City Granted Judgment In Lawsuit Over Bonds

By FRANK PATRICK
Avalanche-Journal Staff
DISTRICT Judge Robert C. Wright Tuesday ruled that, as a matter of law, the City of Lubbock may issue $9.52 million in general obligation bonds from a 1977 bond election.

In granting a city motion for judgment, Wright said he agreed with the city's contention that there was not sufficient fact dispute to warrant sending the case to a jury.

The outcome capped a two-day trial before a jury in Wright's 137th District Court. Robert Lee Isom Jr., one of the defendants disputing the validity of the proposed bond issuance, indicated there would be an appeal.

City Attorney John Ross made motions to withdraw the case from the jury and to have judgment entered by the court at the conclusion of evidence in the case.

Assistant Attorney General John Darrouzet, representing the state, and Tony Wright, attorney ad litem for unnamed defendants, joined in the motions.

The May 21, 1977, bond election entailed a $26.4 million public works package approved by voters. Approved were more than $16 million for improvements and extensions to the city waterworks system and nearly $5 million for street improvements, including lighting and signals.

Declaratory Judgment Asked
The city had asked for a declaratory judgment upholding the validity of the proposed $9.5 million issuance. Two citizens, Isom and James G. Marshall, requested a jury trial.

The suit was brought as a class action against all taxpayers. Property owners and citizens of Lubbock. The suit reportedly was viewed by the city as a preemptive measure, designed to forestall possible later litigation.

Class-Action Suit's Lawyers Admonished

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff
ATTORNEYS representing black and Mexican-American citizens in a class action suit against the city of Lubbock were admonished Tuesday to begin presenting stronger evidence of pervasive discrimination against minorities in Lubbock.

In two days of plodding testimony in the federal court trial, attorneys for the plaintiffs have called nine witnesses who recounted personal experiences with city government which convinced them city government is unresponsive to minority needs.

U.S. District Judge Halbert O. Woodward, however, interrupted the testimony of a witness Tuesday to comment that "it looks to me like they go to the city manager about brush in the streets and it's done the next day."

"Maybe it's not done as fast as they'd like," he said, "but where have they failed to get access to the political system?"

"It looks like they've got a lot more access than I've got," he said.

"The constitution doesn't say every voter gets to have his way, and, if not, he gets a lawsuit. We've all got gripes with city hall," the judge noted.

Must Show Discrimination
"You've got to have something more fundamental than chugholes in the streets and grass growing," he said in reference to previous witness complaints of excessively tall grass blocking the view of motorists.

"You've got to show discrimination between the two."

In reference to city actions to correct racial inequities since the lawsuit was filed in 1976, Woodward said, "It looks like they got their hands caught in the cookie jar, trying to put the cookies back in."

The judge noted, however, that the lawsuit which spurred the city's actions may be considered input into the political process.

Since only nine of the scheduled 35 witnesses were called Tuesday, the judge said.

In a petition, the city said it felt the legal question must be disposed of prior to the time public works projects are to begin.

In a key pre-trial ruling, Wright upheld a city contention that, under authority of the statute used by the city to bring the suit, the trial should be restricted solely to the question of whether the municipality will follow legal procedures in connection with the proposed issuance.

City Authority Determined
In testimony Tuesday, Darrouzet, called as a witness by the city, said that in his opinion the city does have the authority to issue the bonds.

Darrouzet said he formed his opinion after studying documents introduced into evidence during the trial.

Also Tuesday, city finance director Sterling Miller testified that the municipality's debt service is well below the normal maximum and compares favorably with that of other cities in the state.

Miller indicated that, if the $9.5 million issuance were approved, gross bonded indebtedness in amount of principal would amount to only 3.65 per cent of assessed valuation. He said that anything under five per cent is considered good.

City hall critic Marshall, a defendant in the civil suit, contended that funds authorized in the public works bond election had not been sufficiently tied down to specific projects.

"I'm committed to that and that's what I'm going to do," he added.

Carter said "yes" when asked if he knew in his own mind whether he would seek re-election in 1980, and "later" when asked when he would announce his decision.

But the president left little doubt that he is running hard for a second four-year term, saying he is "very pleased" with

President Opposes Economic Boycotts

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, rejecting a suggestion by his chief anti-inflation adviser, said Tuesday he opposes consumer boycotts of firms that violate the administration's price guidelines.

"I don't personally favor any organized boycotts," Carter said at a nationally broadcast news conference.

But the president added that he hopes consumers and state and local governments will be "prudent purchasers" and know which businesses are complying with the guidelines.

Alfred Kahn, chairman of the Council on Wage and Price Stability, had suggested the idea last Friday as an anti-inflation enforcement tool.

Cut Sharing Funds
Although Carter rejected the organized boycott notion, he seemed to leave the door open to a Kahn suggestion of seeking legislation to reduce revenue-sharing funds to states or localities that violate the anti-inflation wage guidelines.

The president observed only that such reductions would be "illegal" under present law. Kahn said he was studying possible changes in legislation.

The administration's anti-inflation program seeks to hold wage and benefit increases to 7 percent and price increases under a complicated formula that would average roughly 5.75 percent.

NAM Critical
Meanwhile, the new chairman of the National Association of Manufacturers, Herbert E. Markley, criticized Kahn's boycott idea, telling reporters: "It is so reprehensible I can't imagine the government talking that way. I think the government ought to retract that as quickly as it can." He indicated he felt Carter's statement was a partial retraction.

Carter also said he is reserving judgment on whether to seek an end to federal controls on gasoline prices. Lifting the controls would almost certainly lead to increases in some prices at service stations.

Deputy Energy Secretary John F. O'Leary had warned in Senate testimony Monday that "we are going to be in deep trouble by 1982" unless these controls are ended. O'Leary predicted shortages or tight supplies of unleaded gasoline.

Criticizes Shah Foes
On other subjects, Carter indirectly but sharply criticized French-based conservative Muslim opponents of the Shah of Iran, referring to "uncontrolled statements from foreign nations that encourage bloodbaths and violence."

And he repeated an indirect warning against Soviet intervention in the rebellion in Iran, saying "we have no intention of permitting others to interfere in the internal affairs of Iran."

Carter said there is "good progress" being made toward a U.S.-Soviet agreement to limit strategic arms, but would not confirm reports that a tentative agreement already has been reached.

Geneva Meeting Set
Within an hour of the president's news conference, the United States and the Soviet Union announced simultaneously that Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko would meet in Geneva on Dec. 21 and 22 to discuss SALT. The terse announcements did not go beyond that fact that a meeting is scheduled.

And, turning to the U.S. political scene, Carter said, "I don't consider there is a growing schism in the Democratic Party" despite recent criticism by liberal Democrats and other labor leaders of his proposed fiscal 1980 budget cuts.

Carter reiterated strongly his intention to proceed simultaneously with increased defense spending and a reduction in the present $39 billion federal deficit.

"I am going to have an adequate defense. I am going to meet our obligations to our allies ... and I'm going to cut the budget deficit down below $30 billion and I'm going to do the best I can to meet the social needs of our nation," the president said.

"I'm committed to that and that's what I'm going to do," he added.

Carter said "yes" when asked if he knew in his own mind whether he would seek re-election in 1980, and "later" when asked when he would announce his decision.

But the president left little doubt that he is running hard for a second four-year term, saying he is "very pleased" with last weekend's Democratic Party mid-term convention. And he played down differences between himself and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., who is being urged by some liberal Democrats to challenge Carter for renomination.

"I think on balance it was worth the money" that it cost the party, Carter said of the mid-term convention in Memphis, Tenn., which he originally opposed when the idea was advanced in 1976.

"I think in general the policies of our administration were endorsed," the president said of the conference which cost the Democratic Party an estimated $650,000.

Delegates at the convention split about 60-40 in favor of a White House-backed resolution endorsing Carter's attempts to trim the deficit as an inflation-control measure.

The president also said, "I think the differences are minor" between himself and Kennedy, who has criticized the administration for moving too slowly toward a national health insurance plan.

Kennedy had said at the weekend party that Carter's budget cuts could be as divisive an issue as the Vietnam War.

Carter said he does not now envision calling a new Egyptian-Israeli summit to conclude a Middle East peace treaty even though the Dec. 17 deadline for signing the accord is approaching.

Casualties Rise In Iranian Riot

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Army troops firing from the ground and helicopters have killed at least 40 persons and wounded more than 600 since Monday in the city of Isfahan, medical sources said Tuesday. But the government said only six were dead.

The sources said the five hospitals in the industrial city 250 miles south of Tehran were jammed with seriously wounded civilians.

They reported more than 20 of the persons slain by heavy gunfire were killed Monday when rioting broke out after a religious demonstration on Ashura, an emotional peak of the Shiite Muslim holy month of Moharram.

Opposition sources claimed hundreds of shah foes were massacred by army gunfire, some of it machine gun barrages from helicopters.

But the city's governor, Manuchehr Haqdan, denied the charges in an interview with The Associated Press. Official sources thus far have confirmed six fatalities and many wounded in the two days of violence.

Haqdan blamed the reports of higher casualties than the government's on anti-government forces trying to whip up support for rebellion in other cities.

A doctor in one of Isfahan's main hospitals said wards were packed with persons suffering from bullet wounds or severe beatings by troops and loyalist supporters of Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi.

"The military is threatening to cut off power in the city," the doctor said. "If that happens, many of these people will die because we will not be able to treat them or keep them on life support systems."

The U.S.-trained doctor declined to be identified by name.

Witnesses said troops roamed the streets of Isfahan Monday and Tuesday, forcing people to shout "javid shah!" — long live the shah — and beating them if they refused.

In Washington, President Carter told a news conference: "I fully expect the shah to maintain power." He criticized "predictions of doom and disaster" and what he called "uncontrolled statements made from foreign countries" that have inflamed the situation.

Carter's statement was an obvious reference to Ayatullah Khomeini, the Iranian Shiite leader exiled in Paris. He has been directing a year-long effort to topple the shah.

A Western diplomat in Isfahan, who declined to be identified, reported Tuesday afternoon by telephone: "The army has regained control of the streets. There's still some firing in the air to get people off the streets. But the situation is not very good and it's very tense."

Western sources said several thousand Americans living in Isfahan covered in their guarded compounds as the fighting swirled through the streets. There were no reports of American injuries.

Diplomatic sources said troops roamed the battered streets, smashing the windows of stores bearing portraits of Khomeini.

Isfahan is a picturesque city of 680,000. Its varied architecture is punctuated by ancient minarets, mosques and imposing royal palaces. The city has a myriad of textile shops famous for exquisite rugs.

Isfahan, once Iran's capital, was one of the great cities in the world at its zenith in the 17th century, but it declined quickly after falling to the invading Afghans in 1723.

Violence rippled through provincial areas and clashes were reported in Mashhad. See 46 REPORTED Page 14

Goodfellows Aid Coupon Makes Final Appearance

STOP! LOOK! LISTEN!
Today is the last day that Goodfellow coupons, which can help identify needy children under 14 years of age in the city limits of Lubbock, will appear in The Lubbock Avalanche-Journal.

This is an important announcement in the lives of boys and girls of Lubbock, who may be missed at Christmas by Santa Claus.

Because it is from such coupons that the Goodfellows prepare delivery lists for sacks of toys, fruit, nuts and candy on Christmas morning.

If the names of children needing help at Christmas are not listed on Goodfellow coupons, then the boys and girls are apt to be missed entirely Christmas morning.

Why is such an early cutoff date required?

That's a fair question.

It is because all names included on Goodfellow lists must be screened and checked carefully by committee members and this requires a lot of time.

of their classmates by their teachers.

Moreover, Griffith said some principals encourage a policy of prayer by picking only religious students to lead morning devotionals.

"The constitution prohibits the government from establishing any religion," he said. "Over the years the courts, up to the Supreme Court, have held that religious devotions — such as prayer and reading from the Bible — tend to constitute establishing a religion."

Making the ACLU presentation to the school board will be businessman Clarence Solnick, the Rev. Art Preisinger and law professor Rodric Schoen, Griffith said.

The board meets Monday at 7:15 a.m. in the school district administration building, 1628 19th St.

ACLU Seeks School Prayer Ban

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff
DESPITE court rulings barring the practice, some public schools here still bombard children with prayer and other religious activities, the local chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU) contends.

The group next week will ask the Lubbock Independent School District board of trustees to see that the practice is stopped.

"The issue here is separation of church and state. We are not against prayer — but we are against prayer in a public school, where there is a captive audience," said attorney Thomas Griffith, president of the Lubbock ACLU branch.

"Our feeling is that those persons who want to pray can do so more fervently and diligently at home and at church, where they will not intrude on non-believers and believers of a different faith."

Griffith said he sent to the school district a letter outlining the group's position and citing examples of school activities the organization finds objectionable.

"Most of the schools," Griffith contends, use their public-address systems to broadcast prayers at the start of the school day. "They are very persistent about it," he said.

Griffith said the ACLU also has received reports of an elementary teacher who opens class with a period of meditation and closes with oral prayer; the use of "aggressive" evangelistic speakers in some schools; and organized praying in school cafeterias.

ties, he said, are "uniformly and persistently Christian in nature." Thus they may offend non-Christians as well as non-believers, Griffith said.

Among those who have complained about the in-school practices are Unitarians and Jews, Griffith said. He said many Christians also object because they view school prayer as sacrilegious and as violating the principle of church-state separation.

School administrators defend school prayer as a voluntary activity by students, Griffith said. But the ACLU believes that peer pressure forces some children to "pray along" for fear of social consequences, he said.

Griffith said there have been some instances in which non-praying students have been publicly embarrassed in front

Cold Air, More Clear Skies Due For Today

Another cold front will sweep across the South Plains today, chilling temperatures but bringing no expected precipitation.

The front, propelled toward Lubbock from northern Colorado by northwesterly winds blowing to 15 mph, will keep today's afternoon high in the cool lower 40s in marked contrast to Tuesday's high of 66.

As the colder air makes its strongest push through the area tonight, the mercury will dip into the low 20s, but skies will remain clear.

By Thursday morning, however, patches of clouds will dot the sky, and the temperature will warm to near 50.

Relative humidity will range from near 80 percent this morning to about 30 percent this afternoon. By Thursday morning, the reading should be nearly 90 percent.

About 10 hours of sunshine can be expected today and Thursday, according to the National Weather Service. Light frost is possible Thursday morning, but it should be gone before noon, the service said.

Clear dry air continued over most of Texas late Tuesday afternoon. A few patches of clouds covered far south Texas and light rain showers were reported between Laredo and Cotulla.

Most of the state, though, enjoyed clear skies and mild temperatures all day.

Humidity readings ranged from the 20 percent mark in West Texas to about 30 percent over the rest of the state.

Late afternoon temperatures were in the 50s and 60s, generally, with 4 p.m. extremes ranging from 66 degrees at Childress to 53 at El Paso.

Differences With Kennedy 'Minor,' Carter Says

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter said Tuesday he has "a good relationship" with Sen. Edward M. Kennedy although they do have some differences over domestic priorities.

Those differences were graphically demonstrated at the Democratic convention in Memphis.

Senator Kennedy represents a family within the Democratic Party which is revered because of his two brothers and the contribution of his family to our party," said the president.

While taking note of the demonstrations against the shah over the past few days, Carter told a news conference he believes the "predictions of doom and disaster certainly have not been realized at all."

The Iranian government reported that six persons had been killed in the violence.

On Tuesday, Carter was unequivocal about the shah's ability to ride out the storm, which reached a peak Sunday and Monday as Iran's Moslems observed their annual religious holiday.

With the power and prestige of his office working in his favor, Carter clearly had the votes to support his emphasis on the need to balance the budget and fight inflation.

But the loudest, most emotional response given any event in Memphis was the delegate reaction to Kennedy's speech calling for early enactment of national health insurance and warning against abandoning the party's commitment to social programs.

New SALT Talks Loom

WASHINGTON (AP) — Another and perhaps conclusive round of strategic arms limitation negotiations will take place in Geneva next week, the United States and Soviet Union announced Tuesday.

Those issues, officials have been saying, include such items as the number of warheads a missile can carry and the number of cruise missiles a bomber can carry.

"It's good to point out that the Iranian people for 2500 years — perhaps as long as almost any nation on earth — have had the ability for stable self-government," he said.

There have been changes in government, yes, sometimes violence, but they have a history of an ability to govern themselves.

"I have a unique perspective in this country as president," said Carter. "I have to look at a much broader range of

"I don't like being $150 in wages. This messed up my life without somebody. I can't even have body coming to town now 17, has been won't even talk to me."

The statement from the two governments came within minutes of the conclusion of a news conference by President Carter, who said there had been "good progress" in the talks toward a second Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty.

In the context of the entire strategic arms agreement, the issues are not of major importance, the officials said.

"I have a unique perspective in this country as president," said Carter. "I have to look at a much broader range of

Stamp Recipients Soon To Receive More For Less

WASHINGTON (AP) — Starting Jan. 1 recipients of food stamps will no longer have to pay for the stamps.

The change is being made nationwide on that date, although several states initiated the change Dec. 1.

Under the new rule, for example, persons who have had to pay $100 for stamps worth $150 will now simply be given $50 worth of stamps.

Federal officials say this will make the program more available to persons who were eligible but did not participate because they didn't have the cash available to buy stamps. In addition, it will reduce the number of stamps in circulation and officials hope this will help reduce waste.

States in which the change already has taken effect include Alaska, Florida, Minnesota, New Mexico, Oregon, Rhode Island, Tennessee and Texas.

States in which the change already has taken effect include Alaska, Florida, Minnesota, New Mexico, Oregon, Rhode Island, Tennessee and Texas.

If those talks are successful, the president said, they would be followed by a summit between Carter and Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev.

That summit would wrap up the SALT II treaty and allow the two leaders to consider a "broad agenda" of other issues, Carter said.

The president said progress has been steady for 18 months in the SALT negotiations, but State Department officials confirmed that major progress was made in three days of meetings last week between Vance and Soviet ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin.

The officials said both the Soviets and the United States had compromised on the few issues still outstanding.

Rufner Outbursts Draw Warning From Judge

HOUSTON (AP)—The judge presiding over the murder-for-hire trial of millionaire Cullen Davis threatened Tuesday to jail a surly, volatile and hostile witness after a bizarre courtroom shouting match.

"I'm running this show, and I'm going to do it my way," Judge Wallace Moore told the witness, W.T. Rufner, outside the presence of the jury.

"I'm not going to let you blow seven weeks down the drain because you're teed off at him," Moore said after Rufner, 39, repeatedly replied angrily and profanely to questions by chief defense lawyer Richard "Racehorse" Haynes.

Rufner, scheduled to testify before the jury today, was warned that "the jail is right back there" if he continues in the same manner when the jury is present.

"If you say anything before this jury to blow me out of the tub, you're going to be safe for six months anyway. You're volunteering a lot of information and using profanity, and I'm not going to stand for it. You do that, and you're going to be put on a very short leash," Moore warned.

After twice being escorted from the courtroom where Davis is on trial for an alleged plot to kill his divorce judge, the shaggy-haired, bearded Rufner reluctantly took the stand at 4:30 p.m. to submit to questioning by Haynes.

The Houston lawyer wanted to know about any contacts Rufner has had with Priscilla Davis, FBI informant David McCrory and karate instructor Pat Burleson. That is the trio the defense contends conspired to frame Davis in the murder conspiracy case.

Rufner several times responded flippantly, loudly or profanely to Haynes's questions, and the examination quickly became volatile.

"How long have you known David McCrory?" Haynes asked.

"Too long," Rufner snapped.

Rufner said he returned from Davis's murder trial in Amarillo last year with McCrory because McCrory volunteered to "buy the beer and gas and drive."

Rufner said that enabled them to cash in a plane ticket paid for by the defense and added, "Why not? It cost me a hell of a lot to go up there and talk to you people."

Haynes asked Rufner about an incident last June in Fort Worth "when two people tried to run me over. They jumped out with ball bats."

As Haynes continued his questioning, Rufner declared: "I could sit here 20 minutes and tell you about a blast of (expletive) thrown at me and a bunch of people pulling me off the road."

It was at the end of the stormy session that the judge told Rufner he would testify before the jury today and warned him about any such outbursts in its presence.

Rufner, called to Houston as a hostile defense witness, had disrupted the quiet decorum of the court earlier in the day when he wandered into the courtroom after the noon recess.

A defense lawyer took him outside, where a bailiff dressed him down.

But it was not before Rufner got the attention of lead defense counsel Haynes, who quickly called for a conference at the bench.

As he started out, Rufner said, "Hello, Mr. Haynes, how are you?"

The unruffled lawyer did not reply. A defense lawyer told the witness to sit down outside and that they would call him when they were ready.

"Go get your henchman and we'll talk about it now," fumed Rufner, dressed in a T-shirt showing a likeness of him and a monkey with the phrase, "Is This a Courtroom or a Circus?", under a long sleeved shirt.

Rufner, 39, is a onetime boyfriend of the defendant's estranged wife and a memorable witness last year at Davis's murder trial.

"If I wanted Davis knocked off I'd do it myself, he told newsmen Tuesday morning after a bailiff had to escort him from the courtroom. "If a job is too big to do it yourself, don't do it."

"It gets curiouse and curiouse, don't it?" quipped Haynes.

Rufner, wearing a burgundy-colored hat and a belt buckle engraved with the words "I bring joy to women," did not disrupt the morning proceedings but triggered a mild sensation in the hallway outside.

He called FBI informant David McCrory a "punk," defense lawyer Phil Burleson a "fink," challenged Haynes and Davis to meet him in a "bull ring" and meandered off to a bar.

"If they keep me overnight it's going to run into a grand," he said.

Rufner said he has already squandered a fair amount of "Cullen's money" on drinks aboard the airplane that brought him here from Fort Worth under defense subpoena.

"We want to question him about his activities during the period of time of the conspiracy," Burleson said.

The defense maintains that Mrs. Davis, McCrory, a Fort Worth karate instructor, and perhaps Rufner somehow conspired to frame Davis in the murder-for-hire case.

Rufner contended the defense would pay dearly for the embarrassment and inconvenience of summoning him to Houston, saying: "I have nothing to hide. I'm the only one here telling the truth."

He was furious that no one met him at the airport, where he said he quaffed down several "42 beers," and spent $33 on a taxi to deliver him to the courtroom.

"As far as I'm concerned, I beat Haynes in Amarillo and I'll beat him here," he boasted. "I'd just like to get him on my grounds ... with a big fence around us."

Rufner was equally hostile in Amarillo, where a jury last year acquitted Davis in the 1976 slaying of his young stepdaughter.

During that trial Haynes produced a poster-size picture of Rufner with a scantily clad Mrs. Davis. Rufner wore only a strategically placed Christmas stocking.

Earlier Tuesday, with the jury absent, the defense played a tape recording of the voice of a mysterious extortionist who threatened last year to kill Davis. The calls were made to a Fort Worth residence occupied by Davis and his girlfriend Karen Master.

HOUSTON (AP)—W.T. Rufner tilted his red cowboy hat, with the peacock-feathered band, on the back of his head and said, "Frame-up, hell, if I wanted to knock off Cullen Davis I would do it myself."

"If a job is too big a job for you to do yourself, then don't do it. My daddy taught me that," he said.

Rufner, called by the defense to testify in the hire-for-kill trial of Davis, said in an interview, "I would like to get Davis and Richard (Racehorse) Haynes alone with me in a field or somewhere and I'd get the truth out of them."

Earlier in the day, Rufner, once a boy friend of Priscilla Davis, the estranged wife of the defendant, arrived in the courtroom carrying his clothes and boots, creating a stir among spectators and attorneys. He was escorted by a bailiff from the courtroom and later put his clothes and pair of shined boots in the press-room.

Looking like a cowboy right off the range after a long roundup, with shoulder-length hair and a beard and flowing mustache, Rufner arrived from Fort Worth claiming defense attorney Haynes "just wants to blow more smoke on this trial by bringing me here. He wants to make this another divorce trial."

"I got nothing to hide. I can back up the whole things I say. I don't like being here. I don't like Cullen Davis and I don't like Richard Haynes," he said.

the slaying of his 12-year-old stepdaughter during a shooting at his Fort Worth mansion.

"I don't like being here. It's costing me $150 in wages. This whole damn thing has messed up my life. I can't go anywhere without somebody asking me a question. I can't even have a drink without somebody coming to the table. My daughter, now 17, has been so upset by this she won't even talk to me anymore."

Wearing a T-shirt under his western shirt, that said, "Is this a courtroom or a circus" and depicting a monkey as an attorney, and a belt buckle reading, "I bring joy to women," Rufner said during the interview over a shot of scotch and a bottle of beer:

"Davis killed that little 12-year-old girl. Somewhere there is a long hallway and at the end is a cross and someone will be nailed to it."

"I want whoever killed Andrea to be taken to the town square and hanged. I loved that little girl. She and my daughter were friends."

Rufner, a former professional motorcycle racer who later was convicted of possession of a controlled substance and was given a probated term, moved in with Priscilla shortly after her husband moved out.

Rufner said there was always a pistol under his pillow during the nights he spent in the Davis home.

Of Priscilla, he said, "She was a beautiful person. I guess to Priscilla I was a teddy-bear, somebody she could come to and cry. When I first met her I didn't even know the chick was so rich. I didn't know Cullen Davis and I didn't care about him."

The roughish, tough-talking Rufner said he believe at least two attempts were made to "wipe him out."

He recalled crossing paths with Haynes in a Fort Worth restaurant last Mother's Day. "I was ready to take him. I told him I no longer was on probation and for him to watch over his left shoulder for lightning. He wanted to know if that was a threat and I said, "Hell no, lightning always strikes over your left shoulder."

Rufner, now a construction worker in Fort Worth, had just as many bad words for David McCrory, a former Davis employee and now the chief prosecution witness.

He called McCrory a "punk" and someone that couldn't be believed.

Of defense attorney Haynes, Rufner said, "I want to look him eye to eye and make him bring me water. I might even roll a joint on the defense stand."

Rufner, who said he had sipped a few drinks on the plane from Fort Worth to Houston, noted that he was number six on Davis's alleged hit list of 15 persons.

SALT II--A One-Way Street?

WITH THE approach of the holidays and the emphasis on the muddled Mideast talks, the Salt II "show" has been put on the back burner, temporarily.

But, that doesn't mean that a lot of people in the U.S. still aren't taking a very jaundiced view of how the Carter administration is handling the vital negotiations.

Not only are more responsible persons, including senators who must vote on any U.S.-Russian arms control pact, worrying about the content of the SALT II talks, but U.S. "concessions" to Moscow.

ONE SUCH person is Sen. Jake Garn, R-Utah, who views the SALT II proposals as extremely threatening to U.S. security.

In a recent address at Texas A&M University, Sen. Garn said that SALT II will allow the Soviet Union to have nuclear superiority by the mid-1980s, and said to call it an arms control agreement is an insult to the intelligence of the American people.

Even though the U.S. defense budget for 1979 is the largest in America's history, over $126 billion, Garn says that it is relative in terms of today's inflation.

"Our priorities seem to have changed over the years," Garn says. "For every dollar we spend on defense, the Soviet Union spends two, and over half of what we are spending doesn't go for tanks, planes or missiles—it goes for personnel.

HOWEVER, it is not the spending that bothers Sen. Garn so much, as what he says the U.S. is giving away at the bargaining table, a complaint made by other knowledgeable observers.

"President Carter made a speech about a year ago and got very tough on SALT," Garn said. "He said one of his demands to the Russians would be for them to agree to limit the number of SS-18 missiles they had to 150, rather than the 308 they had proposed.

"Do you know where our negotiator compromised? At 308," he said. "Now in Utah, we don't horse trade that poorly. We might have gotten them down to 306 or 305, but no, we just accepted their number."

THE SIGNIFICANCE of Sen. Garn's complaint can readily be noted when it is realized that one SS-18 missile is in reality a MIRV weapon, an independent target re-entry vehicle, with the destructive capability of 10 warheads.

In other words, each SS-18 could come into the U.S., then split into 10 weapons each with the destructive force greater than the atom bomb that hit Hiroshima. That means not 308 missiles, but 3,080.

Other concessions made by the U.S. included a reported cutback on the range of the American Cruise Missile, the unilateral decision not to make the B-1 bomber, the hold on the Neutron Warhead. This is not to mention letting Russia inject the sophisticated MIG-23 into Cuba and not counting the Russian Backfire bomber in the SALT negotiations.

SALT II may not only be an insult to Americans, it could be their death verdict.

AN EDITORIAL:

Jon Newton Sets An Example

JON NEWTON'S good fortune, it can be said with certainty, is Texas' loss.

Newton resigned last week from the powerful Texas Railroad Commission, which regulates the oil and gas industry in the state. His reason: His wife has inherited producing oil and gas wells.

Income from the wells will be "substantial," Newton said, and he wants to avoid any appearance of a conflict of interest.

Such integrity, often talked about by public officials, is all too rarely in such high evidence.

IN STEPPING DOWN from his $45,200-a-year job, Commissioner Newton said his alternative would be to place his family's oil and gas assets into a blind trust.

"The blind trust may be blind but I'm not," Newton explained in announcing why he had decided against that route.

Thus, the former state legislator quits after serving only two years of a six-year term to which he was elected in 1976 after a close race. During that time, he did a good job. He evidenced the keen insight and understanding of energy problems on which he had campaigned and he struck a balance that was fair to the industry and to the consumer alike.

We have no doubt that Commissioner Newton could have continued that unbiased and honest approach to oil and gas regulation even with his good fortune of having a substantial amount of income from the industry.

He foresaw, however, that there would be the potential for unspoken questions in the minds of some people if he stayed on the job under those circumstances.

We are not among those who believe that a public official must resign from all other interests in life in order to serve the public interest well; but we nonetheless applaud one who, like Jon Newton, would rather resign than have anybody think he might take advantage of his position for personal gain.

We Can Thank Heaven For Capitol Hill Ethics

WASHINGTON—All during the political campaign we heard congressional candidates shout to their electorate, "If you elect me, you will be sending a message to Washington."

No one was quite sure what the message was, but we're starting to find out.

Last week the House Democratic Caucus met in secret session and voted not to prevent House members, convicted or indicted for crimes, or even censured by the legislative body, from losing the chairmanships of their committees.

In overwhelming votes the Democratic Caucus sent out word that it wasn't going to be bogged down by the silly ethical standards it was demanding of the other branches of government.

AS ONE CONGRESSMAN told me, "Just because a House member has been convicted or indicted by the courts doesn't mean he can't chair a subcommittee."

"I think what happens between a man and the Justice Department is his own business, and we're not in the position to judge him."

"I assume this is also true of members of the House reprimanded for taking money from the South Koreans."

"It certainly is. We reprimanded those people because, after spending so much time and money, the public expected us to do something about the Korean scandal."

"But never in our wildest dreams were we prepared to take a man's subcommittee away from him for doing something unethical. We're not monsters."

"I AGREE," I told the congressman. "But the

ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK:

Jordan Cancels Out

WASHINGTON—The sudden cancellation of Hamilton Jordan's speaking date before the Foreign Policy Association here last week has raised questions whether the State Department interceded against his appearance.

Officials at the department deny any such intercession, but skeptical outsiders, particularly hardliners on Capitol Hill, are not so sure.

The background is brief: invited to talk on the evening of Dec. 5 about the foreign policy role of American citizens before 200 members of the nationally-known FPA, Jordan promptly accepted just before Thanksgiving.

But four days after invitations were mailed—including some to the State Department—he cancelled.

ANDREW TULLY:

Toss Out The Trash

WASHINGTON—I trust those who are all the time yammering about civil rights in our public schools will join me in a toast to a bunch of coal miners in Kanawha County, W. Va.

Four years after the miners staged a long and bitter protest over the selection of school textbooks in the county, their fight is still remembered.

That fight was "very much" on the minds of an advisory committee that recently screened a set of English books for the county's Board of Education, says the man who headed the 15-member committee.

The chairman, Stephen Priestly, put it this way: "When we got into the textbooks dealing with literature and fables where there had been problems before, we scanned those books like they've never been scanned before." Congratulations to the miners.

THEIR PROTEST—which closed down schools, mines, factories, and a regional bus system—forced the authorities to remove certain books from the classroom curriculum and stash them in school libraries where they could be read or not.

Now, as Priestly pointed out, miners have been recognized as people whose opinions must be respected, even though they may lack literary chic, because they have kids, too, and also pay taxes.

My files remind me that one of the textbooks found wanting by the protesters was a thing published by Harcourt Brace-Jovanovich. One section read as follows:

"Recount some incidents you or those you know have experienced which illustrate how parental interference in the personal lives of their sons and daughters can lead to misunderstandings, broken relationships, or even family tragedies."

THE BOOK IN question was called "Write On!," an "issue-centered" text for junior high students.

It was an appalling example of how some educators, in the name of "academic freedom and integrity," in effect encourage children not only to rebel against parental authority but play judge and jury in the pursuit thereof.

What preposterous garbage. Even in this lunatic age, the parents' No. 1 job is still to interfere in their kids' personal lives. A child's personal life must be subject to the approval of his parents.

Indeed, such "teaching" is also an invasion of the personal privacy liberals are always hollering about.

SOME OF MY liberal friends patronizingly emphasize that in West Virginia the protesters usually come from the "working class," meaning coal miners.

The point is not the social class of the protesters but whether coal miners have a right to an opinion on how their children should be educated at the cost of their tax money.

When that committee in Kanawha County this year scanned books "like they've never been scanned before," it acknowledged that so-called "upper class" taxpayers must share their power with taxpayers who earn a dirty face every working day of their lives.

Three cheers! Three hell. Four cheers!

JAY HARRIS:

The Bear Trap...

IF ANY FURTHER argument were needed that President Carter does not understand foreign diplomacy, his gaffe regarding Iran and Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi should clinch it.

What's more, if the reaction of many with whom we have talked is any indication, millions were astounded by the President's "put-down" of the Shah's chances for surviving the wave of unrest in his nation.

Imagine, if you will, this scenario... "President Carter expressed doubt for the first time about whether the Shah of Iran will be able to survive the mounting challenge to his regime and said the United States will not intervene to save him."

Imagine it, if you will. But, it actually happened. The quote is the lead paragraph of an Associated Press story on the President's remarks to a group of newsmen last week.

ASKED WHETHER he believes the Shah can survive, Mr. Carter replied, "I don't know. I hope so."

Then he was quoted as saying that even though Iran is "very important" to American security interests, the U.S. will not intervene to save the Shah.

The remark was seen as a response to Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev that Moscow would regard it as a "matter affecting the security interests" of the Soviet Union if the U.S. and other western powers were to intervene militarily to save the Shah.

In taking his hands-off stance, Carter added: "This is something that is in the hands of the people of Iran. We have never had any intention, and don't have any intention of trying to interfere in the political affairs of Iran." The U.S. and the CIA have been given much of the credit, or blame, for helping ousted Prime Minister Mohammed Mossadegh and restoring the Shah to power 25 years ago.

AFTER SEEING the uproar he had caused, the President issued a statement which sought to soften the implication of his damaging remarks.

In effect, his comments had the effect of pulling the rug from under the Shah and giving support to his enemies. Fortunately, after the crucial weekend had passed, the Shah was still in power.

In fairness, it should be noted that Mr. Carter has given vocal support to the Shah's handling of the crisis and has emphasized the importance of a stable Iran not only to the Persian Gulf and Israel but the whole Mideast.

Yet, the gist of his remarks was to weaken the Shah's position and to appear to be knuckling under, for the second time in as many weeks, to a barefisted Russian threat. It was not the pose we would like to have of a man who heads what we hope is still the strongest nation in the world. The stance, like those of the U.S. in Rhodesia and South Africa, has the effect of aiding and abetting Communist goals, rather than upholding those of the Free World.

THE TRUTH is the U.S. and the West can not afford to have Iran fall into a situation where the nation's vital oil supply is threatened.

While Iran's production accounts for only about 5 percent of U.S. foreign imports, such nations as Japan, Israel, South Africa and Western Europe depend much more heavily upon Iranian supplies.

But, the stakes are much higher than the oil in the area long coveted by the Russians as a "bridge" to the warm-water ports of the Indian Ocean.

Should a pro-Soviet regime emerge in Iran, it would come to worst, it would fit the pattern already set in neighboring Afghanistan were the Russians helped engineer a bloody coup a few months ago, and nearby Pakistan, also beset by sporadic upheavals.

SOVIET DOMINANCE in the triangle would shake the entire Mideast, be seen as a threat by India and China, and pose a dilemma for Saudi Arabia.

What, then, one might ask, could Mr. Carter have done differently, and been diplomatic in the process?

Well, when Mr. Brezhnev first broached the business of U.S. "interference" in Iran, the President would have been in the ball park by telling him—on the hotline, if necessary—"Mr. Brezhnev, you know and we know that the U.S. does not intend to attack Russia, especially from Iran."

"You also know, Mr. Brezhnev, that the U.S. and West have vital interests in Iran, that we need the oil. And that as a matter of fact, Russia needs the natural gas it receives from Iran. Because of this, the U.S. obviously can not tolerate any major change in the status quo in that area."

THEN, FOR A kicker, the President should have reminded the Kremlin leader that "as a matter of fact, Mr. Brezhnev, we are somewhat disturbed by a matter of security interests in Cuba..."

And then, Mr. Carter should have told the Soviet leader that the U.S. would not tolerate any planes or weapons on the island which may pose a threat to U.S. security in this area.

There are those, including some bleeding heart liberals and do-gooders we know, who will recoil at such suggestions. "Oh, you are taking a chance on starting World War III," they admonish.

Hogwash! If the Russians are ready to fight World War III over Iran, or Cuba, or Rhodesia or South Africa then we had better find out about it right now. Because, if they are, then you can bet your declining dollar that they will find a reason even closer to the U.S. to fight it later on.

Such talk, some may argue, is unthinkable. If the Russians can get enough of us thinking in those terms, they won't have to worry about World War III. They will never have to fire a shot, and neither will we!

...Pass It On

NEW HAMPSHIRE is generally envisioned by out-of-staters as a beautiful, peaceful, rural place where the lowing of cattle at eventide is only interrupted by the occasional crackle of skiers' bones.

Consider this: Proportionately more of that state's payrolled population goes to work in factories than does New York's or Massachusetts'.

BEST LIFE GUARDS in the world, it's claimed, are trained Newfoundland dogs strapped into harnesses with rubber handles high on their backs. They work some of the beaches in France.

When a swimmer calls for help, the nearest dog paddles out. The party in trouble hangs onto the harness handle. The plucky pup then heads for shore.

Hobbs Anti-Crime Program Launched

A-J Correspondent
HOBBS — Several city officials have opened the Hobbs Crime Stoppers program with a donation of $500 to be used as reward money for anyone providing police with information leading to the solution of a felony.
 Mayor Bill Waldrop, who along with City Commissioners Max Clappitt, John Fletcher, Buddy Westbrook and Mike Collins, donated the $500, said "We're tired of fooling around with crime; this is a program to solve crime and make Hobbs a safer place to live."
 The program is based on a highly successful program begun by the Albuquerque Police Department a year ago, according to Hobbs Police Captain Bob Barbaree. He added that the Albuquerque program has paid out more than $11,500 in rewards since its inception, and that more than 250 felony cases have been cleared and nearly $270,000 worth of property recovered because of public participation.
 The money donated to the Hobbs program will be in an account established at a Hobbs bank and will be distributed to individuals who provide information which leads to arrest or indictment in connection with a felony.
 Waldrop said Crime Stoppers also will "keep tabs on what happens to persons arrested on felony violations and on the role of judges handling the cases."

Miss New Mexico To Perform At Fete

A-J Correspondent
HOBBS, N.M. — Jennifer Schubert, the reigning Miss New Mexico, will be the featured performer Friday at the Hobbs Community Players Awards Night.
 Miss Schubert, a Hobbs native, will preside over the ceremony which will honor the best performances and production at the Playhouse in the past year.
 Other featured entertainers at the 8 p.m. event will be Roswell's Brad Fitzgerald and the College of the Southwest Entertainers. Master of ceremonies will be Gary Johnson.
 Donations to the Playhouse Improvement Fund will be accepted in lieu of admission.

Missing Grain Dealer's Mother Testifies

WICHITA FALLS (AP) — The mother of a missing North Texas grain dealer has said in a deposition she met with her son in Idaho this past summer, 18 months after his alleged drowning.
 Mrs. Ruth Johnson of Iowa Park gave the deposition, or sworn statement, as part of a civil suit brought by two insurance companies fighting to avoid paying claims on Johnson's life insurance policies.
 She signed the statement Monday.
 In the deposition, Mrs. Johnson said she and her husband visited the trailer house in Idaho in June where Johnson was reported to be living with a woman she called Dee Dee. That woman, Mrs. Darrell David Olson, has been charged by the FBI with harboring a federal fugitive.

 Johnson's mother stated that her daughter had told her where her son was. She said she did not call her son, but rather "Bobby called a telephone and I was there."
 She said her daughter talked to Johnson and made arrangements for the meeting in Idaho. She said she only stayed one night and had not seen him since before his alleged drowning in the Gulf of Mexico in January 1977.
 She said, however, she talked to him as early as Christmas 1977.
 Johnson was indicted on charges of interstate transportation of stolen grain after several hundred thousand bushels of wheat were unaccounted for at his elevators in Iowa Park and Wichita Falls.

Default Deadline Nears For Cleveland

CLEVELAND (AP) — Federal marshals began posting guards Tuesday around $3 million in city property that could be seized in payment of a debt to a private utility, as Cleveland neared a Friday deadline that could make it the first major U.S. city since the Depression to default.

The latest setback to Mayor Dennis J. Kucinich came as he prepared to deliver a locally televised address to outline plans aimed at preventing the default.
 Kucinich was expected to ask voters to approve a 50 percent increase in the city's 1 percent income tax in a special election in February, according to George L.

Forbes, the City Council president. Tax hikes have been rejected overwhelmingly in three past elections since 1968.
 The Cleveland Electric Illuminating Co. said it had begun isolating city property which it might later seize — such as repair trucks — by putting identification tags on it and getting marshals to post private guards around it.

U.S. Marshal William Kindt said it will take about two days for marshals, accompanied by lawyers for the utility, to complete the tagging of $3 million in property. Property identified by the marshals is being guarded around the clock by a private service hired by Kindt, and will remain unavailable to the city.

Chief Says Stray Shot Killed Officer

FORT WORTH (AP) — A police officer killed in a gunbattle while trying to arrest a suspect died from the stray shot of his partner's gun and not from the suspect's bullet, Police Chief A.J. Brown said Tuesday.

JIMMY F. CHADWELL

Police had previously assumed officer Jimmy F. Chadwell, 40, was killed by a shot from the man he was trying to arrest, Richard Urias, 24.
 Chadwell and fellow officer David S. Hunt, 23, and two other officers went to Urias' home Monday night to arrest him on a criminal mischief warrant, but Urias, armed with a .25-caliber pistol, opened fire on the policemen after they entered his home.
 Urias shot Chadwell in the face and then shot Hunt, who was saved because he was wearing a bullet-proof vest. Hunt drew his revolver and shot at Urias several times, killing him.
 But it was not known until an autopsy was performed that one of the bullets from Hunt's .357-caliber Magnum struck Chadwell in the back of the neck and damaged several vital organs, lodging in the lower part of his body.

not have saved Chadwell's life, and added that it is possible he would have died from the face wound, which struck him just below the left eye.

Chadwell, Hunt and the two other policemen with them were in the neighborhood to serve two out-of-state robbery warrants, but could not locate them and decided to take care of the more routine criminal mischief warrant on Urias.

Chadwell was married and the father of three children. He had been on the Fort Worth police force 14 years.

Letter Bombs Wound Five In Northern Ireland

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Four letter bombs exploded in Northern Ireland Tuesday, wounding five persons, as the sectarian war raged despite the Christmas season. Pope John Paul II said in Rome he had faith the "deep-seated Christian conviction" of the Irish would help them temper their conflict.

MAN-EATING TIGER

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — A tigress reported to have eaten six men and a woman in northern India has been killed, a newspaper says. The Statesman reported a wildlife warden tracked the beast and killed it recently near Gola Village about 560 miles east of here. The tigress killed the victims during March and November. The newspaper said two other man-eating tigers in the area were killed in August and three more are being sought.

Eleven letter bombs were discovered, all addressed to prison officials, but seven were defused before they reached their destinations, police said.

The first bomb blew up in the face of a North Belfast prison officer's wife as she bent to pick up the morning mail, seriously injuring her. A parcel exploded in the hands of a postman as he was delivering mail in East Belfast, wounding him in the hand and arm, police said.

In Lisburn, eight miles south of Belfast, two persons suffered minor injuries when a bomb exploded in another prison official's home. In the same town, police said the wife of a prison official was wounded when she found a package delivered to her home while she was gone and attempted to move it outside.

Suspicious recipients spotted seven of the letter bombs before they were opened and called in police to defuse them. Although called letter bombs, they usually look like books packaged to be sent through the mail.

The Provisional Wing of the Irish Republican Army warned of a renewed terror campaign 18 days ago after it claimed responsibility for killing the deputy governor of the Maze prison on the doorstep of his Belfast home. The IRA claimed responsibility for Tuesday's bombs in a note to local newspapers.

In accepting the credentials of Ireland's new ambassador to the Holy See, John Gerald Molloy, Pope John Paul said that the "deep-seated Christian conviction" of the Irish should help them end the "hatred and conflict" dividing them.

The pontiff also emphasized that the church has respect for "those with different social and political views." John Paul did not specifically mention the Protestant-Catholic conflict in Northern Ireland, but he expressed "deep interest" in Ireland's welfare, saying that a Christian approach to deciding conflicts emphasizes cooperation.

The pope spoke of the influence of Irish missionaries who have traveled around the world, and the "deep-seated Christian conviction" of the Irish, which he said he felt was "a guarantee that understanding and cooperation will take the place of hatred and conflict."

"The Gospel message, which the Church is called upon to make increasingly part of a people's way of thinking and living, enjoins sincere respect and love for those with different social and political views," the pope said.

"It is therefore bound to strengthen family unity between the children of the same motherland and to encourage mutual collaboration and respect for the rights of others..." he said. Catholics in Northern Ireland have engaged in nine years of sectarian warfare to wrest the country from British rule and unite it with the Irish Republic.

Village Returns Federal Monies

GIRARD, Kan. (AP) — The housing authority of this southeast Kansas town has decided to return $289,000 to the government.

The federal money was supposed to be used to build 10 housing units for low-income families. But the housing authority said people gripped about proposed locations for the project.

Carrie Peterson, director of the Housing Authority, told the Girard City Commission Monday night that residents just didn't like the idea of such a project in their neighborhoods.

"They were opposed to low-income families," Mrs. Peterson said. "They are afraid people won't take care of the place if they aren't paying as much rent."

Police Seeking Suspect In Early-Morning Rape

Police late Tuesday were seeking a suspect in connection with the early morning rape of a 33-year-old Lubbock housewife.

The woman told officers she had just returned home about 5:45 a.m. Tuesday from taking her mother to work when a knife-wielding man confronted her in the garage of her home and raped her.

She said the black man, wearing a gold knit cap, brown coat and bluish green pants, pulled the garage door down, forced her into the back seat of her car and held the knife to her throat during the attack.

Police were told the suspect, described as about 25-years-old with a medium build, threatened to kill the woman if she screamed. She said the suspect fled on foot after the assault, ordering the housewife to stay where she was "for a while."

In other activity Tuesday, authorities were investigating the latest pre-Christmas hauls made by burglars.

Bob Leonard told sheriff's deputies that while he and his family were out for about four hours Monday, burglars entered his home near Carlisle through the unlocked front door and unwrapped several Christmas packages before leaving with $817 of the holiday goods.

Leonard said the items, which had been under the family Christmas tree in the living room, included a television, vacuum cleaner, jewelry, kitchen appliances, a rifle and a doll.

In a similar incident, Joe F. Michalka said that a $400 stereo and various other Christmas gifts were taken from his 3613 56th St. home Tuesday morning.

Vandals took advantage of the empty

First National Bank-Pioneer Natural Gas Building, 1500 Broadway, Monday night and caused $1,115 worth of damage to the structure, according to building manager Margaret Browder.

She said that the bulk of the damage was caused when a plastic bag was placed in a janitor's closet sink on the 11th floor, plugging the drain and allowing the running water to overflow and damage ceilings and carpets on the ninth, 10th and 11th floors. In addition, the vandals broke the glass in the basement stairway door and tore the letters from several doors on the eighth floor, she said.

Kenneth Wayne Burrow told officers that burglars somehow unlocked the right front door of his Chevrolet sedan Monday night and took $180 cash and 10 8-track tapes, worth $30.

Two construction workers told police that valuable items were taken from sites where they were working.

Ronald Gamache of Amarillo said 35 sheets of plywood, worth $438, were taken from a site at 5714 63rd St. Monday night.

Wesley Bybee of Plainview said that a $3,450 automatic pumper used in his roofing business was taken during the weekend from 19th Street and Frankford Avenue.

Carmelo Casella told officers that several sections of used fence and wooden doors were taken from the backyard of 2915 Fordham. He set the loss at $1,000.

John William Grabber said that a $2,000 steel trailer was taken Monday night from outside his 3045 Clovis Road business.

Carroll F. Sargent complained that $300 worth of tools were stolen from the bed of his pickup truck early Monday. He said the truck was parked at his 504 Erskine St. home at the time of the theft.

Police answering a burglary alarm at a 19th Street nightclub about 5 a.m. Tuesday found the suspect in the break-in hanging from the club's ceiling, according to reports.

Police answering a burglary alarm at a 19th Street nightclub about 5 a.m. today, found the suspect in the break-in hanging from the club's ceiling, according to reports.

Appropriately enough, the scene of the hang-up was the Rusty Nail, 2311 19th St.

When officers ordered the 15-year-old boy down, the youth said, "I can't. I'm stuck." The suspect, who allegedly broke into the building from the roof, was handed over to juvenile authorities.

Club manager Connie Ortiz estimated the damage to the structure at about $50.

In one of several reported thefts, Louise Haug, owner of the Rood Indigo at 1712 Broadway, told police two young white men who came into her store Monday apparently stole a $1,950 diamond ring.

Mrs. Haug said the suspects came in selling costume jewelry about 4 p.m. Monday. She said she became suspicious of the men, and after they left, she discovered the ring missing.

Doris Timmons of 2011 41st St. said someone stole a $425 diamond necklace from her house between Nov. 29 and 5:40 p.m. Monday.

Burglars took a television set and stereo equipment valued at $1,975 when they broke into Rex Neil Holmes' residence at 2902 Third Place, Apt. B-11, between 2:30 p.m. and 10 p.m. Monday.

A break-in at the 1006 Ave. V residence of William David Collins between 7:15 p.m. and 9 p.m. Monday resulted in a loss of a $1,000 stereo system.

City Funeral Home Sued Over Custody Of Body

By FRANK PATRICK
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A Lubbock woman Tuesday sued a local funeral home in order to gain custody of the body of her dead son.

Shortly after the suit was filed, Dist. Judge William R. Shaver contacted the attorney representing the funeral home, who arranged for release of the body.

But lawyer John O'Shea said the suit — which also asks for $80,000 in damages — will stand.

The woman filed the lawsuit, naming as defendant Almo Sedberry, doing business as Leo W. Sedberry & Co. and/or Sedberry Funeral Home.

The woman's 24-year-old son reportedly sustained fatal injuries Saturday in a traffic accident about 30 miles southwest of Wichita Falls. He reportedly died about 8:15 p.m. at a Wichita Falls hospital.

According to the suit, the mother that same evening contacted South Plains Funeral Home, Inc., asking it to bring the body back to Lubbock and commence funeral arrangements.

The suit says employees of South Plains arrived at a Wichita Falls funeral home Sunday, only to find that the Sedberry Funeral Home already had picked up the body. The woman claims in the petition that she had never authorized anyone to contact the Sedberry funeral home.

The mother's petition says she demanded the release of the body through South Plains, but that the defendant refused to deliver the remains without payment of a $254.05 bill.

Sedberry attorney Byrnie Bass said his client voluntarily agreed to release the body Tuesday, after the lawsuit had been filed and Bass had been contacted by Shaver. A spokesman at South Plains said the body was to be picked up today.

Bass indicated that, as he understood it, the situation was the result of a misunderstanding.

He said that, according to his best current information, the Sedberry business had received a collect call from the Wichita Falls hospital and been told that the family wanted it to bring the body back to Lubbock and arrange services. Bass said he thought Sedberry had attempted to contact the mother, but believed the effort was unsuccessful because of an unlisted telephone number.

Later, after being apprised of the situation, Bass said, his client had expressed cooperation, but also requested that expenses be paid.

Bass indicated that he had only been apprised of the situation Monday night, and had been working to resolve it when the suit was filed.

A representative of Sedberry said all comments about the situation would have to come from Bass. "We regret any sadness that this has caused the family. We feel that we were acting in good faith," the spokesman said.

Neo-Nazi Surge Causes Concern

NEW YORK (AP) — Officials of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith expressed concern Tuesday that history was being rewritten and Nazi atrocities forgotten or labeled fictitious.

Members of the Jewish organization and a French Nazi-hunter, Beate Klarsfeld, said there was a growing literature that not only questions that 6 million Jews were killed during World War II, but also doubts Hitler's involvement in ordering the killings.

Neo-Nazi propaganda, Mrs. Klarsfeld said at a news conference, can be found "all over the continent" of Europe. She warned that it could prove dangerous if "young people are looking for an ideal" and aren't informed about the past.

"Who can tell them the story? Most of the survivors have died," said the German-born Mrs. Klarsfeld, 39, who now lives in Paris.

Elliot Welles of the Anti-Defamation League said a well-organized link-up exists among Nazi sympathizers of different countries.

"A large number of former Germans in the hierarchy of the Third Reich cannot give up the game. They want to reach out where they were before, to create a Fourth Reich," Welles said.

Among the sources of their concern the speakers mentioned recently published books claiming that Hitler was not responsible for the killing of Jews during the war and that the number of such deaths has been greatly exaggerated.

One such book, "Hitler's War," published in 1977 by Briton David Irving, contends that Hitler has been treated unfairly, that he did not order the massacre of Jews and did not even know about it until very late in the war — probably October 1944.

McGovern, Writers Inspect Conditions In Angola

LUANDA, Angola (AP) — Downtown shops are deserted and even basic food items and consumer goods scarce three years after Portuguese colonialists fled an independent Angola.

The economic problems confronting this fledgling Marxist nation were obvious as U.S. Sen. George McGovern, his aides and six Western reporters began a two-day visit to Luanda on a fact-finding tour of eight African nations.

Yet the visitors said they received VIP treatment and the South Dakota democrat praised the Angolan hospitality in his meeting with Foreign Minister Paulo Jorge.

McGovern's party was housed in a government guest house and vehicles were provided for everyone.

Six reporters, the first Western newsmen to be allowed into the country in two years, stayed in the Hotel Panorama, a modern beachside complex completed about the time Angola gained independence from Portugal in 1975.

The national problem of procuring spare parts was evident at the hotel, where the air conditioning didn't work in 80-degree heat and a faulty filter trapped murky green water in the opulent swimming pool.

The hotel normally has first claims on food for its guests, but had no fresh fruits and vegetables to offer the journalists.

Breakfast Tuesday was one piece of toast, some butter and jam and coffee. Sometimes there are eggs, the waiter said, but not Tuesday.

Angola's economic infrastructure, ravaged by civil war following independence, was left in a vacuum when an estimated 300,000 Portuguese fled key jobs in government, business and services. The government has since invited some Portuguese to return to help out the economy.

President Agostinho Neto and his Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola came to power with the aid of Cuban troops in a guerrilla war after independence. The new government forced out all Western journalists, allowing a small group to return briefly in 1976 to cover the trial of foreign mercenaries who had been fighting against the MPLA.

Jorge told McGovern that the government was making an effort to open the country to Western reporters now.

"Little by little," he said, just before the two men met privately. "We hope to improve the situation (regarding journalists)."

The United States and Angola do not have diplomatic relations but McGovern told a news conference late Monday: "I see no reason why the United States and Angola cannot work together and have good relations."

Angola is believed to want formal ties with the Americans, but the U.S. government reportedly is seeking a reduction in the 20,000 Cuban troops still stationed here.

Kenyan President Says Political Prisoners Freed

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — President Daniel Arap Moi said Tuesday he has freed all of Kenya's political prisoners, but warned that dissidents attempting to undermine national stability would be detained in the future under emergency powers.

Moi announced the release of the prisoners at a mass rally celebrating the 16th anniversary of this East African nation's independence from British rule.

He did not give the number of persons freed, but reliable sources said there were 26, including the prominent African writer, Ngugi Wa Thiong'o.

Parliamentarians have urged the release of political prisoners since Moi assumed leadership last August after the death of President Jomo Kenyatta.

In his address Tuesday, Moi urged his countrymen to avoid "irresponsible tactics and strategies."

"My government will not hesitate in taking firm action against anyone whose activities threaten our peace, unity and stability. As I have told you before, I believe in action, not words."

Among the prisoners freed were law-makers Martin Shikuku, George Anyona and M.A. Seroney, all highly critical of the government's use of detention-without-trial powers, and Wasonga Sijeyo, a prominent leader of the banned Kenyatta Peoples Union, sources said.

They also reported the 26 included Kenyans of Somali ethnic origin, held because it was believed they were sympathetic to neighboring Somalia's territorial claims on Kenya.

Ngugi's detention Dec. 31 brought international protests from other writers, as well as Amnesty International, the London-based human rights group.

When swarms of grasshoppers have devoured all plant life, the hungry insects will eat paint off buildings, chew clothing, curtains and leather, and have even been known to bite people severely enough to draw blood, according to the National Geographic Society.

Force, Precision Keyed JFK Air Cargo Theft

NEW YORK (AP) — They took family pictures from the night manager's wallet, put a shotgun to his head and said he and his family would die unless he opened a Kennedy airport cargo vault containing up to $5 million in unmarked bills and valuables.

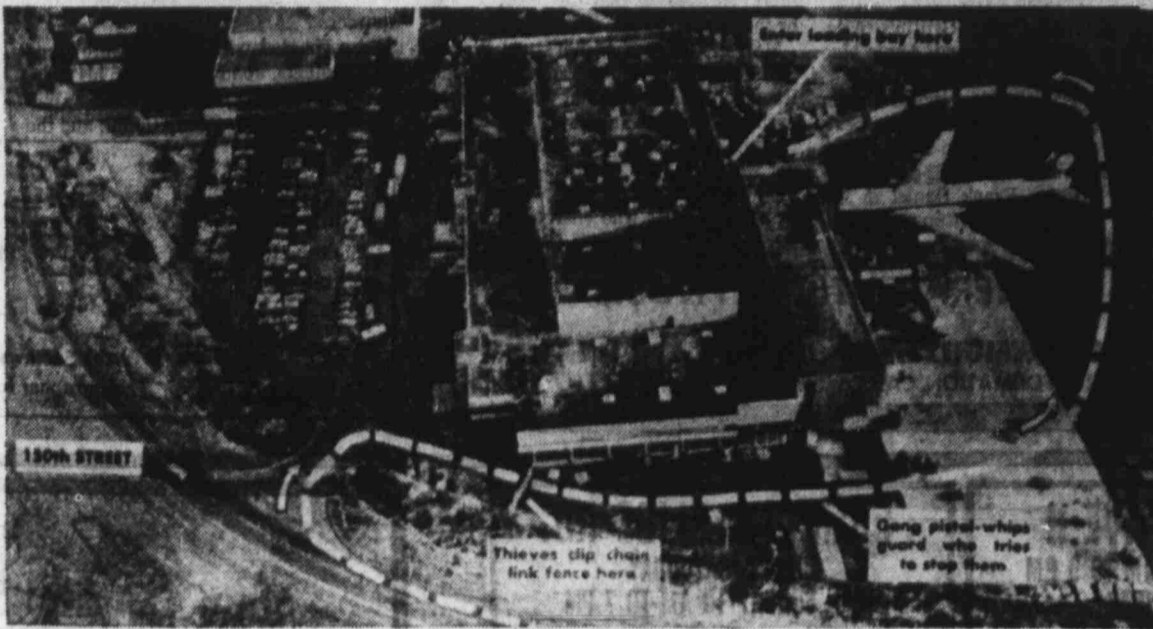

That bald force — plus commando like precision based on inside information — were keys to the success of a daring raid by an armed gang of masked robbers who pulled off one of the biggest heists of all time, authorities said Tuesday.

But the gang's familiarity with the layout restricted the scope of possible suspects, and one source close to the probe said investigators were "optimistic about a quick solution."

The gang, which cut a fence and drove a black van into the supposedly secure Lufthansa Airlines cargo terminal early Monday morning, knew what they were about, according to Ed Franzetti, a spokesman for the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey, which operates the airport.

"To get to the high value vault you've got to go down one ramp and then make a right turn and then back into another offshoot," Franzetti said. "They knew where they were going. They were able to back in properly."

He said that contrary to one report, the

NO-NONSENSE INTRUDERS — This aerial view shows the route taken by a gang of bandits — said to number five by police, but put at seven by some witnesses — who used guns, handcuffs, and perhaps inside information to pull off the theft of $5 million in cash from a Lufthansa Airline cargo hold area at New York's Kennedy Airport Monday. The thieves cut through a chain link fence and drove around to the back of the building, pistol-whipped a security guard who tried to stop them and entered the cargo loading area. They used the same route for their escape. (AP Laserphoto) one said, "I'll blow your head off and we'll get your family if you don't open up," Franzetti said.

"And the guy opened up. He went in with his keys and therefore deactivated the alarms and gave them the access."

To reports that one of the robbers had a heavy German accent, Franzetti said, "they all had Brooklyn accents."

What they got, according to Lufthansa spokesman Felix Becker, was 35 shipments of jewels and valuables including pearls, precious stones and watches valued at a total of $950,000 plus the cash.

Exactly how much cash was still a question mark, officially, Tuesday.

A spokesman for Queens District Attorney John Santucci said no official figure had been released but that representatives of the various investigating agencies — including the FBI, Port Authority police, and Customs Service — were meeting and might release the figure later.

Most of the cash was apparently des-tinued for the Chase Manhattan Bank, which said that $3 million en route to it had been taken.

A Brinks truck had gone to the airport Friday to pick up the cash, but the supervisor who was needed to release the shipment was not on hand and the armored truck crew left without the money.

Lufthansa, meanwhile, said security experts from its home office in Germany had flown here and were reassessing security measures at the cargo terminal.

Santucci's spokesman, Art North, summed up, "It was just a very well-organized and professional job."

JEWELER KIDNAPPED
PALERMO, Sicily (AP) — Three masked bandits held up two jewelry salesmen on a highway near here, kidnaped one and fled with several cases of jewelry, police say. Police said the robbers stopped the car of Rosario Pariente, 22, and Nicola Iemola, 39, on the Palermo-Catania highway early Tuesday, took an undetermined amount of jewels and fled in the victims' car with Iemola. His fate was not immediately known.

gang did not have copies of a "one of a kind" set of magnetic keys nor apparently did they have detailed plans of the security system.

Instead they used the threat of death to gain access to the vault. They asked the first employees they handcuffed in the cafeteria who was in charge and were told that "Ralph" was.

They asked for "Ralph," apparently giving rise to reports that one of the gunmen knew the employees by their first names.

Then they pulled family pictures from his wallet, put the gun to his head and

'Family Feud' Results In Murder; Five Charged

LAFAYETTE, Ala. (AP) — Five members of a rural Alabama family have been charged with murder in what the sheriff calls "an old-fashioned family feud" that left one man shot to death outside his mobile home, and his wife and son wounded.

Robert Lee Griffin was killed in the Saturday night incident by a shotgun blast fired at his chest that "blew his heart out his back," said Chambers County Sheriff James Morgan.

Three other persons also have been charged in connection with the shooting, which Morgan said climaxed a feud that apparently had been brewing for "about a month" between the Robert Lee Griffin and Frank Daniel families.

All eight appeared in Circuit Court for a preliminary hearing Tuesday. Judge Howard Bryan set bonds ranging from $10,000 to $50,000.

Details of the feud were still sketchy, but Morgan said there was "an argument" involving a juvenile member of the Daniel family.

When the juvenile went back to his home outside this east-central Alabama town and told his family about the disagreement, the Daniels went to the Griffins' mobile home with shotguns, the sheriff said.

According to Morgan, the home was peppered with shotgun blasts, with the pellets slightly grazing Griffin's wife, Gladys, and a family friend, Annie Mae Poythress.

Then the Daniel clan dragged Griffin and his son, Walter, from the home, beating them severely, Morgan said. During the fracas, Griffin fired a .22-caliber pistol shot, striking Frank Daniel in the shoulder. At that point Griffin was killed by the shotgun blast.

Morgan said another shot struck Walter Griffin in the leg. He was admitted to the Randolph County hospital where he was in stable condition Tuesday.

Frank Daniel was treated for his shoulder wound at the Chambers County hospital before being released into the custody of authorities who charged him with murder.

Also charged with murder were Daniel's brothers, John and Curtis; his father, John Henry; his mother, Louise; Willie James Huguley; Terry Comb; and the 17-year-old juvenile whose name was not released.

Morgan said it has not been determined what relation, if any, Huguley and Comb are to the Daniels.

GUARDING THE SHAH—An armored troop carrier and its crew stand guard near the Shah's Niaravan Palace in the mountain foothills of northern Tehran Tuesday as part of a ring of troops protecting the palace. As dawn broke over the Iranian capital Tuesday, the light revealed that the army, which had temporarily withdrawn to the outskirts, had returned in force during the night. (AP Laserphoto)

Class-Action Suit May Extend Weeks

Saturday Sessions Possible
The trial is expected to continue through Dec. 21, then reconvene about Jan. 15. Saturday trial sessions also have been mentioned as a possibility.

City Human Relations Director Luciano Perez was one of five witnesses who took the stand Tuesday.

Perez testified he ran into several city hall roadblocks when he attempted to get a city public accommodations ordinance aimed at Lubbock night clubs which had been discriminating against minorities.

After first receiving such discrimination complaints in late 1975, Perez said he talked to the club owners without results.

He attempted to bring the situation before the Human Relations Commission (HRC) for discussion this spring when the problem resurfaced, he testified, but was told by his immediate supervisor, Community Relations Director Vaughn Hendrie, "we'll have to do what the people upstairs want us to do."

Man Keeps Perpetual Yule Tree

SHARON, Pa. (UPI) — While many worry about when they will find the time to buy a tree, set it up and trim it for Christmas, James Hilborn just sits back and enjoys his holiday pine.

It has been there all year.

In fact, Hilborn has kept a tree standing, fully trimmed, in his living room window for seven years.

"There's no big mystery surrounding my perpetual Christmas tree," said Hilborn, of nearby Shenango Township, Lawrence County. "I simply like the tree enough to keep it all year around."

Not one to take a thing halfway, Hilborn keeps wrapped gifts under the tree as well. Most of the presents are toys, which the retired steelworker gives to youngsters who stop in to see the tree.

"Other people like the tree, too," he said. "They call me up on the phone. They stop in the summer to see why I have my tree up."

The idea hatched in Hilborn's mind seven years ago when his long-needed pine hadn't yet started to shed, even though Christmas had long passed. He decided to keep it standing until the needles began to drop, and they didn't for months.

Dough Mixer Case Heard

FORT WORTH (UPI) — A woman testifying against her former husband Tuesday described her participation in the robbery of an Amarillo pizza restaurant and the death of the restaurant manager, who was beaten, stabbed and then had her head pushed into a dough mixer.

Kathy Sutton, 20, the former wife of David Grijalva, testified she did not witness her then-husband stab manager Jeannette Powers, a friend of the couple's, but did see him walk from a back area carrying a bloody butcher knife and a long pizza rolling pin.

"He bashed it down," Miss Sutton testified, "making loud noises as it hit Jeannette's head."

The rolling pin, 2 1/2-feet long and weighing 15 pounds, and an 18-inch butcher knife rusty with dried blood, were introduced as the weapons used to kill the woman in the January, 1977 robbery.

The case was moved to Fort Worth on a change of venue and it took more than a month to seat the nine-man, three-woman jury in the case.

Later the ordinance was discussed by the Lubbock City Council in a work session and council members "reacted by wanting to get more information on possible solutions to the problems," he testified.

Meanwhile, the HRC proposed two ordinances and submitted them as proposals to the city attorney with a letter asking for a meeting about the ordinances.

Perez said the commission received no response, then City Attorney John Ross proposed another ordinance, which subsequently was passed by the council.

The difference between the ordinance passed into law and those proposed by the HRC primarily is one of procedure, he said.

$200 Fine Provided
The ordinance approved by the council provides a maximum fine of $200, as did one proposed by the HRC. But Perez said the second HRC proposal would have allowed the commission to issue or remove licenses of such night clubs.

In the winter of 1976, the HRC was told by former Lubbock Mayor Roy Bass not to pursue an investigation of the county jail conditions, even though Perez had received complaints on the jail, he testified.

Bass told the members "they should not involve themselves in the affairs of other governmental entities," Perez said.

While cross-examining Perez, city attorney Jim Brewster noted the ordinance creating the commission indicated the all-white city council was concerned about discrimination and civil rights and the purpose of the ordinance was "to do something about the problems."

Brewster also asked Perez if he was aware of a consultant's study of the city jail, done about the same time the HRC wanted to investigate county jail conditions, which "for all practical purposes closed the city jail."

The transition between old and new city attorneys in July, 1978, could explain the lack of response to the HRC letter concerning the public accommodations ordinance, Brewster noted.

Ordinance Enacted
The new city attorney "submitted an ordinance based on one from the city from which he came. A public hearing was held on the ordinance and the city council did in fact enact a public accommodations ordinance for the city, did they not?" Brewster asked.

A former member of the HRC also testified Tuesday that a proposed investigation of conditions in the city jail in 1975 was stymied.

Wayne Dickey, the coordinator for language arts in Lubbock secondary schools, said he was chairman of an HRC subcommittee which examined county jail conditions three years ago.

Following the completion of that investigation, Dickey said former city manager N.B. McCullough told the committee they were "not going to investigate the city jail" and would not be permitted to visit the jail.

Dickey, who was a member of the HRC from 1973-1976, testified he became "frustrated things were not followed through," and said he thought he was not reappointed to the commission in 1976 because of his jail investigation.

Tom Burtis, a Texas Tech graduate student and one of the white members of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, testified he had observed disparities between city services in north and east Lubbock, where most minorities reside, and in south and west Lubbock.

Parks Claimed Undeveloped
East Lubbock parks remain undeveloped after houses are built, while southwest Lubbock parks are developed before houses are constructed, he said.

East Lubbock medians are unlandscaped, he said, and more lights have been turned off in minority neighborhoods than in predominantly white areas of Lubbock since the city began attempting to save money by shutting off some lights.

He concluded city officials are "sensitive only to minority needs which can be satisfied with (federal) Community Development funds...and when black support is needed like for a bond issue (election)."

40 Reported Killed In Iranian Riot

The newest violence coincides with Ashura, the 48-hour peak of Moharram in which the faithful usually scourge themselves to mourn the 7th century assassination of their founder, Imam Hossein, grandson of the prophet Mohammed. But this year instead of whips, many of the marchers carried portraits of Khomeini or banners and placards denouncing the shah.

Since Moharram began Dec. 2, at least 55 persons have been killed and hundreds wounded. The death toll since January now is around 1,300.

In Tehran, tanks and columns of troops were standing by and enforcing the 9 p.m.-5 a.m. curfew and the ban on public demonstrations. There were marches, but no violence was reported.

Oil industry sources said the Ashura period increased the effectiveness of the 9-day-old oil workers' strike and production was down to 1.3 million barrels daily, compared to 6 million normally.

The strike is costing the government $60 million a day in lost exports. A 15-day oil strike last month cost the shah's treasury more than $1 billion.

Muslim religious leaders are fighting the shah because of his Westernization program, which they claim is eroding traditional Islamic values. The religious campaign fire has been fanned by support from leftist political leaders, calling for an end to the shah's 37-year authoritarian rule, secret police repression and official corruption.

"We will continue until the victory is won!" opposition leaders proclaimed Monday to a huge throng, estimated to be 400,000 strong, massed about Tehran's towering, arch-like Shayad Monument, the symbol of the shah's rule.

Many of the marchers on a 5 1/2-mile route through Tehran carried placards reading, "Criminal Americans Go Home" or "Iran Will Become Another Vietnam."

Vance, Sadat Draft New Pact Formula

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance and President Anwar Sadat worked out a new formula Tuesday to present to Israel aimed at overcoming two key obstacles to a Middle East peace treaty.

The Washington peace talks have been stalled over Egypt's demand the treaty be linked to steps toward Palestinian autonomy on the West Bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip. The second issue is a provision in the treaty designed to restrain Egypt from joining other Arab countries, should they go to war with Israel.

"We have finished with these two issues," Vance told reporters as he climbed in his black limousine outside Sadat's villa. "I would say it was a positive and helpful set of meetings which we've had and now we're going to meet with the Israelis starting tomorrow morning."

Progress Reported
"We've made good progress," Vance said.

Egyptian sources indicated acceptance of the new formula by Israel was highly problematic. "This will prolong the negotiations," said one highly placed Egyptian official, who refused to be named.

The formula, described by the source only as "new ideas," was worked out in a 70-minute meeting between Vance and Sadat.

Vance is flying to Israel today to try to sell the package to Prime Minister Menachem Begin.

In a brief exchange with reporters outside his Nile residence, Sadat said Vance then would return to Egypt, but he did not specify a date.

Returns To Cairo
Vance met with Sadat in Cairo Monday, flew to Israel Tuesday for the funeral of former Prime Minister Golda Meir, then returned to Cairo for more talks with Sadat.

Vance's mission was to persuade Sadat to drop his demand for a timetable on achieving Palestinian autonomy in Israeli-held territory and accept a target date — the end of 1979 — for elections there.

Palestinian self-rule in the occupied zones is one of the goals of the Camp David peace accord. Sadat wants the steps toward autonomy tied to simultaneous Israeli moves, such as troop withdrawals.

So far, Begin has objected to any links tying a peace treaty to self-rule on the West Bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip, fearing that if the goals aren't met, the entire treaty would be annulled. The dispute is one of the two principal reasons the peace talks have been stalled.

Hit-Run Ship Alert Issued

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — The Coast Guard Tuesday posted an alert in Gulf Coast ports, particularly Corpus Christi, for a ship involved in a hit-and-run accident with another ship in the Gulf of Mexico.

It was the second such incident in one month.

Two men were injured slightly late Monday when a dark brown or black ship, about 1,000 feet long, rammed and damaged their 110-foot research vessel, the Lady Lee, in the Gulf about 85 miles south of Cameron, La.

The larger ship failed to stop. Coast Guard investigators said its heading would take the ship into a south Texas port.

ated since mid-November. The United States is trying to force a settlement by sticking to the Dec. 17 deadline expressed at Camp David.

At his Washington press conference, President Carter said he considers "the (Dec. 17) deadline date to be quite important. If the Egyptians and Israelis cannot keep a commitment on a three-month conclusion of a peace treaty when they themselves are the only two nations in difficult for them to expect that terms of the treaty they are negotiating to be carried out with assurance."

Carter said it would set "a very bad precedent" if a conclusion weren't reached by the deadline.

"I believe that President Sadat has reconfirmed his intention, his commitment, to conclude the negotiations without further delay. My hope is, and my expectation, is that the Israelis will have the same attitude," said the president.

The second dispute holding up the treaty centers on a provision that would prevent Egypt from becoming allied with other Arab countries in the event of another Arab-Israeli war.

Vance is proposing "an interpretive letter" affirming Egypt's right to self-defense that would be included in the treaty package.

Few Meat Packers Control Beef Prices

WASHINGTON (AP) — A government report released Tuesday showed the nation's beef prices are set by a few large meat packers that report daily sales to market reporting services, primarily one called the Yellow Sheet.

The report did not accuse anyone of illegal action involving beef prices and market reporting. It included what was described as information "which interested persons can use in arriving at conclusions" about pricing and market reporting.

The report said it could not settle questions about "possible price manipulation" and the practice of quoting prices on a "thin market" in which only a small number of transactions is used as a basis to set prices.

Price Study Planned
Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland said he will appoint a task force to "study and recommend possible improvement" in the meat pricing and market reporting system.

Bergland said also that public hearings will be held on wholesale beef pricing and business done between packers themselves.

The report was based on investigations of 35 packing plants, 8 brokers and 3 market news services and their operations in July, 1977.

It said the unidentified 35 plants accounted for 26 percent of the federally inspected cattle slaughter in the United States in 1976.

For the month audited, 70 percent of all steer and heifer carlot carcass sales by the 35 plants were "formula sales based on Yellow Sheet published prices," the report said.

Two Selling Methods
Wholesale beef traders use two pricing or selling methods, negotiated and formula. When the price of the product is settled through advance bargaining, it is a negotiated transaction.

But when the price is to be determined from a price published for that product on a specified future date by a specified market news service, it is a formula pricing deal.

The report, delayed for weeks after the initial version was held up earlier this fall, was issued by the Agricultural Marketing Service, an agency of the Agriculture Department.

Bergland ordered the earlier report redone after about 3,000 copies were printed but not officially released. Most were destroyed.

Expanded Information
The new report included some additional or expanded information and some changes in figures. For example, the new one said that 70 percent of the beef sales by the 35 firms were on a Yellow Sheet formula basis, while the first report said 66 percent.

Criticism has persisted for years among farmers, members of Congress and consumer groups that cattle and beef prices are mostly in the control of a few big operators, including packing companies and the market reporting services.

The new report was sent to Bergland by Charles B. Jennings, deputy administrator of the agency.

Solon Gets Copy
A copy also was sent to Rep. Neal Smith, D-Iowa, chairman of the House Small Business Committee, which has been looking into beef pricing and has raised questions about the widespread use of the Yellow Sheet as a basis to set cattle and beef prices.

Smith said in a telephone interview from Des Moines, Iowa, that the new report "confirms everything" his committee learned in its investigation.

The Yellow Sheet is published by The National Provisioner Inc., Chicago, and has been prominent in the meat trade since 1923. It began reporting beef prices in 1940.

The other services studied are the Meat Sheet, published in Elmhurst, Ill., and the Agriculture Department's own Market News Service.

"The Meat Sheet and Yellow Sheet published carcass beef prices based on less than 2 percent of the total federally inspected steer and heifer slaughter," the report said. "USDA Market News Service, for five regional offices combined, issued price quotations based on less than 5 percent."

In their analysis, investigators said "it could not be concluded that, on the average, prices quoted by the Yellow Sheet inaccurately reflect the sample of negotiated prices" of beef.

Further, the report said, "there was no strong evidence that the Yellow Sheet quotes, on the average, fail to reflect prices" logged by its reporters from information passed on by packers and others who buy and sell beef.

As a further step, investigators checked to determine if any of the 31 companies which operate the 35 meat plants were trading in futures contracts for "fed" cattle, the kind that are slaughtered for beef.

Eight of the firms operated 47 plants in all, 11 of which were among the 35 plants audited. The eight firms accounted for 44 percent of the total U.S. steer slaughter last year, the report said.

The eight firms also were found to be holding 50 or more August-fed cattle futures contracts during July and August of 1977, the report said.

Futures are generally considered another price-determining mechanism for the industry.

As the earlier report did, the new one said that many retailers in major cities also use the formula pricing system and the Yellow Sheet to buy wholesale beef.

At least two retail firms in each of 10 cities surveyed bought beef from among the 35 plants checked, the report said.

Parr Exile Ordered By Judge

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — Former Duval County Judge Archer Parr pleaded guilty Tuesday in a plea bargain that will keep him out of state prison but place him in political exile for 10 years.

Parr, 53, entered the guilty plea to a charge that he stole more than $10,000 in equipment and services from Duval County in 1974. Six other state charges were dismissed.

State District Judge Darrell Hester placed Parr on a strict 10-year probation that bars Parr from Duval County.

"You are not even to set one foot in Duval County," Hester told Parr.

The terms of the probation order Parr to live in Nueces County. The former county judge is also barred from participating in Duval County politics during the 10-year probation.

Case Moved
Hester heard the case here Tuesday after state and defense attorneys agreed on a change of venue from Duval County. The move was made to allow Hester to place Parr on probation here.

"I am convinced you are not interested in injecting yourself in Duval County politics," Hester told Parr. "But there are some former lieutenants up there who would like to see your influence and name."

Hester said Parr could face 20 years in prison if the probation is violated, and advised the former long-time judge to tell his old political allies to "get lost" if they ask him to become involved.

The probation also prohibits Parr from holding any public position — "even a custodian in a courthouse" — Hester said.

Restitution Ordered
The state judge also ordered Parr to pay $25,000 in restitution to Duval County. The money was ordered paid in $25 payments every three months for 10 years.

Parr was paroled from federal prison last week after serving 40 months of a 10-year term for lying to a grand jury. In order to avoid jeopardizing Parr's federal parole, Hester accepted the guilty plea but delayed entering a formal ruling in the case. That means Parr is technically not convicted, but Hester said Parr could be immediately sent to state prison if he violates conditions of his state parole.

Parr told the judge he understood the probation conditions. He also said he knew there would be pressure to get back into politics.

"I'm well aware of that," he told Hester.

Let Duval 'Grow Up'
The state judge said the goal of the probation is to allow the long politically troubled Duval County to "politically mature and grow up without any interference from any outsiders."

Archer Parr's uncle George Parr, the late "Duke of Duval" controlled the county for some four decades before his suicide in 1975.

Hester, who is assigned to hear many of the Duval cases, said he is convinced the county is on the right course. The Archer Parr cases were the final charges pending.

"The people in Duval County say, 'Just give us a chance,'" Hester said. "Their system was a patron system that was closer to the 18th century than the 20th century. You don't just change overnight."

Mourners Pay Last Respects At Meir Funeral

JERUSALEM (AP) — Former Prime Minister Golda Meir, the pioneer and stateswoman who helped build modern-day Israel from a dream, was buried Tuesday as her countrymen and foreign dignitaries mourned.

A driving rain pattered on a throng of umbrellas as Mrs. Meir's simple pine coffin was lowered into the damp earth on a hilltop overlooking Jerusalem in a section of a Mount Herzl cemetery reserved for national leaders.

Prime Minister Menachem Begin and members of Mrs. Meir's family dumped clumps of dirt into the fresh grave after a military chaplain intoned a reaffirmation of Jewish faith:

"The Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away. Blessed is the name of the Lord."

Mrs. Lillian Carter, representing her son, President Carter, and Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance were among the front ranks of the 400 guests attending.

Mrs. Meir, the last of the pioneer leadership who came when Jewish statehood was still a vision, died Friday at 80 after a 15-year battle against lymphoma, a disease of the lymphatic system.

No eulogies were given, in compliance with Mrs. Meir's wishes. But passages from her speeches as prime minister were read at a funeral service at the Knesset, the parliament building, preceding the graveside rites.

"My life was filled with blessings," actress Orna Porat read from a speech outlining Mrs. Meir's visions of peace with the Arabs.

"To those who ask what will be the end, I have only one answer: Peace will come, but not with a weak Israel." It was a theme she repeated often.

Her five years in office, beginning in March 1969, were marked by war and with prosperity. She left office embittered by the 1973 Yom Kippur War, when Israel was caught off guard and vulnerable.

"The horrible knowledge that I might have been able to prevent the war will go with me until my last day," Miss Porat read from Mrs. Meir's words.

The coffin, draped in the blue and white flag of Israel, stood raised on a black bier in a Knesset hall adorned with tapestries by artist Marc Chagall.

Mrs. Meir's son, Menachem, recited the prayer for the dead, his voice choked in a sob. Then, after the 20-minute ceremony, six army generals and two police inspectors lifted the coffin onto their shoulders and, preceded by rabbis reading from the Psalms, carried the casket to a black-draped command car for the mile-and-a-half procession to the cemetery.

She was buried next to Levi Eshkol, the prime minister whose death nine years ago brought Mrs. Meir out of political retirement to lead the nation. The cemetery is on a hill named for Theodore Herzl, founder of modern Zionism.

Sixty military cadets stood at attention, "bundled against the cold and damp, stood ramrod straight, his face with a grim expression.

Thousands of Israelis watched the funeral service on live television.

"Mrs. Golda Meir, we beg your forgiveness," an army rabbi read from a prayer book. "In the name of the citizens who respected you...in the name of your grieving family...we ask that you go to your rest in peace. May your destiny and our destiny be that of peace."

As the service ended with the placing of a mountain of wreaths on the grave, mourners passed the grave to extend condolences to the family. Many, following Jewish custom, dropped a pebble on the fresh mound of earth.

Former U.S. Supreme Court Justice Arthur Goldberg and Sam Rothberg, a U.S. businessman and chairman of Israel Bonds, stopped at the grave and wept.

Henry A. Kissinger, who as secretary of state in 1974 struggled with Mrs. Meir to reach disengagement agreements with Egypt and Syria, stared at the grave, walked away, then turned for a last farewell.

Fears From Year-Ago Fire Renewed For Some Coeds

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — The first snowfall here has revived fear and vivid memories for survivors of a dormitory fire that killed 10 Providence College coeds and injured a dozen a year ago.

The dormitory has been renovated and Rhode Island colleges are conforming to new, stricter fire laws, but students here are still reliving the nightmare of Dec. 13, 1977, that followed a playful evening snowball fight.

"It has been a difficult year," said Mary Anne Putz, 21, a senior who lives in a dormitory next to Aquinas Hall, where the fire broke out. "The memories are coming back and they are beginning to get more vivid. We're all scarred for life."

Two women apparently tried to dry wet clothes from the snowball fight with hairdryers in a closet.

Fire officials, in a report released in June, said the hairdryers "probably" started the fire which ripped through the fourth floor about 3 a.m.

Miss Putz said her Christmas vacation last year at home in Neptune City, N.J., was almost as frightening as the fire itself.

"I didn't sleep for two weeks. I'd go to sleep and hear it all and see it all again" — the screams and the flames. "When we came back from Christmas vacation... it was hard to concentrate on studying."

Nadine Rhodes, 20, who escaped from the fourth floor of Aquinas Hall last year and who lives in a nearby dormitory this year, said "A large number of the students have gotten over the fire. They've picked up the pieces.

"It's not that they've forgotten, it's just that they have learned to cope," Miss Rhodes, of East Providence, said.

The fire prompted the Rhode Island General Assembly to pass stricter safety laws for college dormitories, including required fire drills and posted notices of exits.

SPENDING TO INCREASE
WASHINGTON (AP) — Business plans to increase capital spending 3.8 percent in the fourth quarter of 1978, 1.3 percent in the first quarter of 1979 and 2.7 percent in the second quarter, according to a survey conducted in late October and November by the Bureau of Economic Analysis of the Commerce Department.

Irish actress Siobhan McKenna made her New York debut in 1955 in "The Chalk Garden."

Experts Play Down Soviet Blood 'Breakthrough'

NEW YORK (AP) — Soviet researchers announced Tuesday a "major breakthrough" in developing an artificial substitute for blood but U.S. experts said the work appeared similar to earlier research in the West.

The Soviet news agency Tass said scientists were able to keep cats alive for up to eight hours after replacing their entire blood supply with a synthetic fluorocarbon emulsion.

But in one U.S. lab, rats have lived indefinitely after a complete fluorocarbon transfusion.

Doctors in both East and West are working to produce artificial blood substitutes because of their potential value on the battlefield, in hospital emergency rooms or for preserving human organs for transplant.

Fluorocarbons are considered promising because they absorb and release oxygen under similar conditions to hemoglobin, the oxygen-carrying pigment in red blood cells.

Tass said the Soviet researchers were able to keep animals alive indefinitely when they left 15 percent of the animal's blood intact and replaced the other 85 percent with fluorocarbons.

The animals regenerated the lost blood within two weeks and remained healthy for a one-year observation period, the agency said.

Dr. Grigory Rozenberg of Moscow's Institute of Hematology and Blood Transfusion said the synthetic blood could be ready for clinical use in humans within 10 years. He said the Russians were also working on modifying hemoglobin for use in a blood substitute.

Dr. Wolf Zuelzer of the National Heart,

Lung and Blood Institute in Bethesda, Md., head of a Soviet-U.S. medical exchange program on blood transfusions, said the Russians announced earlier they were working on hemoglobins but have never said they were working with fluorocarbons.

Both areas are under active study in the United States, he said.

"I know Rozenberg and he's a very capable and distinguished scientist. But they've always played their cards close to their chests, so to speak," said Zuelzer, director of the institute's Blood Disease and Resources Division.

Western researchers probably will develop some kind of blood substitute in 5 to 10 years, he said.

Carter Performance Rating Takes New Drop

By LOUIS HARRIS

After rising to a 46 percent positive mark in early November, President Carter's overall job rating has now slipped back to 39 percent positive, 59 percent negative.

In the wake of his Camp David Middle East breakthrough and just before the election, Carter announced his new economic program to combat inflation and to restore the value of the dollar abroad. His rating rose from 43 to 46 percent positive, and his standing among Democrats rose to 60-39 percent positive, the highest he had achieved since last January. However, in this latest ABC News-Harris Survey of 1,197 adults nationwide he has dropped a full 11 points among Democrats to the point where they give him no better than an even standoff of 49-49 percent.

It is not hard to find the reasons for this rise and fall. It can be traced to the nature of the Carter's economic program, which is based largely on voluntary controls of prices and wages, slashes in federal spending and sharply rising interest rates. This approach to the economy is widely viewed as putting the most severe crunch on the elderly and those on pensions, the poor, and other less advantaged groups. A substantial 48 percent of those with annual incomes of $7,000 or less and 51 percent of union members complain that the Carter program is unfair to them, placing undue hardship on their families.

To make his program work, Jimmy Carter must risk causing the most hardship for the Democrats' political base: lower-income people, union members, racial minorities and big-city dwellers. He has already told the nation's mayors that he will cut back on aid to the cities and has promised a sweeping 50 percent cut in the CETA funds that help the hard-core unemployed obtain government jobs. The biggest political gamble in this program is whether Carter can count on these segments of the public to continue to support him through what may turn out to be a long struggle to halt the continuing upward spiral of prices.

Of course, the consequences of President Carter not being able to cope with the central economic issue may be even more drastic. It could make him a one-term president.

As for specific ratings, Americans give Carter relatively high marks on foreign policy matters, but low scores in the economic area:

—On his "working for a peace settlement in the Middle East," he receives a 71-26 percent positive rating, only slightly down from the 78-18 percent positive standing he achieved after Camp David and still a complete turnaround from the 52-40 percent negative rating accorded him before his breakthrough with Sadat and Begin.

—On "handling of foreign policy matters," he comes up with a 48-47 percent negative rating, well below the 56-38 percent positive marks given him last September but much higher than the 71-22 percent negative rating accorded him back in July.

—On his "handling of the economy," Carter's rating is 74-23 percent negative, scarcely different from the 73-22 percent negative rating in September, but better than his low of 80-16 negative in July.

—On "inspiring confidence in the White House, an area where Jimmy Carter has not made significant recent gains, he comes up with a 56-37 percent negative rating. Most significant is the fact that people who voted for him in 1976 give him a 49-46 percent negative rating on his inspiring confidence.

These results make it quite clear that President Carter is now in the most trying period of his presidency to date. The public says it wants him to stick with the tough, ven painful, remedy for inflation that he has proposed, but its conviction that he will succeed is obviously thin. Moreover, Carter will have to pursue his difficult path without alienating his Democratic political base.

Head Start Expansion Shunned By Area Panel Of Governments

By BOB CAMPBELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A $1.4 million grant application to expand Texas Migrant Council programs for pre-school children into Crosby, Hockley and Lamb counties was rejected Tuesday by directors of the South Plains Association of Governments.

The action came after the board heard TMC's Romeo Sifuentes of Laredo, and considered comments on the proposal from 17 area school districts.

A.E. (Dick) McGinty, a soil and water conservation district representative from Yoakum County, said the program was too expensive for the number of children to be served, and he moved for the board to vote "unfavorable comment" on the U.S. Department of Health Education and Welfare application.

Levelland city councilman Cecil Sharbutt seconded the motion, which was approved unanimously.

Sifuentes, assistant Head Start director for the organization, said after the vote that its result will be to kill the Interstate Migrant Headstart program for the three counties.

The vote came after the proposal was discussed in detail at a SPAG board meeting last month and it was tabled for additional comment to be made by the various parties concerned.

Most of the school districts submitting comments said they were opposed to the program extending Head Start services to 3- and 4-year-old migrant children.

During a discussion leading up to the vote, Lamb County Judge Don Joyner of Littlefield asked Sifuentes the basis of proposing the program for the three counties, where a number of educators said it would duplicate already existing programs.

Sifuentes said the proposal "came down from Washington" and added, when Joyner asked who in Washington, "from the representative."

"I beg your pardon," Joyner said, "you didn't get it from him."

Blind Man Loses More Than Just Pet

By JACK DOUGLAS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Pedro Montes Jr. lost a close friend Monday — not just a friend but a dog who acted as the eyes Montes never had.

Montes, 24, of 307 Hub Homes, and his Seeing Eye dog of eight months, Barry, were struck by a car about noon Monday at the intersection of Fourth Street and Avenue H.

Montes, who has been blind all his life, suffered a fractured shoulder and multiple lacerations. But Barry, a golden retriever, died about an hour and a half later at a local animal hospital.

Speaking of his relationship with his first Seeing Eye dog, which replaced the walking cane he had used all his life, Montes said, "He became real close to me. He was ready to go anytime I was. He was always willing for me to put the harness on him."

"I just feel like I lost a member of the family. To me, he meant a part of me."

Montes said it would be at least a year before he got another dog. There will be a waiting list and application forms to fill out.

The 2-year-old Barry came out of Guide Dogs for the Blind, Inc., in San Rafael, Calif.

The dog went through five months training at the school and then was given to Montes. The Lubbockite and Barry spent another 28 days together in basic training, where the dog would lead Montes through city streets and country roads.

Montes, from his bed in West Texas Hospital, said Barry was attempting to protect both of them seconds before they were hit by a westbound car on Fourth Street while they were crossing on Avenue H.

"If a car came he would back up. But this time he couldn't because we were in the middle of the street. He tried to run and beat the car, but it was coming too fast."

Montes said blind persons become more attached to Seeing Eye dogs because they are so much a part of them. The blind man said when he and Barry met, "I felt more independent. I didn't have to ask people to take me somewhere. I would just take off."

When the accident occurred, Barry was leading Montes downtown where he was going to refill a doctor's prescription and pay a phone bill.

"I could've waited for the bus, but I felt like taking a walk because I heard it was going to be a nice day."

Clements Inauguration Planners Set

AUSTIN (AP) — Fifty Texans, both Republicans and Democrats, were named Tuesday to plan the inauguration Jan. 16 of Gov.-elect Bill Clements and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby.

George Bush and John B. Connally, both of Houston, and U.S. Sen. John Tower were named honorary chairmen of the committee. All are Republicans.

"This committee is representative of this historic inauguration," said Beryl Buckley Milburn, co-chairman of inaugural plans. "It is truly a 'Day for All Texans' and this committee list exemplifies this theme of a celebration for all Texans."

Those selected included: Mrs. James F. Biggart, Leo F. Corrigan Jr., Edwin L. Cox, Robert H. Dedman, Paul W. Eggers, Joe Kirven, Richard L.

At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK

I was browsing through a bookstore this week where I noted there were at least 187 titles on "How to be a Winner." There wasn't one book on "How To Lose." Yet, most of us do that 50 times as much as we win.

Losing is the only art form where the more you do it, the less proficient you become at it.

As a child, no one talked to me about losing. It was so offensive that they didn't even talk about it in the gutter where they discussed sex. If it happened (God forbid!) you dealt with it in your own way.

I didn't want my kids to hear about "losing" from strangers, so I set up the following guidelines.

1. Don't believe that old line that in ten years you won't remember losing. When I was in the eighth grade, I lost the citizenship award (a paper certificate) to Marjorie Stewart. I wore a white and brown polka dot dress and when her name was announced I thought my throat would burst open from hurting. Right after the assembly, I poked a hole in my dress so I would have to go home and change. You'll remember.

2. There is no such thing as a "dumb old ballgame," an "overrated Nobel Prize," a "Minnie Mouse Senate race" or a "silly ole Pillsbury bake-off." (I lost a spelling bee in the ninth grade because I failed to spell "MINUTE" meaning infinitesimal.) At the time, it's important.

3. Don't be too sure that in the years to come you'll "laugh yourself to death" when you think of this moment. We practically had to write a check to a guy to take me to the junior prom and the dress was ugly and my hair curled weird. Anyone who laughs at that should be put in a home.

Someone once asked me what was one of my proudest moments as a mother and I have to go back to a tennis match involving my 17-year-old daughter who, in a draw to eliminate the "hamburgers," got matched with the No. 1 seeded girl in the tournament.

The night before, she made up her mind to "default" by not showing up. The next day she figured out if she didn't play she'd never know how bad her opponent was or how good she was. She gave her a run for her money.

Losing is not your No. 1 fatality. Being hit by a car is. Some say there is little difference.

Losing a tennis match or a marriage... it all depends on how much of your integrity is still intact. It takes practice.

- 1/4 cup butter or margarine, softened
- 2 cloves garlic, crushed
- 1 15-inch Italian loaf hero bread, split lengthwise
- 8 oz. sliced American cheese
- 2 cups sauerkraut, drained (about 16 oz.)
- 1/2 cup ketchup

Blend butter and garlic. Spread over bread halves. Top with cheese. Mix kraut and ketchup. Spread over cheese. Tightly wrap each hero half in foil. Heat thoroughly on grill about 15 min. on each side. Make about 10 slits in each frankfurter, being careful not to cut all the way through. Brown on grill. Unwrap heroes and top each with 3 round dogs. Cut each round dog hero into 3 servings.

in a four-heart contract with four probably losing tricks. Look at all the cards and you will see all those losers right there, yet Al performed the magician's trick of making one of them vanish into thin air.

He won the club in dummy and drew trumps with three leads. Then he cashed his king of clubs, ruffed his last club in dummy and stopped to count the hand. West had shown three hearts and three clubs. He was not the sort to make a vulnerable overcall with only a four-card suit so he had at least five spades. That meant he could not hold more than two diamonds. The magic was ready.

Al cashed his king of diamonds, led a diamond to dummy's ace and a spade to his king and West's ace.

West could take two more spade tricks but would have to play a fourth spade to give Al a ruff and discard. Or West could lead a spade to East. East could then collect a diamond trick, but would have to give Al a ruff and discard and no third spade loser.

Arab Council To Study Refining Capabilities

ABU DHABI, United Arab Emirates (AP) — Arab oil-exporters agreed Tuesday to establish a high-level committee to consider ways to increase their share of the world petroleum refining industry, particularly at the expense of Western Europe.

In a final communique after a one-day meeting, the Organization of Arab Petroleum Exporting Countries (OAPEC) said the experts in the study group would submit proposals at an unspecified time to establish a joint Arab refining policy.

An OAPEC spokesman discounted reporters' suggestions that the naming of the committee was a delaying tactic, and said more information would be available at a press conference Wednesday with OAPEC Secretary General Ali Ahmed Attiga.

PRICE INCREASE EXPECTED — Saudi Arabia's oil minister, Sheikh Ahmed Zaki Yamani, right, consults with Jamal Jawa, deputy governor of the Saudi state petroleum corporation during the opening session of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) meeting in Abu Dhabi Tuesday. Yamani expects OPEC to decide on new oil prices this week, and some observers expect the basic price to rise 5 to 10 percent. (AP Laserphoto)

However, Arab countries complain that refining is dominated by "multinational companies based in Europe and the United States." Oil-exporters have plans to increase their refining capacity to about 3.5 million barrels a day by 1985 from about 2 million barrels a day at present.

Between OAPEC sessions, delegates continued informal lobbying over the size of an expected oil-price hike at Saturday's meeting of the parent group OPEC, or Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

A diplomatic source here said the "general consensus" among OPEC members is that the price boost "won't be more than ten percent, and won't be less than five percent." The price of standard-grade petroleum presently stands at $12.70 for a 42-gallon barrel.

Saudi Arabian Oil Minister Sheikh Ahmed Zaki Yamani left this Arabian Gulf country before the end of the conference, but a member of his party said he would return within a day or two.

ble at a press conference Wednesday with OAPEC Secretary General Ali Ahmed Attiga.

Delegates from the ten OAPEC member states also agreed to continue negotiations with the European Economic Community (EEC) over long-range measures designed to shift refining capacity from the Common Market to Arab oil producers. OAPEC would like to complete a joint accord with the EEC during 1979 under which the Common Market would agree to limit expansion of its own refining capacity and lower trade barriers against imports of refined products by 1982-85, conference sources reported.

Oil exporters have threatened to curb supplies of crude oil to Western countries that don't cooperate with the producers' desires to move further into refining.

The EEC energy commissioner has said that the exporters shouldn't plan to expand their shipments of refined oil products, such as gasoline, to Western Europe because refineries there are seriously underused.

However, Arab producers wary of the accumulation of devaluation-prone dollars announced at the heights of the November strikes that they were not willing to increase production to make up for the Iranian shortfalls.

At the time, the shortage caused the prices of some light Arabian crude oil to move slightly upwards. This fitted well the argument by some OPEC members that balancing production with demand would mean automatic price increases.

Saudi, Kuwaiti Oil Boost Doubted

By The Associated Press

Saudi Arabia and Kuwait have no plans to increase crude oil production to meet any shortage in the world oil markets caused by disorders in Iran, a Saudi newspaper reported Tuesday.

The daily Al-Jazirah quoted sources in the Saudi and Kuwaiti delegations to the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries meeting in Abu Dhabi as saying reports that the two Arab countries plan such increases were "untrue."

"The events in Iran are internal and temporary. At the same time, the oil production decrease is an internal policy directly emanating from these events," the sources were quoted as saying.

"Every country has its internal oil production policy which is not affected by events on the sidelines," the sources said, without elaboration.

However, the sources said Saudi Arabia and Kuwait were prepared to "cooperate for the safeguarding of OPEC and world interests," should the Iranian oil situation come up for discussion at the OPEC meeting.

Iranian crude oil production has dropped to 1.3 million barrels a day as a result of renewed strikes by anti-shah oil workers. An earlier strike in mid-November cut back production to 2 million barrels a day from the normal average of 6.3 million barrels a day.

According to oil sources, the Iranian production cutbacks are believed to have eaten up an estimated 2 million barrels a day surplus in world markets, and the continued strikes have caused fear of a shortage.

However, Arab producers wary of the accumulation of devaluation-prone dollars announced at the heights of the November strikes that they were not willing to increase production to make up for the Iranian shortfalls.

At the time, the shortage caused the prices of some light Arabian crude oil to move slightly upwards. This fitted well the argument by some OPEC members that balancing production with demand would mean automatic price increases.

'Conflict Of Philosophies' Leads To Showdown

Saltillo capital of Texas — where an arrest broke the peace.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the last in a series of 10 articles excerpted from a new book entitled "Texas — The Beginning," written by Ed Spors of Kerrville. The book, available through Texian Press, P.O. Box 1484, Waco, 76782, chronicles the state's least-known years, 1519 to 1824.)

There must be a way to avert war! But Stephen Austin, on the way to Mexico this late 1833, was no longer sure. In his Texas, showdown seemed at hand.

If you oversimplified things, Austin told himself, the trouble boiled up from a collision of two philosophies. Texas Americans believed government was their servant; Mexico, still in birth pain, viewed government as a necessary master.

And so there had been gunfire at Velasco and Nacogoches. Americans — Texans they now called themselves — saw their own strangulation in new Mexican laws. Mexico saw U.S. infiltration, then revolt — like Fredonia's. America wanted Texas, even tried to buy it.

Texas had narrowly escaped charges of revolt in the 1832 fighting. They claimed to be supporting a Mexican liberator — Gen. Santa Anna. In Mexico, that man was now supreme; on the face of things, tranquility had been restored. Austin distrusted Santa Anna.

Then there was Sam Houston, now in Texas and so close to U.S. President Andrew Jackson, who had tried to buy Texas and failed. To Austin, Houston wanted a war.

The Tennessean, he felt, had maneuvered him into a corner. Houston had taken over the 1833 statewide consultation, drafted an American-model constitution, then helped select Austin to deliver it to the man it would enrage — Santa Anna. Exhausted and half sick, Austin made his last trip to Mexico City — he had to try for peace.

Mexico, itself torn by a power struggle, must understand the short Texas fuse.

He secured vague promises and by early 1834 left for home partially successful, he thought. But his directness in stating his colonists' case had been read as a threat; in Saltillo he was arrested — he was inciting a revolution.

For 18 months, Mexico City dungeons held him without charge or trial. Finally released, the peacemaker would return home with no solution but war for Texas independence.

A realist, Houston had foreseen this war. He had been in the United States, quietly arranging for money, men and munitions.

Santa Anna, as well, had looked ahead. He had sent an observer to calculate Texas' resources for conflict, then prepared to obliterate its rebellion.

Texas destiny had reached crossroads — the peacemaker was out. Showdown now would be between the dictatorship of Santa Anna and the Texas of Sam Houston.

Moonies File Ordinance Suits

DENVER (AP) — The Rev. Sun Myung Moon's Unification Church filed suit in federal court Tuesday seeking to have the public solicitation ordinances of four Colorado cities declared unconstitutional.

The church filed separate suits against Golden, Montrose, Sterling and Thornton, claiming the cities' ordinances are too vague in defining circumstances under which local officials can deny solicitation permits.

The suits were filed in U.S. District Court here by Jack Hagel and Jean Jonet, identified as members of The Holy Spirit Association of the Unification of World Christianity, the legal name of the Unification Church.

The suits ask that the court enjoin the cities from enforcing the ordinances and seek a ruling that they are unconstitutional.

Jack Hagel, regional director of the church, said the four cities were chosen because of the legal weakness of their solicitation ordinances and because city officials had rebuffed what he called "repeated attempts at conciliation."

In each of the cities, Hagel said, church members have been arrested, threatened with arrest or prosecuted and fined. "With an increasing membership in Colorado, we are no longer able to ignore the effects of a prohibition," he said.

Ron Troyer, a church lawyer, said officials in cities throughout the state have denied the church solicitation permits "with the most blatant disregard for our constitutional freedoms."

1973 Marked Emergence Of Arab Petrodollar

Excerpted From The Book, "America For Sale"
(c) 1973 by Kenneth C. Crowe

AMERICA FOR SALE

EDITOR'S NOTE: America is under invasion, not with bombs, but with petrodollars, yen and pounds sterling. At the end of 1973, foreign investments in America totaled 1480 billion, according to Treasury, Commerce and Federal Reserve statistics. Pulitzer prize-winning reporter Kenneth C. Crowe takes an alarming look at how foreign money is buying our country and drastically changing the ownership and control of America. In this second of a four-part series from his new book, "America For Sale."

By KENNETH C. CROWE

October of 1973 was the month of the phoenix for the Arabs of the Middle East. This was the month when they burst from poverty and the ashes of history, like the phoenix of Egyptian mythology, to re-enter the world scene in a resurgence of Arab will and Arab power.

They came out of the desert, not with a conqueror's sword shaped as in the days of Mohammed by a hard austerity and a religious fervor, but with a new weapon, the petrodollar, a by-product of oil.

Their timing for seizing control was perfect: the industrialized nations were caught in an inertia, incapable of crushing the midget states which confronted them. The leader of the free world bloc, the United States, had just emerged from the draining quagmire of Vietnam and its president, Richard Nixon, was totally absorbed in the Watergate swamp. The American people literally did not know what was happening to them.

The impact of the dramatic increases in the price of oil is shown by looking at just one country's treasury, that of Saudi Arabia, the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) nation with the most oil and the largest revenues.

In 1971 when the posted price of Arabian Light oil went from $11.80 per barrel to $2.18, the Saudi Arabian government's revenue from each barrel of oil sold at $2.18 was about $1.26, bringing the desert kingdom a total income of $1,884,900,000.

Unilateral increases in the price of oil from October to December 1973 first jacked the posted price of a barrel of oil to $5.12 (in October), then to $11.65 (on Jan. 1, 1974). The Saudi treasury was paid $4.34 billion for oil in 1973, more than double the 1971 take. But in 1974, with the government earning $9.82 on each barrel of Saudi Light sold, the kingdom's oil revenues soared to $22,573,500,000. All 13 OPEC countries collected an aggregate of about $100 billion that year.

Federal Reserve Board Chairman Arthur Burns, testifying late in 1974 before a Senate committee, tried to put this massive shift of money in perspective: "No economic event in a long generation, excluding only wartime upheavals, has so seriously disrupted our economy as the manipulation of oil prices and supplies over the past year."

Burns pointed out that the OPEC nations would accumulate a surplus of about $60 billion in 1974 alone. He went on: "If the price of oil remains at anything like its present level — and there are repeated stirrings in OPEC countries to move it still higher — there will be a Arab petrodollars sought economic investments throughout the world. At that time, the United States offered the most advantageous opportunities.

The Arab attraction to American investment was summed up by Abdul Aziz al-Quarishi, the governor of Saudi Arabia's Central Bank. "The size and character of the market makes the United States our principal investment outlet. With your privately held federal debt over $500 billion, your outstanding corporate bond issues exceeding $300 billion and your net corporate stock issuance in excess of $1,000 billion, the range and variety of securities you offer to an international investor is indeed enormous. The efficiency and sophistication of your market adds to that attraction."

By the end of 1974 the investments of the Middle East nations in portfolios of corporate stocks in the United States was only $518 million of the $18 billion owned by foreigners. "Known" is a key word in dealing with the Middle East, because much of their investment money flows through banks in England and Switzerland and, to some extent, France. Behind the virtually impenetrable shield of bank secrecy lies the true figure of Middle Eastern investment in American stocks, bonds and real estate.

Even the known figures have become impressive: The U.S. Treasury Department estimates that in 1975 all foreigners made net purchases of $3.9 billion in stocks — with the Middle Easterners buying $1.7 billion or about 43 percent of that total. In the first 10 months of 1976 the Middle Easterners acquired another $1.64 billion in corporate stocks, which was almost 66 percent of the total $2.5 billion in net purchases by all foreigners.

To stick with the dry statistics just for a moment, the jump from $518 million in portfolio stockholdings at the end of 1974 to $3.85 billion sometime in 1976 represents an increase of 750 percent — and that's only the figures on the surface. From the beginning of 1974 through September of 1976, the Middle East Economic Survey estimated, the OPEC nations had invested $25.5 billion in U.S. corporate stocks, bonds, real estate and government securities. Those figures, of course, don't include hidden investments.

More alarming than the Arabs' complex banking and investment connections with the United States is the web of military arms sales to the Middle East, particularly Iran.

In 1972, Iran spent $523,957 on arms in the United States. Over the next three years the shah of Iran went wild with his military spending in America: $2.1 billion in 1973, $3.9 billion in 1974, and $2.5 billion in 1975. By the end of 1976, the shah had invested $10.5 billion in the United States for destroyers, jet fighters, submarines, helicopters — and the military and electronic craftsmen required to teach the comparatively backward Iranians how to use these weapons.

Sen. Frank Church of Idaho, delving into military sales to Iran, has raised the issue of whether the shah's investment in American arms is a direct cause of the increasing price of oil. Church said: "In this case study, we can see the effects of the two elements which have done so much to make the U.S. government the leading arms merchant of the world. First, the promotional push of U.S. arms companies underwritten by effective U.S. government supervision. Second, the embryonic beginnings of the vicious cycle in which we are now caught — the appetite for sophisticated weapons feeds the need for revenues to pay for the arms; this leads to more pressure for oil price increases, particularly in a country like Iran."

The shah's $10.5 billion isn't simply an exchange of money for a package of goods. The implication of this vast expenditure as developed in a study on arms sales to Iran for the Senate Subcommittee on Foreign Assistance is that America is hooked on Iran. The study projects that by 1980 Americans living in Iran to service the military goods acquired by the shah will reach between 35,000 and 60,000 military and civilian employees along with their dependents.

The scenario to be projected is that U.S. citizens will either be participating directly or indirectly in any war the shah plunges into. There is the possibility too that, in a conflict of policy between Iran and the United States, these Americans could serve as hostages of the shah. (Next: America — Everyone's Buying A Piece!)

massive redistribution of economic and political power among the countries of the world. This of itself carries dangers for our country's future."

Arab Conglomerate Aiming To Expand To United States

Excerpted from the book AMERICA FOR SALE
Copyright (c) 1973 by Kenneth C. Crowe
Published by Doubleday & Company, Inc.

Kutayba Alghanim is the Arab multinational businessman of the future — now. His Alghanim Industries Inc., based in Kuwait, is a modern, multinational corporate structure in an embryo stage, poised to expand throughout the Middle East and around the world.

The Alghanim organization already has sales in excess of $200 million a year and has ambitious plans to expand that impressive number toward a billion dollars within the next decade.

Aside from the necessary investments in other Arab countries — for both political and economic reasons — the direction in which Kutayba wants to take his company is the United States, and he has already begun that process, making his first investment with the smooth efficiency that marks his style: quietly, without controversy, without publicity.

Now in his early 30s, Kutayba is a cosmopolitan, as much a citizen of the world as of Kuwait. At the age of 11 he began his education abroad. First at exclusive schools in Britain through the high school years, then to the States for his college education — the pattern followed by so many of the sons of the wealthy families of the Middle East.

Kutayba had just graduated from the University of California at Berkeley with a degree in business administration when he returned to Kuwait in 1970. Kutayba's first great achievement was taking over Yusuf A. Alghanim & Sons, a large, and unwieldy, tradition-bound Kuwait family trading company centering on the sale and servicing of General Motors cars and trucks. He transformed it into a true corporate structure that now fosters the development of organization men and planning — two commonplace entities in the West, but so rare as to be unique in the Middle East.

With the General Motors franchise as its base, the Alghanim organization now holds 86 different franchises. Profits have multiplied by a factor of 20. Selling in excess of 15,000 vehicles a year, Alghanim is the largest General Motors dealer outside the United States. The organization is also in construction, electronics, travel services, food distribution and shipping. In the Middle East, where ships line up outside ports for months, the Alghanim organization's charters unload and turn around in a matter of days.

The phenomenal wealth pumped into Kuwait by the 1973 oil price increases began arriving in the city-state in 1974, and the idea for the Alghanim organization to go international arrived with it.

Kutayba was anxious to develop the company beyond the stage of a trading company dealing in someone else's goods. He explained: "We decided the best thing was to go through an acquisition route, to buy companies and bring them into our area." Kutayba wanted to buy companies with strong domestic operations in the United States.

Kutayba was naturally drawn to the States — a land of thousands of medium-sized, efficient companies with innovative, efficient workers.

He gives other pragmatic reasons for selecting the States for corporate frontier: the abundance and stability of the nation. "If there are 10 (companies of a particular type) in Europe, then there are 100 in America. . . . If the whole world turns Communist, the last country will be the United States."

Beer Firm Displays Altered Soft Drink

WASHINGTON (AP) — A replacement was announced Tuesday for a new soft drink that was criticized as a "baby beer" that would condition children to drink beer.

Anheuser-Busch Inc. held a news conference to introduce its new Chelsea soft drink to replace the first version, introduced in October and quickly withdrawn after being criticized by religious and medical groups.

The new Chelsea contains only a trace of alcohol, the company said. The first version contained 4 percent alcohol. Beer usually contains about 6 percent alcohol.

Keith M. Jones, product manager for the company's soft drink division, said at the news conference that the original Chelsea was aimed at adults but through "inadvertent miscommunication" became confused with beer.

He said the reasons for the earlier product's identification with beer included the fact that the manufacturer is the nation's leading brewer. Also, he noted, Chelsea foams like beer. And then there was the advertising slogan: "the not-so-soft soft drink."

The new product will identify the maker only on the back and as Soft Drink Division, Anheuser-Busch, Jones said. In addition, Jones said, the beverage will not have as much foam, the bottle no longer will be the color of beer and the new slogan will be "the natural alternative."

He said it will be marketed as the "Cadillac of soft drinks" at a premium price of about $2 per six-pack.

The company suspended production, advertising and promotion of the original Chelsea Oct. 21.

Appearing with Jones at the news conference to endorse the new product were an aide to Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, and Matthew Dopp, an official of the Seventh-Day Adventists Council. Both the senator and the religious group had criticized the original product.

As with the original Chelsea, the company will test market the product in Richmond and Staunton, Va., and areas in Massachusetts, Louisiana and Illinois, Jones said.

The drink will consist of lemon, lime, apple and ginger and will contain no sugar, preservatives or caffeine, Jones said.

His "trace" of alcohol is comparable to that of other citrus-flavored soft drinks, Jones said.

After withdrawing the original Chelsea, the company consulted with the clergy and the medical profession and agreed to change the drink.

As for what will be done with the original Chelsea, Jones said the company's plans were indefinite. "We may dig a hole somewhere and bury it," he said.

Heartline

Heartline is a service for senior citizens. Its purpose is to answer questions and solve problems — fast. If you have a question or a problem not answered in these columns, write Heartline, 114 E. Dayton St., West Alexandria, Ohio 43081. You will receive a prompt reply, but you must include a stamped, self-addressed envelope. The most useful replies will be printed in this column.

HEARTLINE: I was married to my ex-husband for 27 years. I am now 66 years old. I know that if he is retired I am eligible for a wife's benefits from his Social Security account. However, I cannot find out his Social Security number. Can you tell me what to do? I have called many government offices and cannot get any information. Any help you can give will be appreciated. — A.W.

You should try to get together all the identifying information on your ex-husband you can find: his parents' full names, his date and place of birth, his last employer. Social Security will not furnish you with his Social Security number unless you are at an age when you would be eligible for benefits on his account. If you are applying for a wife's benefits, you must be age 62 or have children under 18 in your care. If you are not sure your ex-husband is still alive or not, you can file a claim as early as age 60.

However, even if you do not have any information on your husband, you should file for benefits anyway. The information above would speed your application along, since Social Security files accounts by number only, and they could use this information to locate your ex-husband's file. Heartline has available a booklet which explains many of the rules and requirements governing the Social Security program. To order, send $2 to Heartline's Guide to Social Security, P.O. Box 11934, Chicago, Ill. 60611. Please allow eight weeks for delivery.

If this winter is anything like the last, I shudder to think how much I'll owe by next summer. Is there any place at all where I can turn to for financial assistance with these bills? — F.C.

Senior citizens who are experiencing problems because of accumulated fuel bills may be eligible for assistance. The Department of HEW has announced that funds appropriated under the Older Americans Act are available and advises people to contact their state and local offices on aging. These will be listed, in most areas, as Council on Aging or Agency on Aging.

Corporation Wants Share Of Forest Land

NEW YORK (AP) — The Atlantic Richfield Co. said Tuesday that the bulk of undeveloped areas in the National Forest System should be maintained for multiple use, including as a possible source of oil, gas and minerals.

The giant corporation said it was concerned that the U.S. Forest Service lacked resources to determine the true potential of the area.

In January, the service is expected to make recommendations to Congress on what portions of 62 million acres should be designated for wildlife only, for multiple use or for future study.

"This could result in a raw material shortage... and could have a profound effect on industries which depend on these minerals," said Don Henriksen, Atlantic Richfield's vice president for government relations.

He said that if a large portion of the land were denied to industry, firms might turn to imports and that "this could further erode the dollar."

The 2,686 areas involved cover tracts mainly in Alaska and the Rocky Mountain states, and also portions of New Hampshire, Vermont, Pennsylvania, Virginia, West Virginia, North Carolina, Tennessee and Georgia.

"Past experience indicates multiple use can be done... and at the same time not destroy wilderness values," Henri-sen said at a news conference.

Designation of areas as wilderness or for further study would prohibit any roads or mechanical equipment in them and "exploration we would like to conduct in some of these lands would be prohibited," he said.

He said the government should "make it possible for private companies to continue to explore these areas before they are locked up."

He said Atlantic Richfield also was concerned about re-evaluation of another 120 million acres by the Bureau of Land Management.

Ford Increasing Prices On Big Cars

DETROIT (AP) — Faced with federal fuel standards it says it can barely meet, Ford Motor Co. on Tuesday accelerated the prices of its big cars to hold down demand.

The small Ford cars were not touched, and Ford said the average increase would be only 0.5 percent or $38 per car.

But the gas-guzzlers were loaded with increases ranging up to 2.4 percent.

That was the boost on the four-door Lincoln sedan and the Ford LTD II's, for example. The Lincoln went from a sticker price of $11,200 to $11,467 and the LTD II's rose from $5,198 to $5,321.

The Ford Thunderbird two-door hardtop was bumped from $5,877 to $5,999, 2.1 percent.

Ford truck prices also were increased, by $54 or an average of 0.7 percent.

Ford has been limiting production of big V-8 engines to discourage buyers.

Already this model year, General Motors Corp. has increased the price of optional V-8 engines by up to $105 for the same reason. Some optional six-cylinder engines also were increased in price.

Auto production by each manufacturer must average 19 miles per gallon this year across the entire output of that company, a standard that rises to 27 1/2 mpg in 1985.

Ford says it will meet the 19 mpg standard with nothing to spare. GM says it will average 19.3. All automakers say they will do whatever is necessary to make 19 mpg. They can be fined $5 per car for their entire production for each tenth of a mile per gallon they fall short.

The Ford statement, issued in the name of Gordon B. MacKenzie, vice president for sales, said the company had discussed the new prices with the federal Council on Wage and Price Stability. "The increase is well within the administration's anti-inflation guidelines," the statement said.

Investment Firm Sees Recession In '79

NEW YORK (AP) — The American economy, burdened by high inflation and increasingly tight money, will "struggle to maintain headway" but will slip into a recession by late 1979, the investment banking firm of Salomon Brothers predicted Wednesday.

"I believe we are moving into a period of financial crisis," general partner Henry Kaufman said in his annual economic outlook. He added, "it is hard, if not impossible, to see much that is favorable for prices in American financial markets, at least for a good part of 1979."

Kaufman said inflation next year should reach 9 1/2 to 10 percent, about the same annual rate as recorded in September and October and well above the 6 1/2 percent rate of 1977.

The prime lending rate — a bank's

WHY CHRISTMAS ALMOST WASN'T

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By BILL DOYLE

Q. We are a 67-year-old retired couple with a paid-up home worth approximately $90,000. We are contemplating purchasing a new home in the $110,000 range to beat inflation one more time. We enjoy our present home but it is 17 years old and will soon need a new roof, furnace and other expensive replacements and repairs.

We have $130,000 worth of stocks with an average dividend yield of 9 percent, $35,000 in savings certificates, $8,000 in a savings account and no debts. Between pension and Social Security, our income is $23,900 a year.

We feel we should buy a new home while we are still in relatively good health. Do you agree?

A. Indeed, I do. With your income — far in excess of most retired people — and your assets, you can afford your "dream house." I say, buy it and live the way you want to. Even though you could undoubtedly live comfortably in your present home, if the new one will make you happier, you might as well make the move.

The only thing I don't understand is your statement about the big repair and replacement expenses you expect to face soon on your present home. Our home is about 17 years old and we don't anticipate being hit with the major costs you mention.

Any well-constructed home which has been properly maintained usually increases in value and "beats inflation" — no matter how old it is.

Your letter really doesn't present a "problem." But it does show that you have built up a good deal of wealth, acquired during your working years. It's being used in this column to make the point, to all readers, that retirement is something that should be worked toward for many years — not just when you reach your late 50s and early 60s.

BISHOPS SEEK FUNDS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bishops who head the nation's Catholic dioceses have approved a proposal for an annual collection to raise funds for diocesan and national use of media in evangelizing. It is anticipated the effort could raise as much as $7 million a year.

Q. Recently, I have received many phone calls from commodity traders urging me to invest in precious metals, diamonds and other jewels. I am interested, because of the possibility of high returns. But I am totally unfamiliar with the companies calling me. How can I check on the background and reliability of these commodity traders?

A. Don't bother. When those clowns call, hang up. The "boiler room" operators have moved into the commodity metal and gem field with a vengeance in recent months. The newspapers have been full of stories of those operations — which can best be described as swindles.

Federal and state regulatory authorities keep cracking down. But the boiler room boys then fold their tents and begin operating from a new battery of telephones.

Here's a simple — and money-saving — rule of thumb. Throw away all junk mail and hang up on all get-rich-quick telephone calls.

Q. I have more than 1,600 shares of a mutual fund which did very good years ago. But, for about four years, I have been getting low dividends and the per share price of the fund has been disappointing — to put it mildly.

I would like to switch my investment to another mutual fund in the same group, which pays a higher dividend. But I hate to go to a broker and pay a commission. Can I do business direct with the funds?

A. Yes. And you can make that switch, without paying any commission. Like most mutual fund "groups," the one in which you have invested has an arrangement through which an investor can switch from one fund to another within the same management organization without being hit with a fat charge.

And I have to fault you, for not reading the reports and prospectus of the fund in which you own shares and which are mailed to you. The details of commission-free switching are spelled out in that literature.

MR. DOYLE welcomes written questions, but he will be able to provide answers only through the column.

WEEKLY MARKET REPORT

The past six weeks have witnessed a pillow fight between the bulls and the bears with neither side showing much courage. The early rounds were dominated by a totally sold-out market due to the October bloodbath and thus a few buyers were counterbalanced by even fewer sellers and stocks went up. For six weeks now this market has chugged along between 780 and 830 on volume that dropped to some 22 million shares on the average. A number of quality growth stocks did put on good shows but follow through buying in these issues started to fail late last week. In our opinion, the combatants are about to drop the pillows and get at it.

Stocks are now moderately overbought and the sellers have had a long enough time to rest up and see if they have reached a comfort zone in their stock positions. Thus, the stock market will be left to its own devices and with opinions so polarized and the market illiquid, it could be a real donnybrook. In our opinion, the unrelenting inflationary pressures, rising interest rates, a too-strong economy, very dangerous levels of margin debt, an already deteriorating wage-price guideline program, and currently the powder keg in Iran give the superior fire power to the bears. Even short term, the bulls are throwing duds when they talk of the seasonal December rally — since 1964, the Dow industrials have been lower at the end of the month six of those 14 years.

Recent economic developments and near term events also seem to take some of the punch out of the bulls. The dollar has been soft the past four days and gold has firmed. Wholesale prices rose at a 9.6 percent annual rate in November. Future readings could worsen due to anticipations of guidelines becoming controls three to six months out and rising agricultural prices. The OPEC meeting scheduled for Saturday should give us a Christmas present of a 7 to 10 percent oil price increase, perhaps in installments, but also with no help from a possible collapse of Iran. If institutions want to look past the valley which is now totally shrouded in uncertainty and ignore short-term interest rates not seen since August of 1974, we will get them willingly. Until then, stay liquid, stay defensive, stay patient.

charge on loans to top-rated customers — will "reach or exceed" 13 percent from the current 11 1/2 percent, he said, beating the 1974 record of 12 percent.

Kaufman, Salomon's top economist, estimated that after inflation is taken into account, the economy will grow by about 2 1/2 percent "or perhaps a little bit more" next year. The rate would be down from the 3 1/2 percent annual rate the government has forecast for 1978.

Despite President Carter's efforts to control the cost of living through voluntary wage and price controls, numerous factors will work together to fuel inflation, Kaufman said in a report and at a news conference.

"Tight labor markets, high (factory) utilization rates, declining profit margins in many areas, the continuing effects of past and possible future dollar declines in foreign-exchange markets, rising energy and housing costs" and price increases in anticipation of mandatory controls will add up to "extraordinarily high" inflation, he said.

Although the Federal Reserve recently has intensified its drive to push short-term interest rates higher as a way of cooling inflation, Kaufman said financial conditions are not yet "sufficiently restrictive to signal an end to the American economic expansion" of the past four years.

"We haven't seen the bite of credit restraint yet," Kaufman said. But later he noted "there are chances there is going to be a restraint of credit that will ... lead to another economic recession." Kaufman said the magnitude of an economic slowdown is "difficult to determine because of 'all the excesses sitting in front of us.'" But he said he expects a recession to begin "late in 1979, perhaps in the fourth quarter."

According to the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, the national average rate on a new-home mortgage was 9.96 percent last month, up from 9.07 percent a year earlier. Kaufman said while interest rates will continue to climb, "household spending and borrowing will remain strong for the better part of the coming year than is generally expected."

The strength is due in part to spending in the anticipation that inflation will continue and in part to consumers' perception of a home as a hedge against ever-rising living costs, he said.

Area Legislators Mull Upcoming Austin Issues

DISCUSSING THE ISSUES — State Representative-elect Buzz Robnett exchanges views about the issues before the upcoming legislative session with Linda Fekner and Tavita Dorow. Constituents had the opportunity to meet their representatives at a noon meeting of the League of Women Voters Tuesday (Staff Photo by Paul Mosely)

Three state representatives and their constituents informally exchanged views about issues including school financing, public health and water importation at a League of Women Voters meeting Tuesday.

Newly elected state representatives Buzz Robnett, Pete Laney and Froy Salinas were guests at the noon meeting which provided a forum for members of the public to meet their representatives and discuss the issues before the upcoming legislative session.

All three officials cited what they feel will be major areas of concern when the legislature convenes.

Robnett noted that school financing will cause much discussion because "Everybody is concerned about taxes, but everyone wants good schools too."

He said that product liability will also be of major concern. "It's of concern in Texas and all over," said Robnett. "We have cases like a guy falling on a 20-year-old ladder and then getting a multi-million dollar judgment."

"It's hurting the small businessman and the insurance companies. We want to do all we can to help the guy, but we've also got to find a way of limiting these huge settlements," he said.

Laney said that water importation and property taxes — "any taxes" will be important, but said that he has no pet project in the works.

"I have no axe to grind," said Laney. "But as the time gets closer, I imagine my constituents will have something they will be interested in. But I really can't predict legislative action in advance."

Salinas has set as a priority the "writing of the enabling legislation to make functional the constitutional amendments just passed. This is so the tax assessor-collectors will have the mechanism to carry out the mandate of the people," said Salinas.

He said he also is concerned about "How we spend the $3 million surplus. I'd like to take $1 billion and return it to the citizens. We can dedicate one cent of the sales tax to provide additional funds for financing public schools, with the understanding that the school districts take the additional money and pass it on to the property tax payers in the form of lower taxes."

Salinas said that the other alternative is to reduce the sales tax by one cent. "This surplus is the direct result of inflation," he said. "I believe with surpluses like we have had in Texas the last six or seven years, it generally means we're overtaxing the people."

He also said that there is "speculation whether we can work with Bill Clements. It depends on his attitude and how he approaches the legislature."

"Some of his comments to the press make me feel we can work with him, but other comments I'm concerned about. But I want to work with him," he said.

Constituents who discussed their particular concerns included Dr. Marjorie Orr, director of Lubbock's Health Department. In comments to Laney, Dr. Orr said she is concerned about public health in Texas, which is "20 to 25 years behind."

She said that people in the city are still dying from salmonella — a sanitation-controlled disease that "was wiped out years ago. It's a preventable disease," she said. "We have no sanitation," said Dr. Orr.

The eyes of an owl do not move. The only way an owl can look around is to turn its head. It can turn its head almost all the way around.

"A city the size of Lubbock should have 15 sanitarians (those who inspect food establishments). She said that the city presently has 10 sanitarians.

Dr. Orr also expressed concern that Lubbock has no medical examiner. She said that in Texas a justice of the peace "is the only qualified personnel who can make a medical diagnosis without a medical license."

Carolyn Lanier, president of the local League of Women Voters said that school financing is a high-priority issue with league members.

She added that juvenile probation standards are of major concern to members. "We've got to do something about them," she said.

Board To Present Four Scholarships

The Lubbock Board of Realtors and the board's Women's Council will present four scholarships to Texas Tech University students at a noon luncheon Friday.

Recipient of the $300 scholarship from the board will be Paul W. Kelly, senior finance student.

Women's council $250 scholarships will go to Cynthia B. Allen, a home economics major, Willis B. Pierce and Alfred Allen Benson, junior real estate majors in the College of Business Administration.

New Legionnaires Disease Study Prompted

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — The death of a Pittsburgh attorney has prompted health officials to look for traces of Legionnaires disease among 500 other lawyers who attended a Virgin Islands conference in October.

Stephen Laffey of Pittsburgh died Dec. 2 of the pneumonia-like disease. Another lawyer who attended the meeting fell ill with pneumonia, which can be caused by Legionnaires disease, said Dr. William Parham of the state health department.

"I'm not saying he died of Legionnaires disease, but he did have the disease and he died it," Parham said of Laffey's death. "Those two cases are the only ones we know about. We have no way of knowing who else might have been sick."

Questionnaires have been sent to attorneys in Pennsylvania and New Jersey asking if they were ill during or shortly after the 41st annual Judicial Conference of the U.S. 3rd Circuit Court of Appeals Oct. 23-26.

Tips Offered Recipients

WASHINGTON (AP) — The holiday season finds many people more inclined to donate to charities, and groups soliciting funds increase their appeals at this time of year.

Mail and telephone solicitation are two of the most common forms of seeking donations, both for legitimate charities that deserve your help and for less honest folks just trying to make some money.

The Philanthropic Advisory Service of the Council of Better Business Bureaus has some tips for evaluating the appeals you will receive.

First, the mail solicitations:
 —Does the appeal make a clear statement of purpose and need?
 —Is the appeal easily understood and not deceptive or disguised as a bill or invoice?

—Does it make clear that there is no obligation to pay for or return any enclosed unordered items such as stamps, key rings, cards or other items? Remember that sending unordered merchandise usually means high fund-raising costs. If payment is requested for such items, inform your local business bureau.

—Does it include an address where further information can be obtained?
 —Does it indicate that donations are tax-deductible for federal income tax purposes?

—Always donate by check, made out to the organization.

And when the appeal is made by telephone:

—Does the solicitor immediately, or on request, identify himself, the sponsoring organization and the purpose of the call?
 —Calls made at this time of the year often request donations for merchandise made by the handicapped, magazine subscriptions with the proceeds benefiting charity, Christmas baskets and many other causes.

—Is the appeal clear, without overtones of intimidation, harassment or undue pressure?
 —Will the solicitor tell you how to obtain more information before giving?
 —Is the solicitor willing to put the request in writing?
 —Is the solicitor well-informed and able to answer reasonable questions?

Youth's Trial Begins In Aspermont Slaying

HASKELL (AP) — An uncle of the defendant opened testimony Tuesday in the trial of a teen-ager charged with fatally shooting his father, stepmother and brother last January in Aspermont.

The trial began after District Judge William P. Ratliff overruled a motion by lawyers for Roy Glenn Swink, 17, that some of the evidence was obtained without a search warrant and should be thrown out.

The youth is being tried now only for the death of his brother, Royce.

'Jesus Of Nazareth' Film

Instructive, Poll Shows

LONDON (AP) — Forty percent of persons questioned in a survey said a television film called "Jesus of Nazareth" taught them more about Christ than the Bible or what they had heard in church, an opinion poll reported.

The six-hour film was screened nationally at Easter last year, and since then, a survey commissioned by the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints sampled the view of 6,320 persons. Six out of 10 believed Christ's teachings are still as relevant as when he propounded them, but a similar percentage said belief in Christ is on the decline, the church survey reported.

The bodies of the three victims were found sprawled about their Aspermont home in the early morning hours of Jan. 24 after Swink ran to an uncle's house and said an intruder had broken in.

Wayne Swink, the uncle, testified Tuesday that the defendant was wearing only blue jeans and tennis shoes when he came to his home about 4:45 a.m. the morning of the slayings, banged on the door and shouted, "Somebody was in the house, somebody was shooting."

Swink said he noticed scratches on the boy's stomach.

The defendant told Stonewall County sheriff's officers he escaped by jumping through his bedroom window.

Attorneys Clifford Brown and Mike Brown of Lubbock objected to evidence they said was taken without a search warrant, but were overruled.

District Attorney Joseph Thigpen conceded no search warrant was issued, but argued that none was needed under the circumstances.

The witness said his brother — Herman Melon Swink, the deceased father of the defendant — was living with his two sons and his second wife when the slayings occurred.

Herman Swink's first wife died of cancer in September 1976; he remarried six months later, he said.

Lower Fares Via Airlines Merger Seen

WASHINGTON (AP) — The president of Western Airlines said Tuesday that a merger with Continental Airlines would produce lower fares and save passengers $204 million during the first three years.

Dominic P. Renda also predicted other airlines would be forced to meet the lower fares, resulting in a $3 billion saving.

Renda, who would be president of the merged company, submitted the testimony to the Civil Aeronautics Board as it began hearings on the proposed merger.

A Continental spokesman, C. Bruce Plowman, gave these examples of how the merger, if approved, would immediately affect one-way fares from Seattle:

—To Chicago, present coach fare, $152; coach fare under the merger, $142; new economy fare under the merger, $103.

—To Denver, present coach $103; coach under merger, $100; new economy fare, $70.

—To Miami, present coach, $222; coach under merger, $189; new economy fare, $140.

—To Houston, present coach $163; coach under merger, $151; new economy fare, $108.

Renda said the lower fares were "adopted as a policy of the merged company by managements of Continental and Western before negotiating the merger and by their board of directors in approving the merger."

He said critics of the merger failed to recognize that it would increase competition by allowing the new airline to compete with United, American and Trans World airlines on long-distance routes.

"None has focused on the fact that the merged carrier proposes and has the natural incentive to provide effective competition and reduce excessive basic fares in the major arterial and transcontinental markets against the industry giants," he said.

"None provides any convincing evidence that the merged carrier will not bring about the huge fare savings of $3 billion over the first three years as proposed."

Western serves 41 destinations and Continental serves 32. There are 13 destinations served by both.

Western has 84 airplanes, Continental 67. Western's operating revenues for the fiscal year ended June 30 were $755 million while Continental's were $715 million. Western has 10,371 employees, Continental 10,725.

TIA President Optimistic On Purchase Bid

HOUSTON (AP) — The president of Texas International Airlines said Tuesday he believes the Eastern Airlines offer to buy National Airlines ultimately will help the Houston line's efforts to acquire National.

Frank Lorenzo said he is convinced the Civil Aeronautics Board should and will reject attempts by both Eastern and Pan American Airways in their bids to merge with National, saying either takeover would reduce competition in the airline industry.

Eastern, with a $50 per share offer, on Monday joined Texas International and Pan American as the third firm that would like to get control of National.

Texas International holds about 24 percent of National's outstanding stock while Pan American holds about 22 percent. Before Eastern entered the race, the CAB had indicated it hoped to rule early next year on the acquisition attempts.

"We have no interest in selling our major holdings in National to Eastern, Pan American or anyone else and will continue to pursue vigorously our program to obtain approval to acquire National and amalgamate both companies," Lorenzo said.

Texas International will continue to press forward for CAB approval its application to acquire control of National and for its rejection of the Pan Am and Eastern attempts.

Lorenzo elaborated on his belief the CAB will reject the Pan American and Eastern offers.

"While we don't think Eastern's offer was a ploy in that we are sure Eastern would love to gobble up National at $50 a share, we believe a key part of Eastern's strategy was to focus government attention on the absurd anti-competitive aspects of both an Eastern-National link-up as well as a Pan Am-National merger," he said.

"Either merger would result in the creation of an enormous airline and have enormous anti-competitive effects. A Pan Am-National merger would eliminate substantial international competition and thwart increased domestic competition while an Eastern-National merger is no better."

Nuke Plant Plans Security Upgrading

GOLDEN, Colo. (AP) — The Rocky Flats nuclear weapons plant is planning to build an improved $5 million security system that will provide a double perimeter fence around the plant. Officials said, however, the move has nothing to do with recent protests at the plant.

The plant, located 16 air miles northwest of Denver, has been the site of numerous demonstrations since last April, when a massive national anti-nuclear rally was held outside the gates.

State Legislator Introduces Bill To Protect Golden Eagles

AUSTIN (AP) — An 8½-pound golden eagle named "Briscoe" plucked at his handler's corduroy sports coat Tuesday as a legislator announced he had introduced a bill to protect such birds.

Rep. Ron Coleman called the bill "a necessary action to block repeated attempts by Texas governors to have blanket permits issued for eagle killing in West Texas."

The handler, J. Shawn Ogburn, director of the Raptor Preservation Fund, said he had followed an Indian custom in naming the bird after an adversary — Gov. Dolph Briscoe.

Coleman, D-El Paso, said Briscoe had on at least two occasions asked the federal government to lift its ban against hunting golden eagles, which are considered an endangered species.

The government, however, has not granted a permit to kill eagles since 1971, he said.

Coleman's bill also bans the hunting or trapping of golden eagles and Mexican brown eagles under a $50-$200 penalty. Coleman included the Mexican eagle, he said, because it is often mistaken for a golden eagle when young.

Ogburn said "a couple of thousand" birds inhabit the Trans-Pecos region, the Lower Rio Grande Valley and the lower Hill Country of Texas the year-round, and others migrate to Texas from Canada and Montana from November through February.

"There is no doubt that eagles are still being shot" despite the federal prohibition, Ogburn said. "The very first thing is to stop the shooting."

Coleman said currently the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department has no authority to study eagles "since they are in a legal limbo with no state protection."

The bill, he said, would allow the department to determine whether eagles are harming ranch animals and possibly relocate the birds. He said the bill also would result in better enforcement as there are only three federal agents in Texas but 400 state game wardens.

"I hope ranchers and farmers who are concerned know we, too, are concerned," said Coleman.

"Briscoe" was acquired when a storm blew him from his nest near Albuquerque, N.M., when he was about one month old. He is now seven or eight months old and is full grown with a six-foot wing span.

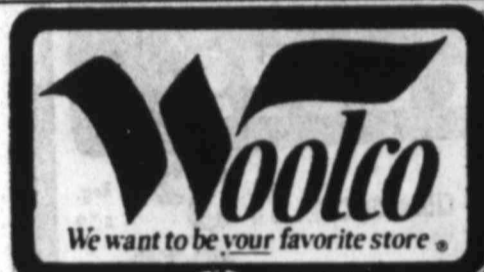

Asked why "Briscoe" repeatedly tried to chew on his coat and shirt, Ogburn said, "He's young and he's teething. He'll chew on anything."

Usually, Ogburn said, the birds are returned to the wild after they get older.

"He'll have to go to sort of a halfway house first," he said, smiling.

Lawsuit By Parmer Farmer Delays Construction Of Paved Bus Route

A-J Correspondent
HEREFORD — A Parmer County farmer, who would rather keep all his land than sell the right of way to Deaf Smith County for a paved bus route, has caused the postponement of the road's construction.
Deaf Smith county commissioners, faced with legal hassles over a jury of view's findings, restarted proceedings Monday to obtain the right of way for the road to be built east of Hereford.
The jury — a special group of realtors appointed last month by commissioners — had estimated the value of a quarter-mile, 30-foot-wide strip on the property of Friona farmer Glenn Hamilton at $2,000.
Hamilton's attorney, Doyle Elliott of Friona, told the commissioners that proceedings leading up to the jury's findings were not done in accordance with the law. He also said that $2,000 would not be enough to cover damages for Hamilton, who feels 'that this road damages his whole half section.'

Hamilton is seeking $10,074 in restitution from Deaf Smith county.
Elliott said that the route of the road was not adequately described in a landowner's petition. He said that the "beginning and ending of the road were not included in either the petition or the commissioner's court order."
The Friona attorney also said that notices were placed on telephone poles on private property instead of being displayed publicly in the vicinity of the road as the law stipulates.
District Attorney Roland Saul recommended that proceedings be re-started to ensure their legality and the commissioners agreed.
In other business, commissioners: *reappointed Commissioner James

Voyles to the county juvenile probation and child welfare board;
*accepted a $45,000 bid for a new Gal-lion maintainer;
*tabled action on the purchase of microfilm equipment for the sheriff's office;
*set the 1979 holiday schedule for county employees, which includes eight days off;
*agreed to continue a state grant to pay the salaries of three employees in the district attorney's office;
*and discussed the formulation of policies on block and lot developments in the county.
Concerning the latter, County Judge Sam Morgan said that on several occasions lots have been developed in the county without the court's approval.
Commissioners said they would look into the matter.

Desert Travelers Gain Audience With Herod

Chapter 9
THE PALACE ON THE ROCK
By LUISE PUTCAMP JR.

(WHAT HAS HAPPENED: In the city of red rock, Melchior and the runaway boy meet Caspar and Ethiopia and Balthasar of Arabia. Together they go to Herod's city and create uneasiness by asking questions about a baby who was born a king.)

So our plan had worked. The questions we asked in the streets of Herod's city were opening the doors to Herod's palace. Herod's soldiers rode beside us to make sure we found the way.

In the hot, dusty distance we saw the hill first, an odd-shaped hill, like a cone. On the hill was a palace that looked like a fortress.

At last, in the shadow of the hill, Herod's soldiers reined in their horses. Our camels knelt, and we dismounted and shook our clothes.

Steps of polished marble led upward. We started climbing. The soldiers followed at our heels. Our feet must have touched 200 steps before we reached the top. We stood before the round towers of Herod.

We went through a big gate, across a courtyard, and into a hallway filled with people who looked at us curiously and murmured.

We waited. I was tired and I was getting cross. Why should these men, my three wise men, great men in their own countries, be made to wait for this little Herod?

I looked at the stone walls, at the soldiers, and at the people with their rich robes, standing before Herod's closed door. The rugs were thick, the hangings at the windows were soft.

In spite of myself, I felt a little awe. On ponderous sandals, one of the noble-looking men approached Melchior. "Your coming has troubled the city," he said, polite but watching with sharp eyes. "And the king?"

Melchior bowed and smiled. "We are pilgrims," he said. "You ask about a king," said the man. "Herod is the only king here. As we all know."

Melchior nodded. "And the talk of a star," the man went on. "All of us have seen that large, unusual light in the night sky. But who can say what any star means?"

The man leaned closer. His gaze was even shaper. "Because of your questions," he said, "Herod has called together his chief priests, his scribes, anyone who might give him an answer."

"And what do they tell Herod's?" asked Melchior. He seemed not too curious, but polite.

The man lowered his voice importantly. "They say: 'The king will be born in Bethlehem of Judaea.'"

Melchior's face behind his gray beard was respectful. "How do they know this?" he asked.

"It is written!" said the man. "It is written by the prophet!"

In the hot, dusty distance we saw the hill first, odd-shaped, like a cone. Atop it was a palace that looked like a fortress.

Just then, Herod's great doors swung open. A dignitary lifted a commanding hand.

Melchior stood straighter. Caspar lifted his dark head, like a noble panther stretching. Balthasar folded his hands like someone at ease.

If only I could have felt that same ease.

We walked into the great room. Here the rugs were thicker, the windows even more richly curtained. Though it was daylight, torches burned. The wood was fragrant in the air.

Many people watched as we walked slowly toward the raised place at the far end of the room. He leaned forward, watching us.

We walked alone. There was a murmuring and a shuffling of feet among the watchers as we neared the throne.

People stretched their necks to see us. Who was I, only a boy, to be walking in the great place? Would someone step forward to stop me? We stood before Herod. With a sharp sound, he cleared his throat. And the great hall was suddenly as still as the towers of the dead.

(NEXT: An Order From Herod.)

Presidential Protection Curbs Cited

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secret Service Director H. Stewart Knight said Tuesday that new restrictions on investigating domestic groups weaken his ability to protect presidents from assassination.

Knight told the House assassinations committee he no longer gets intelligence on a number of domestic groups, particularly those that advocate violence, disseminate information on bomb making and the like.

"In effect we're trying to run a zero-error operation," Knight testified. "The best way to prevent something from happening is to know in advance who is planning what, when and where."

But Rep. Robert Edgar, D-Pa., told Knight the new restrictions were imposed after admitted FBI harassment of Dr. Martin Luther King and antiwar groups.

"How do you walk the tight line between your need for information and the right to privacy?" Edgar asked.

"It's a real dilemma," Knight said. "I'm confident that our zeal to do our job is not going to blind us to rights of privacy."

The new Justice Department guidelines prohibit the FBI — the Secret Service's intelligence source — from infiltrating organizations or putting them under surveillance simply to keep watch on them.

The FBI now may conduct only criminal investigations of groups suspected specifically of planning violence, overthrow of the government, interference with its policymaking, or deprivation of civil rights.

In other testimony, the Secret Service director was asked if he agrees that it is impossible to protect the president from a determined assassin.

"Our philosophy is that...we can thwart them," Knight replied. "We can put enough hurdles in their way to make it, if not impossible, at least difficult. So we feel we can protect the president."

He said there have been cases in which the Secret Service urged presidents not to make certain trips because of danger, and the presidents agreed. He gave no examples.

Knight said his agents have two jobs in an assassination: get the president out of the area and try to freeze the area until the FBI arrives to begin its investigation.

Asked if the Secret Service is equipped to capture the assassin, Knight said, "The answer is yes."

Christmas Mail Moves Smoothly; Volume Lagging

WASHINGTON (AP) — The crush of Christmas mail is moving smoothly so far, but postal officials say they are concerned that the anticipated volume is lagging.

"Now is the time to mail those cards and packages if we are to deliver them by Dec. 23, the last scheduled delivery date before Christmas," said Postmaster General William F. Bolger. He noted that Christmas falls on a Monday this year and "there will be no scheduled deliveries on Sunday, Dec. 24, except for special delivery and perishable articles."

Mount Vernon was originally part of a royal grant to Lord Culpepper, who in 1674 deeded 5,000 acres to Nicholas Spencer and John Washington, great-grandfather of George Washington.

Matadors See 10 Players Earn Honors

By BOB BAJACKSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff
How does being eliminated from the Class AAA high school football playoffs affect a team?
Well, the Estacado Matadors took out their frustration Monday when the players got together for an old sandlot game. The only thing that was missing was the football.

"It wasn't a brawl or anything out in the parking lot," said tight end Dewey Turner. "The football players just got together for one last time to get our frustrations out. And I think it worked."

Anyway, if the Matadors' final get-together didn't cheer them up, then maybe the 1-AAA All-District team will.
Five Matadors were chosen on the defensive team and five more were touted with offensive honors. One player (Steve Wright) made both units and Louis Kelley was honored as the coach of the year.
"Of course, I'm honored," said Kelley. "But my coaching staff gets the credit. Their main reason we got as far as we did."
What's impressive about Estacado placing 10 men on the first team is that Kelley didn't have anything to do with it.

Each coach was not allowed to either nominate or vote for players on his own team. In other words, the rest of the 1-AAA coaches placed the 10 Matadors on the team.
Defensively, Estacado had Wright (line), Todd Parsons (line), Mike Chatham (linebacker), Preston Davis (secondary) and George Irvin (secondary) making the first team.
Greg Evans (line), Manuel Escamilla (center) Turner (tight end), Wright (line) and Kelvin White (runningback) selected to the offensive squad.
"It takes a lot of pressure off the coach," said Kelley. "In the other district we used to belong to (3-AAA), the coach would have a say-so. But here, the coach doesn't haven't have a voice at all."
Those Matadors that received honorable mention recognition included Kenneth Davis, Anthony McGraw and Willis Flowers on defense. Offensively, Rusty Johnson, Mike Esquivel, Winston Gipson, Robert Humphrey and Kenneth Henderson received a mention from their peers.
Since, tight end Turner is a recognized leader of the team, the 6-5 225-pound sen-

...An Eye
For An Eye

WHEN HE TOOK the floor against Northeast Louisiana Monday night, Tommy Parks looked as if he had come straight from the ring.

His left cheek was puffy, his eye practically swollen shut. The visitors, however, never learned that he had trouble seeing out of his left eye.

Parks had tried to hit this Wyoming player on the knee last Saturday night, and he made contact with his cheekbone. The knee won.

"I thought, 'Oh, Lord, what's happened?' when I hit him," Parks said Tuesday. "No, it didn't knock me out, but I was in such pain it seemed like it."

Even as he talked during Tuesday's workout, the Tech senior guard had an icepack on his cheek. Seems that he had avoided all the contact for that tender area during 35 minutes Monday night — only to get hit during Tuesday's workout.

Parks has filled a reserve role this season, but his quickness and ability to come up with steals have kept him close to the lineup through the first six games. But, he was on the floor for only seven minutes in the Wyoming game before being hurt. Despite the pain, the problem wasn't as serious as first thought.

"WE THOUGHT HE had fractured a cheekbone at first," commented Raider coach Gerald Myers. "They x-rayed, but didn't find anything. Said it was just a deep bruise. They told me Monday that he couldn't play, but the doctors then said that it would be up to him, that playing wouldn't cause any more damage."

"Tommy's a tough kid, and I hadn't planned on using him. He asked, though, to suit up, then during warmups, he said he could play."

"He gives us a lot of quickness in there."

After that Northeast Louisiana game, he could grin about it; Tuesday, with the icepack against the cheek the entire deal wasn't quite so humorous.

"Coach told me when I went in there (Monday night) not to worry about getting inside much." But, Parks grinned, "I got four rebounds against those big guys."

He had five points and five assists, in addition to a steal. The one steal was a big one, however, and it led to the winning bucket.

Tech was tied at 67 with the visitors when Parks, Kent Williams and David Little trapped NE Louisiana guard John Pickett outside. The three overpowered Pickett, and Little's resulting shot with a second left lifted Tech to the overtime win.

"IT HURTS NOW, though," admitted Parks, after being hit in workout. "It's a little blurry in that eye now. It was last (Monday) night when I got in the game."

"Feels like all my face is numb. And about twice as big as it should be."

Parks, at 6 feet, has to rely on quickness and guile in getting about the business of scoring, when his teammates reach as many as 9 inches taller, and some opponents have gone up to 7-4 this season.

One of his fortes has been stealing the ball along the baseline after taller opponents have rebounded and are looking for a teammate and the outlet pass.

But the fact that Parks is still filling a reserve spot now indicates the competition and depth the Raiders have this season.

"WE DO HAVE more depth than a year ago," admits Myers. He admitted, also, that the team doesn't have a dominating-type player like Mike Russell of last year. "But, we have good depth — more depth."

"Parks is playing more under control than a year ago (when he was a transfer from Midland College). He can make things happen."

"I think we're playing pretty well. We're getting into a substitution pattern. Depending on what kind of teams we're playing, we might substitute differently, but we have some people who can come in."

"There will be nights when Adam Beadle (one of the team's top shooters) will be playing a lot, especially against zone defenses. Parks will play a lot, so will (6-9) Joe Baxter. Different situations will dictate using different players."

"George Davidson (Tech aide) scouted Oklahoma State Monday night against Long Beach State, and they really have a good team. They have some good young players."

Maybe by the time they play in the Birmingham tournament, Parks will be able to use both eyes.

Staubach Might Be Out Against Jets

DALLAS (UPI) — Tom Landry's vote is in for all-NFL quarterback and the chances are that no one is going to be shocked by his ballot.

"I don't see any competition for Roger Staubach myself," said Landry. "Others are doing well. Bob Griese with Miami and a few others. But, to me, Roger is the best in the business."

Staubach, who has set a club record for most touchdowns passes and most total passing yardage this season, leads the NFL passing ratings going into the final weekend of the season.
The Cowboys' veteran has a rating of 84.9 with New Orleans' Archie Manning second at 82.3 and Pittsburgh's Terry Bradshaw third at 82.2. Staubach leads the league in yardage with 3,190 and Manning is second at 3,166. Staubach has thrown 25 touchdowns, one short of Bradshaw's league leading figure.

The only trouble with Staubach right now is that he might not play next Sunday in Dallas' regular season finale against the New York Jets. Then again, he might.

"Yesterday I would have said there was a real good chance Roger would miss the game," Landry said Tuesday. "Now I'm just not sure. If he is all right he will start and play. But I wouldn't take a chance. Usually bruises can come out fairly quickly."

"I'm sure Danny White will play the whole game or at least most of it. We feel confident Danny can do the job."

Staubach stubbed a toe and strained a foot in the Cowboys' 31-13 victory over Philadelphia last Sunday.

"If the risk factor was great enough that Roger could aggravate the foot then I would not play him," Landry said. "But I don't see that as a big factor. If he starts the game I will play him until I have the right feel to take him out (depending on how the game goes)."

"It's only important to play him in the mental sense. He's just that way. He wants to be a part of the team. And it's always good to keep your momentum going."

Other than Staubach's foot injury, he has been othered all season by a finger on his throwing hand that tends to swell during a game. That didn't seem to bother him much last Sunday when he completed 13 of 19 passes for 190 yards and two touchdowns.

"The finger has been the same the last three or four weeks," the coach said.

Panthers Slip By Coronado Mustangs

By BOB BAJACKSON

Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff
Coronado coach Barry Arwine calmly sat slumped in the stands with arms extended and a big smile on his face. Definitely the look of a winner. The only thing wrong is that his Mustangs had just dropped a 58-57 thriller to the Dunbar Panthers at the Dunbar gym Tuesday night.

"You can't let it get to you," philosophized Arwine. "That's because you lose too damn many games."

Funny, in the Panther dressing room, coach Joe McWilliams answered questions after the game in anything but a confident manner.

"That's what happens to a young team," said McWilliams. "We played a good first half, but in the fourth quarter we started to stand around."

The Mustangs outscored the Panthers 19-10 in the final period and were almost able to make up an 11-point deficit.

Coronado began to take command of the game with 6:48 to play the game. Forward Dennis Boyles, who led the Coronado scoring attack with 16 points, began playing aggressive basketball by driving the lane and rolling in a hoop with Dunbar forward Stanley Whitfield hanging on his arm. The Coronado forward sank the free throw and the Mustangs had narrowed the deficit to 51-43.

But Panther guard Michael Baldwin carried the Dunbar scoring effort for the two minutes by converting four free throws.

"We got in trouble by not taking advantage of all the opportunities they gave us," said McWilliams.

And while the Panthers were put on hold with 58 points by 4:45 left, Coronado began to chip away.

First Boyles drove the right lane and sank a basket off the glass, then Mustang guard Sam Law hit both ends of a one-and-one situation as the Panther lead was cut to 58-55.

Finally, with :33 remaining, Dunbar guard DeWayne Williams broke the Dunbar cold spell by sinking a free throw. 58-55.

Mustang forward Steve Ahlenius got Coronado a point closer when he hit a free throw shot. 59-57.

However, when Dunbar postman Phael Scot rebounded Ahlenius' second free throw with :10 left, Scot was guilty of a charging foul. So, the Mustangs got the ball back and Ahlenius was fouled as the buzzer sounded.

After a brief discussion between both benches, the referees and the time keeper, it was ruled that :02 were left. Ahlenius went to the line, but missed both free throws.

The win raises the Panthers record to 7-3 on the season. The loss drops the Mustangs to 7-5.

Estacado Grabs Win

MORTON (Special) — Estacado turned on the pressure in the second and third periods and pulled away from host Morton boys 75-62 here Tuesday night.

Morton held a 14-12 lead at the end of the first eight minutes, but the Matadors began pressing and zipped ahead 27-30 at the half. And in the third period, they built a 10-point lead.

Morton tried to press but was unable to cut the gap below 6 points rest of the way.

Westerners Crushed By Bulldogs 78-40

By JIM FERGUSON

Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff
Midway through the second quarter of Tuesday's night basketball game between Lubbock High and Berger, Westerner coach Craig Wells stood and shouted to his team's defense, "Stay at home, stay at home."

By the end of the evening Wells may have wished he'd taken his own advice. Playing what Wells himself called "terrible" basketball, the Westerners were defeated by the visiting Bulldogs 78-40.

Wells pointed out that their guests didn't play that well against his LHS team, "we just played that bad."

Monterey Fems Down Midland

Monterey allowed Midland only two field goals through the first half as the Plainswomen roughed up their opponents 56-38 Tuesday night.

Monterey led 22-11 at that point. Leading the Plainswomen scorers was Margaret Grennell with 16, Barbara Ragus with 12 and Jana Fields with 10. Fields also had 11 rebounds as Monterey outboarded its opponents 38-27.

In the junior varsity game, Monterey won 41-33.

From the opening tipoff the game was never really in doubt as Berger, using double-scoring performances from all five of its starters, built a 20-9 first-period lead.

Continuing to take advantage of turnover after turnover by Lubbock, Berger built a 39-20 cushion. That's when every point could have gone home if they had wanted to.

"Our problem was our inability to adjust to certain situations," said a dejected LHS head coach after the game.

Meaning? "We just made too mental errors. And then when we'd try to adjust to what we had just done, we'd make three or four. You can't win ball games like that."

Wells said the poor showing came only seven days after the Westerners had put on one of their better showings of the year, a 52-35 win over Amarillo Caprock.

"Our goal all year has been — not to win games, really — but to get better each game we play," said Wells. "We made first-game mistakes tonight (Tuesday). Now what we've got to do is put up the draw strings and get after it."

The game was Lubbock High's second of the week (Monday they were beaten by Dunbar 61-45). They will open a three-game stand at the Reese Air Force Base tournament starting Thursday morning.

Wells pointed out there were a couple of reasons behind LHS' dismal showing. For starters, the Monday game with Dunbar didn't help matters any. And secondly, "not playing up to our capabilities."

"It's another, Wells said. "For us to win ballgames," he continued. "We've got to play as a team. We had a bunch of individuals tonight (Tuesday)."

Jeff Manley was the only Westerner able to hit in double figures, scoring 15 points. He hit five field goals and five more free tosses.

In all Lubbock hit only 14 shots from the field, while Berger hit 34 — mostly on easy layups after stealing the ball.

Lubbock hit only two field goals in the final period, one by David Norrid, the other by Dehoyas.

The game was played before a crowd that would have had a hard time stretching the length of the court if layed end-to-end. No more than 100 fans were present.

"That what starts happening," said Wells about the poor crowd, "when you are 2-9."

Teaff Interviewed By Oklahoma State

WACO (UPI) — Baylor coach Grant Teaff said Tuesday he had discussed the Oklahoma State head coaching position with officials of that school and hedged on the subject of whether he would consider taking the job.

In Austin, meanwhile, Texas defensive coordinator Leon Fuller took his name out of the running for the Oklahoma State position.

Teaff left Waco for a quick recruiting trip and a speaking engagement in Houston Tuesday and before he left town he issued a statement concerning Oklahoma State's search for a coach to replace the dismissed Jim Stanley.

"I've been contacted by Oklahoma State University concerning the position of head football coach," said Teaff.

"At the request of athletic director Richard Young I have met with university officials. This meeting was strictly for the exchange of information as Oklahoma State begins its search for a new coach. I have not applied for the Oklahoma State job nor have I ever applied for any job in my seven years at Baylor."

Oklahoma State has said it will pick a coach by next Friday.

When Teaff was queried by one Baylor official if there was anything between the lines of his statement, the Bears coach said the statement would have to stand by itself.

The Cowboys have been under intense investigation by the NCAA for the past year and school officials have indicated that the job is Teaff's if he wants it.

The selection of Teaff, a highly respected member of the coaching fraternity who was UPI's national coach of the year in 1974, could possibly place Oklahoma State in a better light with the NCAA.

Fuller was interviewed by Oklahoma State officials last Sunday, but announced Tuesday he was not interested in the job.

"I appreciate their interest in me very much," said Fuller. "But I'm happy at Texas. I enjoy working for coach (Fred) Akers and the University of Texas and have no plans to leave in the near future."

Fuller was once on the coaching staff at Oklahoma State, joined Akers' staff at Wyoming and came to Austin two years ago.

Grid Helmets Undergo Study

NEW YORK (AP) — Why does a football helmet survive collisions on the field that would shatter it to splinters in a laboratory test?

Two Chicago physicians, a father and son, have tackled that problem using data from 1,500 of the most carefully observed blocks, crashes, tackles and pileups in the history of the game.

The modern football helmet will crack under a blow of more than about 90 foot-pounds of energy in the lab, said Dr. Stephen E. Reid, professor of surgery at Northwestern University and team doctor for the football team.

That's the energy of dropping a 90-pound weight from a height of one foot. But in the field, a 224-pound ball carrier develops 3,150 foot-pounds of energy — more than 30 times as much energy — when he's running at top speed. Obviously something besides the helmet is protecting him, or there would be cracked helmets and fractured skulls on every kickoff.

To solve the riddle, Reid, a standout guard at Northwestern in the 1930s, began wiring the helmets of Northwestern players to study what happened to their heads during Big Ten Conference football games.

The half pound of electrical equipment was carried by only one player per game — usually the middle linebacker "because he's in on most of the plays," Reid said.

It measured the forces on the helmet and the player's brain waves and transmitted both back to the press box, where an isolation camera kept track of his movements.

The monitoring system was perfected in 1970. By 1976, Reid had data on 1,500 collisions — including one in which a player suffered a mild concussion.

Now Reid, 64, and his son, Stephen Jr., 29, a third-year resident at the University of Illinois medical school in Chicago, have moved to the lab and computer room to study the results.

"We found that impacts in the lab using anesthetized animals have a very short duration — about four milliseconds. But in the field, we were getting some up to 300 milliseconds long and there were multiple peaks of acceleration," Reid said.

The reason? A player tightens his neck muscles just before impact, and the muscles cushion the blow by spreading its energy over a longer period of time, Reid said in a telephone interview.

"That's the way a baseball player catches the ball, by letting his hand go back, and a boxer rolls with the punches. These are all increasing the time for the force of the blow to come to zero."

This is similar to the way a diver's forward motion is stopped gradually by the water so he comes to rest without injury, he said.

In lab tests, the Reids have discovered that a tensed muscle will give a little if subjected to sudden stress, but then it tightens up again — a natural protective reaction that seems to be at work in the neck muscles of football players.

But a muscle needs 30 to 40 milliseconds to tense, Reid said. If a player gets hit without warning, his head acts like "a limp ball on top of the shoulders — when it gets hit, it snaps."

That's how Darryl Stingley of the New England Patriots suffered a paralyzing neck injury in the exhibition season this year, Reid said.

Agreement Nearing On 1984 Olympics

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — A final agreement between the U.S. Olympic Committee and the private sector of Los Angeles on the framework of the 1984 Summer Olympic Games is being worked out following a preliminary agreement settled over the weekend, USOC officials said Tuesday.

The final agreement between the Olympic Committee and Los Angeles must be completed by Jan. 1, a deadline set by the International Olympic Committee.

The preliminary agreement between the USOC and Los Angeles Olympics organizers was approved by the committee on Sunday during a meeting of the USOC Executive Board.

The terms of the agreement include: — The Los Angeles Olympic Games Organizing Committee will include 52 persons, with 10 to be appointed by USOC, plus the two IOC members from the United States.

— A 75 percent vote of the Executive Committee would be required for approval of the initial budget covering capital, operating and administrative expenses.

— Capital expenditures will be limited to $50 million. Any expenditures above that limit will require a 75 percent approval from the Executive Committee, except for capital expenditures funded by outside sources such as the U.S. government.

— To be included in the final contract between USOC and Los Angeles private sector representatives will be an indemnification up to $50 million for excess of expenditures over income.

Knight Dismisses Three Cagers

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — The dismissal of three Indiana University basketball players Tuesday by coach Bobby Knight, a strict disciplinarian who thrives on controversy and intimidation, brings to 10 the number who have left the team since its 1976 NCAA championship.

Five other players, including the top two scorers this season, were put on indefinite probation, although Knight said they would be allowed to practice and play with the rest of the team.

The announcement was made without elaboration by the Indiana sports information office. No reason was given, and Knight, as usual, would not talk to the news media.

Dropped from the team were sophomores Tommy Baker of Jeffersonville, Ind., and Don Cox of Indianapolis, and senior Jim Roberson of Rochester, N.Y.

Placed on probation were sophomore center Ray Tolbert, the leading scorer this year; junior forward Mike Woodson, the No. 2 scorer; and reserves Eric Kirchner and Phil Isenberger, both sophomores, and freshman Landon Turner.

Knight said the scholarships of the eight players would not be affected.

"You can't put any of this on the man (Knight)," said Baker, a 6-foot-2 guard. "He was put in a spot where he had to make a decision. There were a few team problems. I would like to say jealousy, but only the players really know."

The other players were unavailable for comment.

In the statement, Knight noted that "this action was taken with the full concurrence of athletic director Ralph Floyd," who also could not be reached for comment.

"I really don't have anything to say,"

Baker continued. "No matter who talks, there's always something left out. This is between myself and other players."

Baker said Knight called a team meeting Monday morning and told them of his decision that afternoon. "The problem stemmed from long before that," he said. "It wasn't a sudden thing."

Baker said he would transfer to another school. "It's best for me to get out of here. I'll write some schools and see if anybody would like to have a player."

"There were a few team problems. I would like to say jealousy, but only the players really know."

Knight told me he'd help me go anywhere, and I appreciated that. I still plan on going to a major university."

Baker said the thought of transferring "had entered my mind" before he was dismissed. "There's a turning point for everyone, and this is mine."

The players not affected by the shake-up are senior forward Scott Eells, sophomore guard Butch Carter, freshman guard Randy Wittman, freshman forward Ted Kitchel and sophomore forward Steve Risley. Of these, only Wittman has been a consistent starter, but Risley started last Saturday and responded with a career-high 26 points in an 80-64 victory over Bradley.

Knight said at that time, "We had extremely good plays from everyone down the line at the end of the game. Although we had slow periods, it was probably the best game of the year."

Knight has compiled a 163-44 record in his seven-plus seasons at Indiana, but more than half those losses have occurred since the Hoosiers went 32-0 in 1975-76 and won the NCAA title.

With the graduation of four starters, including two-time All-American Scott May, Indiana dropped to 14-13 in 1976-77 and the string of player departures—voluntary and involuntary—began.

First to go were forward-center Mark Haymore, who said he did not like the overall atmosphere at Bloomington and transferred to the University of Massachusetts, and guard Bob Bender, who complained of a lack of playing time and transferred to Duke.

Then swingman Trent Smock claimed he was dismissed by Knight for questioning his role on the team.

Pressure by Knight was also cited by forward Mike Miday, who left the team because he "could not stand the way he treated me as a human being." Miday said at the time that his "knees were shaking" after being scolded by Knight. "I usually have confidence in my playing, but every game I went out there I was playing fear of him."

Forward Rich Valavicius also quit the team, hinting that his decision had to do with Knight's coaching techniques.

Then shortly after the 1977 season, 6-11 center Derek Holcomb, seen as the heir-apparent to graduating All-American Kent Benson, said Knight's program "just didn't suit my lifestyle like I thought it would" and transferred to the University of Illinois. And guard Billy Cunningham left the team eight games into the season last year.

The Hoosiers were ranked 10th in the preseason Associated Press poll this year on the strength of their 23-8 finish last spring and the return of Woodson and Tolbert. But they lost their first two games in the Sea Wolf Classic in Alaska and stand 3-3 going into Saturday's game against defending NCAA champion Kentucky.

Knight, who also on Tuesday was named head coach of the 1979 U.S. Pan American Games team, has won four Big Ten championships since coming to Indiana in 1971. His best teams were in 1975 and 1976, when the Hoosiers won 63 of 64 games behind May, Benson, Quins Buckner, Bobby Wilkerson, Steve Green and Tom Abernethy, all of whom are now in the National Basketball Association.

Malavasi Ignores Loss

Rams Were Down To Two Ballcarriers

LOS ANGELES (AP) — His Los Angeles Rams looked anything but good in losing to Cincinnati 20-19 on Monday night but coach Ray Malavasi said, "Our team will be 100 percent for the playoffs."

The coach said that at the end of the nationally televised game, "We had just a couple of healthy running backs."

Both were reserves, Rod Phillips and Jerry Latin.

The Rams, who will host a National Football League playoff game either Dec. 30 or 31, have lost starting halfback Lawrence McCutcheon to injuries and fullback John Cappelletti has missed the past two games.

Defensive tackle Larry Brooks also didn't play against the Bengals.

"I hope that Cappelletti and Brooks can come back Sunday against Green Bay," Malavasi said at his regular Tuesday news conference.

The Rams actually had six chances from inside the four to score against the Bengals and failed.

"Cullen Bryant had been hit on the head on second down and didn't hear the signals on third down," Malavasi said. "He hit the wrong hole and films showed that if he had hit the right one, he would have scored standing up."

Cincinnati won the game on a field goal by Chris Bahr with 2:58 remaining in the game and recorded only its third victory of the season.

In a dressing room resembling that of the Super Bowl winner, Rice said, "We have really worked on this second half of the season and we have become a good team, as good as any team going to the playoffs."

"There were two factors that won us this ball game. First was the goal line stand where we held them inside the 4-yard line on six tries and the second was the play that led to the winning field goal where Isaac Curtis caught a pass for 19 yards on third and 17."

The Rams have been favored to reach the Super Bowl, but have encountered troubles the past few weeks. With just one game left on the regular schedule, they need a victory over Green Bay here on Sunday to gain the home field advantage for the NFC Championship game should they win the opening playoff contest.

"We can get our attack going when we smell the playoffs," commented quarterback Pat Haden. "Lately something seems to happen when we get inside the five. We just cannot get it over."

Haden was kayed in the third quarter, but came back to finish the game.

He hit 16 of 33 passes with two interceptions, both by Dick Jauron and the finale spoiled Los Angeles' chances of pulling out the game in the final minute.

"Although we're not playing for anything at this stage of the season, we have to show we have a good team and can win and thus set us up for next year," the Cincinnati quarterback observed. Although the Bengals have won their past two games, they stand just 3-12 and have a new coach in Rice, who succeeded the fired Bill Johnson.

Matadors Earn Honors

the only Dunbar player to make the roster had some thoughts about the season.

"We've been a very close team all season," said Turner. "And being one of the leaders of the squad, I feel that it was one of my responsibilities that we should be a close unit. For that, I feel proud."

"But of course not winning the state championship, there was disappointment. But that's all part of life. I don't feel that we could have gotten as far as we did without the coaching staff we had."

However, while Estacado provided most of the excitement this season, Estacado wasn't the only city team to place people on the first string.

At Dunbar, Raphael Scott was recognized for his defensive play in the second year.

"When he came out two years ago for football, I wouldn't have given him 10 weeks," said Dunbar coach Van Jefferson in regard to Scott. "He was tall and thin and didn't look like he was that aggressive. But I have to give him credit. What he lacked, Raphael made up in heart."

What's probably most impressive, is that Scott made the 1-AAA team playing on a 1-9 team.

"Of course, because of the rules, I couldn't vote for him," said Jefferson. "So you know that he has earned the respect of the other coaches in the district. Not many teams throw into his zone this year."

Though Scott was the only Panther to break into the starting lineup, he wasn't

Cougar Powers Makes First Installment

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — Coach Warren Powers has met the first installment of his debt to Washington State University for buying out his contract to move to the University of Missouri last year.

Representatives of the Warren Powers Fund said Tuesday a check for $14,500 was mailed to Washington State late last week.

Powers had two years remaining on his contract as football coach at Washington State last December when he took a similar post at Missouri. He agreed to pay the college $55,000 in three installments to buy out his contract.

A group of Missouri alumni established a fund to help raise the money for Powers. David Knight, a Columbia lawyer and one of the fund's organizers, said the group raised about $20,000. He said the money left over would go toward the next installment due in December 1979.

Knight said fund-raising efforts would end around the first of the year unless the group can obtain a more complete alumni listing to use in the search for funds.

The university cannot supply the list because of regulations of the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

The NCAA questioned the legality of the fund this fall in a letter to Athletic Director Dave Hart but took no formal action.

Missouri, 4-7 in 1977 under former Coach Al Onofrio, ended the 1978 season with a 7-4 record and an invitation to the Liberty Bowl.

Staubach May Be Out

"It hurts him a little after the ball game, but usually by Wednesday he is able to throw some."

"By the end of a ball game it starts to swell up. It's been that pattern and it never gets any worse so this is not something we are concerned about at this point."

If Staubach does not play this weekend he will almost certainly surrender the passing yardage championship to Manning. But since Manning is 2.6 points behind Staubach in the ratings it would take a sensational day for the New Orleans quarterback to move ahead of Staubach for the overall passing championship.

Other than Staubach, Landry said fullback Robert Newhouse was still being listed as questionable. Newhouse broke a small bone in his right leg last month and has missed the last three games.

Scott Laidlaw has filled in for Newhouse, scoring three touchdowns and averaging 4.3 yards per carry the past three weeks — the exact average Newhouse was carrying when he suffered the injury.

Landry said the Jets were impressive with their explosiveness.

"That (wide receiver) Wesley Walker can score on you quick. They are more multiple on offense than we are."

Ironically, the last time Staubach missed a start was against the Jets in 1975 when Clint Longley led the team to a 31-21 victory in the season finale.

Other questionable starters for Dallas include running back Alois Blackwell and linebacker Guy Brown.

Rutgers Gets Ready

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — While his Rutgers University teammates are holed up watching game films, placekicker Kennan Startzell can more often than not be found sprawled in the trainer's room catching the late afternoon movie on television.

"I don't think I've seen any game films this year," said Startzell a diminutive 5-foot-8, 145-pound junior from Levittown, Pa. "It doesn't make much of a difference, I just try to occupy my time."

But more often than not, Startzell makes a big difference in the outcome of a game, evidenced by his 14-for-18 accuracy on field goals and by only missing one extra point in 31 attempts.

Rutgers, 9-2, faces Arizona State, 8-3, Saturday in the inaugural Garden State Bowl at Giants Stadium. But when it comes to football, Startzell would just as soon be playing soccer. Only a decision based on long-range career potential — he feels he's a better placekicker than soccer player — pointed Startzell in the direction of the gridiron.

Other than that, he really doesn't enjoy the game.

"I generally try to stay away from contact. I'm not prepared for it, mentally or physically," he said. "I'll probably be playing soccer again Sunday and won't pick up a football again until a week before spring practice."

Sun Bowl
Maryland has started practice session for its Sun Bowl date with Texas, but coach Jerry Claiborne's chief foes at the moment are final exams instead of the Longhorns.

Claiborne has had to schedule practice sessions around semester examinations and won't have his full squad together until Saturday, just a week before the Dec. 23 game in El Paso, Texas.

The Terps held a short practice Monday and worked out again Tuesday morning, with 14 squad members absent while talking tests. More practice is set for Wednesday and Thursday, with five players expected to miss each session, Claiborne said.

Maryland is scheduled to leave College Park for El Paso Dec. 19.

Cotton Bowl
The University of Houston football team will resume workouts Wednesday in preparation for its New Year's Day battle against Notre Dame in the Cotton Bowl, UH coach Bill Yeoman said Tuesday.

"Most of our injuries should be healed by then and we won't be doing much bumping before the game," said Yeoman, whose Cougars have won the Southwest Conference title two times since joining the league three years ago.

The Cougars finished the regular season with a 9-2 record.

Houston defeated Rice in its final game, recovering from five first half turnovers with a good second half performance by backup quarterback Derick Brown.

Yeoman said Danny Davis, who led the Cougars to a Cotton Bowl victory over Maryland in 1976, still would be the starter, but Brown would play against the Fighting Irish.

"With a game of this nature, if things aren't going right, we won't hesitate to put Derick into the game," Yeoman said. "In fact, even if things are going fine we intend to play Derick and the other young backs (Terald Clark and John Newhouse)."

Values Of U.S. Farmland Record New Increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — Higher commodity prices and improvements in farmers' income have helped push up farm real estate values this year, the Agriculture Department said.

On the average, U.S. farmland in the year that ended Nov. 1 rose 12 percent in value, one percentage point more than it gained in the same period of 1976-77, the department said.

As of Nov. 1, the market value of farmland was $528 an acre, compared to $471 a year ago.

In a brief report, the department's Economics, Statistics and Cooperatives Service said that the increase was "due largely to the 30 percent increase in annual net farm income" this year.

"These net income prospects have restored optimism within the farm sector and vitality to farmland buyer and seller expectations," the agency said.

Farm income is expected to rise to $26 billion from $20.1 billion in 1977, according to department analysts.

Earlier this year, experts thought that the gain in farmland values might decrease from their double-digit pace of recent years.

The department examines farm real estate markets on the basis of two reporting years, from Nov. 1 to the next Nov. 1 and between Feb. 1 and the following Feb. 1.

In the year that ended last Feb. 1, for example, farmland values nationally averaged only 9 percent higher, compared with a 17 percent gain in the same period of 1976-77.

The new report showed that between last Feb. 1 and Nov. 1 the average value per acre rose 8 percent.

Officials said that gains in the past year were sharpest in the Mississippi Delta states, the northern Mountain states, California, Minnesota, Ohio, West Virginia and Delaware.

The biggest gain was in Colorado where farmland as of Nov. 1 was valued at an average of $326 an acre, up 24 percent from $263 a year earlier.

The most expensive farmland continued to be in the populous northeast, including New Jersey where the Nov. 1 average was $2,126 an acre, up 5 percent during the year.

Other states, by areas as described in the report, included:

Lake States — Michigan, $896 an acre and an increase of 10 percent during the year; Wisconsin, $753 and 13; and Minnesota, $814 and 14.

Corn Belt — Ohio, $1,411 and 17; Indiana, $1,432 and 13; Illinois, $1,689 and 12; Iowa, $1,375 and 10; and Missouri $636 and 14.

Northern Plains — North Dakota, $285 and 7; South Dakota, $235 and 10; Nebraska, $430 and 10; and Kansas, $417 and 9.

Appalachian — Virginia, $838 and 17; West Virginia, $474 and 15; North Carolina, $728 and 4; Kentucky, $708 and 10; and Tennessee, $645 and 13.

Southeast — South Carolina, $554 and 3; Georgia, $587 and 10; Florida, $389 and 10; and Alabama, $492 and 11.

Delta States — Mississippi, $619 and 18; Arkansas, $635 and 16; and Louisiana, $788 and 22.

Southern Plains — Oklahoma, $417 and 10; and Texas, $332 and 11.

Mountain — Montana, $185 and 17; Idaho, $496 and 18; Wyoming, $114 and 13; Colorado, $326 and 24; New Mexico, $100 and 7; Arizona, $129 and 7; Utah, $264 and 7; and Nevada, $103 and 7.

Pacific — Washington, $541 and 8; Oregon, $326 and 11; and California $909 and 16.

Foreign Investors Must Report On Ag Holdings

WASHINGTON — Foreign investors in U.S. farm land will have to report their agricultural holdings to the U.S. Department of Agriculture under provisions of the Agricultural Foreign Investment Disclosure Act of 1978.

Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland said the department is drawing up regulations to implement the act. He asked the public to help in the process. Written comments must be received no later than Jan. 5. The regulations must be written by Jan. 12, 90 days after the law's enactment. In addition, a public hearing will be held at the department Thursday.

The act defines "foreign person" and requires those who help, acquire or transfer interests in "agricultural land" to report their holdings to the department. It also specifies reporting periods and the content of reports.

Reports will be available for public inspection at the department within 10 days after they are received. No reports are required until the regulations become effective.

The act gives the secretary some regulatory discretion in the areas of enforcement and implementation, including requiring additional information from foreign investors beyond that specified in the act defining "agricultural land," and other areas related to compliance.

In assessing reports, the secretary will look at the effects of foreign investment of family farms and rural communities and will periodically report his findings to the president, to Congress and to appropriate state departments of agriculture.

Secretary Bergland said he is particularly interested in comments on the following topics: definition of "agricultural land"; nature of the interest the "foreign person" has in "agricultural land" that would trigger reporting requirements; and, whether there should be a minimum acreage figure which would trigger reporting requirements.

Written comments should be sent to Paul Sindt, Team Leader, Staff of the Deputy Administrator for State and County Operations USDA-ASCS, Room 3757-S, Washington, D.C. 20013.

All comments will be available for public inspection in that office during regular business hours.

Trading On Live Cattle Futures Finishes Mixed

By Reuters

CHICAGO — Cattle futures closed 80 points higher to 27.00 on Tuesday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange. April and February were up the most with only nearby December lower after losing up to 47. Most other months finished at the day's highs.

Support was uncovered on the prospect of a constructive cattle on feed report and continued good beef demand. Early selling was mostly a spillover from the weak pork complex.

Wholesale beef was unchanged at 84 cents a pound, f.o.b. river points. Cash cattle were up 50 to 55 cents with the best top $56 per hundredweight. There were 1,001 deliveries. Slaughter was 144,000 head. About 19,300 head are expected at the major markets today.

Feeder cattle futures closed unchanged to up 30 led by April on 2,185 contracts. August was up 65 to a new season's high with January off 55 early.

Outlet selling carried over from Monday with support uncovered as live cattle futures rallied. The prospect of a constructive cattle on feed report also attracted buying.

Cash feeder cattle were steady to off $2 with the best top $100.25 per hundredweight at Greeley. Receipts at the major terminals are expected today to be 8,200 head.

Hog futures closed 50 lower to 25 higher on 9,274 cars. February was weakest after breaking 100 with October at the best gain. Distant December was up 75 for a time.

Sharply lower cash hogs and the 13 cent break in cash hams since Friday brought pressure as did limit level losses in the belly pit. Futures however, were at a premium to cash.

Wholesale hams were unchanged to off 3 1/2 cents at 83 to 102 cents a pound, f.o.b. river, which is the lowest since September. Cash hogs were off $1 to $3 with the best top $50.75 per hundredweight, which is a 1 1/2-week low at Peoria.

Kill was 289,000 head. The major markets are expecting 27,500 head today.

Pork belly (bacon) futures closed 160 to 200 lower led by February and March at the limit level loss the second day in a row. Sales totaled 5,501 contracts. Prices were lower from the start and fell to the lowest since September.

They were down more than 8 1/2 cents from recent highs on heavy storings and weakness in cash products which have fallen 6 1/2 cents this week.

Wholesale bacon was off 4 to 4 1/2 cents at 55 1/2 cents a pound, f.o.b. river, which is the lowest since August.

Energy Panels Aid Hothouse Growers

Electric radiant energy panels may help save greenhouse owners both time and money in getting plants from seed to maturity.

Preliminary research at Texas Tech University indicates the panels, which radiate heat, speed the sprouting and maturation process in hothouse plants and, at the time, save energy.

Dr. Ronald C. Smith, assistant professor of plant and soil science, said normally the entire greenhouse must be kept at high temperatures in order to protect the plants.

The panels however can be placed as close as 18 inches above the plants. This way, the plants are kept warm and the rest of the greenhouse area only has to be kept above freezing.

Smith is being assisted by Cynthia Bielya, Fort Worth, senior plant and soil science major.

In the experiment Smith used tomato and pepper seeds. One group of each was grown under normal greenhouse conditions and another group of each was nourished under the panels. He said those plants which sprouted and matured under the panels did so more rapidly than those normal conditions.

Smith explained that the panels also seem to require less energy than other forms of electric heat.

Electric portable heaters consume approximately 1,300-1,600 watts per hour, compared to only 200-300 watts per hour used by the panels. The researchers will also make comparisons of other heating methods normally used by greenhouse.

The panels might eliminate the need for glass greenhouses, Smith said. In the future, a greenhouse could be built of concrete and utilize low energy lights, as well as the energy panels, all of which would further reduce energy consumption.

The panels are made of 24-gauge galvanized steel, backed by a one-inch thickness of one-pound density, high temperature fiberglass insulation.

The electric heating element consists of powdered graphite, sandwiched between sheets of asbestos insulation which can be cut to fit any size panel. This type of element allows for even heat distribution, with no hot or cold spots.

The entire panel is painted and sprinkled with desert sand to spread heat more evenly and increase the panel's surface area for more efficient radiation. The panels operate from any AC outlet.

Smith and his associates plan to examine next the economics of the panels versus other heating methods.

Lubbock Christian Ag Judging Teams Score In Contests

Lubbock Christian College's agriculture judging teams finished second and third in two judging meets last weekend.

LCC was third of eight teams in the West Texas State practice meet involving three senior colleges and five junior colleges in Canyon last Friday. The LCC team then won second place in the Panhandle State meet in Goodwell, Okla.

Members of the second place sophomore team were Bobby Harland, Gary Patterson, Mike Mimms, Brian Biggers and Rondel Blessing.

Harland was first high overall individual, winning sheep judging and finishing fourth in Angus and seventh in hogs. Patterson was sixth overall high individual.

As a team, the LCC group won second in cattle judging and third in sheep competition.

Smiling Terry Bradshaw awaits duel... Steelers Reminded Of Playoff Defeat

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Pittsburgh Steelers, booted from the playoffs last season by the Denver Broncos, remember that sting as they await a rematch that won't mean a thing in the National Football League standings.

"There's a little revenge on our minds. They took it away from us last year," said linebacker Jack Lambert.

Yet just what that produces Saturday at Mile High Stadium in Denver remains to be seen because all the game really will do is end the regular season for both teams.

And they might meet again here two weeks later in the playoffs, where far more would be at stake in emotion and money.

Nonetheless, Steeler tackle Joe Greene sounds ready to play, which figures because the last Steeler loss in Denver hurt his pride and pocketbook.

"We want to kick Denver's rear. We going out to try to win the game," said Greene.

In the 34-21 playoff loss in Denver, Greene threw a potent, surprise punch into the midsection of Denver guard Paul Howard, knocking him temporarily out of the game.

The officials missed the punch, but it upset Denver fans mightily and drew a $5,000 fine from pro football Commissioner Pete Rozelle.

Greene's punch had something to do with his complaints about being held. But it also revealed his overall frustration at the play of the 1977 Steelers.

Greene's 1978 season has been placid. The Steelers are 13-2 and assured the homefield advantage through the playoffs.

"We are a team of confidence right now," said Greene. "To win you have to believe in yourself. And we do believe."

To stay primed, the Steelers want to play well against the Broncos.

"We don't just owe them one. We owe them two," said running back Rocky Bleier, recalling another Steeler loss last regular season in Denver.

"So we're going out there with the intention of winning the game, keeping our edge, and hopefully not getting anybody hurt."

It remains to be seen, how long coach Chuck Noll goes with his starters.

"We have to play it like any other game. We will go into it to win," said Noll. But, he added, "We'll probably look at more people than we normally do."

Since Pittsburgh and Denver might meet again for keeps later, both sides may do some strategic chesswork.

"Maybe we'll give them something to think about. Then, while they're working on that, we'll do something else," said Bradshaw.

The Steelers would meet Denver here in the playoffs if Houston beats Miami in the wild card game. If Miami wins, the Dolphins will visit Pittsburgh.

"I'm more pumped up this year than last season because we've got the best record," said Steeler linebacker Jack Ham.

"Last year, we kind of backed into the playoffs and Denver knocked us out real quick. This year it's a real good feeling."

Knight Picked As All-Stars Coach

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — Indiana University basketball coach Bobby Knight has been named head coach of the 1979 USA Pan American Games Team, Robert J. Kane, president of the U.S. Olympic Committee, announced here today.

Knight has been head basketball coach at Indiana for the past seven years and was a member of the 1960 Ohio State team that won the NCAA championship. He will be assisted by Michael Krzyzewski, head coach of the U.S. Military Academy team at West Point for the past four years, Kane said. Knight coached at Army prior to taking the job at Indiana.

Kane also announced that Fred Taylor, former Ohio State coach, would be the manager of the team.

Knight, who has a college coaching career record of 262 victories against only 91 defeats, was in the news earlier today when he announced he had kicked three of his Indiana players off the team and placed five others on indefinite probation.

First Playoffs Await Falcons

SUWANEE, Ga. (AP) — It doesn't bother coach Leeman Bennett that there are those around the National Football League calling his Atlanta Falcons playoff pretenders instead of contenders.

The Falcons, who have never made the playoffs in their 13-year existence, can clinch a spot Sunday with a triumph over the St. Louis Cardinals.

Atlanta's 9-6 season has been highlighted by four games won within the last 10 seconds, all by the identical 20-17 score, including last Sunday's triumph over the Washington Redskins.

After New Orleans dropped its second consecutive 20-17 last-second decision to the Falcons this season, Saints' defensive back Ralph McGill growled: "I'll tell you one thing. They ain't going to no Super Bowl because they ain't no playoff team."

After Cincinnati drubbed the Falcons 37-7 two weeks ago, one Bengal asked: "That's a playoff team? You could have fooled me."

But Bennett, the cool, calm leader who took over a stumbling club two years ago and led them to a 7-7 season in 1977, took the jibes in stride at his weekly news conference Tuesday.

"My only answer to them is — Where are they going to be Christmas Eve?"

Neither Cincinnati nor New Orleans will be in the playoffs while Bennett's club is virtually assured of a Dec. 24 playoff date. There are four other clubs — Washington, Green Bay, Minnesota and Philadelphia — in contention for the three post-season spots but the Falcons would have to lose to St. Louis and the four other teams would have to win for Atlanta to be eliminated.

"We don't want to think about losing," said Bennett.

Bennett thinks the Falcons belong in the playoffs despite the disbelievers.

"We've been in every ball game. Even the Cincinnati game. Throw out three or four isolated plays in that game and we're in it. The Saints were making references to our beating them on lucky plays. Well, that's all part of the game," he said.

Bennett also said that after reviewing films of Sunday's victory over Washington, he was certain Ron McDole was offside when the Redskins blocked Tim Mazzetti's 37-yard field goal attempt with two seconds remaining.

Mazzetti got another chance and kicked a 32-yarder with no time left for the 20-17 triumph.

"We looked at the film and there was movement. He was definitely offside. Both officials called it from opposite sides of the line immediately," said Bennett.

Washington coach Jack Pardee after viewing films Monday, said he felt McDole made a perfect play and was not offside.

Greenwood Needs Games

In trying to build a high school varsity football program, Greenwood High School is having trouble lining up opponents.

Mack Dickerson at the Class B school said he has open dates on Sept. 21 and 28, Oct. 5, 19, and 26; and Nov. 9 of next year. He is seeking Class B or junior varsity games.

Greenwood will be listed in District 4-B but will not be playing for district honors next year.

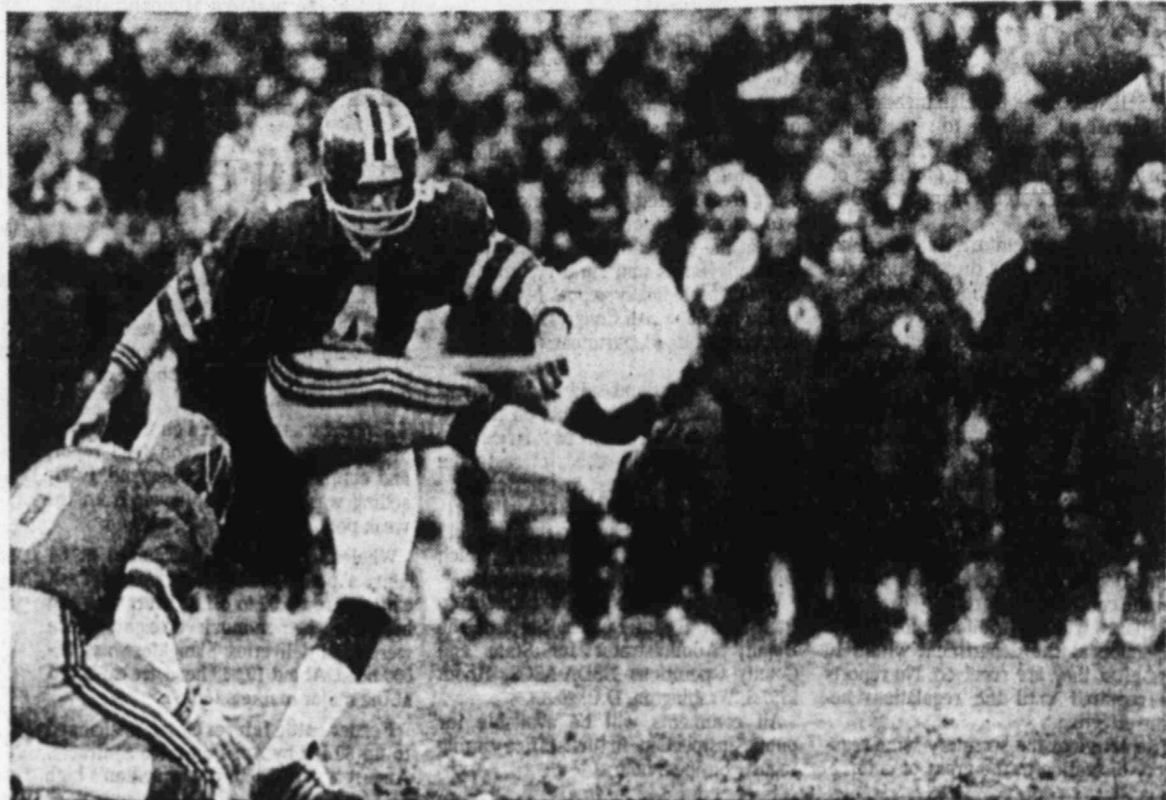

Dickerson can be reached at (915) 683-6353.

Western Hills Baptist Academy is seeking junior high and JV basketball games for any Monday or Tuesday except next week. Coaches wanting to play can contact Jim Briggs at 799-4304.

Nazareth coach Joe Lombard is seeking basketball games for both boys and girls varsity teams during the week of Dec. 28-30. He can be reached at 945-2521.

Leland Caffey at Seminole would like to schedule a basketball game for next Friday. He can be reached at (915) 758-3662.

Kiondike is seeking boys and girls games for Dec. 30. Coach Bill Brown can be contacted at 462-7331.

Rural Setting Beset With Pollution Troubles

STRATTON, Ohio (AP) — Gina Ward ran the tip of her index finger along a narrow ledge beside the grocery check-out counter, and it came up filing-cabinet gray.

"This is what it's all about," she said, "dust — particulate matter. We dust in here frequently, and it's still like this. And when I drive south to West Cumberland, I can smell the sulfur dioxide."

Miss Ward, 26, works in Arnie's Supermarket, a tiny but modern grocery store in the unincorporated hamlet of New Manchester, W.Va. The few houses and stores in the community of a couple hundred residents sit atop rolling West Virginia hills that drop rapidly down to the murky Ohio River across from Stratton.

It is a rural setting — quiet and peaceful, tucked away from the industrialized world — a half hour's drive north along winding West Virginia 2 from Weirton, a town dominated by a steel mill.

But its rustic beauty is dulled by its neighbor across the river — the Ohio Edison Co.'s W. H. Sammis generating plant.

The Sammis plant squats beside the river next to the New Cumberland Lock and Dam and the postage stamp-sized town of Stratton, itself a lazy half-hour drive north of Steubenville.

The plant's seven tall smokestacks rise up from among the wooded hillsides. They spew forth a constant barrage of black and gray smoke which, when grabbed by the prevailing winds, become a dark arrow pointed at West Virginia. "It was bad when they had the two small stacks. We complained and they built more. Now, on specific occasions, it's real bad. Sometimes you have to use your windshield wipers to see where you're going," said Arnold Siegal, the owner of Arnie's Supermarket.

The plant — and the rural pollution it spawns — have come under increasing attack recently. "A Jefferson County Grand Jury has returned an indictment charging the Akron-based Ohio Edison with permitting pollution emissions higher than those allowed by Ohio law. A trial is scheduled Jan. 13."

The State of West Virginia and the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency joined forces in a suit filed in U.S. District Court in Columbus. The suit asks the pollution be stopped, or the plant closed. It is believed to be the first suit filed under amendments to the federal Clean Air Act, which allow states to petition for relief from air pollution produced outside their boundaries.

Stratton Mayor Fred Abdalla has cited Sammis officials in his mayor's court for noise pollution — after a pop-off valve blew off May 17 and shrill, hissing steam escaped for some 10 hours — as well as for air pollution. The cases have been continued indefinitely by the Jefferson County Common Pleas Court.

And while the lawyers do battle, the smoke continues. "Pollution was especially bad last summer while some 600 employees at Sammis were on strike, Abdalla said. The plant was operated by supervisors, but pollution equipment at the plant functioned poorly."

"They said they didn't have enough men to maintain the (smoke-cleaning) precipitators," he said. "You'd go outside in the daytime and you couldn't see across the street, there was so much dirty smoke."

The source of the pollution that is the subject of the suits and complaints is the high-sulfur Midwest coal burned in the giant furnaces of the Sammis plant, which was built in the mid-1950s.

More than 3.8 million tons of coal was burned at the plant last year, said Ohio Edison information officer Jim Dodson. Most came from Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Kentucky. The company owns a small mine in Ohio, which Dodson estimates produced 2 percent of the coal burned.

To fight the pollution problem, the company long ago installed pollution control devices called electro-static precipitators. These, said Dodson, are designed to remove from 97 percent to 98 percent of the fly ash emission.

Ohio Edison officials also have purchased dust collectors for the first four units at Sammis and are considering collectors for the last three units, including the mammoth "number seven."

They have not yet been installed, however, because plant officials are waiting for word from the federal Environmental Protection Administration on implementation of the so-called Metzenbaum amendment to the Clean Air Act.

Designed to save the jobs of Ohioans who mine high sulfur coal, the legislation sponsored by Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, would require installation of "scrubbers" at some plants. Both scrubbers and dust collectors would not be necessary. The EPA has not yet decided if Sammis will have to install scrubbers.

Mayor Abdalla maintains the scrubbers would be cheaper because it would be a one-time expense. But Dodson disagrees. He put the cost of the scrubbers at $800 million, with an annual operating and maintenance cost of more than $250 million. Using low sulfur coal would cost $400 million initially for the dust collectors required and involve operating and maintenance costs of more than $100 million a year, he said.

Despite Mayor Abdalla's complaints, he does not want to see the Sammis plant closed.

"We don't want them to shut down. We don't want to put anyone out of work. But what good does it do to work if you can't live to enjoy it?"

Rail Panel Rejects

Natural Gas Sale

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Railroad Commission has turned down a company's request for permission to sell surplus gas to a Southern California pipeline.

Intracex Gas Co. had asked for emergency approval of natural gas sales to Transwestern Pipeline Co. Intracex said the California company faces gas curtailments in its service area.

The three commissioners denied the application Monday and ordered a full hearing before an examiner on Dec. 21.

Intracex proposed selling gas to Transwestern for five years, subject to termination if the Texas company decides it no longer has enough surplus fuel.

Land Pricing Factor Cited In Inflation

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the House banking committee Tuesday urged the Labor Department to start measuring increases in land prices the same way it now measures increases in consumer prices.

Rep. Henry Reuss, D-Wis., told the department that skyrocketing land prices are largely ignored in the administration's battle against inflation. He said establishment of a land price index would be a useful first step in focusing attention on the problem.

He quoted estimates by the National Association of Home Builders that land prices have risen 1,275 percent since 1949 and that land prices now make up 25 percent of the total cost of a typical home, compared with only 11 percent in 1949.

Farmland prices also are rising rapidly, he said, noting the Agriculture Department estimates Iowa farmland cost $1.375 an acre in 1978 — up 10 percent in one year. Farmland prices in several New England states exceeded $2,000 an acre, he said.

"It seems extremely dubious that we can hold wages to increases of 7 percent a year or commodity prices to 5 1/2 percent unless we hold down land prices that have been soaring with wage and commodity inflation," the chairman of the House Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs Committee said.

"Ways must be found to curb the tendency to invest more and more in land, a passive activity that adds not a single acre to the nation's real wealth," he added.

Reuss contended much of the escalation of farmland prices is the result of speculative buying by absentee owners.

"These absentees include not only oil sheiks or other foreign investors but also the growing number of U.S. individuals and businesses buying land as a hedge against the shrinking dollar," he said.

Nader Group Seeks Further Pesticide Ban

WASHINGTON (AP) — New Environmental Protection Agency studies reportedly have found traces of the pesticide DBCP in oranges, lemons, peaches and grapes, prompting one organization to call for further bans on the use of the dangerous chemical.

The Public Citizen Health Research Group, a Ralph Nader-sponsored organization, asked EPA administrator Douglas Costle to invoke his emergency authority to ban further use of the pesticide on citrus crops.

DBCP has been linked to sterility in workers where the pesticide is manufactured and to cancer in laboratory animals.

The health organization said "new evidence from EPA" indicates that dangerously high levels of the pesticide found in the citrus crops "constitutes a substantial and unacceptable risk to public health which should be eliminated immediately."

EPA declined to confirm the findings, saying only that its DBCP studies are "a priority item" and that it is investigating California state findings that DBCP residues are being found on crops where they previously were undetected.

EPA banned the use of DBCP on 19 crops last year, and is expected to hold hearings on its continued use on other crops early next year.

The California Rural Legal Assistance group earlier this year asked the agency to expand its ban on the use of DBCP, citing the California state findings.

DBCP is widely used to combat nematodes, microscopic bugs that attack vine and tree roots.

Carole Baron has been appointed vice-president and editor-in-chief of Pocket Books.

Mining Rapidly Developing Industry In Florida

LAKELAND, Fla. (AP) — Florida, land of sunshine and Mickey Mouse, orange juice and sandy beaches, is quietly developing other resources — those hidden far below the green, fertile surface.

Without much fanfare, the Sunshine State already has become the 11th-largest mining state in the nation. And industry and government officials, gleefully eyeing huge reserves of phosphate and other minerals — including increasingly valuable uranium — say more development is on the way.

"We don't have that recognition — basically, we're thought of as having a tourist-oriented economy," said Steve Windham, assistant geologist for the state's Department of Natural Resources. "But Florida is getting ranked very high as a mining state. And we see the volume increasing every year."

Nearly 50 million barrels of oil, worth about $573 million, were recovered from oil fields on the state's northwest tip and southwest corner last year and some 49 billion cubic feet of natural gas was recovered from the same fields.

Florida ranks first in the production of titanium, used in paints, pigments and production of high-temperature metals; second in production of clays used for making bricks; and sixth in production of limestone and dolomite, used in construction and as agricultural supplements.

About 65,000 jobs in Florida are directly or indirectly related to mining; the industry contributed a total of about $4 billion to the state's economy in 1978; more than $60 million was added to state coffers through severance taxes alone; millions more entered the treasuries through property taxes.

Of all the mining and drilling operations, phosphate is by far the largest. Some 42 million tons of the crucial mineral, 80 percent of the nation's production and one-third the world production, was mined in Florida last year.

The U.S. Bureau of Mines says there are at least 4.16 billion tons of phosphate that can be recovered in Florida through present mining practices — enough to last until the year 2082 at the present rate of production. But industry officials say those numbers are extremely conservative.

And now, as a beneficial by-product of phosphate mining, several large firms are preparing to produce uranium to meet the growing needs of nuclear-powered electrical generators. Within two years, nearly 3 million pounds of uranium a year — about 10 percent of the country's total demand — are expected to come from the Bone Valley of Central Florida.

But there have been problems as well. Despite reclamation programs, most required by state government, a large portion of the 40-by-60 square mile valley is covered by pock marks and waste pits created by strip mining phosphate.

And there is a continuing controversy over how much radiation is released by the mining and reclamation projects, and whether it is endangering residents.

The phosphate deposits in the Bone Valley were formed 10 million to 15 million years ago when ocean waters swept across what is now Central Florida and settled in the area, mixing the water's phosphorus with sand and clay. In addition, the remains of trillions of prehistoric marine animals contributed more phosphorus to the area.

The deposits were discovered by a U.S. Army engineer in 1881 and mining began within 10 years. Other states with smaller deposits of phosphate include North Carolina, Tennessee, Idaho, Montana and Wyoming.

Phosphorus is one of the major nutrients needed by plants and animals; virtually no crop can grow without it. And phosphate fertilizer — created through a chemical procedure from the mined phosphate rock — has become a necessity as farmers worldwide try to increase yields.

More than 5 million tons of phosphate fertilizer are consumed in the United States each year.

Some 16 companies are mining phosphate in the Bone Valley, most through the strip mining process. International Minerals & Chemical Corp., which produces about 30 percent of the phosphate mined in Florida, uses several mammoth drag lines — electrically powered shovels that scoop 72 tons of earth with each bite.

The lines move methodically up and down a pre-determined area. First, the "overburden" (a relatively unvaluable layer of earth above the phosphate) is stripped away and piled to the side. Then, the phosphate deposits are scooped up and moved in slurry form through pipelines to facilities that treat the material and prepare it for conversion to fertilizer.

The process leaves ugly scars, and state officials in 1975 began requiring the industry to restore each acre of land that is mined. Generally, the reclamation involves replacement of the overburden and planting of a cover crop such as rye.

The major remaining problem is the restoration of ponds in which waste clay settles — it now takes six to 10 years for complete evaporation or settling of water in the ponds. The industry says it is working with the Bureau of Mines on techniques to hasten the process.

The other major problem has been allegations that dangerous levels of radiation have been released by the mining process. The radiation is emitted by relatively small amounts of uranium present in the phosphate ore.

In September 1975, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency issued an interim report that said some houses built on reclaimed phosphate lands contained unusually high levels of radiation. But the agency said in a later report that its findings might have been exaggerated by measurement errors. Further studies are continuing.

The same uranium that gave the industry headaches also is proving to be a blessing. Although the amounts of uranium found in central Florida are small when compared to the huge reserves of phosphate, at least 115,000 tons of uranium — worth billions of dollars — are believed present.

One plant already is producing uranium from phosphate, and others are being built to take advantage of the five-fold price increase in the substance since the early 1970s.

Many of the firms just now building plants already have contracted with major utilities such as the Tennessee Valley Authority, Florida Power & Light Co. and Washington State Public Power Supply System for purchase of the fuel that will be made from the uranium.

Rhodesian Gasoline Depot Still Burning

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (AP) — Guerrilla rockets have turned Rhodesia's main gasoline storage depot here into an inferno.

Eleven tanks were destroyed by fire raging Tuesday a day after the rockets slammed into the 40-acre facility. The blaze wiped out a third of the depot and a huge pall of black smoke hung over the city.

Rhodesian authorities and oil company officials refused to say what proportion of fuel supplies, vital to the war effort, were destroyed or threatened.

The blaze is concentrated in the center of the facility where Shell-British tanks are located. The site is shared by Total, Mobil and Caltex.

Police cordoned off the area, four miles from the city center, and truck loads of heavily armed troops patrolled.

Exhausted firemen ran out of fire-fighting chemicals and fresh supplies were being rushed in from neighboring South Africa. Water was sprayed on tanks threatened by a wall of leaping orange flames and mushrooming black clouds.

Unofficial estimates were that nearly 9 million gallons — worth about $1 per gallon — were lost in the 11 tanks and two more were threatened. Fuel was already strictly rationed here, and motorists hurried to fill up their tanks, despite government assurances private supplies would not be affected.

Gasoline has been rationed in Rhodesia since U.N. trade embargoes were imposed against the white-minority government 12 years ago. The sanctions followed white Prime Minister Ian Smith's independence move from Britain to head off black majority rule.

Informed sources said most of the loss was diesel, vital to the railways, farmers and miners — and Salisbury's public transport system.

Military sources said it appeared guerrillas, positioned on a rail line 500 yards from the facility's security fence, fired two rockets into a tank, touching off an explosion and fire.

In Zambia, Joshua Nkomo's Zimbabwe African People's Union said its insurgents destroyed the fuel dump in "yet another severe and crippling blow" to Rhodesia's economy.

But later, Mozambique-based guerrilla chief Robert Mugabe said his fighters were responsible.

The men lead the two factions of the Patriotic Front, which for six years has been fighting to bring black majority rule to Rhodesia's 6.7 million blacks and 250,000 whites.

Nkomo claimed his insurgents killed "a considerable number" of people in the attack, but the government denied there were any casualties.

Mitchell County Utility Firm Gets Gas Rate Hike Okay

A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Railroad Commission has granted Mitchell County Utility Co.'s requests to increase natural gas service rates to a level that effectively doubles residential bills in unincorporated areas near Westbrook.

The new rates, made effective retroactively to Oct. 10, will mean that an average 10 mcf (thousand cubic feet) bill for about 405 residential and 20 commercial customers will increase to $34.29, up from $17.09.

Mitchell will be allowed to add a five cents per mcf surcharge to each monthly bill to recover lost income from higher rates it was paying its supplier.

The new rates are the same as those adopted by the City of Westbrook.

Tots' Fire Deaths Blamed On Mother

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — A suburban New Hope woman has been accused of starting an apartment fire in which her two small children died.

Sybil Greenberg, 25, appeared in Hennepin District Court Monday on two counts of third-degree murder. Bail was set at $50,000 for the woman, held in the county jail.

Mrs. Greenberg's children, Peter John, 16 months, and Teresa Margit, 3, died of smoke inhalation Dec. 1 after they were taken from their bedroom by firemen.

ROCHESTER, Minn. (AP) — Now that they've married, Clarence Larson no longer has to pound his cane on the ceiling to communicate with Maude Judd at the nursing home where their whirlwind courtship blossomed.

Larson, 88, and Mrs. Judd, 89, both widowed and residents of Samaritan Bethany Manor, were wed Saturday.

Larson's room was immediately below Maude's and he often communicated with her by tapping his cane on the ceiling. Three taps, for example, meant it was time to get up and go to breakfast.

The home operators now have moved some furniture to create a three-room suite for the newlyweds on the second floor.

The Larsons have no immediate plans for a honeymoon but Maude said she hopes to take her new husband along on a visit to Florida later this winter.

NEW YORK (AP) — Eubie Blake, who will be 96 in February, said, "Do you want me to play the piano?" at a party heralding release of the cast album of "Eubie," the current Broadway show for which he wrote all the music. They did.

Blake played "I'm Just Wild about Harry" and "Memories of You" Monday night at the Players Club while seven cast members accompanied him.

EUBIE BLAKE — Vicki Carter, pianist for the show, suggested to Blake that he take her place in the pit one night. "I couldn't do it," he said. "I don't know the whole score. You know I wrote those songs a long time ago." One of them, "Charleston Rag," he wrote in 1899.

Uses Proposed For Unexpected Federal Funds

The Lubbock Urban Transportation Study Committee will recommend to the city council next month that about $400,000 in unexpected federal funds be used for one of three suggested thoroughfare projects.

The steering committee voted Tuesday to recommend that the council approve one of the following three proposals:

- rehabilitation of Clovis Road from Fourth Street to Loop 289;
- rehabilitation of Avenue Q from 50th Street south to 1,400 feet north of the Taboka traffic circle; and
- widening of Slide Road from 82nd Street to 98th Street.

George Wall, district engineer for the state highway department, told the committee about $400,000 was approved for an additional project when Congress passed new highway legislation recently.

The money should be used quickly before it is "all eaten up by inflation," he said.

State and city funds also would be required for any of the recommended projects, Wall said, explaining that the city, for example, would be responsible for additional right-of-way acquisitions.

"We don't use a canceling machine," said Ridgeway. "We do it all by hand. Judging by the stamps I sell, I would say we probably will postmark 15,000 Christmas cards and letters."

"If you have a full day, you could have 1,000 to 1,500," he said. "One day last week we had about 700 or more."

MOSCOW (AP) — Two record-breaking Soviet cosmonauts have fully regained the state of health they enjoyed before their 139-day flight, their doctor said Tuesday.

In an interview with a Soviet newspaper, Oleg Gazenko said cosmonauts Vladimir Kovalyovok and Alexander Ivanchenkov "are as healthy as they were before the spaceflight."

He said the longest-ever manned space flight, which ended Nov. 2, did cause "some functional changes." "The cosmonauts lost a lot of muscle mass," he told the youth newspaper Komsomolskaya Pravda, "which they have now restored."

The U.S. Distilled Spirits Council in Washington says nearly 10 million more gallons of alcoholic beverages are sold in the U.S. during December than any other month. In December 1977, 54.6 million gallons were sold. After six years of aging at this plant, the bottling is done at the rate of 285 bottles per minute. (AP Laserphoto)

Nude Ad Upsets Model

NEW YORK (AP) — More than 30 years ago, when she was a teenager, Patricia Ladew posed for a nude painting but sent it back because it was "too much" to hang in her bedroom.

She's 47 now, but Mrs. Ladew says she was still upset when she saw a copy of the painting on the cover of an advertisement mailed to art patrons in the metropolitan area.

"I could only think of my grandmother getting the flyer and seeing her own granddaughter's nude body on the cover," she said.

The Manhattan gallery that has offered the painting for sale at an auction next Thursday said it was unaware of Mrs. Ladew's existence. The gallery claimed that it didn't know that "Pat Ladew" was anything more than "the title of a painting."

The painting, by Alice Neel, now has an estimated value of $8,000 to $10,000, according to James Couri, chairman of the Plaza Art Galleries.

Mrs. Ladew said she rejected it after it was painted — and after she had paid $300 — because "it was too much to hang it in my own bedroom." Even after the artist, a personal friend of Mrs. Ladew, covered the figure a bit with "a little red panty, I still thought it was too much," Mrs. Ladew added.

The painting came to the gallery through a charitable foundation, Benefit of Artists Mobilization for Survival.

Mrs. Ladew, who called her lawyer when she first saw the flyer, now thinks "the whole thing is very funny." She said she does not contemplate legal action.

CBS Giving ABC Run For Money

NEW YORK (AP) — No one really expects a challenge this season to ABC's domination of the TV networks' prime-time ratings competition, but CBS is making a game of it.

The ratings race for the week ending Dec. 10 was a dead heat, ABC and CBS with 20 points each, NBC trailing at 17.2. The networks say that means in an average prime-time minute during the week, 20 percent of the homes in the country were tuned to both ABC and CBS.

ABC had won the ratings competition nine of the 11 weeks this season, losing only to NBC's World Series programming, which ran during parts of two weeks. CBS spent five weeks at the start of the season in last place, and the last six as runner-up to ABC.

CBS did it this time with five of the week's 10 most-watched programs, though ABC — as usual — swept the top three places.

ABC's "Three's Company" got the week's highest rating, figures from the A.C. Nielsen Co. show, with Tuesday night companion "Laverne and Shirley" less than a point behind.

The rating for "Three's Company" was 33.6, which Nielsen says means of all the homes in the country with television, 33.6 percent saw at least part of the show.

CBS' best was the No. 4 "60 Minutes," the newsmagazine that finished No. 1 in the ratings two weeks earlier. NBC's newsmagazine, "Weekend," continued its struggle in prime-time, finishing 63rd of 64 shows rated.

CBS listed a couple of specials in the Top 10, "Third Annual Circus of the Stars" in sixth place and "All Star Tribute to Jimmy Stewart" seventh.

NBC's top-rated show was "Little House on the Prairie," ranked ninth.

In addition to "Weekend," NBC had two other programs in the bottom five — "Grandpa Goes to Washington" in 60th place and "Project U.F.O." No. 62. ABC's "Lucan" was 61st, and CBS' special from the Kennedy Center in Washington was ranked No. 64.

Here are the week's 10 most-watched programs:

"Three's Company," with a rating of 33.6 representing 25 million homes, "Laverne and Shirley," 33.1 or 24.7 million, "Happy Days," 30.5 or 22.7 million, all ABC; "60 Minutes," 29.3 or 21.8 million, CBS; "Taxi," 28.8 or 21.5 million, ABC; "Circus of the Stars," 28 or 20.9 million, "Tribute to Jimmy Stewart," 27.9 or 20.8 million, and "M-A-S-H," 27.4 or 20.4 million, all CBS; "Little House on the Prairie," 27.2 or 20.3 million, NBC, and "One Day at a Time," 25.7 or 19.1 million, CBS.

The second 10 shows:

"Pink Panther's Christmas Special," ABC; "Rudolph the Red-Nosed Reindeer," "All in the Family" and "Alice," all CBS; "Benji's Very Own Christmas Story," ABC; "The Waltons," CBS; "Love Boat," ABC; "A Country Christmas," CBS; "Fantasy Island," ABC, and Monday Movie, "Suddenly, Love," NBC.

Magician's Television Show To Feature Special Illusions

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The four tigers rested benignly in their cages, looking like innocent kittens waiting to be petted.

But earlier, in rehearsal, they had reached up with their paws and effortlessly pried open the bars of a special capsule containing magician Doug Henning. "I thought they were going to eat me," Henning said.

Henning uses the four tigers — Ruffles, Snuggles, Ben, and Susie — in an illusion he created for his fourth network special, "Doug Henning's World of Magic," which NBC airs Thursday night.

Henning will take Brooke Shields on a magical tour of ancient Egypt, China, and medieval England. He will do five illusions never performed before.

"I find magic works best when it incorporates a plot, rather than just one illusion after another," said Henning. He was in his studio in Van Nuys, where he rehearses his illusions, keeps his collection of magic reference books, and has a crew of craftsmen who build the props he needs for his network, night club, and concert appearances.

"We use the tigers for the Egyptian segment," he said. "We chose tigers because we could never get four cheetahs, which the pharaohs kept, and I didn't want lions. I worked with a lion once and he nearly ate my assistant. Lions can go berserk, but a tiger is always in possession of his faculties. And tigers are more beautiful on color television."

Henning said he is not frightened by the cats, but he respects their power and is careful in dealing with them.

In one illusion, Henning is lowered into the tiger cage, which was reinforced after the cats pried open the bars. "I'm no Evel Knievel," the magician said. "I know exactly what I'm doing. Harry Houdini did dangerous things, but he was 100 percent sure of everything he did. So am I."

Henning's life. He has Houdini's old magic library, baby shoes, magic wand, notebooks and diaries. He is the author of "Houdini: His Legend and His Magic."

Henning creates his own illusions, sometimes with the help of his magic consultant, Charles Reynolds. Henning's wife, Barbara, has occasionally suggested illusions. She helps write the show and created the theme for the latest special. Henning said she has no idea of how most of the illusions work.

"First, we decide what we want them to look like," he said. "Then we figure out how to do it, using my knowledge of the secrets of magic and the research library. Then we build all the props here and rehearse them."

"Lots of people think you get a trick prop and that's it. A prop is like a violin. You have to learn how to use it. We rehearsed the tiger trick for two months."

The broadcast will be live for the eastern half of the country, and the performance will be taped for the West Coast. Henning said NBC guards the tape and will not permit retakes, so the West will see the show as it was performed live — including mistakes.

"Illusions sometimes go wrong," he said. "We're doing things no one has ever done before. We rehearse like crazy, but when you're on a television stage with 100 people things can happen. Someone may knock over a prop in the wings. A box may not open."

Henning never reveals how his illusions are done, and all of his employees must sign secrecy agreements.

The Canadian-born Henning is probably one of the few people who studied magic as art. After college, Henning, 31, spent two years traveling around the world to study magic.

He said he was inspired when he saw a magician levitate a girl on "The Ed Sullivan Show" when he was 6 years old. At 14, he got $5 for his first magic act, and after that he advertised "Have Rabbit, Will Travel" and performed at birthday parties.

Image Of Turks In 'Midnight Express' Protested

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — "Midnight Express," a recent film about the prison life of a young American jailed in Turkey, has hit the Turks in one of their most vulnerable spots — their sensitivity to the Turkish national image in the Western world.

The film, currently showing in Europe and the United States, "depicts all Turks, prison guards and police, lawyers and judges, children and adults, illiterates and educated persons, as animals," wrote columnist Mumtaz Soysal in the daily Milliyet.

Some persons abroad agree with him. Britain's Lord Coleraine recently told the House of Lords in London: "I sat through two hours of vilification and abuse of the Turkish government, Turkey as a country and the Turks as a people."

This predominantly Moslem nation has been struggling for the past half-century to become an integral part of the West.

But recently more and more Turks have begun to question whether the results were worth the effort.

The movie appears to have strengthened Turkish suspicions. Soysal, who also is a prominent academic and vice president of Amnesty International, asked why Turkey insisted, and tried to force "closed doors open to become part of a world — the West — which humiliates us."

Soysal succeeded in an effort to have Amnesty International give up planned sponsorship of a special charity premiere of the film in London last August.

But efforts by the Turkish government and Turkish communities in Europe to secure a ban or partial censorship of the film in England, West Germany, Holland and elsewhere, were in vain.

Turkish newspapers gave prominent play to criticisms of the film abroad. They quoted the Washington Post description of the film as "exaggerated."

The daily Gunaydin interviewed former foreign inmates of Turkish prisons, and quoted them as saying the prisons were no heaven, yet not as bad as portrayed in the movie.

The saga of Billy Hayes of North Babylon, N.Y., began in 1970 when he was caught at Istanbul's Yesilkoy airport with four pounds of hashish in his possession.

Hayes was tried and sentenced to 30 years in prison on the charge of smuggling narcotics. He was first kept in Istanbul's Sagmalcilar prison and later was transferred to the island prison of Imrali.

From there Hayes escaped in 1974, taking to the sea on a fisherman's dingy. He made his way back to Istanbul, then to Greece and home.

The film was based on a book he wrote about his prison experiences and escape.

"Midnight Express" means jailbreak in prison jargon.

At the time of Hayes' arrest, Turkey was under intense pressure from the United States to halt cultivation of opium poppies as a contribution to America's fight against drugs.

Turkish officials have complained of a "double standard" in the U.S. attitude: asking for leniency for U.S. drug offenders caught in Turkey while requesting Turkey's cooperation to eliminate international narcotics traffic.

Turkish officials admit prison conditions in the country are far from ideal. There are frequent prison revolts with inmates demanding better treatment. Justice Minister Mehmet Oan has promised prison reform and has instituted a parole system.

It is public knowledge that most Turkish prisons are overcrowded, lack adequate sanitary and medical facilities and recreation and work opportunities for inmates. The Turkish objection is at being singled out for abuse on what they consider a universal problem.

"Crime and punishment have been a common problem of the entire human race throughout history. Life in prison presents shameful practices in all countries, from the most civilized to the most backward," wrote Turkish columnist Orhan Apyaydin of the film.

Four Americans are currently in Turkish prisons serving 24-year terms on drug offenses. They expect to be sent home within a year, when Turkey and the United States ratify a prisoner exchange treaty.

Arthur Fiedler Stable After Cranial Surgery

BOSTON (AP) — Arthur Fiedler, the 83-year-old conductor of the Boston Pops Orchestra, was listed in stable condition Tuesday after surgery to relieve pressure caused by brain and spinal fluid.

The hour-long brain surgery was performed Monday night at Tufts New England Medical Center, said Hank Wilson, hospital spokesman.

"He is well now and in the hospital's neurosurgical special care unit," the hospital said in a statement Tuesday.

Wilson said the procedure involved diverting cerebrospinal fluid, which surrounds the brain and the spine, from the brain into the abdominal cavity through a thread-like synthetic tube.

He described it as a "limited neurosurgical procedure" and said it was "to correct problems that had been affecting his (Fiedler's) mobility and gait."

Wilson said physicians reported that Fiedler "tolerated the procedure well..." but that "it will be several days before a full post-surgical evaluation can be made."

He said the surgery was planned "following detailed neurological examinations."

Wilson said Monday that Fiedler had been having trouble walking, "along with a few other ailments." He declined to provide details on the other ailments or describe the walking problem.

Fiedler, who will be 84 Sunday, entered the hospital Saturday, about a week after he was discharged following four days of treatment for exhaustion.

Conductor of the Boston Pops since 1939, Fiedler has made the orchestra a Boston institution that feeds classical music to people, along with show tunes and Top 10 hits. He was the first to play Beatles' music with a symphony orchestra.
