Neither should have served, but these veterans fought for right

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
RT Staff Writer

They were at opposite ends of the age spectrum and neither one should have been in France fighting during World War I. But they were.

Sauntering into the Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 7208, Elsworth "Pop" Reed, 77, said he could not recall much about World War I except that he was "scared the whole time."

Louis Aaron Reno, 90, stopped just inside the door of the VFW hall to let his one good eye adjust to the dim light before walking slowly over to a table and sitting down in the chair next to Reed.

Reed was a 16-year-old in Davenport, Iowa, when he entered the service even though the requirement was 18. But he said he had a sister to sign a statement declaring Reed to be 18, and he went.

"A kid at 16 thought he was pretty much of a man then," Reed said. "But I wasn't there (in France) too long before I found out I was still a kid."

The military service had said it would not accept men over the age of 30, but Reno was 34 when he went in. The Baird man had everything going against him, but his persistence to serve paid off.

In addition to being too old, he was blind in one eye and hard of hearing, he said.

"The boys would tease me and say I could stay behind with the women and children, and I just showed them I wasn't."

He went for his physical but the doctor refused to examine him. That didn't stop Reno. He went to the draft board every day for five weeks, and finally told the personnel they might as well let him in because he would be there every day until they did.

They agreed. "They sent me to San Antonio with a younger man so I wouldn't have any problems getting in," he recalled, then added with a laugh, "They sent the young man home with a heart condition and shipped me over to France."

The two were shipped over to France on boats; Reed got there in about 10 days and Reno, 14.

Reno didn't get there without some mishap. The ships had to take a zig-zag course, going left for 10 minutes and then turning right for 10 minutes. This was to avoid getting hit by the German submarines which required 10 minutes to get their sights set on the ships.

It wasn't a German submarine that caused the problem, but one of the ships in the convoy. When changing course after going one way 10 minutes, a ship rammed a hole into the one carrying Reno.

"I was asleep on the deck," he said. When he awoke he and his partner went to their stations.

"The ship kept turning over slowly and it looked like we could reach out and touch the water, but you couldn't," Reno said. The captain finally announced to the crew the hole had been repaired.

Reno almost lost his life before he ever encountered fighting in France. He refused to serve as guard in the "Crow's Nest" on the ship one evening.

He could have been shot for refusing to obey an order during time of war, Reno said. But his commanding officer intervened and removed him from the Crow's Nest watch.

Reed described World War I as different from all others in that it was a trench war. He was in an artillery unit, but had to use a French weapon since "there were no American guns."

He fought in the Alsace-Lorraine region with the French Arragon forces.

"We had to stay down in those trenches all the time," he recalled. "When it rained we stayed down in the water."

"Those that looked up ain't here," he quipped, then added with a smile, "I was taller then but I got shorter."

The front line fighting where Reed was stationed was done by the U.S. Marines and French forces, he said.

"It saved the Germans from going into Paris. Those last few battles were rough. The Arragon forces would go over and lose all the men they thought they could, and then go back into the trenches."

Reno was about three miles from the front line in a telegraph unit stringing lines for communication.

"We didn't do any fighting but we were under fire. Those boys would tell me to be glad I was hard of hearing."

The long-awaited Armistice was signed on Nov. 11, 1918. "We boys just went wild," Reed recalled. "We all went down and got in the dugout where the Germans had been and we was all having a big time."

Reno remembered the troops were packing up to move to the front when they heard the Armistice was going to be signed.

"The officers went up to the front to be in a dugout when the last shots were fired and to watch the signing."

Both men eventually were sent

Peace obstacles battled by Israelis

By The Associated Press

Israeli leaders huddled in Canada Friday over "new problems" they say Egypt's Anwar Sadat has injected in the Washington peace talks, and at the old Suez battlefield the Egyptian president said he would "not be astonished" if the treaty negotiations break off.

The obstacle to a quick signing of a treaty remained the issue of linkage — how far Israel is willing to go in committing itself in the Egyptian-Israeli agreements to negotiate the political future of the Palestinian population West Bank of the Jordan River and Gaza Strip.

Prime Minister Menachem Begin of Israel, winding up a Canadian tour, summoned his two top negotiators to Toronto for a discussion of what he said were "problems" at the peace table.

The State Department in Washington said Begin would end his visit Sunday and return to Israel via New York, where he will meet briefly with Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance.

A White House official portrayed President Carter as being increasingly worried about the talks. "I think for the first time there has begun to become a sort of gnawing concern about this thing," the spokesman said.

An Israeli spokesman in Washington said Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan and Defense Ezer Weizman would consult with Begin about a new Egyptian call for specific commitments "of an operational character" on the Palestinian issue.

A diplomatic source said the new Egyptian proposals involve efforts by Sadat to establish target dates for implementing aspects of Israel's pledge to grant the Palestinians full autonomy.

Israeli spokesman Naftali Lavie said the Egyptians presented the new proposals to Dayan and Weizman Thursday night.

Egypt, trying to answer charges that it is abandoning the Arab camp, has been seeking as strong a link as possible between the bilateral pact and the Palestinian issue. But the Israelis are balking, saying the two items should be considered separately.

Before leaving for Toronto, Dayan told reporters, "Our position is that there shouldn't be a linkage or even a mixture of the discussions, that we should do one thing at a time."

Asked about Sadat's warning of a possible breakdown in the talks, Dayan replied, "If he tries hard he can achieve that."

The two Israeli negotiators met with Begin at his Toronto hotel and flew back to Washington late Friday. Before leaving Toronto, they met with U.S. officials, including Alfred L. Atherton, special ambassador on Middle East affairs.

Sadat painted his gloomy picture of prospects for a quick treaty signing at a meeting with reporters in Al Qantara.

The Egyptian leader had gone there, on the edge of the Sinai Peninsula, to pray on a Moslem feast day. It was a year and a day after he launched his peace initiative with an offer to visit Israel.

Begin, at a Toronto news conference, was asked whether his summoning of Dayan and Weizman indicated there was a crisis. He said he preferred to say only that "we have problems."

New report may justify insurance suspicions

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Ever feel you were rejected for car insurance just because you were old, physically handicapped or recently divorced?

Maybe your suspicions were justified, the House Subcommittee on Automobile Insurance reported Friday.

The subcommittee's report was received by the full House Insurance Committee, along with the work of several other panels that studied insurance matters between lawmaking sessions.

The auto report said the law should require companies to file their underwriting guidelines with the State Insurance Board, where they would be open to public inspection.

"An examination of the underwriting guidelines we received shows the young, the old, the recently divorced or separated, persons incapable of speaking English fluently and the physically handicapped are likely to have difficulty obtaining voluntary market coverage," the report said.

Bartenders, musicians, longshoremen, dockworkers, automobile salesmen and professional athletes are "considered by many companies to be especially high risks and undesirable insureds," it said.

The report said if the board doesn't curb "unfairly discriminatory practices" by insurance companies, the Legislature would.

The subcommittee rejected a staff recommendation to eliminate age, sex and marital status classifications for setting auto rates — classifications that impose the highest rates on single males under 21.

But subcommittee chairman Rep. Gene Green, D-Houston, said he would introduce a bill prohibiting the insurance board from considering anything other than driving experience, vehicle use and vehicle characteristics.

Driving experience would include traffic convictions, auto accidents and the length of time one has been licensed.

Nixon, on Dallas stopover, voices Clements support

By KATHLEEN HAST

DALLAS (AP) — Richard M. Nixon, looking dapper and shorter than his television image, Friday declared the election of longtime supporter Bill Clements to the Texas governor's mansion was "probably the most significant victory of any governor's race."

Decked out in a slate-colored suit and oyster-colored shirt, Nixon seemed pleased to be back before the glare of camera lights as he arrived for a two-hour stopover visit at Dallas-Fort Worth Regional Airport.

He stopped often to sign autographs for the approximately 200 persons — mostly newsmen — straining for a glimpse from behind velvet-colored ropes.

And he stopped often to answer questions about the Carter Administration, his future travels, his health and Clements.

"The Republican victory in Texas in terms of the political balance in this country was the most significant victory of any governor's race perhaps for a generation," Nixon said. "After all, it is the first time a Republican has been elected governor in the state of Texas."

Clements is the first Republican governor of Texas in 104 years.

"Also, I am glad in view of the fact there was going to be a Republican governor, it is a man so superbly qualified as Bill Clements," Nixon said of his 1972 Texas re-election campaign manager.

"He is without political experience but he showed he could handle the biggest administrative job in the federal government by running the defense department as deputy secretary of defense. Anybody who can run the business side of the defense department I think can handle a job as big as Texas."

Nixon attended a private reception hosted by his former aide, Ron Walker, during his stopover visit. He left about 4:45 p.m. on a private plane for Shreveport, La., to visit retiring U.S. Rep. Joe Waggoner.

He will make a Veteran's Day speech Saturday in Biloxi, Miss., at the invitation of conservative Democratic Senators Joe Stennis and James Eastland.

With the vanity only allowed a politician, Nixon several times referred to his Mideast peace predictions that came before the Camp Davis settlement. But he declined to be critical of President Carter's administration.

"As a former president I know how tough that job is and I'm not going to job any balls into the bleachers," he said. "I shall speak with regard to the Carter Administration when I think it will be helpful. If I don't think it will be helpful, I will remain silent."

Nixon told the crowd he had been unable to travel while working on his book but has planned a trip to London and Paris after Thanksgiving.

"It's a relief not to have to get out and bang around the country," he said, his shaking fingers laced together at his waist.

The crowd gathered early to watch former Nixon staffers file into the Flagship Suite at the American Airlines terminal. Republican State Sen. Betty Andujar of Fort Worth, U.S. Rep. Jim Collins of Dallas and millionaire Lamar Hunt were the most notable arrivals.

Nixon's supporters were a grab-bag mixture of the ultra-conservative.

A curly-haired seminary student, Mark Hughes of Washington, D.C., a copy of Nixon's memoirs under his arm, became the darling of the media as he posed for photographs. The 25-year-old later asked Nixon to sign the book as a present for his father.

We like things old fashioned," said the pastor of the Fort Worth Apostolic Church. Shew, a diminutive five-foot-two, later attracted Nixon's attention in his black suit and huge white Stetson.

Walker, in charge of Nixon's traveling arrangements from 1969 to 1972, now runs an "event-coordinating firm" in Dallas. Walker said Nixon discussed travel plans and "old times" with his former staffers at the closed reception.

Nixon left the reception to catch his plane to Shreveport crammed in the back seat of a yellow Secret Service Mercury with two giant Texas oil men, Monty and Tex Moncrief.

Nixon's Friday visit was reminiscent of a 1960 stop at the old Southwest International Airport in Fort Worth where he was also greeted by a large crowd and he spoke candidly to reporters.

Friday, he had good wishes for reporters and told one radio newswoman she was "pretty enough to go into television."

During his last visit to the area, in 1971, reporters and spectators were cordoned about 50 yards from the president and he spoke to no one.

But Friday he was jovial — he even made jokes with the crowd. "Don't write off the Cowboys," Nixon said to applause. "One thing (Los Angeles Coach) George Allen and (Dallas Coach) Tom Landry have in common, is they don't make mistakes. I'll bet Landry doesn't make many more mistakes later."

Tests say improvement needed

By LEE JONES

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Standardized testing of Texas 9, 13- and 17-year-olds on writing and civics produced both good news and bad news, but the overall message was clear: There is much need for improvement.

That was the report given a committee of the State Board of Education on Friday by the Texas Education Agency staff.

Some 35,000 youngsters were given tests developed by the National Assessment of Educational Progress as part of an evaluation program ordered by the Legislature.

Thirteen-year-olds were asked to write letters to their principals suggesting one way to improve their schools. Their letters were scored on whether they identified a problem, proposed a way to solve it and systematically defended their proposals.

Nationally, 66 percent of the 13-year-olds either failed to define or defend a change or identified a problem but did not develop any reasoning to support their proposals. In Texas, 81 percent were unable to suggest a change and defend their proposals.

The 17-year-olds wrote a job application in response to a newspaper advertisement and were graded on whether their letters told their level of education, described the job sought and informed the prospective employer how to reach them.

Only 8 percent of the Texas students gave all three essential elements, compared with 18 percent nationwide.

A sampling of students — smaller than the statewide group of 35,000 because of the time needed for grading — also wrote essays, which were scored on writing mechanics.

Two percent of the 9-year-olds, 2 percent of the 13-year-olds and 3 percent of the 17-year-olds in the Texas sample wrote fully developed paragraphs.

Comparable nationwide figures were 4 percent for 9-year-olds, 2 percent for 13-year-olds and 11 percent for 17-year-olds.

"Texas students in all three age groups used fewer total words per essay and fewer sentences and paragraphs per essay than did their national counterparts," the report said.

The report said the test results show "a substantial number of Texas 9-, 13- and 17-year-olds are mastering those aspects of citizenship which were measured by these 101 test items, and that the performance of Texas students on these exercises is generally comparable to the performance of their counterparts in the nation."

Texas youngsters generally did well on understanding of constitutional rights, positive attitude toward the law and equality of opportunity. Their performance dropped on items related to structure and functions of government and support for the political process.

For instance, 99 percent of the 17-year-olds understood that an accused person has a right to know the charges against him or her and that a suspect has the right to a lawyer.

Texas students performed well on 12 of 25 questions deemed by the TEA staff to be of paramount importance — questions such as whether the United States would be better off with only one political party.

But there were some lapses.

Fifty-five percent of the 17-year-olds didn't know that each state has two U.S. senators, compared with 44 percent nationally who missed the question.

Among the 9-year-olds, only 41 percent of the Texans knew the name of their nation, compared with 59 percent nationally.

On the other hand, 86 percent of the Texas 9-year-olds could name their state, compared with only 72 percent nationwide.

Republican legislator proposes appointments be revokable

By SUSAN STOLER

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A governor's appointments to state boards and commissions should be revokable at any time, a Republican legislator proposed Friday.

Most of the executive branch of state government, including regulation of business and operation of such programs as welfare, is run by boards and commissions selected by the governor.

"I know it sounds like a strange coincidence," said Sen. Bill Ceverha of Dallas said three days after Texans elected Bill Clements as the first Republican governor since Reconstruction.

"But we get these people on boards and agencies and we can't seem to find a way to get them out," he added.

Ceverha's Democratic counterparts on the Texas Sunset Advisory Commission disagreed with his suggestion.

"That's an awful big gun," said Sen. Pete Snelson, D-Midland.

"I think it's no coincidence," Rep. Bennie Bock, D-New Braunfels said of the post-election suggestion.

Discussion of whether to continue the Battleship Texas Commission sparked the exchange.

Ceverha suggested that the governor have power to remove commission members at any time, instead of making the appointments for six-year terms.

"I think there are some areas where having some degree of independence is desirable," said Sen. Lloyd Doggett, D-Austin. "But I don't think the Battleship Commission is one of them."

The only other Republican on the eight-member Sunset Commission, Rep. Lee Jackson of Dallas, shared most of Ceverha's sentiments.

"I question whether this removal power should extend to persons not appointed by the governor himself," Jackson said.

Ceverha's proposal for the Battleship Commission failed.

The commissioners could not get together on details of language to retain the battleship agency, leaving that decision until a later meeting.

Baptist missionaries slate visit here

The Rev. and Mrs. Jerry P. Smyth, Southern Baptist missionaries to Brazil, will be Midland visitors next week when they fill speaking engagements at First Baptist Church here.

The couple will speak Monday noon at a luncheon of the Baptist Men's organization, and will present the program at 7:30 p.m. Monday for a meeting of the Baptist Women night group.

Tuesday, the missionaries will be honor guests and featured speakers at a "Brazilian Brunch" at the church.

In their local church, the Smyths are actively engaged in youth and music work, and they also have a daily hospital visitation program.

A native of Lubbock, Smyth is a Texas Tech University graduate and holds a bachelor of divinity degree from New Orleans Seminary. He has studied pastoral care at North Carolina Baptist Hospital.

Bishop Krumm outlines plans

CINCINNATI (AP) — Bishop John M. Krumm has outlined plans for his eventual retirement from the Episcopal Diocese of Southern Ohio.

Krumm, 65, called for election sometime this summer of a bishop coadjutor, an assistant who would succeed him upon his retirement in 1981.

"I need not say that I make this request with some mixed emotions, but time moves on and this seems the right occasion to take this step," Krumm told the 104th convention of the diocese on Friday.

Krumm's term as head of the diocese has not been without controversy. Last year, he was forced to defrock a Columbus, Ohio priest who was protesting recent church decisions to ordain women.

Krumm said his proposed assistant would be assigned most of the duties which have belonged to the executive officer.

"My intention would be to continue as diocesan bishop, sharing with a coadjutor the pastoral care of congregations and clergy and continuing to take a major responsibility for affiliated institutions," Krumm said.

Church delegates attend annual council meeting

Delegates from Midland's two Episcopal parishes, St. Nicholas and Holy Trinity, are in attendance at the annual Diocesan Council meeting of the Diocese of Northwest Texas.

The conclave is being held this weekend in the Abilene Civic Center, with the Rt. Rev. Willis R. Henton of Lubbock, bishop of the diocese, presiding.

A special guest at the gathering is the Most Rev. John Maury Allin, presiding bishop of the Episcopal Church in the U.S.

Bishop Allin was to address a meeting of the diocesan House of Churchwomen Friday afternoon, and was to preach at a service at 7 a.m. today in the Episcopal Church of the Heavenly Rest of Abilene.

The celebrant at today's service was to be the Rt. Rev. George H. Quarterman, retired bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of Northwest Texas.

One of the highlights of the Diocesan Council meeting will be a today's journey by council delegates and other visitors to the hamlet of Dudley, 17 miles southeast of Abilene, which was the site of the first Anglican service in 1878 in what is now the Diocese of Northwest Texas.

A memorial service in which Bishop Allin, Bishop Quarterman, Bishop Henton and others will participate, will commemorate the 1878 service which was conducted by Bishop Alexander Charles Garrett in a log cabin owned by Capt. John Trent.

A banquet celebrating the 100th anniversary of the Episcopal Church in this region will be held tonight. Bishop Quarterman, who retired in the early 1970s as bishop of Northwest Texas, will be the principal speaker. The council meeting will close with a Choral Eucharist service at 10 a.m. Sunday.

The two million-member BGCT is the state Southern Baptist organization. The annual state conclave took place in Austin last week.

Elected to the 192-member Executive Board of the BGCT were the Rev. Kenneth James, pastor of Midland's Crestview Baptist Church, and Dr. Daniel Vestal, pastor of the First Baptist Church in Midland.

Midlander to lead Odessa revival

ODESSA —The Rev. Frank Johnson, pastor of Midland's Kelview Heights Baptist Church, will be the evangelist for revival services scheduled next week at Odessa's Bible Baptist Church.

Johnson was the organizing pastor of Kelview Heights Baptist Church 17 years ago. The church is now one of the largest in Midland from the standpoint of membership and weekly attendance.

Astronaut Col. Irwin to be in city for engagements today, Sunday

Irwin, who retired from the U.S. Air Force in 1972, now is chairman of the board of High Flight Foundation, an organization he founded eight years ago to share his Christian faith and to serve his fellow man.

High Flight Foundation is headquartered in Colorado Springs, Colo., where Irwin and his family also make their home.

Irwin, born March 17, 1930, in Pittsburgh, Penn., was graduated from the U.S. Naval Academy in 1951 and then was commissioned in the U.S. Air Force. He participated in the fourth manned lunar landing in the summer of 1971 which was distinguished by the first use of the lunar rover vehicle, and the exploration of Hadley Rille and the Apennine mountains of the moon.

He recently published his biography, "To Rule the Night," and has spoken in more than 40 countries in recent years.

Irwin has received many honors, including the NASA Distinguished Service Medal, the Air Force Distinguished Service Medal, the United Nations Peace Medal, the Robert J. Collier Trophy and others.

Mahon's career reflected in faces of the famous . . .

Henry Kissinger, former presidential aide and Secretary of State, chats with Mahon.

On Sept. 30, 1977, Mahon lunched with Jimmy Carter at the White House. September 31 was the President's birthday.

In December of 1967, a bill creating a federal court in Midland was signed by then-President Lyndon B. Johnson. Present for the signing were Congressman George Mahon, left, John Younger, Martin Allday, Thornton Hardie, Reagan Legg, Charles Marsh, C.J.

Kelly, Gerald Fitz-Gerald and H.C. "Hank" Avery Jr.

Impact of states' new tax, spending restrictions awaited

By The Associated Press

Tax and spending restrictions approved in this week's elections will not put any more money in most people's pockets, but they will force state and local governments to start trimming budgets almost immediately.

"They're going to have a given pie and now they're going to have to develop priorities within that pie," said Don Pilcher of the National Conference of State Legislatures.

Winnie Austermann, another conference economist, agreed. "I have a feeling that probably the most significant trends you're going to see are legislatures grappling with efficiency measures," she said.

Proposals cutting taxes, changing the way they are collected or limiting spending passed Tuesday in 12 states: Alabama, Arizona, Hawaii, Idaho, Illinois, Massachusetts, Michigan, Missouri, Nevada, North Dakota, South Dakota and Texas.

Idaho's measure was the strongest. The constitutional amendment approved by voters limits property taxes to 1 percent of market value. It was virtually a copy of California's Proposition 13.

Estimates of the loss in revenue to cities, counties and school districts range from $50 million to $125 million, depending on who is doing the predicting. "It looks like Idaho is going to be hit very hard, very quickly," said Pilcher.

California used a $5-billion-plus state surplus to help blunt the impact of Proposition 13. Idaho, where per-capita property tax collections already are about a third below the national average, can't do that. "They're constitutionally prohibited from having a surplus so they don't have any extra money to bail out the local governments," Ms. Austermann explained.

No one is sure when cuts will come. The amendment itself talks about the tax year beginning Oct. 1. That wording was copied from California. But Idaho's tax year begins on Jan. 1 and the Legislature that meets next year will have to amend the measure to make it conform to Idaho practices. It could make the measure effective retroactively to Jan. 1, 1979, or delay it until Jan. 1, 1980.

Public officials already have been looking at budgets with an eye to cutting. Some legislators say they expect state contributions to school financing will have to increase to make up for lost local money, meaning a possible boost in state income or sales taxes.

Savings on individual property tax bills will vary from city to city. The Associated Taxpayers of Idaho estimated earlier this year that the average property tax rate was about 1.7 percent of market value. On a $35,000 home, cutting the rate from 1.7 percent to 1 percent would mean cutting the annual tax bill from $595 to $350.

A constitutional amendment approved in Alabama is designed not to lower tax bills, but to make sure they do not rise sharply. The proposal, which lowers assessment rates for almost all property, was designed to offset the impact of a court-ordered reappraisal Gov. George C. Wallace said that without the amendment, the tax bill for the owner of a $32,000 home in Huntsville, Ala., would have risen from $142 to $245 a year because of the reappraisal. With the amendment, the bill will rise only $8.

Budget ceilings approved in Arizona, Hawaii, Michigan and Texas will mean new looks at old programs, but cuts depend on current levels of state spending.

In Arizona, for example, a newly approved constitutional amendment — Prop. 101 — prohibits the Legislature from appropriating tax revenues in excess of 7 percent of total personal income as determined by a three-member Economic Estimates Commission. Estimates of current spending range from 5 percent to 9 percent of personal income, but no one will know for sure until the commission issues its report.

Sherman Hazeltine, president emeritus of the First National Bank of Arizona and chairman of the Prop. 101 Committee, said the spending limit

"should create a new professional atmosphere for all those involved in preparing government budgets.... And for the first time, there will be some real discipline in setting priorities."

The state of Tennessee has had a spending lid since March, but, so far at least, no cutbacks have been needed.

In some areas, the nature of the measures approved Tuesday dilutes or delays their effect.

Family awaits ransom instructions for daughter

By GORDON D. MOTT

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The family of Spanish winemaker Don Pedro Domecq awaited instructions Friday on how to deliver $1 million in ransom demanded by the kidnapers of the tycoon's American-born daughter. "The family heard nothing during the (Thursday) night, but they expect a call from the kidnapers at any moment," said family lawyer Manuel Galixia Alcala. "They are still waiting."

Brianda Domecq de Rodriguez, 36, was seized sometime Tuesday afternoon by unknown abductors. She was reported unhurt, but the 77-year-old father was hospitalized after he learned of the abduction because the drama aggravated a heart condition, a family spokesman said. The kidnapers telephoned her husband, Dr. Fernando Rodriguez Campillo, three times, and also sent him a note Thursday that was signed by the kidnap victim, Galixia Alcala said.

The note said she was unhurt and "for no one to worry," he said. Galixia Alcala discounted police reports that said the family was gathering the ransom money and it was arriving at the villa in bundles.

"The family has not gathered the money," he said. "There is nothing more to say right now but this afternoon I hope to have a new statement. It will be interesting." He declined to elaborate.

The lawyer said the woman's father remained hospitalized here and was in "delicate condition." He is a member of Spain's wealthy wine and sherry-making family and has a history of heart disease.

The family has refused all police assistance and requested that both the police and the news media consider their actions could endanger the life of the kidnapped woman. The lawyer said the family believes in "its right to privacy in a personal and private matter."

The kidnap victim was born in New York City, but grew up in Mexico City and attended the American High School. She is the mother of two children, Peter, 15 and a daughter, Fernanda 10.

"No one knows exactly when or how the kidnapping occurred because no one saw it happen," said Galixia Alcala. He said the woman failed to pick up her children from school on Tuesday.

Mexico City newspapers and the police speculated Thursday the abduction was the work of a left-wing terrorist group, possibly The 23rd of September Communist League. The lawyer said there was no indication the group was involved.

The League, which takes its name from the date of a bloody shootout between police and student activists in the 1960s, is believed responsible for the kidnapping and murder in September of Hugo Margain Charles, 35, son of Mexico's ambassador to the United States.

The family asked friends to refrain from calling so the villa's telephones would be free for the kidnapers to call. The lawyer said all the communications had been very brief so far and had provided little information.

The Pedro Domecq Wine Co. is a Mexican subsidiary of the Spanish firm in the southern Spanish city of Jerez de la Frontera. The father of the kidnap victim is a third-generation member of the family, which is famous for its sherries.

Israel's negotiators break away from talks to confer with Begin

WASHINGTON (AP) — Israel's top negotiators broke away from Middle East peace talks Friday to confer with Prime Minister Menachem Begin in Canada about a hardened Egyptian position on the Palestinian issue.

The impact on the negotiations was not immediately clear as Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan and Defense Minister Ezer Weizman flew to Toronto to seek instructions from Begin, who is on an official visit.

The peace talks were already snagged over Israel's efforts to eliminate a provision in the preamble that linked the treaty to a second round of negotiations aimed at a comprehensive Middle East settlement.

The new Egyptian proposals would require Israel to make a number of commitments in the treaty package to implement its offer of full autonomy for the 1.1 million Palestinians living on the West Bank of the Jordan River and in Gaza.

Israel considers the two sets of negotiations to be essentially separate. As a result, while standing on its commitment to negotiate with Egypt, Jordan and Palestinian Arabs on the future of the Israeli-occupied territories, its negotiators are trying to weaken the link.

President Carter, at a news conference Thursday in Kansas City, urged the two sides to accept existing preamble language. He said it was "adequate" in reflecting their mutual commitment to deal with the Palestinian question.

Carter spoke before Boutros Ghali, the acting Egyptian foreign minister, presented to the Israelis Thursday night his negotiators' new instructions from President Anwar Sadat. Ghali made the presentation in a more than three-hour meeting with the Israelis that followed his presentation of the instructions to Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance. An Israeli spokesman told the Associated Press that Egypt had introduced "new elements" into the negotiations on linking the treaty to a solution of the Palestinian issue.

The spokesman, Naftali Lavie, said Egypt was seeking specific commitments "of an operational character" regarding the Palestinians.

The proposals were understood to involve efforts by Sadat to establish target dates for carrying out Israel's promise to grant self-rule to the Palestinians.

Attendance at Norman Rockwell's funeral will be by invitation only STOCKBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Attendance at Norman Rockwell's funeral will be by invitation only — with many of the 275 seats reserved for Stockbridge residents, the beloved neighbors Rockwell used as models for his world-famous illustrations.

Places at Saturday's services not allocated to the artist's family for its personal acquaintances were being made available only to Stockbridge residents, Margaret Batty of the Old Corner House said Friday.

The house, a museum devoted to Rockwell paintings, was coordinating arrangements for the funeral, scheduled for 2 p.m. at the small St. Paul's Episcopal Church. A private burial was to follow at nearby Stockbridge Cemetery.

Rockwell died Wednesday night at age 84. His health had been failing for some time.

Legionnaires disease found in two forms

ATLANTA (AP) — Legionnaires disease has been found to appear in two forms — one an influenza-like illness that is not fatal and the other a respiratory infection with pneumonia that in 1976 killed 29 persons during a state American Legion convention in Philadelphia.

Dr. David Fraser of the National Center for Disease Control said Thursday that both forms of the disease, which was named as a result of the Philadelphia outbreak, are caused by the same bacterium.

So far this year, 1,054 cases of Legionnaires disease have been reported in the United States. In 558 cases linked with outbreaks, 70 persons died, and in 496 isolated cases, 86 persons died.

The form of the disease that surfaced in Philadelphia about the time of the convention "has a very high death rate, about 15 percent," Fraser said. But proper treatment can cut that rate to 3 percent from 5 percent, he said.

The other form, sometimes referred to as Pontiac fever after a 1968 outbreak in Pontiac, Mich., shows up as headache, fever and muscle ache, and has caused no deaths.

"It looks like a case of the flu — it really does," Fraser said.

Researchers also are studying what they call the Togos strain, a disease reported in Maine this year that causes virtually the same symptoms as the Legionnaires disease found in Philadelphia. It is caused by a different bacterium, the CDC has reported.

Fraser said researchers hope a new reporting system will help determine the extent and variety of the bacterial infection.

"Without any doubt we'll have a much better handle on it by the end of next year," CDC spokesman Don Berrett said. "We'll know where it tends to show up and the seasonality of the disease."

"Based on reported outbreaks, it appears to be a late summer-early fall disease," he said.

This year, for the first time, nearly all state laboratories and many private laboratories can test for Legionnaires disease.

The isolated cases of the disease occurred in 43 states and the District of Columbia, the CDC said in its Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report. The majority were in Eastern and Midwestern states.

Among the sporadic cases, where the sex of the patient is known, 309 patients were males and 128 were females, the report said. Among the cases in the 10 outbreaks where the victim's sex is known, 412 were male and 146 were female.

The clusters of cases involved patients in Ohio, Vermont, Tennessee, California, Georgia, New York, Michigan, Indiana, Texas, Pennsylvania and the District of Columbia, the CDC said.

States where no cases of the disease were reported are Montana, Wyoming, South Dakota, Nevada, Alaska, Hawaii and Rhode Island.

The CDC is preparing for a worldwide conference on Legionnaires disease next week. About 500 scientists from 30 nations are expected to discuss the disease, which has been reported on four continents.

White House shrugs off Meany attack

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House on Friday shrugged off AFL-CIO President George Meany's scathing attack on President Carter, labeling the labor leader's latest criticism as "wacky and unpredictable."

Meany, in his strongest denunciation of Carter yet, complained Thursday that the president was the most conservative chief executive since Calvin Coolidge.

"People here have kind of discounted him (Meany)," a White House official said Friday. "It's gotten to where we expect the worst," said the official, who declined to be identified.

Carter reportedly was "not very much concerned" with the 84-year-old labor leader's latest comments, which administration aides believe are not widely shared within the labor movement.

By contrast, White House aides described the president last August as "livid" over criticism by Meany that the administration was not doing enough to help organized labor.

Presidential aides said then that Meany's criticism came only days after the White House made several concessions to the AFL-CIO, including a muzzling of the administration's chief inflation watcher, who had been critical of high union wage demands.

Since then, relations between Carter and Meany have been running from chilly to ice cold.

Meany has said that he views Carter as a weak and ineffective president who is not sensitive enough to the needs of working people.

Administration officials have defended Carter as a true friend of labor and have accused Meany of blaming Carter rather than himself for organized labor's failures, such as defeat of a labor law revision bill in Congress.

Last week, Meany took a hard line against Carter's new anti-inflation program, rejecting its voluntary wage and price guidelines and calling instead for mandatory wage-price controls.

The White House official said Friday that he believes Carter still enjoys broad support from unions that belong to the AFL-CIO.

"Individual union presidents are saying they don't know what Mr. Meany is doing," said the official. "They're perplexed and saying, 'What can we do?'"

The official said there was a "wacky and unpredictable quality to Mr. Meany's criticism" in that it followed mild statements Meany had made about Carter only a few days before.

Last Sunday, on a television interview show, Meany went out of his way to avoid criticizing Carter personally, and instead complained about his economic advisers, a tact Meany has taken frequently in recent months.

On Thursday, however, the labor leader went all out against the president, accusing him of reneging on campaign promises and expressing great disappointment with Carter's performance.

Church school teachers set teaching workshop

A special creative teaching workshop is planned here Sunday for church school teachers in Midland's seven United Methodist churches.

Teachers from United Methodist units in Odessa, Stanton, Pecos and elsewhere in this area also will be in attendance at the meeting, to be held in Midland's First United Methodist Church downtown.

According to Dr. Charles Lutrick, pastor of First UMC, and the Rev. Bill Weir, minister of program and education at the host church, the workshop is designed to train persons who teach various age groups in the use of a variety of creative teaching methods.

Weir is the dean of the workshop, which will be open to all interested persons in the area. The church nursery will be open for the care of infants and small children.

In addition to the training classes for teachers of various age groups, the workshop will offer a session for pastors and church school leaders in church school administration.

Rita Crowell, assistant director of the Program Council of the Northwest Texas Conference of the United Methodist denomination, will lead that session.

Other workshop section leaders will include Patty Wheaton of Dallas, Ellen Weinacht of Pecos, Willie Mae Price of Childress, Rosemarie Foster of Houston, Franklin Olson of Houston, Wilma Reinhardt of Odessa.

In addition, the Rev. Russell Parchman of Odessa's St. Luke's UMC will lead a special session between 7 and 8 p.m. Sunday for members and officers of adult Sunday school classes.

Wilshire Park Baptist Church plans fall revival next week

Wilshire Park Baptist Church, 801 S. Bentwood St., will hold a fall revival next week.

Evangelist Billy Foote of Longview, who has preached in the Tall City in the past, will be in the pulpit for the revival services. Music evangelist for the special services will be Charlie and Mary Johnson, also from Longview.

The revival emphasis will begin Sunday with services at 11 a.m. and 7 p.m., and continue Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday with luncheon meetings at 12 noon and services at 7:30 p.m. daily, said the Rev. John Riggs, pastor of Wilshire Park Church. All events will be open to the public.

Riggs said each service will have a special emphasis or theme. Sunday will be High Attendance Day, Monday will be Banner Night, and Tuesday will be "Keen-Age and Teen-Age Night," with senior citizens as well as teenagers to be honored guests. The final service will be themed Good Neighbor Night.

Foote, the revival preacher, is an associate evangelist with the James Robison evangelistic team. He has conducted several hundred revivals and spiritual crusades, and has served as music leader for numerous other meetings in many parts of the nation.

Armed forces to study cutting enlistments

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Defense Department has ordered all the armed services to study cutting minimum enlistments to improve the quality of volunteers, fill gaps in combat units and shorten overseas tours.

Officials who declined to be identified said Friday the focus of the studies, made under congressional directive, would be to restore some two-year enlistments.

Only three years ago, the Defense Department upped the minimum to three years because, officials said, there was too much turnover under two year hitches and because training was more expensive.

Although the services claim a steady increase in quality of their volunteers, the Army in particular has been unable to attract enough enlistments for the infantry, armor and artillery branches, even with bonuses and there is rising dissatisfaction in Europe with overseas duty tours that now extend up to four years.

Officials said the Army — which is considered the main problem — has produced its proposals for cutting minimum enlistments, while the Navy, Marines and Air Force still are drafting their recommendations. Any final decisions would be up to Defense Secretary Harold Brown.

Army officials said that, if approved by

Brown, their proposals would begin a three-year test of two-year volunteer enlistments involving men and women destined for service in Europe. Those volunteers would fill specific military specialties, particularly in the combat arms, where there are now shortages.

About 11,000 or 12,000 two-year volunteers would be signed up. One of the blandishments proposed by the Army would be cash payments to help in financing college education and other civilian training after leaving service.

The officials estimated that a successful two-year enlistment program

Brownfield tops Golden Tors, 21-6

By STEVE O'BRIEN R-T Sports Writer

LAMESA — Gilbert Franco provided Brownfield with all the points they needed on a spectacular 98-yard run midway through the second quarter and Cub quarterback Kelley Reid passed for one touchdown and ran in another for good measure in the second half as Brownfield downed the fumble-prone Lamesa Golden Tornadoes 21-6 in a District 3-AAA match here Friday night.

The Lamesa defenders on his way to six points. The Cubs then got a break on the conversion attempt when holder Lyn Goldston fielded a low snap and wriggled through the Golden Tor defenders for the two-pointer and an 8-0 Brownfield lead. Franco finished the evening with 144 yards on 18 carries. ALONG WITH Goolsby's bobble at the three, quarterback Mark Price turned the ball over at the Brownfield 21 and running back Kirk Hawkins also presented the Cubs with a gift at the 18. Lamesa looked like they were going to answer Franco's score with one of their own when they got the ball back on the kickoff ensuing the long run. The Tors moved from their own 25 to the Brownfield 20 in nine plays. But, it was at that point that Hawkins misshandled the ball and Brownfield's Gerald Bench was right there to take advantage of the situation and the Cubs carried the 8-0 advantage into the dressing room at halftime. Dennis Borland set Lamesa up with good field position at the second half's onset when he fielded the kickoff at the 10 and rumbled 30 yards to give the Tors the ball just 10 yards shy of the midfield marker. Lamesa was able to take advantage of that as they drove for their lone touchdown of the evening, a three yard burst by Goolsby.

REID SLIPPED the ball to Franco on a simple trap play, but the swift junior slipped outside, busted into the secondary and then simply outran all

IT TOOK JUST nine running plays for the Golden Tornadoes to get the score with Goolsby and Price doing most of the work. Each carried four times in the drive. The big play in the drive was a 23-yard scamper by Price on third and three from the Brownfield 28. On the next play Hawkins carried 13 yards to put the ball at the 12. Two plays later; Goolsby blasted in from the three with 8:15 left in the third period. However, Lamesa failed to make the crucial two-point conversion so they still trailed, 8-6. That's the way the third quarter ended but things didn't stay that way long. On the third play of the fourth quarter Reid lofted a 39-yard scoring pass to Jay Bryant and quickly Lamesa found themselves trailing by nine, 15-6. PRICE ALMOST GOT that score back for Lamesa in a hurry when he gathered in the ensuing kickoff at the 15 and raced 46 yards before being hustled out of bounds at the Brownfield 39. But disaster struck again just five plays later when Brownfield's Clifton Smith smothered an errant Price pitch at the 20. Reid salted things away for Brownfield five minutes later when he scrambled out of the pocket and weaved his way through the Lamesa defenders for a 22-yard touchdown run. The conversion attempt failed but with just 3:31 left on the clock it made little difference.

Rankin outlasts Marfa

RANKIN—Rankin's Red Devils pushed over two fourth period touchdowns to score a 28-16 victory over the Marfa Shorthorns here Friday night as fullback Richard Barrett rambled for 242 yards and two touchdowns in 39 carries. The win was the seventh in nine games for the Devils, who had a battle on their hands for three periods here tonight. Marfa was led by quarterback Manuel Mendoza, who completed 14 of 20 passes for 175 yards. Jon Polson was his favorite receiver, snagging 13 for 168 yards. Marfa scored with 4:26 left in the second period on a 29-yard field goal by Roger Sanchez, but Rankin had taken a 7-0 lead moments earlier when Barrett bulled over from the one and Johnny Armentariz kicked the point. Rankin made it 14-3 with 8:35 left in the third period as Barrett ran over from 18 yards out and Armentariz kicked his second of four PATs. However, Marfa stayed close when Paul Park scored on a four-yard run with 4:38 left in the third quarter and Sanchez converted the point to cut the Devils lead to 14-10. Then came the game's turning point. The Red Devils turned back the Shorthorns at the two, and then scored with 11:21 left in the game when quarterback Grant Myers went in from the one and with 38 seconds to go Scott Russon scored from the one. Marfa got a consolation TD

McCamey, now 3-6, scored with 5:43 left in the game when Bobby Valdez intercepted a pass and returned it 25 yards for the score. The two-point conversion attempt that would have meant a victory failed. However, McCamey drove to the Clint nine, four and 12 yard lines only two fumble the ball away in first quarter threats. Stockton wins but Ponies score

FORT STOCKTON—Fort Stockton's Panthers rolled to their ninth win of the season, amassing 322 yards offensively to defeat Andrews' Mustangs 21-13 here Friday night. It was the first loss in three 2-AAA games for Andrews and left the Ponies with a 6-3 record for the season. Paul Payne scored from the one and Rick Melvor kicked the point to give the Panthers a 7-0 lead with 10:28 to go in the second period. Andrews pulled even when quarterback Bill Sherrill passes 49 yards to Ronnie Bohannon and Lee Wilson converted with 6:49 left in the half. Fort Stockton came right back when Melvor found Billy Ray Gordon with a 33-yard scoring pass and Robbie Robertson ran the conversion for a 15-7 lead with 5:01 still to go in the second period. Fort Stockton sewed it up when Payne punched over from the one 3:56 from the end of the third period while Andrews came right back to score on a Bill Sherrill run of seven yards. The pass was completed for the two pointer, but out of the end zone. The Mustangs, howev-

It's Cougars' offense against UT defense

Unless the Houston Cougars and Texas Longhorns are fit to be tied, the Southwest Conference will have an undisputed football leader before nightfall. The last two undefeated teams in conference play square off at 10 p.m. today in one of four games scheduled.

Arkansas (2-2 in SWC) is at Baylor (2-3); SMU (2-3) is at Rice (1-4) and Texas Tech (2-2) is at TCU (0-5), all 2 p.m. kickoffs.

But the biggest game of the season to date will be at Austin's Memorial Stadium where a crowd of 80,000 will see the quick-striking Cougars (5-0 in SWC and 7-1 for the season) match their offensive speed with the sturdy defense of the Longhorns (4-0 and 6-1).

age while Bill Adams leads the SWC in scoring. Tech's Alan Swann is sixth in nation in interceptions with five. TCU quarterback Steve Bayuk is third leading passer in SWC, but has second most completions and second most attempts. TCU freshman Phillip Epps is third in SWC kickoff returns with 19 for 386 yards. Running back Craig Richardson is second in receiving with 4.5 catches a game while Tech freshman quarterback Ron Reeves is second in total offense in the SWC with 171.5 yards per game...

Cougars are 1-0-1 in Memorial Stadium, with games in 1968 and 1976. In that stretch the Horns are 54-2-1 at home and when the Cougars won 30-0 two years ago, it broke a 43-game Texas home winning streak.

Houston is averaging 411 yards per game while Texas is yielding only 236 per outing. Danny Davis runs the speedy Cougars' attack, which averages a touchdown every 19 offensive plays. Texas gives up a touchdown every 47 plays. Emmett King is averaging 99.7 yards per game and Randy Love 92.4 for Houston. Texas' offense is seven in the SWC at 322 yards per game...

Houston at Texas—Texas ranks No. 6 nationally and Houston No. 8. The

A VICTORY for the Cougars, plus nothing worse than a split in their final two games against Texas Tech and Rice, would put them into the Cotton Bowl as the host team for the second time in their three-year SWC life.

Should the Longhorns win and take a half-game lead, the defending champions could gain their second straight New Year's trip to Dallas by winning two of their final three against TCU, Baylor and Texas A&M.

And on the subject of the Cotton Bowl, if UH and UT tie Saturday and go on to tie for the championship, the Cougars will represent the SWC in Dallas on New Year's day. SWC rules provide that in the event of co-champions tied in their game, the team that went to the Cotton Bowl most recently stays at home.

ELSEWHERE, there's a war in progress for third place. A&M is currently alone with a 3-2 record, but the Aggies are idle Saturday, while four teams are a half-game or one game back. Arkansas and Tech are tied for fourth at 2-2, Baylor and SMU are tied for sixth at 2-3.

Arkansas at Baylor—Razorbacks broke two game losing streak with 37-7 victory over Rice last week while Baylor's two game winning streak ended with 27-9 loss at Tech. Three of the SWC's top runners in action with Arkansas' Ben Cowins' averaging 5.6 yards per rush, Jerry Eckwood 5.8 and Baylor freshman Walter Abercrombie 7.1 and 136 a game since breaking into the lineup three games ago.

Baylor has balanced attack with 189 yards rushing per game and 164 passing. Arkansas is second in SWC defense, surrendering just 240 yards per game. Defensive leaders are tackles Jimmy Walker of Arkansas and Gary Don Johnson of Baylor. Razorbacks lean heavily on rushing game, but quarterback Ron Calcagni has hit 60 per cent of passes as Hogs average 107 aerial yards per game. Baylor's Scott Smith throws more often with 11.6 completions a game and nine TDs.

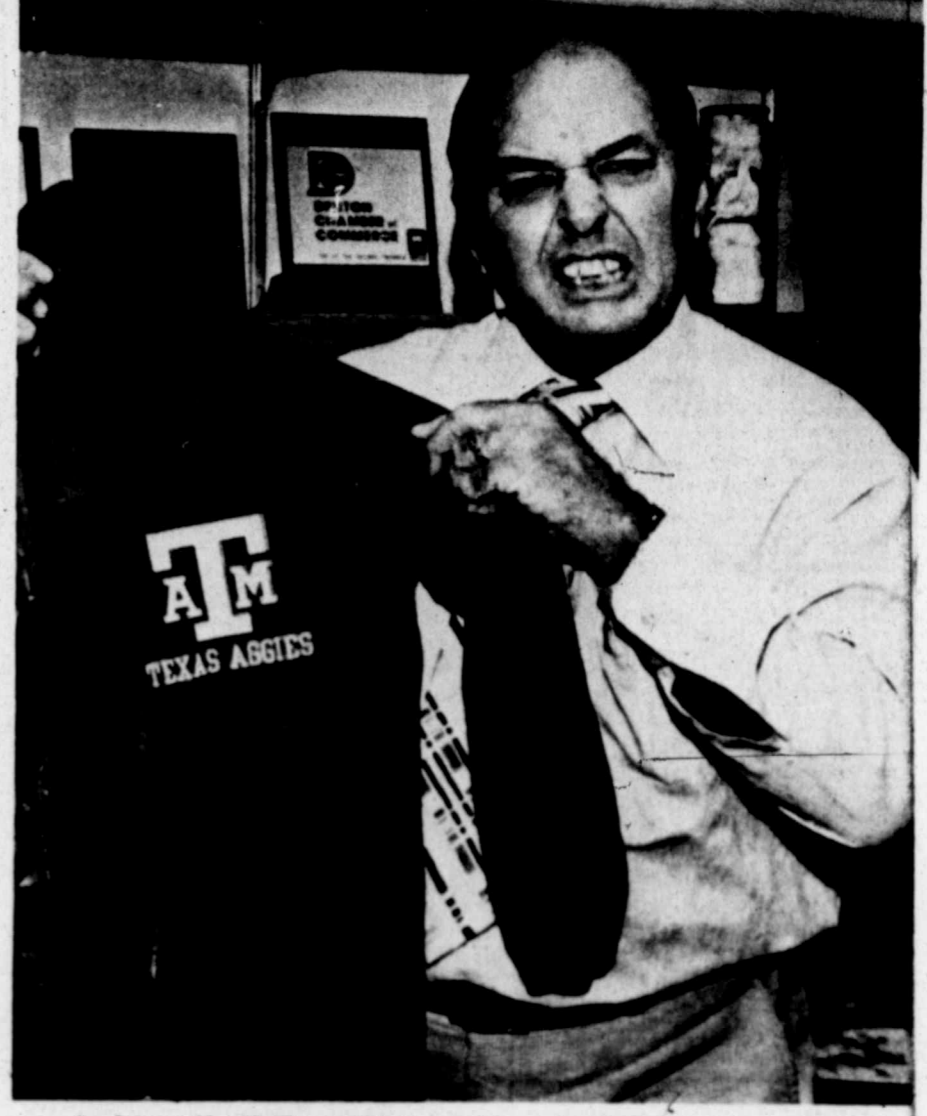

Arkansas has won eight and tied one in the last 10 meetings to lead the series 26-2-2, but Baylor is 15-8-2 in Waco....

SMU at Rice—Between SMU's Mike Ford and Rice's Randy Hertel, 473 passes have been thrown this season, with 269 completions, a combined accuracy rating of 57 per cent. Ford's favorite receiver is Emanuel Tolbert while Hertel zeroes in on David Houser. Houser needs one more catch to tie Baylor's Lawrence Elkins as the fourth leading receiver on the SWC all-time list, and 24 more yards will enable him to pass SMU's Jerry Levas, No. 2 on the list, behind TCU's Mike Renfro.

Ford needs only 98 yards to move in behind SMU's Chuck Hixson and leader Rice's Tommy Kramer on the all-time list. SMU leads the series 32-24-1 and has won eight of the last 10, but the Owls scored back-to-back wins in 1975-76. Defensively, SMU's David Hill is second in the nation in interceptions, and Mustang linebacker Pitt Choate as 188 tackles in eight games...

Texas Tech at TCU—Raiders have won three straight since loss to A&M while Frogs are rebounding from 63-6 loss to Houston. James Hadnot, the converted tight end, leads SWC in rushing and tandem offense after notching his second 200-yard game against Baylor last week. Hadnot is 10th nationally. TCU has won 13 of 18 at Amon Carter Stadium and in 1976 Tech had to come up with an interception to hold off the rallying Frogs, 14-10, and that was with a SWC co-championship team.

Tech's Maury Buford is the nation's fourth leading punter with a 45.6 aver-

Leaver's four-under good for PGA lead

PINE MOUNTAIN, Ga. (AP) — Bob Leaver of High Point, N.C., scored a 4-under-par 66 Friday to take a 2-stroke lead after the second round of the $120,000 PGA Club Professional Championship at Callaway Gardens.

Leaver, 35, had a two-day total of 133, 9 under par. He had 6 birdies and 2 bogeys Friday.

Jerry Steelsmith of Syracuse, N.Y., who led the first round, was in second place Friday with 135. Trailing him were Jim Ferree of Export, Pa.; Hugh Royer of Columbus, Ga., and Larry Ringer of Annapolis, Md., tied at 136.

Leaver, the Carolinas PGA Section champion, drove into trouble on the ninth hole of Friday's round, but rallied with an approach shot that fell 11 feet from the pin and sank the putt for the birdie.

"After that I was never out of play," he said. "I drove well and hit a lot of iron shots close to the pins."

The field of 350 golfers will be cut to the low 90 scorers and ties after Saturday's round.

Sunday's final round will be played over the 7,040-yard, par-72 Mountain View course, one of three being used in the tournament.

First prize in the competition is $17,000.

Cincinnati highlight film will be stark drama

CINCINNATI (AP)—The producer of highlight films for the 28 National Football League teams admits there will be little clamor to work on the story of the 1978 Cincinnati Bengals, who, at 1-9, are the worst team in professional football.

"Right now, I guess people are kind of walking around and saying, 'I hope I don't get that one,'" said Dave Plaut, a writer-director for NFL Films, which produces all the league's highlight films, which are used chiefly in team promotion.

"We hired a few new people this year and I imagine they'll give that assignment to one of the rookies. The guy who's been doing the Bengals films quit this year to take a job with a television station."

THE JOB of doing the Bengals' film won't be as difficult as it sounds, though, Plaut said.

"Actually it's easier to do films of teams with records like the Bengals than it is to do films of teams with mediocre records," Plaut said. "Like last year's Atlanta Falcons, who were 7-7. They set an all-time-record for fewest points allowed, but they were also low-scoring themselves."

"Stopping a runner on third-and-two may be exciting at the stadium, but not on film later. You can show good hits, but only so many. With the Bengals, you could focus on the close defeats, or injuries or bad breaks. If you pick the right footage and the right music, you can make it look good."

World Series sued for false advertising

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — John Lee Hilton claims the World Series can't be called the World Series unless it's opened to all countries and continents. And he's trying to turn that into a $3 million legal question.

He's filed suit against NBC affiliate WFLA-TV here, accusing the station of false advertising because it televised the baseball championship last month even though teams from other countries weren't eligible to play.

Hilton filed suit Wednesday from his cell at the Hillsborough County courthouse where he's serving 150 days for writing four bad checks and other minor offenses.

HE'S asking why the games are called the World Series, and why the New York Yankees are called the World Champions when they haven't played teams from any other countries.

Hilton wants U.S. District Judge Ben Krentzman to answer those questions — and award him $3 million.

The TV station has refused comment on the suit. So has major league baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn's office.

"We're not going to have anything to say on this," said Art Berke, a league spokesman in New York. "We don't think it would be appropriate to comment."

However, George Steinbrenner, Yankee owner, said he appreciated Hilton's question about the world champion label. But he added: "I don't know what else we could have done. We beat everybody that showed up."

Todd to suit up for Jets-Eagles tilt

NEW YORK (AP) — Quarterback Richard Todd will suit up for the New York Jets' National Football League game Sunday against the Philadelphia Eagles, it was announced Friday by Coach Walt Michaels.

Todd, who is recovering from an injury to his collarbone, was given the go-ahead from his doctors following another set of X-rays.

"The doctors said that the bone is beginning to calcify and that Richard has their okay for Sunday," said Michaels.

"Richard has been throwing for the past two days with pads on and he'll just have to feel his way back."

Matt Robinson, who connected with wide receiver Wesley Walker for the game-breaking touchdown play in the Jets' upset victory over Denver last week, again will start against the Eagles.

Oilers' defense stops big runners

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Oilers defense, which dismantled the Cleveland Browns last week, has proven itself very adept this season at shutting down the star running backs of the National Football League.

Cleveland's Greg Pruitt gained 16 yards on 13 carries in last week's 14-10 Oilers victory.

Earlier this year O.J. Simpson netted seven yards on seven carries, Pittsburgh's Franco Harris got 56 yards on 16 carries Buffalo's Terry Miller rushed 17 times for 56 yards.

The Oilers' assignment Sunday will be against New England's leading rusher Horace Ivory.

"They bring out the competitiveness in you," Oiler defensive end Elvin Bethea said. "We don't go out to kill the great backs. We just try to control them."

Bethea said the Oiler defense doesn't fear the great runners.

"We respect them," he said. "We know them as people from spending time with them in the off-season. We know what they can do to us in a game too. Those are the name ball players who have helped make football what it is today."

Outside linebacker Ted Washington calls it "keeping them in a tunnel."

"(Robert) Brazile and I figure the tunnel is the best place for the ball carrier to be," Washington said.

THE OILER linebackers see the tunnel as an imaginary line in front of the defensive line.

The Oiler defense has held 10 opponents to 495 yards rushing on 139 attempts for a 3.5 average per carry and 49.5 yards per game.

"I don't think we go into games thinking we've got to do our best against teams that have 1,000-yard backs," cornerback Greg Stenrick said. "I know we never go into games thinking we don't have to play our best because the other team doesn't have a 1,000-yard back."

While the Oiler defense has helped stop opposing runners, the offensive line has been doing a good job of opening the holes for Houston's improved running game.

OILER COACH O.A. "Bum" Phillips said he was impressed with young guards George Reihner and Morris Towns, who played with painful injuries last week against Cleveland.

"The Oilers go into the New England game with a 6-4 record and still entertaining playoff hopes.

Irish bid for major bowl against Vols

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Notre Dame's Fighting Irish, hot after a major bowl bid that appeared remote after season-opening losses to Missouri and Michigan, seek a seventh straight victory Saturday against what could be a troublesome Tennessee team.

The Vols bring a 2-4-1 record to the land of the Golden Dome and are winless in the Southeastern Conference. But a victory over the Irish could make a success of Coach Johnny Majors' first season at the Tennessee helm.

"Tennessee hasn't been out of a single football game it has played this season and that worries a coach more than anything," said Notre Dame Coach Dan Devine.

"Eliminate a couple of turnovers at inopportune times and you could reverse their record," said Devine. "No one can ever expect to waltz past a Johnny Majors team, especially this one, because he is just a few pegs away from having everything fall in place for him."

BOTH TEAMS are coming off impressive victories. Tennessee knocked off Duke 34-0 last Saturday and Notre Dame hiked its record to 6-2 with a 27-7 triumph over previously undefeated Navy.

"I hope we can go into the game with more confidence after our victory over Duke," said Majors. "We made some progress against Duke and this should help us play well against Notre Dame. The Irish probably played their best game of the season last week, so we may be catching them at their peak."

This is the first meeting between Tennessee and Notre Dame, but playing the Irish is old hat to Majors, who guided Pittsburgh to victories over Notre Dame in 1975 and in 1976, when the Panthers captured the national title.

NOTRE DAME, winner of the national title last season after the Cotton Bowl triumph over Texas, fell out of the rankings after its two losses, but the Irish are back to No. 14.

"We're getting better all the time," said Notre Dame linebacker and team captain Bob Golic. "When the season started we were faced with having to replace a lot of good football players who had graduated."

"We had the talent to do that but the inexperience hurt us," said Golic. "Now that we have our timing down, you can see the results."

One of Golic's chores will be to stop Vol quarterback Jimmy Streeter, who has passed for 857 yards this season and accounted for 347 more on the ground.

Notre Dame is coming off its best offensive performance of the season when the Irish had 530 yards in total offense against a Navy team that had ranked first in the nation in total defense.

Vagas Ferguson led the onslaught with 219 rushing yards, a single-game record for a Notre Dame running back.

Swann's song changed NFL rules

By TED GREEN
The Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — The Pittsburgh Steelers, who play the Rams Sunday night at the Coliseum in Los Angeles have pro football's best record (9-1). One reason is that Lynn Swann is catching passes instead of flak.

Swann, you may recall, spoke out against violence in the NFL after millions saw him clubbed in back of the head two years ago by the forearm of Oakland defensive back George Atkinson. Swann got a concession. Then he got fed up. The following spring (1977) he talked about quitting.

Swann's was not a popular stand among his peers. Some macho men thought it was sissyish. Other players thought that one of their own shouldn't hang out the league's dirty laundry in plain view.

The league, nonetheless, apparently was concerned. Before this season it initiated a rule forbidding defensive players to lay a hand on receivers five yards beyond the line of scrimmage. The rule minimizes the possibility of Atkinson-Swann-type blows.

AS IT turned out, the retirement talk wasn't Lynn Swann's song. He didn't want out of the sport, he didn't want out of the sport, he merely wanted to improve it. With the passage of time and the new rule, Pittsburgh's gifted, graceful wide receiver is back concentrating exclusively on what he does best.

Not coincidentally, Swann is having a sensational season and so are the Steelers, who are passing more — and with more success — than they have in years.

Swann's 46 receptions lead the AFC and all NFL receivers. His eight touchdown catches are also a league high. Swann and wide receiver John Stallworth (27 receptions) are principal targets for quarterback Terry Bradshaw, the league's leading passer (58.9 percent, 2,010 yards, 18 touchdowns).

"In some ways I feel like a pioneer," Swann said by phone from Pittsburgh. "Instead of hiding behind the mask that football is a man's game — you know, if you can't take it, get out — I spoke out. I never played football to prove my manhood.

"I'm glad I took a stand. It wasn't popular and it wasn't easy. There was a lot of pressure to keep quiet. A lot of players believe in the unwritten law that if you don't get caught, it's legal. They said I was a prima donna, a crybaby... That I couldn't take the blows inherent in football."

SWANN OBVIOUSLY can take them. He catches the tough passes over the middle, in traffic, better than most. And he's considered among football's finest blocking receivers.

"Due to the league's stand against violence (in the secondary)," Swann said, "most of the cheap shots have been done away with. And if one goes undetected during a game, the player (after films are reviewed) can be fined or suspended. That's a strong deterrent. A lot of players won't take those chances anymore."

It hardly sounded sissyish when Swann said: "Football is a physical game. You can't over-control it. If you had any more control than now, it could be detrimental. Instead of a contact sport, you'd have a human chess game."

THIS SEASON Swann has been checkmating cornerbacks from coast to coast. Not that he was a slouch before. His first four years with the Steelers he caught 138 passes (34.5 a year). But Swann was predominantly a pawn in Pittsburgh's run-oriented offense. Now that the club is playing more liberally, Swann and fullback Franco Harris are the bishops to Bradshaw's king. That's real upward mobility for someone whose best moves may still be ahead and who already has been most valuable Player in a Super Bowl. Swann is 26.

"You have to do what's best for the team," Swann said when asked if he believes his talents had previously been wasted some. "It's an old cliché, of course, but when you have a guy like Franco Harris in the backfield, you have to use him. The Steelers were a great run-blocking team. I contributed in those years by blocking and catching on third and long. I wasn't wasted. Coming from USC helped my attitude because that, too, was a run-oriented team."

Swann left USC as its all-time leading receiver with 95 catches.

Swann, incidentally, is buddy-buddy with Harris, an introvert who lets his legs do his talking. If Harris — who last week became only the seventh player in NFL history to rush for 7,000 yards — had his way he'd show up every Sunday, trample a few safeties and hardly say a word.

SWANN, BY contrasts, is an ebullient, gregarious sort — a budding sportscaster and born public relations man for the team. He does three sports commentaries a week for radio station WKTQ in Pittsburgh. He cohosted with David Susskind a three-hour, fund-raiser for WQED, the city's educational TV station, and more than held his own. In white top hat, white tails and swinging a cane, he did a Fred Astaire routine which knocked 'em dead at a luncheon that raised $35,000 for multiple sclerosis.

Swann, in other words, is active, involved and visible in Pittsburgh. It couldn't have been the easiest move for someone whose heart is still in Southern California. Swann lives in Los Angeles' Marina del Rey in the offseason.

"I have a lot of winter coats," he said. "Mostly lambskins. And I wear gloves a lot. Driving is a problem. But if you let these things get you down you'd never play very good football. Of course, two weeks in Miami would be nice." Miami is the site of Super Bowl XIII. Both the Steelers and Rams have that trip in mind, which makes Sunday night's nationally televised game a prime choice for prime time.

IN THE meantime, Swann will continue his bachelor's life, not too shabbily, in a 12-room colonial house in Bethel Park, a suburb south of Pittsburgh. With controversy behind him, he's flying as high as the Steelers.

"I've never played better," he said, "or been more consistent. I feel a great deal confident. I can readily identify defenses now. It takes less time to make adjustments on the field. The game is fun when it's like this."

And it will no doubt be fun to challenge Rams cornerback Pat Thomas, who's been stopping receivers all season. That, after all, is what it's supposed to be about: The best against the best.

"It's nice not having to worry so much about getting your head knocked off," Swann said. "I'm very excited about Sunday. It'll seem like being in college again ... with a little more on the line."

Go ahead, Doc, do your darndest. You can't hurt me...

Hobbled Harvey Martin still one of the best

This time a year ago Harvey Martin was being billed as pro football's No. 1 defensive end, a laud it he hasn't necessarily relinquished this year.

After seven 1977 games he had 27 tackles, 15 assisted takes, two fumble recoveries and a league-leading 12 quarterback traps, including two apiece in five of the Cowboys' first seven games.

Also the Cowboys were 7-0 en route to an 8-0 start and the World Championship in Super Bowl XII. It was a highly successful season that saw Martin named the NFL's Defensive Player of the Year.

Through 10 games in 1978, Martin will tell you that the state of the Cowboys is "just fine", despite four losses. The Cowboys are still in second place in the NFC Eastern Division, a game back of the Washington Redskins, who have lost three of their last four. Of course, Dallas has lost its last two with Green Bay coming up Sunday.

TEAMS HAVE played Dallas tough so far in 1978, battling against the Cowboys' reputation and pushing the defending champions to the limit, and beyond, each week.

And while Martin reports his team will come around, his own performance is better by his own admission.

A Martin specialty is the near-trap, the high-pressure pass rush that forces opposing quarterbacks into hurried passes. It was Harvey's near-trap in the recent St. Louis game that dispatyed what a striver Martin is, a guy who is somewhat of an over-achiever, if you will.

With less than five minutes to go in regulation time, Martin suffered a hyperextended knee making a tackle on Cardinals fullback Jim Otis. He had to be helped from the field and it appeared he might not return. At the very least, his rolling on the ground clutching his knee sent chills through the Cowboys' bench.

But while the Cowboys' offense ran the next three minutes off the clock, trainers taped Martin's knee sufficiently enough for him to return to action the next time St. Louis gained possession of the ball.

then, on second down, Martin gave Cardinals left tackle Keith Wortman his favorite and most effective move, the outside rush. It's the one where Martin puts all of his talents to work at once. It includes a quick step one way off the snap to momentarily freeze the tackle, followed by the catlike charge around the linemen's left shoulder.

MARTIN'S QUICKNESS gets him to the tackle's shoulder before his opponent can fully recover. And Harvey's outstanding speed enables him to make a sweeping pass rush to the outside.

A quick setup and pass on the play by Jim Hart prevented the sack, but Martin hit Hart from behind just as the Cardinals quarterback was about to release the pass, sending the football flying aimlessly and Hart to the bench for the remainder of the game.

It was the second year in a row that Martin had changed the ultimate course of the Cowboys-Cardinals game in St. Louis by getting to Hart and rendering the Cardinals' outstanding passer hors de combat.

"I do not want to hurt anyone out there," Martin says. "We don't play that way. No, there was no particular malice because I had been hurt and booed by their fans when taken off the field."

"You know," says Martin, "one reason I've managed to stay healthy is because I have loose flexible joints."

Still, Martin has played hurt much of the season, in addition to the hyperextended knee against the Cards he suffered a hyperextended elbow against the Giants a week earlier and he missed the Eagles game later, although it wasn't until pregame warmups that it was determined he wouldn't be able to go.

Holzman replaces Willis Reed

NEW YORK (AP) — Willis Reed has resigned as coach of the New York Knicks and will be replaced by old-timer Red Holzman, the man who led the National Basketball Association team to league titles in 1970 and 1973.

Mike Burke, president of the Knicks, confirmed the action Friday night following the team's return from a West Coast road trip. A press conference to announce the change of leadership will be held today.

Reed, the pivotal figure on the Knicks' fine championship teams of the early 1970s, met with Madison Square Garden's top officer, Sonny Werblin, early Friday morning not long after the team's plane landed in New York from a trip to the West Coast.

It was apparently then that the decision was made for Reed to split with the team.

The straw that apparently broke his back, came when he demanded a vote of confidence from Werblin and was reportedly told, "no coach gives me an ultimatum."

The onetime NBA superstar was in the second year of a 3-year contract with the Knicks, but seemingly never in favor with management. Werblin never gave him public support of any kind.

Earlier this week, Reed expressed his unhappiness with his position with the team, saying that rumors of his problems were "hurting the club at the gate and killing team spirit."

On the just-concluded road trip, the Knicks only won two of six games but had the pleasure of snapping Seattle's 17-game home winning streak. The team had a 6-8 record thus far this season. Reed's record as coach was 49-47.

Last year, the Knicks under Reed floundered for most of the early season and finished fast to edge into the playoffs. They were beaten in the second round in four straight games by the Philadelphia 76ers.

Since retiring in 1977, Holzman had worked in the capacity as a consultant with the team. Holzman won 549 games in the NBA, 466 as a Knick.

Giants' Mendenhall lashes out at use of 3-4 defense

RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Barring unforeseen upsets, the New York Giants are going to miss the playoffs for the 15th straight year. One man who might not be around for No. 16 is defensive tackle John Mendenhall.

Mendenhall lashed out at Coach John McVay's liberal use of the 3-4 defense this week, his first outburst since training camp, when he proclaimed, "I'm looking forward to the season to see what new disappointments it will bring."

This time Mendenhall might have a legitimate gripe. With the 3-4 defense, Troy Archer plays the nose guard position, with Jack Gregory, Gary Jeter and George Martin rotating on the flanks. The result has been Mendenhall played less than seven minutes against St. Louis last week. He's not thrilled about that.

"WE'VE BEEN rotating up front, except in the last two weeks I haven't done much rotating," Mendenhall said. "The three-man front — it beats up on the linemen. It's a defense they think they can win with. I don't think that's smart."

Lacy begins talks with Reds

CINCINNATI (AP) — Cincinnati Reds President Dick Wagner already has telephoned Lee Lacy from Japan to begin negotiations with the Los Angeles Dodgers' player who has become a free-agent.

"He told me that he'd love to have me in the organization; that I'm a fine ballplayer and a fine person," Lacy said in an interview from his home in Los Angeles.

The Reds were one of 13 teams that picked the 30-year-old infielder-outfielder-pinch-hitter in the recent free agent draft.

Lacy, who hit .261 with 13 homers, could give the Reds depth at second base where Joe Morgan was hampered by injuries this past season. He also could play right field against left-handed pitching.

IF PETE Rose decides to leave the Reds, Lacy also could help fill the gap at third base.

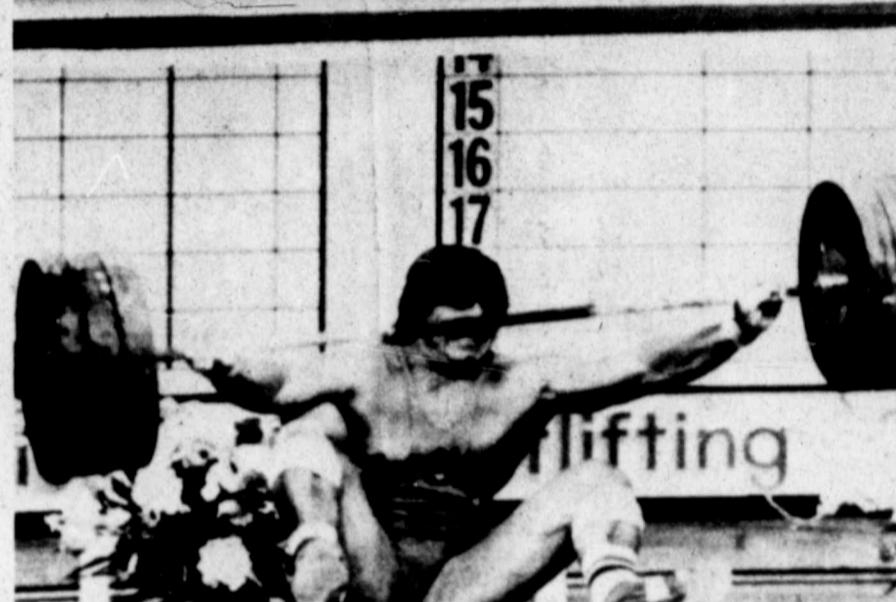

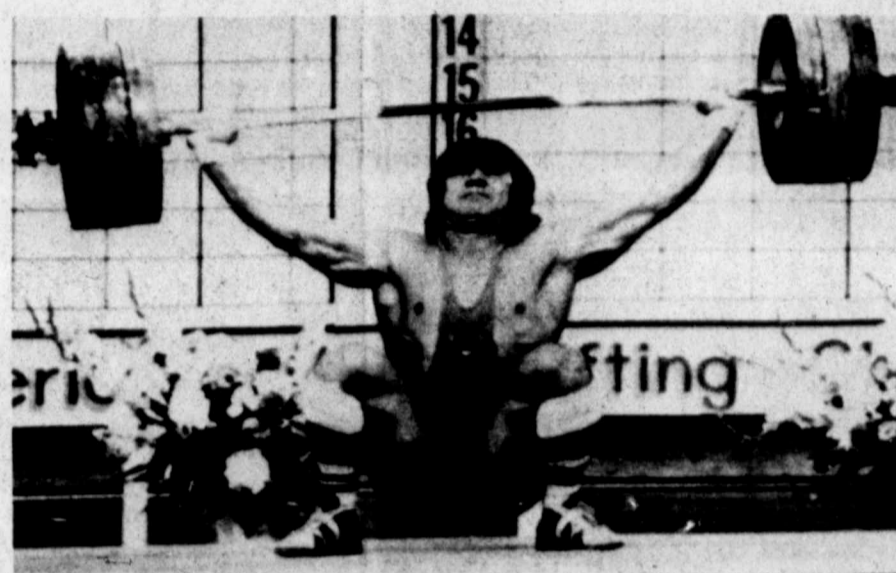

Being drafted by so many teams was a happy surprise for Lacy.

"The Dodgers had me convinced no one was going to draft me," Lacy said.

ROBESTELLI didn't indicate McVay would be fired — not in so many words.

"We haven't got to the point where we are ready to abandon things," he said. "We've come to the conclusion it's essential we stay with our program, with our philosophy."

"We'll go to the end of the season ... and see what has to be done," Robustelli added.

Norton stiffens Stephens in third

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Ken Norton used a devastating left hook to stop Randy Stephens at 2:42 of the third round Friday night and remain a leading heavyweight boxing contender.

Norton, 22½, of Los Angeles, threw a hard left hook that landed on Stephens' jaw, snapping his head back. Stephens weaved for a moment, then went down.

The fight was part of the undercard at Caesars Palace Sports Pavilion to the Larry Holmes-Alfredo Evangelista World Boxing Council heavyweight title fight, which was televised nationally by ABC.

Following the fight, promoter Don King announced that Norton would meet powerful Earnie Shavers in an unusual afternoon bout on Feb. 18. Location of the fight, to be televised by ABC, has not been decided, King said, but Caesars Palace will get the first chance to be host to the match.

SHAVERS, A leading heavyweight contender, lost a title fight to Muhammad Ali on Sept. 29, 1977, and lost to Holmes, setting Holmes up for a title shot in a fight here in March.

Friday, Norton lost the first round, scored on a five-point must system, but came back strong in the second round and kept pressure on Stephens throughout the rest of the fight.

Stephens, 20¾, of Dallas pressured Norton constantly in the first round and kept the former WBC heavyweight champion on the defensive with his quick combinations. But in the second round, Norton alternated his punches between Stephens' head and body and used a series of left hooks to wear Stephens down.

Norton, listed at 33 years old, lost the WBC title to Holmes last June 9 and now is 41-5 with 33 knockouts. Stephens, 25, is now 10-5. This was Norton's first fight since losing to Holmes.

IN THE third round, Norton started strong with a solid left hook to Stephens' face, bringing a small amount of blood from his mouth. Norton moved in on Stephens with a flurry to the body and then caught him with a left hook. As Stephens staggered and weaved, Norton stepped away and the sixth-ranked Stephens went down.

Norton, listed at 33 years old, lost the WBC title to Holmes last June 9 and now is 41-5 with 33 knockouts. Stephens, 25, is now 10-5. This was Norton's first fight since losing to Holmes.

"I can't bitch," he added. "I'm signed for the year. I'm going to get my money. I'm healthy now. I'll go home healthy. No sense getting upset about it. But it's all happening like I said before the start of the season. It's all come true."

Meanwhile, director of operations Andy Robustelli said McVay is on the hot seat for the rest of the season.

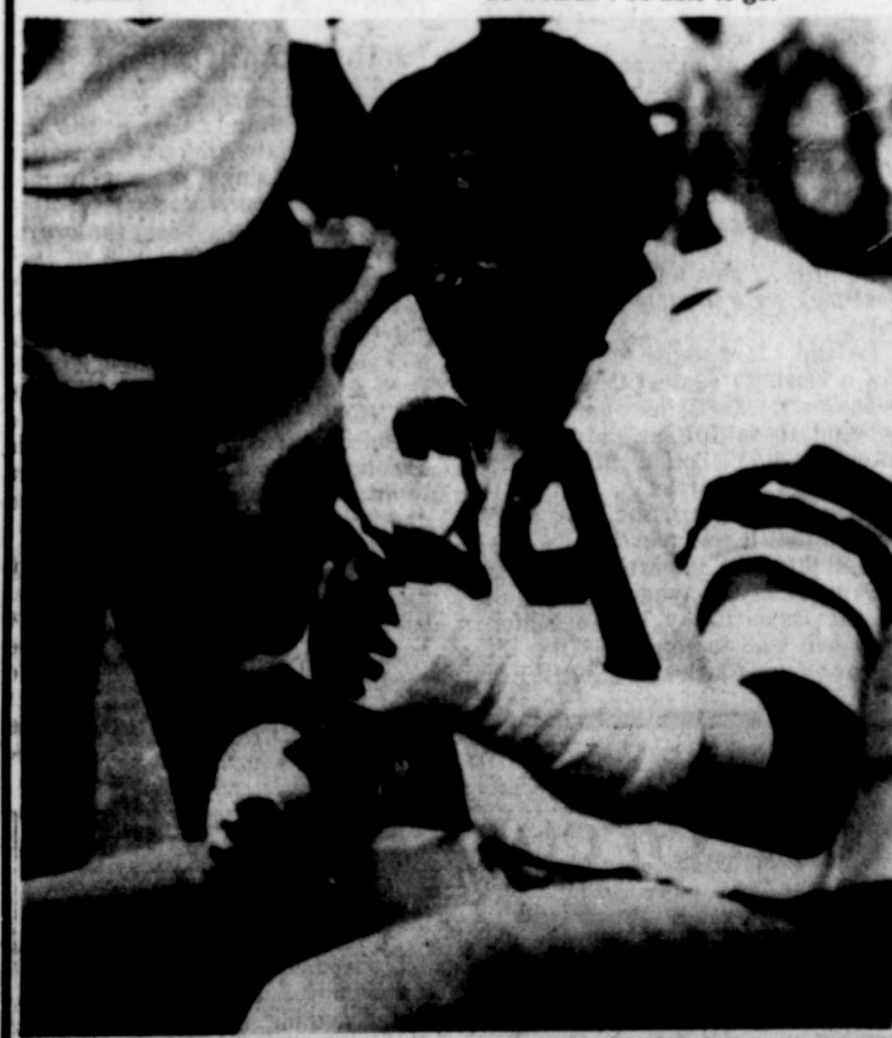

McVay took over the team in midseason 1976 after it dropped the first seven games and guided them to three victories over the remainder of the season. Last year, the Giants improved to 5-9.

"No question, it's John's biggest test," said Robustelli. "This is the worst period for him, he's got to keep control."

ROBESTELLI didn't indicate McVay would be fired — not in so many words.

"We haven't got to the point where we are ready to abandon things," he said. "We've come to the conclusion it's essential we stay with our program, with our philosophy."

"We'll go to the end of the season ... and see what has to be done," Robustelli added.

Get the sheriff, Festus, there's gonna be gun play

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Oil the six-shooters. Make sure there's plenty of ammunition, and take no prisoners. Those are the orders of the day for a big weekend in college football, with enough shootouts scheduled to satisfy even a syndicate hit man.

Shootout No. 1 finds top-rated Oklahoma at fourth-ranked Nebraska — possibly in a blizzard — with an Orange Bowl berth and no worse than a tie for the Big Eight Conference title at stake.

Shootout No. 2 is a Southeastern Conference clash in Birmingham, Ala., between third-ranked Alabama and No. 10 Louisiana State. Co-Leaders Alabama and No. 11 Georgia have 4-0 conference records to LSU's 3-1.

Shootout No. 3 is a battle for the Southwest Conference lead in Austin, Texas, between eighth-ranked Houston, 5-0, and No. 6 Texas, 4-0. The winner will be in the lead for the host spot in the Cotton Bowl.

Shootout No. 4 is the Pacific-10 contest in Los Angeles between defending champion Washington, ranked No. 19, and No. 5 Southern California. However, both 5-1 Washington and 4-1 Southern Cal trail ninth-ranked UCLA, the league leader at 6-0, which plays at Oregon State.

AND THAT'S not all. Second-ranked Penn State — the Nittany Lions and Oklahoma are the nation's only unbeaten teams — entertains bowl-hopeful North Carolina State and Ted Brown, who is sixth on the all-time NCAA rushing list and churned out a record 251 yards in last year's meeting.

And Georgia can move within one game of a Sugar Bowl berth — no matter what Alabama does — by beating Florida at Jacksonville, Fla. Alabama and Georgia have two league games remaining, but the Bulldogs would be the host team in the Sugar Bowl in the event of a tie.

The rest of the Top Twenty schedule finds seventh-ranked Michigan at Northwestern, No. 12 Purdue at Wisconsin, No. 13 Maryland at Virginia, Tennessee at No. 14 Notre Dame, North Carolina at No. 15 Clemson, No. 16 Arkansas at Baylor, Minnesota at No. 17 Michigan State, No. 18 Navy at Syracuse and West Virginia at No. 20 Pitt.

The Oklahoma-Nebraska gunfight is the eighth in a series of shootouts which began with a classic 35-31 Nebraska victory in 1971 — which also happens to be the Cornhuskers' last success over the Sooners.

Not only are the teams 1-4 in the rankings, but Nebraska tops the nation in total offense (515.2 yards per game) and scoring (41.3-point average) while Oklahoma is second at 483.1 and 40.4. In rushing, Oklahoma is first at 414.7 and Nebraska second at 342.7.

IN ADDITION, Oklahoma's Billy Sims, the nation's leading rusher with an average of 155.2 yards per game, can become the first player in history to gain 200 yards four games in a row. Sims had 231 against Iowa State, 202 against Kansas State and 221 against Colorado — after a mere 192 against Kansas.

"It's the biggest game of the year, as it always is," said Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer. "The big improvement that Nebraska has made since last year is their defense. They are big and strong in front and their other guys can run. (Tom) Soriely is a fine quarterback, and when he hands off to (I.M.) Hipp and (Rick) Berus, look out. They do so many things offensively they can keep you off-balance."

And who does Switzer favor? "Them. They're playing better than we have been lately," he said.

BESIDES BEING one of the headline games in the nation, as it almost always is, the Alabama-LSU clash is another of those master-pupil confrontations between 'Bama's Bear Bryant and LSU's Charley McClendon, who played for him at Kentucky.

And although Bryant calls McClendon "one of the best coaches in the business," he holds a 12-2 lead, including seven in a row, against his old pupil. But, as usual, Bryant is not optimistic.

"LSU has developed into an outstanding football team," he said. "They have everything it takes for greatness — excellent kicking game, a rough defense and a versatile offense with the one great player, Charles Alexander."

Alexander the Great has scored at least one touchdown in his last 10 games and is one TD away from the SEC career record of 39 held by Tennessee's Stanley Morgan.

"We'll have to play our very best game of the season just to have a chance," said Bryant.

SOUTHERN CAL and Washington are two of the three teams in the Pac-10 Rose Bowl race and neither can afford to lose since UCLA is unbeaten in conference play. To get to Pasadena, Southern Cal must beat Washington, then beat UCLA next week. Washington must defeat Southern Cal and Washington State and hope UCLA loses twice, because the Huskies lost to the Bruins in September.

"WASHINGTON always seems to play well late in the season," says

Southern Cal Coach John Robinson, "and right now you've got to consider them one of the best teams in America. They have perhaps the best balanced offensive team we've faced, with excellent runners and a new quarterback (junior college transfer Tom Porras) who has developed very well."

"I also expect to face an outstanding defense. They're physical, they did a good job against us last year and nine of those defensive starters are back."

In the Big Ten race to provide the visiting team in the Rose Bowl, 5-0 Purdue leads Michigan and Ohio State, both 4-1. Michigan State also is 4-1 but the Spartans are on probation.

Maryland and Clemson are tied at 4-0 in the Atlantic Coast Conference — they meet next week — while Dartmouth and Brown battle for the Ivy League lead.

Nasty antics fail to fluster Borg

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Top-seeded Bjorn Borg of Sweden, ignoring Ilie Nastase's antics, tamed the volatile Romanian 6-4, 6-3 Friday night and joined a bunch of Americans in the quarter-finals of the $175,000 Stockholm Open Tennis Tournament.

"I don't mind playing Ilie. I concentrate on my game and try to ignore him. But he was quite all right today," said the three-time Wimbledon, French and Italian Open champion after his victory.

Five Americans, led by two-time champs Stan Smith and Arthur Ashe, made it to the quarter-final round out of an original 23-man U.S. lineup.

Smith, ranked No. 15 in the tourney, overcame seventh-seeded Roscoe Tanner's cannonball serves, winning 6-3, 7-6. Ashe, seeded 10th, defeated Swede Ove Bengtson 6-3, 6-2.

OTHER AMERICANS advancing were third-seeded John McEnroe, No. 13 Tim Gullikson and No. 16 Peter Fleming. But Wojtek Fibak of Poland, ranked No. 12, proved too strong for fourth-seeded Brian Gottfried.

Nastase, twice fined $200 according to tennis' new court of conduct system earlier in the week, behaved himself quite well against Borg.

After hitting a thundering smash to set up the match point, even the ice-cold Borg smiled when discovering that Nastase had taken cover behind the baseline curtain.

"Yeah, it was funny. But I'm not much for antics like that. Maybe I'll do it when I'm 32," Borg said.

Nastase knew he was beaten at that point, of course. But he made Borg work hard in all but one of the previous games.

Nastase, now 10-11 lifetime against Borg, was on the offense in the first set. After trading early service breaks, Borg broke again in the 10th game to win the first set 6-4.

BORG, FREQUENTLY scoring with cross-court backhands and forehands on the big points, broke to love to lead 3-1 in the second set. Trailing 2-4, Nastase had three break points, but the Swede saved them all.

"You have to be from another planet to beat him," sighed Nastase, who captured his fourth Grand Prix Masters title with a final victory over Borg last time they met in Stockholm in 1975.

Borg will play Fleming, one of the tour's most improved players, in Saturday's quarter-finals. Fleming, also 22, surprised the defending champion, eighth-seeded Sandy Mayer, 6-3, 6-3 in an all-American match.

Borg won their three previous matches, but was forced to a tough three-setter by Fleming last time in the U.S. Pro Indoor Championships in Philadelphia.

"I guess I'll have a greater chance against Borg on a fast surface like this. Right now, I'm playing better than I ever had," Fleming said.

McEnroe, 19, by many tipped to challenge Borg's and Jimmy Connors' supremacy, defeated ailing Czech Jan Kodes 7-5, 6-0.

McEnroe next faces Dutchman Tom Okker, a 7-6, 6-1 victor over Adriano Panatta of Italy.

GULLIKSON downed big Vic Amaya 6-4, 6-1 in another all-American match, and meets Smith next. Fibak, who defeated Gottfried 6-2, 4-6, 6-2, plays Ashe in the other quarter-final.

In the men's doubles quarter-finals, Bruce Manson of the United States and Andrew Pattison of Rhodesia beat Bob Hewitt and Frew McMillan of South Africa 7-5, 7-5, and Smith and Bob Lutz of the United States beat Kodes and Tomas Smid of Czechoslovakia 6-3, 6-4.

Cincy cagers headed for NCAA probation?

CINCINNATI (AP) — A former investigator for the National Collegiate Athletic Association says the University of Cincinnati's basketball program will likely be placed on probation, according to a copyrighted story in The Cincinnati Enquirer.

But NCAA Executive Director Walter Byers told the paper that the investigator, J. Brent Clark, is "either speaking from ignorance, fantasizing or deliberately misrepresenting the facts."

Clark, now an attorney in Oklahoma City, said he doesn't know what the "specific allegations are. But regardless of what the charges are, there will be a penalty."

Clark conducted the bulk of the NCAA investigation at Cincinnati in 1976 and told The Enquirer: "There were little, if any, infractions to suggest they were in violation of NCAA rules."

Instead, Clark suggested the NCAA has a vendetta against then-Bearcat head Coach Gale Catlett, the newspaper said. He said officials of the organization "didn't cotton" to Catlett's flashy dress and style.

"He wore very bright clothes and I believe that it was felt that the basketball program, in particular, at the University of Cincinnati under Gale Catlett was too flashy. Lack of conformity will lead to scrutiny," The Enquirer quoted Clark as saying.

The newspaper reported Clark said it was doubtful that the school would receive a penalty in football. "Very few of the violations were in football and they were mostly technical things."

Catlett is now head coach at West Virginia University.

Idaho to escape further punishment

MISSION, Kan. (AP) — The National Collegiate Athletic Association announced Friday it plans no further disciplinary action against the University of Idaho's basketball program.

The NCAA placed Idaho on a one-year probation last January and the university, in a subsequent investigation of its own, found additional violations and disclosed those findings to the NCAA, the NCAA said.

The violations involved extra benefits and improper financial assistance to one student-athlete and the improper transportation and entertainment of two prospective student-athletes. The school also found a violation of the NCAA's ethical conduct standards because of the involvement of the former head basketball coach in the case.

"Everything Bobby Hull did was top speed, but he wasn't able to do everything. Gordie Howe was able to do everything, but not at top speed. Bobby Orr did everything at top speed, and that's what made him the most exciting player that ever played." — Boston General Manager Harry Sinden comparing three of hockey's all-time greats following the retirements of two of them — Hull and Orr.

"I want to be childish. I'm so full of energy that I have to talk with somebody." — Nastase, of his crowd-arousing antics.

Rangers swap Beniquez, young talent for Lyle

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Yankees have traded reliever Sparky Lyle, the American League's 1977 Cy Young Award winner, and four other players to the Texas Rangers in a 10-player deal, The Associated Press learned Friday.

Also moving to the Rangers in the swap are catcher Mike Heath, infielder Domingo Ramos and two young pitchers, Larry McCall and Dave Rajsich.

In exchange, the Yankees received center fielder Juan Beniquez, pitchers Paul Mirabella and Dave Righetti and two players to be named later.

Texas also gets an undisclosed amount of cash, believed to be $400,000, the ceiling placed on cash transactions between teams by Commissioner Bowie Kuhn. Lyle, ace of the Yankee bullpen from 1972, when he was acquired from Boston, until this season, was unhappy with his situation in New York. He complained bitterly when the Yankees signed free agent reliever Rich Gossage for $2.75 million last winter.

Gossage became New York's short relief specialist, posting 10 victories and 27 saves for the world champions. Lyle, meanwhile, had a 9-3 record with a 3.47 earned run average and just nine saves this season. He was the only Yankee player who did not appear in the World Series against Los Angeles.

IN 1977, Lyle was the toast of New York, posting a 13-5 record with 26 saves and a 2.17 ERA as the Yankees' bullpen chief. That earned him the Cy Young Award, the first time it has gone to an AL reliever.

Lyle's 210 career saves are the most for any active reliever. The left-hander who depends on a deceptive slider has never started a game in the majors, appearing in 680 games for Boston and New York, all of them in relief.

Heath split 1978 between New York and the minors, batting .228 in 33 games with the Yankees as a backup for regular Thurman Munson. At one point, he was installed as the Yankees' regular catcher with Munson shifted to right field on orders from Yankee owner George Steinbrenner. But that plan was scrapped when Bob Lemon was hired to manage the club in late July.

Ramos, Rajsich and McCall spent 1978 in the Yankees' minor league system.

Beniquez batted .260 in 127 games in 1978 with the Rangers with 11 home runs and 50 runs batted in.

Mirabella was 3-2 in 10 games with Texas last season, spending most of the year in the minors. Righetti, another minor leaguer, is considered a top prospect by Yankee scouts.

WITH HOLDOVERS Mickey Rivers and Paul Blair, the Yankees are deep at center field and there were reports that New York would use Beniquez in another trade for a left-handed reliever to replace Lyle. Originally, Blair was reported to be the key player who would be going from New York to Texas in the trade but that changed when Lyle's name was added to the swap.

The trade has been in the conversation stages since before the World Series but almost collapsed earlier this week when Steinbrenner became angry over Texas owner Brad Corbett's disclosure of the deal to local media. Another problem was the money involved with the clubs concerned that Kuhn would permit that amount of cash to change hands.

TEXAS MANAGER Pat Corrales confirmed the deal to Dallas radio station KRLD.

"I hate to see him go because Juan is still the best defensive outfielder I've ever seen," Corrales said. "I also hate giving up Mirabella. But sometimes you have to make those moves."

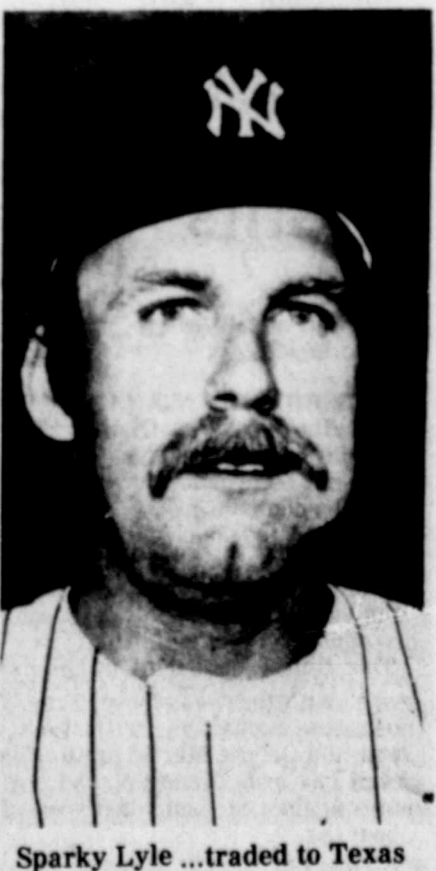

Al Rosen, Yankee president, said the key in the deal from the Yankee standpoint is Righetti.

"We're all in love with Righetti," Rosen said. "We've got great reports on him. He's a left-handed power pitcher and (scout) Jerry Walker, who followed him last season, thinks we got another Guidry. I don't think it's possible but it's nice to think in those terms." Ron Guidry posted a 25-3 record for the Yankees this season and captured the American League Cy Young Award.

RIGHETTI, WHO turns 20 later this month, registered 127 strikeouts in 91 innings while compiling a 5-5 record for Tulsa of the Texas League this season.

Rosen said he expected the young southpaw to pitch in minors next year.

Cavs are fit for circus, Fitch

By the Associated Press

Here are some notable quotes of the week in sports:

"I booted O.J. when he came on the field. What would it look like, me clapping for the man and we're going to war?" — Atlanta linebacker Dewey McClain on the introduction of O.J. Simpson before the Falcons-San Francisco 49ers game.

"A circus is using the Cleveland arena and we'd be a great addition to it" — Cleveland Cavaliers Coach Bill Fitch after his team lost a National Basketball Association game by 22 points.

"I don't know what else we could have done. We beat everybody that showed up." — New York Yankees owner George Steinbrenner, commenting on a suit that charges that until teams from other countries and continents are invited, baseball's World Series and World Champions ought to be called something else.

"I feel like a kid again. I may play the game forever." — Elvin Hayes, after signing a three-year, $1.3 million contract and becoming the highest paid player in Washington Bullets' history.

"Everything Bobby Hull did was top speed, but he wasn't able to do everything. Gordie Howe was able to do everything, but not at top speed. Bobby Orr did everything at top speed, and that's what made him the most exciting player that ever played." — Boston General Manager Harry Sinden comparing three of hockey's all-time greats following the retirements of two of them — Hull and Orr.

"I want to be childish. I'm so full of energy that I have to talk with somebody." — Nastase, of his crowd-arousing antics.

Corro to defend middleweight title

Buenos Aires, Argentina (AP) — Challenger Rodrigo Valdes of Colombia tries to regain the world middleweight title from Hugo Corro of Argentina Saturday in a struggle between aggressive and cautious boxing styles.

Experts say the hard-punching Valdes, slowed by age and nursing a sore right hand, must inflict early damage to stand a chance against the younger, defense-minded Corro.

Valdes, 31, says the scheduled 15-round bout at 4:40 p.m. EST in Buenos Aires' 19,000-seat Luna Park Arena will be the last of his 10-year career, in which he has won 61, lost 6 and tied 2.

The fight will be nationally televised in the United States (CBS).

TWO OF Valdes' losses were to Argentina's Carlos Monzon, who wore the middleweight crown seven years until his retirement in August 1977. Valdes won it by beating American Bennie Briscoe three months later, then lost to Corro last April 23 in his first title defense.

Corro, 25, outlasted his tiring rival in that fight in San Remo, Italy. Valdes says he's in better shape this time, but an old injury has come back to haunt him.

The Colombian broke his right hand in an automobile accident last year. The injury, apparently healed, gave him no trouble in the last Corro fight. But the challenger's doctor, Armando Pomares, said the injury was aggravated in training here and may be a factor in the bout.

The baby-faced Corro, who has 46 victories, two defeats and a tie, defended his title here last Aug. 5 with a unanimous decision over American Ronnie Harris but has not worn the crown well.

THE ARGENTINE press has criticized his overly cautious performance against Harris, his sullen disposition and his brush with the law. Corro was detained briefly by the police in his native city of Mendoza two months ago for insulting a woman in a bar and punching out two bartenders who came to her defense.

Valdes is the favorite among some Argentines, who regard him as the last of a generation of top quality middleweights who fought in the hard-punching style of their own Monzon.

Blocking back days over, Riggins happy

WASHINGTON (AP) — John Riggins, no longer stuck in the role of a blocking back, has been having one of his best years as a professional. And, the Washington Redskins' running back couldn't be enjoying it more.

"We're winning, and it feels good to contribute again," said Riggins as the Redskins prepared for Sunday's National Football League game against the New York Giants. "I'm enjoying football this season more than any time since my sophomore year in college."

Riggins, an eight-year veteran, is averaging 4.3 yards per carry, is the fifth leading rusher in the NFL and also is the Redskins' leading pass receiver with 22 catches.

WITH 794 yards rushing and six games to play, Riggins sees a chance to go over the 1,000-yard mark rushing for only the second time in his career.

Two years ago, then-Washington Coach George Allen signed Riggins to a five-year, $300,000-a-year contract and then decided he was better suited to be a blocking back.

"To this day, I will never understand why," Riggins said. "My first year was the worst, yeah. My dad was in the Marines and he always said you couldn't pay him enough to go through it again, but he sure was glad he had the experience. That's kind of how I felt here.

"I began to wonder, can I really play this game? Maybe I couldn't. I had always considered myself a logical person, but I couldn't figure out what was wrong. I even quit reading the papers. I remember one guy saying 'Calvin Hill and John Riggins — one doesn't play and one can't.'"

"I finally realized I couldn't make everybody happy, and when it got to the point it didn't really matter to me, that's when I really started playing football.

"If George had come back this year, I'm not sure I would have. Football just wasn't any fun playing that way. Regardless of the money, which is tough to walk away from, I was considering asking them to let me go or to renegotiate somewhere else or maybe retiring."

RIGGINS DOESN'T think like that any more. But he does look back to three games ago, and the beating he took from the Giants in New Jersey. After it was over, Riggins sat in the training room in Giants Stadium with ice bags covering welts on his neck, his massive thighs and his sore hip.

"I feel like I jumped on a hand grenade to save the squad," he told the trainers after the 17-6 loss that day, embellishing it a bit when he finally met newsmen. "They shouldn't have played the national anthem. They should have played 'taps.'"

The bruises have healed somewhat for Riggins. "But we can probably expect the same kind of treatment unless we're prepared to dish it out a little more."

Righetti KOs Roman in second

MILAN, Italy (AP) — Alfio Righetti of Italy knocked out Jose Roman of Puerto Rico in the second round of their scheduled 10-round heavyweight boxing match Friday night.

It was Righetti's 34th victory — 33 by knockouts — against one loss in his career. Roman, 30, has a record of 57 victories, 16 defeats and five draws.

The 26-year-old Italian heavyweight champion dominated the brief bout, mercilessly pummeling Roman in his first Italian appearance.

Ravaged knee ends Orr career

By FRANK BROWN
AP Sports Writer

Harry Sinden sat down at his desk in Boston Garden one afternoon and drew a picture of Bobby Orr's knee. It was just after the defenseman had left the Bruins to join the Chicago Black Hawks for what turned out to be the final 26 games of his National Hockey League career.

Sinden, the Bruins' former coach and current general manager, was well acquainted with the left knee that was so ravaged by surgery some people suggested a zipper be placed on it to help the doctors.

Sinden took a piece of paper and a fountain pen and delivered, as he sketched, his layman's understanding of what was keeping hockey's greatest defenseman from playing as he had in the past.

"The knee ... there's two cartilages in there (in the joint between the thigh and the shin), and the ligaments come through and tie the bones together. There's also cartilage on the side of the bones. When the knee bends, the cartilages rub and cushion the shock," said Sinden.

"WHAT HAPPENED with Orr was these two cartilages rubbed each other away. The body replaces this with new cartilage, but it's a very inferior brand and it's never as strong as the original stuff. Then that rubs away. Eventually, he had nothing there but bone on bone."

As Sinden went on, revealing the extent of the damage, it became all the more astonishing that Orr could have considered a final comeback.

"As the bones grind together, crystals form and pieces of bone wear off," Sinden continued. "And this new cartilage — pieces of it wear off and float into the joint, causing it to lock. That causes a lot of pain."

There is an instrument called an arthroscope, a thin, hollow device with a circumference about the size of a pencil point, which is inserted in the knee. "Sometimes fluid runs out through the machine and some of the particles go with it. He had a couple of those and it gave him some relief. But if the particles are of any size at all, they can't get out that way," said Sinden.

So the only option is surgery on a knee which already suffers degenerative arthritis, even though Orr is only 30 years old. After playing 20 games with the Black Hawks in 1976-77, he underwent the final operation and stayed off skates for more than a year to give it the rest and time it needed to recuperate.

QUITE SIMPLY, it couldn't heal. That's why we'll never see Bobby Orr on the ice again.

"He told me one time when he was 21 or 22 that he didn't think he'd play past 30," said Sinden. "His goal was to play until he was 30 and accomplish, you know, the Stanley Cup was foremost in his mind."

He had accomplished that by the time he was 22, scoring the goal that will never be forgotten.

It was May 10, 1970. The Bruins led the St. Louis Blues three victories to none in the best-of-seven Stanley Cup playoff final. The score was 3-3 about 30 seconds into overtime.

with the Bruins at the time, tells the rest.

"I passed the puck to Derek Sanderson, the puck went into the corner and Bobby went streaking in from someplace in center ice. When he went streaking in, I stayed back to cover his spot at the blue line. Then the puck came out from Sanderson, and — BANG! — it's in the net."

Orr converted the pass an instant before he was tripped by defenseman Noel Picard. Before the puck had dropped to the ice behind goalie Glenn Hall, Orr was airborne — soaring through space as Superman would.

By the time he landed, the people of Boston realized the Bruins had won their first Stanley Cup in 29 years.

"At first, you know, my feelings were numb," recalled Westfall. "But then I just wanted to get a hold of him because it was such a dramatic goal at such a dramatic time, since the Bruins hadn't won the Cup in so long. It meant so much to every one of us, and quite fitting was the fact that the guy who did more for our team than anyone all season had scored the winning goal."

All he had done was score 33 goals and add 87 assists for 120 points in the regular season, then contribute 9 goals and 11 assists in the playoffs. He had only won the James Norris Trophy as the league's best defenseman, earned first-team All-Star recognition, won the Art Ross Trophy as the league's top scorer and the Conn Smythe Trophy as the top performer in the playoffs.

A SEASON like that became almost commonplace for the native of Parry Sound, Ont. But also commonplace was trouble with his knee.

Once, when the Bruins were boarding a plane, Orr sat and said, "Geez. My leg doesn't feel right."

"That's when I said, 'Maybe you better stay and get it checked,'" recalled Johnny Bucyk, who roomed with Orr. "So he went up and talked to the coach and the coach said, 'Get off the plane.'"

An operation followed.

"He'd play at times when the only persons who knew he was hurt were the trainer and the team doctor. He didn't want anyone to know he wasn't 100 percent," said Westfall. "He'd come back to the bench from a shift on the ice, and I'd know he wasn't right for whatever reason. And he'd whisper to the trainer and they'd go to the dressing room at the end of the period and no one would ever know about it. Then he'd come back, and at the end of the game you'd find out he was hurt pretty bad."

Sometimes Orr, a private man, was even private with his teammates.

"He never talked about retirement," said Westfall. "He liked to think, like myself, that if he didn't think about it and didn't talk about it, it would go away."

"He's the type of guy that's very shy," said Boston right wing Terry O'Reilly. "You have to get to know him and he has to get to trust you and then he'll open up like a book. He was like that with just about everybody in the dressing room."

Bobby Orr is shown in three phases of his career before knee problems forced his pre-

Bruins in 1967; and, right, as a member of the Chicago Black Hawks. (AP Laserphoto)

Judge tells of staging murder

By MIKE COCHRAN

HOUSTON (AP) — The target of an alleged murder-for-hire scheme told Friday how he modeled for murder in an FBI scenario designed to dupe millionaire defendant Cullen Davis. Fort Worth Judge Joe Eidson testified that he posed for FBI photographs depicting his blood-splattered body crumpled in the trunk of his own car. The judge said he agreed to assist the FBI after listening to a tape recording in which Davis allegedly discussed the slaying of Eidson and others. "Frankly, I was pretty shaken up by the situation," he volunteered over defense objections. He also said he did not recognize the voices on the tape. The state alleges that FBI informant David McCrory used the fake photo to convince Davis of Eidson's death and subsequently hand over $25,000 for a phantom "hit man." Eidson presided over Davis' stormy divorce proceedings until excusing himself from the case after Davis' arrest last Aug. 20. George Ridgley, the FBI photographer who snapped the picture, was the final state witness during the first week of testimony in Davis' trial on charges of criminal solicitation. Ridgley identified Davis as the man he saw with McCrory at the rendezvous parking lot used for their meetings Aug. 18 and Aug. 20. Ridgley also identified still photographs of Davis and McCrory and he told a now-familiar story of how the defendant almost uncovered the surveillance operation in an unmarked FBI van. One of the enlarged photographs introduced into evidence captured the two men looking into the trunk of Davis' blue-and-white Cadillac. The state contends McCrory, acting on Davis' instructions, placed a .22-caliber Ruger pistol in the trunk of the car and that it was equipped with a silencer — a legally prohibited weapon. Prosecutors also allege Davis removed from the trunk a manila envelope filled with $100 bills and gave it to McCrory. Investigators recovered the money and the weapon when Davis was arrested shortly after the Aug. 20 meeting. Testimony in the trial began Monday. On cross-examination of Eidson, 60, defense lawyer Phil Burleson succeeded in showing that many of Eidson's rulings in the divorce case favored Davis over his estranged wife, Priscilla. Burleson tried to cast year. Eidson referred to that trial several times, saying once of Davis: "I saw him on a television newscast in Amarillo the day after his acquittal on the murder charge." "What did he say?" a prosecutor asked. "He was asked what he thought of the Amarillo judge and he said, 'I like him,' or 'He was fine. I didn't like the Fort Worth judges.'" The Amarillo jury acquitted him on a charge of murdering his 12-year-old stepdaughter, one of two slain in a summertime 1976 shooting spree at the $6 million Davis mansion in Fort Worth.

separate dead voters from the ones still alive and eager to participate in December's presidential election. Newspapers say the problem is due to "chaotic, deficient" record-keeping, and government officials readily admit that in this oil-rich nation the science of statistics is still in the developing stage. Almost 20,000 persons reported dead and erased from the voting registry have shown up at the election watchdog's offices to prove they are still alive and eligible to vote, according to newspaper reports. "Persons Ruled Dead Are Reappearing Alive before Electoral Council," said the headline in a recent edition of El Nacional. As of Oct. 17, the number of registered voters totaled 6,178,319. That figure could drop as low as 5.8 million with the elimination of persons no longer living, those serving prison sentences and active members of the armed forces, authorities said. The dead voters are causing sleepless nights for members of the election council. Since the registry had not been purged of the names of deceased voters since 1971, the council decided to do a thorough job this year. That's when the trouble began. Among the voters declared dead, according to civil records, was the current national director of parks. A close relative of one of the election council members also learned that, officially, he was dead too. Of the 112,000 voters erased from the registry because they were thought to be dead, nearly 20,000 have shown up at the council's headquarters to prove otherwise. Most discovered their status when they spotted their names in lists published in newspapers. They are among the lucky ones and will get to vote. Many of the sloppy records are found in remote, rural areas, election officials say. In these places the justice of the peace often jots down the identification card number of the individual reporting a death rather than the number of the dead person. So when the report reaches the central office in Caracas, the wrong name goes into the file. In this year's election, in which there are 10 candidates, the polls show the two frontrunners, Luis Pineru Ordaz of the ruling Democratic Action Party and Luis Herrera Campins of the Social Christian Party, headed for a photo finish. A few thousand citizens denied their right to vote could make a big difference in the outcome. In 1968, the winning candidate slipped into the presidential palace with a margin of under 30,000 votes. President Carlos Andres Perez is constitutionally prohibited from running in this election.

Many more grocery stores using UPC system

By LOUISE COOK Associated Press Writer

Those funny little lines that started appearing on boxes and cans in the supermarket four years ago have spread steadily along the supermarket shelves, and the machines that read the code are beginning to make their way to the checkout counter in growing numbers.

The number of stores using electronic scanners to read the Universal Product Code and automatically enter the correct price is still relatively small, but it has more than doubled in the past year.

Victor Hersh of the Food Marketing Institute said 415 of the nation's 33,000 supermarkets had scanning systems as of the end of September, up from 180 stores in September 1977.

The UPC was introduced on an experimental basis in 1974. Manufacturers were quick to accept the idea. More than 90 percent of all frozen foods and dry grocery items are marked with the UPC; 60 percent of health and beauty aids are coded.

Here's how the system works: Each product is marked with a combination of lines, bars and numbers. There a different combination for each item, brand and size.

A computer is programmed to translate the code into a specific price. When a customer reaches the checkout, each item in his or her order is passed over a scanner which "reads" the code. The scanner transmits the information to the computer. The computer identifies the product, "rings" it up and prints the price and other appropriate information on the receipt.

By using the Universal Product Code, the computer also can help a store keep track of its inventory. Store personnel can find out how much of a specific item is on hand, how fast it is being sold and when it is time to reorder.

For the customer, the scanning system means less time spent at the checkout. As a general rule, it also means more information on the receipt since each item can be identified by name and price. Scanning also is designed to eliminate the possibility of a customer being charged too much or too little because of a clerk's error in ringing up a price.

The introduction of electronic scanning has been controversial. The idea brought protests from labor unions who feared that jobs would be lost. Consumer activists, meanwhile, objected to the stores' plans to eliminate price markings on individual items.

They argued that customers would find it difficult to compare prices and keep track of costs. A number of states and cities enacted laws making such markings mandatory.

The industry, which had argued that eliminating individual prices offered substantial savings to the store and ultimately the shopper, agreed to continue stamping the cans and boxes with prices, and consumer resistance abated.

Hersh said that among customers who shop in stores with a scanning system, "it is exceedingly popular." He said the system is "well on its way and will become commonplace."

The cost of the systems has been a major factor delaying their introduction. Hersh said installation of a scanning system costs from $110,000 to $275,000. The large capital investment required is a deterrent for many retailers, even though they can recover their money through increased operating efficiency and reduced labor costs.

Many supermarkets are moving toward scanning on a step-by-step basis. They are installing electronic cash registers which can be either manually operated or connected to a scanning system. Eighty-five percent of the new stores opened in 1977 had electronic registers; three-fourths of them were designed so they could be upgraded to scanning.

Food Marketing Institute studies show that most supermarket operators expect to introduce scanning systems sooner or later. Almost one-third of the store owners who had no scanning operations in 1977 said they planned some sort of installation within two years; an additional 20 percent said they expected to introduce at least one scanner before 1980. Only 3 percent of the retailers said they had no intention of ever using the technology.

They argued that customers would find it difficult to compare prices and keep track of costs. A number of states and cities enacted laws making such markings mandatory.

The government-owned utility is putting up $100,000 to provide interest-free loans to north Georgia families willing to try an updated, and more efficient, version of the old potbellied stove.

TVA helped 90 families in East Tennessee buy wood stoves at factory prices last year as the first part of an experiment to see if they reduce electric bills and winter peak demands. Elvin Farrar, manager of the North Georgia Electric Membership Corp., says loans will now be offered to 1,000 families in his service area. The co-op distributes TVA power to 48,000 customers in six rural northwest Georgia counties.

"Many of the homes had had the wood stoves before the push for electric heating," Mike Jolly, a TVA wood energy specialist, said Friday. "That shows how the tide is changing with the energy problem we're facing. People don't want to have to buy those kilowatts."

All that may seem ironic in an age of nuclear power and complicated solar technologies. But it is also an age of soaring electricity costs, and limited supplies of fossil fuels. The TVA started out operating a string of dams on the Tennessee River, but long ago found that hydroelectric power wasn't enough. It evolved into the nation's biggest consumer of coal and operates a nuclear plant. Today, only 15 percent of its power is supplied by the dams, and during last year's coal strike, the TVA had to urge customers to curtail power usage so its coal stocks wouldn't run out.

Part of that crisis stemmed from TVA's promotion of electricity in the 1950s and '60s, a campaign so successful that one million of the 2 1/2 million homes in the seven-state region it serves are now heated by electricity — nearly double the national average.

TVA burns about 40 million tons of coal a year at a cost above $1 billion — and TVA foresters estimate unused nearby wood resources could provide the energy equivalent of 16 million tons of that.

The Georgia co-op will make the TVA loans available for buying and installing wood stoves at a cost of $500 to $800 each in the same manner the utility encourages homeowners to improve insulation. The loans would be repaid over three or four years through the customer's monthly electric bill.

"The homes we tested last year showed a 50 to 75 percent reduction in the kilowatt use during January and February," Jolly said. "Their power bills dropped from $150 a month to $75 a month and we had some down to even $20 or $30 a month."

Jolly said wood prices will have to drop from the $60 to $100 per cord asked last year for large numbers of homeowners to realize significant benefits, but he added that the price is down somewhat this year.

TVA Chairman S. David Freeman said favorable results from the demonstration would allow expansion throughout the TVA system, which serves Tennessee and parts of Kentucky, Virginia, North Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, and Mississippi.

American climbers fail to reach mountain summit

KATMANDU, Nepal (AP) — A team of American mountain climbers failed to reach the 27,797-foot summit of Annapurna III in the Himalayan range but claimed partial success Friday for establishing a "new route" on the previously unexplored west face of the peak.

"It was an accomplishment for Himalayan mountain climbing," Tom McCullough, the team's 29-year old photographer from Sandia Park, N.M., told The Associated Press. "We did it without any Sherpa-support. We did not employ the Sherpa guides as we wanted to climb Annapurna III in Alpine style, by carrying the loads by ourselves."

Farm sector's financial state remains better than last year

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Farm sector financial conditions in the seven-state 10th Federal Reserve District of Kansas City for the third quarter of 1978 "remain significantly better than a year ago," the bank reported Friday.

The improvement overcame strengthened farm loan demand which caused some renewed pressures on bank liquidity, according to the report, based on an Oct. 1 agricultural credit survey of 173 banks in the region.

Other survey results show average loan-deposit ratios up to 63.4 percent but not as high as those of a year ago at 65 percent, farm loan interest rates rising, and nearly all bankers requiring as much or more loan collateral than in 1977.

C. Edward Harshbarger, research officer for the reserve bank, said the heavy borrowing by farmers indicates they are taking advantage of profit opportunities, particularly in cattle feeding.

"The strong farm-loan demand does not reflect cash flow problems," Harshbarger said. The serious cash flow problems of 1977 for many farmers, he explained, have been alleviated largely because of the benefits from government farm programs, and because of higher farm prices.

Nearly 85 percent of the bankers surveyed in Colorado, Kansas, Missouri, Nebraska, New Mexico, Oklahoma and Wyoming reported an equal or higher rate of loan repayments from farmers than a year ago, the report disclosed.

The same proportion also indicated that requests for loan renewals or extensions were the same or lower than in 1977, and "despite strong loan demand, most banks were able to meet most credit requests," the report said.

Interest rates on farm loans continued to rise in the third quarter, averaging 40 to 45 basis points above levels a year ago, at 9.28 percent for feeder cattle loans, 9.41 percent for other operating loans, 9.80 percent for intermediate term loans, and 9.65 percent for farm real estate loans.

Harshbarger suggested that the increased interest rates reflected money market developments rather than a tightening of credit in rural areas.

Democrats carry all 68 voters in Moore Station

MOORE STATION, Texas (AP) — Governor-elect Bill Clements found a bunch of closet Republicans around the state Tuesday but none of them were hanging around this East Texas community.

The 68 voters — half of those registered in the precinct — all voted the straight Democratic ticket, which the Texas Election Bureau said was rare.

Precinct Chairman Matthew Wallace said, "I'm not too surprised because, you see, we don't have any white people in this area. We're all black here and have been Democrats all our lives. We never split our ticket — we always vote Democrat."

Another resident put it more succinctly: "You split, you move."

TVA encourages people to use potbellied stoves

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — After two decades of promoting all-electric homes, the Tennessee Valley Authority wants consumers to try another energy source for heat this winter — the firewood grandpa used.

The government-owned utility is putting up $100,000 to provide interest-free loans to north Georgia families willing to try an updated, and more efficient, version of the old potbellied stove.

TVA helped 90 families in East Tennessee buy wood stoves at factory prices last year as the first part of an experiment to see if they reduce electric bills and winter peak demands.

Texas human resources director visits Basin

By GUY SULLIVAN
R-T Staff Writer

Jerome Chapman, director of the Texas Department of Human Resources, was in Midland this week to present a certificate of approval to the Midland-Odessa Protective Service staffs.

The certificates show these state agencies are certified because they meet the "minimum standards for child-placing agencies which provide 24-hour care and adoption services."

The agency director was in town along with Jim Harvey, El Paso-based regional administrator for the department.

The director talked about his agency and its purpose.

Information he provided indicates that of the 10 urban areas in the nation with the lowest per capita income in 1976, five are in Texas.

The Rio Grande Valley has the distinction of being where the poorest people in the nation live, according to the U.S. Department of Commerce.

Although the number of poor people in Texas is declining, the decrease is happening at about one-half the rate it's declining in the rest of the country, according to the U.S. Bureau of the Census.

These assessments all mean that more than 1.8 million Texans, roughly 15 percent of the population, live below the federally designated poverty level.

The data also means that the Texas Department of Human Resources, the agency charged with helping the poorest of the state's poor, is seeking $3.86 billion in federal and state funds for 1980-81, a 46.8 percent increase over the last biennium, just to do the job the law requires, said Chapman.

Chapman, who oversees a state agency charged with taking care of people's needs on a variety of fronts, is no stranger to poverty or the problems facing the poor.

The native of Liberal, Kan., who grew up during the Depression years of the 1930s, said he recalled "when the dust was so thick that we couldn't see across the street."

His family moved to South Texas, where Chapman was raised.

His father, Jerry Chapman was a parts dealer who also ran a repair shop.

"I remember in Kansas when we bathed we had to shovel the dust out of the tub before we turned on the shower!" declared the head of the state's social services agency.

Today, he heads a department charged with a variety of responsibilities. These include social services such as care of adults, protecting children, administering family day homes and family planning.

Others include medical services such as overseeing nursing home care in Texas.

Also, financial services such as child support services and the federally funded food stamp program are overseen by his department.

His administration also is responsible for overall management and overseeing the welfare action programs.

He oversees an agency which in 1977 spent a total of $1,136,011,309 seeking to monitor programs and directly participate in efforts which care for the needs of young, old and low income citizens of Texas.

Chapman, who took office about a year ago, said he believes accountability is a major job of his agency.

For that reason he undertook an investigation of his own department's Protective Services units to determine if these organizations meet the same standards demanded by the state for privately run services which serve similar needs.

This job involves the licensing of child caring institutions.

Both the Midland-Odessa staffs and the El Paso staffs meet state requirements for standards of care, he reported.

Chapman said the Texas Department of Human Resources oversees 30 major programs.

And because of the number of people the state agency is required to serve, Chapman said, his department must squeeze out its assistance and services more carefully than ever before to stay within the budget, which "is being eaten away by inflation."

Austinite praises West Texans, explains programs to aid needy

"I think sometimes West Texans try to take care of their own and they can't understand other people that don't," said Jerome Chapman, director of the Texas Department of Human Resources.

His comments came during a visit to Midland last week in which he talked about the programs he administers which strive to serve the poor people and others with specific needs in Texas.

While Chapman says he knows West Texans like to take care of their own, he also realizes there are citizens who need his agency's help in order to survive.

That's where ideas like the food stamp program enter the picture.

The Austin resident, who lived in Lubbock many years, said the food stamp program his agency administers is in for some mandated changes soon.

These include the implementation of rigid restrictions on participation, very severe reductions of student participation and the additional requirement that the underemployed who receive food stamps must report to the state employment service, said Chapman.

He said if a student is claimed as a deduction, he will not be eligible to receive food stamps.

Also, the highest amount of income required to be eligible for food stamps will be lowered, he said.

"There will be a significant number of people who will no longer be eligible for this program," Chapman said. "However, many people over age 65 will be able to participate more extensively."

He predicted about 100,000 families will become eligible for the food stamp program in the next two years as a result of these changes.

"The program really has an impact in grocery stores and on farms and people really aren't that aware of it," he added.

Another change, he said, is that bonus stamps will be free, instead of being required to be purchased by recipients.

"This will provide recipients with the same purchasing power, but minus the cost," he said.

He had praise for the way Midland County residents have taken care of people.

"One of the things that has impressed me about Midland County is that this community has always given tremendous support for the needs any child required here. Unlike other areas, Midland County has been very cooperative. When you talk about helping people, you get all the cooperation you need here."

In Midland County during 1977, state figures show an average of 1,642 persons were served monthly by this program.

The value of bonus stamps distributed here during that period amounted to $510,385.

An average of 371 families were served per month last year in Midland County by this program.

Also, a total of 916 children per month were served by the food stamp program.

The program's total payments for that fiscal year in Midland County amounted to $449,984.

In addition, state figures also show 20 cases of fraud convictions in either the food stamp program or the Aid to Families with Dependent Children program recorded during 1977.

The latter program involves mothers living alone with children.

Three of these cases were dismissed and there were 62 cases of pending law enforcement action in others, according to state figures.

Under this program, 754,506 people in 219,663 households nationally received food stamps to buy food and necessities with, according to figures from the state Department of Human Resources supplied in the 1977 annual report.

During the fiscal year $386 million in food stamps were distributed to Texans in the program.

And $256.5 million in bonus stamps were distributed and of these, $129.7 million were paid for by recipients, according to state figures.

In addition, more than 30,000 food stamp families were referred to county extension agents or expanded nutrition programs during the past year with volunteers contributing heavily in the effort.

Officials said investigators presented 3,630 cases of alleged food stamp fraud for prosecution with the amount involved during 1977 tallying $1.4 million.

'No Smoking' signs remain off in Spain

By FENTON WHEELER

MADRID (AP) — It is a country where smoking is allowed almost everywhere, and cigarette sales rise every year.

While many parts of the world concentrate on stopping smoking — France bars it in post offices and California voters weigh banning it in all public buildings — Spain remains a puffer's paradise, a place to blow smoke in your neighbor's face or even that of the health minister.

"We are heavy smokers," insists the government tobacco monopoly Tabacalera Inc., citing annual per capita consumption of 1,689 cigarettes, more than 30 packs below what it says is the European average.

But blue smoke somehow seems to curl up almost everywhere in Spain, from the state dinners at King Juan Carlos' palace to the cigarette dangling from the mouth of Communist leader Santiago Carrillo.

Spaniards, plus the more than 30 million tourists who visit the country each year, smoke in stores, taxis, hallways, hospitals and even sometimes in gasoline stations, despite signs prohibiting them from doing so.

Spain's national airline, Iberia, has yet to designate no-smoking sections on its domestic flights. Not a single cigarette package in Spain carries a health warning. Each night after 9:30 p.m. the alleged bedtime hour for Spanish children, cigarette advertisements appear on the nation's television screens. Hundreds of Madrid billboards invite Spaniards of all ages to savor the taste of a best-selling U.S. brand.

But government health officials claim a nationwide no-smoking drive launched more than one year ago is making progress, although slowly, and they point to a slight drop in cigarette sales during the past summer as one indicator.

However, from 1973-77, sales of Spanish cigarettes with dark tobacco rose more than 20 percent, far above the population growth rate, and sales of cigarettes with lighter tobacco doubled.

With implied advice that no one really should give up smoking altogether, the Tabacalera advises: "Smoke less, enjoy it more."

Included in its tips to smokers is one to stub out the cigarette when half smoked, a habit destined to boost overall sales.

'Good-mouthed' and 'mediasized' words may make it into language

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — "Cop opera" is not an opera about cops. "Soap therapy" is not a good scrubbing. "Lemonstration" is not a parade by militant lemons. And "good-mouth" is not a healthy set of teeth.

If these words sound strange, there is a good reason: they happen to be some of the new words coming into use, part of the "new English" that each year transforms the language little by little.

If they catch on, they may in time find a place in the dictionary, says James G. Lowe, associate editor of G. & C. Merriam Co., publishers of Merriam-Webster dictionaries. He notes that all the words have actually appeared in print.

Cop opera, for instance, has been used for a television program depicting the activities of police officers. Soap therapy is psychotherapy involving the viewing and discussing of situations depicted in soap operas. Lemonstration is a demonstration by car owners of cars they consider defective. And good-mouth is to praise highly to counteract criticism.

"In explaining how new words get into the language we might say that many are called but few are chosen," says Lowe. "In any given year many new words develop, not only in different elements of society, but in different parts of the country. Many of them simply never catch on. To become an established part of the language a word must really prove that it's useful to and used by a large segment of society.

Over the years, of course, many new-word candidates do make the grade," Lowe points out. "For instance, 'cloning,' 'macho,' 'mega-death,' 'chutzpah,' 'biodegradable' and many others considered new words not so long ago, now are accepted as part of the language."

This year Merriam has collected "cybersport," which refers to the electronic games played through the use of television screens. And there's "telecopter," a helicopter equipped with a television camera. And "crepewich," a sandwich made with crepes.

Do you enjoy outdoor spectacles at historic sites? Then you like "historamas." Have you an habitual craving for sugar? You are a "sucroholic." Are you an executive in a large corporation? You just might be a "corporate."

Among other new words found this year by the dictionary editors: "discomania," enthusiasm for discotheque music; "downsize," to reduce the size of motor vehicles for better fuel economy; "granny squad," a police unit fighting crime against old people; "simo," a book published in both hardcover and softcover versions simultaneously; "skatepark," a recreation area for use of skateboards, and "mediasize," to affect through the influence of the communications media, especially television.

Fannie Meyer, ex-sailor and presently working as a long-distance lorry driver out of Johannesburg, South Africa, is a man with a drinking problem — he drinks more than six gallons of water a day. Meyer's problem started with an auto accident four years ago in which he suffered a fractured skull and subsequently developed a raging thirst. He has been cutting down his consumption from 20 gallons daily to its present level and is back in a hospital trying to reduce it further. (AP Laserphoto)

More than 150 expected for education conference

Some 150 to 200 people are expected to gather at Midland College Wednesday through Friday for the meeting of the Texas Association for Community Service and Continuing Education.

Theme for the conference is "Continuing Education: The New Majority."

"We are honored to serve as the host school and feel Midland was selected in recognition of the importance which this community places on the adult, community service and continuing education programs offered through Midland College," said Dr. Al G. Langford, Midland College president.

James Bramlett, director of the community services department at Midland College, is local coordinator for the conference.

Dr. John B. Ervin and Dr. Max Raines are two of the featured speakers on the program.

Currently vice president of the Danforth Foundation, Ervin will speak on "Lifelong Learning." Dr. Raines has been a member of the Michigan State University faculty since 1965.

Dr. Ron Huffstutler of East Texas State University is president of the organization, and first vice president Dr. Robert K. Willis of McLennan Community College is conference chairman.

Langford will give the welcome at the opening session in the Hilton Hotel Wednesday afternoon. All the business sessions are slated for the Hilton.

Discrimination cited in firing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Northwestern University has 20 days to appeal a federal accusation that it fired a qualified employee because she had cancer.

The Labor Department alleged Thursday that the university dismissed technical researcher Mary L. McLane in 1976 shortly after she returned to work following a cancer operation. Northwestern contends the woman was not qualified for the job because she lacked strong secretarial skills.

But the Labor Department said the woman had been given a satisfactory job evaluation three months before her operation and secretarial skills were not included on the original job description.

"In this case, equal job opportunity was denied to a qualified employee because of an unrelated handicap," said Weldon J. Rougeau, director of the Labor Department's Office of Federal Contract Compliance Programs.

Northwestern could lose more than $500,000 in federal research contracts and be barred from consideration of future contracts if the charge is upheld.

Declarer took the king of diamonds and drew two rounds of trumps. If spades broke evenly he would have no problem.

When the trumps failed to break

South led two top hearts since if he drew a third trump he would be unable to cope with a 4-1 break in hearts.

East ruffed the second heart, and that was that.

South spent the next ten minutes complaining about the 3-1 break in spades and the 4-1 break in hearts, bad but not frightful breaks. South should have spent those ten minutes playing the hand properly to begin with.

NO VOID SUITS
 South should take the king of diamonds, the ace of spades and then the king of hearts since a 5-0 heart break is not only very unlikely but also probably too much to overcome. When nobody is void of spades or hearts, South is home.

Declarer leads a spade to the king and leads dummy's ace of diamonds to discard the ace of hearts! South ruffs a heart, leads a spade to the queen and ruffs another heart. The hearts are now set up, the trumps are drawn and dummy has a trump as entry to the good hearts.

ANSWER: Bid two spades. You count 5 points in high cards and about 2 points for the singleton. The spade support is not of the best, but it is good enough for a single raise.

Thousands visit Rockwell Museum to say goodbye

By CHRIS ROBERTS

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Norman Rockwell, the man who touched America's funny bone with a paint brush during World War I and kept the country smiling for half a century, was dead, but still the people laughed.

They laughed at his bare-bottomed little boys at the swimming hole, and the chisel-chinned men bent over their poker hands, a flea-bit ten hound at their feet. And they smiled at his dough boys, their thoughts tumbling back to the Great War, and at Ike, for Rockwell had put a twinkle in his eye.

They came Thursday to the Norman Rockwell Museum here to say goodbye. Inside, they became lost in a million freckles and a peaceful, humorous land that was Rockwell's America.

"He saw the happy side of life," said Curley Brown, a Baptist minister.

"I can feel something in his paintings. He didn't just deal in high places, he talked to the little guy. The expressions on the faces of his little boys and girls — that's every kid in the world," he said.

Larry Golin came, too. He has just returned from Bangladesh, where he had spent 10 years as a missionary. He'll be going back soon.

"When I think of America, I think of this man," he said. "Some of us have albums of his work in our houses in Bangladesh. The people there can't speak English, but they can understand Rockwell."

"He represents goodness and innocence. He was an ambassador for America."

When Norman Rockwell was a little boy he discovered his Adam's apple, narrow shoulders, long neck and pigeon toes, and soon after pencil and paper.

After supper his father would read Dickens by gaslight, and the boy would forget his shortcomings and express his sympathy for Little Nell and Oliver Twist by drawing their pictures.

In 1906, at age 8, he was fitted with round spectacles and his schoolmates named him "Moon Face." It was also that year that he began filling the margins of his schoolbooks with sketches.

Ten years later he walked into the Curtis Publishing Co. here and offered a sketch for the cover of The Saturday Evening Post. It was accepted, and America grinned.

"I talked to one of his neighbors recently, and she said Norman wouldn't have wanted to live the way he was," Donald Stoltz, the museum's president, said Thursday. "He was pretty sick, in a wheelchair. And that's tough for such a vibrant man."

Norman Rockwell died Wednesday night at age 84. He never made it to the museum, which opened two years ago in the old Curtis Publishing building. But on Thursday he filled the room.

And the people laughed and smiled, entertained by all those freckled faces. It wasn't disrespectful. Norman Rockwell would have painted it that way.

Estimates released

AUSTIN—The School Tax Assessment Practices Board has released its estimates of the productive and market values of open space land subject to taxation by the state's 1,100 school districts, including Midland Independent School District.

The report shows a total of 155,005,662 acres of open space land in the state. The value of that open space land—determined by adding the estimated productive value of land actually in production to the market value of land available but not devoted to production—was set at $14,818,935,518.

With the passage this week of the so-called tax relief amendment, much more rural open space land will be subject to taxation on the basis of agricultural or silvicultural production value which, generally, will be significantly lower than market value.

The board estimates that 153,381,430 acres of land are in production in the state, setting the productivity value of those acres at $10,892,743,833.

The report estimates there are 1,624,232 acres of land available but not devoted to production. This is an indicator of what land, now taxed at market value, later could be put into production and taxed accordingly.

The market value of that land available but not used for production is estimated by the board at $3,326,491,542.

A breakdown of the board's findings for Midland area school districts shows the following.

•Midland ISD—499,200 estimated acres of land in production with productivity value of $11,057,977. No land was listed as being available but not devoted to production.

•Greenwood ISD—83,665 estimated acres of land in production with a productivity value of $2,739,780. No land was listed as being available but not devoted to production.

•Ector County ISD—530,652 estimated acres of land in production with a productivity value of $3,134,879. No land was listed as being available but not devoted to production.

Powell moved to hospital unit

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Condemned murderer David Lee Powell was transferred to a prison hospital unit here after doctors said more than a month of force-feeding has caused a serious tenderness in his esophagus.

Powell, 27, has refused to eat since shortly after being sentenced to die by injection for the machine-gunning slaying of Austin police officer Ralph Ablanado.

Prison officials have been force-feeding him through a tube since Oct. 9 and Texas Department of Corrections spokesman Ron Taylor said they will continue the practice at least until Saturday, when they will seek a judge's advice on the matter. A hearing is set for 1 p.m. Saturday before Judge James F. Warren in Huntsville's 12th District Court.

Powell began his hunger strike in the Travis County Jail, claiming he wanted to die. Taylor said he continued to refuse food at TDC and force-feeding began Oct. 9. Shortly thereafter, Taylor said, he began to take liquids on his own but still refused solid food and the force-feedings continued. Since then he has refused even the tubal feedings on three separate occasions.

His last refusal came Thursday evening and doctors, already concerned about the increasing tenderness in his esophagus from daily force feedings, asked that he be hospitalized.

Taylor said Powell's condition is good with the exception of his esophagus, a condition that has doctors worried that continued force feeding could result in a ruptured esophagus or even death. Further medical evaluation has been ordered.

"The legal definition of the department's responsibilities is to continue feeding...to keep him alive," Taylor said. "Therefore we're keeping him in the hospital and seeking a hearing...to seek the guidance of the court."

Taylor said prison officials are unsure what they can do in view of the fact Powell could starve to death if they don't feed him and could die from continued force-feeding. He said intravenous feeding has so far not been tried because it takes even more cooperation from a patient than tubal feeding.

"At this point we don't have a definite recommendation," he said. "Perhaps by tomorrow our attorneys will have come to some conclusions."

Ian Smith rings anniversary bell

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (AP) — Ian Smith rang a replica of the American Liberty Bell at midnight, marking his declaration of independence on Nov. 11, 1965, to head off black rule in Rhodesia. But he told 600 white revelers it probably would be their last anniversary party.

The guests in glittering evening gowns and tuxedos cheered the prime minister wildly when he referred to the 1965 declaration, which has never been recognized by Britain. It was a response to British pressure to move toward majority rule for the country's 6.7 million blacks.

Rhodesia's 260,000 whites still control the country, but Smith and his bi-racial ruling council have promised elections leading to majority rule by Dec. 31.

Smith recently has said the guerrilla war against his government may delay elections, but his three black colleagues in the ruling council, who did not attend Friday's festivities, have opposed any delay.

Smith told the guests his agreement for majority rule would be implemented within months unless the United States and Britain organize peace talks with guerrilla leaders, whose war against the Salisbury regime is costing an average of 30 lives daily.

Smith said it was clear guerrilla leaders do not want to negotiate and the Western powers "are trying to appease them."

The guests stood silently as Smith said, "If the future government of this country, rightly and democratically elected, decided on a particular day as their special day of national significance — calling it Independence Day — I believe I would be ready to comply and willingly acknowledge that day."

Earlier in the evening, couples danced to jazz music and tunes from the sixties, played by black police bandmen, in a suburban city hall bedecked with Rhodesian flags and emblems of the country's combat regiments.

Many guests were clearly moved as three young guitar-playing sisters dressed in camouflage uniforms sang "Rhodesians Never Die." The number was composed by Smith's son-in-law, Clem Tholet.

Smith and his wife, Janet, took the floor when the band the "Anniversary Waltz."

Our planning, energies, facilities and professional efforts are dedicated to providing the reader with the very best and most complete daily information medium in West Texas.

Then he invests in advertising to bring the customer to the goods.

The advertiser needs to know the medium he uses is WANTED by the consumer he hopes to attract. He needs to know there is no question about its delivery, dependability, readership or acceptance. He needs to know its effectiveness has been thoroughly tested and proven.

BECAUSE ADVERTISING IS NEWS ABOUT THE MARKET PLACE, THE ADVERTISER NEEDS TO KNOW THE MEDIUM HE USES PROVIDES MORE OF THIS NEWS TO MORE READERS THAN ANY OTHER MEDIUM IN THE MARKET!

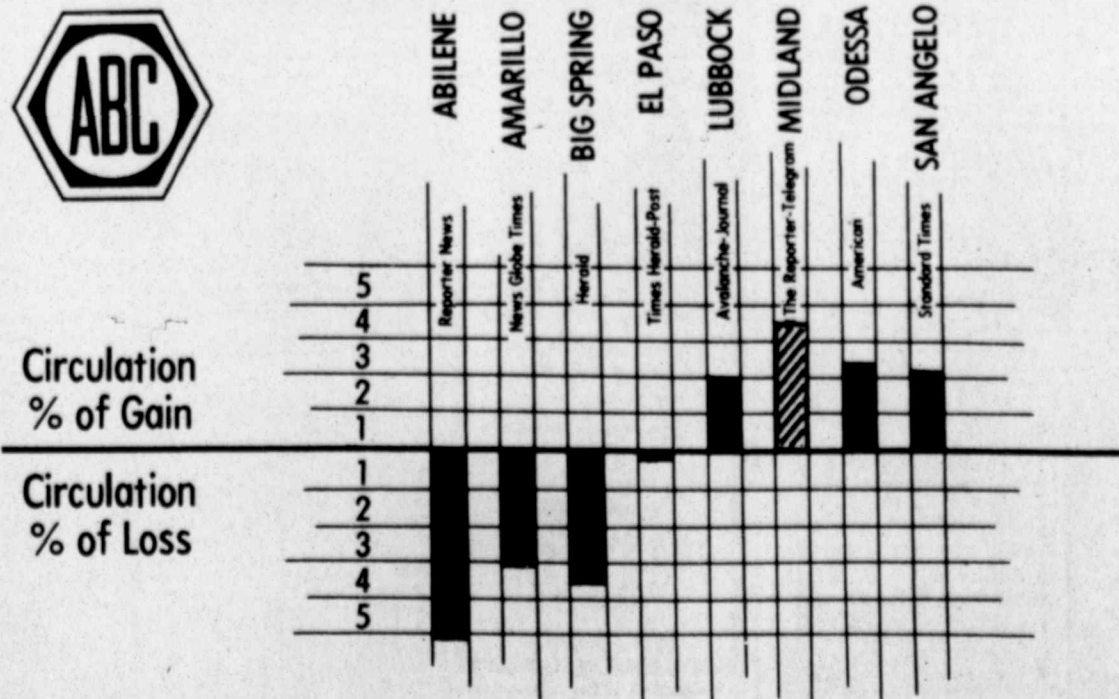

In a reader opinion survey, respondents ranked advertising in The Reporter-Telegram equally with general news, national news, women's page and Dear Abby as "liked most." Advertising ranked higher than several news categories as "always" or "often" read.

The Advertiser knows his advertising in The Midland Reporter-Telegram can be depended upon to BRING THE CUSTOMER TO THE GOODS.

Veterans Day stirs visions of forgotten war

By BARRY RENFREW
Associated Press Writer

The government and most states are once again observing Veterans Day on Nov. 11. If you feel like grumbling about losing a three-day weekend, consider for a moment what today is all about.

It marks the 60th anniversary of the end of World War I which cost 15 million lives, totally changed the course of history and gave birth to our own age.

War has never been easy to explain and World War I is perhaps the hardest of all. Beneath the dry accounts of rivalries and alliances which historians use to explain the war, there lies a sense of something far greater, a sense of restlessness troubling the world at the beginning of the new century.

The mood was caught in the writings of one Pedaric Pearse, who wrote, when the war was two years old and millions lay dead, "The last sixteen months, have been the most glorious in history... The old heart of the earth needed to be warmed with the red wine of the battlefields... Never has such august homage been offered to God, the homage of millions of lives given gladly for love of country."

This attitude inspired a 17-year-old schoolboy to assassinate the heir to the Austrian throne in 1914 and inspired a world which had hardly heard of the murdered prince to go to war over his death without knowing why.

Over 25 countries, from Europe and Africa, from Australia and Asia, and from America, eventually became caught up. As one country sunk back exhausted and drained, there was another to take its place.

All over the world people responded to the war with wild enthusiasm. Recruits flocked to the colors, marching away in the August sunshine 64 years ago bedecked with flowers as their families cheered.

Everyone knew that victory would be theirs and that the troops would be home by Christmas.

A poet, one of many caught up in the hysteria, wrote, "Blow out you bugles, over the rich dead!" Neither he nor his generation could know that the dead would be rich only in their numbers.

The war was to be like nothing ever imagined.

When the armies clashed they discovered that mere infantry charges stood no chance against modern artillery and the machine gun. Within months the war sank into stalemate.

Blooded and bewildered, the armies dug in. Crude foxholes evolved into heavily fortified trenches against which men were hurled again and again in hopeless attempts to break through. The cost in lives was appalling, but the attacks grew only larger and bloodier.

By that first Christmas, victory was as distant as the euphoric days of summer. The trenches stretched from the North Sea to Switzerland.

The First Battle of the Somme, the great Allied offensive of 1916, was typical of the war. For seven days and nights, thousands of guns bombarded the German front. The gunfire could be heard 70 miles away. At dawn on the eighth day, the attackers charged into a sea of mud created by their own artillery. Those who managed to cross it found the enemy waiting virtually unscathed in deep bunkers.

In the brief space of a July afternoon some 60,000 men were lost, many of them drowned in the mud.

Refusing to admit defeat, the Allies attacked again and again for five months. Over a million men were lost and the line of trenches was virtually unchanged. It was hailed as a great victory.

The soldiers who had once sung "It's a long way to Tipperary" or "The Yanks are coming" now sang, "If you want your old sweetheart, I know where he is. He's hanging on the old barbed wire."

They had little else to sing about. Corpses piled up in the trenches and were often used to build breastworks. Men waited for the bullet with "their name on it." The loss of an arm or leg was a "ticket" home and considered worth the price.

Yet men could still be kind and unpredictable. On Christmas Day 1914, up and down the line soldiers spontaneously met the enemy of a moment ago in "no man's land."

Shyly they drank to each other's health, exchanging gifts and even addresses for after the war.

Behind the lines, the generals were outraged by this collapse of the "fighting spirit." To prevent its recurrence the enemy lines were shelled for a full 24 hours every Christmas Day thereafter.

When the war finally ended, the armies that went home contained few who had first marched away so long ago. The returning veterans had little to say about the war. Many swore they would never tell their children what they had seen.

The war was hardly over when the world began preparing for the next.

Today, vast cemeteries cover the old battlefields. Valleys of crosses stretch into the distance. Monuments to the fallen, displaced by memorials to later wars, mean little to us now.

Yet many of these monuments still have a story worth hearing. One is the Mennin Gate, a squat triumphal arch in the Belgian town of Ypres. It is covered with tens of thousands of names. They belong to men who died around that one town, men whose remains were never found.

Names in the news

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — Entertainer Danny Thomas, 64, underwent a 2½-hour operation Wednesday to repair the middle joint of his index finger — an operation that should improve his golf grip, according to spokesman Michael Firlik at Blodgett Memorial Medical Center.

Firlik said the finger was injured seven years ago when a gun Thomas was loading fired.

TOKYO (AP) — Katherine Patricia Ruth, of Granada Hills, Calif., a 20-year-old blonde actress, was crowned Miss International for 1978 Friday, becoming the second American to win the pageant. Miss Norway, Jeanette Aarum, won second prize, followed by Belgium's Brigitte Muysshondt, West Germany's Petra Brinkmann and Ireland's Loraine Bernadette Enriquez. Women from 43 countries competed.

TUNIS, Tunisia (AP) — Ailing President Habib Bourguiba, 75, has recovered the use of his limbs following three heavy falls and intensive treatment at a West German clinic, the Tunisian government reported Friday.

The president, who has long suffered from a form of arteriosclerosis, was flown to a clinic in Bonn late last month and remains under treatment there. The communique said the president "can walk again" and has been successfully treated for his chronic insomnia.

Bourguiba, who has led his nation since French rule ended in 1956, has virtually retired from public life, leaving the conduct of affairs of state to Prime Minister Hedi Nouria, who is designated by the constitution as his future successor.

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Maynard Augst, 21, of Montgomery, Minn., whose family has been farming the same ground since before the Civil War, has been named the Star Farmer of America at the 51st annual National Future Farmers of America convention.

He received the honor Thursday night.

The Star Agribusinessman of America award went to Mark Williams, 21, of Orlando, Fla. The two, who received $1,000 cash awards, were chosen from 807 candidates in each category.

Augst, whose ancestors moved to Minnesota in 1852, raises about 200 cattle a year while working 400 acres of land.

In a related event, Linda Kaye McGinley, 7, of Blanchard, Okla., was named queen of the American Royal Rodeo, Live Stock and Horse Show, which is held in conjunction with the FFA gathering.

Extension for statute of limitations for prosecuting Nazi criminals sought

NEW YORK (AP) — Congresswoman Elizabeth Holtzman said Friday she would ask President Carter to urge West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt to extend the statute of limitations for prosecuting Nazi war criminals.

A number of prominent West Germans are currently proposing to extend or eliminate the 30-year-old statute, which expires Dec. 31, 1979.

"A president who has expressed sensitivity about human rights should be sensitive about this," the Brooklyn Democrat said at a news conference with Nazi hunter Simon Wiesenthal.

Wiesenthal said he was beginning a campaign to get Americans to send Schmidt 500,000 postcards depicting a uniformed Nazi standing over the body of a prisoner while two other prisoners hang from nearby trees.

He said he has already printed 150,000 of the postcards, which say that the man on the front of the card has not been found and "he and thousands of other Nazi criminals" cannot be prosecuted after the current statute expires.

Rep. Holtzman said a bill signed last month by President Carter which makes it easier to deport Nazi war criminals would not be as effective if the Nazis did not face prosecution in West Germany.
