weakening of my government's opposition to the resolution, condemnation or sanction which my government deplors as unconstitutional, unfair and contrary to normal practices between states."

Israeli delegate Amiel Najar rejected the Arab accusations as "simply absurd and intolerable."

"It is evident," Najar said in the packed meeting hall, "that if the illegal sanctions applied to Israel are maintained, such an injustice would not be understood either in Israel or the world."

Terrorists Conduct Bombings

ROME (UPI) — Terrorists staged a wave of minor bombing and arson attacks in central and northern Italy today in an apparent attempt to stop police from closing in on vital terrorist bases in the south.

Bombs went off during the night outside a police station, a treasury office and the offices of a housing project in Florence and two unexploded bombs were found at other places in the same city.

Bombings were reported in Pisa at a bank and a state housing agency office and at Prato against the home of a former mayor. In Turin, police reported an arson attack against a metal firm.

There were no injuries in any of the attacks and damage was slight.

An anonymous telephone caller told the Florence office of the ANSA news agency that the Florence, Pisa and Prato attacks were staged by "Proletarian Fighting Squads," one of the many names used by the ultra-leftist underground.

The apparent diversionary attacks came while anti-terrorist police wearing bullet proof vests searched the south Italian countryside for a secret hideout that might link Italy's terrorist network.

The search, near the World War II battleground of Cassino, was intensified after a terrorist attack squad ambushed and wounded the retired health director of a Milan prison.

Witnesses said two men and a woman ambushed Dr. Mario Marchetti, 65, as he left his home. The assailants shot him 11 times in the legs and fled on foot.

A telephone caller told the Italian news agency ANSA the attack had been carried out by the Communist Attack Squads, one of Italy's 138 terrorist groups.

But police speculated the gunmen might be using new group names to give the impression terrorist groups were growing in number.

They suggested the attackers might instead belong to the Red Brigades or Front Line group. A team of two men and a woman also took part in the killing last Wednesday of a southern magistrate and his two bodyguards.

The Wednesday attack, for which the Front Line claimed responsibility, was the bloodiest since the Red Brigades abducted former Premier Aldo Moro March 16 and killed his five bodyguards.

Police sources said the investigation of last week's killings was progressing quickly and that important links had been found between the latest wave of violence and Red Brigades members charged with killing Moro last May.

Naples police issued arrest warrants and filed multiple homicide charges against Nicola Valentini, 34, and Mario Rosaria Biondi, 34, in connection with the killing of magistrate Felice Calone and his two bodyguards.

Calone, 59, was chief magistrate of the southern town of Frosinone.

Miss Biondi was the girlfriend of 36-year-old Roberto Capone who died in the assault.

Volunteer School Program Coordinates Classroom Work, Student Activities

By CONNIE CHAPMAN
Family News Staff

The Volunteers in Public Schools program is a way parents and teachers say to the students "We're a team," describes Marjorie Rogers, a volunteer coordinator.

VIPS, as it is known, brings parents and other community volunteers into the schools. From a very small beginning in just a few schools about four years ago, the concept has spread to about half of the elementary schools in the Lubbock Independent School District. It is still spreading.

"Each school is a little bit different and so we tailor the program to fit each school's needs," says Linda Kinman, City PTA coordinator for the volunteer endeavor. Volunteers may be involved in such projects as marking math papers; coloring, cutting and putting together materials for a learning center; assisting with all sorts of jobs at the kindergarten level, and just generally being helpful to the students and teachers.

Parents, retired teachers, students considering careers in teaching while enrolled at Texas Tech University or Lubbock Christian College, and other community volunteers work together to give the school program that little something extra in the way of individual attention or additional resource materials.

"Parents can see the good that is coming out of the time they give and the teachers are enthusiastic also," reports Mrs. Kinman.

"Being involved helps parents appreciate what it takes to do things like getting paint smocks on thirty youngsters," explains Mrs. Rogers, who works in the Murfee Elementary School program.

In many cases the volunteers can work with small groups of students or even with individuals on a one-to-one basis.

In addition to working directly with students, volunteers assist teachers by preparing needed materials for learning centers and enrichment activities.

Parents of children who are now traveling to different schools are taking the VIPS program along. In several such situations, the program is just beginning.

example is the pairing of Murfee and Wheatley Elementary Schools. Murfee was among the first to have the volunteer program and now Audrey McDonald, a resident of the southside community, is the organizing coordinator for the new Wheatley group. She views her role simply as helping the Wheatley neighborhood start its own program. The coordinator sees this as a fine opportunity for parents to work together on a common project, helping to facilitate their children's education.

Another aspect of the volunteer program is the service given by students from the local university and college. In addition to making the same kinds of contributions to the total education program of the public schools as other participants, this group of students has an opportunity to learn more about possible careers. These students often receive credit toward courses in education for their service, but are called volunteers since they do not receive pay. This part of the program is under the direction of Ralph Madrid in the administrative offices of the school district.

One of the emphases of the volunteer program is to do things which free the teachers to do more creative professional teaching activities with their students. Dr. Velma Ruth Shambeck, Murfee principal, points with pride to the more than 6,000 hours volunteers in that school gave last year. "Think what that means in terms of the taxpayers' money and the value of the time of professional teachers," she remarked.

Rosemary Smith, one of the Murfee volunteers, remarked on how pleased her children are that she is a part of their school and a help to their teachers. "It would be just great if more parents could get involved," she said.

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: Gary and I have been married for a year, during which time he's been a perfect husband. I'm 24 and he's 28.

Last week I learned that Gary had a vasectomy before we were married. He didn't tell me. I found out accidentally when I came across his medical records.

Before we were married he promised me a family. How should this be handled?

WANTS CHILDREN

Dear Wants: Unfortunately, your husband's credibility is consistent with his fertility. (Imagine promising you a rose garden when he knew he had no seeds?)

I need more information. Why did Gary have a vasectomy? (If he dislikes children, he'd probably make a poor father.)

Is his vasectomy irreversible? (Some are not) If his is, and he now wants a family, there are children to adopt, you know.

This world needs responsible parents more than it needs more children.

DEAR ABBY: While flying from Los Angeles to Chicago recently, I was rudely awakened from a much-needed nap by a booming voice that came over the loud-speaker with: "THIS IS YOUR CAPTAIN SPEAKING! We are now flying over the Grand Canyon...etc"

Abby, this was not a chartered flight carrying a load of sight-seeing hicks who had never flown before. I'm sure most of the passengers had already seen the Grand Canyon from 39,000 feet.

EXTRA NUTRITION
Skin needs extra nutrition in cold, raw weather. Try this inexpensive, home-made beauty mask. Mix colloidal oatmeal with a good quality witch hazel to form a thick paste. Add a few drops of toilet water and apply evenly on the face. Let dry and remove with warm water and soap. Close the pores and tone the skin by patting on chilled witch hazel.

Be a friend to those of us who fly the friendly skies frequently and print this. It might help.

J.E. IN.L.A.

Dear J.E.: I also fly the friendly skies frequently, and concur. (Captain, oh, captain, are you listening?)

DEAR ABBY: A few years ago a man we employed for many years in our retail business left us to open his own store — in competition with us. No particular ill will was involved, but we were not overjoyed since we had taught him the business from the ground up.

We continue to do well, but this man has done even better because he has a better location.

A friend of ours seems to take a perverse pleasure in constantly pointing out our competitor's ads in the newspaper, and talking endlessly about what a fanastic success he has made in such a short time. We are bewildered and somewhat hurt.

Are we overly sensitive? We feel very uncomfortable having to listen to this subtle form of needling every time we're in this person's company.

Any suggestions?
PHOENIX REPUBLIC READER

Dear Reader: One who makes a habit of bringing up an irritating subject is bad news. The Chinese put it this way: "Never speak of a rope in the home of one whose relative has been hanged."

If I were you, I would demote this "friend" to a nodding acquaintance.

Do you wish you had more friends? For the secret of popularity, get Abby's new booklet: "How To Be Popular: You're Never Too Young or Too Old." Send $1 with a long, self-addressed, stamped (28 cents) envelope to Abby, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Opening lead: King of ♣.

When this hand was played in a team match, the defense at the two tables followed similar lines. Yet one declarer succeeded while the other did not.

Having opened a minimum hand, South had only one story to tell. After showing both his suits and hearing his partner carefully refrain from bidding no trump, North raised on his doubleton spade and the best contract was reached.

At the first table West led the king of hearts and shifted to the queen of spades. Declarer won the king and led a heart. West won the ten and continued a second trump, removing dummy's last trump.

New declarer went after diamonds. He discarded a heart on the third diamond, but West ruffed and cashed another heart to defeat the contract.

Declarer was unlucky to encounter accurate defense and then find West with only two diamonds and three trumps. Yet he had only himself to blame for going down, as the second declarer demonstrated.

He too received an opening lead of the king of hearts, followed by a shift to the queen of spades. But he came up with a simple counterstroke—he allowed the queen of spades to win the second trick!

The defense was rendered helpless. If West continued a trump, declarer would win, draw the last trump and take the rest of the tricks by running dummy's diamonds. The best West could do was cash another high heart, but that was the defenders' last trick. There was still a trump in dummy to take care of the third round of hearts, whereafter declarer could return to his hand, draw trumps and then run dummy's diamonds.

The hold-up play in trumps was a simple but most effective maneuver.

Stock Prices Continue To Decline

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market remained on the defensive today amid expectations of continuing upward pressure on interest rates.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which fell 15.08 Monday to its lowest closing level in seven months, slipped another 1.21 to 790.80 by noontime today.

Losers outnumbered gainers by a 4-1 margin in the broad tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said the market was depressed by a widespread belief that interest rates will continue to rise.

A handful of banks in Chicago and Philadelphia raised their prime lending rates from 10 1/4 to 11 percent Monday.

Brokers noted projections that recent rises in open-market money rates have virtually assured that the basic rate on blue-chip loans will go to at least 1 1/8 by the end of the year.

The latest rise in rates, which is mainly the result of government moves aimed at helping the battered dollar in foreign exchange, has increased the likelihood of a recession in the view of many economists. Administration officials maintain, however, that a recession can be avoided.

Borden led the active list, off 1/2 at 27 1/4. A 383,600-share block changed hands at 27 1/4.

The NYSE's composite index lost 18 to 51.65. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index fell 1.16 to 140.07.

Volume on the Big Board stepped up to 12.79 million shares as of noontime, against 8.23 million at the same point Monday.

24 Injured In Plant Explosion

FORT MARTIN, W. Va. (AP) — Billowing black coal dust, flames and shooting pieces of metal ripped through an electric plant in a fire and two explosions that injured 24 workmen.

"Some of the guys were in a fire," said plant worker James Biser, "I grabbed a cloth and rubbed out the flames in one guy's hair, then we poured water over his head."

No one died in the explosions and fire Monday. But 24 of the 80 workmen at the 1,077-megawatt plant were injured, two severely, officials said. Seventeen men were hospitalized.

Sections of the plant's light aluminum walls were torn loose in the explosions, which were set off by a small fire in a coal pulverizer, said Lyle Corder, a spokesman for Monongahela Power Co., one of four firms that jointly own the plant.

The pulverizers convert coal into a highly volatile dust to create a quicker burning, hotter fire in the boilers, which make steam to generate electricity, Corder said.

Many of the injured were taken to hospitals by their fellow workers.

Pipefitter Elmer Barnett, who was making a telephone call in a first-floor office when the blasts occurred, rushed two flights up to where he had been working.

He found Danny Rochester of Reedsville. "His overalls were burned off completely and his shirt was burned pretty good. But the worst burns were on his face and hands," the 40-year-old Barnett said.

Rochester was taken to West Penn Burn Center in Pittsburgh, where he and workman Anthony Liston were reported in serious condition, the most severely injured among the workmen.

The plant's telephone lines were knocked out in the explosions, and workmen rushed across the state line to Marion, Pa., to summon help. Firefighters took about 30 minutes to extinguish the blaze.

Plant officials could not explain the cause of the fire and explosions. But damage to the power plant appeared to be only superficial, said Carroll Curry, Monongahela director of public relations.

The plant shut down automatically when the blasts occurred, Curry said he could not estimate when the plant would be back in service, but electrical supply would not be seriously affected.

The plant is owned by Monongahela, West Penn Power Co., Potomac Edison Co. and Duquesne Light Co. All but Duquesne Light are part of the Allegheny Power System, the firm that owns the Pleasant Power Station at Willow Island, where 51 workers died in the collapse of cooling tower scaffolding in April.

Seattle Offers New Trolleys For Fleet

SEATTLE (AP) — Seattle's transit system, known as Metro, is spending almost $39 million on a fleet of 109 electric buses, promising a smoother ride 38 years after the first trolleys went into operation.

A Metro official says an electronic "chopper" in the new trolleys feeds electricity smoothly to the motor and should eliminate the all-too-familiar jerks for Seattle's trolley riders. The electric buses, along with 115 vehicles ordered by Philadelphia, will be the first trolleys built in the United States in 20 years.

Troupe Re-Creates Radio Shows

By JAY SHARBUTT
LOS ANGELES (AP) — The shows are radio classics of yesterday, right down to sound effects and original commercials. They are even performed twice a night — the repeat for the West Coast, of course.

But you'll never hear them broadcast. It's the "Variety Arts Radio Theater," whose 10-member troupe this month began re-creating on stage such goodies from network radio's heyday as "The Shadow," "Lights Out" and Ed Wynn's "Fire Chief."

It goes on here Tuesdays in the Tin Pan Alley Room of the non-profit Variety Arts Theater, an emporium founded last year by magician Milt Larsen to preserve the best of the past in variety entertainment.

"Some of the shows are pretty funny, but the old commercials get the biggest laughs," says Joey D'Auria, producer of and actor in the radio shows at the members-only theater.

"Did you know, for example, 'The Shadow' is brought to you by the Blue Coal Company, America's favorite anthracite?"

He said about 75 folks usually attend each show, where they see actors emoting at three ancient RCA microphones when the equally ancient "On the Air" sign on the tiny stage lights up.

All the scripts are originals, transcribed from tapes of 5,000 network radio productions compiled over the years by Roger Rittner, an old-time radio buff and director of the never-aired radio programs.

"We also try to do sound effects live, as close to the original as possible,"

D'Auria says. "Of course, it's a bit hard now to find sound effects props, so we build them as we need them."

To complete the re-creation, he adds, everyone on stage dresses in the fashions of the 1930s and 1940s when radio was king.

Ironically, the producer, a native of Scarsdale, N.Y., never heard the first-time broadcasts of the shows he now helps to bring back. He's only 26 and wasn't around when they were.

"But my wife thinks I'm a walking anachronism," he says, explaining that he developed an interest in old-time radio in his college days, when he heard tapes of ancient shows aired on a local station.

None of the actors now doing his programs are well-known. But D'Auria hopes some day to lure some of the stars of the original productions into the act.

"It'd be great if we could get, say, Eve Arden or Gale Gordon, to either give us a little opening before a production of 'Our Miss Brooks' or even recreate their roles."

D'Auria, whose programs are done in an old five-story building downtown, said the audience ranges in age, from young to old. He laughed in recalling opening-night talk of two matronly patrons.

"I'd say they were in their mid-60s," he said. "After the show was over, one told the other: 'I'm so glad we came to-night. My father never would let us listen to 'The Shadow.'"

Old Sailors Form Group To Save Liberty Ship

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Crusty old sailors across the nation are rallying to rescue a rusting old Liberty Ship, the last authentic relic of a lusty era in America's military might in World War II.

About 200 men who built or rode the decks of the Liberty Ships — dubbed "Ugly Duckings" by President Franklin D. Roosevelt — or worked in the shipyards which built a record 2,742 of the vessels have formed the group.

Its aim is to restore the S.S. Jeremiah O'Brien, tie the ship up at a San Francisco dock and turn it into a free museum to honor those who built, loaded, sailed or died aboard these workhorses of American war power over three decades ago.

"These are men of maritime heritage, who have made their lives at sea — it's a kind of an emotional project with them," said Cy Lee, a retired Merchant Marine captain who is president of the National Liberty Ship Memorial, the O'Brien museum organization.

"The history of the Liberties is legend," said Lee. "It is the largest single class of ships ever built from a single design."

"It touched the hearts of more people than any other vessel. It has to be one of the most outstanding efforts ever mounted in the history of this nation."

The Liberties carried tens of thousands of Americans to battle, hauled their food and guns, and as hospital ships brought the wounded home. At

Money Market Funds Created By Today's Inflationary Era

Thanks to LOLA TILSTRA, RUTGERS, N.J. - TILSTRA'S LAW: IT NEVER FAILS ... UNLESS IT WAS FAILING!

By LeROY POPE
 NEW YORK (UPI) — The present high interest rates have given the $0 or so money market mutual funds around the country a big lift, says Paul Robertson, president of Capital Preservation Fund of Palo Alto, Calif.
 The money market funds, whose assets as of Nov. 1 were estimated by Robertson at about $8.5 billion, are a creation of the inflationary era.
 He said many of them are pretty small but the largest, Merrill Lynch's Ready Assets Fund, has a hunky $1.3 billion in assets.
 Unlike older mutual funds, yield is listed last among their aims with safety first and liquidity second. Generally they are completely cut off from growth prospects, which often are the main purpose of traditional mutual funds.
 Capital Preservation Fund, for example, invests only in U.S. Treasury obligations, which don't grow.
 The business of these funds has gone up and down as prevailing interest rose and fell, Robertson explained.
 "When interest rates dropped in 1976, our fund's assets fell from $56 million to $40 million. Now, with interest rates sky high, we're up above $100 million and we can fluctuate as much as $10 million in a day because we have some large corporate investors who switch big sums suddenly to take advantage of an opportunity to get even a substantial fraction of a point more interest for just a few days."

 Robertson said comparatively few persons realize that even investors with rather modest liquid sums sometimes can increase their yield by up to two percentage points by a judicious shift of funds to take advantage of special conditions.
 He said his fund had only one corporate investor who had actually realized that big a gain by a shift but that others who followed the money markets closely had realized increases of more than a point.
 In order to make these quick shifts possible, the money market funds have to stay very liquid and give their investors withdrawal privileges comparable to those of an ordinary bank account.
 Just as many corporations write checks to pay bills on rather remotely located banks so that they will continue to have the use of the money involved for a few extra days, the money market fund managers make a big deal out of what Robertson calls an extended float.

Man In North Carolina Studies Old Newspapers

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The manifesto of women's liberation might have been written yesterday.
 "Too long the male sex usurped to themselves the title of lords of the creation, enacted laws and enforced statutes at large, without consulting or considering women worthy of being their coadjutors," it reads.
 "Thus situated, a body of ... women resolved to erect a parliament of their own, and represent themselves in the character of real women."
 The date on the tract? March 31, 1796.
 Dennis D. Tyrer of Raleigh found it in that day's edition of the North Carolina Minerva and Fayetteville Advertiser.
 Tyrer's hobby is studying the old newspapers of North Carolina. He searches for tidbits of what he calls "the social history" buried in their pages.
 To be sure, the native of Great Britain often finds the mundane, such as wedding announcements of 100 years ago that sound as if they came from a newspaper of today. "But like good music, it kind of grows and develops with you," he said.
 Tyrer said he is constantly amazed by both the contrasts and similarities to modern life and the subjects that concerned newspaper readers in the 18th and 19th centuries.
 Consider the essay "Man and Wife" that appeared in the Wilmington Centinel and General Advertiser on Aug. 13, 1788.

U.S. Plans Oil Price Plea

WASHINGTON (AP) — Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal is heading for the Middle East, where he is expected to appeal to oil-exporting nations to keep price increases next year to a minimum.

The administration already is resigned to an increase in the world price of oil of at least 5 percent, and one official said Monday that a 10 percent increase would not be surprising.

policy, told reporters. An increase of 10 percent, $1.27 on top of the current price of $12.70 per barrel, could bring an increase in gasoline and home heating oil prices of between 1 cent and 2 cents per gallon.

Blumenthal, who leaves Thursday, will spend three days in Saudi Arabia, from Friday to Sunday, and also will visit Iran, Kuwait and Abu Dhabi, three other key oil-exporting nations.

TRAIN DISINFECTED — Masked workers spray disinfectant over the seats of Japan's famed "Bullet Train" Monday to try to halt a near-epidemic of cholera. A recent victim of the disease rode on the train. A total of 46 new cholera cases have been reported to officials, making it the second-largest outbreak since the end of World War II. Oil Workers End Strike Despite New Violence

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Iranian oil workers ended their strike against Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi today, but troops opened fire on two demonstrations against the monarch, killing at least three persons and wounding 19, the official Pars news agency reported.

The 59-year-old monarch began freeing political prisoners in August and pledged eventual return to civilian government when he installed an emergency military government last week. But it was believed that he would not carry out his pledge as long as there was likelihood of violence.

A bomb planted in his car exploded as Link, the American director of Oil Services Co., was getting into the vehicle in Ahwaz, in the heart of the southwest oil fields, officials reported.

The casualties were reported in Sonqer, west of Tehran, where Pars said demonstrators set fire to the provincial governor's office and his home. Troops also opened fire to disperse demonstrators in the Tehran bazaar, but there was no immediate report of casualties.

The oil company reported strikers returning back to work all over the southwestern Kuzestan oil fields and at the giant refinery complex at Abadan, on the Persian Gulf.

Oil Services Co. operates the oil fields on contract for the national oil company. It is a consortium composed of Exxon, British Petroleum, Royal Dutch Shell, the French petroleum company and seven smaller U.S. firms.

The government oil company announced that its 37,000 workers were flocking back to their jobs after a two-week walkout that cut production more than half, cost the treasury an estimated $750 million in oil revenues and bolstered the shah's foes. The end of the strike increased belief that the ruler had weathered the recent serious challenge to his 37-year reign.

"We expect a 100 percent turnout," Mezaeyeni said. He said production at Abadan, the world's biggest refinery, should return to the pre-strike level of 500,000 barrels a day by midnight. But he said it would take five or six days for production of crude from the oil fields to be brought up to the normal 6 million barrels a day from production Monday of 2.7 million barrels. Well-head output was cut back during the strike and has to be phased back slowly to avoid damaging equipment.

Scores of Americans have received death threats in the past two weeks of heightened opposition to the shah's rule and foreign support of his government. About 250 U.S. nationals, most of them women and children, left Ahwaz, but most Americans interviewed said they would ignore the threats.

The strike leaders agreed to call off the walkout after meeting with officials of the state oil monopoly, the National Iranian Oil Co., company spokesman Nezamuddin Mezaeyeni said.

Iran is the world's second biggest exporter of oil, after Saudi Arabia. Half a million barrels a day is used domestically, and the rest is exported, including 900,000 barrels to the United States.

At the start of the strike on Oct. 31, the output of crude oil dropped to 950,000 barrels a day. Production was partially restored by foreign experts and military technicians and reached 2.7 million barrels Monday. Four supertankers were already waiting at a Persian Gulf jetty for loading.

Government Reveals Fraud Prosecutions

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thirty persons have been indicted and 10 convicted for alleged fraud and other criminal abuses of the government's $11 billion public jobs program, the Labor Department said today.

the creation of small teams that will conduct random surveys of local CETA programs in search of mismanagement and other abuses that might increase the possibility of fraud.

Officials also disclosed that full investigations into alleged fraud or abuse have touched approximately one-tenth of the 460 principal cities, counties and states that receive funds under the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA).

Currently, the Labor Department sends investigators to cities where complaints of abuse have been filed. The new program will look into local programs before any complaints are lodged.

The disclosures came as the department announced a new program to prevent fraud and abuse in department programs.

The first two teams will go out next week to investigate programs in Mobile, Ala., and the Cherokee Indian Nation in Oklahoma.

Labor Secretary Ray Marshall said the first step in the new preventive project is

Those sites were chosen at random, and the department said it had no evidence of wrongdoing at either location.

(Continued From Page One) Avalanche-Journal that when her granddaughter arrived home "she was real nervous over it. All she talked about was that she was scared she'd dream about it ... it wasn't make believe."

Marshall said repeatedly at a news conference today that he does not know how extensive fraud and abuse might be within the CETA program, which has been rocked by allegations of widespread abuse in recent years.

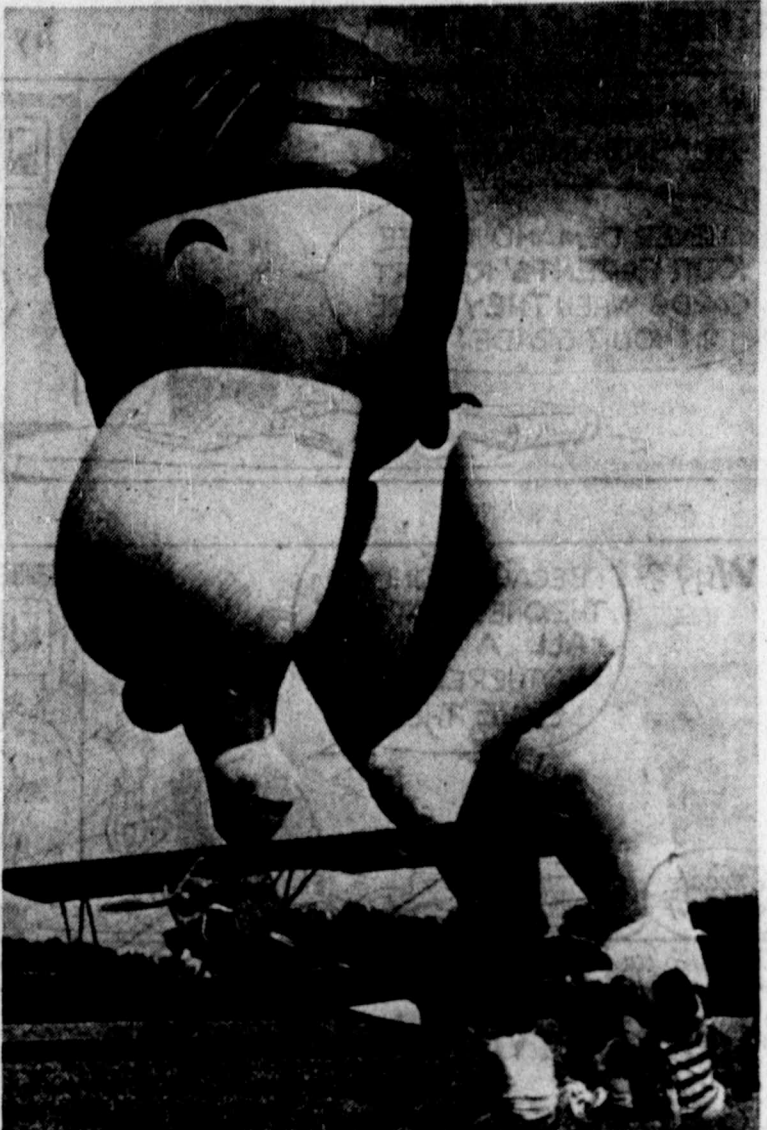

Rocco DeMarco, who is heading the department investigation, said his office has looked into approximately 250 complaints concerning CETA since the special investigative unit was set up earlier this year.

Of those complaints, about 140 to 150 warranted full investigations in something less than 50 governmental units that receive funds.

Altogether, some 460 city, county and state governments are funded under CETA, which has created approximately 725,000 jobs intended for long-term unemployed people.

Jury Ponders Assault Case

By FRANK PATRICK

Avalanche-Journal Staff

Did Leroy Adams shoot Victoria Jean Simmons? Or was he an innocent victim, framed by an organized crime syndicate which tried to muscle in on a local massage parlor?

high standard of living that you don't get for $10 or $20 massages."

Mrs. Simmons had testified she was married at 16 and had little money when she moved to Lubbock in 1975. She indicated that some time after the shootings she had moved into a $64,000 home in southwest Lubbock and purchased a 1977-model Cadillac, although her husband, she said, had been unemployed for some time.

It was up to jurors today to shift through conflicting theories of the case, as attorneys presented them during final arguments in Adams' aggravated assault trial, being conducted in Judge William R. Shaver's 140th District Court.

The witness said she had worked at two massage parlors, including Brandy's, before opening her own. She said she now makes from $400 to $800 a week at her current business.

The gray-haired, soft-spoken defendant, 53, is accused of wounding Mrs. Simmons, 19, during a May 19, 1976, shooting spree at Brandy's Massage Parlor, 2802 34th St. Adams' wife, Margaret Holt Adams, 48, was killed during the late-afternoon flurry of gunshots inside the massage parlor. Mrs. Adams, known as "Brandy," operated the establishment.

Mrs. Simmons beatfully replied in the negative when Montford asked her if she ever engaged in any sexual "hanky-panky" at massage parlors.

In testimony Monday, Mrs. Simmons told the eight-woman, four-man jury that Adams was the man who walked into a northeast room of the building and shot her twice, leaving her lying wounded on the floor.

Montford argued to jurors that his client's inference that organized crime was behind the shootings was credible.

She said she was shot after first hearing Mrs. Adams pleading with an assailant, and then hearing a gunshot in another room of the building.

"The only evidence we have of organized crime is from him (the defendant)," Assistant District Attorney John Kilpatrick retorted.

After the state concluded its case, Adams took the witness stand to say he had shot neither of the women, but was "set up" by organized crime.

He said the very fact that Mrs. Simmons was wounded made it unlikely that she was part of a plot to frame the defendant, noting Mrs. Simmons had named Adams to police as her assailant just a few minutes after the incident.

Defense attorney John Montford launched a no-holds barred attack on Mrs. Simmons' character and credibility during his final argument.

"Do you think she volunteered to get shot? Does that sound credible?" Kilpatrick asked.

"This is a sad day for Lubbock County when people like her are able to perpetuate themselves in sin," Montford said. "You've seen her demeanor, her rudeness, her lifestyle, her wealth... That is a

Pointing to testimony indicating Mrs. Adams had filed a divorce action against her husband, Kilpatrick then offered his own theory of the case. "He had been on a gray train making big bucks with Brandy. She was about to ditch him."

Kilpatrick termed the defense account "incredible" and opined the shootings were the result of a common domestic dispute. He said Mrs. Simmons was shot because she had tried to telephone for help after Mrs. Adams was shot.

Mrs. Simmons Monday had stated Adams walked into the doorway of the room while she was on the telephone and shot her twice.

She said she was shot once in the left hand. "That was while I was talking on the phone like this," the tall brunette said, cupping her left hand near her ear. "It just missed my head."

The witness said she also was shot in the left knee and still carries a bullet in her leg. She said she was hospitalized for more than two weeks.

Mrs. Simmons testified that Adams came into Brandy's shortly after 5 p.m. the day of the shootings.

She indicated Adams and his wife subsequently met in a west room of the building, while she sat in a northeast room a short distance away. She said she sat by a telephone.

Mrs. Simmons said she heard Mrs. Adams say "Please, Roy, don't" and then heard a gunshot. She said she picked up the telephone and told the operator there had been a shooting.

It was then, she said, that Adams walked in and shot her.

The witness said she fell to the floor. At further queries from Kilpatrick, Mrs. Simmons said the gunman fired other shots around the room before leaving, indicating that the shots were fired randomly.

The prosecutor asked if the shots which hit her had been aimed at random. "No, he was shooting directly at my head," Mrs. Simmons testified.

City, Schools File Lawsuits Over Unpaid Taxes

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

If you neglected to pay city-school property taxes on your automobile in recent years, there is a chance you've just been sued.

With computers doing most of the paperwork, the City of Lubbock and Lubbock Independent School District Monday filed lawsuits against about 100 car owners over allegedly delinquent tax accounts.

They represent the first batch under a computer-driven collection system that eventually may be producing 15,000 to 20,000 suits annually.

The city-school tax office simultaneously mailed to defendants letters telling them that if they pay up by Nov. 23, they will save at least $8 in court costs.

In the past, letters threatening a lawsuit over a small amount of back taxes on personal property often have been ignored, tax officials say. One reason, they admit, is that the threats rarely were carried out.

But this time is different, tax department administrators said.

"These letters are obviously no bluff," said collections supervisor Roland Wilkinson. "This time, it's the real thing."

Indeed, enclosed in each defendant's letter is a copy of the suit filed against him. The suits describe the kinds of cars and the years and amounts of taxes of the accounts involved.

Each suit is for less than $200, so it can be handled in a justice-of-the-peace court. The computer system is not programmed to sue on larger accounts, since they must be filed in a district court or county court-at-law and involve more paperwork.

"I am enthusiastic about the new system," John Brooks, chief tax assessor-collector, said. "I feel this will answer a lot of questions about the equitability of our delinquent tax collection efforts. Equitability was the rationale of the school board and city council early this year when they authorized Brooks to proceed with the computerized in-house back-tax drive. School board president Charles Waters said that cracking down on delinquent bills "will make the community a whole lot happier about paying taxes."

The computer system, patterned after similar efforts by the City of Austin, originally was to go into operation last summer. Implementation had to be postponed due to programming problems, other tax-office priorities and delays in the supply of necessary paper forms.

The school district's delinquent tax roll totals about $8.1 million; the city's, $4.9 million. Automobiles and other personal property account for about three-fourths of the delinquent bills.

Bills under $200 represent the "great majority" of the delinquent accounts on the auto rolls, city-school tax attorney Cleddie Edwards said.

He said about 50 suits were filed in the court of Pct. 1, Place 2 Justice of the Peace Charles Smith and another 50 in the court of Pct. 6 Justice of the Peace Wayne LeCroy. Clerks for the two Justices of the Peace still were logging suits Monday afternoon.

To minimize clerical work on the courts, "we furnished each JP with a docket sheet all filled out," Edwards said.

"We're filing the suits immediately, but we are not yet having the citations issued. Instead, we're mailing a copy of the petition with a 10-day letter to each defendant."

If the account hasn't been settled before Nov. 23, a citation will be issued and formally by the sheriff's department, Edwards said.

There are two reasons for the 10-day grace period, he added.

First, serving citations could be a bottleneck in the sheriff's office. The more cases that can be settled without citations, the lighter the burden on the sheriff's staff.

Also, Edwards said, the waiting period "can save the defendant $8" since he won't be charged the process-serving costs.

The suits range in amount from $187.63 to $199.83. They represent the largest accounts on the delinquent rolls that still can be handled within the state-imposed $200 limits on Justice of the Peace court suits.

By virtue of a constitutional amendment passed by Texas voters last week, the city-school tax office soon will be allowed to file suits for up to $500 in Justice of the Peace courts, Edwards said.

Brooks said he fears the computerized back-tax drive may be a "public relations problem" in light of two recent events:

— Last week, voters passed the Tax Relief Amendment, authorizing the state legislature to exempt up to two family cars. Brooks, Edwards and others stressed, however, that such an exemption will have no effect on taxes already levied. The tax office is "obligated to pursue" all delinquent accounts, Brooks said. — Last month, car owners got their 1978 city-school tax bills in the mail. Those bills are not due until Jan. 31, 1979, Brooks said. The suits filed Monday involve years 1977 and prior.

Jim Kilchenstein, assistant assessor-collector, said persons who are sued may pay in full or, as a last resort, work out a payment schedule with the tax office.

"Otherwise we have no choice but to let the suit take its course. We're not hung up on suing people — but if that is what it takes to collect, we'll do it," he said.

The tax office hopes to pursue each suit until an "abstract of judgment" is obtained from the court, Kilchenstein said. "That means when you get ready to sell your house, you'll find you can't until you first pay taxes." Kilchenstein said the delinquent tax drive could not have been mounted without the computer system. "The logistics are simply overwhelming to do it manually," he said.

Lubbockite Receives Award For Heroism

Mike Valdez thinks anyone else would have done the same thing. But Monday afternoon in Shallowater the former oilfield worker was honored for his courage in trying to rescue an elderly man from his burning home earlier this year.

Valdez, 23, of 3319 1/2 27th St. in Lubbock, was on his way to work in Levelland Feb. 17, when he was flagged down by a distraught Mrs. King L. Potter whose invalid husband was trapped in their blazing Shallowater house.

Valdez wasted no time in attempting to bring King out of the burning home, entering three times before he was able to locate the victim and bring him out. B.R. Hagood, a neighbor, assisted.

Although King did not survive the fire, Valdez' AMOCO supervisor, Charles Miller, thought enough of his deed to nominate him for the Joseph A. Holmes Safety Association personal heroism award.

Valdez received the award Monday afternoon in a formal presentation in Shallowater City Hall. The honor is given to less than 20 Americans annually. Present at the ceremony were Valdez' family and a grateful Mrs. Potter. Accepting the medal and plaque from Miller, Valdez said he was "very honored," and commented, "I just did what I hope someone would have done if it were my father in there."

The Holmes Association aims to increase public awareness of safety by issuing awards for outstanding achievements in safety. It was founded in 1916 to commemorate the efforts of Dr. Joseph A. Holmes, first director of the U.S. Bureau of Mines, who strove to promote safety in mining industries and in general.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

By Bernice Bede Osol

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Heed the advice of shrewd heads in business matters tomorrow. If you act too impulsively you could suffer a loss where you should make a profit.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21.) For reasons known only to yourself you may be tempted to do something tomorrow that opposes your better judgment. This could be an enormous blunder.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You're not apt to put yourself out tomorrow for others unless it is advantageous to you in some specific manner. Such an attitude will do little for your image.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Do something fun tomorrow with a buddy who has been helpful to you in the past. Go the whole route, even if it means grabbing the tab.

PICES (Feb. 20-March 20) Tomorrow can be a very productive day, but it could also be fraught with challenges. You're a match for anything you have to contend with, so be of stout heart.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) The hostile manner of another will have small effect upon you tomorrow when you turn the other cheek. Go your merry way and let him grumble alone.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) There is material opportunity around you tomorrow, but it's also possible you may not develop it to the fullest. Don't waste your good shots.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Be willing to share the good that befalls you tomorrow. If you're tight-fisted where you should be generous you may receive like treatment at a later date.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Be careful tomorrow that money doesn't become a nasty issue between yourself and one you're fond of. Friendship is more important than the silver involved.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You're lucky tomorrow in things you personally manage but be wary of ruffling feathers in the process. Inspire your followers, don't incite them.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Keep that particular goal in mind tomorrow, or you could be stopped by the first obstacle. Your motives must be greater than the menace.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Tactics that are too assertive will produce a dilatory response tomorrow. The opposite will be true if your approach is warm and jovial.

Experience Helped New Solons

By W. DALE NELSON
WASHINGTON (AP) — More and more, it looks as though a good way to become a member of Congress is to work for one.

At least eight of the 97 congressional candidates elected for the first time on Nov. 7 had worked on the Capitol Hill staffs of senators or representatives.

Another, Sen.-elect Paul Tsongas, D-Mass., started out as a congressional intern. Still another, Rep.-elect Mike Barnes, D-Md., worked on the presidential campaign staff of Sen. Edmund Muskie, D-Maine.

And Democrat Tom Daschle, involved in a still-undecided House race in South Dakota, formerly worked for Democrat Sen. James Abourezk of that state.

Because 28 of the 30 former Capitol Hill staff members already in Congress will be back, this means there will be at least 38 lawmakers who have worked in some capacity for a member of Congress or a congressional committee when the next session begins in January.

In 1963, according to biographical sketches in the Congressional Directory, there were 22. That's an increase of nearly 75 percent in 15 years.

With the election of Democrat Al Swift to succeed his former boss, Rep. Lloyd Meeds, four of the seven House members from the state of Washington will be former staff members.

In Swift's opinion, however, the disadvantages of Capitol Hill staff experience outweigh the advantages for a candidate.

"In my judgment the advantage you have comes in savvy and know-how, but the connection is a disadvantage you have to overcome," he said.

Swift worked for Meeds from 1965 to 1969, returned to his hometown of Bellingham, Wash., to work in radio and television, and then rejoined Meeds two years ago. At the time, Meeds was expected to run for re-election.

"If I had had the slightest inkling I would be running for Congress, I would not have joined Lloyd's staff," Swift said. "This is not a year in which you run in Washington state from Washington, D.C."

The other former congressional staffers in the Washington delegation are Rep. Don Bonker, who was a research assistant to former Sen. Maurine Neuberger, D-Ore.; Rep. Tom Foley, who was assistant chief clerk and special counsel of the Senate Interior Committee, and Rep. Norm Dicks, who was a legislative assistant to Sen. Warren G. Magnuson, D-Wash.

All are Democrats. Altogether, 29 of the ex-staffer lawmakers are Democrats and nine are Republicans.

A spokesman for the Republican Congressional Campaign Committee said most GOP staff members who ran for House seats lost. And in a Senate race, Don Stastee, administrative assistant to retiring Sen. Carl Curtis, R-Neb., failed in a bid to succeed his boss. Apparently the only senator-elect with Capitol Hill staff experience is Nancy Landon Kassebaum, R-Kan., who spent one year on the staff of the man she succeeds, Republican Sen. James B. Pearson.

Besides Swift, the representatives-elect who worked as regular staff members in congressional offices are: —Tony Coelho, a Democrat who succeeds his old boss, Rep. B.F. Sisk, D-Calif.

—Marvin Leath, D-Texas, succeeding Democratic Rep. W.R. Poage, on whose staff he served.

—Dan Mica, a Democrat who succeeds Rep. Paul Rogers, D-Fla., for whom he worked.

—Pat Williams, D-Mont., who was administrative assistant to Montana Demo-

Concern Over FTC Voiced By Graham

WASHINGTON (AP) — Katharine Graham, publisher of The Washington Post, says she is very concerned about the Federal Trade Commission's "general tendencies to push further and further into the realm of information and its marketing."

In remarks to an advertising industry luncheon here Saturday, Mrs. Graham cited FTC action last summer against the Los Angeles Times in which the agency challenged the widespread use of volume discounts in newspaper and other media advertising rates. She said a free society should continue "to entrust a lot of judgements to the marketplace, instead of having them preempted by Congress and the agencies."

New Solar Heater Developed At IIT

CHICAGO (AP) — A solar heater that operates like venetian window blinds has been developed by an engineer and her students at the Illinois Institute of Technology.

The sun's energy is stored in treated salt in the slats of the blind, which reflect heat and light, then warm a room at night. Dr. Lois Graham, professor of mechanical engineering, and James Stice, a recent IIT graduate, developed the heater with the help of seven students. Mrs. Graham said the blind is not ready for commercial production and would serve to augment rather than supplant other heating systems.

Yankees Acquire Bosox Ace

BOSTON (AP)—Circle the date Oct. 1, 1978 for future baseball historians of the Boston Red Sox. It marked veteran pitcher Luis Tiant's farewell appearance in a Boston uniform.

El Tiant's swan song never will be forgotten. As the crowd chanted "Loo-eee, Loo-eee," Tiant responded with a two-hit, 5-0 victory over Toronto on the final day of the regular season, forcing a play-off for the American League East championship.

To many fans, the echoes of the chant still were ringing 24 hours later as Tiant watched from the bench while the New York Yankees edged the Red Sox 5-4, enabling them to go on to another World Series title.

Now the echoes are silent. "Loo-eee, Loo-eee" never will be heard again with Tiant in a Boston uniform. On the verge of his 38th birthday, Luis grabbed for security Monday, signing as a free agent with the Yankees.

After 7½ years with the Red Sox, El Tiant is gone. Offered only a one-year guaranteed contract, he fled to the Big Apple for a two-year contract, plus a 10-year pact to direct the Yankees' Latin American department when his pitching days are over.

The Red Sox, who rescued Tiant from baseball's scrap pile after his release by the Minnesota Twins and the Atlanta Braves in 1971, didn't want to lose him, but they were reluctant to commit themselves beyond 1979 because of his age.

Actually, Buddy LeRoux and Haywood Sullivan, leaders of a group which purchased the club formally this year, didn't have a chance. There was no way they could match New York owner George Steinbrenner's offer after the Yankees drafted Tiant in the eighth round of the recent free agent sweepstakes.

Money was no object. The Red Sox just didn't want to take any long-range gamble which might have proved very costly in the future. Room must be made for young pitching prospects in the next couple of years.

Sentiment, as far as LeRoux, Sullivan and their colleagues were concerned, went out the window. Baseball is just another hard business, and the Red Sox proved it in letting Tiant get away.

"We hate to see him go, but we wish him nothing but the best," LeRoux said. "He's a very fine person and I'm personally sad, but I'm sure that he feels he's doing what was best for himself and his family."

LeRoux considers Tiant "a close personal friend." And, in a way, Tiant may consider LeRoux the savior of his pitching career, along with others such as Dick O'Connell, ousted as general manager last fall, and Darrell Johnson, fired as manager in mid-1978.

O'Connell, acting on advice of people in the Boston organization, offered Tiant a trial in May 1971, after the right-hander was considered washed up by Minnesota and Atlanta because of arm problems.

Georgia Gets Reprimand From NCAA

MISSION, Kan. (AP)—The National Collegiate Athletic Association publicly reprimanded the University of Georgia today for making loans and small cash gifts to football and basketball players.

The action includes no penalty and the university remains eligible for television and post-season competition.

In a news release, the NCAA said the rules violations occurred during the 1975-76, 1976-77 and 1977-78 academic years and were reported by the university itself.

The NCAA said when the university learned of the gifts and loans made by a former member of its basketball coaching staff it launched an internal investigation and disclosed the findings to the NCAA Infractions Committee.

"In considering an appropriate penalty in this case," said Charles Alan Wright, chairman of the Infractions Committee, "the committee noted that the violations in the case were self-disclosed by the university after a prompt and thorough investigation. Also, the violations were isolated in that they related to the personal friendship that existed between the former coach and the athletes and no outside funds were involved."

The former coach was not identified.

Lacewell Accepts Job As Arkansas State Boss

JONESBORO, Ark. (AP)—Bill Davidson, saying that he was certain Larry Lacewell could do more for the Arkansas State University football program than he could, stepped aside Monday to give Lacewell his chance.

Lacewell, former defensive coordinator at the University of Oklahoma, signed a four-year contract. He volunteered his services to Davidson at the start of the current season and since that time has been working without pay and living in Davidson's house.

"It became obvious after Larry had been here one month that he could do more for this program than I could," said Davidson, who resigned to accept a position as assistant athletic director at ASU. "I have always wanted the best for Arkansas State so the decision in my mind was obvious. The doubt I had was that Larry would at all be interested. When he told me he might, I began pursuing it."

Lacewell said Davidson approached him earlier in the season and asked him to consider taking over the ASU job. "He had contemplated resigning the last couple of years, and he just asked me to think about it," Lacewell said. "As the season progressed along, it became more like home to me."

"We're lucky to be able to get him," Davidson said. "If he were still at Oklahoma, we wouldn't have gotten him, but all at once he's God's gift to us... put right into our hands."

Lacewell said there would not be any changes in the ASU coaching staff for at least a year. He also said the Indians would run some type of option offense, but that it would not be the wishbone.

Lacewell was a graduate assistant at Alabama in 1959 and then coached the ASU freshman team in 1960 and 1961, but this will be his first job as a head coach.

"It is something every assistant coach thinks about in his career and, needless to say, it has been a hard time coming for me," Lacewell said. "I could have been a head coach a couple of other times, and I'm glad I finally made the decision, because I'm very happy here at Arkansas State."

He coached at the University of Arkansas at Monticello, Kilgore Junior College, Oklahoma, Wichita State and Iowa State before rejoining the Oklahoma staff in 1969. He became the Sooners' defensive coordinator in 1970 and then was named assistant head coach in 1973.

During Lacewell's nine seasons at Oklahoma, the Sooners had a 86-15-3 record, won six straight Big Eight titles and two national championships.

He resigned early this year, went into private business and then tried to get back into coaching. "I came here just to let the coaching profession know I was interested in getting back where I belonged," Lacewell said. "I had no idea that things would work out like this."

"I can't explain the uplifting feeling I have inside about being back home," said Lacewell, who played his high school football at Fordyce and his college football at UA-Monticello.

Bowling Pot Boils; Lions Lead Parade

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
NEW YORK (AP)—The muddled post-season bowl picture grew even more mysterious Monday night when three reliable sources told The Associated Press that Penn State, the nation's only undefeated major college football team, reportedly has decided to bypass the Orange Bowl to get even for last year's snub.

The sources, who all requested anonymity, said Penn State was leaning toward the Sugar Bowl if the opponent were Alabama. And Penn State coach Joe Paterno admitted receiving a phone call from Alabama's Bear Bryant to discuss the possibility of meeting in the Gator Bowl if Georgia locks up a Sugar Bowl berth.

If Penn State cannot play Alabama, Paterno was said to favor a trip to the Cotton Bowl, where Houston is a virtual certainty to be the host team.

All the sources agreed it was not a case of Penn State's ducking Nebraska, the Big Eight's representative in the Orange Bowl, but rather Paterno getting back at the Miami bowl by bypassing the Nittany Lions last year in favor of Arkansas.

An Orange Bowl representative reportedly invited Penn State to meet Oklahoma last year, only to have the Selection Committee withdraw the offer an hour or so later. Penn State wound up in the Fiesta Bowl, beating Arizona State 42-30 and finishing No. 5 in the final rankings.

Until top-rated Oklahoma was beaten by Nebraska last Saturday, the odds favored an Orange Bowl national championship showdown between the Sooners and runner-up Penn State. Now, however, Paterno may feel that he can capture his first-ever national title by defeating Pitt on Nov. 24 and then winning any bowl game since Penn State would be the nation's only unbeaten team.

"When you're No. 1 and in the driver's seat, you can do a lot of directing," one bowl official told the AP.

However, Penn State has long been the victim of anti-East football sentiment. Eleven of the 66 voters in this week's Associated Press poll cast their ballots for other teams as No. 1 even though all have been beaten.

Paterno reiterated Monday night that Penn State, as the only unbeaten team, wants to settle the national championship on the field by playing the "consensus" No. 2 team.

His choice would be made easier if Nebraska were upset by Missouri Saturday or Georgia loses to Auburn. In the event of the former, Paterno would have no qualms about forsaking Miami, while a Georgia loss would open the Sugar Bowl to Alabama, provided the Crimson Tide beats Auburn Dec. 2.

If Alabama and Georgia tie for the Southeastern Conference title, Georgia would represent the SEC in New Orleans. And that would enhance the possibility of a Penn State-Alabama clash in the Gator Bowl the night of Dec. 29. ABC-TV would be certain to sweeten the pot to make it worthwhile for both teams.

SMOTHERED — Oakland runningback Arthur Whittington almost disappears in the avalanche of black jerseys as he is smothered by the Oakland Raider defense, including Reggie Williams, left, Ross Browner, center, and Bo Harris, right. Stabler's teammates did the talking for him, saying he doesn't deserve the criticism for the Raiders' four losses. "He might be having his worst year, but not to the extent the press is saying," said tight end Dave Casper, who caught a 25-yard touchdown pass as Oakland built a 27-7 lead going into the final quarter.

Safety Charles Phillips victimized Anderson for a fourth interception with less than four minutes remaining, setting up an insurance touchdown by Mark van Eeghen. "With the score at 13-7, Stabler directed a 73-yard march, hitting Casper three times for gains of 21, 29 and 25 yards. Earlier, he had a 5-yard touchdown toss to Raymond Chester after safety Mike Davis pounced on a fumble he forced at Cincinnati's 33-yard line.

Stabler's third touchdown, an 11-yard pitch to Morris Bradshaw, came after Willie Hall recovered a fumble by Cincinnati rookie running back David Turner at the Bengals' 22 midway through the third quarter.

Cold, Illness Fail To Stop Georgia Techs

ATLANTA (AP) — Neither snow, nor a howling 25 mph wind, nor a gnawing stomach ache could deter Georgia Tech's Eddie Lee Ivey from becoming the NCAA's all-time single game rushing leader.

The versatile halfback now has a better shot at some Heisman Trophy votes after racing for 356 yards Saturday in Tech's 42-21 victory over the Air Force which included touchdown runs of 57, 73 and 80 yards. "The previous NCAA record of 350 yards was set by Eric Allen of Michigan State in 1971. "He has just been fantastic," said Tech coach Pepper Rodgers after the 6-foot, 210-pound Ivey sparked the Yellow Jackets to their seventh consecutive victory. "It's not just recent, either," said Rodgers. "He's been doing it for the past four years."

Kingdome? Now, It's Cold Dome

SEATTLE (AP) — The freeze is not a tactic employed by the Seattle SuperSonics. It's a king-sized headache for the management of the Kingdome. Kingdome manager Ted Bowsfield said Monday that shivering fans and players may rest assured that the problem no longer is "on a back burner" but may not be fixed for a month. Last Friday the visiting Cleveland Cavaliers huddled under blankets, while the unprepared home team shivered in their warm suits. Bowsfield explained that the chilliness in the lower levels of the domed stadium was a simple matter of physics, exacerbated by outside temperatures dipping into the 30s and upper 20s at night.

Each of the 18,394 arriving fans brought in a small cloud of cold air and let out a corresponding amount of warm air. Inside the dome, the cold air settled to the level of the playing court. Despite their lack of blankets, the Sonics warmed up in time to win the National Basketball Association game 109-95, but a solution to the greater warmup problem won't come so easily. Bowsfield admits that officials knew there was a problem but explains, "It was on a back burner somewhat because most of the time we haven't had too serious a problem with the weather."

About a week ago, Bowsfield said, six hot-air blowers were ordered at a cost of $3,500 for installation over the entrances. He estimated it would take two weeks to a month for them to arrive and be installed. Each blower "sends down a curtain of hot air about two to three inches wide," Bowsfield explained. "As you walk through it, the hot air will set behind you and keep the cold air on the outside while letting us keep the warm air in the building."

Tech Women Cagers Lose

ABILENE (Special) — Tech had the turnovers, and Abilene Christian University had the shooters, and the hostesses blitzed Texas Tech 85-67 in a women's basketball game Monday night. ACU girls showed 49 percent from the field and missed only one of 14 free shots. Tech had a 38 percent shooting night. "But, the turnovers were the key," said Tech coach Gay Benson. "We had 26, and they only had 17."

Donette Marble led the Raiders with 27 points, and Rosemary Scott and Louise Davis had 10 points each. Miss Hopper hit 17 for ACU. Tech will play next on Saturday, against Walling Baptist College as part of the WBC basketball clinic. Prior to the varsity game Monday, the Tech freshmen girls clipped ACU 71-57.

Sports Hot Line

(Continued From Page One) ends without a score, it remains a tie game. Only in playoff or championship games are extra overtime periods played. There have been 29 overtime games played since the rule went into effect for league games in 1974. Two of those have ended in a tie. Incidentally, to clear up another often-argued point, the team winning the coin toss has lost 17 of those games, while winning only 10. Only once did a team winning the toss elect to kick off. Q. There has been a lot of hullabaloo about Mike Thomas of the Washington Redskins refusing to play on an injured foot. If I am not mistaken, didn't the Washington fullback John Riggins go through a similar controversy when he was with the New York Jets? —Alfred Robertson, Passaic, N.J. A. You're right, and John Riggins' remarks about the Thomas controversy are interesting: "There are two sides of the issue, and I've been on both of them. I can feel for Mike, yet now that I'm on the other side of the fence, I can see where it hurts the team. Years ago in New York, I did the same. I was a little green at the time, like Mike. I couldn't appreciate how the veterans feel. What it cost me was credibility, and that's something in this day and age that's tough to come by. An older and wiser person wouldn't have done that." Titus D. Cooks Hit AA

By BING PARSONS Athletics-Journal Sports Staff Remembering the good old days when teams lumbered down and won district championships by two or three games? You may be a little young for that. Remember when they won by one game? What happened? Two of the three Class AA districts in this area are still expected with only one game left. In District 4-AA, Idaho, Tulsa and Floydada are all tied with 2-1 marks. In District 5-AA, Slaton has a 5-1 mark but is followed closely by Frenship, Seminole and Tahoka with 4-2 seasons. With no problem at all, that district could wind up in a four-way tie. And there seems to be no way at all to avoid a two-way tie atop 4-AA. Idalou plays 4-5 Lockney next week at that conference. The Wildcats, 8-1 on the year, are almost sure bets to walk away from that one. And then Tulsa and Floydada are playing each other. The winner of that game will be tied with Idalou. But since Idalou has already beaten both of them in head-to-head competition, the Wildcats are in better shape. Unless they're upset by Lockney. Think that sounded complicated? Brace yourself, now we're going to look at 5-AA. Slaton, 5-1, has to play Tahoka, one of the most feared and explosive teams on the South Plains this year. Should the Tigers lose, they would be tied with Tahoka for sure, and possibly Frenship and Seminole. For those two teams to figure in the race, all they'd have to do is beat Post and Cooper, respectively. Post is 2-7, Cooper 1-8. In that case, the season would have nothing to do with who goes to the playoffs. The tied teams would flip a coin or draw lots to decide the representative. "We had a situation similar to this in 1975," said District 5-AA chairman J.C. McClesley of Slaton. "Slaton, Denver City and Post were tied. That was resolved by a draw."

Gymnasts Schedule Public Program The Flying Matadors gymnastics team will be performing at South Plains Mall Friday in an effort to raise funds for uniforms and travel expenses. The group's booster club is sponsoring a "Tramp-a-thon" from 3:30 p.m. until 9 p.m. Friday, with members of the Matadors to appear. Each member is seeking sponsors at $1 per hour, and then the length of time each Matador performs will determine the amount of money collected. The gymnastics group is for persons aged 4 through 18.

Plainview Gains Spot In Schoolboy Ratings

By The Associated Press The Lexington Eagles finally have landed atop the Class A rankings in The Associated Press Schoolboy Football Poll but after what's happened their predecessors the past two weeks, they've made a cautious landing. For the second straight week, the No. 1 ranked Class A team was beaten, making way for Lexington to advance to the top. DeLeon assumed the lead last week after Farmersville had been beaten two weeks ago. But DeLeon was upset last week San Saba 13-0 and tumbled to the No. 7 spot this week. The rest of the No. 1 ranked teams held their leads going into the final week of the regular season including Temple in Class AAAA, Brownwood in AAA and Newton in AA.

Galveston Ball got excited before a homecoming crowd and upset previously unbeaten and No. 9 ranked Angleton 35-21 and No. 10 Midland Lee lost for the second straight week and dropped from the top 10 in the AAAA list. Both dropped out of this week's rankings. Conroe, which edged unbeaten Klein last week, moved into the No. 9 spot in AAAA and high-scoring Plainview took over the No. 10 spot. There were no losers on the AAA list but Belton flip-flopped with Gainesville after a 55-0 victory over Taylor. Belton moved up to the No. 8 position and Gainesville fell to No. 9. Childress, No. 5 this week, and Sealy, No. 6, exchanged positions in the Class AA rankings from last week as did No. 9 Hondo and No. 10 Mount Vernon. Unbeaten Seagraves tallied one first place vote and moved into the No. 10 position in Class A, replacing Charlotte, which suffered its third loss of the season. Iraan, Franklin, Lovelady and China Spring round out the top five behind Lexington on the Class A list.

Celtics Pick Cowens

BOSTON (AP) — Veteran center Dave Cowens was named today player-coach of the Boston Celtics of the National Basketball Association. Cowens was named to replace Tom Sanders, who was fired in his first full season as coach. Cowens, an eight-year pro from Florida State, becomes the second player-coach in Celtics' history. Bill Russell, also a center, was player-coach from 1966 to 1969, winning two NBA championships the last two years. "We tried this experiment with Bill Russell and it worked," Celtics president and general manager Red Auerbach said. "It's a question of Dave's motivating the players and, more importantly, motivating himself. "We will have K.C. (Jones) and Bob MacKinnon on the bench working with him, and we feel confident that this combination can turn things around."

The surprise change was made with the Celtics struggling with a 2-12 record, including six consecutive losses. "As is obvious from our record, the club simply was not performing and a change had to be made," Auerbach said. Sanders, a former Celtics star, coached four years at Harvard before joining the Celtics last season as an assistant coach. He was promoted to head coach last January when Tommy Heinsdon was fired. Cowens shared the NBA Rookie of the Year award with Geoff Petrie in 1971 and was the league's most valuable player in the 1972-73 season. In his first seven years in the league, he averaged 8 points a game. Although only 6-foot-8, small for a center, he is noted for his durability and toughness. He has appeared in six All-Star games, missing in 1977 because of a bad back. "What I want mostly is that the players that we have on the team respond to this and accept me," Cowens said at the news conference. "I'm anxious to get to practice today. . . We have to discuss a lot of things."

Sooners Subdue Bulgarians 89-79

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — John McCullough scored 28 points to lead the Oklahoma Sooners to a 89-79 exhibition basketball victory over the Bulgarian national team Monday night. Oklahoma led 47-44 at halftime, but the game stayed close throughout the first 15 minutes of the second half, with 10 ties. McCullough opened the second half with four quick layups, then added a 19-foot jumper, all in less than five minutes. Bulgaria managed to stay close until the Sooners turned a 73-71 lead into a 79-71 margin. Goddard led Bulgarian scorers with 14, while Glouchkov and Eutevimon scored 12 each. Al Beal added 16 for the Sooners.

(Continued From Page One) Michigan State, Louisiana State, Pittsburgh, Ohio State and Georgia Tech. Last week, it was Georgia, Purdue, Maryland, Notre Dame, Clemson, Arkansas, Michigan State, Navy, Washington and Pitt. Navy dropped out by losing to Syracuse 20-17 while Washington bowed to Southern Cal. Meanwhile, Ohio State trounced Illinois 45-7 and returned to the Top Twenty for the first time in five weeks, while Georgia Tech made it for the first time this season by winning its seventh game in a row, a 43-21 triumph over Air Force.
