New Price Surge Jolts Consumers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer prices rose sharply again in October, and for the first time the American dollar could buy only half as much as it did in 1967, the Labor Department said today.

Rising beef, poultry and pork prices led to the 0.8 percent increase in consumer prices last month, the same increase as in September and about average for 1978.

For the first time, the Consumer Price Index passed the 200 mark, rising to 200.9. That meant that the average product that cost $100 in the 1967 base period now costs $200.90, the department said.

Food is 116 percent more expensive than in 1967, housing 109 percent, fuel 120 percent, clothing 63 percent and medical care 89 percent.

Since October 1977, prices have risen 8.9 percent, the department said. The average worker's purchasing power dropped 3.6 percent in the same period.

In October, the average worker's real spendable earnings declined 0.1 percent, the third decline in a row.

President Carter announced an anti-inflation program in October to halt rising prices, but officials expect that it will take until mid-1979 before its effects can be seen.

In October, the cost of food purchased at grocery stores rose 0.9 percent after climbing 0.4 percent in September and not rising at all in July or August.

The acceleration in October was primarily due to higher prices for meats, which rose 2.1 percent after declining in the preceding three months, the Labor Department said.

"Pork prices rose 3.7 percent in October after declining for four months," the report said. "Beef prices rose 1.6 percent in October following an increase of 0.4 percent in September and declines in July and August."

Chicken and turkey prices, which declined in August and September, rose 2.5 percent in October. Prices also went up for fruit, vegetables, eggs, dairy products, cereal and bakery products. Sugar and candy prices declined for the first time this year.

Housing costs rose 1 percent, the biggest gain since June, because of a 1.4 percent increase in house prices and a 0.7 percent gain in interest rates. Home maintenance and repairs, fuel and utilities jumped sharply.

Gasoline prices continued to climb, going up 1.4 percent, but the cost of new cars did not rise as much as it usually does with the start of the new model year.

The cost of medical care rose sharply by 1.1 percent in October, particularly because of higher dental and hospital fees.

Economists expect little headway against inflation the rest of this year because wholesale prices are continuing to go up.

The October wholesale price report, released Nov. 2, showed that the prices retailers paid for their products jumped 0.9 percent in October. These costs are usually passed on to consumers.

The Carter administration, which had predicted a 5.9 percent yearly inflation rate at the start of 1978, now expects prices to rise at least 8 percent for the year and probably more.

Testifying on Capitol Hill last week, President Carter's inflation fighter, Alfred Kahn, said, "I don't have things to show you by February, I'll be more than disappointed."

And it may be next August before the program has "an observable" impact on prices, he said.

Kahn, chairman of Carter's council on wage and price stability, said it would be a "small victory" if oil-producing countries held down or eliminated any 1979 increases.

Assistant Treasury Secretary C. Fred Bergsten, just returned from the Middle East, said Monday a U.S. delegation had "good success" in persuading oil exporters to moderate price hikes.

On Oct. 24, Carter announced an anti-inflation program intended to hold wage increases to 7 percent and price increases throughout the economy to 5 percent.

On Monday, the Interstate Commerce Commission rejected a 6.3 percent freight rate increase requested by the Southern Motor Carriers Rate Conference Inc.

Commissioners said their action also is intended to set guidelines for the entire trucking industry. Last week the administration persuaded railroads to reduce their requested freight rate increases.

Oklahoma Star Wins Heisman

NEW YORK (AP) — Junior halfback Billy Sims, the nation's leading rusher who smashed the Oklahoma and Big Eight Conference single-season ground-gaining records, won the Heisman Trophy today as the nation's outstanding college football player.

In voting so close that a recount was ordered this morning, Sims won out over Penn State quarterback Chuck Fusina, Michigan quarterback Rick Leach and Southern California running back Charles White.

Sims, a 205-pound speedster from Hooks, Tex., received 151 first-place votes, 152 second-place votes and 70 third-place ballots for a total of 827 points on a 3-2-1 vote basis.

Fusina received 163 first-place votes, 12 more than Sims, but only 89 second-place votes and 83 first-place ballots for 750 points.

Then came a large drop to Leach, whose totals were 89-50-52 for 435 points. White's total was 37-74-98 for 354 points.

Sims completed Oklahoma's regular season with 1,762 yards on 231 carries for an average of 7.6 yards per carry. He also led the nation in scoring with 20 touchdowns.

His 77-point margin over Fusina approached the record close vote in 1966, when Notre Dame's Paul Hornung edged Tennessee's Johnny Majors by 72 points.

Rounding out the top 10 Heisman finishers were Louisiana State running back Ted Charles Alexander with 282 points, North Carolina State running back Ted Brown and Clemson quarterback Steve Fuller, tied for sixth with 82 points apiece, Georgia Tech running back Eddie Lee Ivey with 81 points, Washington State quarterback Jack Thompson with 72 and UCLA linebacker Jerry Robinson with 70.

Despite Sims' victory, Fusina carried three of the six sections into which Heisman voting is divided.

Although the actual sectional voting was not announced, Fusina won in the Northeast, Mid-Atlantic and South, while Sims carried the Southwest and Far West. Leach took the Midwest.

Sims is the sixth junior to win the Heisman in the award's 44-year history. The others were Doc Blanchard of Army in 1945; Don Walker of Southern Methodist in 1948; Vic Janowicz of Ohio State, 1950; Roger Staubach of Navy, 1963; and Archie Griffin of Ohio State in 1974. Griffin repeated in 1975, the only two-time Heisman winner.

Slayings Shock San Francisco

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Mayor George Moscone, who grew up and grew powerful here, and supervisor Harvey Milk, a New Yorker who built a political base among his fellow homosexuals, lie in state together today beneath the dome of City Hall, where both were assassinated.

A political foe of both men, former supervisor Dan White, 32, is in jail, booked for investigation of the slayings — which took place moments before Moscone was to announce White's successor at an 11:30 a.m. news conference Monday.

White, who resigned early this month then decided he wanted his job back, walked into a police station 45 minutes after the shootings and eight blocks from the scene and surrendered, police said. Psychiatric tests were scheduled.

Moscone, mayor since 1975, liked to say of his birthplace, "There's no place like it in the world." Milk said it was where he "finally found true happiness."

The city they loved — still reeling from news of the murder-suicide of more than 900 members of the San Francisco-based Peoples Temple in Guyana — reacted with a spontaneous outpouring of grief. A crowd estimated by police at up to 40,000 strong marched to City Hall Monday night, their tear-streaked faces lit by candles.

Folksinger Joan Baez sang to the mourners and Dianne Feinstein, president of the Board of Supervisors and now acting mayor, addressed them.

Moscone's last public appearance was Sunday night, when he wept at a memorial service for the dead church members, including leader Jim Jones whom the mayor had once named housing director in the city.

President Carter expressed "outrage and sadness at the senseless killings." At the National League of Cities meeting in St. Louis, Ken Erickson, mayor of Cheyenne, Wyo., said: "The faces of the mayors around me grew pale when the announcement was made."

White, a former police officer and fireman and the youngest person ever to serve as a supervisor, could be sentenced to death if convicted of the slayings.

"He was not one of the lunatic fringe," chief administrative officer Roger Biss said of White. "After all, he was elected to office."

But witnesses said White screamed, "Give me my keys! Give me my keys!" before rushing down a hall to his old office, where Milk's body was later found.

"He was a wild man, just a wild man,"

Ruling Postponed In City Sign Case

By FRANK PATRICK
Avalanche-Journal Staff

County Court-at-Law No. 2 Judge J.Q. Warnick Jr. today said he will delay ruling on a bid to dismiss prosecution in a case involving the city's controversial sign ordinance.

A defendant in the pending misdemeanor case contends criminal prosecution of the ordinance should be voided because of the inequitable application.

Specifically, the defense says the city entered into an agreement with L&H Drugs, Inc., and with Mobile Message of Lubbock, a business which rents mobile signs, that no citations concerning portable signs would be issued the two companies.

Defense attorney Bill Wischkaemper, representing defendant Mark Corley, said the reported agreements deny his client equal protection of the laws in violation of the U.S. Constitution.

After a brief pretrial hearing, Warnick today told attorneys he would check legal authorities cited by them and inform parties later of his decision.

He indicated that, if he rules for the city, the Class-C misdemeanor case, appealed from Municipal Court, will go to trial before a jury in January.

"There is really no basis on which they cannot prosecute L&H Drugs and prosecute everyone else," Wischkaemper said in final argument.

The defense lawyer noted that one of the reasons for the sign ordinance was to help insure safety by making certain motorists do not mistake advertising signs for traffic lights.

"L&H is at the intersection of 34th Street and Brownfield Highway, one of the most dangerous intersections in town," Wischkaemper said at one point, referring to a picture which had been introduced into evidence.

Prosecutor Hollis Browning cited an appeals court case to the effect that, in order to demonstrate selective prosecution, a defendant must show not only that another party was not prosecuted, but that the defendant was selected for prosecution on an unwarranted basis.

Today's hearing was a continuation of an August hearing, recessed after prosecutors were surprised by the disclosure that no injunctions had been granted in civil litigation concerning L&H Drugs and Mobile Message.

The issue of equitable enforcement had arisen dramatically at the earlier hearing during examination of Jerrel Northcutt, city zoning administrator, by Wischkaemper.

Wischkaemper had asked why repeated citations were not filed against L&H Drugs.

Northcutt indicated it was his understanding that a restraining order or injunction had been issued. Northcutt said he had been instructed by the city attorney.

Santa Gets Help Of Goodfellows

Some cities have no Goodfellow program, but thanks to many generous-hearted residents, Lubbock does. And the Hub City has had such a program at Christmas for 44 years.

Wonder what Lubbock would be like at Christmas if there were no Goodfellows or any funds to finance them?

Thousands of children would be missed at one of the most impressionable times of their lives — Christmas. Disappointed, their faces might be pressed to windows, looking, looking.

But once again, as in the past, the Goodfellows will be out in force in Lubbock on Christmas morning, delivering fruit, nuts, candy and toys to many doorsteps in the Hub City.

But first, to make this possible and to insure that no child who needs Christmas cheer is missed, there is something to be done.

They are:

1. A list of boys and girls under the age of 14 years of age who live in the city limits of Lubbock and who will have to depend on Goodfellows, must be made. There is a coupon in today's Avalanche-Journal to be filled out if children are to be included on Goodfellow lists for Christmas visits.

2. Funds are needed to finance the Goodfellows' Christmas project. Contributions may be mailed to the same addresses as the coupons.

3. Volunteers are needed Christmas morning to deliver the package of fruit, nuts, candy and toys to children in the Hub City.

The address for the coupons and contributions is: Chief Goodfellow, P.O. Box 491, Lubbock, Texas, 79408.

The coupon will appear daily in The Lubbock Avalanche-Journal through Dec. 13.

FTC Investigating Shell's Wholesale Practices

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government is investigating whether Shell Oil Co., the nation's largest gasoline marketer, violated antitrust law in its wholesale gasoline practices.

The Federal Trade Commission investigation, described as preliminary, surfaced Monday after three congressmen had drawn attention to the subject.

"We are gathering the basic facts and finding out what the issues are," said Ronald B. Roe, an FTC attorney.

While a company spokesman denied the allegation, two dealers charged that the amount of unleaded gasoline they can buy continues to be pegged to their deliveries of conventional leaded fuel.

Earlier charges from New Jersey and Connecticut station operators that the company was requiring them to purchase leaded gasoline to get unleaded gas, now in short supply, were contained in a Nov. 17 letter the congressmen sent FTC Chairman Michael Pertschuk.

In their letter, Reps. John E. Moss, D-Calif.; Andrew Maguire, D-N.J., and Toby Moffett, D-Conn., said they believed such restraints on the distribution of gasoline, if true, would violate antitrust law.

Moss is chairman of the House Commerce subcommittee on oversight and investigations. The others are members of the panel.

Shortages of unleaded fuel in many parts of the nation have led to widespread price hikes.

The price increases — a couple of cents at many stations — stem from unusually high demand, a result of good driving weather most of the fall and a great deal of automobile vacation travel this summer.

Shell spokesman Norman Alstedter denied the charge and said that, while the company had heard there was an FTC investigation, it has received no formal notification.

A subcommittee source, declining to be identified, said the panel believes Shell discontinued the practice after the letter. "I think the situation is taking care of itself," he said.

Alstedter said Shell has issued instructions to its distribution offices "because of the current supply situation." He said the instructions are that when a truck delivers gasoline to a station, the dealer can buy a load of unleaded gasoline without taking the usual amount of leaded gasoline.

But several Shell dealers in the Northeast said Monday they still are on an allotment system requiring them to buy a certain amount of leaded high-test and regular gasoline to get unleaded.

"They give me a quota," said Dick Marinello of Dick's Shell Station in Hackensack, N.J. "I have to buy high-test and regular and if I don't take that, I don't get my allotment of unleaded. If I can't take a whole load of the leaded, they won't give me the unleaded."

Bob Grant, manager of Grant's Shell Station in Braintree, Mass., said he must order 6,000 gallons of leaded high-test and regular to get 2,500 gallons of unleaded gasoline.

"This has been going on for four weeks, and they say it may last through December," said Grant, who is limiting his customers to $5 of unleaded gas at each purchase. "It's a hardship on us."

Shell said three weeks ago it was cutting back on supplies of unleaded gasoline to dealers in the Northeast until the supply situation improved. Alstedter said then that stations were being given gasoline "on an equitable basis."

Consumers, Industry Comment On TV Ban

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A landslide of paper comment from consumers, industry and other interested groups greeted the Federal Trade Commission's proposal to ban some children's television commercials.

The official time for public comment on the controversial proposal ended at the close of business Monday — one day later than originally planned due to a request for delay from some of the affected industries.

The FTC staff proposal, on which comment was invited, recommended a ban on all television ads directed at children under 8, and a ban on ads for snacks and other highly sugared foods aimed at children from 8 to 12.

In addition, advertisers would have to pay for public service messages promoting good nutrition.

Two weeks ago today, Action for Children's Television and a coalition of more than 40 consumer, medical, labor and other groups urged parents to watch one hour of commercial children's television during the final days of the comment period and let the FTC know what they thought about what they saw.

The FTC's correspondence section said the watch-and-write campaign appeared to have produced somewhere between 2-000 and 2,500 individual letters — more than doubling the number of consumer letters on the issue received by the agency in the weeks it had been open to public comment.

ACT itself added to the avalanche by filing what it said were "several cartons" of material before the comment period closed.

One lengthy document filed near the deadline came from M and M-Mars, one of the country's biggest candy makers, which called the proposal "a mechanical, uncritical, absurd and extreme exercise of no benefit to the public, to those affected, or even to the commission."

"It is not unrealistic to conclude that what the commission staff and its allies really seek is the beginning of an effective destruction of commercial television in the United States through the elimination of its economic base," it charged, and said the requirement that advertisers pay for public service nutrition messages amounted to an illegal excise tax on advertising.

ACT recommended an outright ban on commercials on any program for which children make up 40 percent or more of the viewing audience.

The Boston-based group also submitted several studies it commissioned, including one that claims the content of children's television advertising contradicts the U.S. Senate's dietary goals for the country, and another that claims negative parental comment or other education cannot counteract the "strong desire for sugary foods which TV commercials inspire."

The Association of National Advertisers Inc., the American Association of Advertising Agencies Inc., and the American Advertising Federation in their comments said "advertising to children, far from being an insidious, corrosive force preying on young innocents, is, in fact, a productive and constructive enterprise which is of genuine benefit to children themselves, their families and society at large."

Lubbock County Water Board and Improvement District No. 1, Spring Springs Lake, has been notified by the Texas Department of Health that the water being sampled by the water board is not in compliance with the department's drinking water standards, which were promulgated as required by the "Safe Drinking Water Act," Public Law 95-59 (U.S.).

The limit for this area has been set at 1.6 milligrams of fluoride per liter of water. The samples of water from the lake system contained 2.0 milligrams of fluoride per liter. There is no immediate health hazard to drinking water containing fluoride at this level.

However, the fluoride may cause mottling (brown staining) of the teeth in children less than 13 years of age. All dentists in this area are aware of the fluoride level.

The district intends to apply to the Texas Department of Health for a variance from the fluoride requirement while it investigates available treatment techniques to lower the fluoride to allowable levels.

KATY (UPI) — It was the best $100 check Francie Baltazar had ever eaten

Francie received a $100 check for her 17th birthday, cashed it at a bank, then she and the teller ate it

Her mother, Candy Baltazar, who owns That Ice Cream Place, made the 2-foot-long lemon ice cream cake using one of her own checks as a model

"I've done other unusual things for her birthday, but I guess this is probably the farthest out I've ever gone," Mrs. Baltazar said

"I just took the cake and gave her the $100 for it," Katy National Bank teller Dorothy Herrington said. "I thought it was a very cute idea. We do get to eat some of it"

Mrs. Herrington it will be backed up with a real check

"There's no way we can encode a cake and run it through our machines," she laughed. "We'd have to have something to back it up."

GOP Official Plans Self-Defense Claim

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — An attorney for Betty Lou Barefoot Johnson, a member of the Republican National Committee charged with first-degree murder in the death of her husband, says his client may testify that the shooting occurred in self-defense Attorney Wade M. Smith made his comments Monday to prospective jurors being selected to hear Mrs. Johnson's murder trial. Prosecutors have said they will not seek the death penalty. Mrs. Johnson, 37, is charged in the shooting death of Dr. Archie T. Johnson Jr. last July. Jury selection continued today.

TODAY'S EDITORIAL:

His Home Is His Hassle

IT IS EASY but perhaps not accurate to dismiss Idi Amin as a brutal buffoon. Skillfully as he plays that particular role for the world, the Ugandan dictator also is a shrewdly intelligent, coldly calculating manipulator determined to hold on to the power he seized in 1971.

Amin's savaging of his own people and his outrageous ventures in diplomacy—for example his suggestion to settle his latest imbroglio by means of a boxing match with Tanzanian President Julius Nyerere—make the headlines.

Less noted is that in the tactics of practical politics, he is usually several jumps ahead of his opponents at home and abroad.

Amin has problems. Coffee, for example, which comprises 80 percent of his country's exports, currently is down on world markets. Moreover, Uganda's earnings are being further pinched by a U.S. embargo.

THE MURDERS of hundreds of thousands of Ugandans have not eliminated opposition to Amin's rule, which depends upon loyalty of the army. This he has sought to maintain with special privileges, such as access to foreign luxuries Uganda can ill afford to import.

The army does not appear, however, to be completely bought. Officers are reported to have pressured Amin recently for reforms, including curbs on his feared intelligence services.

Faced with a sea of troubles at home Amin chose to take arms against a supposed threat on his borders. Thus his invasion and off-again, on-again annexation of a slice of Tanzania.

Foreign offices are reading it as Amin's way of diverting attention from his domestic problems, dealing with his own army by marching it off against a foreign foe and throwing his neighbors off balance.

NONE OF THIS deals with Uganda's real problems—unless circumstances in the end should combine to bring down the major one, Idi Amin himself.

But the developments instigated by Amin are not the irrational doings of a madman. There are reasons behind them. Although Amin may come out momentarily ahead again this time, he nevertheless is bringing more troubles on himself for future reckoning.

Africans, since achieving independence from various European overlords, have been reluctant to police their own. A leader may be a devil, but at least he is one of them and not a white devil.

Idi Amin's tactics would seem destined to overcome even that reluctance sooner or later. But if it is to be the former, the Ugandan despot is going to have to come up against a shrewder tactician than himself, which at this writing has been far from the case.

Meditation On Floor Mopping

DALLAS—The nation's hospital administrators are engrossed these days with what might be called the Joe and SHUR show—and they are not amused.

This is no prime-time comedy on the tube. Joe is Joseph A. Califano Jr., secretary of Health, Education and Welfare. SHUR is the acronym of Joe's System for Hospital Uniform Reporting.

The hospital administrators are caught in a sticky spider web of good intentions. There are morals in the story, and it merits a few minutes of your time.

Everyone involved in this nightmare situation—the Congress, the White House, the bureaucracy, the hospitals—everyone is pursuing the same wholesome goal.

That goal is to reduce the staggering costs of hospital care. Toward this end, the Congress in 1974 directed the Department of Health, Education and Welfare to establish an efficient hospital accounting system.

IN 1977, AS part of an act directed at fraud and abuse in the Medicare and Medicaid programs, the legislative directive was renewed.

It is likely that not a dozen members of the House or Senate had the faintest, foggiest notion of what this apparently virtuous requirement might entail.

It is equally likely that Sec. Califano, a busy man, has no clear idea of what he has set in motion. President Carter wants sincerely to get these hospital costs down; he would not knowingly engage in any executive requirement that would push the costs up.

But, behold: All these beneficent intentions have now produced a perfect specimen of the virus that infects our society. In the draft version of SHUR that now awaits adoption, we see bureaucracy run amok and regimentation gone berserk.

UNDER THIS infinitely and pointlessly complex proposal, every hospital in the nation would be pressed into a rigid inflexible matrix of uniform cost accounting.

It is perhaps the least of the administrators' objections that the cost would be monstrous. Sec. Califano's people have acknowledged that the cost of the compliance might average $10,000 annually among the 7,000 hospitals.

If that estimate were correct, SHUR would add $70 million to hospital costs every year. John Gavras, director of the Dallas Hospital Council, says flatly that the estimate is far too low.

The member hospitals in his group have projected their costs at double to triple the HEW estimate. Whatever the costs are, they must be paid for out of taxes or out of patients' pockets.

A GREATER objection, in the view of many hospital administrators, is that the added expense will produce virtually nothing of value.

The general idea is to compel every hospital to adopt a system of functional reporting, as distinguished from the prevailing systems of responsibility reporting.

Example: Most hospitals now charge to their dietary departments all costs that go into the processing of food and the maintenance of kitchens. This would include, let us say, the cost of mopping the kitchen floor.

But under SHUR, the cost of mopping the kitchen floor is a function of housekeeping. In some fashion, soap powder, mops, buckets and the mopper's wages must be charged to various accounts other than dietary.

IN THE END, says Gavras, a computer would be able to inform the administrator what infinitesimal fraction of a penny per dollar of expense must be allocated to Housekeeping, Floors, Kitchens, Mopping Thereof.

But no one cares about this information. It is worthless information. The costs of compiling this miserable datum far exceeds whatever statistical interest it might have.

And the draft SHUR could demand 11,000—that is eleven thousand—such postings and debiting and crediting and entering processes to complete the heavy form every year.

The proposed SHUR violates every principle which teaches the value of diversity. If these costly regulations applied in only one state, or in a few states, time would demonstrate their effectiveness.

MEANWHILE, OTHER states might experiment with different, more flexible forms. But under SHUR, all hospitals must be enfolded in the same straitjacket of pettyfoggery rules.

The system, says Gavras, will not prevent fraud or abuse. It will not improve patient care. It will not provide management with new or useful tools.

It will serve chiefly to make work for sedulous bureaucrats immersed in the auditing of mops. Messrs. Califano and Carter did not intend this result—but that's the way it is.

Paul Scott:

Bureaucrats Thaw Freeze Coming

WASHINGTON—President Carter and his budget aides are finding out the hard way that you must get up early in the nation's capital to keep ahead of the entrenched government bureaucracy.

The President, for example, slapped a partial hiring freeze on all federal agencies Oct. 25 as part of a program to cut down on government spending. Agency officials, however, with advance word of what was coming, went on an unprecedented peacetime hiring binge to beat the freeze.

On a monthly basis, from late July until the start of the freeze in late October, agencies in the Washington area took on 30 percent more new employees than is considered normal for the usually dull mid-year period, according to a survey by the Civil Service Commission.

IN THE THREE-month period during which White House officials were quietly briefing business and Congressional leaders about the coming U.S. hiring-price crackdown, federal agencies were quietly but frantically hiring everybody they could to beat the freeze.

The confidential Civil Service Commission survey shows that the biggest hiring jump came for people taken off the so-called PACE and mid-level examination.

PACE stands for Profession, Administrative, Clerical Employment. It includes jobs ranging from Grade-5 ($10,507) to Grade 7 ($13,014). The mid-level exam includes persons rated as qualified for jobs at the Grade-9 through Grade-12 level.

They start at $6,920 and go up to $23,087, and are considered some of the best positions in government.

DURING THE first four weeks of this year, 411 people were hired in the Washington area from either the PACE or mid-level rolls.

That went up to around 550 for each of the months that followed, but jumped to 570 in early August when reports of the coming freeze began to circulate at the top level of government.

In late October, the number of requests from agencies to hire persons at those grade levels climbed to 788—or to double the usual hiring pattern for this time of year.

Some agencies were still hiring, or trying to, after the freeze order went into effect.

President Carter's Oct. 25 freeze order represents one of the toughest personnel freezes imposed on the executive branch in peacetime.

It limits agencies—except in emergency cases—to replacing only one worker for every two jobs that become vacant for any reason.

Next time, maybe he'll call before dropping by.

You can make whatever you want out of or before that a big-breasted turkey looks great when it's dressed and in the kitchen but has a lousy sex life.

Convicted of defrauding us taxpayers, U.S. Rep. Charles Diggins, D-Mich., has bowed out as chairman of the District of Columbia Committee but wants to retain a strong voice in foreign policy as chairman of the African Affairs subcommittee.

His idea seems to be that rulers of emerging nations need an example of how to cheat the people and remain in power.

Interest on the federal debt for the year ended Sept. 30 was $48,695,000,000. That's almost precisely equal to the deficit for the year.

In other words, if Congress had been balancing the budget all these years, we could have financed all the extravagant programs they've saddled on us without going ANOTHER $48 billion into debt!

Any time the politicians who were elected this month get to feeling their importance, they'd do well to remember that election coverage ranked 54th in TV ratings—well behind such Top 10 in-laws as Laverne and Shirley, Mork and Mindy, Eight is Enough, Love Boat and Charlie's Angels.

My Neighbor Twice Removed says that any nation which has its priorities that far out of whack deserves the kind of government it's been getting.

Atty. Gen. John Hill, consoling himself after becoming the first Democrat ever to lose a race for governor of Texas to a Republican, says he'll spend the next couple of years leading the Democrats.

The Neighborhood Reactionary says that should be an easy job for Hill "because all he's got to do is tell 'em to do everything opposite of what he did."

ON THE DAY the returns showed Bill Clements had defeated John Hill for governor, Fred Bonavita wrote an analysis in the Hobby family-owned Houston Post:

"Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, at the moment is the Democrats' most promising candidate for governor in 1982, when Clements faces re-election..."

House Speaker Billy Wayne Clayton also was a possibility. The only other possible candidate mentioned Wednesday was John C. White, the popular former Texas agriculture commissioner now serving as chairman of the Democratic National Committee.

As Houston liberal Democrat leader Billie Carr put it: "Clements will be up there laying eggs all over the place and Bill Hobby will be coming across as a statesman."

The Post's capitol reporter concluded by quoting Hobby: "I am not planning to run for governor and I am not planning not to run for governor."

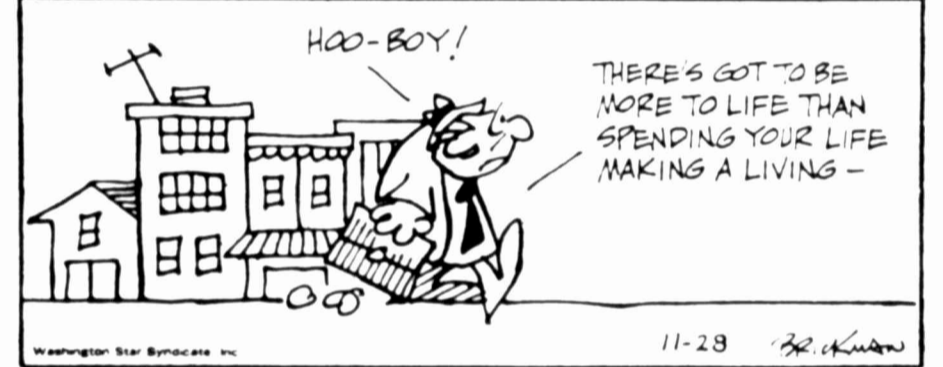

Details of how many exceptions—for emergency purposes—have been made so far is not available, although one tentative survey indicates that there "has been a lot of this type of hiring."

Fake Furs Fly First On 'Endangered' List

Q WHAT HAS MOVED into No. 1 place on the endangered list for furs?

A NOT baby seals. NOT leopards. No, irony of irony, now in the No. 1 spot are fake furs! For fake furs are made from petroleum products (petrochemicals and petroleum) and these products have become more of an issue for ecologists than skins which, if properly regulated, are a renewable resource.

Back in 1971, the French sex symbol, Brigitte Bardot, sat on an ice floe to protest the clubbing of baby seals in Alaska. Fifth Avenue matrons put their leopard coats in cold storage, so leery were they of the persistent criticism from passersby that plagued them on their daily walks.

Conservationists were in full swing, newly aware of the diminishing wildlife resources of encroaching civilization in the regions of our planet where the popular animals thrived.

AS A RESULT, fake fur took over as the status symbol of the trendy set—and petrochemical coats began to hang on coatroom hooks at the more exclusive parties. In the early years of the 1970s, the fur business crashed into a slump from which the most informed experts said it never would recover.

To document, the total number of fur manufacturers plunged from about 1,200 to 600—down by one-half. The thousands of experienced furriers abandoning the ailing industry created a void in one of the minority of businesses still dependent on craftsmanship.

But then what happened? The furriers joined forces to support environmentalist issues and to promote their product's unique advantages.

To comply with the new environmental laws, the Fur Information and Fashion Council formed the Fur Conservation Institute of America, which in turn allocated funds for the improvement of trapping devices and the preservation of endangered species.

THE INDUSTRY turned to the Comprehensive Educational Training Act and co-sponsored a grant to train employees under CETA to become fur designers and furriers.

And the fur industry has made an all but incredible comeback. Since the early 1970s, annual volume of sales has skyrocketed nearly 300 percent—from $279 million to $875 million—and is still in an upsurge.

Furs, once associated primarily with the rich and with formal wear, are now bought and worn by women—and men—in income categories across the board. Fur garments are both casual and in vogue, elegant and sporty, classic and faddish.

There are fur vests, fur-trimmed leather, satin and sweater items. Fur has been feathered, ribbed and crocheted. Coats made of fur vary in length as they do in colors—and this year's furs come in a multitude of styles, including sport-padded shoulders and cinched waists.

A mere five years ago, a raccoon coat sold for about $800, now many retail for more than $4,000.

But the demand for fur far outweighs the supply at the moment," says David Meltzer, president and board chairman of Evans, Inc., largest public owned fur company in the world, with 90 leased and wholly owned retail outlets. "Everybody's thinking of buying a fur."

The fur business hasn't been significantly held back by the price hikes so far, he declares.

Our biggest increases came from those stores which sell better goods. We are seeing some price resistance, but it hasn't become critical."

And confirming this judgment is the fact that mink continues to be the best-selling fur. Despite the fact that prices for a top quality mink coat start at around $6,950, a full 60 percent of furs bought in the U.S. are mink.

The minks are raised in captivity primarily on ranches in the U.S., Canada and Scandinavia.

RANCH BREEDING is just one of the humane techniques used by today's furriers for obtaining the skins needed to make fur garments.

The Endangered Species Act of 1973 bans the manufacture of coats made from the furs of such animals as the leopard, whose existence was threatened to the point of extinction by unlimited hunting and trapping.

Conservation departments of all states now favor current trapping techniques—and fur is back in fashion.

Desegregation Plan Gets Good Marks

BILL CLEMENTS

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

For the most part, public school desegregation here is going well, but some students and teachers still have trouble adjusting to the situation, an expert on human relations said Monday.

"I've been impressed with the caliber of young people I've seen. If other school systems had the same kind of students, the desegregation process in those communities would have been more successful," said Dr. George Henderson, an outside consultant making a second visit to the Lubbock Independent School District.

After spending the day at the junior high schools affected by the district's court-ordered integration plan, the sociology professor said he could "detect that spark, that enthusiasm in the eyes of almost all the young people I saw."

The same holds true for teachers, he added. "There is more hope (for success) here than in most other communities" undergoing desegregation. Henderson said Lubbock's plan has "tremendous potential."

"But I'm enough of a realist to know that not all of the problems have gone away," he said. At faculty meetings during the day there were complaints voiced that some students resent being bused to a distant school, and that some white teachers have difficulty relating to minority pupils.

Henderson, who chairs the human relations department at the University of Oklahoma, will spend the week here giving advice on such matters and evaluating progress of the desegregation plan. Lubbock implemented this fall. He conducted teacher training sessions here in August.

At the junior-high level, the plan proposed by the school board and approved by federal Judge Halbert O. Woodward involved closing minority Struggs on the city's east side and dispersing those students among Atkins, Hutchinson and O.L. Slaton schools.

Henderson visited the receiving junior high Monday, conducting four student assemblies, two faculty assemblies, an evening meeting with parents and various committee sessions.

Roy Grimes, Hutchinson principal, said that a problem among some students is school receives from the Struggs area is that they "really don't want to be where they are. Some of the students tell their teachers, 'I don't want to be here, I don't like it here, I don't want to study.'"

This attitude, Henderson said, is a "very natural reaction to the trauma of being forced to do something" they dislike. For Struggs-area youngsters, desegregation has meant "severing the social and ethnic umbilical cord."

Schools can help overcome this attitude by getting students involved academically and socially. "The more they become involved, the less they feel alienated," Henderson said.

But he added: "We're not going to win all of them." The first students to undergo desegregation are the "lost generation," finding themselves at a social and academic disadvantage, Henderson said. He said that if schools learn to desegregate successfully, future students will not have such problems.

Another problem Grimes has found is that some white middle-class teachers contend they cannot relate to black students. Henderson called such an excuse a cop-out.

"There are more differences within cultures than between cultures in this country. We're not talking about an alien culture — we're talking about people who live just a few blocks away."

"When a teacher says to me, 'I can't understand these ethnically different children,' my response is, 'Do you understand children at all?'" Henderson said.

At the same time, the professor said teachers must be firm in academic standards or else they will "make it easy for them (low-achieving minorities) to fail."

COLUMBIA, Md. (AP) — Engineers at Johns Hopkins University's Applied Physics Laboratory are developing flywheels under a federal grant to cut electric bills by storing power from off-peak periods.

Chief developer David Rabenhorst says the device should dramatically reduce the need for new power plants and transmission lines. Flywheels, like toy tops, store energy in their spins. They're usually made of steel and are used to regulate the speed and uniformity of machine operations. The government's idea is to place the flywheels in homes to store power when demand is low. Demonstrations are scheduled for early next year.

Clements Says Texas Bigger Than Carter

By MILLER BONNER
WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — While other governors speak of stormy economic climates in their states, Governor-elect Bill Clements says Texas' fiscal outlook is bathed in the sunshine of prosperity — despite the efforts of President Carter.

Clements took a break Monday from his formal debut as governor-elect at the Republican Governors' Association conference and stepped into a room crowded with reporters anxious to question the first Republican Texas elected governor in 104 years.

After noting that his state's economy is not threatened with "downturns or recessions" to the same degree as other states, Clements was asked if any of President Carter's fiscal policies will hurt the Lone Star State.

"I think we're bigger than Mr. Carter," he replied. "Higher interest rates are not looked upon in great favor in Texas and we are not enamored with his anti-inflation program ... as a matter of fact, I don't think you can name any program that Mr. Carter has put forward that Texans look upon with favor."

Clements said he and the state legislature's Democratic leaders — House Speaker Bill Clayton and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby — have agreed on a battle plan attacking the energy bill Carter signed into law this year.

Clements, whose oil drilling supply business made him a multimillionaire, said Texas' plan includes challenging the constitutionality of the new energy law "all the way to the Supreme Court," devising a state law allowing Texas to tax energy leaving the state and working with the Texas Railroad Commission to cut back oil and gas production.

But while Clements claimed to have cooperation from the Democratic-controlled state legislature in fighting Carter on energy matters, he did say he would take the legislature to court if they failed to pass legislation to allow Texas to have a 1980 presidential primary.

Asked who he would support in such a primary, Clements said he was "on the horns of four dilemmas and I'm not about to get in the middle of that kind of mess," referring to his personal friendship with both former Gov. John Connally and former CIA director George Bush, plus two "additional people" who actively helped his campaign — Ronald Reagan and Gerald Ford.

Clements was equally noncommittal on plans he might have of running as a favorite son in such a primary.

"I have my work cut out for me ... for the next 10 months just tending to my knitting in the state of Texas so I haven't even considered this question."

Although Clements continued his verbal war on Carter, he did concede that it won't be easy to deny the president Texas' crucial electoral votes in 1980.

Clements, 61, opened the news conference by introducing his 46-year-old wife, Rita, and his "friend, associate and neighbor," U.S. Sen.-elect John Warner of Virginia.

The Clements own an estate outside Washington, D.C., that is bordered on three sides by the country home of Warner and his wife, actress Elizabeth Taylor.

Victor Claims Race Cost $6 Million

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — Bill Clements says he spent $6 million of his own money on his historic victory in the Texas gubernatorial race. "And that was in there before I even knew it."

The Dallas businessman also said Monday he personally guaranteed more than $2.7 million in loans for the race against his Democratic opponent, Attorney General John Hill.

Clements, who began as a roughneck and built a multimillion dollar oil drilling empire, also said Hill lost votes by claiming his Republican opponent was attempting to buy the election.

"I want to make it very clear that I think anyone who would put that forward doesn't understand the Texas voter," he began. "If anyone knows of a Texas vote for sale, I want you to tell me about it, because you know more about that than I do."

"I believe my opponent made a bad mistake when he took off on that track and when I debated him, I encouraged him to keep making those remarks because I believe every time he said it, it hurt him."

Clements said his primary and general election cost will total "in the neighborhood of $6 million." His campaign office in Dallas said only the finance chairman had the figures on how much was spent and how much Clements borrowed and he was out of town Monday.

Clements also contended Hill "had been running for governor for 10 years" and had spent "something like $8 million."

Asked who he would support in such a primary, Clements said he was "on the horns of four dilemmas and I'm not about to get in the middle of that kind of mess," referring to his personal friendship with both former Gov. John Connally and former CIA director George Bush, plus two "additional people" who actively helped his campaign — Ronald Reagan and Gerald Ford.

Clements was equally noncommittal on plans he might have of running as a favorite son in such a primary.

"I have my work cut out for me ... for the next 10 months just tending to my knitting in the state of Texas so I haven't even considered this question."

Although Clements continued his verbal war on Carter, he did concede that it won't be easy to deny the president Texas' crucial electoral votes in 1980.

Clements, 61, opened the news conference by introducing his 46-year-old wife, Rita, and his "friend, associate and neighbor," U.S. Sen.-elect John Warner of Virginia.

The Clements own an estate outside Washington, D.C., that is bordered on three sides by the country home of Warner and his wife, actress Elizabeth Taylor.

INTEREST-FREE LOAN!

Special get-acquainted holiday offer lets you borrow up to $1,500 without interest for 3 months.

To get your loan interest-free, all we ask is that you repay the money in full within 3 months.

Why are we making this offer? To get you acquainted with the way we do business at Dial. We feel confident that after you experience our courtesy, friendliness, efficiency and speed, you'll come to us the next time you need money.

The amount loaned to you is free of all finance charges if you repay it in full within 3 months, but it will bear finance charges from the date of the loan if the amount is not repaid within 3 months of the date of the loan. Of course, all loans are subject to our normal credit requirements.

This special get-acquainted offer is limited to people who have not done business with us before. And it will expire December 22, 1978. So phone or come in today and say, "I'd like to apply for an interest-free loan." Just one interest-free loan per customer, please.

For the price of this pretty begonia, you can visit your Mother Long Distance.

And, it's much more fun than talking to your plants.

If your mother lives out-of-town, you'd be amazed at how little it costs to keep in touch. Even if she lives as far as nineteen hundred miles away, you can visit her by Long Distance for just $3.80 and talk 10 minutes. (8 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday-Friday, dialed One-Plus, out-of-state, tax not included.) That's about the cost of this inexpensive houseplant. And it's much more fun than talking to a begonia. Isn't there someone you'd like to call right now... just to keep in touch?

Long Distance. What else is so nice for the price?

Missing Patients Found

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The 36 elderly patients who disappeared from a nursing home have been accounted for, about a third of them located at an unlicensed boarding house under the sole care of an 18-year-old woman, authorities said.

Manchester Police Chief Donald Petri said the patients from the Jera Su Manor, which he described as "horrible," were located in Jefferson County, in St. Louis and St. Louis County. He said they were in nursing homes or with family members.

A dozen of the 14 patients originally found in the unlicensed boarding home at DeSoto remained at the house pending legal action today, he said. Two of the patients were removed by family members before authorities arrived.

Petri said a Jefferson County judge would untangle the legalities on moving the patients. Warrants also will be sought in connection with the situation, he added.

James F. Walsh, the Missouri Social Services director, had said earlier that state officials had no authority to move patients.

"It seems odd, but we haven't got the authority to just remove them from the house," Walsh said.

State social workers joined local police Monday in a search for the patients, who had been unaccounted for since their unexplained removal last week from the Jera Su Manor home in suburban Manchester.

The home's license had been revoked by the state earlier this month for various violations, including those involving quality of care, said Cleophas Jones, Walsh's assistant.

Walsh said about 27 patients were known to be at the Jera Su Manor around the time the facility's license was revoked.

The owners began transferring patients from the home early last week, without notifying patients' relatives, authorities said. When relatives were unable to contact the nursing home during the Thanksgiving holidays, they called police. Authorities began the search for the patients when police found the home unlicensed and the patients unaccounted for.

"It was horrible," said Petri, who said he was not sure what 18-year-old woman owned the home, but he said she was the daughter of a well-known St. Louis family.

Petri said the home, owned by Mrs. and Shirley Robertson, had been under investigation for two years by his department and the St. Louis Health Department because of possible violations of criminal laws and sanitation regulations.

The Robertsons refused to talk to authorities where the patients were found, Petri said.

JUDY GARLAND MEMORABILIA — A young girl purchases an enlarged photograph of Judy Garland at a booth at the site of an auction of hundreds of the late singer's personal effects Monday. About 200 people attended an early showing of the mementos, which were auctioned at the Beverly Wilshire Hotel. (AP Laserphoto)

Late Star's Mementos Command Top Dollar

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Judy Garland's "Wizard of Oz" scrapbook brought $6,500 at an auction of her mementos, but the late actress' 1953 Mercedes Benz commanded the most money — $60,000.

More than 500 persons paid $25 each to attend the auction arranged by the singer's third husband, Sid Luft, to whom she was married for 13 years.

"This is a different breed of buyers," James Goodman of C.B. Charles Galleries said Monday night. "They have an emotional involvement which you don't see at most auctions. It's fascinating."

The car was purchased by Rick Meyer, who owns a chain of women's clothing stores in Southern California. The scrapbook took the second highest price. The buyer wouldn't give his name.

An autographed picture of President John F. Kennedy with a personal note to Miss Garland fetched $5,700. It was bought by Jim Rissmiller, of Wolf & Rissmiller Concerts, one of the West Coast's top pop concert organizers. He also paid $3,000 for an unpublished, leather-bound book of her poetry entitled "Thoughts and Poems of Judy Garland." Rissmiller said they would be Christmas gifts.

Goodman speculated much of the memorabilia would end up in Europe. He said several dealers told him they were "delighted" with the low cost of their purchases.

Tea sets and china sold quickly at down-to-earth prices. The bidding often ended at $100. A first-draft copy of the script for "A Star Is Born" went for $950. The final draft was auctioned for $700.

Bidding was more spirited on personal items, like a silver pitcher engraved with the name "Judy" that sold for $900.

No current Hollywood stars turned out to compete with the Garland legend, but representatives of actress Lily Tomlin and singer Barry Manilow bought several items.

Film clips showed Miss Garland singing some of her famous numbers, including "Over the Rainbow" and "You Made Me Love You."

Luft said haunting memories of Miss Garland, who died nine years ago, made him decide to sell her things. He said she would have approved.

"Judy would have loved the production, the hoopla and the people," he said. "I spent enough of my life on the past."

A lawsuit filed last Wednesday by attorneys for singer Liza Minelli, Miss Garland's daughter by an earlier marriage, failed to prevent the auction. However, it could send proceeds to the Garland estate.

Birth Keeps String Alive

HOUSTON (UPI) — Sabrina Leeann Heinrich was born Sunday, just in time for the birthday celebrations of her grandmother, great-grandmother, aunt, uncle and cousin.

Parents Jerry and Sandra Heinrich, both 26, laughed off questions about the family's Nov. 26 birthday tradition, which just happens to fall about nine months after Valentine's Day.

"Who knows? Maybe Mother Nature is playing tricks," grinned Mrs. Heinrich.

"Just one of those things," shrugged Heinrich.

Besides, Sabrina was three weeks late.

"We expected her three weeks ago," Mrs. Heinrich said. "My husband had to put off two hunting trips and a fishing trip."

Sabrina's big brother missed membership in the Nov. 26 club by being born one day earlier.

Career Changes Subject Of Book

By LEAH JAY
NEW YORK (WNS) — Richard Grossman, director of the Center for Health in Medicine at Montefiore Hospital and Medical Center in New York, has written a book called "Choosing and Changing", of which he is the living embodiment. The book contains great dollops of philosophy, psychiatry and social psychology and is dedicated to the proposition that while most of us can cope, few of us are living expressive lives.

In "Choosing and Changing" Grossman urges us to dig into ourselves, our skills, our common sense and make our lives works of art. In other words, he has written yet another in the ever-increasing number of self-help books.

Grossman does not consider "self-help book" a bad term. "Every book is a self-help book potentially," he says. "The Bible, the biography of Lincoln, a math textbook. They are all maps to unfamiliar territories."

Grossman began his career pursuit at pre-med school. After two years he quit, went to night school at City College and during the day went through a series of four jobs in a year, detective at Gimbel's, messenger in Wall Street, public relations for the Quakers of New York, publicity for the old Larry Clinton orchestra.

At length he went to Ohio as assistant manager of a ladies' ready-to-wear store. That led him to advertising. And with four years off for the armed forces, advertising led him to publishing, first for Simon and Schuster and then for his own firm, Grossman Publishers.

Publishing led him into voluminous reading. "I am a very dedicated student once I get on to something, an auto-didact." The word "auto-didact" is typical of Grossman's approach to life and learning. It's a made-up word, presumably meaning self-taught. When Grossman doesn't find what he wants at hand, he creates it. Along the way, in fact, he began to teach and although he has no college degrees he has taught at Hunter College and is an adjunct professor at New York University. In addition, he has done some counseling, which in turn led him to "Choosing and Changing."

Among self-help books "Choosing and Changing" is not considered to be the most accessible. On the contrary, it is a thinking person's book, written by a man with a wide classical, if self-taught, background. One reviewer has said, "It's as if Grossman had taken the themes of Emerson's Essay on Self-Reliance and run them through all of psychology since 1865 and come out at the other end." Grossman doesn't deny this appraisal since Emerson has always been his great inspiration. "I think of myself as able to sit down and have dinner with Ralph Waldo Emerson, have dialogue with him, arguments with him. And I am not turned off by the accusation that 'Choosing and Changing' is the thinking man's self-help book."

Accessible or not, Grossman's book is part of a groundswell of interest in choosing and changing careers. Grossman avers that most people have secret ambitions but they get bogged down, stalled on dead-center by economics and ultimately lose confidence in their ability to fulfill those ambitions.

Grossman likes the metaphor of life as a patchwork quilt. He himself does many jobs, occupies many roles, but all within a similar framework. He thinks each of us can do the same. "If people discover in themselves that they need a variety of tasks to feel that they're getting the most out of life, using the whole system at their command, it's important to get one background color that represents a motif. Like light blue, if you will. Now my background color, my light blue, is the 'helping' profession. The education, the educating, eliciting profession. That's the major theme of my life."

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: In a recent letter from one who signed himself "Reverend L.W. Van Dellen," you replied, "Dear Reverend Van Dellen."

Abby, "Reverend" is not a title like "Doctor" or "Rabbi" or "Father." It is an adjective descriptive of character — not an office.

The World Almanac puts it this way: "A clergyman should never be referred to as 'a Reverend,' or addressed as 'Reverend Blank.'"

"Reverend" should be used only as "Honorable" is used. It is "The Reverend Mr. Blank," or "The Reverend Dr. Blank," but never "Reverend Blank." Please, Abby, never address a clergyman as "Reverend Anybody." It's simply not done.

YOUR FAITHFUL FAN IN L.A.

Dear Faithful: Ten whacks for me with a stack of "Presbyterian Outlooks," from whence came this appropriate jingle:

"There is a certain fellow
Who makes me want to burst,
He never fails to hail me with,
'Hello, Reverend Hurst!'
If two things make bad syntax,
This one is the first,
When some guy introduces me with,
'This is Reverend Hurst.'
As just a common 'Mister'
I'd acknowledge him to burst;
But I would like to punch the man
Who calls me 'Reverend Hurst.'"

Please print this. It may help.

VEAL A LA SWISS

1 1/2 cups Marinara Sauce (recipe below)
4 veal cutlets
1/2 cup flour
3 tbs. vegetable oil
1 soft avocado, peeled, seeded and sliced
1 cup Swiss cheese, grated
Prepare Marinara sauce. Preheat broiler. Dust veal cutlets in flour and saute quickly in hot oil. Remove from heat and place in a shallow baking dish. Spoon hot Marinara sauce over cutlets. Arrange avocado slices over cutlets, reserving several slices for garnish. Sprinkle with Swiss cheese and place under broiler until cheese melts. Remove cutlets carefully onto serving plate. Garnish with reserved avocado slices. Makes four servings.

Warning Sounded Before Crash

SAN DIEGO (AP) — An air traffic controller says a conflict alert warning sounded 17 seconds before a commercial airliner and a small private plane collided in midair, killing 144 persons in the nation's worst air disaster.

However, controller Abram N. Lehman testified Monday that controllers decided not to warn the pilot of the Pacific Southwest Airlines 727 plane because they thought the conflict of the two planes had been "resolved." He said pilots of both planes earlier had acknowledged having the other aircraft in sight and were flying under visual, or see-and-be-seen, flight rules.

Lehman, in testimony in the first day of the National Transportation Safety Board's public hearing into the Sept. 25 collision, said "conflict alert" warnings are triggered several times daily at San Diego approach control by approaching aircraft, even when there is no immediate danger of collision.

Seven persons who died on the ground were among the 144 victims.

Lehman, who works at Miramar Naval Air Station, said a conflict alert "is always an attention getter," but controllers are used to them and registered no surprise that day. He said he knows of cases in which a conflict alert was triggered when the two approaching aircraft were separated by a safe 1,000 feet of altitude.

Investigators are studying whether the conflict alert system is reliable and whether false alarms lull controllers into complacency when a dangerous situation occurs.

Lehman said he had just completed "handing off" the PSA jet to other controllers at Lindbergh Field and watched as radar data blocks for the two planes converged as the conflict alert sounded.

He said altitude information on the data blocks was made "unobservable" by the situation but that he was unconcerned because it had happened many times before.

The goal of the hearing, expected to continue through Friday, is to establish a "probable cause" for the crash. Information gathered will be forwarded to Washington, D.C., where a final report will be issued by the NTSB in three to five months, officials said.

Three eyewitnesses to the collision gave differing versions of whether the Cessna flown by a pilot studying instrument flight made an abrupt upward swing moments before it impacted with the PSA jet.

Glenn P. Grande, a bank employee who was walking to work, said he saw the single-engine plane "bank upward and to the left."

But David S. Dixon, a former Convair flight test engineer, and Father James P. Clifford, a priest at St. Augustine's High School, both said the smaller plane was overtaken by the PSA jet and made no sudden movements before it was hit from behind.

Dixon, now an energy conservation consultant for San Diego Gas & Electric Co., said the Cessna "flipped over the top of the (PSA jet's) wing and appeared to impact with the right engine."

The jetliner then went into a right wing-low bank and, trailing smoke and flames, plunged to the ground.

FUNDS FOR INDIANS

Scuffle With Policemen Lands Student In Jail

A Tech student, apparently angered over being escorted out of the South Plains Mall at 6002 Slide Road about 9 p.m. Monday, got into a fight with a policeman which resulted in the student's being escorted to the county jail.

Reports show officer Ricky Offutt spotted the 18-year-old, who appeared to be drunk, in Fun World at the mall. Offutt said he asked the student to leave, but when he led the man to a back door, the suspect turned and said he didn't have to leave, "and I couldn't make him."

Told he was under arrest, the teenager ran from the officer, reports indicate. When Offutt caught the youth in the parking lot, he allegedly struck the officer in the side.

The officer said he struck the student in the mouth and the student began swinging wildly at him. "We both struck each other several times," Offutt said in his report.

The suspect again broke free and was caught by another officer arriving at the scene, according to police. He was transported to the county jail and booked for aggravated assault on a police officer and public intoxication.

Police today were also investigating heavy damage inflicted by vandals at the home of Bill Wright, 2039 62nd St.

Wright told police that sometime between 7 p.m. Sunday and 6:30 p.m. Monday $2,500 damage was done to the residence.

He said his walls had been knocked full of holes and smeared with dye, the living room light fixture pulled from the ceiling, the commode broken, the thermostat jerked off the wall, kitchen cabinets scratched, the kitchen faucet knocked off and four windows broken.

The homeowner said he had no idea who would want to damage the structure.

A 22-year-old Lubbock woman said she was raped by her former husband who hit her and forced her to stay with him in a motel room.

The man allegedly picked up the woman on the State Highway about 8 p.m. Sunday after signaling her to pull her car over. After driving around several hours, he rented a room at an Amarillo Highway motel, the woman said.

The woman said she was made to stay in the room from 1 a.m. until noon Monday, during which time the former husband beat her and forced her to have sex with him.

After being released, the woman went to the police station and reported the incident, according to police.

Dr. Ernesto C. Ching said his office at 3501 22nd St. was entered between noon Saturday and noon Monday and a gun and cash with a total value of $2,000 were stolen. The money and pistol were in an unlocked drawer, he said.

A burglary between 4 p.m. Sunday and 11:30 p.m. Monday at 2501 4th Ave. home of Leon Scott, resulted in the theft of $1,100 in television sets and an 8 1/2-inch diameter computer.

A computer terminal was reported stolen Monday from the 8th floor of Southwestern Bell Telephone Co., 1800 Main St.

Robert Wimmer, the company's security manager, told police Monday the terminal evidently was stolen more than a week ago. The value of the terminal, which was leased from another company, was unknown, he said.

A trumpet, saxophone and tape deck, valued together at $675, were reported stolen at the 2323 First Place residence of Joe Semmens. He said burglar apparently took the musical equipment sometime between Friday and Sunday.

Weldon Harris of 2519 Main St., rear, said burglars kicked in the front door of his home Sunday evening and took $150 in stereo equipment.

Shots Fired At Trucks As Strike Continues

By United Team International

A sniper firing from a car shot the windshield out of a truck on Interstate 90 in Erie County, Pa., early today, the second shooting incident within 24 hours.

An Ohio truck driver was shot in the head Monday in the violence-punctuated strike by independent steel-haulers.

Pennsylvania State Police said a flat-bed truck driven by Michael Russell, Exton, Ky., was fired on from a car on the highway. Officers said one of the shots narrowly missed Russell's head.

Nicholas O'Palick, 53, Austintown, Ohio, was listed in satisfactory condition in a Youngstown, Ohio, hospital today after being shot Monday while driving on the Pennsylvania Turnpike near the Ohio border.

U.S. District Judge William K. Thomas in Cleveland Monday declined to grant a permanent injunction against striking members of the Fraternal Association of Steel Haulers. He did grant a preliminary injunction against the steel haulers and ordered its members not to commit any acts of violence or harass other trucks.

The Penn-Ohio Steel Carriers Association, representing 20 Ohio and Pennsylvania trucking companies, had argued for a permanent injunction, saying FASH members were intimidating other drivers and participating in acts of violence. They charged that FASH's conduct constituted an unlawful conspiracy to violate federal antitrust laws.

Thomas said he would hear additional testimony on the matter Jan. 2.

Bill Hill, Pittsburgh-based president of FASH, called the court action a victory for his organization, noting it doesn't preclude picketing of steel plants. He vowed to continue the strike and contended that FASH has never condoned acts of violence.

But since the start of the strike Nov. 18, Pennsylvania state police have recorded nearly 200 incidents of violence.

The strike, aimed at asserting the right for drivers who own their own rigs to bargain collectively, and independence from the Teamsters Union, has disrupted steel shipments by most major steel producers.

A spokesman for U.S. Steel Corp. in Cleveland said shipments are off 20 percent while a Republic Steel spokesman said he was not at liberty to tell how much the firm's steel shipments have been disrupted.

Two major steel hauling firms in the Youngstown area cut by about 50 percent because of the work stoppage.

Texas Farmers Warned Against Huge Reserves

DALLAS (Special) — Texas Farm Bureau president Carrol Chaloupka said Monday the wrong kind of a farm program could lead to a "cheap food" policy by government that would benefit neither farmers nor consumers.

Addressing the 45th annual meeting of the Texas Farm Bureau at the Dallas Hilton, Chaloupka warned producers about piling up surpluses in government-held reserves.

"We must avoid giving political planners the opportunity to impose a cheap food policy on us," Chaloupka said.

Chaloupka referred to the large increase in private storage built by producers, and urged farmers to keep control of their grain.

The leader of the state's largest farm organization said the only way producers will get prices is to balance supply with demand. He referred to the recent experience in the cattle industry.

"The cattle industry has gone through a devastating four years, but it did reduce cattle numbers by 15 percent, and today cattle prices are very good," he said.

Chaloupka pointed to other problems that must be solved if farmers and ranchers are to obtain a high net income in the marketplace. These include, he said, expanding exports, controlling inflation, lessening government regulations, restraining the "monopoly power" of labor unions, and "sensible" water and energy policies.

The state farm leader stressed the importance of farm exports to agriculture. He said one-fourth of farmers' income result from foreign sales, and that the production of one acre in three of cropland is exported.

He said many people in agriculture still do not realize how much farmers depend upon exports.

"If we didn't have this outlet," he said, "our prices for export commodities — assuming current production — would be way below the cost of production. And a lot of us would be out of business," he said.

Still on the subject of exports, Chaloupka said agriculture could not afford a farm program that forced foreign buyers to pay 100 percent of parity for American farm products. He points out that the United States does not control the world markets.

"Anytime you have a law like that, you can prepare to take tremendous cuts in your cotton, grain, rice, and soybean production," he said. "I don't mean acreage, I mean production."

The farm leader said inflation — caused primarily by government deficit spending — is the greatest problem facing this nation. If inflation is not stopped, he warned, it will be the "downfall of this society was we know it."

Chaloupka said Farm Bureau has a policy that deals with inflation. It includes adopting amendments to the U.S. Constitution requiring Congress to operate on a balanced budget and restricting the tax authority of government to a realistic percentage of the gross national product.

On the subject of government regulations, Chaloupka said there is no excuse for the degree of regulation and restraint to which Americans are subjected.

"The unneeded regulations and the bureaucracy they have spawned create special problems for all of us," he said. "They take away our freedom. They add to the cost of everything we buy and sell."

Commenting on what he termed the "stranglehold" union labor has on the American economy, the farm leader said unions are protected from anti-trust provisions of the law. This "unfair advantage" should be restrained, he said.

On another subject, Chaloupka said water may become the most limiting resource to which Texas must adjust.

"We in Farm Bureau are going to have to be leaders in the development of a water resources plan to eliminate shortages in water-deficit areas as well as prevent flooding in the surplus areas," he said.

The TFB leader commented that President Carter's energy bill is "worthless" as far as Texas is concerned, as it would regulate intra-state use of natural gas. He said total deregulation would provide incentives for adequate production of energy supplies.

Chaloupka commended county leaders for helping to pass the Tax Relief Amendment in the general election. But, he warned, enabling legislation is still necessary if agriculture is to have relief from agricultural land taxes.

"If we fail to pass enabling legislation this next session, we may never have another chance again," he said.

KIDS-ONLY CLUB

Baby Contest Makes For Fun

By SHARI LEWIS

"Tell me 'bout when I was a kid..." I remember that my daughter Mallory used to ask me that when she was just 6 or 7. I'd look to see if she was teasing me (because she was still a kid), but she meant it! People love to look back fondly at the "good ol' days." And whether you're throwing a party for your friends or giving one for little kids (in order to make some money) the "You Must Have Been a Beautiful Baby" contest makes a nifty game.

On the invitation say, "Bring a photo of you, taken when you were just a kid, for our 'You Must Have Been a Beautiful Baby" contest." When the party starts, hang the pictures on a ribbon taped across a wall or stretched between two chairs.

Then hold a vote, and pick the cutest baby, the funniest picture, the baby who looks "most likely to succeed" and so forth. (Tell everyone to try not to vote for himself or herself!)

The second part of the game is to figure out which baby picture goes with which guest.

I guarantee that baby pictures are fun to look at — no kidding! YESTERDAY'S BRAIN TWISTER

Father Shoots Man Charged In Killings

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A father whose two sons were killed last year stepped from a sidewalk crowd outside the Bexar County Courthouse and fatally shot the man charged in their deaths, sheriff's deputies said.

The victim, Jimmie Garza, 31, was among six prisoners chained together as they were walking 20 feet from a paddy wagon to the courthouse Monday morning, authorities said.

A middle-aged man stepped forward, pulled a revolver and fired six shots, not saying a word, witnesses said. Four bullets hit Garza, who was dead on arrival at a local hospital. Authorities said Garza was wounded in the chest and head.

The assailant dropped his gun and surrendered peacefully, deputies said. He was taken to police headquarters for questioning.

A charge alleging murder was filed against Juan Rodriguez of Karnes City, the father of Alfredo and Elidoro Rodriguez.

They were killed Aug. 13, 1977 in a shooting at a pool hall here.

Peace Justice Rudy Esquivel denied bond for Rodriguez, a retired 57-year-old civil service worker.

Bexar County Sheriff Rudy Garza said he knew of no way the slaying could have been prevented.

Vote Recount Aids Winners

HOUSTON (AP) — A recount of general election votes in Harris County resulted in the defeated Democratic candidates for governor and U.S. senator backfired as their opponents solidified their wins with higher totals.

Governor-elect Bill Clements won 593 additional votes over Attorney General John Hill in the recount, which was completed Friday, while Sen. John Tower added 518 votes to his Harris County defeat of U.S. Rep. Bob Krueger.

County Judge Jon Lindsay had said Friday a re-check of the county's voting machines indicated Clements and Hill had each gained about 100 votes.

He said Monday, however, the final changes gave the gains to Clements and Tower, and were higher than expected because they corrected errors found when the county clerk's office checked its central computer program.

The revised county totals gave Clements 190,975 votes to Hill's 167,501. Tower's corrected total was 192,609 to Krueger's 154,794.

Backers of Hill and Krueger also sought recounts in about 40 other counties.

Civiletti's Advice Not Enough

DALLAS (AP) — Some Mexican-American leaders say a high-ranking Justice Department official's advice about alleged police brutality is not satisfactory.

U.S. Deputy Attorney General Benjamin R. Civiletti told the representatives of Mexican-American organizations Monday they should look to state and local justice systems for help instead of relying on the Justice Department.

At the meeting, the leaders said they've tried taking their problems to local and state agencies, and it simply does not work.

Civiletti made Dallas his first stop on a three-day police brutality fact-finding tour of Texas and Arizona.

Ruben Bonilla, state director of the League of United Latin American Citizens, said it is no longer expedient for politicians to come out in favor of prosecuting human rights violators.

He said even President Carter — who campaigned for worldwide human rights — has stepped out of the arena when it comes to Hispanics.

"Carter's election campaign and emphasis on human rights has been followed by a very dismal and disgraceful period of 1978 during which 17 persons of Mexican extraction were killed while in custody," Bonilla said. "This was followed by a lack of response from the Justice Department and lack of investigation on the part of local U.S. attorneys, and this placed us in a regression."

Bonilla suggested more Hispanics should be appointed as judges and U.S. attorneys, and federal funds should be withheld from police departments that have patterns of police brutality.

He also said U.S. attorneys should have greater access to grand juries and a conference should be held where President Carter and U.S. Attorney General Griffin Bell could meet with Hispanics.

Other Hispanic leaders who agreed Monday with Bonilla's demands were Ruben Sandoval, LULAC legal counsel; Joe Bernal, director of the Dallas Action office and former state senator, and Joe Cano, president of American GI Forum.

Civiletti said, however, he thinks the Justice Department has made "substantial progress" in reviewing cases of alleged police brutality. While he refused to discuss specific cases, he said 24 percent of all cases involving Hispanics received by the Justice Department so far this year have been accepted for review compared with 6 percent five years ago.

"But we're not satisfied with that," granted funds to Houston ministers for a 12-month project.

Civiletti said he was visiting the Southwest for a "special assessment and review of what's working and what isn't."

"At best, federal prosecution in terms of numbers of alleged incidents will be small," Civiletti said. "For long-term relief, the burden must be placed on a number of equally strong avenues of remedy."

Following his meeting with Hispanic leaders, Civiletti met in a closed session with area law enforcement officials.

He was scheduled to meet with Hispanic leaders in Houston today, then travel to Arizona.

Ex-Executive Pleads Innocent

DALLAS (AP) — Former Southwestern Bell vice president Ray Allen Acker has pleaded innocent in federal court to charges he owes the federal government $585,000 on $1 million in bribes he allegedly accepted in 1975-76.

U.S. District Judge Sarah T. Hughes heard Monday his plea to a stummed-down version of an earlier indictment charging he was part of a scheme to defraud the phone company by contracting purchases with certain equipment companies.

Acker, 63, resigned last spring as vice president in charge of buying computer and copying equipment for the utility.

The six defendants go on trial Feb. 5 in Judge Hughes' court.

VOLCANO ERUPTIONS
CATANIA, Sicily (AP) — Mount Etna, Europe's highest volcano, was spewing ash and smoke for the sixth straight day Monday in what experts called its most spectacular activity in 30 years. They said the activity peaked over the weekend when clouds of white smoke could be seen from about 25 miles away.

"Dad: I see no way out - I agree with your decision - I fear only that without you the world may not make it to communism ... For my part - I am more than tired of this wretched, merciless planet and the hell it holds for so many masses of beautiful people - thank you for the only life I've ever known." - A note found on the body of the Rev. Jim Jones following the mass suicide of more than 900 members of Jones' Peoples Temple cult. The author is unknown.

Connie Francis To End Hiatus

LOS ANGELES (AP) - For singer Connie Francis, the applause may never be quite the same. It's been four years since she was raped by an intruder who broke into her Long Island motel room. She hasn't performed publicly since then, despite an outpour of resulting publicity.

This week the 36-year-old entertainer is to appear on her friend Dick Clark's "Wednesday Live" television show. The songstress who popularized such hits as "Where The Boys Are," "Lipstick On Your Collar," and "Who's Sorry Now?" has had comeback offers before but "I didn't want to do anything," she said.

"I just stayed in bed and watched television for six months before I would even go see a psychiatrist. I was really paranoid about everything. And frightened. And very angry," she said Monday.

"After the incident, we received so many offers to do programs," she said. "That was a terrible feeling. No one was calling to do a special with me before that."

Those feelings have faded, she said. "There will be people who will come to see my show (because of the rape)," she acknowledges. "But I don't like to dwell on personal problems. I really don't feel sorry for myself and I don't want others to feel sorry for me."

Liz Now Wife Of U.S. Senator

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) - Elizabeth Taylor is now officially the wife of a U.S. senator.

The actress' husband, Republican John Warner, was certified the winner of Virginia's tight senatorial race by the State Board of Elections Monday.

Warner, former secretary of the Navy, defeated Andrew Miller by 4,721 votes, only four-tenths of a percent of the more than 1.2 million cast.

The official canvass gave Warner 613,232 votes - 50.1 percent - to 608,511 - 49.7 percent - for Miller. The other two-tenths of a percent went to write-in candidates.

Miller, however, did not concede defeat, and a spokesman said a recount request or appeal to the Senate is possible.

Haley Testifies About Passages

NEW YORK (AP) - Writer Alex Haley concedes that his best-seller about his family's ancestry is rooted partly in passages from another book.

The author of "Roots" took the witness stand in U.S. District Court Monday and said three passages from Harold Courlander's "The African" found their way into his book.

Haley said he had not read "The African" before "Roots" was published and claimed the passages were probably among a host of material donated to him during years of research.

Haley testified at a nonjury trial of a suit by Courlander, a folklorist from Bethesda, Md., who claims Haley copied from "The African," a novel published in 1967.

Charles, Old Flame Plan Holiday

LONDON (AP) - Prince Charles, bachelor heir to the British throne, plans a hunting holiday in Spain next weekend with an old flame, Lady Jane Wellesley.

Lady Jane, 27, the Duke of Wellington's daughter, will join the prince and his party at the duke's 2,000-acre estate near Granada, Buckingham Palace announced Monday.

Speculation about Charles' marriage plans mounted during his 30th birthday celebrations two weeks ago.

Lady Jane has denied suggestions she's in line to become a queen, but her name always is near the top of the eligible list.

She's a publicist for the British Broadcasting Corp. and currently is helping to prepare BBC to discuss all of Shakespeare's plays.

Charles first dated her six years ago, and Lady Jane was among the special guests invited by Queen Elizabeth II to Charles' birthday party at Buckingham Palace Nov. 15.

Not Much Of A Choice

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) - Give Ralph Dorame a choice between a bullet and a beer, and he'll take the beer every time.

At least that was Dorame's philosophy when he picked up two hitchhikers. Once inside the car, one pulled a gun, Dorame told police, and demanded to be taken to Interstate 10.

But Dorame went the wrong way and stopped a few minutes later at a bar.

"Go ahead and shoot me if you want," Dorame, 47, said he told the men. "But I'm going inside to have a beer."

The pair watched in silence as Dorame took his keys, walked inside the bar and, postponing the beer, called police.

"I didn't have much time to think so I just did it," he said Monday. "I don't know why I did it, I just did. What worried me was who else they might do it to."

"Maybe they said, 'Hey, this guy is crazy,' and left me alone."

Police failed to find the pair.

Hill Asks Panel Of Brochures

AUSTIN (AP) - Attorney General John Hill says he wants the full story about the distribution of pro-election leaflets that imply - in boldface - that he is not a Christian.

Hill said an informal news conference Monday he will have members of his campaign staff investigate the flyers that Hill says were distributed by the hundreds of thousands in churches the Sunday before election day.

The brochures bear the statement, "Paid Pol. Adv. on behalf of Bill Clements for Governor, Tom Rhodes, Treasurer," but Clements said last week the brochures did not come from his campaign organization.

Hill said ministers have told him the brochures "definitely had an impact" on voters.

The attorney general said radio evangelist Lester Roloff had issued about 50,000 letters urging Clements' election but he declined to link Roloff with the Sunday morning brochures, pending his investigation.

Hill obtained a Texas Supreme Court decision that Roloff's child care institutions had to submit to state licensing and regulation.

The tri-fold brochures said, "...Bill Clements believes in ... salvation by grace, the absolute principles of God's word ... Bill Clements is for: Removal of the church ministries from the 1978 Child Care Licensing Act ..."

Hill said the brochures made, "by implication, the suggestion that I am not a Christian or a church person or a believer in God's word."

He said he had asked his campaign staff - not attorney general's employees - to investigate because "it (the brochure's) use should be fully brought to the attention of the Texas Supreme Court."

A Houston probate court jury already has decided Hughes was a Texas resident, but its determination could be overridden by the Austin jury.

Roberts said shifting the trial to California simply would transfer the inconvenience of travel from California parties to Texas litigants.

He also denied California's motion to add 22 persons as parties "who hold themselves out as the only known heirs of Mr. Hughes." Attorneys for California contend this was necessary to avoid further litigation.

"It is clear that with the present parties to this action, this court's judgment would bind the administrators, the heirs and the taxing authorities of Texas, California and Nevada. No more is required," Roberts said.

Jury In Texas To Decide Hughes Case

AUSTIN (AP) - A U.S. district judge has ruled that a Texas jury, not one in California, will decide the late Howard Hughes' legal residence in a case that could mean millions of dollars in inheritance taxes for one of the states.

Judge Jack Roberts on Monday denied California's request to have the case transferred either to there or Denver, a location California lawyers argued would preserve fairness by avoiding a possibly prejudiced jury.

Administrators of the multimillionaire's estate are seeking a binding determination of Hughes' residence. He died in 1978.

They argue Hughes was a resident of Nevada, which has no inheritance tax. A Houston probate court jury already has decided Hughes was a Texas resident, but its determination could be overridden by the Austin jury.

Roberts said shifting the trial to California simply would transfer the inconvenience of travel from California parties to Texas litigants.

He also denied California's motion to add 22 persons as parties "who hold themselves out as the only known heirs of Mr. Hughes." Attorneys for California contend this was necessary to avoid further litigation.

Senior Tiplers Find Rules Fluid

BUFFALO, Minn. (AP) - Nursing home administrator John Thompson thinks some rules are made to be broken.

That's why he schedules a pre-dinner cocktail party once or twice a week for elderly residents at the Retirement Center of Wright County.

"They enjoyed a cocktail at home once in a while," Thompson said. "Why not here?" We don't try to discipline their lives.

About a fourth of the home's 119 residents show up for the parties in the center's all-purpose room. Beer, wine, mixed drinks and pop are served in regular glasses - no plastic cups - and staff members pass around chips and crackers.

At a recent party, 100-year-old Herman Ernst enjoyed a glass of wine while Ann Wittup, 79, stuck to a plain soft drink.

Marie Klatt, 69, sang along with the piano. "Another glass of wine and I'll really be singing," she said. "Wine is nice. It makes you forget your infirmities for a few minutes."

FIVE-STAR SERVICE FOR DINING SERVICE
In an article by Bob Greene in the Travel Section of Long Island's Newsday, 10 major airlines were rated for their First Class dining service. Only Braniff received the five-star rating. Mr. Greene said, "In my experience, the domestic airline that consistently serves the best food is Braniff."
A SOFT LEATHER SEAT IN BRANIFF FIRST CLASS IS JUST 20% MORE... THAN A SOFT LEATHER SEAT IN BRANIFF COACH.
Soft and wide natural leather seats are a special touch only Braniff offers.
Paul Goldberger, Design Editor of the New York Times, said, "The rich texture of the leather and the soft colors of the walls seem to help to reduce boredom and fatigue. They even smell good."
Coach Plus Leather Seats in Coach Plus - Plenty of room in Coach to seat people traveling together and still put an empty seat between them, except at peak travel times.
Fold down center seat backs which become tables between travelers when the seat is not occupied; armrests that fold out of the way for more leg room.
Advance seat selection on the flight out, all connecting Braniff flights and the return trip. And more seats to choose from because the Coach cabin is not divided into sections. Braniff is a soft touch for business in First Class and Coach.

Iran's Government Bans Religious Processions

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Iran's military government today ordered a ban on religious processions during next month's Moslem holy period of mourning in a bid to head off violent protests against Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi's rule.

Also in the capital, mourners in a funeral procession clashed briefly with armed troops and witnesses said several persons were shot and wounded.

The government said the ban was aimed at "preventing exploitation of religious groups by those who have caused unpleasant incidents at religious ceremonies in the past."

The move appeared likely to intensify opposition to the 59-year-old shah and the military government, particularly among the Moslem priests who have led much of the campaign against the shah that erupted in bloody protests 11 months ago.

Gen. Gholam Reza Azhari, who is the armed forces chief of staff and staunch supporter of the shah, was named prime minister by the monarch Nov. 6 to restore order in this strategic oil-rich nation.

Army generals have vowed the shah's 440,000-man army will "mercilessly" quell any street protests during the holy month of Moharram, which begins Dec. 2.

The processions ban comes amid mounting fears another spasm of bloodshed will break out during Moharram, when religious passions in this overwhelmingly Moslem nation traditionally run high and could easily erupt in nationwide civil unrest.

The emotional peak of Moharram is on Dec. 11, when the faithful whip themselves in mourning and remembrance of Imam Hussein, the grandson of the prophet Mohammed, revered as Islam's founder. Hussein was slain in the year 641 by rival Sunni Moslems.

Ayatullah Ruhollah Khomeini, the spiritual leader of the Shiite Moslem sect and the shah's bitter foe now in exile in Paris, has called for steet protests next month and also has urged his followers to disrupt Iran's oil industry, the basis of the nation's economy.

Khomeini and his followers are critical of the shah's attempts to modernize this conservative state and are demanding that a government more attuned to Moslem tradition take his place. They have been joined in protests by the shah's political opponents, who seek reforms in the shah's authoritarian one-man rule.

The street violence in the capital occurred after martial law authorities banned the funeral procession for the Moslem religious leader, Ayatullah Gharavi, who died Monday of natural causes.

About 3,000 persons were in the procession when troops moved in near the main bazaar, hurling tear-gas grenades and firing shots. A witness said several persons were hit but he was unable to say how seriously they were hurt.

The mourners scattered, but tension remained high. Soldiers armed with automatic weapons broke up small groups in narrow lanes near the bazaar.

It was the only violence reported in more than 24 hours, but wildcat strikes at the Tehran refinery shut down the capital's gas stations. The refinery about 18 miles from the capital has been the scene of frequent strikes by various groups of workers. Independent sources said about half the staff walked off the job, including tank truck drivers. Army personnel were expected to be moved in as strike breakers, as they have before.

A second strike that began Sunday at the Shiraz refinery in southwestern Iran was described as 100 percent effective. Reports said it had shut down all gas stations in southern Iran.

The strikers at Shiraz are demanding political concessions from the shah, including the release of all persons arrested since martial law was imposed Sept. 8 in 12 major cities.

Production of crude oil was reported back to normal after the 15-day oil industry strike which ended two weeks ago. Independent oil industry sources said 5.7 million barrels of crude were produced Monday, and production was expected to hit 6.2 million barrels a day, better than the prestrike average, by Friday.

The shah was reported meeting with veteran politicians and other prominent persons, seeking a civilian to head a coalition government.

The shah is expected to name a new government after order is restored. Reliable sources who asked not to be identified said the monarch is leaning toward a nonpolitical figure who would be acceptable to the religious leaders and to the shah's political opponents.

President's Widow To Begin Walking

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Physicians for Bess Truman, who has been hospitalized for the past week, plan for her to begin walking three times a day to stimulate her muscles and circulatory system.

The 93-year-old widow of former President Truman entered Research Medical Center Nov. 20 for treatment of stomach pains and high blood pressure. No date has been set for her release.

For most of her hospital stay, Mrs. Truman has used a wheelchair, but the walking routine is designed to help her regain strength, a hospital spokesman said. Her condition has been listed as satisfactory.

MEETING OF MINDS — United Methodist Bishops Alsie H. Carleton, C. Dale White, Scott Allen and Leroy C. Hodapp were in Lubbock to address the Convocation on Missional Priorities held here Monday and today. They commented on the rise in popularity of religious cults and sects, concluding that "the church has a ministry to the world and must now find new ways to actualize it." (Staff Photo)

Bishops Discuss Rise Of Cults

By NANCY ALLEN
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The United Methodist Church's "best defense" against the rise in popularity of cults such as the People's Temple in Guyana, is a "good offense," according to Bishop Alsie H. Carleton, resident bishop of the Northwest Texas-New Mexico Conference.

Carleton, and bishops Scott Allen of Charlotte, N.C., Leroy C. Hodapp of Springfield, Ill., and C. Dale White of Princeton, N.J., are in Lubbock today to address the Convocation on Missional Priorities at the First United Methodist Church.

Bishop Carleton sees the cults as a reflection of a more serious problem within the church, that of the "secularization" of members. People turn to cults after they have turned away from religion, he said. To combat religious apathy Carleton advocates "a positive approach towards Christianity. We must stress the Christian lifestyle, make it visible, understandable and most of all desirable," he said.

The bishops cited reasons such as the "tragic and escalating breakup of family life," and a "vacuum" left by "mainline protestantism" in sound interpretation of the Bible, as reasons for the existence of the cults.

"People today are in the midst of the turmoil and uncertainty of life," said Hodapp. "Often they find satisfaction in the deep human relationships they encounter in cults." That tendency, combined with what he called a "Messiah complex" in some cult leaders makes for potentially volatile situations, and tragedies like the recent one in Guyana.

"Cults don't benefit from the structure of organized religion," Hodapp said.

"They depend entirely on the charismatic personality of the leader, and if that personality has problems, everything goes haywire."

The bishops agreed the Methodist Church should be "able to meet the needs of its members and provide "more long-range stability for their lives." The government should intervene only when people are legally threatened, they said, leaving doctrinal matters alone.

LeCroy Orders Autopsy In Man's Death

An autopsy was ordered today on a 35-year-old Lubbock man who died of a gunshot wound Monday morning.

Edwardo Longoria Jr. of 2408 Sixth St. was found shot at his home about 10 p.m. Sunday. He died at 9:37 a.m. Monday at Methodist Hospital.

Justice of the Peace Wayne LeCroy said further investigation prompted him to order an autopsy to be performed this afternoon at St. Mary's Hospital.

Police found Longoria on a bed with a single bullet wound in the middle of his forehead. LeCroy said the trajectory of the bullet, plus multiple lacerations and bruises suffered by Longoria, caused him to withhold a ruling until he received results from the autopsy.

Reports show Longoria had been in a fight earlier Sunday at an apartment in Lubbock. Witnesses at Longoria's house Sunday night told police they saw Longoria place a small caliber pistol to his head and pull the trigger.

Services for Longoria were pending this morning with Henderson Funeral Directors. He was born in Charlotte and had moved to Lubbock from Ropesville five years ago. He was a member of St. Joseph's Catholic Church.

Survivors include his wife, Alice; his mother, Ramona of Lubbock; two sons, Carlos and Ruben, both of Luvia; four stepsons, Victor Salazar of Camp Greiger, N.M., and Eric Salazar, Noel Salazar and Raymond Salazar, all of the home; two stepdaughters, Corine Salazar and Gracie Salazar, both of the home; a brother, Ray of Hereford; three sisters, Connie Garcia of Hereford, Esther Rivera of Austin and Estella Longoria of Lubbock, and a stepgranddaughter.

Workers Find Long Tunnel

Construction workers have discovered a huge, 100-foot-long tunnel under the warehouse they are building at South University Avenue and Loop 289.

The Claude Martin & Sons workers speculated today that it might have been connected, possibly as a septic or drainage tank, with an old swimming pool just south of the site.

Jerold Elliott, an estimator for the company, said the tunnel will be filled in or the top of it reinforced with a concrete structural slab to ensure it never caves in under the Southwest Electric Supply warehouse being erected on the site.

The tunnel is about 6 feet wide, 10 feet from floor to ceiling and 100 feet long. It is closed at both ends. The construction of its wooden pilings suggests that it was not designed as a walkway of any kind.

Elliott said its type of construction, using a steel corrugated roof with reinforced concrete over it, indicates it is no more than 40 years old.

The warehouse is being built just east of a nightclub off the Loop 289 access road.

Unemployment Rate Drops

Lubbock's already low unemployment rate dropped even more last month and the downward trend is expected to continue through the end of this year as local businesses seek extra Christmas help.

However, that pattern will be reversed in January, the Texas Employment Commission is predicting, as unemployment begins to rise.

Last month the unemployment rate dropped from 3.5 percent to 3 percent as the number of persons employed rose above 100,000 for the first time ever.

Of the 103,880 persons in the work force last month, 100,790 were employed.

The number of unemployed persons dropped from 3,540 in September to 3,090 last month. That compares with the 3,630 persons unemployed during October 1977 for a 3.6 percent unemployment rate.

However, the TEC is expecting "something stronger than usual seasonal cutbacks for January 1979."

The number of persons in the work force is expected to drop from the present 103,880 persons to 99,600 in January with a 4.1 percent unemployment rate forecast.

TEC predicts 4,100 persons will be unemployed, while 95,500 workers will continue to hold jobs in January.

Police Arrest Ray's Brother

ST. LOUIS (AP) — John Ray, 45, brother of James Earl Ray, convicted assassin of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., has been arrested and booked on suspicion of burglary and assault with intent to kill, police say.

Police said John Ray entered a home on the south side of St. Louis around 8 p.m. Monday, walked past the two children of Jesse Evans and began burglarizing the home. Officers said the children called their father who was visiting nearby.

Police said Evans, his brother Thomas Evans and a friend, John Lonsway, rushed to the home and began grappling with Ray. They said Ray was choking Jesse Evans when one of the other men got a shotgun.

Officers said Ray fled on foot and was arrested a short time later.

Meanwhile, the Martin Luther King subcommittee of the House Assassinations Committee authorized state attorneys to seek a writ from the U.S. District Court in Washington to permit John Ray to testify before the full committee on Friday as scheduled.

Chief Counsel G. Robert Blakey said the writ was necessary in view of John Ray's arrest.

Dow Jones Slips .43 To 813.41

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market continued its recent meandering course today, with stock prices mixed in light trading.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial issues slipped .43 to 813.41 at noon.

But gainers led losers 7-4 on the New York Stock Exchange.

Analysts pointed to a lack of solid news to explain the market's sluggishness. What news there was was not very favorable, albeit expected: The Labor Department said consumer prices rose 0.8 percent in October, matching the September increase.

Traders appeared to be awaiting Wednesday's scheduled announcement of October's figures on the U.S. trade balance, which are expected by analysts to be along the lines of September's $1.7 billion increase.

Sony led the active list, unchanged at 7 3/4. A 125,000-share block crossed at that price.

The NYSE's composite average of all its listed stocks gained .04 to 53.60 in the first two hours of trading. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index fell .06 to 148.78.

Volume on the Big Board was a slow 8.37 million shares at noon, compared to 9.59 million shares at the same time Monday.

Casino-related issues continued active, with Ramada Inns off 1/4 to 9 1/2, Caesars World down 2 to 23 1/2 and Resorts International class A losing 1/4 to 30 1/2.

McDonnell Douglas rose 1/4 to 32 1/2 and Boeing gave up 1/4 to 67. Korean Airlines was reported considering the two aircraft makers for $1 billion worth of plane orders.

Livestock

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Cattle and calves, 650 not enough any class for accurate price trade. But all reported classes steady with Monday's close.

Slaughter cows. Few culler and utility. 1 to 20-45 lbs. Canner and low culler 33.00-36.00.

Feeder steers and bulls. Choice 200-450 lbs. $1.00-1.05. Good and choice 200-300 lbs. $0.90-1.00. Good 100-200 lbs. $0.80-0.90. Good 50-100 lbs. $0.70-0.80.

Feeder heifers. Few choice 400-500 lbs. $0.90-1.00. Good 300-400 lbs. $0.80-0.90. Good 200-300 lbs. $0.70-0.80.

Hogs. 200. Not enough on offer to test trade.

PORT WORTH (AP) — Cattle and calves, 600 slaughter cows firm to 1.00 higher. Slaughter bulls 1.00-1.05 higher.

Feeder steers and heifers. Choice steady with Monday's advance. Feeder heifers and heifer calves mostly 1.00 higher. Demand good. Trading active. Run includes around 10 percent slaughter cows. Balance mostly feeders.

Slaughter cows. Utility 2.00-4.00. Choice 4.00-6.00. High dressing culler and utility 4.00-6.00.

Slaughter bulls. Yield grade 1 975-1275 lbs. $1.00-1.05.

Feeder steers. Choice 250-400 lbs. $1.00-1.05. Good 150-250 lbs. $0.90-1.00. Good 50-150 lbs. $0.80-0.90.

Feeder heifers. Choice 200-300 lbs. $0.90-1.00. Good 100-200 lbs. $0.80-0.90. Good 50-100 lbs. $0.70-0.80.

Hogs. 200. Barrows and gilts steady to 50 higher. 1.20-1.30. Good 45-55 lbs. $1.30-1.40. Sows steady 1.10-1.20.

AMARILLO (AP) — Panhandle area carlot meat trade (1.0 to 1.1) a bit higher. A few loads of carcass beef and primal cuts sold, but no good price comparison any class. However, prices are sharply higher.

Feeder steers and heifers. Choice steady with Monday's advance. Feeder heifers and heifer calves mostly 1.00 higher. Demand good. Trading active. Run includes around 10 percent slaughter cows. Balance mostly feeders.

Slaughter cows. Utility 2.00-4.00. Choice 4.00-6.00. High dressing culler and utility 4.00-6.00.

Heating Oil Spills Into NY River

NEW YORK (UPI) — An oil barge ran aground in the East River just off Grand Central Station, the mayor's spokesman said, and leaked 40,000 gallons of light heating oil.

The barge, one of the largest on the east coast, floated from five hours later on the incoming tide.

James Flaherty, the captain of the port, said the Cibro Philadelphia, a 200-foot barge was carrying 100,000 gallons of No. 2 oil, when it ran aground.

The barge was being towed by two tug boats when it hit the East River. The barge was carrying 100,000 gallons of No. 2 oil, when it ran aground.

"It's one of the most dangerous places on the East Coast," Flaherty said.

He said the barge, which is owned by Cirillo Brothers of New York, had taken on its cargo at an Exxon refinery in Linden, N.J., and was being towed to New Haven, Conn.

The Coast Guard spokesman said the barge was not in danger of sinking or leaking, but was hampered by the strong currents in the area.

An attempt to position a second barge next to the grounded barge and unload enough oil so that the vessel would float failed because of the currents.

But by 6:00 a.m., the incoming tide refloated the barge and the Coast Guard took it to tow.

Flaherty said the spill was serious, but did not pose much of a threat to the environment because there were no spawning grounds for fish in the area.

Convicts Freed From Prison

AUSTIN (AP) — Three persons sent to prison from the West Texas area have been released by Gov. Dolph Briscoe on recommendation of the Board of Pardons and Paroles.

Alex Delson, convicted Sept. 20, 1977, in Lubbock County of the burglary of a building, was paroled to Tarrant County after serving and earning one year and nine months of a three-year sentence.

Robert C. Douglas, convicted March 31, 1978, in Howard County of burglary, was paroled to Arizona after serving and earning one year of a three-year sentence.

Andres Marquez, convicted July 30, 1959, in Howard County of robbery with firearms and murder with malice, was paroled to Harris County after serving and earning 30 years and seven months of a 198-year sentence.

The parole of Richard Sterling, convicted in Castro County of burglary, was revoked due to unsatisfactory adjustment.

Sterling began serving a three-year sentence Nov. 5, 1975, and was granted parole March 4, 1977.

Austin Hotels Filling Fast

AUSTIN (AP) — Those who want to attend the inauguration of Texas' first Republican governor in a century, Bill Clements, may have trouble finding a hotel room, but it's not the Democrats' fault, Austin officials said.

"Any negotiations that we had or arrangements that we made were done with the idea that they needed to be done no matter who was governor," said Roy Butler, in charge of preliminary inauguration plans.

The festivities for inauguration of a Texas governor are financed and planned largely by Austin citizens, according to Butler who is the incoming governor.

Butler said he would turn his preliminary work over to the Clements people.

Butler said there was nothing to rumors that hotel rooms had been reserved by Democrats in anticipation of a John Hill victory and the rooms have not been released by the Democrats.

Saving Certificates Likely To Continue

By JOHN CUNIFF
NEW YORK (AP) — D-day for home mortgage lenders probably isn't going to be as big a deal as anticipated. It will come, as scheduled on Dec. 1, but it isn't likely to have the impact originally foreseen.

D-day is the time when many savings institutions will be deciding whether to continue offering savings certificates, at double-digit interest rates, or withdraw from the scramble for the saver's dollar.

Many of them were expected to choose the latter course rather than chase interest rates any higher. How, they asked, could they profit from buying money at 10 percent and relending it at the same rate?

Early returns, however, already suggest that the savings associations and savings banks — call them the thrift industry — will continue in the battle, even though some of them think the whole thing is out of hand.

The reason: They won't relend the money they obtain from savers. Instead, they will invest it in large-denomination certificates of deposit at commercial banks and, in some instances, obtain 11 percent.

The situation is unique.

It is without precedent for thrifts to remain in competition so far into a high-interest period. In other such times they were shut out, unable to offer yields that would continue to attract savers.

The explanation lies in the nature of the thrifts.

Their job is to lend for housing, it is socially desirable that home-lending costs be held down; therefore, limitations were set on the amount of interest the thrifts could pay on savings, the hope being to discourage rate competition that would drive up mortgage costs.

As you might expect, it didn't work during periods of rising interest. Rather than stay with the low-paying thrifts, people withdrew funds and sought higher rates elsewhere. It was called disintermediation.

Their reasoning was obvious: Why go through an intermediary, the thrift institution, when you could skip that step and go right to the source of higher funds? That is, buy U.S. Treasury bills?

Last spring the Federal Home Loan Bank Board corrected the situation. It permitted the thrifts to offer six-month savings certificates that would pay the buyer a quarter-point more than the Treasury Bill rate.

The FHLBB's move seemed to work well. The money stayed with the home lenders, even though the smallest savings certificate they could offer was for $10,000. The 8 percent-plus rate was competitive.

In December, however, the first of the certificates run out, and many home lenders have wondered what to do. Renew the certificates for another six months? Or retreat from competition and lose their funds?

There was good reason for their indecision: Treasury bill rates, on which the yield of their certificates is based, had jumped more than two points. On renewals, they would have to offer more than 10 percent.

At their annual meeting in Dallas at the end of October many of savings and loan officials were worried. How could they pay 10 percent for money and then relend it on mortgages that yield them less?

The decision was especially acute for thrift institutions in 18 states with usury limits of 10 percent or less. Even if they wished to, these lenders couldn't raise their mortgage rates.

But now they have their solution. They will "roll over" the certificates for another six months to those who want them. And they will simply reinvest the money at commercial banks.

This, of course, benefits the thrift institution. And it benefits the commercial bank, because it probably gives it a new source of funds.

But obviously it doesn't benefit the homebuyer, the person for whom the regulations were written. It was a good gift, but once again the housing market gets it on the chin.

FORD RETURNS TO CLASSROOM
WASHINGTON (AP) — Former President Gerald R. Ford will teach classes in political science, law and government and address a "forum assembly" of students and faculty at Brigham Young University in Provo, Utah, on Dec. 4-5.

Actor Gets Unemployment Between Jobs

By VERNON SCOTT
HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — It actually happened. Actor Robert Quarry received a cashier's check for $1 million and the following day picked up his unemployment check.

There's a catch, of course. Quarry had appeared in an episode of the old "The Millionaire" series that featured stories involving lucky recipients of a million bucks doled out by an eccentric multimillionaire.

So even though Quarry was enriched in the show, he was, nevertheless, an unemployed actor and down he went to the Hollywood Unemployment Office.

In those days the State of California paid the unemployed $36 a week.

Today the state pays $110 weekly for six months to qualified applicants. And Robert Quarry is eminently qualified. Like most actors he spends at least half of every year "between assignments."

"The money is there waiting," he said. "There's no reason to let it go to waste. Every actor in town except maybe Robert Redford and Paul Newman pick up their unemployment checks when they're not working."

Quarry may soon find himself among the semi-permanently employed, thanks again to "The Millionaire." He is starring in a two-hour CBS-TV movie version of the old half-hour series. If it catches on, it will become an hour series next year.

Producer Don Fedderson has revamped the show, replacing the late Marvin Miller, who played an aide to J. Berensford Tipton, the affluent philanthropist.

If indeed "The Millionaire" becomes a weekly series, Quarry will live a life of contrasts. Rich on screen and a working man off screen.

During 1978 Quarry has appeared in only four television shows, a bad year. A good year consists of a couple of movies and maybe six or eight TV appearances.

At the completion of each spurt of employment he reapplies for unemployment benefits and takes himself off to the pay window for the jobless in Hollywood.

"When tourists come to town looking for actors, they ought to visit the unemployment office instead of the fancy restaurants and nightclubs," Quarry said, laughing.

"They may not know all the names of the actors in the lines but they'll see hundreds of familiar faces. That's where a lot of good working actors report when they're between jobs."

"I saw Jack Albertson in line shortly after he won the Oscar. One of the most memorable sights was Adolph Menjou sitting in his limousine in front of the office while his chauffeur went in to collect his check. That was in the days of $26 payments, too."

"The rules are that anyone seeking unemployment benefits has to report in person. But they knew Menjou and his chauffeur so well that they bent the regulations a little bit for him."

Quarry, like every other actor in Hollywood, would prefer to work 12 months a year.

He teaches advanced drama classes at San Fernando Valley College and plays a lot of bridge with other between-assignments actors.

Quarry is a big, robust man, outgoing and garrulous. His face is more familiar to the public than his name. Because his recognition quotient is relatively low among viewers, producers are prone to cast better known performers.

"I'm always losing jobs to Robert Vaughn, Patrick O'Neal and Robert Culp," Quarry complained. "But it's surprising how many jobs I do get when they're unavailable."

New York Returns Control Of Hall

NEW YORK (AP) — Because the state of New York has demonstrated how Radio City Music Hall could make money, operating control has been returned to Rockefeller Center Inc., the theater's owner, a state official says.

Richard Kahn, president of the Urban Development Corp., said Sunday that the famous Art Deco theater is operating at a small profit under the rescue plan that kept it from closing last April. The UDC was the instrument through which the state moved to keep the Music Hall, with its world-famous Rockettes dancers, open after Rockefeller Center announced that it was closing down the theater as a losing proposition.

Houses Boost Family Credit

By JOHN CUNIFF
NEW YORK (AP) — A house is to live in but, an economic analysts points out, it also serves as a savings account and a line of credit as well. In numerous instances, he notes, families are making use of inflated equities by refinancing their homes to obtain money for other goods and services, thus vastly extending their borrowing power. And simultaneously, perhaps, frustrating efforts of the Federal Reserve to cool the economy. As a consequence of this borrowing, says the analyst, the value of their investments in stocks, bonds, and other securities has been falling, says Arthur M. Laffer, chief economist of the Heritage Foundation, says Arthur M. Laffer, chief economist of the Heritage Foundation, says Arthur M. Laffer, chief economist of the Heritage Foundation.

DR. LAMB

Why Hysterectomy?

By LAWRENCE LAMB E. M.D.
DEAR DR. LAMB — I would like to know why a man can get a vasectomy when he feels he doesn't want children and a woman can't get a hysterectomy when she feels the same way.

I am in my early 20s and divorced with no children. During my short marriage, I suffered from a uterine infection. Because of these illnesses, I could not use the pill or IUD. A permanent tubal ligation would be of no help because the problem was in my uterus.

The ulcer was cured and the infection went away when I no longer had sex. The doctor has not guaranteed me that it will not come back the minute I start having sex again.

I have gone to several doctors with my problem and all have suggested that I forget about a hysterectomy. I do not wish to have any children. I have given it thoughtful consideration for more than a year and a half. I feel I have as much right to this kind of operation as a man. Could you clear up the problem for me?

DEAR READER — Your analogy is inappropriate. Men don't have a structure similar to the uterus to be removed. It would be more appropriate to compare a vasectomy to a tubal ligation, which you can get.

Doctors don't like to take out a woman's uterus unless there is good medical indication for it. If a doctor takes out a normal uterus, even to prevent cancer, he ends up in the position of doing unnecessary surgery because he removed a normal uterus.

Your letter suggests to me that the doctors who have examined you don't feel that your history of an infection or an ulcer is sufficient indication of a disease of the uterus to justify a major operation? A tubal ligation is a minor operation in comparison to a hysterectomy.

As long as your uterus is normal, you won't get many physicians to agree to remove it.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I want to keep my husband on a low-cholesterol diet. I've heard that fish are very low in cholesterol and I should give him fish instead of beef. Is that correct? Are some fish lower in cholesterol than others? What about shell fish?

DEAR READER — Fish are not a lot lower in cholesterol than beef, regardless of what you have heard. They are about the same. Shell fish, such as shrimp, may have more cholesterol per ounce than lean beef.

Most fish are low in fat — but not all — and a third of the fat is polyunsaturated fat. I am sending you the Health Letter number 11-12, Fish and Shellfish as Health Foods. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1561, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Homeowners May Claim Credits

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Internal Revenue Service said today people who added insulation or made other energy-conserving improvements during 1977 and 1978 must claim tax credits for both years on their 1978 tax returns.

Under the terms of the new energy laws, taxpayers may claim a credit of up to $300 for conservation expenditures up to $2,000 and a separate credit of up to $2,200 for solar energy expenditures up to $10,000.

The credits are available for spending dating back to April 20, 1977. It will continue through Dec. 31, 1985.

Taxpayers who qualified for the credit in 1977 must claim them on their 1978 tax return rather than filing an amended 1977 return, IRS said.

Henters may also qualify if they make an energy conservation improvement in their apartment, with the approval of the landlord, said IRS spokesman Tony Bombardieri.

Conservation credits may be claimed for insulation, storm windows and doors, caulking, weather stripping and certain heating system modifications.

Workers Due Wages, Agency Asserts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Labor Secretary Ray Marshall says more than 600,000 U.S. workers protected by federal wage and hour laws were underpaid by a total of almost $129 million during fiscal year 1978.

In a statement released over the weekend, Marshall said these figures "represent more back wages due more workers than in any previous year in the history of the Fair Labor Standards Act."

Marshall said the major reason for the difference between the amount found due employees and that actually paid is the employer's refusal to pay back wages in cases judged unsuitable for litigation by the government.

The fair labor act is administered and enforced by the Wage and Hour Division, a part of the Labor Department's Employment Standards Administration.

Cuba Believed Supplying Nicaraguan Guerrillas

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cuba is believed to be supplying financial aid and weapons, including 50-caliber machine guns, to leftist guerrilla forces in Nicaragua, according to a secret intelligence document.

The information in a report obtained by The Associated Press was based on what were described as "generally reliable" intelligence sources in Panama, which apparently has been acting as a conduit for the Cuban supplies.

The document also confirms previous reports that Venezuela and Panama itself are helping supply the guerrillas.

U.S. officials evaluating the information emphasized that reports of Cuban involvement in guerrilla attempts to overthrow President Anastasio Somoza cannot be fully confirmed. In any event, they said any Cuban support of the guerrillas has been "limited."

Nonetheless, the disclosure seems likely to reinforce fears among some congressional conservatives that the Sandinista guerrillas are trying to convert Nicaragua into "another Cuba."

Other informants who asked to remain anonymous said if the report is accurate it could have considerable significance for the entire Western Hemisphere.

They noted that the report suggests a retreat from Cuba's decision earlier this decade to end its backing for revolutionary movements in Latin America and concentrate on Africa instead.

"In effect, the Cubans are telling revolutionary forces throughout Latin America that, 'If your movement reaches a critical stage, you can count on us for support,'" said one informant.

Gen. Fernando Vecino Alegret, a veteran of Cuba's involvement in Angola and now Cuban Minister for Higher Education, has denied that Cuba is supporting the Sandinistas.

He said during a visit here last week that the Sandinistas have enough backing in Nicaragua to achieve victory on their own.

Nonetheless, Cuba's hostility toward Somoza dates back to the early 1960's when Somoza allowed Nicaragua to be used as a staging area for Cuban exile attacks on Cuba.

The intelligence document was based, in part, on information supplied by a former Panamanian official, who gave the following account:

"According to Moises Torrijos, brother of (Panamanian) National Guard Commander Omar Torrijos, and Abraham Saied, director of Panamanian Social Security, the Cuban government is providing material and financial support to the Sandinista National Liberation Front. Saied said specifically that Cuban Premier Fidel Castro ... was sending arms and ammunition to the FSLN (the Sandinistas)."

Additional information in the document, based on a report from an unidentified current Panamanian government official, said the Panamanian National Guard, during the second week of November, drew up an "accounting of (Cuban) arms which apparently had already been or were to be provided to the Sandinistas."

"The accounting listed arms under the heading of three countries: Panama, Venezuela and country 'C.' 'C' was generally assumed, but not known by those who worked on the accounting, to stand for Cuba. Among the arms listed under country 'C' were 'several' 50-caliber machine guns."

The United States has been leading a three-nation mediation effort in Nicaragua, attempting to achieve a peaceful settlement between Somoza and a coalition of business, political and civilian opposition groups.

The mediation effort began after the National Guard and the Sandinistas engaged in a two-week civil war last September that claimed an estimated 1500 lives.

Somoza and the opposition leaders remain far apart, and officials here are fearful warfare may resume at any time.

The United States has cut off military and economic aid to Nicaragua, but some National Guard supplies have been replenished by Israel.

Some Of Survivors To Leave Guyana

By GEORGE ESPER
 GEORGETOWN, Guyana (AP) — Jonestown survivors will begin returning to the United States starting tonight or Wednesday, U.S. consular officials said.

They said seven survivors, all aged 61 or over, will leave no later than Wednesday evening.

They were identified as Hyacinth Thrash, 70, of San Francisco; Grover Davis, 79; Madeline Brooks, 73; Carol Young, 78; Alvaray Satterwhite, 61; Marjorie Campbell, 61, and Raymond Godshalk, 62.

The hometowns of the other six were not immediately available.

Guyanese police were making a complete inventory of the camp and questioning Peoples Temple sect members in Georgetown to determine which of the 80 survivors will be permitted to leave this South American nation and which will be held as suspects and material witnesses in the suicide-murder at Jonestown.

Their status is being reviewed, and some will be allowed to go. Assistant Commissioner Skip Roberts said Monday. "Some will be held for judicial proceedings."

Two Americans have been charged with murder, and three others were questioned Monday for the second time about the death ceremony in which 908 Americans and one Guyanese died at Jonestown, the Rev. Jim Jones' religious commune in northwest Guyana.

The three were Tim Carter, 28, and his brother, Michael, 20, both of Boise, Idaho, and Michael Prokes, 32, a former Modesto, Calif., television newsman.

"We just wanted to question them some more and go back over their story," Roberts said.

The two men under arrest are Larry Layton, 32, of San Francisco, who is charged with killing Rep. Leo J. Ryan, D-Calif., and four others with him at an airstrip near Jonestown, and Charles Beikman, 43, of Indianapolis, who is charged with killing a Peoples Temple staff member in Georgetown and her three children.

Only one of the surviving cultists has returned from Jonestown to the United States. He was Miguel DePina, 84, who was in a Georgetown hospital during the mass poisoning in which his wife died.

U.S. Embassy officials said the returning survivors would be flown to the Charleston, S.C., Air Force Base and would be subject to normal re-entry procedures for American citizens returning from abroad. They said the Internal Revenue Service, the Immigration and Naturalization Service and representatives of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare would interview cult members "who are willing" about the Jonestown events.

SUSPECT IN SLAYINGS — Former San Francisco city supervisor Dan White, left, is taken into custody by police following the fatal shooting of Mayor George Moscone and supervisor Harvey Milk Monday at City Hall. Sadat Attempts To End Dispute

By United Press International
 President Anwar Sadat is sending his prime minister to Washington within 48 hours with a letter to President Carter in an attempt to break the peace talks deadlock.

An Israeli newspaper speculated that a U.S. request for economic growth forecasts on the West Bank was in preparation to give aid to what could be a Palestinian entity. The U.S. Embassy in Tel Aviv called the report nonsense.

Syrian authorities have ordered a ban on trade with Egypt as part of the measures ordered at last month's Baghdad summit to counter Sadat's initiative with Israel, the newspaper Al Thawra said today in Damascus.

U.S. officials in Washington said Sadat's letter will allow the deadlocked Egyptian-Israeli peace talks to resume by the weekend.

In Cairo, Sadat, forging ahead with development plans, issued a decree today dividing the Sinai desert into two zones and appointing two army generals to run the areas. Egypt will get the Sinai back as part of the treaty with Israel.

The division of Sinai into two administrative zones is part of government efforts to devote greater attention to the greening and exploitation of the desert after the Israeli pullout.

The appointments of the two generals were part of a reshuffle of provincial governors. Maj. Gen. Mohammed Hussein Shawki was appointed governor of northern Sinai and Maj. Gen. Farid Ezzat Wahba of southern Sinai.

In Tel Aviv, a request by the U.S. Embassy for economic growth forecasts in Israeli-occupied territories up to 1990 touched off speculation by the paper Yedioth Achronoth that the information was to be used for granting aid to the region when it becomes autonomous.

A U.S. Embassy spokesman called it "nonsense."

Israeli observers said the speculation was part of the fears about what peace with Egypt would bring — a theme that Defense Minister Ezer Weizman had touched on in explaining Israeli touchiness over every new development.

In Jerusalem, government sources said today Israel was also worried about Egypt's support of a U.N. resolution calling for an arms embargo against the Jewish state.

"This is not in the spirit of the Camp David accords, but we haven't signed anything with Egypt yet," one source said.

The newspaper Yedioth Achronoth published a letter stamped confidential from the embassy's defense attaché, Brig. Gen. Schuyler Bissell of the Air Force, to the defense ministry.

Bissell requested information on electricity consumption in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip, including projected growth per year to 1990 and plans for interconnections with specific neighboring countries, "if known," according to the letter.

 ney's office not to issue citations.

Warnick then called for the files of the two civil cases in question and announced after studying them that there was no record of a temporary injunction in either case.

Warnick said then that the state of the evidence made the defense's claim of unequal enforcement a seemingly viable one.

Northcutt today reiterated he had been instructed not to have citations issued against the pharmacy.

Slayings Shock San Francisco

 sobbed secretary Terri Wallen afterwards.

Moscone, who turned 49 Friday, and Milk, 48, were each shot three times, the mayor twice in the head. Moscone will be buried Wednesday. Milk will be cremated Friday night, aides said.

Police said the men were shot with a .38-caliber Smith & Wesson handgun, standard for police officers, which they theorized White had carried into City Hall.

In a preliminary autopsy report released Monday night, San Francisco Coroner Boyd Stephens said Moscone was shot four times — twice in the right side of the head and twice in the chest-abdomen area.

The coroner said Milk had been shot five times — two bullet wounds to the back of the head and three in the chest-stomach area. Milk also was wounded in the right wrist and left arm by bullets that passed through his body.

Officials said White probably had entered City Hall through an unguarded side door used by officials, or even strolled past police guards at the main door without passing through the metal detector there.

It was Moscone who ordered the metal detector installed after a man with a gun was arrested in his office in April 1977.

After being elected mayor, Moscone abolished many of the trappings of the office, including a personal bodyguard. But security worries were never far out of mind.

Davis Tape Defended

When he became mayor, he lived on a street that was level with the roof of his house," said former aide John Jervis. "Someone could have lobbed a hand grenade at their attic. His wife wanted a house above the street when he became mayor."

"So they moved to a place back from the road. I thought of that today, to have this thing happen in his own office," Jervis said.

"This is an unparalleled time in San Francisco," a red-eyed Mrs. Feinstein said in a special meeting of the board after the slayings.

"If there was ever a time for this city to pull itself together... this is that time. We need to be together and bring out what is good in each of our hearts."

City Hall steps were bedecked with flowers tied in wide black ribbons. Tiny candles burned near the flowers.

The San Francisco Park and Recreation Commission asked the National Football League to postpone Monday night's nationally televised game at Candlestick Park between the San Francisco 49ers and the Pittsburgh Steelers to observe the tragedy. The NFL said it was too late.

Many of the marching thousands were homosexuals, demonstrating in tribute to Moscone and Milk, the city's first avowed gay official.

White was the board's most ardent opponent of homosexual rights, and Milk reportedly urged Moscone not to reappoint him.

Police and city officials speculated the slayings were motivated by money and power.

White, married and father of a 4-month old son, quit the Board of Supervisors Nov. 10 after serving one year. He said his $9,600 salary was not enough to support his wife and child.

"The Hot Potato," a fried potato stand he owned on Fisherman's Wharf, didn't turn enough profit to make up the difference between his salary and the $19,000 he had made fighting fires. Under city rules, he had to quit that job to take the supervisor job.

But two days after his resignation, buoyed by his 16 siblings' offer to loan him money, he asked for his job back.

Moscone, a liberal and a political opponent of the conservative White, refused.

Moments before Moscone planned to announce his appointment of Don Horanzy as White's successor, White walked into the mayor's office. The two met alone in the back of Moscone's second floor suite. Press secretary Mel Wax speculated White was begging to be reappointed to the board.

Frost Nips City, Area

 the high 50s Wednesday, weathermen said.

The forecast calls for mostly fair skies today and tonight and partly cloudy skies on Wednesday.

Southwesterly winds of 10 to 15 mph today will diminish to five to 10 mph tonight.

A Lubbock weatherman said the first solid freeze over the South Plains came as clear skies and light winds during the night allowed cold Arctic and Canadian air to get even colder.

The winter air came in behind the low pressure system that brought rain into the area and south into the rest of Texas recently.

"It was below freezing here for about 8 1/2 hours," the weatherman said. "We're hoping that'll be long enough to help out some of the farmers with the cotton harvest."

Boll-pulling was stopped almost before it got started over much of the area when the rain made cotton too soggy to bring in.

Area low temperatures this morning included, in addition to the lowest readings at Levelland and Silverton, 24 at Plains, 25 at Floydada and Littlefield and 26 at Muleshoe and Morton.

It was 21 in Amarillo and 23 at Dalhart in the Panhandle.

Ramsey Clark Claims Conflict With FBI Chief Slowed Probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Attorney General Ramsey Clark testified today he kept the Justice Department from taking an active role in the investigation of Martin Luther King Jr.'s assassination because he feared worsening relations with FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover.

Clark told the House assassinations committee he viewed his role as one of showing concern, encouraging the fullest FBI investigation possible and keeping track of its progress.

He said that even a decade after the King assassination, nothing causes him to believe a more thorough investigation would have resulted from the day-to-day participation of Justice Department lawyers.

"And it probably would have been worse in terms of already strained relations," he said, referring to his widely publicized differences with Hoover at the time.

Clark responded to criticisms in a 100-page committee staff report that the department did not use investigative tools at its disposal which might have uncovered a conspiracy to kill King — if one in fact existed.

Clark said he did not believe using either a grand jury or electronic surveillance would have been particularly effective.

The committee has dropped broad hints it has uncovered new signs of a conspiracy in King's murder in Memphis, Tenn., April 4, 1968.

These hints have centered on the possibility that one or both of the two brothers of James Earl Ray, who is serving a life sentence as King's sole assassin, might have been part of "a Ray family conspiracy."

Clark testified he saw no evidence at the time of the original investigation that would indicate a conspiracy by the Ray brothers working as a unit. He said he has seen no reason since then to change his mind.

He said that he thought it appropriate that at the time "the major purpose of the FBI was to catch the person who pulled the trigger."

Clark said an FBI request for electronic surveillance on members of the Ray family, a procedure which was then illegal, reflected that Hoover and his agents "were perhaps more interested in a quick apprehension than a successful apprehension."

Clark candidly discussed his differences with Hoover, saying that while the two were publicly cordial, they were profoundly at odds over major policy issues. Also, Clark said, "I think he understood my belief that whatever his past achievements, he had stayed on the job too long."

He said that Hoover's obvious and intense dislike of King had "qualities of racism" about it.

Meanwhile, the committee chairman, Rep. Louis Stokes, D-Ohio, raised the possibility that the FBI created the atmosphere in which King was killed by waging an "illegal and unconstitutional" campaign to discredit him with scurrilous propaganda.

Group Formed To Help Parents Of Homosexuals

By BRUCE NICHOLS
HOUSTON (UPI) — Anella Harrison's son was 15 when she learned he was homosexual, but she had less difficulty accepting the news than many parents because she was a psychologist.

It still wasn't easy — "You accept it intellectually before you accept it emotionally" — so now she's trying to share her experience.

With her son's blessing, Mrs. Harrison, at age 60, has organized a fledgling group called Parents of Gays. It is not the first in the country and she hopes it won't be the last.

But organizing has proved a slow process for the group that has met twice.

"The first meeting, there was one other mother and myself," she said. "This was her first opportunity to talk to another mother in 20 years. The last meeting there were five mothers there. But no fathers."

"We have been so brainwashed about sweeping this kind of thing under the rug as we have been taught throughout the years not to talk about sex at all," she said.

The group has been joined by a psychologist, Dr. Muriel Flake, and some of the homosexual children. They hope to bring in fathers, and they hope publicity and personal contact will expand their ranks.

"We will be including our sons and daughters. I hope eventually to include friends of gays, because there are so many, and I think we can't accomplish our purpose without the help of friends in the community."

The purpose is elimination of fear and promotion of understanding — as well as advancing Mrs. Harrison's belief that homosexuals should have equal opportunity in society.

"First and foremost," Mrs. Harrison said, "is to get the parents together who have never been together before, who have never talked outside the family about the fact that they have a son or daughter who is gay."

"Then, to talk about how this has affected them because it has been a very traumatic, devastating experience for many people."

"Then, I would hope that our sights could be turned toward doing something to help change the way our immediate community sees the problem," she said. Mrs. Harrison argues the parents and friends of homosexuals have done very little real thinking about the problem and have been misled by people like singer Anita Bryant.

"Gays do not recruit," Mrs. Harrison said. "They're not interested in making other people become gay. It just isn't done that way."

"I think it's great," said her son, Patrick Harrison, 20, who works as a thought manager for a Houston firm. "The more understanding we get the better it helps us."

"Maybe it would alleviate a lot of misperceptions, show that no one is really different from anyone else."

Keep Guard Up While Traveling

By MURRAY J. BROWN
United Press International Writer

Travel can be full of surprises — some pleasant and some not so pleasant.

Next to falling ill far from home, one of the most devastating experiences for the traveler is to return to his hotel room and find it had been burglarized.

The lodging industry, naturally, is reluctant to disclose any figures, but one source said a recent survey estimated losses run into the millions of dollars annually in the United States.

In most cases, according to a long-time crime fighter, lack of proper precautions are to blame.

"It's psychological — people let down their guard when they go on vacation," said Robert McDermott, a former detective who was the New York City police department's top burglary expert for 20 years. "Particularly when it comes to hotels, motels, etc., where they feel they are safe."

McDermott quoted a veteran burglar known as Danny "Sticks" — sticks is underworld jargon for lock-picker — as saying:

"The doors at most hotels are a joke. You could blow some of them open with a single breath."

A number of hotels here and abroad (Hyatt and Hilton among others) have replaced conventional locks and keys with new electronic systems and other protective measures, including closed-circuit TV surveillance of lobbies, corridors and other public areas.

There is Cardgard: guests are given a wallet-sized plastic code-punched card which is inserted into a small panel on the door of the room. A matching control card is "read" by a master console behind the front desk, which signals the code to unlock the door.

Another no-key system is Digikey: guests punch digit buttons on a door panel as on a Touch-tone phone. Each guest picks his own door-opening combination of numbers, which is fed into a front lobby control panel. When the correct code is punched, the door is unlocked.

However, most of the hotels, motels and inns in the United States and elsewhere still rely mainly on locks and keys. So McDermott, who is manager of security products for Emhart Corporation's Hardware Division, which manufactures locks and other safety devices, offers these tips to help thwart hotel thieves:

— If the key is one of those big, awkward bit types made to fit a keyhole you can see through, wedge the back of a chair, a night table or your luggage under the door when you retire for the night.

— Buy a portable travel lock, preferably of the key-operated type. Lightweight and small, they fit easily into the edge of doors and cannot be opened from the outside. You may also use the lock when leaving the room to convert the top dresser drawer or night table into a repository for valuables not deposited in the hotel safe.

— Never leave cameras, binoculars, jewelry, plane tickets or other expensive items lying on a table or dresser when you are out of the room. They could tempt hotel employees or even other guests passing your open door while the maid is making up the room.

— Be certain your door is locked whenever leaving the room. If the maid has already made up the room, hang a "Do Not Disturb" sign on the outside door knob to discourage corridor prowlers, door shakers and other would-be trespassers.

— Keep your key with you at all times, even if it is attached to a big clumsy wedge of plastic, metal or wood bearing the name of the hotel and the room number. If the hotel clerk does not know you, a sneak thief who has tapped you as an easy mark can walk up to the desk when you are out and ask the clerk for your key by room number.

— Never disclose your room number to casual acquaintances at poolside, bar, restaurant or other public places. And do not tell other guests or hotel personnel of your planned sightseeing or other excursions — someone else could be listening.

— Energy problems not withstanding, leave a radio playing during the day and a light on at night when not in your room.

— And last but not least, he suggests, protect yourself against possible losses by purchasing travel insurance if your current policies do not include riders for theft of cameras, jewelry, furs, etc.

Congress Doing Same Work For More Money

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's inflation watchers might want to check into an industry that produces the same volume it did 20 years ago but requires more than twice the workforce and seven times the money.
 That industry is Congress.
 After the close of each two-year session, a box score is printed in the Congressional Record that summarizes items such as the number of days, hours and minutes the Senate and House met and the total of bills introduced and enacted.

It is strictly numbers and so omits a great deal about any congressional session and the complexity of the issues faced.
 But the numbers are part of the story and they have remained remarkably stable over the years.
 In 1977, the first year of the 95th Congress, 15,386 bills were introduced and 1,320 were passed. This year, another 6,927 measures were introduced and 1,648 passed, some of them holdovers from the previous year.
 The 85th Congress was in session 20 years earlier.

 In 1957, 14,013 measures were introduced and another 6,591 the next year. The totals for bills and resolutions that passed were 2,408 in 1957 and 2,718 in 1958.
 In one area, the 95th Congress clearly outstripped the 85th: members talked more.
 During the two years of the 95th, the Senate was in session 2,510 hours and the House 1,897. The record of those sessions filled 66,573 pages.
 In the 85th Congress, the Senate met 1,875 hours and the House 1,148. Their proceedings filled only 33,402 pages of the Congressional Record.
 To handle that workload, staff sizes have more than doubled in 20 years. In 1958, the budget for the House was $37.8 million and for the Senate $22.3 million. The House figure for 1978 was $282.6 million and $166.4 million for the Senate.
 Of course, the Senate is bigger. In 1958, there were 96 senators representing 48 states. That was the year they opened a new building now called the Dirksen Senate Office Building.
 Senators and their staffs had no sooner moved into their new quarters when Alaska and Hawaii joined the Union and the size of the Senate increased to 100 members.

 An annex to the Dirksen building is under construction to deal with the overcrowded conditions. It will cost $120 million if current estimates hold true. No one thinks they will.
 One of the nice things about being a member of the Senate Appropriations Committee is the fancy brass nameplates marking everyone's spot at the committee table.
 Each senator's name is engraved in an elaborate scroll on the brass. The scroll is so elaborate it is practically unreadable.
 Above each brass nameplate is affixed a white card with the senator's name printed in easily readable letters.
 Senators are not known for their brevity. So it is worth noting the farewell address of Sen. Carl Curtis, R-Neb., who is retiring.
 "For 40 years the taxpayers have had to pay the expenses of printing my speeches in the Congressional Record. Out of appreciation to them for doing this all these four decades, I am making this speech brief."

The Almanac TODAY IN HISTORY

 Today is Tuesday, Nov. 28, the 332nd day of 1978 with 33 to follow.
 The moon is between its last quarter and a new phase.
 The morning stars are Venus, Jupiter and Saturn.
 The evening stars are Mercury and Mars.
 Those born on this date are under the sign of Sagittarius.
 British poet William Blake was born Nov. 28, 1775.
 On this day in history:
 In 1520, Ferdinand Magellan entered the Pacific Ocean on his way around the world. He was the first European to sail the Pacific from the east.

 In 1958, the United States fired an intercontinental ballistic missile at full range for the first time.
 In 1963, Cape Canaveral, the space center in Florida was renamed Cape Kennedy to honor the assassinated president. It now has been changed back to Cape Canaveral but the space center still is called the John F. Kennedy Space Center.
 In 1971, Jordan Premier Wafsi Tel was assassinated in Cairo by three gunmen.
 A thought for the day:
 President George Washington said, "The basis of our political system is the right of people to make and alter their form of government."

ON GUARD — Kevin Pierce (20) of Central State University is watched very carefully by Texas Tech guard Geoff Huston during basketball action Monday night at the Lubbock Coliseum. Pierce was held to four points, while Huston hit eight during the season opener for the Raiders. Tech won the game 85-61. (Staff Photo by Milton Adams)

Tech Raids CSU

By DON HENRY
 Executive Sports Editor
 "Good shooters are like that; they can hit 'em every time. Adam's that way; he hits like that every day in practice."

Gerald Myers was talking after his Raiders had outgunned Central State of Oklahoma 85-61 to officially open the basketball season.

And Adam was the first man... in the scoring column.

Adam Beadle, the transfer from Western Texas College, drilled six of his first seven shots — all from the 16-22 foot range — and paced the Raiders to the win.

And the sophomore did it in a reserve role, too. He played but 16 minutes as Myers shuttled his troops in and out of the game, playing all 14 men. But, Beadle had 12 points in the first half when the Raiders built a 20-point lead, and he finished with 19.

Like Beadle, the Raiders eased off in the second half as the visiting Bronchos switched defenses. And the Raiders weren't able to attack the man-for-man opposition as well as the zone.

Beadle's points came against — over — the zone.
 "We just didn't do as well against their man defense," said Myers. "And on defense, we didn't press as well the second half. We didn't force any turnovers."
 "And — definitely — we didn't rebound; we have to improve our rebounding. And without the rebounds or as many turnovers, we didn't get our running game going."
 "We were putting the ball up quick, but we weren't scoring, and we weren't getting the second shots."
 The rebounding is where Myers said his Raiders will have to improve; Central State finished the game with a 43-36 advantage. "We can't steal the ball every time," Myers commented, not too happily.

The first half, against the Central State zone, Tech hit 58.3 percent, and the Raiders sped to a 51-31 lead.

Tech got the first bucket on a Matt Williams jumper, and freshman Jeff Taylor followed with a short jumper from the key for a 4-0 lead.

After the visitors pulled within 3 at 13-9, Ralph Brewster got loose for a crowd-pleasing slam dunk; then after a mid-court steal by Williams and a return pass to him, Williams dunked it for a 16-9 lead with 14:14 left in the first half.

And then Beadle took off his warmups and tried his right arm. He hit twice, missed, and ripped in four more shots, all of the no-arch variety from long range.

In the second half, following the shooting of smooth forward Malcolm Johnson, the Bronchos worked at the lead and cut it to 60-49 on a long jumper by Charles Crosby.

But, the 6-8 Brewster hit a 12-foot bank shot, and Williams drilled a 20-footer. After a pair of free shots by Central State forward Lee Moore, Tech scored 8 straight points, two buckets by guard Geoff Huston, and Tech owned a 72-61 advantage.

Williams and Brewster scored 16 points each for the Raiders, and Taylor 15. Johnson scored in 20 for Central State, and reserve Tony Anderson hitting all eight free shots, accumulated 22.

Tech only committed an 80 percent of its shots in the final 20 minutes.

The win starts a busy week for Tech, as it will entertain Northern Illinois on Wednesday night before heading out to play North Carolina-Chapel Hill Saturday.

Tech scored off its defense, putting up eight steals, two each by Williams and Ben Hill.

Hill's two steals came on consecutive inbound plays, and he converted them to 4 points, a goal and a pair of free throws.

Tech forced Central State into 31 turnovers.

Sparky Fired By Cincinnati

By A-J News Services
 CINCINNATI — The Cincinnati Reds today fired manager Sparky Anderson, who led the team to back-to-back World Championships in 1975 and 1976, and replaced him with John McNamara, former manager of the Oakland A's and the San Diego Padres.

McNamara, a coach with the California Angels last season, was signed to a one-year contract by the Reds.

Reds President and General Manager Dick Wagner flew to California Monday and met with Anderson at his Thousand Oaks, Calif., home to inform him of the Reds' decision. Anderson will be paid for the final year of his three-year contract.

"The decision we made was not a hasty one," said Wagner. "Our club won in 1975 and 1976 and by that I mean won it all. The past two years have been good ones by the standards of most clubs, but we are determined to set a higher standard."

"It is our decision that the move we have made is in the best overall interests of making the Reds a better team," said Wagner. "Sparky Anderson served us well. I don't want to get into the specifics with regard to the move we made."

Paterno's Lions Top Grid Poll

By The Associated Press
 Penn State, Alabama, Southern California and Oklahoma held onto the top four spots in The Associated Press college football poll today, while Michigan replaced Houston as the No. 5 team.

In the race for the national championship, Penn State will face Alabama in the Sugar Bowl, provided Alabama beats Auburn Saturday, while Southern Cal and Michigan will meet in the Rose Bowl.

Oklahoma will have a rematch with No. 6 Nebraska, its only conqueror, in the Orange Bowl while No. 10 Notre Dame will go against No. 9 Houston in the Cotton Bowl if the latter beats Rice this weekend.

However, if Alabama loses to or ties Auburn, No. 11 Georgia would go to the Sugar Bowl. And Houston can blow a Cotton Bowl berth to Texas Tech by losing to Rice if Tech beats Arkansas.

The other Top Ten teams, No. 7 Clemson and No. 8 Arkansas, are headed for the Gator and Fiesta Bowls, respectively.

Penn State, the nation's only undefeated major college team, closed out an 11-0 campaign by defeating Pitt 17-10. The Nittany Lions received 52 first-place votes and 1,256 of a possible 1,280 points from a nationwide panel of 64 sports writers and broadcasters.

"Let's just say it's time for a change," said Wagner, "and just as in 1970 when the situation may have been the time for Anderson to take over the club, it's our feeling now the situation calls for a new approach."

"I will not under any condition discuss my thing that happened. I'll always discuss the years there and the people there and everything surrounding it," said Anderson.

Anderson said his nine seasons as Reds manager was a period "that changed my life more than anything that ever did."

"I'm not a crying-type person... People have to understand that no body likes to fire another man... They felt they had to have a change. You have to respect that and I'll always respect them for at least sitting down with me."

He said he had no previous indication that he would be fired.

"Well, I never had no knowledge," he said. "I guess maybe I'm not smart enough to have the knowledge."

As to his future plans, Anderson said "For right now I'll probably play golf and relax and kind of enjoy things. I have another year on my contract. I'll just wait. I hope I have made a big enough impression on the game of baseball that somebody will come calling for me."

"Until then, I'm just going to enjoy the old golf course and relax."

Anderson took over the Reds in 1970 after joining the Cincinnati organization in 1968 as manager of the Class AA Asheville, N.C. club.

He managed the Reds to National League pennants in 1970, 1972, 1973, 1975 and 1976.

They defeated the Boston Red Sox in the 1975 World Series and beat the New York Yankees in a four-sweep in 1976 to become the first National League team to win back-to-back world championships in 45 years.

The Reds in 1978 finished second to the Los Angeles in the National league West for the second season in a row.

Hog Boss Eyes Tech, Not UF

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (UPI) — Arkansas coach Lou Holtz says he is not concerned about the coaching situation at Florida because Saturday's game against Texas Tech is taking up enough of his time.

"We've got a big game up here," Holtz said Monday. "If we win, we can have the second highest number of wins in two years in the school's history. I'm at Arkansas, remember?"

Rumors have been circulating for weeks that Holtz would replace Doug Dickey as head coach at Florida and Holtz has not denied flatly the possibility he would go.

Orville Henry, sports editor of the Arkansas Gazette, said in his column today that his "feeling for a long time has been that Holtz is headed for Florida. In this case, feeling 99 percent sure isn't enough."

Steelers Bounce 49ers

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)— Terry Bradshaw and Lynn Swann are the National Football League's No. 1 passing combination, and the lead carried by the Pittsburgh Steelers' defense seems considerably lighter today.

SWANN SONG — With San Francisco 49ers Vernon Robert (46) all over him Pittsburgh Steelers Lynn Swann (88) hangs on to a 23-yard pass from quarterback Terry Bradshaw in the third quarter of Monday night's game in San Francisco. The Steelers went on to win the NFL contest 24-7. (AP Laserphoto)

Florida Boss' Job Still Up In Air

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Doug Dickey's job as Florida football coach may be in danger as President Robert Q. Marston today sounds out influential alumni on how long Dickey should keep it. One faction reportedly wants Dickey out after this season, another wants to give him one more year and a third faction would keep him at least through the remaining three years of his contract. Players and the news media had expected an announcement Monday, but Marston postponed any action regarding Dickey. "Any comment I have on the situation will not appear in print before the team knows about it. Some of the players have told me that the published rumors upset them, and I feel honor-bound ... not to have them pick up the paper and read things that I haven't told them first," Marston said. Marston wouldn't say whether any action will be taken before Saturday's season finale with the University of Miami. "We were told Sunday to expect an announcement in a day," said wide receiver Cris Collinsworth. "It's a little confusing now. For our sake and for Coach Dickey's sake, something needs to be said. Otherwise, it might affect practice this week."

Five Games On Tap Tonight

Five high school games are on the schedule for city schools tonight, two of them being intracity affairs. Estacado boys will take on host Lubbock High, and Dunbar, the defending District 3-AAA champion, will go against Monterey, the preseason pick in 4-AAAA. The game will be played in Monterey's gymnasium. Both teams are 2-0 for the season. The third boys game since Coronado, 2-1 for the season, to Abilene to play Abilene Cooper. At the same time, the Abilene Cooper girls will be playing in the Coronado gym. And Monterey's girls will go to Canyon to play the Eaglettes. Local Boxer Wins Title Edward Parker, who lives in Tulsa but who fights with the local Lubbock Warriors club, won the national championship at the U.S. National Police Athletic Association invitational boxing tournament at Albuquerque. Parker defeated Tony Montoya of Salt Lake City for the title in the 100-pound class. Two other Lubbock boxers, Mario Martinez and Angelo Carrillo, lost in the finals. Martinez dropped a decision to Danny Sorrels of Sacramento, Calif., in the 125-pound class, and Joseph Maria of Albuquerque won over Carrillo in the 115-pound class. The Warriors were one of four teams from Texas invited to the tournament. This week, the club will enter the Red River Boxing Tournament at Wichita Falls. The meet starts Thursday.

"I think we're all starting to play better," said linebacker Jack Ham, who intercepted two passes in Monday night's 24-7 victory over the San Francisco 49ers. But only on offense had the Steelers been struggling, scoring one touchdown in each of their previous two games. Bradshaw was intercepted four times and Swann caught no passes in last week's 7-6 decision over Cincinnati. "We passed well and ran the ball, too, which is what we have to do," said Swann after catching two touchdown passes and totaling 134 yards on eight receptions against the 49ers. The victory was over a team that went down fighting, 31-28, a week earlier to the Los Angeles Rams, who held the Steelers to 59 yards rushing two weeks ago. "The Steelers are a great football team," said Fred O'Connor, 0-4 since becoming San Francisco's head coach. "We have three teams coming up (New Orleans, Tampa Bay and Detroit) that we can compete against." If the 49ers, 1-12 after eight straight defeats, lose their final three games they'll set an NFL record for losses in one season. "I got my confidence back tonight," said Bradshaw, who took the NFL lead in touchdown passes with his 22nd, an 11-yard toss to John Stallworth in the fourth period. A request was made that the game be postponed because of the City Hall assassinations of San Francisco Mayor George Moscone and Supervisor Harvey Milk, but the NFL decided the nationally televised would go on as scheduled. Pittsburgh made its record 11-2, best in the NFL, and has a two-game lead over the Houston Oilers in the American Football Conference Central Division. The Steelers play in Houston on Sunday and can clinch the title with a victory. "We'd better be ready for Houston, they'll be ready for us," said Bradshaw. "But right now, I'm enjoying this." Bradshaw threw a first-period interception, his eighth in three weeks, in the first period after teammate Roy Gerela had booted a 42-yard field goal. Then the quarterback, who called his recent games embarrassing, went wild. He completed 9 of 11 passes for 137 yards on two second-period touchdown drives. Swann caught scoring passes of 22 and 25 yards, raising his NFL-leading total to 11 touchdowns receptions. He has a career-high 57 receptions this season and is tied with Seattle's Steve Largent for the AFC lead. "The first touchdown pass was Terry's all the way. He threw a perfect pass," said Swann, who made an over-the-head catch of the throw deep into the end zone. Swann eluded two defenders on the next touchdown play, and Bradshaw said, "He's just a great competitor. He improved on that one."

Bob Jury, one of the defensive backs faked out by Swann on the second touchdown, said, "He does everything so smoothly, and he's got great speed, too." O'Connor said, "We covered him very well at times, and he still made the catches." Pittsburgh 3-14 0-7 2-4

Free Throws Defeat Dunbar

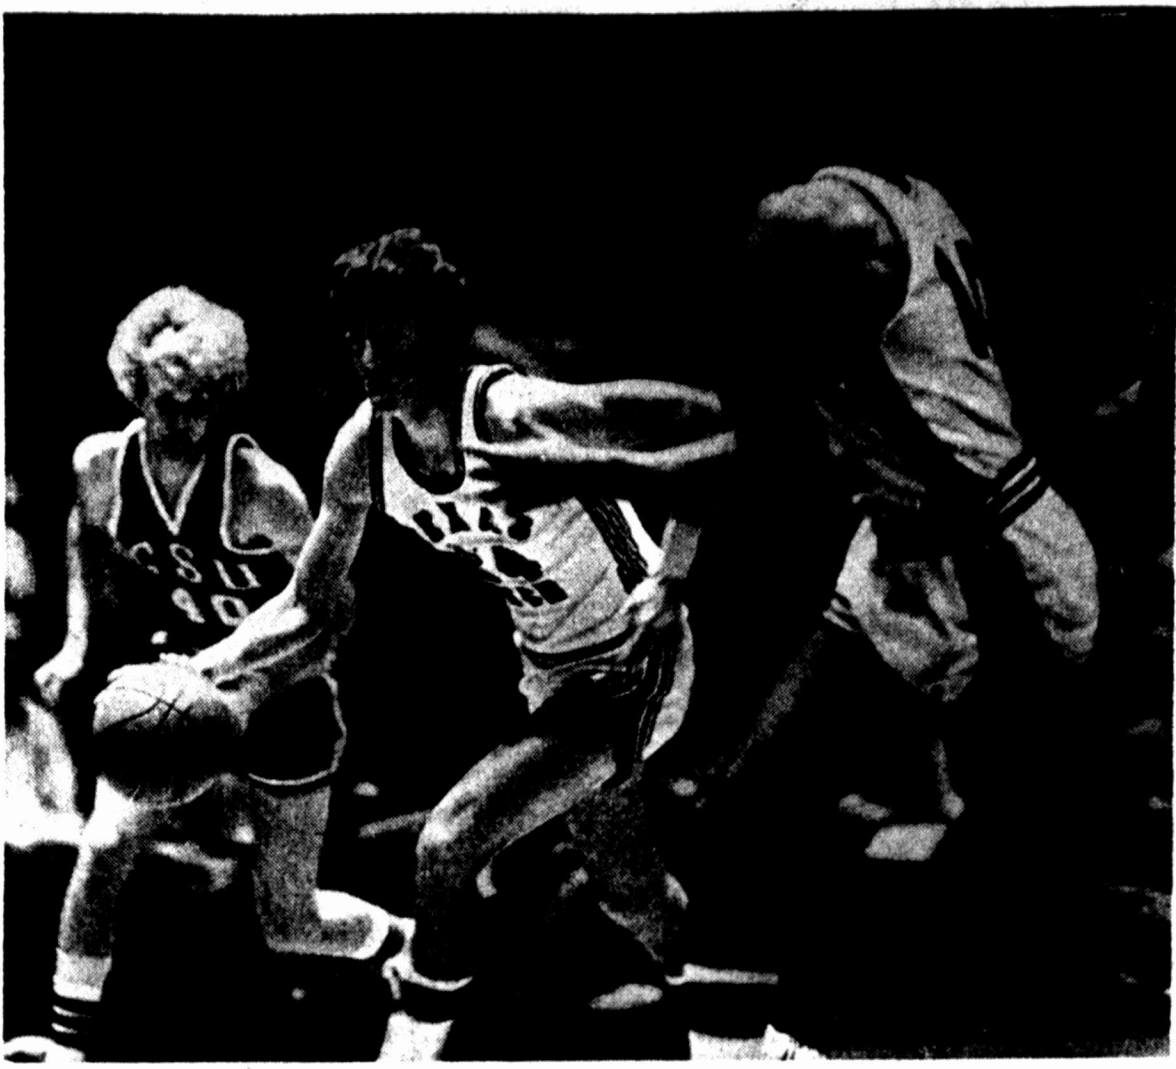

Dunbar had the lead when it came to field goals. But, at the free-throw line Big Spring's girls hit 12 of 15 free shots en route to a 38-35 squeaker over hostess Dunbar Monday night and won their first basketball game of the season. The loss dropped Dunbar to 0-3. Dunbar's fouls put Big Spring into the one-and-one bonus situation in the first period, and the parade of free shot trips made the difference. Dunbar outgained Big Spring 16-13.

The Estacado girls' basketball team pulled off some timely steals to defeat Lubbock High 42-35 Monday night. Estacado led by only 3 points with just two minutes to go, but steals by Chantel Jackson (who finished the night with 10 points scored) brought the Matadors around.

Chaparrals Fall Again

DURANGO, Colo. (Special) — Host Fort Lewis State had only one more field goal, but it won a decided battle at the free-throw line and sank touring Lubbock Christian College 99-85 Monday night. The two teams will tangle again tonight, beginning at 8:30 p.m. CST. The visiting Chaparrals had a hot shooting performance, connected 51.4 percent of the time, but at the free throw line, they hit but 45 percent (11 of 24). Also, Fort Lewis got more free tosses, making good on 23 of 23.

The hosts jumped to a 6-0 lead, and rest of the way, LCC never got nearer than 4 points. Most of the last half, the Chaparrals trailed from 8-15 points. The Chaparrals dominated the backboards 41-34, with 6-4 rebound Keith Gardner hauling down 13 rebounds. Dave Nelson paced the hosts in scoring with 21 points. For the Chaparrals, Gardner had 22 points in addition to his rebound total. The juco transfer hit 10 of 21 field shots. Center Kevin Wharton paced the Chaparrals in scoring with 27 points, hitting 12 of 17 from the floor. Bruce Carver contributed 19 points. The loss extended the Chaps road losing streak to 31 games. From here, the Chaps will venture to Grand Junction for a Thursday date with Mesa State before returning to Texas, where they will challenge West Texas State in Amarillo Saturday.

ORU Flooded By Bulgarians

By The Associated Press
It was a couple of weeks before the exhibition game with the touring Bulgarian basketball team. Inventive Andy Furman, sports information director of Oral Roberts University, was mapping out his publicity game plan.

"But then when the sports information office was crushed by requests from 'Bulgarians,' real or imagined, Furman had second thoughts about the gimmick. "Gee," he said with a smile, "I never thought there were that many Bulgarians in Tulsa." Mabe Center, home of the Titans, would have a near-capacity crowd for the exhibition game, but Furman suddenly realized that most of the people might be rooting for the wrong team. "The thing that worried me," he said, "was that 7,000 of the fans would be for Bulgaria. So what happens to our home-court advantage?" ORU's basketball coaches had the same question. They started grumbling about Furman's liberal giveaway program, but the slick publicity man didn't buckle. In fact, he counter-attacked with a new proposal. "Why don't we give away a jar of borscht (beet soup) to the first 50 Bulgarians who arrive at Mabe Center?" he proposed. "I can ask my mother in Brooklyn to make some." This idea was quickly canned, however. But did Furman stop there? Of course not. He brushed up on his Bulgarian history and went to a local high school to lecture. The school went Bulgaria-crazy and a contest was arranged for students to win tickets to the game. "The whole thing just snowballed," Furman said. When the Bulgarian players came to town, international relations were never better — and neither was the interest of Tulsa area basketball fans. The night of the game, more than 8,400 people showed up at Mabe Center. Oral Roberts Athletic Director Bob Brooks couldn't ascertain how many of them were true Bulgarians, though. "We said that everyone had to bring a birth certificate to prove his nationality," said Brooks. "But we didn't check it that closely. We took their word for it." If there was a loss of the home-court advantage, Oral Roberts didn't miss it. The Titans defeated the Bulgarians 95-92. Now Furman has another bright idea. "I was going to ask our athletic director to invite the Turkish national team to play here next year at Thanksgiving," said Furman. "Then we could let in all the Turkish people in Tulsa free and give away free turkeys to the first 50 who show up."

LA Slaps Star With Suspension

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Los Angeles linebacker Isiah Robertson, a veteran of six Pro Bowl games but now a Rams' reserve, has been suspended without pay for two weeks, the National Football League team announced. Robertson was suspended Monday for "conduct detrimental to the football team," according to Coach Ray Malavasi, who said the right-side linebacker would not practice for the next two weeks and would miss games against the New York Giants and the Cincinnati Bengals. The coach would not reveal the reason for his action, and Robertson was not available for comment. The former All-Pro defenseman lost his starting job midway through this season to second-year linebacker Bob Brudzinski, the Rams' top draft choice out of Ohio State in 1977.

Lobos Crush Lubbock By 40

Dennis Phillips scored 31 points and three of his teammates also finished in double figures as Levelland beat winless Lubbock High 103-62. Rocky Lawless finished with 10, Kenneth Childers with 11 and Dale Moore with 11 to help Phillips carry the scoring load for the 2-0 winners. Levelland led only 21-18 at the end of the first period but outscored Lubbock 31-10 in the second to go on to the romp. Lubbock just couldn't find the bucket in that second quarter and the Westerner's committed several turnovers that led to Levelland points. In all, Lubbock finished with 37 giveaways. Ricky Montoya led the Lubbock scorers with 12. He was the only Westerner over 10.

Coach Abe Lemons looked at his Texas team before Monday night's home game against Northern Montana and didn't like what he saw.

"We looked like zombies in the dressing room and I wasn't sure what was going to happen," said Lemons. "But we came out and played hard, which is what I wanted to see."

It was all too much for the visitors, who got stampeded by the 13th-ranked Longhorns 148-71. Senior guard Jim Krivacs scored 43 points as Texas recorded the most points ever by a Southwest Conference team, breaking the mark of 139 points set by Baylor against Trinity in 1965.

"The score doesn't make a lot of difference," maintained Lemons. "It was the way we kept playing hard, which was good to see."

In other games involving Top 20 teams, No. 1 Duke struggled past Southern Methodist 86-80. No. 7 Michigan State whipped Central Michigan 71-54 and No. 11 Louisiana State easily beat New Orleans 64-42.

Texas obliterated the school scoring record, which had been 117 against Arkansas in 1972. And it wasn't all that far away from the NCAA single-game scoring record set by Nevada-Las Vegas in a 164-111 victory over Hawaii-Hilo in 1976, or the NCAA's 91-point margin of victory record set by Louisiana State in a 124-33 victory over Southwestern, Tenn., in 1952.

Tyrone Branan had 15 points and 13 rebounds for Texas while guard John Moore had 13 points and 19 assists. Krivacs had 10 assists.

Texas, which had been ranked sixth in The Associated Press' preseason poll, fell to 13th this week after losing its season opener to Long Beach State 71-66 Saturday night.

"If you had seen us play the other night, you would have wondered how we could have ever won a game at all," said Lemons. "But we kind of got after them tonight and I was glad to see it."

Duke didn't play particularly well but still won, which pleased Coach Bill Puterbaugh. "It comes out a win and we have things that we have to work on," he said. "It was a good game for us this time."

Guard Jim Krivacs had 22 points, center Mike Gutschall scored 20 and forward Gene Smith had 18. The Blue Devils trailed 20-25 at the half, took the lead early in the second half and turned back repeated threats by Southern Methodist in the late going.

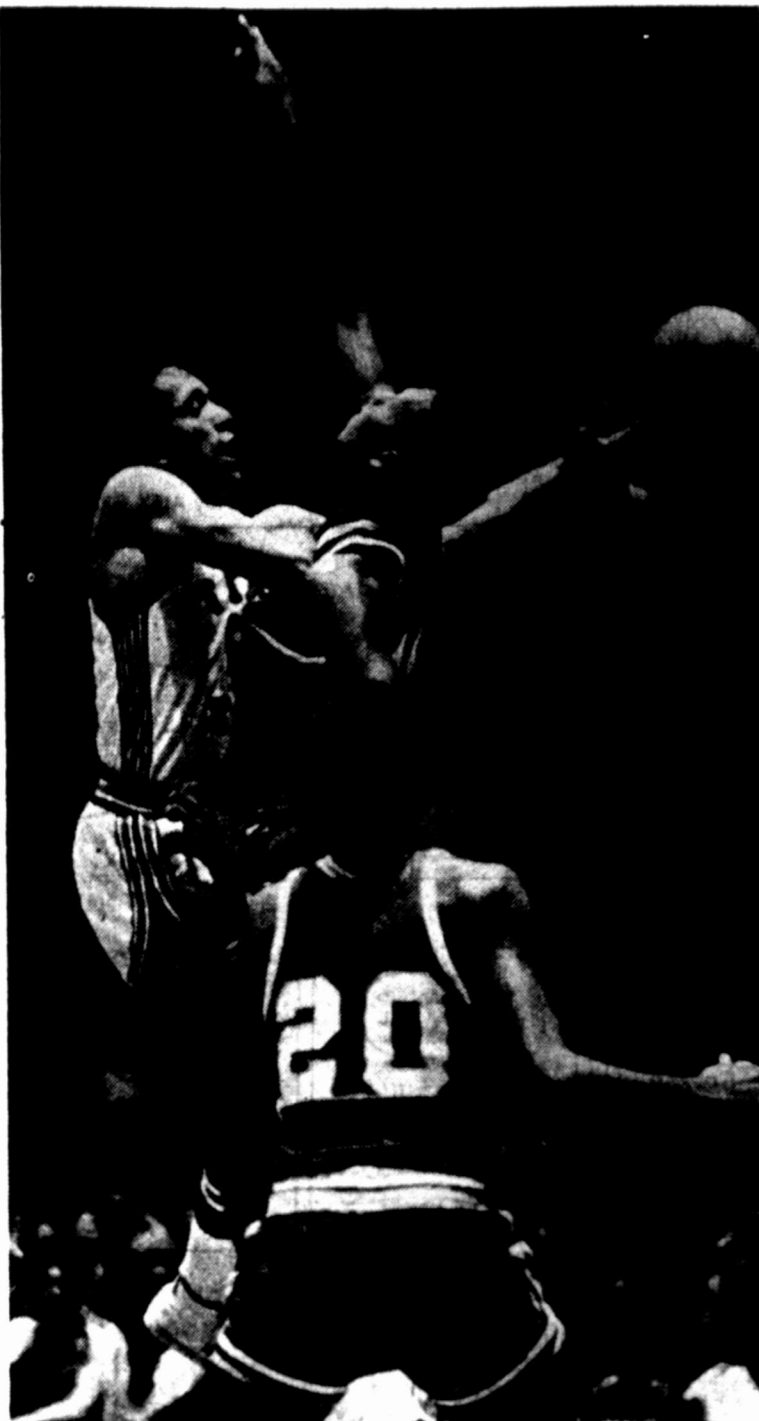

SMU Coach Sonny Allen predicted a national championship for Duke, which was runnerup to Kentucky last season.

"Last year we played Kentucky the first game of the year and I said then that they would win the NCAA," Allen said. "I'll say the same thing about Duke this year. They get loose balls, slap it away and block shots."

Seventh-ranked Michigan State opened its season with an easy victory over Central Michigan as Gregory Kessler scored 30 points, many coming after quick passes from playmaker Ervin Johnson, who had 14 points and 11 assists.

The game was close until Michigan State put on a 17-3 spurt late in the first half. The Spartans led 39-22 at the half and were never in trouble after intermission.

"We got off to a slow start but I have to give the credit there to Central Michigan," said Michigan State Coach Joe Heathcote. "We were glad to get a few points ahead."

BASKETBALL IN STEREO — It's all in how you saw it. Avalanche-Journal photographers Milton Adams and Gary Davis, situated on opposite sides of the Lubbock Coliseum floor captured this midair confrontation between Texas Tech guard Geoff Huston (white jersey) and Central State's Charles Crosby. And, as the pictures indicate, the two photos were shot almost simultaneously. Davis' from behind CSU guard Kevin Pierce (20) and Adams' looking toward official Don Bridges and Pierce. Huston was in the process of passing to a teammate in the first half of the Raiders' 85-61 victory

Houston Relies On Comebacks

HOUSTON (AP) — In baseball terms, the Houston Oilers' football style of play might be compared to the batter who takes two strikes before getting a hit.

"When that player gets a hit you forget all about those two strikes," Oiler Coach O.A. "Bum" Phillips said. "The real test is the adjustments your assistant coaches make in a game and I just think our coaches have done as good a job of that as anyone in the whole league."

The Oilers, who have sutured together a 9-4 record with a series of first and second half comebacks, rallied in the second quarter Sunday to beat Cincinnati 17-10.

And their track record indicates they'll have to rally again Sunday when they host the Pittsburgh Steelers in an American Football Conference Central Division showdown.

But comebacks are tougher against the Steelers, Phillips says.

"They are an awful good defensive unit and I would say if Pittsburgh gets you down, you are in more trouble than with most people."

Further complicating Houston's predicament is the fact the Oilers already have beaten the Steelers once this season, 24-17 in a Monday night contest.

"It's pretty hard to beat Pittsburgh once a year and not many people are doing that," Phillips said. "It's going to be tougher the second time, that's obvious."

Phillips praised the work of offensive line coach Joe Bugel and the offensive line for its work against the tough Cincinnati defensive unit.

"After the first two series our line blocked exceptionally well," Phillips said. "They have a tough defense but we were putting them on the ground."

The Oiler offensive line has helped rookie earl Campbell become the all-time leading rookie rusher in National Football League history.

"We tried to do some things we weren't prepared to do in the first quarter," center Carl Mauck said. "Then we got mad and went back to doing what we can do and that's when we blew them out."

Campbell rushed into the NFL record books Sunday with 122 yards on 27 carries to retain his NFL lead with 1,265 yards. He broke the rookie rushing record of 1,162 set in 1974 by San Diego's Don Woods and also broke the Oiler single season rushing record.

"I'm going to find out when these guys want to go out to a restaurant because they deserve a free meal," Campbell said after he had gained 199 yards eight days ago against the Miami Dolphins.

During the seven day period, Campbell gained 321 yards and after only 12 games as a pro, tied the Oiler career record of seven 100-yard performances.

Bears Gave Akers, UT Hard Time

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas Coach Fred Akers was asked if Baylor's 38-14 upset victory over Texas on Saturday seemed to last longer than 60 minutes, and he replied, "I thought it took two weeks."

Texas played so poorly that Akers — for the first time this season — declined Monday to name an outstanding offensive or defensive player.

Akers said he was embarrassed by the defeat, and he was asked if Texas players had told him they felt the same way. "They don't have to," he replied.

Akers said at his weekly news conference the loss was "one of those kind of games you would almost have to see it to believe it."

Texas had a 7-2 record, was ranked No. 9 and had accepted an invitation to play Maryland in the Sun Bowl on Dec. 23. Baylor was 2-8. Texas lost three fumbles and had six passes intercepted, which was a school record.

"We were awfully accommodating," Akers said.

Akers said Texas had had good workouts for the Baylor game, but he added, "We didn't have the mental edge you have to have."

It was reported in Houston Monday that in an effort to fire-up his team, Baylor Coach Grant Teaff had put a worm in his mouth and said, "If that's what it takes for you to beat Texas, I'll swallow this worm."

Problems Continue To Mount For San Francisco

By LINDA DEUTSCH

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — In this chilly, beautiful city that has inspired song and poetry, grief hung like fog today amid a plague of bizarre violence that led residents to ask: "Why does it happen here?"

"I feel so sorry for this city," said a citizen shaken by the murder Monday of Mayor George Moscone and Supervisor Harvey Milk. "We've had the Zebra killers, the Zodiac, the SLA, the Peoples Temple and now this. I don't know how much more we can take."

The tearful throng of 25,000 to 40,000 residents who gathered in numbed shock outside City Hall Monday night tried to provide their own answer. Carrying candles and clinging to their neighbors like survivors of some natural catastrophe or a war, they sang, "We shall overcome."

Columnist Herb Caen, among the most influential men in town, summed up the feelings of his beloved city in today's San Francisco Chronicle.

"Horror upon horror. Shock upon shock. ... The vocabulary of grief and disbelief stretches only so far. ... At the end of a week of incredible headlines, all of us were left stunned, exhausted, overwhelmed by the flood of bloody 'senseless' information. ... It was all senseless. Like the hundreds dead in Guyana. ... And yet there must be a thread connecting all this violence." The thread that connected Moscone and Milk, Caen said, was one common to many of their constituents: "They loved San Francisco."

So did Jim Jones. And Charlie Manson. "This is every misfit's favorite city as well as the favorite city of a lot of straight, normal people," said San Francisco Examiner Editor and Publisher Reg Murphy.

"It's the most photogenic city in the country," Murphy added. "It's also the most accepting city. It contains some of the brightest minds in America. ... But there's an odd mixture of the highly intellectual community and the crazy community."

The "crazy community" bloomed in the 1960s. Long-haired young people calling themselves "hippies" and "flower children" swarmed into San Francisco's tawdry Haight Ashbury district.

They were turned off by the Vietnam War and "turned on" by the prophet of LSD, Timothy Leary.

The flower children were hallucinating on drugs. "We were riding on the wind," one of them would remember. Her name was Lynette "Squeaky"

Fromme. Years later, she would try to kill a president.

She came to San Francisco with the ragged Charles Manson "family" in 1968. Manson, guru of a band of young misfits, had passed through Haight Ashbury earlier, staying long enough to learn the power of drugs and a word, "Love." He took his "hippies" to Los Angeles and ordered mass murders.

In Haight Ashbury, teen-agers "freaked out" screaming in the agony of LSD "bad trips."

Some died after taking "street drugs" laced with strychnine. Some committed murder. Those who survived drifted to drug rehabilitation centers or moved away.

But the plague they had brought did not die. It festered and burst in the '70s, San Francisco's most violent decade since the days of the Barbary Coast.

In 1969 and 1970, a murderer calling himself "Zodiac" sent grisly coded messages to local newspapers. "Killing people is more fun than killing wild game," he wrote. Zodiac's missives have continued sporadically. He has not been caught. Police say he probably killed six persons. He boasts of slaying 37 victims.

In 1972, a midwestern preacher, the Rev. Jim Jones set up his Peoples Temple in San Francisco's poor Fillmore district.

In 1973, a wave of random street killings terrorized the city. The "Zebra killers," struck without warning, killing whites at night. Most victims were shot. One was raped, another beheaded.

In April 1974, it was over. Four young Black Muslims were arrested and charged with 14 murders, seven assaults, one rape and an attempted kidnaping. The Zebra murderers were convicted in 1976 after the longest trial in San Francisco history.

On Feb. 4, 1974, the daughter of one of San Francisco's first families — Patricia Hearst — was kidnapped. Her travels through the radical underground exposed a seething subculture of disaffected young revolutionaries known as The Symbionese Liberation Army.

Six of them died that spring in a flaming, suicidal shootout with Los Angeles police. The others — Miss Hearst and William and Emily Harris — drifted back to the only American city where they could hide — San Francisco. They eluded police for 18 months before their capture Sept. 18, 1975.

That September was a month for violence. In nearby Sacramento, Lynette Fromme aimed a gun at President Ford and was arrested. In San Francisco, days after Miss Hearst's capture, a middle-aged radical, Sara Jane Moore, fired a gun at Ford in famous Union Square barely missing him.

"Isn't anything happening anywhere but San Francisco?" a newscaster asked.

In 1976, Patricia Hearst, Sara Moore and Squeaky Fromme went to prison. Radical groups such as The New World Liberation Front bombed buildings and issued communiques.

In 1977, the plague seemed to pass. City fathers remembered the town's old slogan, "Everybody's Favorite City." The city's large homosexual population savored political victory — election of the first gay member of the city's Board of Supervisors — Harvey Milk.

The following year, 1978, was one of promise. Record numbers of tourists jammed cable cars and hummed, "I Left My Heart in San Francisco."

Then, on Nov. 18, another nightmare began.

Democratic Congressman Leo Ryan, investigating the Peoples Temple cult, had been shot and killed on an airstrip in remote Guyana. Three newsmen and a temple defector were slain with him.

Within hours, a horror story unfolded. Hundreds of San Franciscans, who had followed Jones to a promised paradise in Guyana, obeyed his command to commit mass suicide. In the deep jungle, troops found more than 900 bodies piled upon each other.

Jones had been appointed director of the Housing Authority by Moscone. Thus, when the 49-year-old mayor was gunned down in his office Monday morning, speculation stirred of Peoples Temple involvement. There was none, police said. It was much simpler.

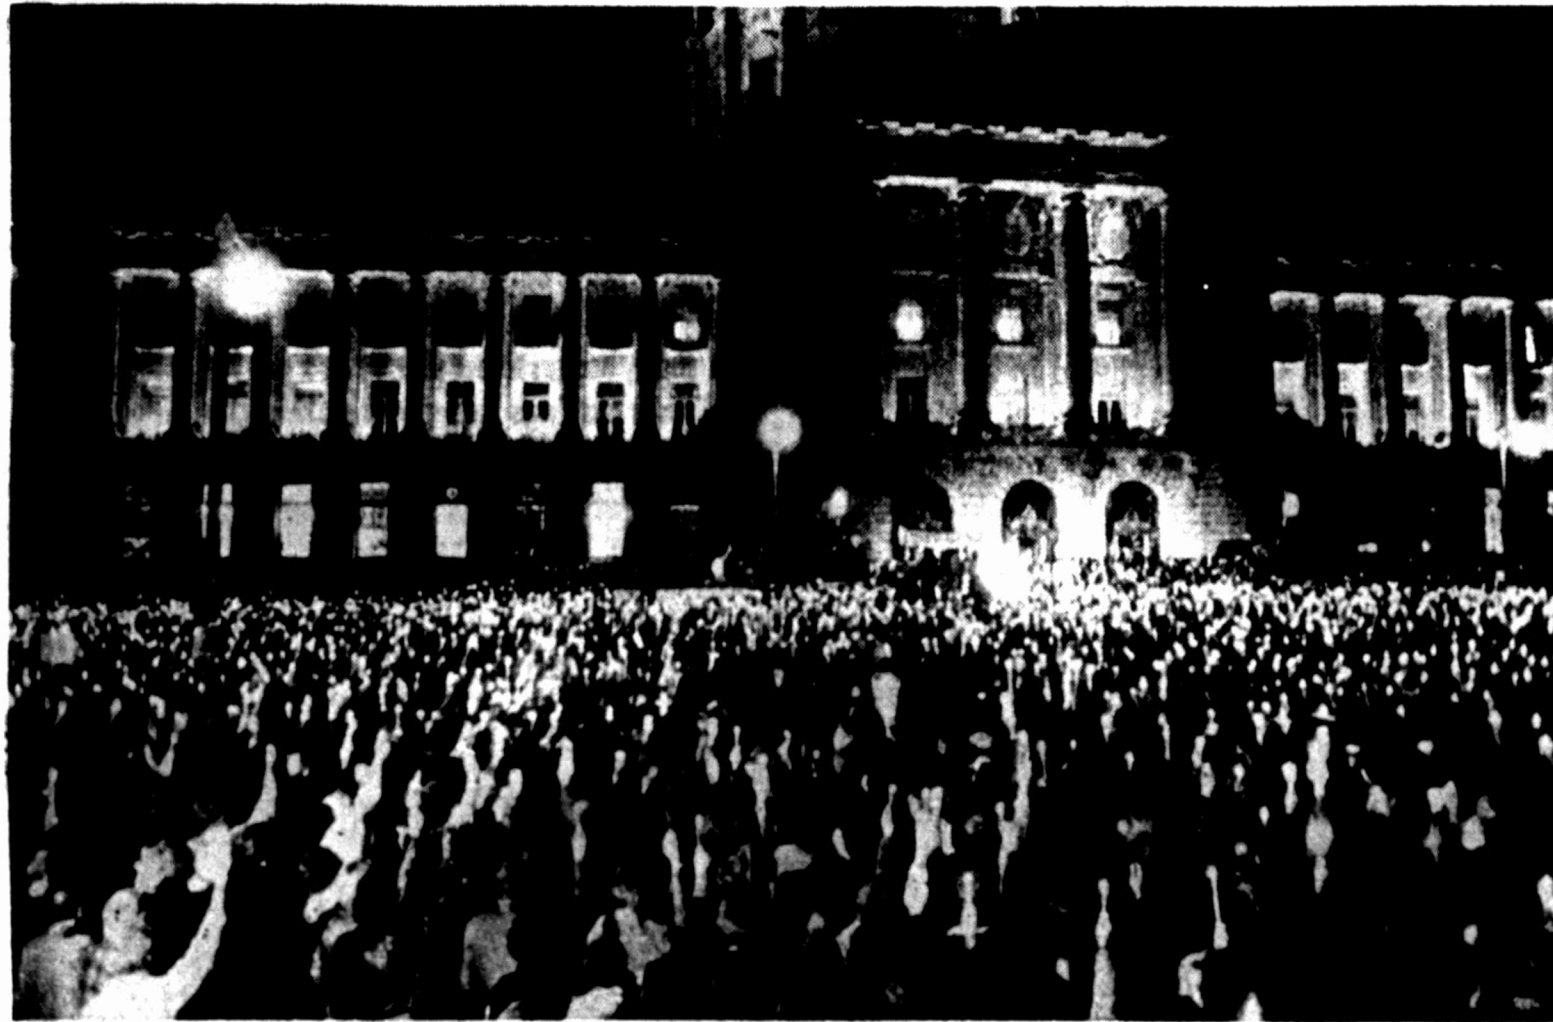

As Moscone and Milk lay in pools of blood inside the marble-and-gold City Hall, a disgruntled former supervisor, Dan White, was booked for investigation of murder. He had come to City Hall to seek reinstatement as a supervisor. Moscone had refused.

"I don't know how we're going to put this city back together again," said the citizen who called a late night radio talk show to mourn for San Francisco.

Elsewhere, said Herb Caen, they call this "the kook capital."

"We who have lived here a long time resist that description," he wrote. "What others call 'kooks,' we look upon as characters in a charade we smile at. We think we understand the show, having played our own roles for so many years."

"Maybe we are wrong."

SPONTANEOUS OUTPOURING OF GRIEF — More than 25,000 persons jammed the park and streets around San Francisco's City Hall Monday in a spontaneous demonstration of grief for slain Mayor George Moscone and Supervisor Harvey Milk. The two city officials were gunned down in their offices at city hall Monday morning. The candle carrying crowd listened to talks by acting mayor Diane Feinstein and Police Chief Charles Gain. Shooting Stuns U.S. Mayors

By United Press International

The nation's mayors' shock and sorrow over the shooting death of San Francisco Mayor George Moscone was tinged with the realization the threat of assassination is a constant companion to those in public life.

"I would say that mayors are sort of sitting ducks from the standpoint of being out in the public a lot and having relatively little protection," said Kansas City Mayor Charles Wheeler.

Moscone was shot to death in his office Monday by a man apparently distraught because he was not going to be reappointed to the city's Board of Supervisors, police said. Supervisor Harvey Milk, a homosexual-rights activist, also was killed.

Newark, N.J., Mayor Kenneth A. Gibson said the extent of Moscone's loss will never be known.

"We will never know just how tragic the death of Mayor Moscone is. He was an able leader and no one can tell what he might have been capable of doing for his city, state or nation," said Gibson, who always travels with a bodyguard.

President Carter expressed "a sense of outrage and sadness at the senseless killing" and said of Moscone: "He was a good and kind man, and he will be sorely missed."

Vice President Walter Mondale hailed Moscone as "a respected and dedicated public servant and a nationally recognized leader of the effort to improve the quality of life in the nation's urban areas."

"It is an unspeakable tragedy that this fine public servant has been sacrificed to a senseless and wanton act of violence," Mondale said.

Chicago Mayor Michael Bilandic said the danger was an occupational hazard of public life. "I don't give it a second thought. You go about and do the best job you can in the best way," he said.

Columbus, Ohio, Mayor Tom Moody, head of the National League of Cities now meeting in St. Louis, said the city leaders gathered there were "shocked and confused" by the City Hall slayings.

He said Moscone, 49, "was typical of those mayors who everyday face the uncertainties of a society that has eruptions of meaningless violence with tragic and unnecessary results."

Moscone was not at the convention because, after passage of Proposition 13, San Francisco dropped out of all such organizations and slashed travel expenses.

Police Guards Move Closer In Houston

HOUSTON (UPI) — The shooting death of the mayor of San Francisco Monday has prompted Houston police to move their guard station 30 feet closer to Mayor Jim McConn's office and to discuss contingency plans.

"We've needed to make the move for a long time," Detective J.C. Mosier said as the guards were shifted from 75 to 45 feet away. "We would be close enough to hear the mayor if he yelled."

Mosier said he also planned to check ways of increasing security of the mayor's elevator and office back door.

Otherwise, police said plans remained unchanged for now. They said there are no contingency plans, other than normal police response, to provide additional protection in an emergency.

"There is no standard operating procedure for protecting the mayor," said Assistant Chief B.K. Johnson. "Each situation is evaluated on its own merits and we would react accordingly."

"Naturally, we would take steps to alleviate any situation we, or the mayor for that matter, thought necessary to protect the mayor or any other city official."

Police said a security officer accompanies McConn everywhere he goes and that extra men escort him through crowds. He is driven home at night by police and a squad car cruises his neighborhood at regular intervals.

Moscone Used To Making Tough Decisions

By RICHARD M. HARNETT

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — George Moscone died refusing to back down from a tough decision, something he had grown used to as an action mayor running an active city.

Last week it was answering reporters wanting an explanation why he had appointed the Rev. Jim Jones to the San Francisco Housing Authority, following the reports from Guyana that Jones led his Peoples Temple followers to mass suicide.

Moscone had calmly responded that Jones, despite what he later became, impressed him as a compassionate man with a feeling for poor people who was best for the job. He offered no apologies.

On Monday, he faced another confrontation. Former Supervisor Dan White — who quit San Francisco's elected legislative body, then asked for his job back — appeared unannounced at Moscone's second-floor office in the ornate City Hall building.

Moscone had decided the answer was "no" for White. The mayor already had let the news media know the job would go to someone else.

Moscone came out from his inner office, greeted White and escorted him back where the two could talk in private.

Moscone, who turned 49 three days ago, was shot and killed.

A suave, neatly groomed man known as a shrewd poker player and expert sports trivia buff, Moscone was native to San Francisco, was descended from one of the Italian immigrant families who helped give the city its European charm.

Born on Nov. 24, 1929, to a milk wagon driver and his wife, Moscone grew up in the predominantly Italian North Beach district of the city. He excelled as a high school basketball player.

"He was always the big kid on the playground and showed his leadership abilities even in those days. He carried those qualities through life," said Supervisor John Molinari, who knew Moscone most of his life and differed with him politically.

Moscone attended the College of the Pacific in Stockton, Calif., and later went to the University of California's Hastings College of Law in San Francisco on an academic scholarship. He finished one of the top five in his class.

In 1963 he was elected to the city Board of Supervisors and three years later won a seat in the state Senate where he became Democratic majority leader in 1967.

In the Senate, Moscone was generally a liberal. He authored a law that required state officials to disclose their financial assets — leading many local officials to resign rather than comply. He authored another law relegating the penalty for possessing small amounts of marijuana to traffic citation status.

In 1974, Moscone said he would run for governor, but changed his mind before the primary.

He was elected mayor in November 1975, replacing Joseph Alioto, a powerful businessman who had held the job for eight years.

Politics was Moscone's game, and he played it like a pro.

"He's a man of his own mind — someone who knows how to deal with contending forces in a complicated job," Alioto said of his successor.

When city employees called one of the nation's biggest public worker strikes, Moscone lived at City Hall for weeks, sleeping and eating in an office unheated because the boilers were shut down.

He confronted the labor leaders who had supported him and told them flatly they were asking too much. Then he worked out a compromise that finally ended the strike. He didn't lose his labor support.

He plunged into local crises as if they were his bread and butter, offering opinions, advice and the clout of the mayor's office to causes he liked.

He flew across the country several times to talk major league baseball owners into keeping the Giants in San Francisco. He said this was a mayor's work and a fan's work.

Moscone held news conferences nearly every day of the week, always to air his thoughts on immediate events, even embarrassing ones.

Homosexual Official Feared For Life

By DIANE CURTIS

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Harvey Milk, one of the nation's first avowed homosexuals to win political office, knew that by doing so he was putting his life on the line.

Milk, 48, was shot to death in his office at City Hall Monday, a few minutes after Mayor George Moscone's assassination. The man being held on murder charges is Dan White, who served with Milk on the Board of Supervisors, but was known to oppose everything the city government was doing for "gay rights" activists.

The slain homosexual, after winning his post in a tough election in November 1977, put his thoughts on tape for the day he might be killed. It was addressed chiefly to other homosexuals and was made public for the first time Monday.

"I cannot prevent anybody from getting angry, or mad, or frustrated," he said. "I can only hope that they'll turn that anger and frustration and madness into something positive."

He appealed for a new wave of homosexuals to come out of the closet, saying he hoped "gay doctors will come out, the gay lawyers, the gay judges, gay bankers, gay architects."

"I hope that every professional gay will say 'enough,' come forward and tell everybody, wear a sign, let the world know. 'Maybe that will help.'"

Since his election a year ago, Milk was considered a progressive office-holder who generally upheld his election-time promise to represent all his constituents, whether homosexual or not.

Conservative fellow Supervisor John Molinari said Milk "evidenced himself as a supervisor concerned about all aspects of the city. He wasn't a one-issue or gay-only oriented supervisor, as some had suspected he would be."

Milk operated a neighborhood camera shop until about two weeks ago when he closed it, saying he wanted to devote full time to his supervisor duties.

Woman Takes Over Chores

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The immediate successor to George Moscone as San Francisco mayor is Dianne Feinstein, a feisty veteran politician who has been president of the city's Board of Supervisors.

Mrs. Feinstein, 46, wept as she told reporters of Moscone's fatal shooting Monday.

As president of the board — which in San Francisco is equivalent to a city council — she automatically becomes acting mayor until the supervisors elect a successor.

Mrs. Feinstein, widow of a neurosurgeon, ran for mayor against Moscone in 1975, but was defeated. She was the first woman president of the Board of Supervisors.

Daughter of Dr. Leon Goldman, a world-famous surgeon, Mrs. Feinstein graduated from Stanford University in political science and has said her goal was "to be a San Francisco Supervisor."

She told interviewers that as a child she used to "sneak away and sit in on hearings, acquainting myself with the people and issues."

She served in various appointive public offices, including a term on the state women's parole board, before running for supervisor in 1960.
