Move Seen For U.S. Carrier

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 80,000-ton U.S. aircraft carrier Constellation will leave the Philippines soon on the first leg of what could become a show-the-flag voyage into the Persian Gulf, it was learned Friday.

The impending move was disclosed by government sources a day after administration officials said they were considering the possibility of sending a U.S. carrier force into those waters to underscore President Carter's warning against Russian or other outside intervention in troubled Iran.

The sources, declining to be identified, said the Constellation will sail from the U.S. naval base at Subic Bay in the Philippines, accompanied by as many as four escorting ships, bound for the approaches to the Indian Ocean.

Decision Next Week

By the time the task force reaches that position early next week, the sources said, a decision may be made whether to order the task force to proceed on into the Indian Ocean and possibly to the Persian Gulf.

Experts estimated it would take about a week for the Constellation to cross the vast Indian Ocean to reach the entrance to the Persian Gulf.

At the State Department, meanwhile, officials said they still felt that the Soviets were playing within such ground rules as have been established for super-power contact in situations like the Iranian crisis.

The officials, who also requested anonymity, said that so far, Russian efforts to influence the Iranian situation had been restricted to propaganda activities, although department spokesman Hodding Carter noted that the Soviet propaganda had become stronger.

Ships In Arabian Sea

The United States already has a four-ship task force in the Arabian Sea, where it has been conducting exercises. That task force, including a guided missile cruiser, a destroyer, a frigate and an oiler, entered the Indian Ocean Nov. 15 in one of the periodic cruises mounted by the U.S. Navy in the area since 1971.

The Constellation carries between 80 and 90 planes normally and a crew of nearly 5,000 officers and enlisted men, including pilots and air mechanics. Commissioned in 1961, it is powered by turbine engines and can make up to 35 knots speed.

Conceivably, President Carter could decide to make his point by keeping the Constellation in the Indian Ocean, without actually sending the ships toward Iran.

Dispatch of U.S. Navy carrier task forces to make political points and show the force is a time-honored practice going back to the end of World War II.

DESTINED TO RULE — Iranian Crown Prince Reza Pahlavi, groomed since childhood to take over his father's throne, now faces a clouded future as the shah's heir apparent. The youthful prince, nonetheless, maintains a calm demeanor as a pilot trainee at Reese Air Force Base. (USAF Photo)

Crown Prince, Trainee Here, Shows No Evident Alarm, Friends Assert

By KAY BELL and GERRY BURTON

IRANIAN CROWN PRINCE Reza Pahlavi has remained in constant touch with his father, but has shown no outward sign of disturbance or distress at the civil turmoil that has wracked his native country during recent months, according to his friends.

A Lubbock businessman who is close to the prince also said Friday that the shah's apparently shaky status in Iran has not altered the calm exterior the prince has exhibited since his arrival in Lubbock in July.

That "remarkable" feat, the prince's friend said, is consistent with the "loveable and courteous" personality the teenager has exhibited since his arrival for flight training at Reese Air Force Base.

Since midsummer the 18-year-old crown prince has been taking part in a 50-week flying course paid for by his country's government. During the week, he lives in a guarded apartment at the base; he spends weekends in an expansive home he purchased in an affluent west Lubbock neighborhood.

Friday, however, as speculation increased that the shah's political stature was crumbling, the crown prince was away from Lubbock on a two-week tour of the United States. Like other trainees at Reese, he began a holiday break Dec. 22.

Lt. Steve Headley of the Reese Information Office would say only that "he is now in the states, enjoying the holiday season with some friends. He returns the second of January to begin the T38 (aircraft) phase of the program."

Other sources told the Avalanche-Journal that at least part of the prince's vacation was to have been spent skiing in Colorado.

Reese officials Friday would not say whether security for the prince has been altered because of the ongoing unrest in Iran. Col. C.G. Bartley of the Lubbock Police Department, however, said his office has received no requests for additional protection at the prince's Lubbock home, which is guarded by off-duty police officers, paid by the Iranian government.

Bartley said the department would not alter its security plan without confirmation of a change in the Iranian government.

The crown prince conceivably could head a regency council if the shah were to relinquish his throne, although the Iranian constitution demands that the prince be at least 21 before he can wear the crown.

The shah has said he will turn the throne over to Reza when his son is 28. But growing unrest in Iran has prompted some political observers to speculate that the soft-spoken heir might be able to stifle the revolt and salvage the monarchy if the shah were to relinquish the crown to his son now. The shah

Foe Accepts Offer To Head Civil Rule

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — A top opposition leader said Friday he had agreed to form a civilian government for this riot-ridden nation and palace sources reported Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi would not step down as his foes have demanded.

Ardehsir Zahedi, Iran's ambassador to the United States who returned to Tehran because of the year-long crisis, said the shah "has not abdicated and has no intention to abdicate."

He told The Associated Press that the shah plans to meet with leaders of both houses of Parliament at 10 a.m. today (12:30 a.m. CST) but he did not know what courses of action might be considered.

Regency Council Denied

There also were reports that the beleaguered shah might form a regency council to assume some of his powers, but this was denied by the official palace spokesman, Kambiz Yazdanpanah. He said under the 1906 constitution the shah would have to leave the country for such a council to be formed "and he has no plans to leave."

He also denied reports that Empress Farah and the rest of the shah's immediate family had left the country.

There were reports that the shah's mother had flown to the United States. Air Force Capt. Allan Littlehale at McGuire Air Force Base in New Jersey said, "We had an Imperial Iranian Air Force Boeing 747 land at McGuire Air Force Base at 4:30 this evening. It stayed about two hours for refueling and it departed. No one got on or off the plane. I cannot comment on who was aboard."

Base Given Notice

He said the base had more than a day's notice that the flight was coming. Littlehale declined to confirm or deny reports that the Shah's mother was aboard the flight and that it was en route to Los Angeles.

An official at Los Angeles International Airport said an Iranian plane landed there Friday night. He asked that his name not be used and said no other information would be made available.

There were earlier reports the shah might accept an advisory council that would assume most of his powers and leave the ruler primarily as a constitutional monarch.

The accounts denied by both Zahedi and Yazdanpanah stemmed from a dispatch in the Iranian government news agency PARS, dealing with the shah's request to an opposition political leader, Shapur Bakhtiar, to form a new government.

Military Rule Named

It would replace the military government appointed by the monarch in November to quell the bloody street riots that have taken at least 1,500 lives this year and stopped the vital flow of oil.

The PARS dispatch, which was a mimeographed statement not placed on the agency's news wire, quoted Bakhtiar as saying the shah had agreed to "step aside and allow a regency council to be formed to run affairs in his absence."

Zahedi said Bakhtiar had been misquoted and PARS had withdrawn the story, that had been embargoed for release sometime today.

Bakhtiar could not be contacted for comment. An aide who answered the telephone said Bakhtiar, a top leader of the opposition National Front, was asleep and he refused to wake him.

Judges Reject Griffin's Bid To Dismiss Cases

By BOB CAMPBELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

COUNTY courts-at-law judges late Friday afternoon refused to sign dismissal motions on almost 7,000 misdemeanor cases presented by Criminal District Attorney Alton Griffin in his last hour in office.

Judges E.H. Boedeker and J.Q. Warnick Jr. both said afterward that they may sign the motions next week after looking at the cases more carefully.

Griffin took the motions and cases listed by number and names of the defendants about 4 p.m. to Boedeker in County Court-at-Law No. 1 and Warnick in court No. 2.

"I was told it was automatic, and I said, 'Well, if it's automatic, there's no use in presenting it,'" Boedeker said.

"I won't sign anything without looking at it. Law enforcement has been working on those cases for years, and I don't feel I should dismiss them in a few minutes."

Warnick said he did not sign the motion because he "was not sure about all of it."

He said he will talk to incoming Criminal District Attorney John T. Montford about the cases next week.

Griffin said afterward he would have no comment other than the dismissal motion he presented with the cases — 3,408 to Boedeker and 3,410 to Warnick.

Asked if he thought the judges should have signed the motions Friday, Griffin said, "I don't think there's any question. The law says that they shall. That's all I've got to say."

The cases date back to 1971.

Griffin also presented some 200 felony cases for dismissal to the various district judges late this week. About 100 had been routinely signed by the judges, and the

U.S. Delegation Leaves Taiwan

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — Harassed U.S. envoys ended two days of talks with Taiwanese officials and hurriedly left for home Friday after President Chiang Ching-kuo told them he was "outraged" by President Carter's decision to recognize Peking and sever diplomatic relations with Taiwan.

Chiang, son of the late Nationalist leader

Chiang Kai-shek, told the Americans, led by Deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher, that future relations between Washington and Taipei must be both legal and governmental.

The U.S. delegation came here to discuss what the relationship between the two countries will be after Jan. 1 when diplomatic ties are officially severed. An American statement said the United States looks "forward to continuing these discussions here and in Washington in the coming weeks" but did not define the U.S. position on future relations.

In Washington, State Department Taiwanese desk officer Harvey Feldman told reporters the Christopher delegation left the island without announcing the departure time for security reasons.

Feldman said Taiwan's insistence on continuing relations on a government-to-government basis is one of several points of disagreement the countries will try to resolve in future weeks. He said while Taiwan has not renounced its claim to be the legal government of the mainland, its leaders have asked the United States to recognize the Taiwanese administration as the "de jure" or de facto authority as the government controlling Taiwanese territory.

He added the United States does not

Davis Denies Seeing Pictures Of 'Body'

HOUSTON (AP) — Cullen Davis denied Friday that an FBI informant has shown him pictures of what appeared to be the blood-stained "body" of a Fort Worth judge in an effort to prove the judge was dead.

Davis, under cross-examination in his murder solicitation trial, also said he never considered any of his conversations with David McCrory, his chief accuser, as "damning."

The staged pictures of Judge Joe Eidson, showing him crammed in the trunk of a car, his clothes smeared with catsup, are among the main pieces of prosecution evidence.

Davis is accused of attempting to hire a hit man to kill the judge and several other persons involved in his many legal entanglements. Eidson was the presiding judge in the bitter Davis divorce trial, but since has stepped down.

Davis will spend the New Year's weekend in the Harris County jail, after his defense attorneys decided to postpone filing an appeal for bond.

The hearing before Judge W.A. "Pete" Moore was set for Friday afternoon, but after 30 minutes of private discussions, the judge ended the hearing saying only "Happy New Year to you all."

Defense attorney Phil Burleson told newsmen "there is a further need for research on a new question that has arisen. The timing as to the filing of the motion is some-

Dazed Passengers Describe Air Disaster Survival

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — First there was darkness, then an eerie silence as a United Airlines DC-8 jetliner lost power moments before crashing in a densely populated neighborhood, killing 10 of the 185 persons on board, investigators and survivors said Friday.

The plane cut a swath through power lines and trees, flattening two unoccupied houses before nosediving into a thick grove of fir trees three miles southeast of Portland International Airport at 6:14 p.m. Thursday.

"The stewardess said 'grab your ankles,' and there was a long moment of silence, then impact," said passenger Henry Germond, of suburban Lake Oswego. It was a clear, but freezing cold, evening. Although the wreckage was seen, persons were arrested for trespassing at the crash site, and attempts at looting also were reported.

Elwood T. Driver, head of a National Transportation Safety Board team at the scene Friday, said all persons aboard the plane had been accounted for.

He said the jet may have run low on fuel or lost its electrical system.

"There is some information on the tape that he (the pilot) had some fuel," Driver said of the pilot's taped transmissions. But he added, "It is reasonable to assume that one of the causes could be lack of fuel."

A United Airlines official said the pilot had circled the airport for about half an hour while talking with maintenance workers in San Francisco about a malfunctioning landing gear.

Some investigators speculated the pilot also may have been trying to burn excess fuel to avoid a fire in case of a crash landing.

Two crew members died in the crash of Flight 173 from New York and Denver. Three of the remaining eight victims were children.

Early indications were that most of the dead were sitting in the front section, which suffered the heaviest damage.

United spokesman Tom Germuska said 51 persons were treated and released at area hospitals. At least 18 others remained hospitalized, four in serious condition and one critical.

Among those reported by officials alive but missing was Kim E. Campbell, an escaped prisoner being brought back to the Oregon State Penitentiary. Before he disappeared, he helped passengers get out of the airplane.

Capt. Roger Seed, who was escorting Campbell, said on Friday: "I jumped to the ground, about seven to eight feet, and he stood in the door and handed passengers down to me. When they stopped coming out, he helped me back into the plane and we did a quick check to see if anyone else was left."

Seed said Campbell later slipped away. "I think the people were very, very fortunate," Driver said. "I think it (the death toll) should have been much higher."

The front portion of the jetliner, including the cockpit and the first few rows of passenger seats, was ripped from the fuselage and wound up twisted beneath the almost-intact body of the plane.

Driver said the pilot, Malburn McBroom, 52, of Loveland, Colo., radioed the control tower that the light indicating the landing gear had lowered properly had failed to light.

Two flight recorders were removed from the cockpit Friday and sent to Washington, D.C., for analysis, he said.

"Mayday, mayday. The engines are flaming out. We're going down. We're not going to make the airport," the pilot told the tower in his last transmission which was recorded by a ham radio operator. McBroom was reported in good condition Friday at Gresham Community Hospital.

"They really briefed us well," said Amie Conner, 17, of Holden Village, Wash., one of the survivors. "They told us what might happen. They braced us for the worst."

Power lines ripped from their poles were strewn around the crash site. Wall Porter, fire battalion chief, said it was "incredible" that the survivors were not electrocuted. Electrical service to about 7,000 customers was cut off for about two hours.

Worse Disaster Averted By Chance

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Survivors, witnesses and rescuers marveled Friday at the string of coincidences that saved the lives of most of the 185 persons aboard a United Airlines DC-8 that crashed in a densely populated residential neighborhood.

"It was really a lot of luck," said Neil Heesacker of Multnomah County Fire District 10. "It's just really a blessing that this turned out the way it did."

Ten of the 185 people aboard the DC-8 were killed and 18 were hospitalized. An additional 51 were treated and released. And no one on the ground was hurt.

Here are some of the factors cited by survivors, rescuers and witnesses as preventing the loss of many more lives:

•Both houses flattened by the plane were vacant. One family had moved out last week; the other had left two weeks ago. The plane missed a house with a 22-year-old woman and her 2-year-old daughter inside by about 30 feet.

•Dozens of high-voltage wires were scattered over the ground around the plane when the dazed passengers scrambled from the craft, but no one was electrocuted.

•Although its tail section was touching a live wire, the plane did not catch fire, possibly because it had only a small amount of fuel on board. The DC-8 uses a kerosene-mixture fuel that is much less volatile than most other jet fuels, and the sub-freezing temperatures also helped prevent an explosion or fire.

•A grove of large fir trees sheared off both wings and prevented it from plowing through several more blocks of the neighborhood.

•The plane went down in about the only spot in the area where it would not have hit an occupied home. There are at least five apartment house complexes within three blocks of the crash site.

•Burnside Street is a busy thoroughfare and is normally packed with traffic at 6:14 p.m., when the crash occurred. But there were no cars in the area when the plane crashed through it.

Wall Porter, battalion chief for Fire District 10, said it was amazing that the people who escaped the craft did not touch any of the downed wires.

"But then a lot of things about this are incredible," he said. Fire Chief Richard Ham was among the first to arrive with an engine crew responding to a reported power outage in the area. The firefighters didn't know a plane had crashed until they reached the scene.

Ham said he found a crowd of people standing amid the debris on Burnside, and he thought they were neighbors. They turned out to be passengers who had calmly walked away from the wreckage.

TI officials notified city officials in Carlsbad, Clovis and Hobbs in April that it wanted to suspend service to the three cities because revenue and boardings were not sufficient.

On Dec. 21, the Civil Aeronautics Board in Washington said that if a suitable replacement service could be obtained then TI could pull out of the communities.

Earlier, the CAB also said that Air Midwest, Zia Airlines and Crown Air could all serve the cities on a non-subsidy experimental basis.

County Commissioners Appoint Agriculture Extension Agent

Lubbock County commissioners appointed a new county extension agent for agriculture and completed interviews for the position of Justice of the Peace, Pct. 5, at their Friday morning meeting.

Randy Upshaw was appointed as the new county extension agent for agriculture by county commissioners.

Formerly Borden County extension agent, Upshaw, 29, will transfer to Lubbock in February.

Upshaw will succeed Kenneth D. Cook, who has been Lubbock county extension agent since 1974. Cook will assume duties Jan. 1 as the new district agricultural agent for Extension District 7 in San Angelo.

Upshaw, son of Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Upshaw, was born in Rotan, and received a B.S. in agriculture education in 1971 and an M.E. degree in 1973 from Texas Tech University.

At Texas Tech he was active in the rodeo club and intercollegiate FFA.

He taught vocational agriculture for two years at Idalou High School. In June 1974 he was appointed assistant county extension agent in Swisher County and served there for 2½ years. Later he worked for International Harvester Co. for a year before being named Borden extension agent in December 1977.

In other business, the commissioners completed interviews for the newly created position of Justice of the Peace, Precinct 5, and indicated Melvin Powers, 51, will be appointed upon his resignation as secretary of Wolforth's city council.

Powers, who was born and raised in Slaton, has lived in Wolforth for 4½ years and owns and operates a jewelry store there.

County engineer Arnold Maeker told commissioners that a newly installed gas pipe should correct the problem that caused fourth floor water damage to the county courthouse on Dec. 10 when a heating and cooling coil burst.

Maeker said workers will check this weekend to see if there are any further problems. He said computer damage should be repaired by next week.

Maeker added that he has been generally pleased with construction progress.

Toll Climbs In Collision Of Truck, Bus

A-J News Services

The death of Katherine Louise Wilkerson, 16, in an Abilene hospital Thursday night brought to five the number of persons fatally injured in the Dec. 8 collision of a McCaulley school bus and an oil field service truck near Roby.

Miss Wilkerson died at 6:15 p.m. in Hendricks Medical Center of injuries sustained in the accident, which also took the life of her 14-year-old sister, Rita Kay, and injured her brother, Michael, 15.

Miss Wilkerson suffered brain damage and never regained consciousness after the collision. She is survived by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Otis Sanders of McCaulley; two brothers, Michael and Kevin, 8, of the home; and her maternal grandmother in Oklahoma.

Services are pending with McCoy Funeral Home in Sweetwater.

The tragic crash also claimed the lives of Bonnie Gail Pippin, 17, Britt Jeffrey, 15, Lolita Perales, 17, all of the tiny town of McCaulley.

Injured in the accident were 17 students and two McCaulley school administrators on their way to a basketball tournament in Hermleigh, and the driver of the service truck, Bill Dixon, 21, of Snyder.

A Fisher County grand jury will decide next month whether to indict Dixon in the incident.

Five more lawsuits in connection with the incident were filed Thursday, making a total of 11 now pending against Dixon and his employer, Cardinal Surveys Co. of Odessa, which owned the truck.

Lubbock attorney John Maner made no stipulation of a dollar amount to be sought for damages, but said the figure would be "substantial."

One of the suits filed was on behalf of Norma Wilkerson Sanders, whose daughters, Katherine and Rita, died as a result of the crash.

The other suits Maner filed Thursday were on behalf of parents of six other McCaulley High School students who were either injured or killed in the accident on U.S. 180 near Roby.

Other suits have been brought on behalf of other parents whose children were injured or killed, and school superintendent Ed Farmer.

An Odessa attorney reportedly is seeking $3.56 million for the superintendent and six injured students. A Sweetwater attorney is seeking unspecified damages for the family of two students, one of whom was killed and the other injured.

Oil Giant On Shifting Sands

THE RECENT 14.5 percent boost in oil prices by the OPEC came as a shock to the Carter administration for a number of reasons.

There had been hopes, as well as numerous reports, that the oil producing nations, and particularly Saudi Arabia, would make an effort to hold the increase in the 10 percent or lower range.

Not only was it argued that any heavier boost would jeopardize the West's efforts to stave off a recession or worse, but in the case of Saudi Arabia would be a gesture in recognition of "favors" granted.

IN THIS INSTANCE, as several others in the Mideast and elsewhere in the world, the U.S. State Department and White House people made a major misjudgment.

Instead of gaining Saudi Arabian support where it counted for such things as the sale of advanced U.S. fighter planes and a hard-nosed stance against Israel, the Saudis followed a line they first revealed when the Camp David meeting ended.

It was to side with the rejectionist front of Arab states, not only against the Israeli-Egyptian peace talks, but the U.S. position on Palestinian participation and other Mideast problems.

But, the oil price switch caused the major consternation among top Carter aides.

ONE OF THE big pitches the President made when he was pushing the dual sale of top U.S. fighter planes to Israel, Egypt and Saudi Arabia was that such a move would pay off later.

President Carter once spoke of Saudi Arabia as a nation of "world importance" which has played a key role in keeping the economic balance.

As Joseph Kraft recently noted, the truth of the matter is that Saudi Arabia in some respects is anything but a strong nation, except as it exercises a heavy axe on the oil price front.

A nation with less than 8 million inhabitants, Saudi Arabia has a small armed force, mostly supplied and trained by the U.S., and problems in its leadership.

Many of the workers who run the sophisticated oil industry, from clerical work to the heavy labor, are imported from such places as the U.S., Egypt, Yemen, India, Pakistan, Taiwan and elsewhere.

THERE ARE those who charge that while King Khaled reigns in Saudi Arabia, Prince Fahd, the prime minister, rules.

But, instead of exerting a role as a leader of the rest of the Arab world, often Saudi Arabia comes off as seeking to avoid a leading position, instead playing a game of "follow the pack."

This, it is argued, makes the oil kingdom more a "giant with feet of clay," rather than a bulwark against friend and foe, the latter including the Communists.

As a result, what happens in Iran and other Persian Gulf states may well pose even more problems for Saudi Arabia and the U.S. in the weeks and months ahead.

ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK:

Silence Is Leadin

SEOUL—New misunderstandings adding to deterioration of the U.S.-Korean alliance, less flamboyant but profoundly more serious than the gaudy excesses of Koreagate, were unwittingly deepened by Secretary of Defense Harold Brown's visit here last month.

Neither Brown nor President Park Chung Hee said one word about President Carter's plan to remove all U.S. combat troops from South Korea by 1982.

That led many wishful-thinking Koreans, including some at high levels, to the false conclusion that Carter had changed the deadline. The silence also led to an equally incorrect assumption by U.S. officials that Park is now content with the troop withdrawal.

Nothing could be less true. The alliance, sealed in blood a generation ago, has survived Koreagate and human rights crises only to founder on its essential keystone of security.

Korean policymakers question Washington's commitment to their country's defense and are gloomy about long-term U.S. willingness to counter growing Soviet power in the Western Pacific.

As we reported in an earlier column from here, South Korea's military high command believes the 2nd Infantry Division's departure over the next three years may so weaken credibility of the U.S. commitment that Marshal Kim Il Sung's Communist legions will be tempted to invade (a fear widely shared by the U.S. military).

THIS KOREAN distress derives not only from the troop withdrawal decision but from the way the decision was made.

Korean officials still retell the story of the newly elected Jimmy Carter going on television in March 1977 to announce the troop pullout without consulting Seoul.

"Now, can you possibly imagine him treating the Germans that way?" a senior general asked us.

Since U.S. officials are hard put in private conversation to advance any valid reasons for moving out the 2nd Division, Korean leaders conclude Carter acted strictly for domestic political considerations.

Because they cannot imagine that ultimately he would endanger Northeast Asia's security so frivolously, these Koreans have come to believe—with no basis in fact—that delays in troop withdrawals will continue well beyond 1982.

BELIEF THAT such a delay has already been decided is rampant from the coffee houses of Seoul to the upper reaches of the Ministry of National Defense.

But it does not extend to the Blue House, the presidential palace. President Park is well aware that Secretary Brown, while pouring out reassurances here about the U.S. commitment, said nothing about the 1982 deadline.

That Park himself did not bring up the matter was misinterpreted by U.S. officials as signifying he finally is comfortable with it.

Rather, he was merely following his own command secretly distributed to Korean generals: do not beg the Americans to stay; that would signal weakness to Kim Il Sung in the north, with possibly fatal consequences.

THE CARTER administration has made clear that Korea is too important to be subjected to a raid by Patricia Derian, Assistant Secretary of State for Human Rights.

Her absence is second among favorable developments in U.S.-Korean relations only to the defeat for the Senate of Rep. Donald Fraser of Minnesota, the human rights scourge of the Park regime. The catchword here is that Fraser's defeat was equivalent to sending one infantry division to Korea.

But it wasn't really, of course. Increased U.S. maturity about human rights cannot erase worries in the Blue House about declining U.S. power, particularly in the naval balance against the Soviet Union.

Furthermore, Koreans ask themselves this question: if Congress considered cutting vital military ties with South Korea because of Koreagate, what constancy can be expected from Washington?

SUCH DIMINISHED faith leads to the unspoken and unspeakable: the nuclear option. Although South Korea has abandoned development of nuclear weapons at U.S. urgings, it has the technology to resume that deadly course if need be.

It would be supremely ironic if Jimmy Carter should sabotage his own crusade against nuclear proliferation by insisting on removing 17,000 combat soldiers, thereby undermining Seoul's confidence in the reliability of the U.S. nuclear umbrella.

Fill My Cup Up

WASHINGTON—With New Year's Eve and its traditional bibulousness close on the heels of the usual convivial Christmas period, it seems timely to share comments from readers about official Washington's drinking habits.

The conclusion reached by a big majority of these correspondents is that the high cost of living is caused by barons of the national bureaucracy who look too often upon the wine when it is red.

"There are too many drunks in Washington—in Congress and every other public building," writes one reader.

Another asks if it is true that "all those people in the White House and Congress get drunk at lunch every day and so are incapable of dealing with inflation."

THE FIRST comment is a stumper. How many drunks are there in a given community?

The second can be answered with a resounding negative. Of course "all those people" don't get drunk at lunch every day.

I have made no scientific count of noses equipped with stop lights, but I can see and hear and I doubt that more than a small majority of really important officials so much as sip a sherry at lunch.

As for getting boiled during the noonday meal, most of them wouldn't dare; there's too much work to be done in the afternoon.

However, this is not to deny that there's a lot of boozing among public men and women in Washington. I expect the capital's per capita consumption of popskull is right up there with New York City's and San Francisco's.

But we tend to forget that Washington is a cross-section of America.

If a man is a drunk back home, he'll be a drunk in Washington.

Some even go alcoholic. But politicians are creatures of habit, too.

Besides, members of Congress and Cabinet members have a high visibility. God help the politician who's stopped at the wheel of his car by a cop who smells hooch on his breath. It's Page 1 tomorrow.

"I SKIP MOST of the parties I'm invited to," says one Midwestern senator. "And when I do go out, I drink only ginger ale. It looks like liquor, so I don't hurt any feelings among hosts and hostesses."

"But one night when I had one Martini, a gossip columnist reported that I was lapping up the sauce."

There are, of course, governmental nobles who booze it up, some of them to the point where they are incapacitated by four o'clock in the afternoon. Those jaspers need help. But they are conspicuous because there are so few of them.

No, inflation is not produced by heavy drinking in Washington, but by people who aren't very bright. They simply don't know what to do about it.

And that is their disgrace, because they're paid to come up with the answers.

AN EDITORIAL:

Untangling The Utility Mess

UNBELIEVABLE as it might sound, the last Legislature actually did create some doubt as to whether a municipally owned utility has a right to extend lines into newly annexed areas without getting an okay from the state bureaucracy.

Correction of this fault needs to be accomplished by the Legislature early in its new session.

Lubbock Power and Light, plus electric utilities in about 40 other Texas cities and towns, will be in a straitjacket if the Public Utility Commission can bar any extension of service.

LP&L OPERATES only within the city limits of Lubbock. To bar it from growing with the city would be a disservice to the public and a violation of local rights.

For decades, LP&L and Southwestern Public Service Co. both have served the city. Historically, this has resulted in lower rates and better service for the consumer while both companies have operated profitably.

Yet, in the name of eliminating duplication—which is a polite way of saying eliminating competition—and ostensibly of lowering electric rates, the PUC now claims to have authority to award outlying areas to the South Plains Electric Co-op and to bar either LP&L or SWPS from expanding into those areas as the city grows.

The City Council is correctly indignant over this attempt at abuse of bureaucratic power. It is asking the Legislature to "clarify and amend the utility regulatory act" to clearly exempt municipally owned utilities from state regulation of this type.

Currently, LP&L is barred by court order secured by the co-op from extending service into an area that was annexed about two years ago. The court held that, under the existing legislation, the City must request and receive PUC permission to extend service.

SWPS also has been denied permission to serve newly annexed areas. Both it and LP & L have appealed the cases but legislative remedy is a better course.

Having unwisely created the problem, the Legislature should be wise enough to undo the damage.

M. STANTON EVANS:

'Imperial Presidency' Due Royal Challenge

WASHINGTON—It seems like only yesterday that leading spokesmen of media, academy and government were explaining the evils of "the imperial Presidency."

In the wake of the Watergate debacle, numerous authorities deplored the growth of presidential power, especially in the realm of foreign affairs.

It was "the arrogance of power" and "executive usurpation" that allegedly led us to Watergate and the quagmire of Vietnam.

The supposed lesson was that never again would Congress permit its rightful powers to be absorbed into the executive vortex.

That, however, was when Richard Nixon was President and the issues up for discussion were Watergate and Vietnam.

NOW THAT the focus has shifted to President Carter and the severing of our relationship with Nationalist China, those earlier warnings are barely audible.

For some reason, the people who denounced the overweening executive a couple of years ago are back to supporting the President's power to make our foreign policy as he pleases—without permitting the Senate to exercise its historic right of making and abridging treaties.

As part of its policy of accommodation with the Communists the Carter regime is trying to renounce the 1954 Mutual Defense Treaty with the Republic of China on Taiwan.

The President and the State Department contend that the executive alone can dissolve the treaty, simply by telling the Free Chinese that we intend to terminate it after one year's notice—as provided in the treaty itself.

THE TREATY, however, doesn't vest this power in the President. It says that "either party may terminate it one year after notice has been given to the other party."

The office gentleman says, "My wife always helps me choose my clothes, and ten years later she won't let me wear them."

And, of course, the "parties" to the treaty are not Free China and the President, but Free China and the government of the United States, functioning through its constitutional processes.

That means, according to our fundamental law, the President and two-thirds of the U.S. Senate.

The treaty can be unmade, that is, only by the parties who made it in the first place.

This common sense reading is fully supported by the historical record, as reviewed by Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., in an excellent monograph entitled "China and the Abrogation of Treaties" (Heritage Foundation).

GOLDWATER SHOWS that historical precedent in this area strongly supports the right of the Congress to participate in any decision to renounce a treaty, and that recent claims to the contrary are based directly on "the imperial Presidency" syndrome dating from the New Deal on.

Goldwater points out that there have been more than 40 instances in which Congress has taken part in the termination of treaties, several cases in which executive efforts to terminate by unilateral action have been repudiated, and only a handful of instances—mostly dating from the era of World War II—in which executive renunciation has been accepted, usually because external circumstances made fulfillment of the treaty's terms impossible.

NOWHERE ON record, Goldwater concludes, is there a case of Presidents having unilaterally broken a treaty with a friendly power, in the absence of any treaty violation by that power, simply because the President and his advisors decided this was the expedient thing to do.

What President Carter proposes, therefore, is an action outside the Constitution, which Goldwater and other members of Congress have moved to challenge in the courts and legislative chambers.

All true opponents of "the imperial Presidency" will wish them well in that endeavor.

VIRGINIA PAYETTE:

Ring In The Old

THE LIVING ROOM is knee-high with crumpled wrappings, the stockings are looking strangely limp and the gift I was really hoping for this year wasn't under the tree.

(No, not the emerald earrings. I don't ever expect to get those; I just mention 'em every year to keep Old Dad nervous.)

What I wanted wasn't something he could provide. Nor even Santa. This one had to come from Jimmy Carter.

What it was, not to keep you in suspense, was for him to please, just for the rest of the holiday season, stop yammering about his blasted budget—and how he's going to get it balanced by 1980.

With the Christmas bills due any day now, all this talk about deficit spending is making me uncomfortable. A little sympathetic silence would help a lot here.

But that was too much to ask for, I guess, because when I waded through the toys and smushed up candy canes to the morning paper, there it was: another budget story.

ALL ABOUT HOW the White House is going to "slash federal waste," get the deficit below $30 billion, cut the billions lost in fraud, etc. (And a ho-ho-ho to you, too.)

What's so great about a balanced budget, anyway? All it means is that whatever the government spends is equal to what it takes in. And the quickest way to increase what it takes in is (you guessed it) to increase taxes.

There is another way, of course. The government could stop spending so much, but Congress is notorious for resisting that idea.

Money lavished on "social programs," welfare, unemployment gadgetry and public works buys votes—and getting re-elected is the No. 1 goal of the boys on the Hill.

But President Carter is doing a lot of talking these days about putting a crimp in the way they fling our tax dollars around. His big deal is not to get us into the black, but to juggle the figures around so we appear not to be so deep in the red.

I DON'T KNOW about the rest of the taxpayers, but I'm getting pretty weary of his daily budget bulletins, especially when even those who still believe in Santa Claus have stopped believing in Carter's ideas of how to save money.

It reminds me, as I contemplate the wreckage of paper and ribbon on my home turf, of all those great resolutions we made to "be sensible" about Christmas spending this year. And how similar the Payette budget is to the federal one.

The President talks about "huge slashes" in government spending. Then he agrees to give the Pentagon an extra couple of million, and another bunch of billions to Israel and Egypt so they can afford to stop shooting at each other, etc., etc.

We talked about slashing the toy budget, too. And yet the pile of dolls, games, books and model horses are piled as high as this year.

He vows to set up "more careful controls over disbursements." Old Dad tried that, too.

BUT THEN THE flood in the upstairs bath ruined the new paint job in the room below, the electric stove in the kitchen exploded and last weekend's gale winds smashed the new storm door to the terrace.

President Carter promises to speed up all government deposits because banking checks early increases interest payments. I bank all incoming checks fast, too, except that I do it to keep the outgoing ones from bouncing.

He figures he can save up to $6 billion by cleaning up government fraud (and lots of luck to him) and $94 million by making official paperwork more efficient. Just like I vow to keep my checkbook math up-to-date and out of "insufficient funds" territory. That lasts about a week.

He keeps telling us he's going to get the deficit below $30 billion by 1980. I'll be lucky to get my Christmas deficit cleared up by Valentine's Day. (Judging by the credit card slips, Easter looks more likely.)

LET'S FACE IT: The federal budget's in the same dismal shape as everybody else's.

It has commitments it's mighty unlikely to cut back on, like Social Security ($103 billion), aid to the blind, disabled and needy ($5.5 billion), military, civil service and railroad pensions ($27 billion), unemployment payments ($12 billion) and government salaries ($54 billion).

That's on top of foreign aid, federal aid to state and local governments, health programs like Medicare and Medicaid, and aid to dependent children, to rattle off just a few.

Then there are the locked-in payments on the national debt, which is now officially heading for a trillion dollars. On an honest accounting basis, we are on the books for $7.5 trillion, or maybe $9 trillion. That's 10 digits, folks, and it works out to at least $113,000 for every taxpayer.

A LOT OF us are beginning to get the idea that not only will the federal budget never be in the black again, but that there's no way we and our children and our children's children will ever get the national debt paid off, either.

And that's not exactly the kind of thing you want to dwell on as you sip your yuletide eggnog. Better Carter should sing "God rest ye merry, gentlemen; let nothing you dismay" and concede that he's put off worrying about the bills till next year—along with the rest of us big spenders.

L.M. BOYD:

...Pass It On

THERE WAS a time during the 1600s in Dubrovnik, Yugoslavia, when it was against the law for people who lived in wooden houses to drink wine. A fire after an earthquake had just about knocked out the city.

The ordinance-makers thought they could eliminate future fires by eliminating wooden houses. They were pretty sure that the prohibition against wine would do the trick.

In the British military, any soldier is known as Tommy. And sailor is called a Jack. And any airman is referred to as a George.

Q. "Didn't San Francisco and Santa Fe start out with the same name?"

A. Not exactly. Santa Fe used to be La Villa Real de la Santa Fe de San Francisco de Asis (The Royal City of the Holy Faith of Saint Francis of Assisi).

San Francisco used to be Puerto de San Francisco (Port of Saint Francis) and then after a few variations, El Paraje de Yerbe Buena (The Little Valley of the Good Herb).

TYC Member Blames Judge For Council Laxness

By JACK DOUGLAS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The Texas Youth Council is not efficiently doing its job of rehabilitating juvenile delinquents and a federal judge is mainly to blame, says a five-year member of the TYC board.

Among other things, TYC needs to reinstate maximum security at some of its institutions, according to Don Workman, a TYC board member and president and general manager of a Lubbock radio station. "That means behind bars for serious violators," he said.

Local judges hearing juvenile cases should be given the right to set sentences, whether it be one or 25 years, says Workman. The average stay now at a TYC training center for a youth found delinquent is between six months and a year. Then the juvenile is placed on parole, put in the custody of his parents or sent to a rehabilitation home.

Whatever action is taken, police feel juvenile delinquents are back on the streets too soon after being declared delinquent. And juvenile police detectives accuse the TYC facilities of being too lenient toward its residents, comparing them more to a soft, college environment than places where young people who commit serious offenses are taught a lesson.

Workman said that about two years ago a 16-year-old Lubbock youth was committed to TYC, but was free within six months. After returning to Lubbock, Workman said, the boy picked up a girl at a high school dance and raped her.

"Juvenile laws have been set up to benefit the offenders, and I think it's about time to set it up to protect society and the victims," Workman said.

According to Workman, the walls of juvenile justice crumbled in 1973 when a federal judge in Tyler, William Wayne Justice, ruling in the case of Morales vs. Thurman, said Texas was subjecting juveniles to unusual and cruel punishment by institutionalizing them.

Judge Justice ordered the immediate closing of three TYC institutions and the phasing out of the council's other institutions within a five-year period.

However, Workman said the state took the case to the Supreme Court and it was determined that one federal judge does not have that much power over a state. A new trial before a panel of three federal judges is in the making and Workman said he expects it to be held sometime in 1979.

"But we have been under his (Judge Justice's) court order ever since," Workman said, adding that he feels the three-judge panel will strike down the 1973 ruling.

Workman said he feels TYC should set up a system of regional detention centers, like the one being established in Lubbock, to deal with non-serious violators on a local basis. Serious offenders, such as those who are found involved in murder, rape, robbery or assault with a deadly weapon, should be sentenced by a juvenile judge to state institutions, he said.

"If a juvenile is sentenced to 25 years, I think that should be up to the judge and jury," Workman said.

Lubbock County District Attorney-elect John Montford said he feels he will be able to work effectively within the boundaries of the law in handling juvenile cases, and told of improvements he said he will make once he takes office next week.

The major change, he said, will be rapid processing of juvenile cases by the DA's office. "I plan to get the cases filed as soon as they get to the office. That way, the young person knows if he commits an infraction of the law, he will be held accountable for it promptly," Montford said.

The assignment of an experienced juvenile prosecutor is another objective of Montford's. Police juvenile Capt. Bill Cox is one of several persons who have said they feel past practice by the district attorney has been to assign the least experienced person on the staff to the juvenile prosecutor's spot, then move them to another position once they have gained experience.

The DA-elect said he will maintain a "daily liaison" with the Lubbock County Juvenile Probation Office, review on a monthly basis the juvenile petitions filed with his office, "and beef up efforts where they are needed."

Montford said, "You have to work with the young people and not against them ... weigh all the factors. If a case is properly worked, and we're a little more stern in those cases that need it, the law is equipped sufficiently."

According to Workman, one of the biggest mistakes was made when the Texas Legislature ruled that youths adjudicated as truants could no longer be mixed with juveniles found by courts to be delinquent. Therefore, truants began going to West Texas Childrens Home in Pyote which formerly housed only dependent and neglected (D&N) children. The latter are youngsters, aged 3 through 18, who in many cases were guilty of nothing, but were without a home or family. Workman said placing a rougher breed under the same roof with children who had done nothing wrong has resulted in a volatile atmosphere at the TYC facility in Pyote and the personnel there are not trained to work with the truants.

Bob McCuiston, who was a house parent at West Texas Childrens Home about two years ago, said he saw a "complete lack of discipline" at the TYC home. "I saw riot-like conditions where there was one house parent per 20 kids. I saw sexual abuse between the kids. They were free to roam from one dorm to another at night," he said.

McCuiston, now with a local television station, said that when staffers attempted to investigate reports of offenses such as arson or rape at the home, they were blocked by TYC administrators. "We were threatened with being fired for not going through proper channels ... we were always blocked at the administrative level," he said.

McCuiston said if a house parent attempted to enforce discipline when a youth became rowdy, "we could be charged with child abuse and fired." He said as many as 16 children escaped at one time from the West Texas Childrens Home while he worked there.

"I had gone as far as I could to change the conditions there," McCuiston said. "It was obvious I could no longer help. I had to remove myself."

Don Shepard, superintendent at West Texas Childrens Home, discounts McCuiston's allegations.

"We have all the controls that are necessary," Shepard said. He said there were no major problems with truants and D&N children staying together at the home. He added, however, "Anytime you bring a large group of young people in you may have a disturbance. This happened about four years ago, but I wasn't here."

Asked if employees at the home were threatened with termination if they talked to the media, Shepard said there is a TYC policy that employees must go through channels before they can talk to the press.

"Some went through the outside media (without going through proper channels) and they were talked to about it."

Expert Claims Second Kennedy Gunman Likely

WASHINGTON (AP) — Acoustical experts testified Friday it is better than 95 percent certain that a second gunman fired at John F. Kennedy from the famed grassy knoll in Dallas when the former president was assassinated in 1963. The witnesses, Mark Weiss and Ernest Aschkenasy, told the House assassinations committee they fixed the second gunman's position behind a concrete wall to the right and front of the Kennedy motorcade. It was the same vicinity pictured in a photograph in the committee's possession which shows a blurred shape that conspiracy theorists think is a rifleman.

Weiss said the sound waves he studied were those of a rifle shot fired in the general direction of Kennedy's limousine from a distance of 110 feet. Weiss said he could not tell even generally where the bullet hit.

"It appears that with a probability of 95 percent or better, there was indeed a shot fired from the grassy knoll," Weiss testified.

He said he studied only that alleged shot from the grassy knoll, and that he agrees with earlier scientific findings by the committee and the Warren Commission that three other shots were fired from a sixth-floor window in a building behind Kennedy's limousine.

The earlier scientific evidence supports the Warren Commission's conclusion that Lee Harvey Oswald fired three shots at Kennedy Nov. 22, 1963, and only one missed.

Rep. Louis Stokes, D-Ohio, told Weiss his testimony will have an enormous impact on history because it raises "a legal assumption of the possibility of a conspiracy." He asked Weiss if he was sure of his findings.

"If I were a legal man I guess I would have to say that (95 percent) is beyond a reasonable doubt," Weiss replied.

He said 10 sound waves out of 12 on a tape recording of a Dallas motorcycle policeman's radio transmissions during the assassination match show a test rifle fired at the scene last August.

Weiss said the mathematical odds of any sound other than a rifle shot matching a rifle shot that closely is less than 5 percent.

Weiss, a computer science professor at Queens College, New York City, and Aschkenasy, his assistant and a research associate at Queens College, said they fixed the alleged rifleman's position about eight feet from the corner of a concrete wall on the grassy knoll.

Committee photo experts said in September that sophisticated enhancement of a photograph shows what might be a man near the corner of the wall. They said they could not tell whether a long shape in the picture is even an object, much less a rifle.

The committee's chief counsel, G. Robert Blakey, has said scientific evidence indicates that if there was a second rifleman, he missed Kennedy's car entirely.

But Blakey said 21 witnesses to Kennedy's assassination thought shots came from the grassy knoll, compared to 49 who thought the shots came from the building window where Oswald's rifle was found.

Blakey said one witness testified he saw a puff of smoke at the same time he heard a shot from the grassy knoll. He said five other witnesses including a policeman testified with some detail that they thought the shots came from the knoll.

"But the fact remains that no one gives credible testimony that he saw anyone with a rifle around the fence at the time of the assassination," Blakey said.

Committee members grilled Weiss and Aschkenasy on how they could be so sure their findings are reliable, but no committee member challenged the findings.

"Everyone knows sound plays tricks on our ears," Rep. Richardson Preyer, D-N.C., said. "What is the possibility of a backfire making this sort of wave spikes?"

"If there was a motorcycle backfiring, it was up there behind the stockade fence (behind the concrete wall) of Dealey Plaza," Weiss said.

A former motorcycle policeman, H.B. McLain, testified his radio could have had the stuck microphone that produced the tape recording of the assassination but he is not sure.

Asked if that was possible, McLain replied "It had been (stuck) before."

"How many times," he was asked. "I'm scared to say," McLain replied.

McLain's testimony during the assassination match shows a test rifle fired at the scene last August.

Veteran Pastor To Fill Interim Post As Westmont Christian Church Pastor

Dr. Dudley Strain, who retired as pastor of First Christian Church in 1976, will serve as interim minister at Westmont Christian Church located at 4908 Utica.

Dr. Strain has been serving as interim minister at Westmont since Sept. 1 following the resignation of Victor Sedinger as minister.

Dr. Strain will begin his work at Westmont Jan. 1 "on a part-time basis for an indefinite period." He will continue as Minister Emeritus at First Christian Church.

"My own feeling is that the church is strategically located in the southwest part of Lubbock," said Dr. Strain. "It has adequate grounds and an adequate building at the present time. They're a fine group of people, and I hope to help the church grow in the direction it was pointed when it was established 19 years ago."

Asked why he decided to come out of retirement from ministerial activities, Dr. Strain said, "It's just the fact that I see a need here and I feel that I can fill this need. I felt challenged by that need."

"I'm making the move with the approval of the area office and my own minister at First Christian Church," continued Dr. Strain.

The new Westmont minister also announced the selection of Clay Henderson, art instructor at Coronado High School, as the new chairman of the board at Westmont. Dr. Strain said the church will continue its search for a youth director or associate minister.

Dr. Strain currently works in public relations at Lubbock National Bank where he began after retiring from First Christian in 1976. He said he will continue his work at the bank.

He is known for his ministry and involvement in civic affairs. He is presently head of the Awareness Committee of the Chamber of Commerce, and he is a member of the Lubbock committee on alcoholism and the alcohol and drugs committee of the South Plains Association of Governments (SPAG).

He is also on a committee for the Lubbock Society for Crippled Children, the Easter Seals committee and the local Muscular Dystrophy committee.

In addition to his community activities, Dr. Strain has been serving as interim minister for the Plainview First Christian and Slaton First Christian churches.

BIRDS, BIRDS, AND MORE BIRDS — It's not exactly comparable to the swallows returning to Capistrano, but Lubbock has been having a visitation from blackbirds, cowbirds, grackles and other such feathered varieties lately. The birds have been flocking from area fields and feed lots to roost at the microwave tower of Southwestern Bell on calm, fair-weathered evenings throughout November and December. Experts say the birds will begin nesting in the spring and discontinue their roosting practices in downtown Lubbock. (Staff Photo by Milton Adams)

Judge's Ruling Rescues Xerox From Heavy Antitrust Payment

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — A federal district judge has ruled Xerox Corp. cannot be forced to pay antitrust damages to SCM Corp. despite Xerox' 10-year domination of the plain-paper copying industry.

In a decision released Friday, U.S. District Judge Jon O. Newman ruled Xerox is not liable for the $37.3 million in damages a jury said SCM lost because of the Xerox monopoly. The award would have been tripled to nearly $112 million had it been upheld.

The ruling follows one of the most complex and costly antitrust trials on record and seeks to define more clearly the hazy area between antitrust and patent law.

SCM harshly criticized the decision and promised an appeal.

The 102-page decision was filed Friday afternoon, more than four months after a nine-member jury made the last of its rulings and was discharged.

SCM had claimed in a suit first filed in 1973 that it was owed more than $500 million in damages because Xerox illegally dominated the plain-paper copying industry and was guilty of a number of federal antitrust violations.

The damages would have been trebled under federal antitrust law to more than $1.5 billion.

The key to Newman's ruling is that the only injury SCM suffered was Xerox's refusal to grant patent licenses for making a plain-paper office copier. Newman ruled that factor could prompt changes in how patent licenses are granted in the future, but doesn't mean SCM should get trebled antitrust damages in the case.

Newman said the prospect of paying potential competitors three times the profits they would have earned if they had been given patent licenses would "pose a grave threat to achieving the objects of the patent laws."

"There would be either fewer inventions or, at least, less public disclosure of inventions or both," Newman wrote.

The crux of the decision is Newman's contention that Xerox, which held patents on the plain-paper copier, can't be forced to pay antitrust damages solely because it didn't grant a competitor a patent license.

SCM General Counsel Richard Sexton said Friday the company is "appalled" at Newman's ruling, adding that it "undercuts the jury system and the congressional policy expressed in the antitrust laws."

SCM also had charged that certain Xerox marketing techniques were illegal and that agreements with foreign companies blocked competition in the lucrative plain-paper copying field.

SCM is a New York-based conglomerate which makes Smith-Corona typewriters, Glidden paints and Durkee foods with sales last year of about $1.4 billion. Xerox, based in Stamford, Conn., had sales of $5 billion last year.

Xerox developed the first plain-paper copier in 1960 and was without competition in the field until IBM began marketing its own plain-paper copier in 1970. Competitors used a copying process using coated papers, a factor SCM claimed caused it to lose millions of dollars in business and profits.

The case, which stretched over more than 215 days in court, filled 46,000 pages of transcripts and is one of the most costly and ambitious antitrust cases ever waged between two private companies.

SCM has estimated the case has cost the company $20 million since it was filed in 1973. Xerox has offered no estimate of its legal fees, but both sides moved teams of lawyers into Hartford during the trial and opened temporary offices while the case continued.

The bulk of SCM's money claims disappeared when the jury ruled out its 1964 exclusion claim, but jury decisions left intact SCM's 1969 exclusion claim.

The nine-member jury had awarded SCM a total of $11.5 million in damages for lost profits between 1969 and 1976, another $25.6 million for the "going concern value" SCM's plain-paper copier business would have had and $230,000 for Xerox marketing techniques.

In reaching its decisions, the jury said SCM suffered losses of $37.3 million because of its exclusion from the market, but it was up to Newman to make rulings on the validity of SCM's legal arguments.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By BILL DOYLE

Q. In 1965, we purchased 250 shares of stock in an insurance company, at $2 a share. After several mergers and not one single dividend all these years, we were notified that we had to either purchase more stock or cash in our stock at the current price.

We cashed in and received $75 for our $500 investment. Can we claim this $425 loss on our tax return? Will we need any special forms?

A. Yes, you can take that $425 as a long-term capital loss. You do that on Schedule D of the federal income tax forms. That schedule comes to most taxpayers in their "Form 1040 packages" by mail early in the year.

The mailbag shows that some readers have difficulty with Schedule D. It should present no problems, if you follow the instructions — listing the number of shares and name of the stock, the date purchased, the date sold, the sale price, the purchase price and your loss.

Then, by following the rest of the Schedule D instructions, you use half of your long-term loss — $212.50, in your case — to reduce your taxable income, thereby reducing the taxes you pay.

I'm a bit confused by your statement that you had to either purchase more stock or cash in your stock. Except in extreme circumstances, you can't be forced to sell. Some states do allow a controlling stockholder who owns the vast majority — say, 90 to 95 percent — of a company's shares to buy out the remaining shares. That might have happened, as a result of the latest merger you mentioned.

But the alternative you say you were given — of buying more stock — is a queer one. I never heard of anything such as that. And neither have any of the sources I check with on matters such as these.

Q. I would like to know who gets paid first when a company goes out of business. A typical company might have first mortgage bonds, senior debentures, subordinated debentures, notes, bank loans, preferred stock, common stock, etc. Who gets paid first? What is the descending order, after that?

A. Normally, the people to whom the company owes "current liabilities" — debts due within one year — will be paid first. These include suppliers, taxes, etc.

Then, the company's "capital structure" will determine how the other debt securities — bonds, debentures, notes and such — are to be paid. At the time each debt security is issued, an "indenture" is also issued — spelling out the details of the company's obligation to the owners of that particular security.

Typically, mortgage bonds — which represent liens against particular pieces of property — get paid next. Then come the other debt securities — with each one's turn depending on the terms of its indenture.

After all debts are paid, stockholders are entitled to what's left. Preferred stock gets paid before common stock.

If you're concerned about a particular company going out of business, I urge you to get hold of its annual report and study its financial statements and footnotes. Also read up on its capital structure in the big Standard & Poor's and Moody's manuals. You'll find them in brokerage offices and in many public libraries.

Q. Why are race track investors discriminated against by the Internal Revenue Service by being allowed to deduct only their losses against their winnings and not being allowed to deduct their expenses, like racing forms, programs, admissions, parking and travel?

A. You'll have to argue that one, on an individual basis, with the IRS. Some horse-players I know say some of their acquaintances at the track do take those "expenses" off their tax returns — claiming that playing the ponies and the dogs constitute their only business.

If you try it, just be prepared to go to the mat with the revenuers.

DOYLE welcomes written questions, but he will be able to provide answers only through the column.

Crown Prince Reza's Actions Suggest No Alarm Over Strife In Native Land

came to power in 1941 at the age of 23 when his father abdicated.

Although the prince has been kept from the public since his arrival in Lubbock five months ago, he did tell The Avalanche-Journal in a copyrighted interview in August that he saw his role as one of trying to help (the Iranian citizens) when I am king."

His statement came on the heels of a seven-mile anti-shah protest march on a route that took 700 masked Iranian students past the prince's weekend residence.

But such demonstrations, the prince said, do nothing to help either the country or the protesters. He added that the Iranian students could best help their country by studying now and returning to Iran to apply their knowledge.

"I don't say not to protest for change," he said. "I want to help these people and I don't know why instead of coming to me they must hide themselves and put masks on their faces. If they are really sure of what they are saying and if they are courageous, they can come to the government."

Barring a drastic change in the Iranian system of government, the prince would become the ruler of the 34.8 million Iranians. And he has been groomed for that job since childhood.

He was educated at the palace in Tehran because often-violent opposition to his father's regime presented security problems for the youngster. He was said to excel in mathematics and electronics and will be tutored extensively in economics, political science and military matters when he returns home in June.

And the prince got a head start on other students in his training class at Reese. He made his first solo flight at the age of 11 in a Beechcraft Bonanza.

He had his commercial pilot's license at 13 and has flown the U.S. F5 fighter-bomber, the backbone of Iran's air force and the armed version of the Talon trainer that the prince will begin flying Tuesday at Reese.

When he is not studying, Reza enjoys many of the same activities as any teenager.

He has admitted to being "rather good" at most sports and is said to be a crack shot who likes to hunt birds and wild boar in the Elborz Mountains north of Tehran.

Reza also is said to be a photography buff, and during a recent precision flying display by the Air Force Thunderbirds at Reese the prince, camera equipment in hand, was one of the thousands of spectators.

But his primary sports love appears to be soccer, a game in which he has actively participated during his stay in Lubbock. He keeps his kicking form in top shape by working out with the Reese soccer team.

However, the prince says his flight training and social activities are only a part of his stay in Lubbock.

"I think to know the American people — the way they really are, what they think — is the most important reason for me to be here," he said. "Later I will have to work with the country, and the relationship between my country and this one is very important."

U.S. Action 'Outrages' Chiang

them to be carried out by any private organization or individual...

"It is necessary that government-to-government level mechanisms be set up in Taipei and Washington," Chiang said. "This model alone can serve as the framework on which the future relationship of our two countries can be constructed."

The U.S. delegation rushed off to a military airport as soon as the talks ended in an effort to avoid further anti-American demonstrations.

During their stay, thousands of protesters hurled eggs, tomatoes and mud at the Americans, one Taiwanese set himself on fire and the newspaper China News said another chopped off his left index finger and wrote "I love my country" in blood on a piece of white linen.

Both sides described the talks as "serious." The brief U.S. statement, released after the Americans left, stressed the discussions were "courteous," apparently to underscore the contrast with the reception the delegation got Wednesday night when about 10,000 Taiwanese lined the route from the airport, pelting Christopher, U.S. Ambassador Leonard Unger and others with eggs, tomatoes and mud.

The mob smashed the windshield on Unger's car, and both he and Christopher were slightly hurt by flying glass. The incident sparked a strong protest from the State Department and nearly caused cancellation of the talks. The U.S. delegation reportedly was "very angry" but Chiang personally assured Christopher the group would be protected so the Americans stayed.

Foreign Minister Tsing Yen-chi headed the Nationalist side in all three sessions of the talks. After the second session Friday, Christopher and his group met with Chiang again, reconvened the talks for 35 minutes, then departed so quickly for the airport that they left behind a 24-man motorcycle escort that was waiting outside.

About two hours later, Chiang said in a statement read at a news conference that "future ties between the two countries must rest on five underlying principles — reality, continuity, security, legality and governmentality." He said "appropriate legislative measures" must be taken to provide a legal basis for the 59 remaining economic, cultural and other treaties.

Chiang said Carter's decision to break relations with Taiwan would destabilize the region and that "it is imperative that the United States take concrete and effective measures to renew its (security) assurances to countries in this region."

"President Carter has indicated that he is still concerned about the peace, security and prosperity of this region after the termination of the Sino-U.S. mutual defense treaty, and will continue to supply the Republic of China with defense weapons. The U.S. must give assurances of a legal nature which would ensure the fulfillment of this commitment," Chiang said.

The statement said both sides had agreed that the staffs of embassies in Taipei and Washington would continue to function until the end of February to ensure women die as car, truck collide here

Police early today were attempting to identify a young woman who became Lubbock's 38th traffic fatality of the year about 9:30 p.m. Friday.

The woman, thought to be about 20, was one of two occupants of an automobile which collided with the rear of a semi-trailer truck at the Traffic Circle in southeast Lubbock.

The woman was dead on arrival at Methodist Hospital.

Generally, all misdemeanors filed before Jan. 1, 1978, were put under the dismissal motion under the Speedy Trial Act, Griffin said.

Shah Foe Accepts Civilian Rule Offer

left the country. The shah has no intention to leave the country at the moment."

Bakhtiar, a 63-year-old international lawyer, had been asked by the shah Thursday to form a government and agreed Friday.

According to government and opposition sources, these are possible developments in the shah-Bakhtiar negotiations:

If Bakhtiar can form a Cabinet, the shah would name him prime minister and the military government would resign.

Constitutional Monarch

The shah reportedly has agreed in principle to accept the role as a constitutional monarch, and much of his power could be given to an advisory council. Under the constitution, the shah as a constitutional monarchy would remain commander-in-chief of the army but he could not name the prime minister, who would have to be nominated and approved by Parliament.

While the shah's aides said the monarch would not leave Iran as part of a condition by the opposition, other sources said it was possible he might leave Tehran for a "vacation" to let tempers cool while the new government tries to end the violent demonstration.

In Wiesbaden, West Germany, Bakhtiar was quoted as telling the ZDF television network that the shah could remain in Iran under an opposition government "if he gives us sufficient guarantees."

Asks Shah Guarantee

Bakhtiar said in the interview that "In the last 25 years, we had a corrupt government under the regime of the shah, and that is against the constitution." He said he was in favor of a progressive democracy, "and if the shah can really guarantee this, then there won't be any more questions."

Anti-shah violence raged on Friday, but it was less intense than earlier in the week. The opposition said one person was killed in Tehran.

In one incident, troops fired into the air to scatter thousands of demonstrators parading from a cemetery with a coffin symbolizing hundreds of protesters killed by troops over the past 12 months.

Leaders of the shah's religious opposition called for a massive march today to mark the anniversary of the start of Iran's political upheaval late last December, when soldiers killed 11 protesters in the city of Qum.

It was reported that Western oil officials were planning another evacuation of Americans and Europeans from Iran's oil belt, and that Washington is reading contingency plans to cope with a possible U.S. oil shortage caused by the anti-shah strike of Iranian oil workers.

If Bakhtiar succeeds in forming a new government, it could split the National Front. Bakhtiar told reporters Friday that "at least half" of his ministers would be National Front members.

In Paris, the exiled Moslem leader Ayatollah Khomeini, symbol of the anti-shah opposition, rejected any compromise that would leave the shah still on the peacock throne. A spokesman said Khomeini "does not accept the principle of forming a new government under the reign of the shah or any royal regime."

National Front leader Karim Sanjabi and many of his followers also opposed any future role for the monarch.

In Tehran, protesters armed with clubs and stones set small fires and blocked railroad tracks Friday. The opposition said one protester was killed. Military officials reported no deaths and three persone wounded nationwide, all in the northeast city of Mashhad.

The shah's opposition is two-fold — orthodox Moslems who say his Western-style modernization is corrupting traditional values in this Islamic nation, and political activists demanding an end to his authoritarian rule, government corruption and foreign influence.

Fuel rationing imposed because of the oil strike bit deeply into traffic in Tehran. The fuel shortage and anti-shah strikes have shut down or sharply curtailed transportation, industries and many government offices.

Oil production reports were confused. The state radio announced all refineries had been closed, but sources said a refinery at the Persian Gulf port of Abadan apparently was still operating.

Kremlin Displaying Increasing Concern Over Shah's Status

MOSCOW (AP) — The Kremlin is showing increasing concern over the explosive situation in Iran, a neighbor with ethnic and religious links to the Soviet people and a major source of this country's natural gas.

Some Western diplomats say they detect a cautious Soviet "tilt" toward the opponents of Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi. But all agree that the political uncertainties in riot-torn Iran present a serious dilemma for Moscow as well as Washington.

The problem is simple: it is still possible the shah can survive politically and, if he does not, the diversity of his opposition makes it difficult to predict whether a post-shah government will lean to the East or West.

One diplomatic source, who like others asked not to be identified, said the turmoil in Iran has set the stage for what could be "the most dangerous flash-point" in 1979 for a U.S. Soviet-head to head confrontation.

Washington sources said Thursday the Carter administration is considering sending a Navy task force into the Persian Gulf off Iran to underscore President Carter's warning against outside intervention. But the Soviet newspaper Pravda at the same time was accusing the Americans of "inadmissible interference" by sending 60 new advisers to Tehran to help the pro-West shah.

Angry U.S. officials say only a few new specialists have been sent in, and sources here said the United States would formally protest Pravda's claims, which they called a "complete distortion" and "inflammatory."

The cause of the Kremlin edginess is historic, social and economic.

Like the United States, Russia has a strong energy interest in Iran, from which it has imported more than 350 billion cubic feet of natural gas annually for the past five years. Most of it is consumed in the Soviet republic of Azerbaijan, which borders Iran, and in nearby Armenia and Georgia.

Western diplomats say the anti-shah strikes by Iranian oilfield workers already have sharply cut the gas flow, although no serious shortage has yet been experienced. While importing Iranian gas, the Soviets have been selling some of their own natural gas to Western Europe for badly needed foreign currency. Continued cuts in the Iranian supply would force Moscow to divert Russian gas to domestic consumption.

Cross-border ethnic links are strong. Azerbaijanis and Turkmenis live both in Iran and in the neighboring Soviet republics of Azerbaijan and Turkmenia.

Soviet troops occupied part of Iran in World War II, and after the war Moscow fostered establishment of Azerbaijani and Kurdish separatist states. These regimes crumbled in 1946 under American and U.N. pressure.

Religion is a third factor. Moslem fundamentalism, the driving force behind the anti-shah movement, theoretically could spread to the Soviet Union, where at least 15 percent of the population has Moslem origins. Fundamentalist demands for a union of religion and government clearly would be anathema here.

Moscow has made public pronouncements wounding nationwide, all in the northeast city of Mashhad.

The shah's opposition is two-fold — orthodox Moslems who say his Western-style modernization is corrupting traditional values in this Islamic nation, and political activists demanding an end to his authoritarian rule, government corruption and foreign influence.

Fuel rationing imposed because of the oil strike bit deeply into traffic in Tehran. The fuel shortage and anti-shah strikes have shut down or sharply curtailed transportation, industries and many government offices.

Lancaster To Fight For Funds

County Commissioner James Lancaster of Idalou will take his road and bridge grievances to the new criminal district attorney in January, he said Friday afternoon.

Lancaster voiced dissatisfaction often during 1978 with what he termed inadequate road and bridge funding for Precinct 3, the area of the county he represents. And during preparation of the 1979 budget he has objected to the approximately $1 million in road and bridge funds being equally divided among the county's four precincts.

Two of his motions to increase funding for Precinct 3 died for lack of second during Friday's commissioner's meeting. Lancaster moved that the budget be amended because, he said, he needed more money due to the additional mileage and work required for Precinct 3. He also moved for the commissioners to consider redistributing each precinct to help eliminate the problem.

Actual road mileage of the precincts, including subdivision mileage: Precinct 1, commissioner Edgar Casey, 275.75; Precinct 2, commissioner Coy Biggs of Slaton, 331.1; Precinct 3, 347.1; Precinct 4, commissioner Alton Brazzell, 264.95 miles.

County Judge Rod Shaw suggested that Lancaster draft gividing lines on the precincts and present the changes during the next commissioner's meeting Jan. 8.

Judge Shaw indicated that there would be some question as to where to draw the lines, which could create other problems and considerations.

Lancaster said his actions at Friday's commissioner's court meeting was to make them (the motions) "official" and on the record. Apparently as long as politics are involved, I'm not getting anywhere," he added that he was not surprised with Friday's outcome.

He blames his precinct's problems on the county growth pattern and population shifts.

"If this winds up in the courts, it could take six to eight months to a year before we get this settled," he said. But Lancaster added that he feels certain a decision will be made in his precinct's favor.

"I need more money and more relief," he said.

Total road and bridge funds adopted by the commissioners for 1979 were: Precinct 1, $183,996; Precinct 2, $215,774; Precinct 3, $247,192; Precinct 4, $249,100.

thing that needs to be discussed. There are some other legal problems."

Burleson refused to say what the legal question was that forced the delay nor would he say whether the defense or the prosecution brought up the matter.

Davis has been in jail since his arrest Aug. 20.

Moore said the defense "never actually filed a motion. They told me there was another point of law to consider. I don't know what that point may be."

During an Aug. 18 meeting, McCrory said he showed the pictures to Davis and the millionaire industrialist said, "Damn, you're kidding."

Davis told the jury that he made that comment after McCrory had shown him "something that could have been a microphone" under his shirt.

Prosecutor Tolly Wilson countered Davis' claims by repeatedly reading statements Davis allegedly made during two meetings with McCrory.

Davis, appearing grim and tired, said over and over, "I didn't think anybody was dead. We weren't intentionally talking about killing anyone."

Wilson quoted from one of the tape recordings made during the McCrory-Davis conversations where McCrory said, "I got Judge Eidson dead for you."

Davis replied, "Good."

The prosecutor asked what Davis meant by that statement.

Davis answered, "I didn't think anybody was dead. It (McCrory's statement) called for a response. It would have been silly for me to say 'No, you must be crazy.'"

In earlier testimony, Davis had said he went along with the meetings because an FBI agent had informed him McCrory might be engaged in an extortion plot.

Blind Vendor Robbed Of Cash

A blind man operating a concession stand at the U.S. Post Office at 16th Street and Avenue G was robbed of about $250 late Friday afternoon.

Billy Pullin, 56, of 3318 33rd St., said he was closing the stand, located in the post office lobby, about 5:20 p.m. when someone grabbed a bank bag from him and ran away.

Pullin, who is totally blind, said he felt someone near him, but had no way of knowing who it was.

He was robbed in the same manner on Dec. 1.

A city man said someone removed $3,400 in cash from his residence during the past week.

Cletus Fitzgerald said someone entered his 6020 Norfolk Ave. home last week and took the cash, which he said was in a white envelope. Police said no signs of forced entry were found.

Bandits stripped Boyle Holmberg's car and left it up on blocks sometime early Friday, police said. Holmberg said four wheels and four tires, collectively valued at $800, were taken.

Vandals did $500 worth of damage to a residence belonging to Ronald Gray during a Friday morning shooting spree. Police said the snipers shot out almost every window in Gray's 4617 38th St. house, and broke out a glass patio door with some sort of blunt object.

Roy Lee Walker of Knox City said his car was burglarized Friday morning while it was parked at 5702 50th St. Walker said someone pried open a vent window and removed two guns and two stereo speakers, together worth about $450.

Some hand tools were removed from John Holloman's pickup early Friday while it was parked in front of his 3110 29th St. residence. The tools were worth about $250.

The Scottish Rite Temple at 602 Ave. Q was entered sometime Friday morning, temple member Charlie Sherrard told police. The intruders broke open the front glass door and rummaged through the building, but apparently took nothing, according to police reports, which indicated approximately $150 in damage was done.

A Lubbock woman said that seconds after seeing a shadow cross by her bedroom door about 5 a.m. Friday, a man jumped on her bed and attempted to rape her.

However, the attacker fled the apartment when the 27-year-old woman said her sister would arrive any minute.

Police Friday were looking for a black male in his early 20s, with a muscular build and brown hair. He was last seen wearing jogging pants.

In a reported assault Thursday, Charles H. Sawyer, 42, of 3409 27th St. was named the victim, but it was the suspect who was taken to St. Mary's Hospital with multiple injuries.

Sawyer's wife said the man came to their door about 9:10 p.m. accusing the couple of owing him $50,000 and saying he was going "to do some collecting."

Reports show when the woman's husband came to see who was there, the suspect ripped off part of the screen door and grabbed Sawyer. A fight followed on the front porch between the suspect and Sawyer.

Police said when they arrived at the scene Sawyer had the man, who was by then bleeding badly, in a head lock. The suspect allegedly had told the couple a man was waiting outside and they "would not get out of the house alive."

A hospital spokesman told police the suspect had a broken nose, face lacerations and possible chest and stomach injuries.

Jessie William Sitor, 18, of Route 6, Box 245, Lubbock told police three men beat him up about 7:15 p.m. Thursday in front of a residence in the 200-block of Temple Avenue.

Sitor said one of his attackers pulled a pistol and told him, "Get out of here or I'll shoot you." The victim said he left the residence and called police.

Assault On Officer Charged

A charge of aggravated assault on a police officer was filed Friday against Adelberto F. Caraveo, 24, of 2123-B 20th St. in Lubbock in connection with a high-speed chase Thursday night in Slaton.

Caraveo is accused of pointing a pistol at Slaton policeman Michael Crawford after he was stopped about 5 p.m. Thursday.

The criminal district attorney's office is recommending a $100,000 bond in the case.

Precinct 6 Justice of the Peace Wayne LeCroy said Caraveo probably will be arraigned and his bond set early next week.

After Caraveo allegedly pointed his pistol at Crawford, the officer retreated and drew his pistol, police said. Caraveo sped away and Crawford gave chase. Caraveo

Throttle Problems Force Recall Order

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration said Friday that more than 28,000 French-made Renault automobiles are being recalled to modify their throttle return systems.

The safety administration said tests showed the vehicles did not meet a federal safety requirement that the throttle return to the idle position within a certain period after the driver's foot is removed from the accelerator.

Involved in the recall are 1976-1978 Renault models 5, 12, 15 and 17. Renault USA said the rear turn signal lenses of the model 5, known as Le Car, also will be replaced because their amber color may fade after long exposure to the elements.

Ben Harrison Retires From FBI Following 28 Years' Service

By JACK DOUGLAS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

After serving 28 years in an organization that until several years ago was respected by just about everyone, Ben Harrison has retired as agent-in-charge of the Federal Bureau of Investigation office in Lubbock.

BEN HARRISON

Harrison, interviewed his last day in office Friday, said he is proud of the work he and the FBI have done, but hinted that the bad publicity didn't make retiring any less attractive.

Critics the past several years have accused the FBI of being guilty of invading the privacy of U.S. citizens, such as illegal wiretapping, and being involved in political assassinations, such as the killing of President Kennedy in 1963.

"I think it would not be telling the truth if I said the last five years have been as good as the first 23," Harrison said. "It doesn't make it any harder to leave. You don't serve as long as I did without taking offense."

Harrison is 51 years old — four years younger than the mandatory retirement age for FBI agents. He plans to remain in Lubbock with his wife, Marliou, and take some graduate courses in geophysics at Texas Tech University.

Bernard K. "Bernie" Brown, who has been with the FBI eight years and stationed in Lubbock the past five, takes over as the head federal law enforcement officer in Lubbock and 18 surrounding counties.

Harrison said new laws set by the federal government now make it look like federal agents were involved in criminal activity in the past. But those laws were not there at the time, and many of the instructions were sent down by executive order, he stressed.

Harrison said that during his earlier years with the FBI, persons and groups conspiring to overthrow the government were handled differently than the common offender, adding that he agreed with that policy.

"I don't think you should be able to use the Constitution or the guarantees of the Constitution to overthrow the government."

Asked what he thought young men now being recruited into the FBI had to look forward to, Harrison said, "I think it will still be a rewarding career."

He said the FBI is now directing its attention to only major crimes, leaving lesser cases to state and local authorities.

The Dallas native got his degree in geology at Southern Methodist University. He was working for a South Texas company in 1951 when a friend, who was an FBI agent, persuaded him to apply with the bureau. Harrison was accepted after a thorough look at his background and went through nine weeks of training at Washington and the FBI Academy in Quantico, Va.

Harrison's job as a special agent has sent him on short stints to Boston, Providence, R.I., and Dallas. He lived in San Juan, P.R., Chicago and Texas before moving to the Lubbock office in 1961.

Harrison became Lubbock's agent-in-charge in October 1977 when he replaced Leland Stephens, who retired.

Asked about the future of the bureau with which he has spent 28 years, Harrison said, "I believe it will overcome this criticism... it's too good an organization."

Suspected Killer Kept From Court

DES PLAINES, Ill. (AP) — Suspected mass killer John Gacy Jr. was kept manacled to his bed in a jail hospital Friday while his pre-arrest hearing went on without him and six more bodies were found at his home.

Court officials apparently feared for Gacy's life, but his lawyer called it "misjustice."

Authorities said they had unearthed an additional six bodies from beneath Gacy's suburban home, bringing to 28 the total linked to Gacy, before the search was stopped for the day.

Gacy, 36, a convicted sex offender, reportedly has told authorities that he had sexual relations with 32 young men, then killed them, burying 27 on the grounds of his home and throwing five into the Des Plaines River.

With Gacy's help, police have found the 27 bodies at his home. No decision had been made public on whether they will continue digging. One body was found in the river last month. A second body was found in the river Thursday but police have not linked it with Gacy. Thus far Gacy has been charged only with the murder of 15-year-old Robert Priest, whose body has not been found.

Circuit Court Judge John L. White said Gacy was excluded from the hearing on the orders of chief criminal Judge Richard J. Fitzgerald, who said Gacy should be kept out for security reasons.

Gacy's lawyer, Sam Amirante, said he did not know until he arrived in court that Gacy would not be present. "It is a tragic thing that a man cannot be brought into court because of unfair publicity, security reasons, or any reason," said Amirante.

At the hearing, Amirante argued that it was already impossible for Gacy to get a fair trial. He said a glut of publicity and "leaks from the sheriff's department" have interfered with the standards of the American Bar Association for a fair and impartial trial.

Amirante argued that because it cannot be proven that Priest is dead, the charge against Gacy should be dropped.

He asked White to impose control of statements given by authorities to the news media, to allow "as much time as possible" for psychiatrists to examine Gacy, and, for permission to monitor the search for bodies in Gacy's northwest suburban home, where the skeletal remains have been found.

White granted an order restraining officials from giving information to the news media.

In Weeki Wachee, Fla., on Friday, sheriff's officers dug up part of a lot owned by Gacy, but nothing was found.

Deputy Cliff Batten said the Hernando County Sheriff's office was notified by Cook County, Ill., authorities that Gacy owned the property here. Hernando County is on Florida's west coast.

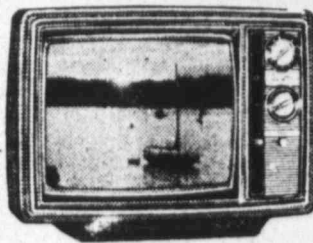

Gacy is being held in the Cook County Jail hospital, restrained in his bed. Official said they want to keep him "from hurting himself or others."

All persons entering the courtroom were searched by police. Among those attending was the Priest family.

Rum Glaze Enhances Ham Flavor For New Year's Day Brunch

NEW YORK (Special) — Make your New Year's Day brunch extra special by serving Bacardi Glazed Ham. Ring in the new with this unusual combination of mandarin oranges, pineapple, ham and rum. Quick and delicious, this dish will leave you plenty of time for hanging streamers and making resolutions. Served with scrambled eggs garnished with fresh chopped parsley, the Glazed Ham will be the star of your brunch. For added cheer and a party your guests will remember throughout the remaining winter days, compliment the meal with Festive Orange Eggnog.

Cook, stirring, until thickened and smooth. Brush glaze over ham. Bake ham at 425 degrees F. for 10 minutes. Remove from oven and arrange oranges on ham. Secure each with clove. Brush with more glaze. Bake 20 minutes longer. Brush with glaze occasionally.

Makes 10 to 12 servings.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: Please print this letter. It might save another child from serious injury or possibly death.

"Dear Dad: Today I saw you again — driving in the suburbs. You had a young child in your lap. He was a darling little boy and seemed to be enjoying the ride. But if you keep driving with him in your lap he may not live to drive his own car.
"I am a paramedic who just returned from a call. The child was just about the same age as your son. He, too, was riding on his father's lap when another car hit them from behind. There was no apparent damage to either car or the drivers. The only injury was to the child. He suffered a broken collarbone and broken ribs when his father fell forward and crushed him against the steering wheel.
"Car seats for toddlers are a bit of a nuisance but well worth the trouble. Take the time to get one and strap your child in it whenever he is riding in the car.
"It's hard enough to pick up an injured adult, but picking up an injured child is heartbreaking. Please don't ignore this letter because I will be watching you. — A Paramedic Who Cares"

Dear Paramedic: Thank you for all the good you did today.

Dear Ann: This is being written by four adult children. We don't know what to do about our mother. Can you help?

Three years ago, after being a widow for 10 years, our mother married a wonderful man. He is so kind and generous and attractive, too.

Mother has a drinking problem which she refuses to admit. She hides liquor all over the house. Last week I caught her drinking out of the hot water bottle. She talks in a loud voice when she is drinking, slurs her words, she's repetitious and can't remember what she said three minutes ago. Her house is a mess and she has trouble getting a meal on the table. We're afraid her husband may get fed up and leave.

Can we call Alcoholics Anonymous and ask them to go see her? — Concerned Children

Dear Children: AA does not "go see people." The person with the problem must admit he is powerless to resist alcohol. Apparently your mother will not make such an admission. Perhaps your family doctor can help. Alcoholics usually develop organic problems and this could be the hook on which to hang the "cure."

Have you ever heard of Al-Anon? This wonderful fellowship is for family and friends who want to learn how to live with an alcoholic. Look in the phone book.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm a working mother with a lovely teenage daughter. She has many friends who like her for herself, but they also enjoy raiding the refrigerator and freezer. This attack on our food supply takes place at night when I'm away.

How can I remedy the situation without alienating my daughter's friends? I don't want to appear stingy but I can't continue to feed the troops at these prices. — Her Mom

Dear Mom: Tell your daughter she must put an end to the pig act and no foolin'. It's HER responsibility to see that her guests behave. Not yours.

Popcorn, pretzels, potato chips, iced tea, fruit punch and other inexpensive treats should be provided and the rest of the contents of the fridge and freezer declared off-limits.

Got those wedding bell blues over cost... guest list... what to wear... and other details? Ann Landers' completely new "The Bride's Guide" will help. For a copy, send a dollar, plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope (15 cents postage) to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY DR. PAUL E. RUBLE

Dear Doctor: I am 18 years old and all my life I have been bothered with nosebleeds. I've been told I will outgrow them, but they keep coming. My doctor says my nose is fine. My nosebleeds occur in winter mostly, and the mucus in my nose becomes hard and crusty. Is there anything to keep the mucus from forming? Wearing a noseplug of cotton helps a little, but is this safe? Will applying salty water help? — M.A.

The membrane inside the nose are rich in tiny blood vessels, some of which are so close to the surface that they bleed easily. Often there is an ulceration in the area, accounting for the alternate crusting and shedding of the crust from irritations. The area can be cauterized to prevent this and stem the bleeding episodes. Also, it would be a good idea to have a blood study done to see if you have the proper quantity of blood platelets (clotting substance), which would otherwise cause bleeding.

As to the remedies you mention, I discourage snuffing of salt water, since that can wash away the protective scabs prematurely, perpetuating the bleeding. It is also a possible source of infection. A cotton or gauze nose plug can be used while sitting up. Often, if used when lying down the blood may travel backward into your throat. A trick is to place the forefinger under the upper lip and press upward against the nostrils.

A final thought: you may have a form of vasomotor rhinitis, which can be worsened by climatic changes, such as in winter. Humidifiers may help. Another thing, since your problem is seasonal, an allergy should be investigated. It is true that many young people do outgrow the nosebleed problem as the membranes adjust. I would expect this to have occurred by your age, hence I suggest investigation of the possibilities mentioned above.

Dear Doctor: When I was in college in the '20s I was told I had hypoglycemia and never to be without candy. It's strange that since then I have given birth to two sons, have had numerous operations, and even though I've mentioned the hypoglycemia thing no doctor has ever suggested I do anything about it. Can you explain? — M.M.

Dear Doctor: After tests, my doctor told me I have hypoglycemia. I was told to carry candy with me, eat frequently. I understand, though, that candy is only a temporary lift and won't cure things. What is your thinking? — D.S.

The second letter first. Candy is often advised for persons with hypoglycemia (lowered blood sugar), but actually it is only a temporary lift, as D.S. suspects, and it may even aggravate the symptoms. But a diet high in protein with frequent, small feedings ends the need for any sugar lifts.

As to M.D.'s mystery, hypoglycemia is often too easily diagnosed, which may have been the case with her back in the '20s. Perhaps her doctors now conclude that if it existed at all it was so mild as to be of no concern. Or it is possible she had mild sugar disturbance that corrected itself. For more details, see the booklet, "Help for Hypoglycemia." For a copy, send 50 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Dr. Ruble, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611.

Dear Doctor: I have had bowel trouble for 12 years or so. I had X-rays and they showed everything was normal. Some tell me I need bulk, and I have been trying to find a book or something to get a list of foods that are bulky, but have not been able to. Can you help? — Mrs. C.B.

Telling me you have bowel trouble doesn't give me much to go on. Are you constipated, or do you have loose bowels? Bulk, if you need any extra, is not a fancy concept. We all need it to some degree, yet the lack of it in diets in Western societies is thought to contribute to much of the bowel disorders here. Fiber foods are the best bulk producers. They are foods that contain special material, such as cellulose in fruits and vegetables. Unmilled flour or bran are good sources of bulk. Also, you need to be examined with more than simple X-rays to see if there is some malfunctioning of the colon or of some structure further up in the digestive tract.

What about constipation? Many can be relieved of it, both mentally and physically, by reading a booklet entitled, "The Way to Stop Constipation." For a copy write to Dr. Ruble, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611, enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 35 cents.

Dr. Ruble welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

You can always depend on the help of a friend.

HI THERE:
We don't usually print food recipes in this column because each newspaper has its own food section and there are a million and one recipes floating around.
But...I would like to tell you my favorite concoction that I somehow came up with. Everyone who tastes it goes wild and it really is simple, but very special.
You can make this either a tuna, chicken or turkey salad and it will really stretch one can of whatever to make quite a bit.
Now let me say I cook the way my mother did and I have never been able to measure or tell someone exactly how much of this or that is needed, so please tolerate my haphazard directions.
Use one can of tuna, chicken or turkey. Slice 3 celery stalks, not chop, but slice them very thin on the diagonal.
Add one diced hard-boiled egg, and either a two-ounce or four-ounce can of mushrooms—I like a lot. Buy the cheapest, and the ones which are already sliced.
Then, slice about 10 or 12 black olives—this just depends on how cheap or extravagant I am feeling. Sometimes I just don't want to open a can. Add your mayonnaise or salad dressing and one to two tablespoons hot mustard (this amount also depends on your taste), salt, pepper and a couple dashes of celery salt.

Mix well and boy! have you got a hum-dinger of a salad. If you serve this on a bed of lettuce, sprinkle a dash of paprika to add that extra umph!
And, of course, it tastes better after sitting a few hours in the fridge, but is just great when you need something special in a hurry.
Bon appetit! —Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:
I have a beautiful blue-eyed, white, long-haired cat. I brush her a lot, but when she starts shedding my upholstered chairs become a mess.
I have found a very easy and practical way to remove this hair. I take a damp sponge, wipe it over the area to be cleaned and the hairs just roll up.
Then they are easily sucked into the brush on my vacuum cleaner. —Grace Hatton

LETTER OF LAUGHTER

DEAR HELOISE:
...it's really strange how my memory leaves me when I go into a grocery store...
And returns again so quickly when I enter my kitchen door! —L.V.

DEAR HELOISE:
Do you often find it difficult to see the eye of the sewing machine needle when threading it?
Try holding a white plastic spoon behind the eye, with the bowl of the spoon facing the eye.
My friends thought I should share this with you and your readers as it seems much easier and better than a piece of paper. —Florence L.

The spoon is not nearly as elusive, either, as that piece of paper can find more places to hide! We do thank you for sharing it. —Heloise

Now I enjoy doing these chores — almost! —Margie Joy

DEAR HELOISE:
When using my electric curling iron, I always wear a very weight cotton glove on my left hand (or right, if you are left-handed).
Saved me from many a 'hot lick'! —Mrs. M.B.

DEAR HELOISE:
When a contour sheet wears out, put it on the bed and pin a new flat mattress pad to the sheet along the edge of the pad.
Sew (I make a double row of stitching along the edge of the pad), then trim the worn sheet away close to the line of stitching.
You've saved money, because the fitted mattress pads are more expensive. —Mrs. Haven

Judge Encourages Device To Prevent Drunk Drivers From Starting Cars

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A judge who wants to keep drunk drivers out of jail is proposing use of a device that would prevent them from starting their cars. Allegheny County Criminal Division Judge Robert E. Dauer, who says he handles about 400 drunk-driving cases a year, said the plan would be a voluntary part of probation for twice-convicted defendants.

“Of course, if they refuse to put it on their car, I can always put them in jail,” he said.

Dauer is proposing the use of a gadget called QuickKey, a small box wired into an automobile's ignition system and allows the engine to start only if the driver's reflexes are sharp.

Directions for the device calls for a driver to press a button, which lights a small bulb. When the light goes out, the driver must immediately release the button.

The device then compares the time the driver takes to release the button with what is considered his normal time, which is measured before the device is installed, and is permanently recorded in the box.

If the driver is more than 15 percent slower than normal, the box prevents the electrical contact necessary for starting the engine.

With Dauer's support, Allegheny County Clerk of Courts Wayne Kelly and developers of the device hope to begin a pilot program producing a supply of the devices with federal money awarded through the state transportation department.

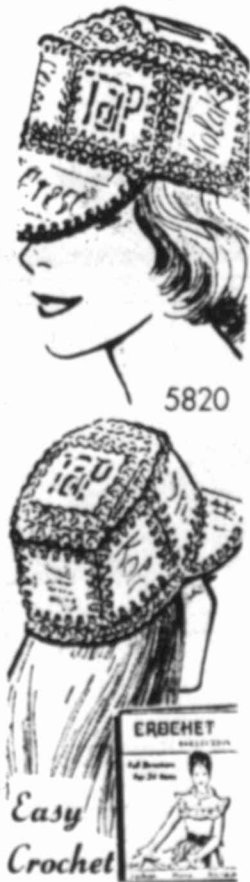

Dauer said he would use the device in sentencing as soon as the pilot program could get under way. However, he said, he would restrict use of the device to repeat offenders.

“What I want it for primarily is the person who drives his car for business — the traveling salesman who'll stop at a motel and drink,” Dauer said.

“Rather than take away his job, we could put this on his car... and he could drive and continue to support his family rather than put him in jail and put his family on welfare,” the judge said.

Free Coffins Available To Maine Traffic Victims

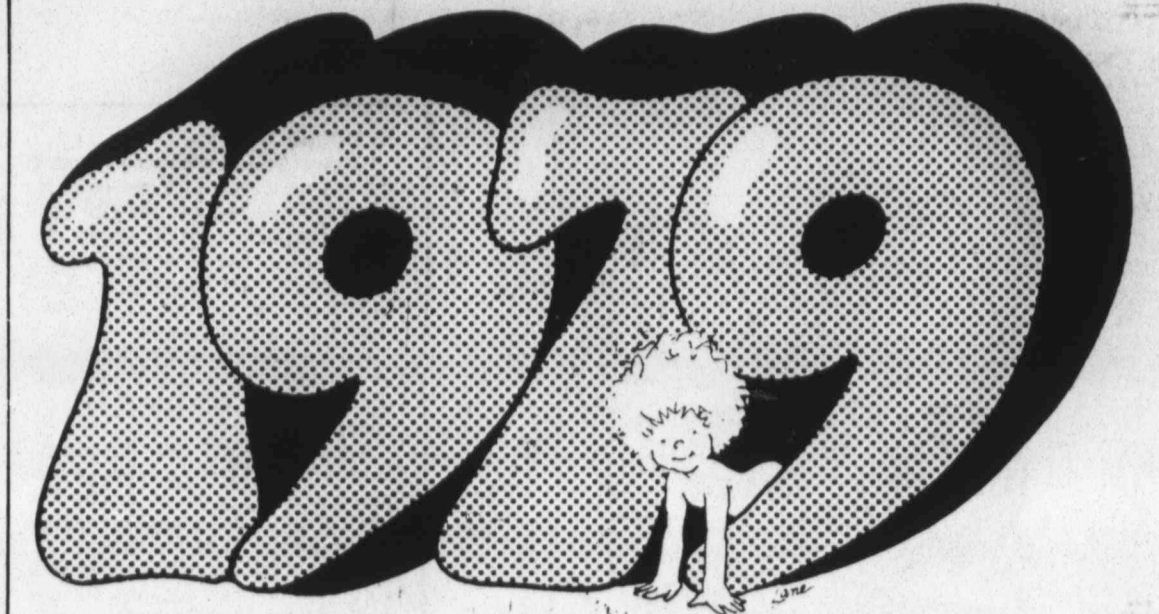

AUGUSTA, Maine (UPI) — In an effort to make New Year's Eve party-goers think twice about having one for the road, Robert Demers is offering wooden coffins to all intoxicated drivers who are killed on the highway.

“It's a gimmick to get people thinking about it before they do it,” Demers said in an interview. “We have got boxes on hand.”

Demers, the maker of the natural pine coffins, and his wife, Catherine, are house parents at Harthstone, a Portland group home for mentally retarded adults. One of the projects used to keep the non-profit home going for its six patients is the sale of wooden coffins.

Demers said he will deliver his pine coffins, with rope handles, anywhere in a 50-mile radius of Portland to people who have been killed on Maine highways.

“We don't want anyone to have to take advantage of the offer, that's why we are doing it,” he said.

Astrologer Issues Forecast For World Events In 1979

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Bernice Bede Osol, whose Astro-Graph and This Week in Astrology appear in more than 400 daily and Sunday newspapers throughout the world, today looks at 1979, the closing chapter of the decade. Bernice sees the year ahead as one that will be characterized by a skittish economy, higher tariffs, shaky alliances and strange happenings triggered by peculiar catalysts. Some of her past predictions include the Mideast oil crisis, the nomination of Jimmy Carter, the rise and fall of Richard Nixon and the death and anti-deification of Mao Tse-tung.)

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

The tides of events ebb and flow and break upon the shores of the present in what appears to be a purposeless design. Yet each ripple in the sea of circumstances is the result of a cause ordained somewhere in time and space. Astrology serves as a sextant to help us navigate the uncharted waters of 1979.

of the press will prevail in our country.

In 1979, more strikes will be precipitated for strange and unusual reasons than at any time in recent memory. Any area, such as the electronic media or the space program, may be the target. They will have one thing in common: Their origins will be very peculiar.

Sadly, I see no relief from the rising costs of health services, a trend that particularly hurts those on fixed incomes. Even if government comes up with new programs, they will probably have serious flaws that will make them expensive and/or unworkable.

Pseudo-religious groups and cults will be closely scrutinized by both the federal government and their adherents. Unfortunately, legitimate organizations may be tarred with the same brush as those out to defy their leaders or balk their followers. Those whose efforts are sincere and righteous will survive, but the struggle may be long and difficult.

The year 1979 may see the initiation of some sort of strict controls on oil and related energy products. Rationing is probably too strong a measure to apply at this time, but the trend is in that direction.

THE ECONOMY

The economy will be surprisingly resilient in 1979 and I see no major recession until the early 1980s. The Band-Aid measures taken to hold down wages and prices will be mildly effective, but only in a stopgap manner. Business, labor and the citizenry will try to do their part, but politicians and the huge bureaucracy that feeds upon itself will continue to be the real villains of the piece.

In 1979 the gross national product will rise, with labor and industry cooperating with the administration. Inflation will deepen, however, because of the enormous outlays of dollars for the military, welfare, foreign aid and the burgeoning costs of running the government. Yet, all these things considered, people, in general, will live well and spend freely. The fact that a recession seems to have been averted may lull many into a false sense of security.

The oil crisis will loom large in 1979, owing to our increasing dependence on foreign oil and the fickle and unstable nature of our oil allies. Unwavering vigilance will be required of our leaders for the next two years, or else, through treachery and deceit, we will be denied major oil sources of enormous importance.

Restrictive legislation will seriously hamper the efforts of Americans who do business abroad in 1979. While the intent of the lawmakers will be admirable, we will not be able to compete in the world marketplace with others who do business on a no-holds-barred basis. The ultimate effects will be felt by the consumer, who will pay higher prices when American industry and business operate at a reduced margin.

This year there will also be a call for higher tariffs and it will probably be heeded. However, the net effect will be like a ping-pong match — a great deal of back and forth play but no help to the economy for ourselves or other nations.

What will make 1979 a unique year is that any of the above problems that affect the economy could be set off by bizarre or weird events that cause a pernicious chain reaction.

MAJOR TRENDS

There are conservative currents stirring that will gather momentum from the beginning of 1979 until the presidential election in 1980. Liberals who toss their hats into the ring in 1979 off-year elections will begin to feel their sting.

Charismatic figures who have long been idolized by the American public will also experience a gradual decline in popularity during this period. As the size of their following decreases, so will their earning power. The pendulum has begun to swing the other way and their days of wine and roses may be nearing an end.

Scandals among this genre may also rock some from their thrones and admirers will realize that their idols have feet of clay.

The media is also coming for its share of lumps as far as public support is concerned. The big anchors will no longer enjoy their lofty status and they will have to be less show biz and more substance. Courts will continue to chip away at the sanctuary the press has long enjoyed in the First Amendment. Over the long haul, however, freedom

President Jimmy Carter, a Libran, is the helmsman chosen to steer our Ship of State through stormy seas. He takes the job seriously and it is likely that we will see a tougher, more conservative side of this soft-spoken Georgian in 1979.

President Carter has political debts to pay and being a pragmatic man, he will try to repay them. He is also an honorable man and a conflict may arise in this area. There is little doubt that he will be disappointed by friends, both here and abroad, in whom he has confidence. How he copes with these complex situations could contribute to his political future, for the aspects indicate that Jimmy Carter wants a second term as president.

Another critical factor is his handling of the economy and inflation. His chart shows he may not have as good a comprehension in these areas as he should have and thus his programs and policies may not be as effective as they must be to solve these critical problems.

THE HELMSMAN

ALLIES AND ADVERSARIES

Unfortunately, 1979 could be a year of more unpopularity abroad for the United States. “Yankee, Go Home” may be heard from hardcore dissident groups in nations that we consider allies — in whom we have invested considerable foreign aid. At home, the old isolationist feeling might be revived, further tearing at the fabric of mutual co-existence in the world. Our close allies will also not be as forthright with us as they have been in the past, causing more hard feelings.

We can get by most of the disruptions without long-range harm. Some of them, however, could have ill-effects that extend into the 1980s.

Israel, which has been under bad aspects for the last several years, will experience a brightening trend. Prospects for peace in the Mideast are better than they have ever been, and Israel will have to focus its attentions on problems similar to ours: inflation and the economy.

In our dealings with Israel, we will find her less malleable than she has been in the past.

Economically, Russia will be stronger because the country is entering a more favorable cycle. In relations with the United States, she may be even tougher than before but it appears there will be no serious breach in relations. Russia will be far less tolerant of our criticism in the area of human rights.

China will be reaching to us for economic reasons in 1979. Since China was born under the sign of Libra and the United States is a Cancer, we will never be truly close in ideology. But the motivations for more trade will be stronger because Chinese leaders recognize the need for it.

Demers said his offer of free caskets is good Sunday through Monday, and survivors can get in contact with him or have a funeral director contact him to have the coffin delivered.

Endangered Bird Stirrs Controversy Among Various Factions In India

NEW DELHI, India (AP)—The bustard, an ungainly migratory bird that stands two feet high and squirts a gummy liquid at its pursuers, has become a cause of international friction between hunters and conservationists.

Environmentalists told officials the bustard is an endangered species and faces extinction, but the Indian government gave its okay anyway for bustard hunting parties to come to India from the Middle East.

The bustards are sought by Arab noblemen who are keen on falconry, and the Houbara bustard happens to be the favorite game of falcons.

The Arabs are from countries that sell oil, and energy-short India needs petroleum.

Conservationists say the government's desire for oil supplies overshadowed its concern for endangered wildlife.

"The government is not prepared to annoy the sheiks," said Kailash Bahl, a vocal Indian conservationist. "This has happened in the past as well."

The Indian Express newspaper said in an editorial that "if the Indian government continues to give in, this rare species will soon disappear" from India as it has from neighboring Pakistan.

India's diplomats tried to dissuade royal falconers from the United Arab Emirates and Saudi Arabia from hunting bustards this winter in the northern Indian state of Rajasthan, said a source in the External Affairs Ministry who requested anonymity.

"There was heavy cable traffic with Abu Dhabi and Jiddah," he said, adding that the ministry was firmly opposed at the start "but then suddenly caved in."

Dr. Salim Ali, 82, president of the Bombay Natural History Society, said "The government came to me and asked whether we should allow the Arabs to hunt the Houbara bustard and I told them 'no.'"

The Houbara bustard is not protected by law like its cousin, the Great Indian bustard, which the government considers a native bird.

The flap began when Crown Prince Khalifa of the UAE arrived in November from Pakistan with a half dozen trained falcons. This month, Prince Bandar, cousin of Saudi Arabian King Khalid, crossed the sensitive border with Pakistan with a small army of 82 retainers and 27 vehicles.

Lombardo Band To Update Music

NEW YORK (AP)—A disco version of "Auld Lang Syne" will rock the Grand Ballroom of the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel on Sunday night as Guy Lombardo's Royal Canadians bring in the New Year with the 50th time.

The late maestro may not have approved, but his nephew who took over the orchestra plans to mix the traditional with the contemporary.

Bill Lombardo, a former rock drummer, says he intends to keep the nostalgic sound of the band, but he also wants the 14-piece ensemble to keep up with the times.

Waldorf guests are shelling out between $115 and $165 apiece for the bash, which includes filet mignon and champagne cocktails.

The New Year's program, which began in 1929 on WCBS radio and was televised starting in 1963, is the longest running annual program in the history of broadcasting.

When Guy Lombardo died of a respiratory ailment on Nov. 6, 1977, some of the musicians worried that the orchestra might disband. But last year's Dec. 31 performance, the first without Lombardo directing, hit an all-time rating record.

Bill Lombardo is confident that audiences will recognize him for his own talent and not as "Guy's nephew."

"The more they see of you, the more they forget about the other person," he said.

"MAYBE IF THEY SPELLED YOUR NAME WITH AN A YOU'D GET MORE RESPECT!!"

Aside from security officials who don't like foreigners poking around the broad border region, the falconry expeditions also have upset Rajasthan state's Jain religious sect.

The Jains — strict vegetarians who sometimes don gauze masks to keep from accidentally inhaling microscopic organisms — complained to the state's top elected official, Bhairon Singh Shekhawat, who vowed that no falconers would be permitted in his state in 1979.

DISCO FEVER

Director Milo Forman and actress Carrie Fisher do a "punk" version of disco.

Psychiatrists, Psychologists Explain Disco Cause, Effect

Disco dancing gets people so involved with themselves that "they don't even ask to sleep with one another."

By KITTY HANSON

The popularity of disco, says psychologist Dr. Amital Etzioni of Columbia University, is a reflection of the free-floating life-style of what he calls today's "untied" generation. He cites four reasons:

1 — Disco dancing is free. "Free-form dancing which does not require other people or other skills makes the pleasure of dancing itself more accessible to those of us who are not as skilled and graceful. Ordinary ballroom dancing can make one feel incompetent."

2 — You don't have to touch. "Touching, in our society, seems to be a code word for intimate relationships. Group touching is all right, but one-to-one touching always is complicated."

3 — You can avoid eye contact. "Wherever you go, in New York, Hong Kong, Israel, the code is the same — no eye contact. Even if you are crowded or jostled, you can still remain private if you don't make eye contact. Eye contact seems to connote commitment."

4 — You don't have to have a partner. "In disco, you can dance alone, in twos, or threes — or you can dance with a surrogate partner — a chair, if you feel like it."

Much of what goes on at discotheques works against any real sexual interaction, according to psychiatrist Stuart Berger, who, at 24, is probably one of the youngest shrinks in the country.

Dr. Berger, currently associated with New York University Hospital, has been a discophile since his recent teens, and still finds time to make the disco scene. "Disco dancing," he says, "is an extremely narcissistic exercise. Everything — the mirrors, the clothes, the volume of sound, the movement — contributes to this. There is little or no eye contact between people on the floor. They certainly can't talk to one another. People at a disco are into their own beauty, their own grace. The music, the dancing, gets people so into their own bodies, so involved with themselves, they don't even ask to sleep with one another."

The ultimate goal, Dr. Berger says, is "to reach a total body experience that ruptures normal space and time."

About the possible sexual undertones (or overtones) of disco dancing, Dr. Albert Ellis, psychologist, sex researcher and author, had this to say:

"There is sex implied in it, but it's not a social sex urge. There is some stimulation from the dance, but I don't believe it often leads to consummation. They must be too tired."

Jonathan Friedman, a professor of environmental and social psychology, says that one of the reasons discos are so exciting is because they are crowded.

"Crowding tends to intensify our reactions to a particular sensation. If we expect the situation to be exciting, then the crowding makes it more enjoyable — up to a point."

Dr. Maxim Asa, a noted physiologist and director of the New York Stress and Research Center, is an ex-decathlon champion on the Israeli Olympics team and former chief physical fitness officer for the Israeli army. He is a vigorous advocate of preventive medicine through a program that combines physical fitness exercise and stress and tension release.

"I am fully in support of discos," Dr. Asa says. "They are a very valuable way of overriding the threshold of discomfort that usually hampers sedentary people. Exercise, in general, is not popular. For someone to really get up and do something, one must really have an incentive. It's called motivational behavior."

"If young people and middle-aged people could actually be motivated to go into a discotheque and dance, they could increase their capacity of heart and lungs and blood pressure, and really enjoy what they are doing. It could be fantastic."

However, it isn't all good health news, adds Dr. Asa. "I may criticize the effect of the decibel level that might affect some people's hearing in the future. There is some relationship between a degree of deafness and extended exposure to a very high sound level. And there is a chance perhaps that the oscillating lights may affect people who have hidden epilepsy. Strobe lights, by their nature, are disorienting."

"There is nothing so necessary to human beings as the dance... without the dance, a man would not be able to do anything. All the misfortunes of man, all the reverses with which histories are filled, the blunders of politicians and the failures of great leaders — all this is the result of not knowing how to dance."

The author of these solemn words sounds like 1970s discophile — but he was a 1670s French dancing master.

Strange Stories Lighten 1978 News Review

Between calculating the declining value of the dollar and agonizing over the prolonged Mideast peace negotiations, we took time off this year to consider some really weighty issues: the morality—or immorality—of Donald Duck, the meaning of "fast" food and the sexual preferences of female seagulls.

These were the top offbeats stores of 1978, according to The World Almanac: Donald Duck an immoral influence on children?

That's what the Helsinki, Finland, youth committee decided. Donald's 50-year engagement to Daisy Duck, the uncertain parentage of nephews Huey, Dewey and Louie plus his uncovered feathered bottom were deemed to constitute a "racy lifestyle" unsuitable for the eyes of youth.

As a result, the Helsinki city council cancelled subscriptions to Donald Duck comic books at youth-club libraries.

Our national monuments are sinking. The White House has sunk a quarter of an inch over the past 30 years. The Washington Monument—which, like the White House, stands on land that was once a swamp—is also sinking slowly, according to the latest estimate, it is expected to sink out of sight by the year 112053.

Allergies to dogs, cats, horses, trees, flowers or feathers are uncommon nuisances. But unfortunate Janette Tate, a 21-year-old English dressmaker, has a less common allergy—to people, including her husband.

When the two kiss, the area surrounding Mrs. Tate's lips becomes splotchy. Her doctor believes injections and tablets may alleviate the condition.

Mr. Tate expressed his feelings succinctly: "It's a difficult situation."

The Feline Achievement Award of the year goes to Tiger, who arrived at his Iowa home in February after traveling 250 miles from Wausau, Wisconsin.

Tiger has been lost the previous summer while his owners were vacationing in Wisconsin. The cat was proclaimed to be in good health—even a little overweight.

About 14 percent of the female seagulls inhabiting an island off the California coast are lesbians.

That astounding fact—the first solid evidence of homosexuality among wild birds—was discovered in an University of California at Irvine study.

Apparently, one member of the lesbian couple takes on the male role and the two birds form a stable union like those of heterosexual gulls. The birds go through the motions of mating, lay sterile eggs and defend their nests like heterosexual couples. The study found no homosexuality among male birds.

When Barry Silva went to court in Manchester, England, on a drunk-driving charge, his attorney told the court Silva was indeed drunk when stopped by police—but was not guilty as charged.

It seems that Silva, a professional firefighter, was tipsy from the prodigious quantities of lighter fuel he had ingested during that evening's performance.

To end on an upbeat note, the senior citizens of Illinois may have found the fountain of youth.

Recently that state spend a considerable sum on notices informing old-age home residents that Medicare will no longer pay for abortions.

Volcanoes Perceived As Life Generators

MOSCOW (UPI)—A group of Soviet scientists says volcanoes may have spawned the first living organism that fueled the evolutionary process and created man.

The Tass news agency said Thursday the theory was developed by scientists at the Institute of Volcanology, at the Far Eastern Center of the Soviet Academy of Sciences.

They found that volcanic ashes contain over 200 complex pre-biological compounds and almost all the main components essential for the existence of a living cell.

"The investigations have led them to conclude that in the process of volcanic eruptions, nature takes the first step from inanimate matter to living things,"

Tass said.

The author of the theory, Dr. Yevgeni Markhinin, has studied volcanoes on the Kamchatka peninsula and Kuril Islands for 25 years and observed 30 volcanic eruptions.

"The scientists discovered specifically micro-organisms living in extreme conditions, in a high-temperature and acidic environments, in solutions of sulphuric and muriatic acids," Tass said.

Markhinin's theory that ash-and-gas clouds are powerful natural chemical reactors was confirmed during the eruption of Tyatya volcano on the Kuril Islands and Tolbachik in Kamchatka, Tass said.

It said scientists took hundreds of sterile test samples of ashes, slugs and stone bombs and found amino compounds, aminosugar hydrocarbons, components of nucleic acids and other organic substances.

Tass said these compounds were considered primary elements in the evolutionary cycle that led to the development of living organisms.

Six Chinese chefs showed the world what "fast food" really means, according to the official Chinese news agency.

In a tradesman's tournament, the master chefs needed only 124 seconds to transform squawking chickens into spicy mouthfuls of "cubed palace jewels," a Szechuan dish of cubed chicken breasts depressed with peanuts and steeped in chili sauce.

Crime caught up with one culprit 18 years later.

Louis Di Carlo's mother recently received a truancy notice dated June 2, 1960 for her son. When she called Louis—now 34 years old, married and the father of two children—on the carpet, he claimed he didn't remember the incident.

"Maybe I was with the guys. We used to get together and harmonize on the corner," he added. "It's embarrassing. After all this time I get nailed."

To combat the rising risk of skyjackings, an airline hired two psychiatrists, unbeknown to each other, as special security guards.

The guards were separately instructed to arrest anyone displaying signs of "mental instability." Both took up their posts and began looking for suspects.

In only minutes, the first culprit was seized. One psychiatrist had zealously arrested the other.

Series To Review Progress With Environment

NEW YORK (AP) — Nearly 10 years have passed since "CBS Evening News" considered the question, "Can the World Be Saved?" for an award-winning series on the environment.

"The main thing we got from that were predictions from the environmentalists, people like Paul Ehrlich and Barry Commoner, about the future of the world," Walter Cronkite says of the series broadcast in 1970 and '71.

"Some were more pessimistic than others, but all said we had to move with great dispatch in the next 10 years, or it really would be too late to save the environment.

"We're coming to the end of the decade," the evening news anchorman says, "and it's time to ask them again, 'Have we done enough?'"

"I suspect the bottom line is going to be that we've done a great deal, but still not all we must."

The environment is reconsidered in "The Earth Revisited: An Environmental Update," a series of five "CBS Evening News" reports to be broadcast Monday, Jan. 1, through Friday, Jan. 5.

It is the first phase of a year-long examination of the threats to life from population growth, resource depletion, pollution and nuclear proliferation.

Cronkite and producer Jonathan Ward recently traveled nearly 30,000 miles collecting material for the series.

"I saw that we are making progress," Cronkite says, "that most governments are aware of environmental problems and are doing something about them."

"But one of the problems is that some Third World countries are so anxious to catch up industrially that they don't see the danger in polluting the environment," he says.

Cronkite and Ward visited a number of places where environmental issues are especially significant, including:

*Alamogordo, N.M., site of the country's first nuclear blast.

*Singapore, where the world's most stringent population control program is underway.

*Athens, Greece, where air pollution is eating away at centuries-old buildings.

*Stockholm, Sweden, where people use two-thirds the energy per person to maintain a standard of living higher than that of the United States.

In addition to Cronkite's reporting, correspondents Terry Drinkwater, Charles Kuralt, Bill Plante, Robert Schakne and Richard Threlkeld will update reports they delivered in 1970 and 1971.

"It's sometimes necessary to stop and assemble what we've been reporting in bits and pieces over the years," Cronkite says. "A lot has happened since 1971, and though we have reported these developments, it sometimes helps to stand back and look at what it all means."

"In a way, that's what we did with Watergate," the anchorman says. "We got a lot of credit for doing the first comprehensive piece on Watergate, and though we weren't first with a lot of the information, we did bring all the loose ends together, and it had quite an impact on the public."

All three networks are using the extended report more these days to examine important subjects, and, says Cronkite, in addition to the obvious public benefit, "it has a payoff, in a sense, in enabling our staff to swing out a bit beyond the daily coverage."

And, says Cronkite, "I do indeed like to get out occasionally and do some original reporting, in a sense get back in touch with the people."

Severe snowstorms tend to bring out the quirks in people.

When snow fell last winter on the New York metropolitan area, Michael Bay of Long Island walked for two hours in a storm to buy two union bags. When the clerk asked if the second was for his wife, Bay replied, "Would my mother send me to a night like this?"

Series To Review Progress With Environment

NEW YORK (AP) — Nearly 10 years have passed since "CBS Evening News" considered the question, "Can the World Be Saved?" for an award-winning series on the environment.

"The main thing we got from that were predictions from the environmentalists, people like Paul Ehrlich and Barry Commoner, about the future of the world," Walter Cronkite says of the series broadcast in 1970 and '71.

"Some were more pessimistic than others, but all said we had to move with great dispatch in the next 10 years, or it really would be too late to save the environment.

"We're coming to the end of the decade," the evening news anchorman says, "and it's time to ask them again, 'Have we done enough?'"

"I suspect the bottom line is going to be that we've done a great deal, but still not all we must."

The environment is reconsidered in "The Earth Revisited: An Environmental Update," a series of five "CBS Evening News" reports to be broadcast Monday, Jan. 1, through Friday, Jan. 5.

It is the first phase of a year-long examination of the threats to life from population growth, resource depletion, pollution and nuclear proliferation.

Cronkite and producer Jonathan Ward recently traveled nearly 30,000 miles collecting material for the series.

"I saw that we are making progress," Cronkite says, "that most governments are aware of environmental problems and are doing something about them."

"But one of the problems is that some Third World countries are so anxious to catch up industrially that they don't see the danger in polluting the environment," he says.

Cronkite and Ward visited a number of places where environmental issues are especially significant including

•Alamogordo, N.M., site of the country's first nuclear blast

•Singapore, where the world's most stringent population control program is underway.

•Athens, Greece, where air pollution is eating away at centuries-old buildings.

•Stockholm, Sweden, where people use two-thirds the energy per person to maintain a standard of living higher than that of the United States.

In addition to Cronkite's reporting, correspondents Terry Drinkwater, Charles Kuralt, Bill Plante, Robert Schakne and Richard Threlkeld will update reports they delivered in 1970 and 1971.

"It's sometimes necessary to stop and assemble what we've been reporting in bits and pieces over the years," Cronkite says. "A lot has happened since 1971, and though we have reported these developments, it sometimes helps to stand back and look at what it all means."

"In a way, that's what we did with Watergate," the anchorman says. "We got a lot of credit for doing the first comprehensive piece on Watergate, and though we weren't first with a lot of the information, we did bring all the loose ends together, and it had quite an impact on the public."

All three networks are using the extended report more these days to examine important subjects, and, says Cronkite, it, in addition to the obvious public benefit, "it has a payoff, in a sense, in enabling our staff to swing out a bit beyond the daily coverage."

Film Moguls Upgrade 'Star Trek' Movie Fittings

By DICK KLEINER
 HOLLYWOOD (NEA)—First, the good news. The movie version of "Star Trek" is rolling along.
 But, for all you Trekkies, there is news which you may consider not so good. And that is that you won't recognize a lot of things you'll see in the movie.
 You won't recognize the uniforms that Captain Kirk and Mr. Spock and all those lovely people wear. This, the powers-that-be have decided, is a MOOOVIE, and you have to differentiate between MOOOVIES and a lowly TV series, so the whole space ship and the uniforms and all that have been upgraded.

Then there is the set itself. The Star Ship Enterprise is still slicing through the outer reaches of space, and, in general, the familiar control room will still be familiar. But there are changes, making it all just a touch more elaborate.

For one thing, at each position on the control room, there is a video screen. There always was. But, because of the budgetary limitations of TV, those video screens rarely showed anything on the old series. But in the movie, each screen has been set to show something different at all times.

"The miracle was," says Leonard Nimoy, our good old friend, Mr. Spock, "that we were able to make the television show look as good as we did. The budget was low and the time issue was always pressing.

"When we wanted to show another planet, we had to suggest it with a few bits and pieces on the next soundstage, but in this one, when we first see me, I'm on my native planet, Vulcan, and to shoot that we went to Yellowstone National Park and, on top of that, they added a vast mat process."

The engine room of the Enterprise is a vast, awesome assemblage of units, glowing and pulsating. Through the use of Hollywood trickery, it will look, on screen, a lot bigger than it really is.

The sick bay, where the Enterprise's fine physician (he makes planet calls), played again by DeForrest Kelley, operates, is something like the one you remember from the series. But here, too, it is larger, more elaborate, more expensive.

Director Robert Wise explains that what is OK for television is simply not OK for a feature.

"When I took over this project," Wise says, "they had built some sets already, for the planned new 'Star Trek' TV series. I decided that they just weren't good enough for the big screen, so I had them torn down and new ones built."

"It's all bigger and more expensive," says Gene Roddenberry, who produced the original series and is producing the movie, too. "And both Bob Wise and I realize we are walking a narrow line between what the Trekkies expect and what we feel we must do, which is to enlarge it—but enlarge it tastefully."

They both feel that they are accomplishing that goal. And they feel that the show's loyal and vociferous fans will accept the new sets and the new costumes, especially since those new costumes will be worn by old familiar forms—William Shatner, Nimoy, Kelley and the others.

Some may think that it is a curious assignment for Robert Wise, who most people remember primarily as the director of "The Sound of Music". But he has directed some science-fiction films in the past, notably "The Day the Earth Stood Still."

Wise and Roddenberry met some years ago, the producer recalls, at a science-fiction and fantasy film festival at the University of Arizona. They both appeared on a panel, and they both remember there was a rapport.

"When Paramount finally decided to make this movie, they gave me a list of available directors," Roddenberry says. "I saw the name, Robert Wise, and jumped."

Wise says he was equally pleased at the opportunity. He says he got his start in films working for the late Val Lewton, who turned out many low-budget horror films in the '40s. Working for Lewton on such gems as "Curse of the Cat People" sparked his interest in science-fiction and fantasy films.

"When they asked me to do this," he says, "I really wasn't a 'Star Trek' fan. But I got hold of six or seven cassettes of old programs and screened them. Some I liked, some I didn't. But I did see a lot that I felt was interesting, so I said 'yes'." The script, at that time, had no Mr. Spock in it. Nimoy had said that he was not available at the time. But I felt that Mr. Spock was absolutely essential, so I fought to get him."

He did get him, and that may be the best news of all.

Author Couple Compare Work

NEW YORK (NEA)—When two authors-turned authors are married to each other is life just one bowl of overripe eggs?

Lull Palmer and her husband, Carlos Thompson, one-time Argentine matinee idol who gave up acting for writing, said nay during a taping of "The Dick Cavett Show," set to air Jan. 4.

Thompson gallantly bowed, "I married the writer."

Cavett seemed to think both she and her husband have loads of charm. He told them, "You two are the best-looking couple of the decade."

"Which decade?" Thompson retorted.

'Brink's Job' Lacks Action, Excitement

FILMETER is compiled by Dick Kleiner in Hollywood and the N.E.A. staff in both Hollywood and New York.

NEW RELEASES

THE BRINK'S JOB — Peter Falk, Peter Boyle, Gena Rowlands, Warren Oates. Crime. This is the recreation of the famous Boston armored car robbery, but if you want a rip-em-up, cops-and-robbers film, stay home. Director William Friedkin plays this more for gentle humor and compassion. It works if you want that, but if you like action, this will bore you. GRADE: B.

MOMENT BY MOMENT (R) — Lily Tomlin, John Travolta. Romance. "Hour By Hour" would be a better title, because this seems endless. It is the old cliché of the rich lady and the young, brash kid. It proceeds at a snail's pace and even the snail is bored. Poorly acted (except by Travolta) and directed. GRADE: C-minus.

GENERAL RELEASE CALIFORNIA SUITE (PG) — Jane

Fonda, Alan Alda, Maggie Smith, Michael Caine, Walter Matthau. Comedy and drama. Neil Simon's play, like his "Plaza Suite," is a group of stories united only by the fact that they all take place in one hotel — this time, The Beverly Hills Hotel. Director Herb Ross is much more successful with the dramatic stories than with the comedies, which become embarrassing. Fonda and Smith are superb. GRADE: A (for the dramas), C (for the comedies) and thus, B (overall).

KING OF THE GYPSIES (R) — Sterling Hayden, Susan Sarandon, Shelley Winters, Judd Hirsch, Brooke Shields, Eric Roberts. Drama. Slick attempt to raid the gypsy underworld for "Godfather" material falls victim to a dull, predictable story and a messy stew of ethnic clichés. No feeling for the milieu or the people. Casting and acting are strikingly poor. GRADE: C-minus (Handler).

LORD OF THE RINGS (PG) — Animated fantasy. J.R.R. Tolkien's works come to the screen, animated by Ralph Bakshi of "Fritz the Cat" fame. If you are familiar with Tolkien's creations — hobbits, black horsemen and the rest — this could be exciting. But if you're not, it's gibberish. The art work is beautiful, but the story is impossible for aliens to follow. And caution — animated or not, it is so violent that it's not for kids. GRADE: B for Tolkien fans; D for the rest of us.

MOVIE, MOVIE (G) — George C. Scott, Trish VanDevere, Red Buttons. Comedy, musical. Double-bill salute-cum-spoof of '30s and '40s light films and musicals that has it all down pat, right down to the last cliché. You can still get the real thing on the late show, but this is worth a few chuckles and a tap dance down memory lane. GRADE: B. (O'Brien)

YEAR END SALE

PUBLIC NOTICE

FACT #1 Everything in our inventory on Jan. 1 is taxable. We had much rather cut 2 to 3 hundred dollars off the price than to pay the same amount in tax dollars.

FACT #2 After Jan. 1 the taxes paid on unsold cars must be considered expense. In actuality this creates a consumer price increase.

FACT #3 Wide car buyers know this. They take advantage of it and they tell their friends about it too!

Queen Elizabeth's Honors List Includes Olivia Newton-John

LONDON (AP) — Film star-singer Olivia Newton-John, ex-Communist trade union leader Hugh Scanlon and auto racer Jack Brabham were among scores of residents or former residents of the British Commonwealth cited today in Queen Elizabeth II's New Year's honors list.

The queen's two yearly honors lists — the other comes on her birthday — mark the pinnacles of successful careers and milestones of brilliant ones across the Commonwealth.

A retired fleet admiral, a lone yachtswoman, a flock of industrialists and an immigrant from America who founded the Santa Claus Union demonstrate the wide scope of the latest list, issued by the government in the Queen's name.

Scanlon, 65, retired head of the Engineering Workers union, is one of six new barons for life. In earlier days he was renowned as a fire eater, but lately was regarded as a powerful force for union moderation and cooperation with the Labor Party government.

Joan Sutherland, 53, an Australian who specializes in Italian opera, and entertainer Gracie Fields, 80 — both already Companions of the Order of the British Empire — advanced to Dames Commander of the order. Dame is the feminine equivalent of knight.

Brabham, also an Australian, received a knighthood for "distinguished service to the sport of motor racing" during a long career as a champion driver and racing car builder.

Less well known but just as influential in his field is another new knight — William Empson, whose 1930 work "Seven Types of Ambiguity" had a profound effect on subsequent literary criticism.

The honors, ranging through business, the civil service, the arts and sports, tap both public figures and those who are only famous at home.

Miss Newton-John, 30, co-star with John Travolta in the motion picture "Grease," gets the rank of OBE — Officer of the Order of the British Empire.

The Beatles were recognized 12 years ago by the Queen with the same honor.

Other OBEs: author James Herriot and G.K. Lokyer, chief fire officer of the Leicestershire Fire Brigade; entertainer Tommy Steele and sparkplug manufacturer Stephen Gortvay; Gordon Jackson, who played the butler in "Upstairs, Downstairs," and Alexander Young Balfour, senior inspector of taxes.

A few awards carry specific citations, the most common being "for services to export." Others include "services to palaeography," "services to Rugby football" and "services to the Road Haulage Association in Kent."

The new life peers include Admiral of the Fleet Sir Peter Hill-Norton, 63, former chairman of the military committee of the North Atlantic Alliance.

Another is Sir Bernard Miles, 71, whose stage career has ranged from wartime rustic comedian to actor-director and founder of London's Mermaid Theater.

Naomi James, 29, who sailed single-handed around the world in 272 days and clipped two days from Sir Francis Chichester's record for the 30,000-mile voyage, was named a Dame Commander of the British Empire.

Among Members of the Order of the British Empire (MBEs) is American-born Ed Berman, a Pied Piper of community action who has only been a British citizen for two years.

Born in Lewiston, Maine, Berman has lived in England since 1968, founding such projects as the "Almost Free Theater," a farm for children in north London and the Santa Claus Union — which once applied to London authorities to kick the Queen out of Buckingham Palace and turn it into public housing.

Other new MBEs: 100-meter runner Sonia Lannaman, race driver Roger Clark and merchant Capt. Hector Connell, who took 346 Vietnamese refugees aboard his bulk grain carrier Wellpark, saving them from almost certain death in the South China Sea. Some of the refugees now live in Britain.

Youngest figure on the honors list is MBE Tracey Wickham, 16, a freckle-faced swimmer from Australia who broke three world freestyle records this year, in the 400, 800 and 1,500 meter events.

STORM WARNINGS

Landlord Evicts Heiress

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Heiress Louise Vanderbilt, who joined forces with poor people during a rent dispute with her landlord, has been ordered evicted from the two apartments she rents in a Victorian mansion.

But an appeal to Superior Court, which was started Thursday just three hours after the eviction order was issued, will keep Mrs. Vanderbilt from being moved out of the apartments for at least two or three months.

District Court Judge Vincent A. Rago issued the eviction order at the request of Harry B. Casey, the Newport County sheriff. He became Mrs. Vanderbilt's landlord last spring when he bought the Mallands, a Bellevue Avenue mansion.

At the time, Mrs. Vanderbilt was renting two of the Mallands apartments for $950 a month. Casey tried to triple her rent, but Mrs. Vanderbilt refused, offering to pay only $150 a month more.

After the dispute began last summer, Mrs. Vanderbilt joined forces with the Newport County Tenants Association, a group that represents some of the city's poorest residents. The association has been urging the City Council to enact a rent-control ordinance.

Casey took the matter to District Court, and since Oct. 1, while awaiting the judge's decision, he has refused to cash Mrs. Vanderbilt's rent checks.

LOUISE VANDERBILT

Pig Happy Drinking Beer

DANVILLE, Va. (AP) — Karl the pig likes his new owner, Billy McGee, who feeds Karl plenty of buttermilk and bread and lets him chug-a-lug all the beer he can hold.

This delights McGee. "Karl," he said, "is the damndest pig I've ever owned. I'm only letting him have one or two (Pabst) Blue Ribbons a day. If he had more, it'd make an alcoholic out of him."

Karl was drunk the day McGee brought him home from Penhook, Va. "He'd had one or two up there, and a couple more on the way home and one when he got here," McGee said. "Then he just laid down and went to sleep."

McGee got the beer-guzzling pig in early November from Fred Munson of Penhook. Munson got rid of Karl because he roamed the grounds and devastated Munson's flowers.

McGee wants to turn Karl — who recently weighed a delicate 130 pounds — into 600 pounds of wallowing hog. This will allow McGee to make a profitable sale.

To do this, he wants to feed his new pig well and let him do what he loves to do: guzzle beer. "I've never seen a pig like this," McGee said, lifting a frosty six-pack from his truck, "and never heard of one, except on television."

He walked to Karl's pen. Karl snorted and squealed when he heard McGee snap open a beer can. The pig sat and turned his wet, pink snout skyward. McGee started pouring beer down the pig's gullet.

Old Canal Marker Stolen

NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J. (AP) — Police here are searching for thieves who stole a century-old, 700-pound mile post marker from the tow path of the old Delaware and Raritan Canal.

The theft of the marker, located behind several Rutgers University dormitories along the Raritan River, was reported Thursday by Charles Miller, a resident engineer for the state Department of Transportation.

The nine-foot long stone marker was installed when the canal was built in the mid-1800s, Miller said.

Film Director Weds

ROME (AP) — Italian film director Bernardo Bertolucci has married Claire Peopole, his American assistant, in a ceremony at Rome's Campidoglio City Hall.

The 38-year-old Bertolucci, who directed "The Last Tango in Paris" and "900," and the 31-year-old Miss Peopole had known each other for five years. The wedding took place on Friday.

Construction Breaks Record

A-J Correspondent
BIG SPRING — The city inspectors here accepted an application shortly before noon Friday which put construction for the year over a record breaking $10 million mark.

Representatives of Mikus Construction Co. of Arlington signed a permit for three projects at the College Park Shopping Center, totaling $1.7 million. Groundwork already has begun on a new TG&Y store and Revo Drug Store plus an addition to the new Safeway Store in the center, according to Mark Campbell, city building inspector.

"This will put us way, way into record breaking figures for the year," Campbell said. With the additional $1.7 million, construction in the city will total $10,313,522.75. The closest Big Spring has come to that figure was in 1974, the year the new $7.5 million Malone-Hogan Medical Complex was built, when the total came $8.3 million.

Construction in 1977 totaled $6.2 million, and just under $5 million in 1976.

The new TG&Y store will span 60,000 square feet while the Safeway store will grow by nearly 34,000 square feet. The 8,500 square foot Revo Drug Co. will occupy the building next to Safeway.

Campbell added that two fast food chains hope also to locate in the shopping center. One specializes in Mexican food while the other is a large hamburger chain.

"This may be a pretty tough record to break next year," said Campbell. "But proposed construction out at the K Mart site should really boost the new total," he added.

Tech Falls To Clemson

EL PASO (Special) — Texas Tech found out the hard way Friday night one can die at the free-throw line as well as live there.

The underdog Red Raiders missed out on three one-and-one opportunities down the stretch and saw their Sun Bowl basketball tournament title hopes go up in smoke as Derrick Johnson canned a 30-footer with 34 seconds remaining to hand unbeaten Clemson a come-from-behind 58-57 victory before 10,942 fans.

However, even in defeat, Gerald Myers' crew proved it will be a force to be reckoned with during the upcoming Southwest Conference season. The youthful Raiders wound up non-conference play at 8-2, and came within a hair of winning one of this year's most prestigious tournaments.

Rugged inside game by Ralph Brewster, Joe Baxter and Ben Hill propelled Tech into a surprising 40-28 halftime lead. The Tigers, now 9-0, kept their composure and held the Raiders to a meager eight field goals over the last 20 minutes with a variety of defenses.

A drive by Clemson's Marvin Dickerson cut the margin to one with 2:40 showing but the highly partisan Tech crowd breathed a sigh of relief when senior guard Geoff Huston, one of the foul shooting heroes of Thursday night's upset of Michigan, stepped to the line. But his effort bounced off the rim and Horace Wyatt promptly put the Tigers ahead for the first time since the game's opening minute with a baseline jumper with 1:56 left.

Brewster, who was the game's leading rebounder with 10 despite dueling a variety of stocky 6-10 Clemson players got his chance from the line at the 1:37 mark, but he couldn't hit either.

That's when Clemson went into its delay game, but Brewster came through by stealing a pass and Baxter canned an eight-footer from the baseline—his only fieldgoal of the night to give the Raiders a 57-56 advantage with a minute left.

Clemson called time and coach Bill Foster decided to play a deadly game—to go for the last shot—despite being behind. It proved to be a miracle strategy as Johnson, a senior guard who had missed all eight of his previous field goal attempts, bombed it in from 30 feet as Tech hung back in its zone defense.

Two seconds showed on the clock when Baxter rifled a desperation inbounds pass over the length of the court and the drama was over when Tech fouled Billy Williams. He missed the ensuing one-and-one and David Little couldn't get a shot off before the buzzer.

There was some consolation for the Raiders. Williams was named the tournament's most valuable player, and Huston and Hill gained spots on the five-man all-tournament team.

Even though the Raiders were the darkhorse of the four-team meet, they ruled the first half convincingly. Hill responded with 11 points and Tech outshot Clemson 52 percent to 32 percent and also held a 19-12 rebound edge.

But all that was erased in the second half. Tech wound up shooting 45 percent—same as the Tigers—and lost the board battle 33-29. And after hitting eight-of-nine from the line in the first half, Tech managed a scant 1-of-5 in the final stanza.

Tech outscored Clemson 23-10 during the final 10 minutes of the first half, with a lineup mainly of Brewster, Baxter, Hill, Little and guard Tommy Parks, keeping the Tigers' dangerous inside attack off balance.

Former Tech player Larry Wood won a $400 scholarship for Tech by canning a mid-court shot during earlier halftime activities.

Michigan won the third-place game over host UT—El Paso 60-54.

Tech returns to action Jan. 6 when it hosts pre-season SWC pick, Texas.

Woody Lashes Out

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Middle guard Charlie Bauman doused an Ohio State rally and ignited Coach Woody Hayes' famous temper Friday night in Clemson's 17-15 Gator Bowl victory over Ohio State.

Bauman intercepted an Art Schlichter pass with two minutes left in the game to clinch the victory. After he was pushed out of bounds along the sideline by the Ohio State bench, Hayes grabbed Bauman from behind as the middle guard got up.

Post-game accounts differed on whether Hayes landed any punches, but the fiery veteran coach triggered a fracas that sent fist-swinging players swarming across the field.

"I was hit, I don't know by who," said Bauman. A few minutes later, Bauman said, "I'm not saying anything."

Clemson defensive end Jonathan Brooks said: "A lot of the players said Woody hit him. It looked like he did."

"I was in the middle of a whole bunch of people. I got hit a couple of times and I hit a couple of people trying to get out of there."

It took officials several minutes to clear the field. They assessed Ohio State an unsportsmanlike conduct penalty.

Duke Suffers Upset

NEW YORK (AP) — It took Herb Williams and his Ohio State teammates a whole first half to get their game together — and when they did, they pulled Duke's game apart in the Holiday Festival Basketball Tournament at Madison Square Garden Friday night.

Williams scored only three points and the Buckeyes shot a pitiful 28 percent from the field while falling behind the nation's top-ranked team by 14 points at the half.

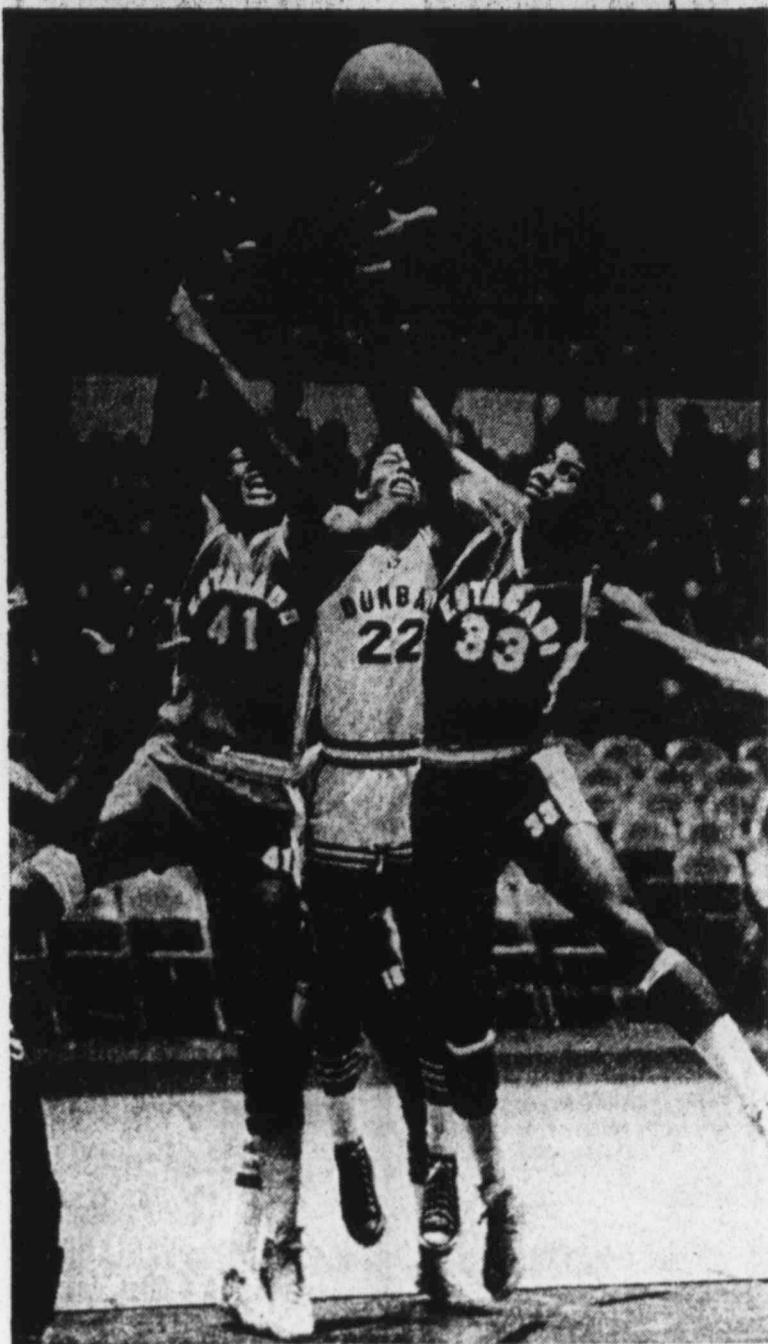

But then the Buckeyes turned things around with a furious rally and went on to score a shocking 90-84 upset over the Blue Devils in overtime.

"We were not that discouraged in the first half," said Williams. "At halftime, we just talked about eliminating our mistakes. In my mind, sooner or later we were going to take charge of the game."

Williams, feeling his shooting touch coming back, continually asked for the ball and continually hit the mark in the second half.

He wound up with 23 points, including 2 that triggered a game-breaking stretch of 10 straight points in overtime.

Landry Hopes Cowboys 'Get High' For Falcons

By The Associated Press
The formula is simple. Applying it is the difficult part. Coach Tom Landry knows exactly what's needed for his Dallas Cowboys, the defending National Football League champions, to win a third Super Bowl crown.
"To win in the NFL," said Landry, "you have to play at a high level. To win the Super Bowl, you have to play at a high level three times in a row."
Landry's Cowboys begin the sometimes treacherous road to football's world championship today when they face the wild card Atlanta Falcons in the opening game of National Football Conference playoffs. In the opening American Football Conference game, Denver plays at Pittsburgh. Sunday, Los Angeles entertains Minnesota in the NFC and wild card Houston plays at New England in the AFC.

The Falcons earned their way into the conference semifinals by eliminating Philadelphia 14-13 in last week's wild card opener. It was another last minute victory—the fifth this season for Atlanta, and it left Landry impressed.
"They're a fine defensive football team, in the top category in the conference with Los Angeles and ourselves," he said. "They're an aggressive football team. They always have been. That's their style. Their defense is solid, not one that is going reckless with their blitzes, but going by design."

Landry feels the Falcons' blitzing style could cause problems.
"When you're playing a blitzing team, you have to guess right," he said. "You have to make big plays against this type of defense. I expect our game to be low scoring, tight. When you play a blitzing team, you can't do as many things against them so you take your good plays and go with them."
The Cowboys' good plays helped Dallas lead the NFC with an average of 372.4 yards per game in total offense. The club scored 384 points, tops in the NFL.
The balanced Dallas offense is spearheaded by quarterback Roger Staubach, who set club records with 231 completions in 413 attempts for 3,190 yards and 25 touchdowns. Tony Dorsett set another Cowboys' record, rushing for 1,325 yards, joining Lawrence McCutcheon of Los Angeles and ex-Green Bay star John Brockington as the only runners to go over 1,000 yards in each of their first two NFL seasons.

The Steelers-Broncos game is a rematch of a regular-season matchup at Denver two weeks ago that was one of the season's most exciting games.
Pittsburgh and Denver carry the NFL's two stingiest defenses into the game. The Steelers allowed 195 points, fewest in the league and only three less than the Broncos.

Slaton Action Winding Down

SLATON (Special) — Floydada's girls took a pair of games here Friday and Idalou and Christ the King split in tournament action at the Slaton High School gym.
Floydada stopped the Cooper girls 52-46 and then stopped Idalou, 41-29, with Kim Curry scoring 19 and 16 points, respectively, in the two wins. Cooper's Sherra Fredenburg hit 16 points and Idalou's Janet Williams had 10 to top the losing efforts.

In Idalou's other contest, the girls stopped Tulia, 39-18, with Miss Lowe's 11 points high for the winners and Simpson and Joiner each hitting 5 for Tulia.

Christ the King girls stopped McCamery, 62-41 on the strength of a 26-point performance by Carrie Mosser, while Miss Seward hit 10 for the losers.

Monterey's girls topped Christ the King, however, 39-33, with Kris Etheridge's 11 points leading the way, while Miss Mosser was held to 9 to lead Christ the King.

Today's schedule includes a 4 p.m. clash between Christ the King and Idalou for 7th place in the 16-team tourney, a 5:30 p.m. contest between Monterey and Floydada for 5th place, or the consolation prize, and 7 and 9 p.m. contests involving Dimmitt, DeSoto, Slaton and Frenship for 1st through 4th places in the tourney.

The Dimmitt Bobcats rolled over DeSoto to 56-34 in the championship bracket. Norma Sandoval led the Bobcats scoring spree as she blasted the nets for a sum of 25 total points. High scorer for DeSoto was Miss Gage with 11.

The Slaton Tigers outmatched Frenship 63-49 in other championship play Debbie Bedmarer whipped in 24 points to lead the Tigers, while Tanya Ivey hit 23 points for Frenship.

Dimmitt and Slaton are slated to pair off for the undisputed championship berth today tonight at 8:30 and DeSoto and Frenship will meet each other in the third place bracket at 7:00 p.m.

Muleshoe

Ronnie Carry powered Bovina to a 50-44 victory over Shallowater—in the losers' bracket of the Muleshoe Basketball Tourney—with a total of 16 points for the game. Layne Giles and Barry Randolph were the high point men for the Mustangs with 8 points each.

The Farwell Steers got the upper-hand on Springlake-Earth 43-30 as Rowdy Chandler scored 15 points. Biff Belew and Ronnie James each had 10 points for SL-E.

Janie Richards jabbed in 11 points to lead the Muleshoe girls team to a 59-21 win over the Littlefield JV team in the losers bracket. Jamie Lee scored 14 points for the losers.

In other losers' bracket action, Christy Pittman took 15 points to lead Springlake-Earth to a 53-40 win over the Farwell girls team. Paula Christian was the high scorer for Farwell with a total of 13 points.

The Abernathy boys team upended Littlefield in the winners bracket 57-47. Scott Morrison scored 15 points, while Keith McCane took 19 points for Littlefield.

Dennis Read netted 16 points to lead the scoring tally for Shallowater's 49-46 win over Bovina in the girl's winner's bracket. Terri Stanton was the high scorer for Bovina with a sum of 18 points for the game.

Jayton

The Spur boys team outlasted Ralls to take a narrow 53-52 victory over the Jackrabbits in the consolation bracket of the Jayton Tourney. Fred Reed led Spur's scoring with 15 points, while David Henrich dropped in 21 for Ralls.

The Jayton boys' team whipped Haskell 43-35, also in the consolation bracket. George Johnson netted 13 points for the Jaybirds. Greg Gidon led Haskell's scoring with an impressive 28 points.

In other consolation action, Cahoma ran over Spur 42-37. Rhonda Griffen hit 14 points for Coahoma and Tanya Long had 14 points for Spur.

Kim Lane scored 19 points to lead Haskell over Jayton 49-42 in consolation action. High point for the Jaybirds was Shelly Williams with 15 points.

Angelia Dykes popped in 11 points to lead Cahoma to a 46-25 win over Knox City in more consolation bracket play. Rhonda Skiles had 25 for Knox City.

Randy Creger downed 16 points to pace Forsan to a 56-46 victory over Post in the championship bracket. Brian Compton was the high scorer for Post with 14 points.

Other championship bracket play saw the Forsan girls ramble over Post 51-30. Julie Poyner knocked in 12 points to power Forsan, while Dana Bird led Post with 10 points.

Borger

Chester Williams hit for 18 points to delight the home town crowd as Borger defeated Perryton 58-50 in the winners bracket of the Borger Tourney.

Jeff Cooper had 14 for Perryton but it wasn't enough and the Rangers dropped their first game of the tourney.

In the losers bracket Odessa Ector got back in the winning groove dropping Dumas 56-46. George Cooper paced the winners with 20 points and Rick Logan had 14 for Dumas.

The tournament is a double-elimination affair.

Pampa

The Coronado girls basketball team, after losing to Dumas in the first round of Pampa Tournament play Thursday night, came back and rambled over an unwary Borger team 49-43 Friday.

High point for Borger's squared was cager Cotter with who netted 13 points against a flexible yet unbreakable Mustangs defense.

The win will advance CHS into the consolation bracket of the Pampa Tourney and the Mustangs are slated to pair off against Pampa at 4:15 today.

Plainsmen Whip Mustangs 41-37

By BOB BAJACKSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Betting that the Monterey Plainsmen will win the ABC Caprock Basketball Tournament each season is almost as safe as wagering that folks are making resolutions this time of year.

So, Monterey fans, the 20th Annual Caprock Tournament was just another verse of "Auld Lang Syne": Monterey 41, Coronado 37.

Plainsman senior guard Frank Malone, the smallest man on the court at 5-9, came up with the biggest plays of the game in the final period to preserve the Plainsmen victory.

With 46 seconds remaining and Monterey holding a 36-35 lead, Malone sank both ends of a one-and-one situation to up MHS' margin to three. Before he went to the line, Coronado gave the Monterey guard an extra minute to think about the free throws as the Mustangs called time.

Then seconds later Malone took a pass from guard Dean Walker and drove the line. As he approached the free throw line, Malone soared in the air and put a desperation shot up. The ball hit high on the glass and fell through as a foul was called on Coronado guard Scott Williams. Malone sank the free throw and the Plainsmen had a 41-35 advantage.

With shouts from the bench of "Don't foul!" the Plainsmen kept their hands high in the air and offered no resistance as Mustang forward Mark Reed put the final bucket through the hoop.

It was the eighth time in the last ten years that Monterey have captured the Division I championship. And despite Monterey's consistent success, Plainsmen coach Joe Michalka didn't run out of words describing what it feels like to be tournament champion.

"We hit a dry spell the last couple of years and it feels great to be back on top," said a happy and hoarse Michalka. "These kids went through a lot of hard work to win the tournament."

In the only Division I afternoon game, forwards Dick Woodruff and Mike Nixon both scored 13 points and postman Ricky Cobb added 12 as the Wichita Falls High Coyotes defeated the Dimmitt Bobcats 45-41 in the consolation game.

Wichita Falls, who trailed 22-20 after the first two quarters, made up the deficit by outscoring Dimmitt 25-19 in the final half.

Mark Summers paced the Bobcats scoring attack with 13, while guard Dennis Veals added 10.

Clemson Upends Buckeyes

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Obed Arris's 47-yard field goal and fourth-string tailback Cliff Austin's 1-yard touchdown plunge gave Clemson a 17-9 lead, and the Tigers' defense held off an Ohio State rally to give the seventh-ranked State a 17-15 Gator Bowl victory over the Buckeyes Friday night.

The triumph made Danny Ford, who took over when Coach Charley Pell accepted the Florida coaching job at the end of the regular season, a success in his first game as head coach. The loss was the fourth Bowl defeat in the last five years for Ohio State and Coach Woody Hayes.

Gray Team Wins Bowl 28-24

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Gray Coach Vince Gibson of Louisville said the recovery of an offside kickoff early in the game "fired our kids up" as the South all-stars went on to a 28-24 victory Friday in the 41st annual Blue-Gray Football Classic.

But Gibson said the key to the Gray team's victory was the Gray's defensive line.

"I thought the difference in the game was the South's defensive line stopping the run all day," Gibson said. "The North was able to pass — Ed Smith is a fine one — and they made a fine comeback. But we snapped right back with our own comeback."

The Gray team ran up a 21-0 lead before the Blue drove into the second half to go ahead 24-21. The winning touchdown came on a one-foot plunge by Gray running back Chris Hill of Kentucky.

"It was an exciting, well played game," said Blue Coach Joe Yukica of Dartmouth. "The onside kick at the beginning really hurt us."

"I was happy though with the way we fought back, after being down 21-0, to take the lead 24-21," he continued. "After they regained the lead, we had another drive going before we were stopped by a fumble."

Duke quarterback Mike Dunn scored one touchdown and passed for another.

UH Leader Shows Class

DALLAS (UPI) — Whatever the most recently approved way to describe a classy human being might be is the way to describe the quarterback for the Houston Cougars.

He is Danny Davis and he is slick.

Even Notre Dame coach Dan Devine has to admit that. "I met Danny the other night," said Devine. "It was the first time I had ever talked to him and he is something. He is obviously a team leader and a class person. Those are qualities you look for in a football player. And when a guy like that has talent to go with it, well, you have somebody special."

Davis, who will lead the Cougars against Notre Dame in the Cotton Bowl Monday, appeared at a media gathering Friday dressed as if he were in a movie. He wore a gray, vested suit that would have made Robert Redford drool.

"People say we haven't been getting much attention this year," Davis said. "I thought if I dressed up a little people might take notice."

A few minutes earlier some of the Notre Dame players had said the key to their defensive effort was stopping Davis, the option quarterback who has directed the Cougars to two Southwest Conference championships in the last three years.

In the one year Houston did not win the SWC crown, Davis was sidelined for the season with an injury.

"I don't know why anybody cares about me," Davis said when told that his Monday opponents thought he would be a critical factor in the game.

"I'm just a little bit guy (511) who is not very fast (about 4.7 speed in the 40) and I don't do anything but hand off to other guys."

"I sure don't think I am going to be a factor in the game. I would like to be, but I don't think I will be. But when you see those (Notre Dame) guys again thank them for saying so."

Davis has a history of playing well in the Cotton Bowl. He has played there eight times in his career — five in high school, twice against Southern Methodist while playing for the Cougars and once in the Cotton Bowl game against Maryland two seasons ago.

He has won all eight times.

"And if you count those games me and my friends played there after we sold popcorn and soft drinks, I won all of them, too," said Davis, who, while in junior high school, used to make about $40 a game as a vendor.

Davis is enough of a politician to be able to change his tune now and then. Earlier in the week he was talking about how fun it would be to have a chance at Notre Dame.

On Friday, however, he said it was just another contest.

"It's just football," said Davis. "Football is what goes on when you play anybody. I would think there are a lot of schools in this country with a lot of tradition. I know one thing, I think it will be a good game. It's a game we want to win, but we want to win them all."

Switzer, Sims Deny Article

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Oklahoma football coach Barry Switzer said today that Heisman Trophy winner Billy Sims has denied making statements about having a wild nightlife in Miami that were attributed to Sims by a Miami News reporter. The reporter says he has Sims on tape.

"I talked to Billy about that after I saw the article, and Billy says, 'Coach, I didn't say those things,'" Switzer said this morning, in a telephone interview from Miami with radio station WKY here.

"You can't trust these people (reporters)," Switzer said. "I ought to come to Miami and not let a player talk to the press down here."

The Oklahoma Sooners are in Miami preparing to meet Nebraska in the Orange Bowl Monday night. Sims could not immediately be reached for direct comment.

Oklahoma Sports Information Director John Keith told a Daily Oklahoman newspaper reporter in Miami that the interview between Miami News reporter Bill Brubaker and Sims was mainly in jest, as far as Sims was concerned.

"I just talked to Sims," Keith said. "He told me he was just going along with it. It was just all a big joke."

The Miami News story quoted Sims as saying: "I'm having fun doing two things. Drinking beer and (making love)..."

"Didn't get to sleep until 2:30 a.m. Tuesday night," the article quotes the star Sooner halfback as saying. "We went to a club in the black section of Miami, had a good time and I didn't have to pay for anything. I haven't been spending any money on dates lately. They've been spending money on me."

The article also quotes Sims as saying: "I just want to have a good time with the ladies, then leave 'em."

Reporter Brubaker told the Daily Oklahoman he tape recorded most, if not all, of Sims' comments, the newspaper reported in today's editions.

Switzer said Sims told him he didn't learn the interview was being taped until it concluded.

The newspaper article "protrayed him (Sims) as being something he's not," Switzer said. "The guy that wrote that article doesn't care about Billy Sims ... and I'm concerned that people would take advantage of things."

Switzer said Brubaker "wanted to paint him (Sims) as a bum, a villain."

Brubaker, reached at his home in Miami Friday morning, said everything he put into the story was also tape recorded. And he said Sims knew of the recorder, which Brubaker described as "a foot-long recorder, not a pocket job," and knew that it was being used.

"Right after I said hello to him and shook hands with him, I asked him if I could use the tape recorder," said Brubaker. "He said, 'Sure, no problem.'"

Told that Sims had said it was a joke, Brubaker said: "I don't understand what he means about a joke. I have better things to do than spend my afternoons joking with a football player."

"I'm a professional newspaper reporter. I stand behind my story 100 percent."

Commenting on Switzer's other comments, Brubaker said:

"If Switzer doesn't want his players to socialize at night, he could give them an earlier curfew. The curfew at the time the story was 2 a.m. What does Switzer expect his players to do until 2 a.m. in Miami? Sit in their hotel rooms?"

"I respect Sims, and personally I think he's a very nice young man. The only picture I was trying to paint was of what he told me. I didn't know Sims was going

Bowl Games Could Decide Grid Champ

By The Associated Press

Penn State is ranked No. 1 and Alabama is ranked No. 2 in college football. Monday, the teams will meet at the Sugar Bowl in New Orleans and the outcome would seem to settle the national championship.

Unless, of course, you happen to be No. 3 Southern California or No. 5 Michigan, who will be playing in the Rose Bowl the same day.

Coaches John Robinson of the Trojans and Bo Schembechler of the Wolverines are wondering just how strong Alabama's bid for the national championship would be if the Crimson Tide beats Penn State.

They agree that State, unbeaten and untied, would have a legitimate claim to the crown if it beats Alabama. But if the Tide wins, that would leave three teams — Penn State, Alabama and the Rose Bowl winner — with one loss apiece.

"To assume Alabama would be the national champion if it beats Penn State is a mistake," said Robinson. "After the bowls, you fellows who vote should sit down and re-think the whole thing," he advised.

With a victory over Penn State, Alabama's argument would be simple. Beating the No. 1 team in the nation in the final game should move a contender up. That was the formula Notre Dame used when it walloped previously-unbeaten Texas in the Cotton Bowl and leaped from No. 5 to capture the national championship last January.

But if Southern Cal beats Michigan, it also would finish with only one loss — to Arizona State — and it would include among its victories a decision over ... yes, you guessed it ... Alabama.

Michigan is in a similar situation. By beating Southern Cal in the Rose Bowl, the Wolverines could finish with only one loss — to Michigan State, which was ineligible for any bowl action this season.

Schembechler agreed with Robinson. "If Penn State loses, it stands to reason that the winner of our game should be national champion," he said. "We don't want sentiment to enter into it, just logic."

A year ago, Alabama thought the logic was in its corner. But the Tide finished No. 2 behind Notre Dame, which plays Houston in the Cotton Bowl Monday.

Penn State, of course, is planning on making all the talk academic. A victory by the Nittany Lions would solve the dilemma and that's exactly what Coach Joe Paterno's team had in mind when it delayed its bowl selection, waiting to make sure it could play the No. 2 team, which turned out to be Alabama.

"What's past is prologue." — Bud Grant, Chuck Noll, Bum Phillips and William Shakespeare.

"History is bunk." — Ray Malavasi, Red Miller, Chuck Fairbanks and Henry Ford.

It all depends on your point of view — and from this vantage point, the guess is that of Willie's philosophy will prevail and history will repeat itself this weekend in the National Football League.

In other words, Grant's Minnesota Vikings will upset Los Angeles, knocking the Rams out of the playoffs for the fifth straight time. Noll's Pittsburgh Steelers will beat Denver far more convincingly than they did two weeks ago, and Phillips' Houston Oilers will punch out the Patriots the way they did last month in New England.

Patriots Eyeing More Than Win

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) — Statistics are the coins of the National Football League realm but it's a special four digit number with a dollar sign attached that's caught the fancy of the New England Patriots.

The winner of the AFC playoff semifinal here Sunday — the Patriots against the Houston Oilers — is guaranteed $9,000 just for appearing in the conference championship game.

"I'd say we're going to be a little more alert with that money on our minds," says Patriots defensive lineman Richard Bishop.

To earn the payday, however, New England must improve on some more traditional football statistics. In a nutshell, the team hasn't been sharp since midseason when it routed the New York Jets 55-21.

"We haven't been playing as well recently as we were during the earlier part of the year," says Coach Chuck Fairbanks, in a burst of candor. "I'm just not sure whether we'll regain it."

The Patriots' mini-slump actually began with a victory — an unimpressive 14-10 win at Buffalo on Nov. 5.

In the season's final six regular games, New England was 3-3, and outscored 121-116. In the full season's cumulative score by periods tally, the Patriots also proved to be a first half team — outscoring opponents 199-110 in the first two quarters but you can call it that. Long before halftime in Dallas, the Atlanta Falcons may wish that Mike Michel's kick hadn't been wide to the right.

TODAY'S GAMES
Steelers 28, Broncos 13
The only reason Denver nearly beat Pittsburgh on Dec. 16 was that the Steelers went with second-stringers after rolling up a big lead. This time Terry Bradshaw Co. will be in there all the way.

Denver's defense ranks No. 2 in the American Football Conference — but Pittsburgh's is No. 1. And what's worse, that Steelers' defense won't have to work very hard to stop Craig Morton and the Broncos, who finished with the conference's No. 10 offense.

Cowboys 34, Falcons 16
Staying within striking distance is what makes Atlanta an exciting team. The Cowboys, with the National Football Conference's best offense and second-best defense, will tout that Falcons' game plan in a hurry.

Vikings 21, Rams 17
There seems to be no way to explain Los Angeles. The Rams have one of the league's best offenses, yet eight teams scored more points. And they have the league's best defense, yet they lost to four teams with a collective 28-36 record. LA seems to be a team incapable of really getting "up" for its games.

Granted, the Vikings were hardly world-beaters this year — but they did score when they had to, and they have consistently beaten the Rams when it counts. Fran Tarkenton will find a way to do it again.

Haden Feels Showings Should Quiet His Critics

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Pat Haden stoutly defends himself against criticism of the way he quarterbacks the Los Angeles Rams.

"I say to myself that I'm going to ignore what they're saying, do the best I can and play well enough to keep my job. I don't necessarily like life in a fish bowl, but I can live with it," said the former University of Southern California star and Rhodes scholar.

Part of the problem began last season when the Minnesota Vikings pulled a 14-7 playoff upset against the Rams and Haden. Critics suggested he should have been replaced in that game by the veteran Joe Namath, no longer with the club. Others claim that at 5-11 Haden is too short to be an NFL quarterback.

The 25-year-old signal caller, who again will lead the Rams against the Vikings on Sunday at the Coliseum in the National Football Conference divisional playoffs, feels his performance this season disproved the criticism.

Haden completed 229 passes in 444 attempts this year for 2,995 yards and 13 touchdowns, but had 19 interceptions. Last year he was 122 of 216 for 1,551 with 11 touchdowns and had only six intercepted.

"Statistically, I wasn't as good," he says. "But I improved in other areas such as play selection. I also came up with a number of big plays when we needed them, which is what quarterbacks get paid to do. Plus, I think I provided leadership."

"I would have liked to have thrown fewer interceptions, but, all in all, I'm pleased with the way I played."

The Rams as a team also have some thing to prove against the Vikings. In NFL playoff games, the Vikings, 8-7-1, have beaten the Rams four straight, but Los Angeles, 12-4, goes into this 2 p.m. PST game favored by eight points which puts even more pressure on Haden.

"Our guys are pretty determined," the quarterback said. "A lot of us have been turned back in the playoffs two, three, four and even five times. There's prestige involved... and money. But the big thing is that nobody wants the reputation of being chokers who can't win the big game."

"That's what people say about us. It's an albatross for the Rams. And the only way to get rid of it is to win the Super Bowl. Until then, we'll have to live with criticism and with bad press. In this town, that may never stop completely. But if we won the whole thing, it would sure be a start."

"The older guys, particularly, seem to have a special feeling that this is our year. They base it on our talent and on the fact that both playoff games are at home."

Knicks Turning Season Around

NEW YORK (AP) — Coach Red Holzman has orchestrated an amazing about-face, turning his New York Knicks from a discordant band of soloists bent on self-destruction into a harmonious group of players whose every movement has been on key — for two games, anyway.

The Knicks are 2-0 since the "great lineup change" in which second-year pros Mike Glenn and Glen Gondrezick became starters and scoring leader Bob McAdoo and erratic guard Ray Williams became reserves. A victory Saturday against Kansas City would bring the club back to .500, and the players seem to be getting along smoothly both on and off the court.

"The shuffle gets all of us involved," said Glenn, who scored a season-high 21 points in Thursday night's 109-99 victory over the Washington Bullets, defending National Basketball Association champions. "It also leads to a better atmosphere, because we're all contributing. The relationship among the players has definitely improved the last two games."

Although some athletes would rebel at the thought of watching the opening tap from the bench, Holzman said he anticipated no problems from the players he removed from the starting lineup — and he has had none. "They're professionals, getting paid whether they start or come off the bench," he said. "The idea is to win ball games."

Williams and McAdoo both have tried to maintain low profiles since the change.

"I can only say good things about the shuffle because we're winning," said Williams. "The only thing I have on my mind is to win. I had to accept Red's decision and not get down on myself and I've done that. I'm not going to worry about when I play."

"I know I'll get to play," said McAdoo, who is averaging 24.6 points per game. "We had just lost three in a row and he felt he had to make some changes. There's no need to get angry."

Under the new set-up, Jim Clemons quarterbacks the starting unit while Glenn concentrates on getting open for shots. "Since I was 12 years old I've known I could shoot," said Glenn, one of the best long-range shooters in the league when he gets a look at the basket.

Gondrezick and Toby Knight give the Knicks two quick forwards who work hard on defense, as does 7-foot center Marvin Webster. And with McAdoo on the bench, Knight has been more assertive about taking his shots, scoring 17 and 23 points in the past two games.

When the starters tire, Holzman calls on reserves like McAdoo, Williams, veteran Earl Monroe and rookies John Rudd and Michael Ray Richardson, a very potent bench. Another explosive scorer, forward Spencer Haywood, has been hobbled by an ankle injury.

"We didn't want to keep going the way we were going, so we changed some things around," Holzman said. "So far this lineup has worked well, so I'll keep using it. "I'd start my wife if I thought it would help us win."

UC Placed On Probation

CINCINNATI (AP) — University of Cincinnati Coach Ed Badger, who this year made the transition from the pros back to college ranks, urged supporters Friday to back the basketball program which has been placed on a two-year probation.

The National Collegiate Athletic Association said it found "numerous, significant violations" in the Cincinnati basketball program and others in the football program. The football program was not placed on probation.

"If we're going to rise out of the ashes of this thing, we've got to have their support," said Badger.

Aussie Pulls Major Upset

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Peter McNamara of Australia, avenging a loss 12 months ago, upset American Tim Gullikson, the No. 4 seed, 6-2, 6-3, 7-6 Friday in the second round of the $300,000 Australian Open tennis championships.

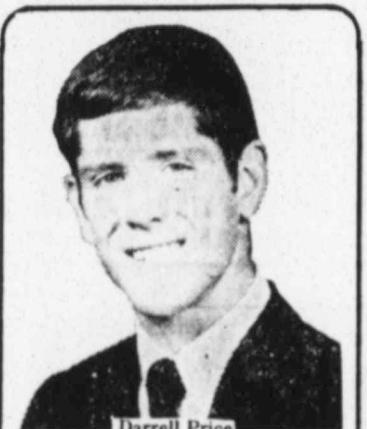

In last year's Australian Open, the 23-year-old McNamara had five match points in an early-round match against Gullikson but wound up losing the match.

Friday, McNamara dropped serve with the match in his grasp in the 10th game of the third set. Leading 2-0, he broke to lead 5-4 and raced to 40-15 on serve. But he twice double faulted, permitting Gullikson to break back and force a tiebreaker.

The Australian finally clinched the match with a backhand cross-court return.

McNamara said after the match, "He played into my hands by always serving to my backhand. He doesn't have a sliced serve so that's why he served to the backhand, but it suited me fine."

Ken Rosewall, the Australian veteran, advanced to the third round.

Pittsburgh Addresses Cause Postal Pains

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Pittsburgh has a special place in the heart of the U.S. Postal Service.

With its chaotic jumble of absent address numbers, duplicate street names and missing blocks, the city is a mailman's nightmare.

"It's the craziest thing you'll ever see," said Marjorie Matlock of the Postal Service's area complaint office. "I can't find numbers on anything. You go two blocks beyond where you should be, because they just don't post the numbers."

The problem apparently has its origins in the city's erratic growth among winding rivers and steep hills.

"The streets are segmented," the Postal Service's Morris Hill complained. "They'll start in one place, break off and then start somewhere else. If you don't know the area, you'll never find what you're looking for."

Lack of originality in selection of street names over the years has made things even more confusing.

"There used to be 30 or 40 Main streets in the area and 50 or 60 Water streets," Ed Roberts of the city's Survey Department said. "Every street that went near a river was Water Street."

But the real mind-bender for rookie mailmen and newcomers is the numbers. In many areas there just aren't any.

"I think it's just habit or something," Roberts said. "Some of the main buildings downtown don't have numbers on them. Some have never even had them assigned. They just use intersections. It's a real problem here."

Mrs. Matlock said the Postal Service gets the complaints, but local governments are responsible for naming streets and designating numbers.

Pittsburgh tried in 1907 to straighten out the mess with a new ordinance and a massive campaign of renaming and renumbering of streets. But in some areas, it only made the problem worse.

Roberts said the new street names didn't stick in some cases, and many residents decided they liked the numbers they already had and just kept using them.

"We had some places where you had a four-digit number on a house — say 6635 — and the house next door was supposed to be 6637," Hill said. "But some time back, the first digit dropped off, so it was 637 next to 6635. And they just went with it. It's even in the official records."

Roberts said the 1907 ordinance required that every house and building have a number clearly posted.

"It doesn't look as if it's been enforced," he conceded to a reporter. "Why don't you get yourself a map with the block numbers marked on it?"

Poultry Production Hikes Grain Crop Market

By RODERICK TURNBULL
Kansas City Board of Trade

KANSAS CITY — The year 1978 may be should go down in history as the year of the chicken. On the other hand, giving such an accolade to 1978 may be a little premature as the honors perhaps should be held for 1979.

The fact is, thanks to good prices on pork and beef, broiler producers have been having a hey-day and the end is not in sight. That is, new records set in 1978 from all current indications will be broken in 1979. And don't overlook turkeys. They're setting production records, too.

Broilers and turkeys eat a lot of grain. The fact is, a baby chick or a poult starts eating grain from day one and they continue to eat until they are slaughtered for market. Also, grain and a protein supplement, such as soybean meal, are about all they get plus some antibiotics. A baby chick nurses its mother until weaned at 350 to 500 pounds and then it will continue on pasture, silage, hay or other roughages until finally it is put on a full-feeding of grain.

The little pig nurses the mother sow for several weeks before being weaned and put on a growing and fattening ration.

But the chick or poult, having been hatched from an egg, grows on man-produced feeds entirely.

And so, as poultry production grows and grows in this country, the poultry business becomes more and more important to grain farmers and the grain trade. Broiler production is measured by number of chickens raised and by total ready-to-cook weight. In numbers, the final totals for 1978 should well exceed 3.5 billion. The 2-billion mark was reached in 1962 and a 3 billion level was achieved first in 1972.

Consumption has kept pace. The estimate on per capita consumption for 1978 is 44.5 pounds, which can be compared with 41.7 pounds in 1977 and 37.2 pounds in 1975.

The increases in broiler production and a consumption have been usually consistent in the last few years, the USDA has found. Actually, the output of broiler meat through federally inspected plants has been above the comparable month of a year earlier for every month since August 1975, except for one exception and that was July, 1977.

Broiler production in 1978 might have been even a little larger than it was except for a limitation on hatching eggs. After all, an egg must be hatched for every broiler produced and despite the demand for poultry meat, there were only so many eggs available. That won't be a limiting factor in 1979 because, as might be expected from the demand, producers have expanded their placements of pullets in hatchery supply flocks.

Broiler production in 1978, the USDA projects may increase in the range of 8 to 10 percent over 1978.

As mentioned, per capita broiler consumption was up in 1978. But it was down on beef and about the same on pork as the year before. Declines also were registered on veal, lamb and mutton.

Per capita consumption of all meat, including poultry, has been estimated at 243 pounds. In 1978, a range of between 236 and 247 pounds is predicted for 1979, with consumption down on beef, up a little on pork and up again on poultry.

Actually, American consumers should have plenty of meat in 1979 and a wide choice, but the relative scarcity of beef and pork will give a price advantage to poultry. For many years, even when beef and pork supplies were plentiful, broiler meat has been a good buy in the supermarket. The broiler under modern production methods, as is well known, is an efficient converter of feed into meat.

Turkey production in 1979 may increase more percentage-wise than that on broilers, the USDA surmises. The USDA has estimated production for 1978 at 141.5 million birds, up 3 percent from 1977 and 1 percent above the previous record set in 1976. Production passed the 100 million mark in 1964 and hit 120 million in 1971.

Turkey growers had assumed hog farmers would boost swine production heavily in 1978 and when they didn't, the turkey growers found they were too short on breeding stock to quickly enhance their output.

Just as with the broilers, that won't be the case in 1979. The USDA sees indications that poultry producers have kept back enough breeder hens to assure plenty of hatching eggs for the 1979 crop. The USDA estimates poultry production the first half of 1979 may be 20 to 25 percent above the same period in 1978, but should taper off the second half of the year. However, the USDA also indicates such a sharp increase in production might bring lower prices, the reduction hopefully "to be moderated by the strong demand for all meat."

A new county extension agent for agriculture has been named for Lubbock County.

Randall L. Upshaw, currently Borden County extension agent, will transfer to Lubbock in February. Announcement of his appointment was made jointly Friday by the Lubbock County Commissioners Court and Billy C. Gunter, district extension agent for agriculture with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Upshaw, son of Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Upshaw, is a native of Rotan. He was graduated from Roby High School in Roby. He received a bachelor of science degree in agricultural education in 1971 and a master of education degree in 1973, both from Texas Tech University. At Texas Tech, he was active in the rodeo club and intercollegiate FFA.

After graduating from Tech, Upshaw taught vocational agriculture for two years at Idalou High School. In June, 1974, he was appointed assistant county extension agent in Swisher County, serving there 2 1/2 years. He was employed by International Harvester Co. for a year, and in December, 1977, was named Borden County extension agent.

Upshaw is a member of the Gail Lions Club, a past president of the Swisher County Activities Association and has served as director-at-large of the Texas County Agents Association.

He is married to a former Dinah Lovett of Rotan. They have a 4-year-old son, Brian.

Beef Cattle Futures Higher In Trading

By Reuters
CHICAGO — Cattle futures closed 50 points higher to 12 lower on 10,652 cars Friday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange. October was up the most with only early January lower after slipping 20. Distant April climbed 65.

Much of the action was evening up ahead of the year end with demand motivated by light pace of slaughter and steady beef demand. There was also covering ahead of the new import quota, to be released later today.

Wholesale beef was unchanged at 86 cents for all weights, f.o.b. river points, which is a one-week high. Cash cattle were unchanged to up 25 cents with the best top $57.50 per hundredweight at Joliet. There were 1.657 deliveries. About 18,800 head are expected at the major markets on Tuesday.

Feeder cattle futures climbed 75 to the limit level of 150 with the exception of January which finished 22 lower. March through May posted limit level advances on aggressive short covering and other buying ahead of the year end. Sales totaling 1,915 contracts.

Prices were lifted to 1 1/2 week highs on continued bullish sentiment reflecting industry outlook for reduced cattle supplies and higher prices next year. There was also covering ahead of the beef import quota later Friday.

The major terminals are expecting 1-300 head on Tuesday.

Hog futures closed 42 lower to 27 higher on 3,760 cars. October was down the most after February lost 45. April posted the best gain after December rose 52.

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — Soybean and grain futures edged mostly lower Friday on the Chicago Board of Trade as traders squared their books and closed the year's business.

Little fundamental news emerged to move prices either way. Year-end selling as the midway market closing approached erased early price gains.

Soybean futures rose at the open on unexpectedly light delivery notices against the January futures contract. Analysts said almost four times as many traders as expected chose to hold onto their January soybean futures contracts in hopes of higher prices, rather than delivering beans against them.

Also, an industry report showed continued heavy domestic usage of soybeans last week, with 20.5 million bushels crushed compared to 21.9 million bushels the previous week and 18.1 million bushels the same week a year ago.

Wheat and corn trading was directionless. The Agriculture Department reported a large corn export sale to unknown destinations, totaling 142,200 tons, or 5.6 million bushels, for shipment during the 1978-79 marketing year.

At the close, soybeans were 1/4 cent higher to 2 cents lower, with January contracts quoted at $6.76 1/4 a bushel; wheat was 1 to 1 1/2 cents lower, March $3.43 1/4; corn was unchanged to 1 cent lower, March $2.31 1/4; and oats were unchanged to 1/2 cent lower, March $1.33.

Cotton Futures

NEW YORK (AP) — Cotton futures No. 2 closed 25 cents a bale higher to 85 cents lower Friday.

The average price for strict low middling 11-16 inch spot cotton advanced 38 points to 63.46 cents a pound Thursday for the ten leading markets, according to the New York Cotton Exchange.
