

Water Compromise Will Save Lubbock Millions

By TOM GRIESS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A dispute that surfaced earlier this year between federal and local water authorities over the level of a possible cancer-causing chemical in Lake Meredith — Lubbock's primary source of drinking water — appears now to be headed toward a money-saving compromise.

Last week a spokesman for the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency in Dallas said final federal regulations controlling trihalomethane (THM) levels in drinking water will "probably not prohibit the chloramene process across the board."

This is good news for Lubbock, according to Gordon Willis, city water treatment supervisor, because the chloramene process would cost "under $1,000" to implement, whereas he estimated the EPA-recommended system would cost $15 million.

The EPA, in proposed regulations published Feb. 9, recommends THM concentrations in water no greater than .10 milligrams per litre (mg/l) or 100 parts per billion. The proposed regulations cite several treatment methods, but describe the fresh granular activated carbon system (carbon) as "the best technique among all of the control options."

Roger Meacham, an EPA public information specialist in Dallas, said the EPA currently estimates a cost of $12.6 million for the addition of a carbon system into an existing water treatment plant serving a population between 100,000 and 1 million.

The chloramene process is inexpensive to implement, said Willis, because it simply adds ammonia to the chlorine already used in disinfecting water of bacteria. Adding ammonia prevents the formation of THMs, he said, while not impairing the disinfection process.

The proposed EPA regulations question the safety of the chloramene process, saying it requires "approximately a 100-fold increase in contact time" to kill certain bacteria and pathogens.

Willis discounted the time factor as a threat to Lubbock residents. "There is always a sufficient detention time by pumping the water into the storage reservoirs," he said.

After chlorination, Lubbock water remains a minimum of two hours in the water treatment plant and then rests in storage reservoirs for at least one hour before use in homes, he explained.

Preliminary test results of Lubbock water using the chloramene process indicate it successfully kills bacteria, Willis said. Extensive tests will be conducted before the chloramene process ever replaces the chlorine disinfectant, he added.

Vance, Begin End Talks

By United Press International
Secretary of State Cyrus Vance held a final round of talks with Israeli leaders in Jerusalem today but apparently failed to get agreement on a peace treaty he sought to achieve by the Camp David target deadline of Sunday.

In Washington, a White House official said late Wednesday night "Egyptian President Anwar) Sadat has gone as far as he can go." Sadat said Wednesday he was ready to sign the pact even before the Camp David deadline of Dec. 17. Israel, he said, was holding up the pact. In Paris, King Hussein of Jordan reiterated his opposition today to the Camp David agreements and the Egyptian-Israeli peace talks and called anew for a general Middle East peace conference that would include the Soviet Union. "Peace should be based on different premises than those of Camp David," Hussein said at the end of a four-day visit to France.

Prime Minister Menachem Begin said after meeting with Vance for 90 minutes that "certain differences" remain in the Egyptian and Israeli positions. He called a special session of his cabinet for Friday, the sabbath eve.

The Israeli cabinet is not expected to make any "spectacular changes" in the Israeli position and is expected to reaffirm Begin's stance, Israeli sources said. The cabinet is responsible for formulating Israel's position.

In Washington a White House official said that if the latest compromise proposal is rejected, "it is pretty difficult to know what the next move is." Under questioning, he said: "I don't think anyone sees any point whatsoever in another Camp David meeting."

Vance now will return to Cairo and then go on to Washington on orders from President Carter, who instructed the secretary to return Friday — with or without the treaty.

The continuing disagreements, which Vance tackled in Israel, included an Israeli rejection of U.S. ideas approved by Sadat earlier in the Vance shuttle.

The disagreement appeared to make it impossible for a treaty to be concluded by Sunday's deadline as set in the Camp David peace accords.

Carter's decision to cut short Vance's mission and his sharpest remarks to date on Israel's negotiating stand also appeared to be a final attempt to pressure the Jewish nation to seal a treaty by the Sunday deadline.

Vance said today his return to Washington was unrelated to the Middle East question, but added: "We will continue, as the prime minister said, in pursuit of peace. This is our common goal and we are determined that goal will be achieved."

After his talk with Begin, Vance went on an unannounced drive to Bethlehem and on the road to Hebron in the occupied West Bank of Jordan.

He later told reporters he wanted to see the Church of the Nativity in Bethlehem, the town where Jesus Christ was born. He said he did not drive all the way to Hebron.

Vance was to lunch with opposition Labor party leaders, including Shimon Peres, and to depart for Cairo to report to Sadat on his unsuccessful attempt to get Israel to agree on the "new ideas."

Director Of Health Tells Of Infant Death Rates

By FRANK PATRICK
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Saying Lubbock has one of the highest infant mortality rates in the country and citing other problem areas, Dr. Marjorie K. Orr, city health director, today indicated the city has in the past been unresponsive to community health needs.

"I would say most had the attitude, 'Don't do anything if you don't have to,'" Dr. Orr said when quizzed about the attitude of city health employees when she assumed her position 10 months ago.

"I will say that has changed," she added.

According to Dr. Orr, the majority of persons seeking city health aid are black or Mexican-American. She was the chief witness today in the current federal court trial to determine whether the City of Lubbock should continue with its at-large method of electing councilmen, or adopt single-member districting for city council races.

Plaintiffs in the suit against the city claim members of minority races have no political muscle under the at-large setup, and are hoping to demonstrate a pattern of unresponsiveness to minority needs.

Dr. Orr indicated Lubbock registered an infant mortality rate of 21.7 per 1,000 live births last year.

"That was the seventh highest in the nation for cities over 100,000," she told plaintiff attorney Lane Arthur.

Using a map, Dr. Orr indicated the infant death toll was comparatively heavy in the Arnett-Benson area and in North-east Lubbock, but said she had not recorded rates of infants that had died.

"In Midland and Odessa, one had 12 and one had 13 — 14.7 is the state average," she said of the mortality figures.

Dr. Orr said her understanding is that 20 percent of prospective mothers register at the Health Sciences Center Hospital without having had benefit of prenatal care.

The witness said her department's budget of $1.1 million was inadequate for a city of Lubbock's size, indicating that a desirable criterion for a city would be $10 per capita, or, in Lubbock's case, about $1.75 million. She said that some $225,000 of the budget was earmarked for vector, or pest control. Dr. Orr said that Waco spends about $15,000 for vector control.

According to Dr. Orr, there have been 80 hepatitis cases in the city this year causing at least two deaths. Again, she indicated a heavy proportion of the cases occurred in the Arnett-Benson area, North Lubbock and through the older, central area of the city.

The witness seemed to indicate on cross-examination, however, that there have been several cases in West Lubbock and south of Loop 289.

Dr. Orr said the city wants to start a well child clinic in January. "This is the only health department that doesn't have one. Usually it's the first thing they do have," she said.

She said she also believes the department, located at 1100 N. Ave. Q, should be more centrally located. She pointed out bus routes do not extend to the department.

Arthur asked her if she had requested See HEALTH CARE Page 14

Shah Urged To Become Figurehead

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — Prominent Iranian politicians said today they had presented Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi with a compromise plan that would turn political power over to a Crown Council but the shah's press director said the reports were an "absolute fabrication."

The political sources said the plan would reduce the shah to a figurehead and that it was the shah's "last chance" to end the civil strife that in recent months has left hundreds dead and seriously crippled the Iranian economy.

Kambiz Yazanpanah, director general of the shah's press section, said "the whole thing is an absolute fabrication."

"It is not possible," Yazanpanah said. "These days in Iran every single word that goes out has to be based on facts. It is stupid, senseless reporting. The facts have to be sorted out."

Former Prime Minister Ali Amini, known as the "honest broker" for his role as mediator between the shah and his political opponents, met the monarch this afternoon.

"We discussed the problems of running the country and the problems facing the country," Amini said when he returned home. "My hope is that the shah can find a solution."

While the talks went on, pro-shah forces continued a wave of backlash violence against opponents of the regime that has killed at least 50 people in the last two days.

A general strike called by Moslem leaders paralyzed the ancient city of Isfahan today and citizens boycotted the ceremony at which a new statue of the shah was unveiled to replace one destroyed in rioting earlier this week.

Scientists in Stockholm, Sweden, reported an earthquake and three small aftershocks hit about 175 miles west of Iran's violence-torn city of Isfahan today, but there was no information on the tremors in Tehran.

Under the plan presented today, the shah would hand over all power to a crown council made up of eight or nine respected Iranians, including two members of the armed forces.

The crown council would act quickly to appoint a government with wide-ranging political representations that would pave the way for national elections in June, political sources said.

The sources said the shah discussed the plan Wednesday with popular opposition leader Karim Sanjabi, who told the shah that he would not take part in a coalition government.

The sources said, however, that Sanjabi, the leader of the National Front, would probably soften up once the shah agreed to hand over all powers.

"The shah has been torn between trying to struggle along or abdicating," one prominent politician said.

"Abdication we think would be a disaster," he said, "because it would fragment the army. Without the shah as a leader,

Mail Shows Need For Goodfellows

Reading the three letters received in the mail, Chief Goodfellow knew why the 44th annual Goodfellow Christmas project for needy children was so important.

Look over his shoulder, Lubbock, and see why Chief Goodfellow needs your help in making this year's project a success.

"...These children's father was in an accident two years ago and is not able to work very much. Their mother is trying to work and pay the bills and keep four children in school.

"...The father is trying to take care of the four little ones while his wife works. These children's mother says she has asked for help from you before and she thanks God for people like you ... and that you have always come through.

"...And she hates to ask again because she knows there are other children like hers. They can be any color, but in God's eye they are like hers ... And to know they are the same. God loves you and we do, too. Thank you so much."

Or this letter: "Dear Goodfellow, I am not working, was evicted from my home, so I moved in with my cousin and have been in the hospital. I have four children. Could you please help me to give them a decent Christmas...?"

Or this letter: "Dear Sir, I am writing this letter because I know this family needs your help for Christmas.

Members Of Council Discuss CD Funds

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The Lubbock City Council held the first of two public hearings this morning on how $10.4 million in federal community development funds should be spent over the next three years.

The bulk of the discussion focused on funding to begin acquisition of land for a park in Overton South neighborhood and on trade-offs made by the Community Development Advisory Committee to free up money for the project.

Neal Pearson, a CDAC member and a primary advocate of the park, disputed urban renewal estimates that it would cost about $1.5 million to acquire land for the park south of Thompson Junior High School.

Pearson said the appraised value of the block of houses was $259,000 in October, 1977.

However, city manager Larry Cunningham noted the estimates include the cost of relocating those living on the property as required by the federal government.

Roger Loter, chairman of the Overton South Neighborhood Association, suggested that the city acquire the houses as they become available. About 95 percent of the houses are substandard and property owners might choose to sell to the ci-

Beverly Sills Gets Job

NEW YORK (AP) — Opera star Beverly Sills will become director of the New York City Opera next July, 1 1/2 years ahead of schedule.

The announcement was made Wednesday by opera officials following director Julius Rudel's resignation, which is effective June 30. He will become principle conductor for the company July 1.

Last year, the company announced the world-famous soprano would join Rudel as co-director at the end of 1980, and later take full command.

Rudel, who said the "difficult, tedious and sometimes not so rewarding work got to me," added that he and Miss Sills, 49, had discussed her eventual takeover as early as 1973.

"I hope that the time has come for both of us," said Miss Sills. "I think it's great to turn 50 and open up a whole new life."

Trudeau Laughs Off Rumors

OTTAWA (AP) — Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau laughed off broadcast reports that he may leave politics and return to his estranged socialite wife, Margaret.

"It's absurd," he said Wednesday. Trudeau, prime minister since 1968, said he wants one more term as Liberal Party leader in order to be in power when Quebec residents vote in a non-binding referendum to separate the predominantly French-speaking province from the rest of Canada.

Staff comments about Trudeau's personal life are forbidden. However, sources say there is nothing new in the couple's relationship.

Vancouver Sun columnist Marjorie Nichols and Allan Fotheringham reported on the radio show "As It Happens" that the Trudeaus would be "reaffirming their vows" in Vancouver this Christmas.

Amy Going To Colorado

WASHINGTON (AP) — Amy Carter will have a white Christmas this year regardless of what the weather is like in Plains, Ga.

President Carter's 11-year-old daughter will be spending part of her holiday skiing at Crested Butte, Colo., for the second year in a row, the White House announced Wednesday.

Amy will stay with the family of Jim Bishop, a friend of the president from St. Simons Island, Ga. Paul Costello, assistant press secretary to Rosalynn Carter, said he did not know when she would join her parents.

The Carters are planning Christmas at their home in Plains.

Actress Thought About Dying

BALTIMORE (AP) — Actress Carol Channing said she began to worry about dying when a fire trapped her in a smoke-filled room at the Lord Baltimore Hotel.

"My husband and I were in the room because we couldn't get down the hallway from the smoke," she said after firemen led them from the hotel Wednesday. "I thought, 'It is a slow death,' and then that we'll have to hold hands and jump out the window. Things like that go through your mind."

The hotel was hit by two fires Wednesday. Miss Channing, her husband, Charles Lowe, and 200 other hotel guests were evacuated when a storage closet caught fire at about 1:30 a.m.

Seven hours later, after the guests had returned to their rooms, a second fire broke out in an unoccupied apartment, fire investigators said. It was that blaze which trapped Miss Channing and her husband.

Two minor injuries were reported from the fires in the hotel, which is across the street from a theater where Miss Channing is starring in "Hello, Dolly!"

Mom's Fuzzy Friend

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A toy company is making substitute mothers, of a sort. They're teddy bears with tape recorders that play the sounds babies hear in their mothers' wombs.

The Slumber Bear is the product of research by Dr. William Eller, chief of obstetrics and gynecology at Holy Cross Hospital in Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

His work convinced toy designer Emmett White that hearing interuterine sounds would help babies sleep by easing the transition from the womb to the outer world.

The Slumber Bear goes on the market next month for $35.

"When I told one woman how much it costs, she couldn't believe it," said White. "She thought that was too much. Then I asked her what it would be worth at 2 o'clock in the morning and she said, 'I'd give a thousand dollars at 2 in the morning.'"

Lack Of Funds Forces GOP To Lay Off Help

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Republican Party, swimming in money earlier this year, has run out and has been forced to lay off employees on the eve of the holiday season.

Between 50 and 60 employees of the Republican National Committee have been fired since September, and the committee is currently about $500,000 in debt, says press secretary Peter Teeley.

The layoffs still leave the national committee with a staff of 207 full-time and 63 part-time employees, but Teeley said another half dozen or so may go and the number probably will be reduced further by not replacing employees who retire or quit.

By comparison, the Democratic National Committee, which has been in deep money trouble for the past decade, is expected to be down to about 50 employees at the end of the year.

The Democratic staff had risen to about 200 before layoffs began a year ago, also just before Christmas. A few more, employed to work on the party's recent mini-convention in Memphis, Tenn., are expected to leave in the next few weeks.

The GOP, spurred by highly successful fund raising early this year, set an ambitious budget of $19.5 million for 1978, but receipts began falling off in midsummer when donors were turning to specific campaigns with gifts or were more concerned with vacation plans.

As a result, the Republicans are expected to fall somewhere between $1 million and $2 million short of their anticipated income, and even belt tightening has left them with the current debt. However, Teeley said the party still expects to break even by the end of the year.

The Democrats adjusted their budget several times, principally when Chairman Kenneth Curtis resigned about a year ago and John C. White took over. But generally they aimed at a more-modest $5 million.

Beginning their staff austerity measures earlier than the Republicans, the Democrats were able to provide about $2 million to assist candidates in this fall's elections, their first such effort in years, and to radically reduce a debt lingering since 1968.

However, although the Democrats are finishing the year pretty much within their financial bounds, they face new problems with a $650,000 bill for the mid-term conference in Memphis.

They are relying on still-unaccounted income from fund-raising parties and contributions from the Memphis host committee to balance that.

Curtis boosted the Democratic staff to about 200 in the ebullience which swept the party with Jimmy Carter's election, but he already had begun to cut back before White replaced him and accelerated the trend.

Bill Brock, who took the GOP helm early in 1977 after his party's dismal showing in the 1976 elections, inherited a staff of 169 which had been slashed from the earlier campaign level of 294 full- and part-time workers.

Brock made good use of mail solicitation, and with money flowing in in abundance, launched a big party-rebuilding campaign, increasing the staff to a record of about 330.

The GOP national committee pumped an unprecedented $2 million into state legislative races this year as part of the grassroots rebuilding, and gave gubernatorial candidates $565,000.

However, the fund raising alone cost some $7 million for printing, stamps, staff and computer service. And most people engaged in soliciting money for charities and politics reported a general summer slump.

The $19.5 million GOP target was, officials now concede, probably overly ambitious. It almost doubled the $10.5 million budgeted for 1977 and was even higher than the $19 million gross set for the 1976 presidential year.

Teeley said 43 of those laid off by the GOP had been organizing directors provided state parties at the expense of the national committee, and officials hope some of them will be picked up by state Republican organizations.

Lawsuit Challenges Carter's Program

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government is trying to head off the first legal challenge to President Carter's anti-inflation program by urging a federal judge to throw out the suit as premature.

But in a 51-page legal brief, Justice Department lawyers said they also were ready to defend the president's wage-price guidelines on their merits.

The government lawyers contend Carter's program is lawful because it's entirely voluntary. They deny that the administration's threat to withhold government contracts from companies that don't comply with the guidelines makes the program mandatory in any respect.

A motion for a court injunction that would suspend the inflation controls, which were announced Oct. 24, is to be argued Friday in Portland, Ore., before U.S. District Judge Robert Belloni.

The suit was filed by the Association of Western Pulp and Paper Workers, a union whose 22,000 members are employed by 13 major paper producers.

The union contends that the companies are trying to use the government's statement as a bargaining weapon to withhold benefits from the workers.

Some 15,000 union members are on strike at 31 paper mills in Alaska, Washington, Oregon and California.

The union based its request for an injunction on the contention that it was denied due process of law in connection with an exchange of advisory letters among the paper firms and government anti-inflation officials.

In a letter to its employees, one of the firms, Crown Zellerbach Corp., said it faced severe penalties if it didn't comply with the administration's guidelines.

Terry Adamson, chief Justice Department spokesman, said Attorney General Griffin B. Bell feels the case is so important he considered arguing it himself. If the suit reaches an appeals court, Bell might still end up giving the government's position in court, Adamson said.

In its legal brief, the Justice Department said the union's challenge is "entirely speculative and premature" since the workers have not even signed a new contract with management.

But the government lawyers said the nation could suffer severe damage if the judge enjoins the wage-price guidelines.

"Serious concerns for the nation's economy and the public interest ... far outweigh any speculative harm raised by the union," the document said.

The question of whether the administration program is legal also is being raised by three Republican congressmen who are filing a friend-of-the-court brief on the side of the union.

Kent State Re-Trial Begins

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Opening arguments are expected to begin Monday in the re-trial of civil suits stemming from the May 4, 1970, shootings of 13 students by National Guardsmen on the Kent State University campus.

guardsmen who fired on demonstrators protesting the U.S. invasion of Cambodia.

A nine-man, three-woman panel was chosen Wednesday to hear the trial, in the courtroom of U.S. District Court Judge William Thomas. Five alternate jurors also were chosen.

Thomas set aside today to set procedural matters for the trial.

Preliminary questioning of jurors, chosen from 42 people, was done in Thomas' chambers. The judge had prospective jurors respond to written questions on an individual basis to guard against a juror prejudicing the opinion of another.

However, there was still no indication that an out-of-court settlement, rumored for days, was in sight. Attorneys for both sides have declined to comment on the possibility of a settlement.

Thomas got the case when Judge Don Young of Toledo bowed out earlier this year complaining about a lack of progress toward an out-of-court settlement.

A civil action was filed against Gov. James A. Rhodes and 27 present and former Ohio National Guard members by the families of four students wounded by

The suit originally was tried in 1975 before Young and a jury exonerated the defendants. The 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals later found several trial errors.

Louisiana ID Card Law Sparks Controversies

By JOSEPH A. REAVES
MORGAN CITY, La. (UPI)—Local officials in the heart of Louisiana's oil-rich marshlands have passed a law requiring everybody who works there to carry government-issued identification cards—despite complaints the idea is reminiscent of Nazi Germany.

To get the identification card, you have to be photographed and your fingerprints subjected to the FBI and the local sheriff. And you have to pay up to $10 for the ID card.

The law went into effect Nov. 1 and the American Civil Liberties Union is going to court to try to get it thrown out as unconstitutional.

The law requires anybody who wants a job—or who wants to change jobs—to have a special laminated identification card before they can be hired in St. Mary Parish (county).

Only government-licensed agents can issue the cards and they charge up to $10 for photographing an applicant and forwarding fingerprints to the sheriff's office for a security check. The sheriff's office forwards them to the FBI.

"This sort of police tactic is not only un-American, but unconstitutional," said David Gelfand, an attorney for the American Civil Liberties Union, which filed suit against the new law last week.

"This is reminiscent of the kinds of identity cards seen in totalitarian regimes in Soviet Russia, Nazi Germany and most recently in South Africa."

Gelfand is scheduled to meet with a federal judge in Lafayette, La., later this week to seek an order blocking the registration law. He claims it violates the privacy of St. Mary Parish citizens and unconstitutionally restricts the movement of transient workers who regularly come to Morgan City looking for the plentiful, good-paying jobs offered by the offshore oil industry.

"If you think about it, over time you're going to end up having virtually everyone (of the 63,000 people) who lives there registered and fingerprinted and mugged and carrying an ID card," Gelfand said.

There is no penalty for failing to carrying an "Itinerant Worker's I.D.," but employers can be fined $100 for hiring someone without a card. As a result, few companies will even process an application without seeing one of the cards. "When I heard about this case, I didn't believe it," Gelfand said. "I just couldn't believe there was such a law. It is repugnant to our American heritage."

But, surprisingly, most area residents support the law. They feel it is needed to curb incidents such as the kidnap-murders of five teen-agers last summer. Police blamed Carl Robert Hohenberger, a drifter from California, for those killings, but were unable to identify him until he fled the state. Hohenberger later shot himself to death as authorities closed in on him in a Tacoma, Wash., apartment.

"The registration idea polarized from those kidnap-murders," said Anthony Guarisco, a Democratic state senator from Morgan City who spurred parish officials into passing the local law.

"The townspeople were almost on the verge of vigilantism trying to find out who did these things and it was obvious normal law and order techniques didn't work."

Guarisco, who calls himself the "token liberal" of the Louisiana Legislature, said he debated long and hard with himself before proposing the identification program.

In the end, Guarisco said registration was the only way to discourage drifters from fading into the cheap bars and hotels that serve as temporary homes for many of the 7,000 workers who shuttle daily by helicopter and crew boats to offshore oil rigs in the Gulf of Mexico. "Morgan City is a transient community," Guarisco said. "You can come down here with no skill and work offshore and drop out of sight. So when the FBI began looking into the first kidnapping, we found what we had suspected all along—that we had an overconcentration of fugitives for a community this size.

"What we intended to do with the law was come up with a simple identification system for non-residents, not the people who have always lived here. It would only cause a reluctance on the part of the one person in the United States who doesn't have a right to travel—the guy who is a fugitive."

But the final version of Ordinance 837 called for everyone in St. Mary Parish who changed jobs after Nov. 1, 1978, to register. And early statistics indicate the process has done little to slow the crime rate.

"I can't honestly say we've seen a drop in the crime rate," a spokesman for the St. Mary Parish Sheriff's Office said. "In fact, if anything, crime could be on the rise. The jail is still full of people."

"But I'm not blaming the law for that. It's certainly a help in identifying people. It's just the economics of the area (that causes the crime)."

Before an identification card can be issued an applicant must fill out a legalized information form listing name, nicknames, relatives, place of birth, driver's license number, telephone number, Social Security number, physical description and places of residence for the last five years.

The applicant is then photographed and fingerprinted. One copy of the photograph goes on the card and another on file with application. The fingerprints are forwarded to the sheriff's office, which in turn relays them to the FBI on a computer check.

"I don't think it's going to stand up constitutionally," said Julian Fernandez, board chairman of Service Machine and Shipbuilding Corp., one of the plaintiffs in the ACLU suit against the law.

"If the public wants this law, acting at a time of high emotionalism, they should pay for it," Fernandez said. "They could set up a station at each end of the parish on Highway 90 and the sheriff's deputies can mug them there."

Some of the poorer applicants who come to Morgan City seeking a job agree the public should pay the cost and Guarisco said that had been his intent all along, but the ordinance was changed by the police jury.

"It doesn't make sense to me," said Gerald Cooks, a resident of nearby Amelia, La. "All this information is on your driver's license. I don't see why I have to pay $10 to get a job when I've lived here all my life."

John Romero, a Redrock, Okla., resident who came looking for offshore work two months ago and returned this week was shocked.

"I sure didn't have to do this the last time I came to work here," Romero said. "I didn't even know about it until I found a job and they told me I had to have a card."

Still, only a few people say anything. Wade Gussman, a professional photographer who was granted the first license to set up a registration office last October, said his staff has had only three complaints from more than 1,000 applicants.

"And they complained about the $10 charge," Gussman said. "They said this was America and they shouldn't have to pay to get a job."

But Oakley Bagwell, whose wife joined Gussman in opening the first office, said he has seen job seekers walk out of the office when they find they will be fingerprinted.

"That's just it," said one police officer. "You aren't going to get many fugitives who are going to stand there and be fingerprinted."

The St. Mary Parish law is similar to one that has been in effect for 15 years in Plaquemines Parish, Louisiana's largest producer of oil, gas and sulphur. That law originally was written to control civil rights workers coming into the area.

"It's become such a big source of patronage that they've just kept it going down there," said a spokesman in the Louisiana Attorney General's Office. "You have people down there who issue these cards for a living."

Gelfand, who is registered with the New York Bar in addition to working for the Louisiana ACLU, said there is a simple reason his group has never challenged the Plaquemines law.

"We couldn't find a plaintiff down there," he said. "No one has ever come to us and asked us to challenge it and we don't go out and drum up business."

But Leandef Perez Jr., the son of the segregationist who pushed for passage of the law in the mid 1960s, said the registration program once was challenged in federal court.

"I remember going with my father to a meeting in the judge's chambers and there was an agreement with respect to labor unions," Perez said. "If a person who worked in Plaquemines Parish was a member of a recognized labor union and had an ID, then he would not have to be mugged and printed."

The younger Perez is now district attorney of Plaquemines and he said he was convinced the law would stand constitutional muster.

"In my opinion as the district attorney, it is a proper exercise of a police authority of a local government," he said. "We're looking for the itinerant workers who evidently, presumably, have a criminal background."

But whatever good intentions the officials in St. Mary and Plaquemines may have had in passing and perpetuating the laws, the ACLU says it violates the American principles of freedom.

"Well, I can understand their point," said Guarisco, who will defend the St. Mary law against the ACLU suit. "I damn well think it's good that the spirit of the people has a jerk effect on them, that they take another look at things before they just accept them."

(Fourth in a series) THE DEFAULT rate on the generous loans offered by the U.S. government to finance education has been running at a dreadful 13 to 20 percent—and has compelled colleges, lending agencies and the federal government itself to clamp down on students and schools with the steepest default rates.

These abuses are not limited to proprietary schools—by no means. But if your child is among the 3 million Americans who want to attend a private vocational, trade or technical school, take these precautions before you enroll. (This applies to you, too, of course.)

Cleveland Officials Still Divided

CLEVELAND (AP) — Cleveland's mayor and city council remain sharply divided over how to raise cash for their troubled city, with default on $15.5 million in loans only one day away.

Mayor Dennis Kucinich mustered only 13 council votes Wednesday, well short of the 22 he needed, favoring of his last-ditch plan to increase payroll taxes and bring in an immediate $38 million in revenue.

Many council members insist the city should sell a $158 million light system to raise cash.

Six local banks must decide whether to refinance $15.5 million in short-term notes that mature Friday if the city is to avert becoming the first major U.S. city to default since the Depression.

Bankers have not indicated whether Kucinich's plan, including the 50 percent increase in the city's 1 percent payroll tax increase, is enough to persuade them to extend Cleveland's credit.

But Kucinich was optimistic Wednesday. "It's sort of like trying to run a race where you have to clear hurdles," he said. "If you don't start to run, it is sure you are going to lose."

The non-binding council vote, which followed a three-hour meeting between Kucinich and 27 council members, was nine short of the 22 votes required to send the tax increase plan to the voters.

The 32-year-old mayor said he thought his financial plan would work. But he said: "If I cannot get the City Council's cooperation ... Cleveland will be in default."

Appearing on NBC's "Today" show this morning, Kucinich said he still thought he would win the support of the council and the banking community and said, "I think council will give the people a chance to vote" on an income tax hike that is a central part of his plan.

The 32-year-old mayor defended criticism of the inexperience of his administration, which includes a 25-year-old finance director, saying, "We're not running a kindergarten at City Hall."

And he said he believed the situation was manageable and will not get out of control.

Kucinich says default would bring layoffs, reductions in health care, waste collection, police, firefighting and other services, and delay improvements to snow removal equipment and street repairs.

Eventually, default could lead to bankruptcy and the city's surrender of financial control.

Kucinich and the council, at war during most of the mayor's 13-month administration, were to meet again today.

If the city cannot show that a tax increase is in the works, and that the state will provide emergency financial controls, banks could call in the loans — forcing default at the close of business Friday.

Cleveland voters have rejected tax increases three times since 1968, but Kucinich sought to soften the blow by reminding residents that 68 percent of the payroll tax would be paid by suburban residents.

The city could use $14 million in investments in its water system construction fund to stave off default, but that action would jeopardize a court fight over ownership of the system.

Council President George Forbes voted against the mayor's plan to increase taxes, maintaining default now will avert bankruptcy in 1979, when the city of 625, 000 will face yet another cash crisis.

Majority Leader Basil Russo said Kucinich must agree to sell the city-owned Municipal Light system to win council support for his tax increase. The council has tried to force the sale of the light system to a private utility for $158 million, contending the sale would give Cleveland immediate cash.

The mayor wants the council to schedule a February ballot on the tax increase, and to pledge income tax receipts as collateral for extending the loans.

Clouds Disappear, Temperatures Rise

Gray winter clouds were expected to burn off today as temperatures climb into the low 50s to start a warming trend that should continue at least through Friday.

Even warmer weather is predicted for Friday, with a high in the upper 50s.

Fair skies are predicted for tonight and Friday.

The low tonight will be in the upper 20s, weathermen said.

Winds were expected to be westerly at 15 to 20 mph today, dropping to 5 to 10 mph tonight.

High clouds covered most of the state during the night. The Panhandle had clear skies and South Texas and the Lower Rio Grande Valley were covered with low clouds, light drizzle and fog.

Snow squalls developed today in western New York State as the lower Great Lakes states were hit by a new pre-winter storm.

Locally heavy snow squalls were predicted in the snowbelts east and south-east of Lakes Erie and Ontario. The National Weather Service said snow would vary from about 2 to 10 inches or more.

Snow showers and occasional flurries were scattered from western New England across New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio and Michigan.

Travelers advisories have been posted over much of western New York State. Gale warnings were up over the lower and central Great Lakes for westerly winds gusting to 50 mph and greater. A lake shore warning for flooding and erosion was posted for portions of the New York lakeshore.

High wind warnings were posted over the eastern slopes of the Montana Rockies for strong, gusty winds. Gale warnings were up along portions of the Pacific Northwest coast.

Rain fell along the Pacific Northwest coast and scattered showers occurred along the Texas and Louisiana coasts.

Skies were clear over much of the central and western portions of the nation.

Accused Italian Parents Ask Court To Return Children

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (UPI) — A Rhode Island Family Court judge is considering whether two "warm and spontaneous" children frightened by a foster home should be returned to their parents who are in the pornography business.

Maximilian Leblovic, 35, and his wife, Susan, 31, both of Santa Margherita, Italy, were arrested Dec. 6 at a Jamestown seaside retreat where they admitted to photographing and producing sexually explicit magazines.

The Leblovics and six other suspects face a total of 57 state obscenity and child pornography charges.

The couple's two children — Michael, 10, and Shana, 6, — were placed in a state center, then in a foster home while the Family Court determines if they were neglected and/or abused by their parents.

"I want my children back," Leblovic cried out at a hearing Tuesday after fighting back tears for an hour. "Why are you doing this? I've been with those children since they were born? Why are you doing this?"

Leblovic's outburst followed testimony from a child psychologist that two otherwise healthy youngsters were having "a very traumatic experience" by being separated from their parents.

Dr. Donald C. McNeil of Lakeville, Mass., said a 2 1/2-hour interview determined Michael is "a very obviously warm and spontaneous child that is quite talented" and Shana "also is a warm child and spontaneous."

"Did you ascertain any unusual interest in sexual matters not associated with a child of his or her age?" McNeil was asked.

"No, I did not," he responded.

"Michael and Shana have both very positive and close relationships with their parents. They seem to feel very warm and very safe in regards to their parents," he said.

Leblovic broke down a short time later, and Judge Edward V. Healey Jr. immediately recessed the hearing.

Earlier, the state, in arguing that the children weren't living in a proper environment, submitted into evidence several bundles of allegedly obscene photographs seized at the Jamestown home.

They were immediately placed in envelopes after the judge said they weren't the kind of thing to be circulated around the courthouse.

Study Urges Medicare Change

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government should switch to competitive bidding on a fixed-price or fixed-rate basis. It said Medicare's Part A, which pays hospital bills for 28 million elderly Americans, should be combined with Part B, which pays for doctor bills and some other medical services and equipment.

In a report, a panel of 14 HEW officials called for new legislation to scrap the 13-year-old system of letting hospitals, nursing homes and other facilities nominate or "elect" what insurance intermediaries they wish to work through on Medicare claims. Most chose the Blue Cross Association.

The report to the head of HEW's Health Care Financing Administration also suggests that the agency experiment with administering both Medicare and Medicaid programs under one contractor. The states have direct control over the Medicaid program for the poor, but 35 states contract out some or all of the services.

Currently, the 67 Blue Cross plans and all other insurers are paid whatever it costs them to handle Medicare claims.

The study called for competitive bidding on a fixed-price or fixed-rate basis. It said Medicare's Part A, which pays hospital bills for 28 million elderly Americans, should be combined with Part B, which pays for doctor bills and some other medical services and equipment.

Handling both under a single contractor would reduce administrative costs and enhance the government's ability to review health care claims and providers and also would make life easier for Medicare patients, the study said.

"Beneficiaries are often confused because they have difficulty understanding why they need to deal with one organization for hospital benefits and another organization for their doctor bills," it said.

The report, dated Oct. 31, is still being reviewed by top HEW officials and no action is likely on it for several months, one official said.

The report said that in combining Parts A and B, the number of contracts should be reduced and the contract areas be reshaped.

As it stands, the study said, the workload is unevenly distributed and some carriers have sharply higher costs. For example, it said, in fiscal 1977 California Blue Shield handled $1 million Part B claims at a cost of $3.53 each, while South Dakota Blue Shield's cost was $3.93 for each of its 22,000 claims.

Even if the two parts are not combined, the study said, the government should terminate its prime contract with the Blue Cross Association. It said that contract had outlived its original purpose of trying to make sure that the Medicare program was accepted by the hospital community.

Blue Cross plans handled 28.5 million hospital bills for Medicare recipients that cost the government $14.9 billion in fiscal 1977. That was 92 percent of all the claims under Part A.

Some 23 million poor persons are eligible for Medicaid, including 4 million who also qualify for Medicare.

Economist Advocates Jail Time

By DAVID SMYTH

NEW YORK (AP) — "I think all economists should be given five years solitary confinement," says Eugen Loeb, a Czechoslovak economics expert who once did five years solitary in Prague's Ruzyně Prison.

"Half of them might radically rethink their ideas, and the other half would at least be out of circulation where they could do no harm," says Loeb, a former Czechoslovak foreign trade minister and Marxist theoretician.

Loeb, professor emeritus of economics at Vassar College, says his teaching is "actually based on the insights I gained in solitary confinement."

Once a confirmed Marxist, he now says, "The problems of a mature society cannot be solved by Marx, Engels and their reformers, or by the teachings of the classics of capitalism and their modest reformers."

In a book, "Marxism, Thoroughfare or Dead End," Loeb argues, "The developed world is facing a crisis different from anything Marx witnessed, and the very failure of applied Marxism in the East could provide valuable lessons for the Western left."

Loeb, minister of foreign trade in the first communist government of Czechoslovakia, was arrested at the instigation of the Kremlin and falsely implicated in a "Jewish conspiracy" supposedly headed by Rudolf Slansky, secretary-general of the Communist Party.

Forced to confess to crimes never committed, Loeb was condemned to life imprisonment and actually spent 11 years in jail, five of them in solitary, before being released in 1960 and rehabilitated in 1963.

When the Soviets invaded Czechoslovakia in 1968 and overthrew the liberal communist regime that had freed him, Loeb fled to the West.

While in Ruzyně Prison, where 11 of his 13 "co-conspirators" were executed, Loeb says he reconsidered his Marxist ideas, abandoned them as unworkable and came up with "humanomics," which he says is the basis for a new economic science "by and for human beings."

In "Humanomics," a book which — denied writing materials in prison — he composed entirely in his head, Loeb claims, "Capitalist and socialist economies alike have come under the grip of abstract dehumanizing mechanisms — graphs, curves, equations, predetermined 'economic laws' which economists blindly regard as scientific, and which are ruining us."

Loeb says, "Men created the 'laws' in the first place and men can change them by creating new tools, new systems, new programs, that will mobilize the entire economy to accomplish specific goals."

The practical consequences of this system are spelled out in a book, "The Responsible Society," which Loeb co-wrote with Stephen Roman, chairman of the board of Denison Mines, owner of one of the world's largest uranium mines, and a fellow-emigrant from Slovakia.

The unlikely co-authors — a former Marxist theoretician and one of Canada's leading industrialists — make three main points in their formula for "achieving a society without inflation, unemployment or ecological disaster."

—The government should offer free credits to the banking system to supply the economy with money needed for productive purposes.

—Private companies should be allowed to offer their employees profit-sharing plans, and the funds paid into these plans would be deducted from corporate taxes.

—Sales taxes would replace personal and corporate taxes. Luxury items might carry taxes as high as 70 percent of purchase price; items needed by lower-income people might range from zero to 20 percent or even carry a negative rate.

For every person in the United States today, there is almost $500 in currency and coin in circulation, compared with only $34.07 in 1910.

Firestone Recalls Tires In Japan

TOKYO (AP) — Firestone Tire and Rubber Co. of the United States has requested its dealers in Japan to recall its "500 series" radial tires because of defects that may lead to potentially fatal blowouts.

Firestone said it will replace the tires free of charge. Transportation ministry officials, who have been notified of the recall, said some 24,000 tires will be called back beginning in January. All the 500 series radial tires are installed in imported U.S.-made cars and no Japanese cars are carrying them.

Transportation officials said four Japanese were known to have been injured between December last year and October this year in eight separate accidents involving defective radial tires, not necessarily Firestone's. In the U.S., about 40 persons were reported to have been killed and more than 65 others injured.

Firestone, which is making a similar recall in the United States, has been marketing the tires in Japan through 18 dealerships.

Suspect's Fingerprint Lifted From Van

BETTY FORD

Betty Ford Promotes New Book

WASHINGTON (AP) — The question is tough. The audience groaned in embarrassment. But Betty Ford never flinched.

Low, the former first lady was asked Wednesday, have your mastectomy, as this and other problems affected

NEW YORK (UPI) — Authorities today found what might be a suspect's fingerprint on the dashboard of the van six gunmen used to steal $5 million from a Kennedy Airport cargo hangar — the largest cash theft in American history.

Port Authority police spokesman Jim Connolly said a single fingerprint was lifted from the dashboard of the Ford van during an examination of the vehicle this morning by police and FBI agents at Kennedy Airport.

The van was found Wednesday afternoon in Brooklyn.

It was established that the fingerprint was not that of the van's registered owner, Connolly said.

"This is the first break in the case," Connolly said. "Every law enforcement agency in the country is getting (a copy of) it."

A parking ticket led police to the van on a residential street in Brooklyn about about 15 minutes away from the Queens airport.

A police officer issued the ticket for illegal parking at 2:40 p.m. Wednesday, but did not realize it was the getaway vehicle until six hours later, when he read a newspaper story about Monday's robbery.

After a preliminary check, police towed the van from its illegal parking spot to a Port Authority Police building at Kennedy Airport.

Police could not immediately determine how much gas was in the vehicle because the keys were missing and would not say how many miles were on the odometer. When the van was found, light-colored mud speckled the area be-

Business Called On To Honor Guidelines

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter, urging business leaders to rally around his revised wage-price guidelines, predicts the standards will not create a recession in 1979 and says labor will back it despite some officials' rebuff.

Carter called Wednesday night on members of the Business Council, made up of top industry executives, to comply with the revised guidelines issued earlier in the day even if they object to some portions.

"Give me your pledge. ... There is no excuse for delay," the president said in arguing his case for the voluntary program to curb inflation.

He said he is confident most labor organizations would adhere, despite the objections of some officials. It was an apparent reference to AFL-CIO President George Meany who labeled the program "cosmetic — unfair — inequitable."

"I believe that labor will cooperate," Carter said. "That is my conviction and also my determination."

He also tried to ease qualms about the economic future, insisting: "We do not anticipate a recession next year. We don't see any basic imbalances that in the past have preceded a recessionary period."

Critics have warned that administration economic policies, including moves to strengthen the dollar, may plunge the nation into a recession.

Carter said there are "predictions of recession from varying sources which I think can become a self-fulfilling prophecy unless the facts are described accurately to the American people ... our nation is strong."

John DeButts, head of the council and chairman of American Telephone and Telegraph Co., endorsed the plan, saying "the alternatives to that program are far worse, possible mandatory controls."

Basically, the revamped guidelines relaxed rules governing raises for workers while tightening limits on company profits.

Alfred Kahn, the administration's chief inflation fighter, indicated to a news conference that if no changes were made, the program would have failed because some groups considered it too much of a hardship.

The changes, Kahn said, could push the pay standard as high as 7.2 percent from the previous 7 percent level.

hind the rear tires.

Six bandits used the van to escape with $5 million in unmarked U.S. currency and an estimated $850,000 in gold, jewels and pearls from the Lufthansa cargo hangar's "high-value" safe cage in a precision-timed raid early Monday.

Initially, it was estimated that $8 million in U.S. currency was taken, but authorities later increased the figure.

The gunmen — dressed in heavy coats, gloves and dark ski masks — drove up to the hangar at 3:05 a.m., overpowered one employee, bound eight others and emptied the safe in an hour.

It was not immediately known how long the van had been parked on the Brooklyn street.

Officer Joseph Rossi, an 11-year veteran assigned to the Traffic Enforcement Section, detected the van for being parked at an expired meter.

The 32-year-old cop realized several hours later that it was the one being sought and notified his superiors.

"I go about my business," he said later.

"Then I hear an alarm on the radio a few hours later for a black van. I'm thinking, where did I see a black van?"

Robber Picks Wrong Time

WEST HELENA, Ark. (UPI) — A would-be bank robber chose the wrong time to hold up the Merchants and Farmers Bank. One of the customers was the police chief.

Police said the suspect had $6,500 in a sack a teller had filled when Chief Tom Cross nabbed him.

Edwin Lee Parker, 26, of West Helena was charged with aggravated robbery later Wednesday.

"I was in the bank doing personal business when he produced a note," Cross said, "and when he started out, the teller told me the bank had been robbed and I took him into custody."

The man was not armed and offered no resistance.

"It was a case of being in the right place at the right time," Cross said.

Witness Tells Of Seeing McCrory

HOUSTON (AP) — A barmaid testified today she saw FBI informant David McCrory shooting pool several hours after a pivotal Aug. 18 meeting between McCrory and millionaire Cullen Davis.

Jenny MacPartridge, 22, said she was tending bar at the Tempo Club when McCrory entered the Fort Worth night spot about 10:30 p.m.

That was five hours after McCrory met Davis and secretly tape-recorded the first of two conversations that led to the murder conspiracy charge against the Fort Worth industrialist.

McCrory, 40, the state's key witness, testified previously he was home that Friday night and nowhere near the Tempo Club.

The bar is next door to the karate studio owned by Pat Burlison, 42, who appeared here as a hostile defense witness.

The defense maintains McCrory and Burlison conspired with Davis' estranged wife Priscilla to frame the defendant in a plot to murder his divorcee.

Miss MacPartridge said she did not identify McCrory as the beer-drinking customer until she saw his photograph Wednesday but remembered him because he was shooting pool with a man she knew.

Prosecutors sought to show she was flown from her current home in Oklahoma City and wine and dined and well-rehearsed by an investigator for the Davis defense team.

The first of three convicts was expected to testify before the jury later today.

Randall Craig, John Florio and his cousin, Sal Florio, testified Wednesday while the jury was out and leveled charges at representatives of the Fort Worth district attorney. State District Judge Wallace Moore ruled the jury could hear the testimony.

The state dismissed the trio as "liars." John Florio testified Wednesday that two investigators for the district attorney — Don Evans and Bob Morris — contacted him last May in a unit of the Texas Department of Corrections.

He said the investigators told him they had received an anonymous letter indicating he and Sal had been summoned in 1975 by Davis to kill his wife.

The letter, he said, indicated the Florios had pictures and a tape recording of an alleged meeting with Davis in the hotel where the defendant lived after separating from his wife.

Florio insisted he was not the author of the anonymous letter, that it was erroneous and that he did not know Davis.

After a series of meetings in Huntsville and Fort Worth, he said, "I got the impression they were going to indict Mr. Davis for attempted murder on his wife."

Asked what the representatives of the D.A.'s office wanted from him, Florio replied, "They wanted me to give perjured testimony."

"Against whom?" Haynes asked.

"Cullen Davis," John Florio replied. "What did you tell them?"

"I told them I wouldn't do it."

But both John and Sal Florio said they later agreed to go along with the scheme because of inducements from the investigators and others.

John Florio said he once talked to a Texas Ranger and was told that "if I was cooperative, they could be very helpful."

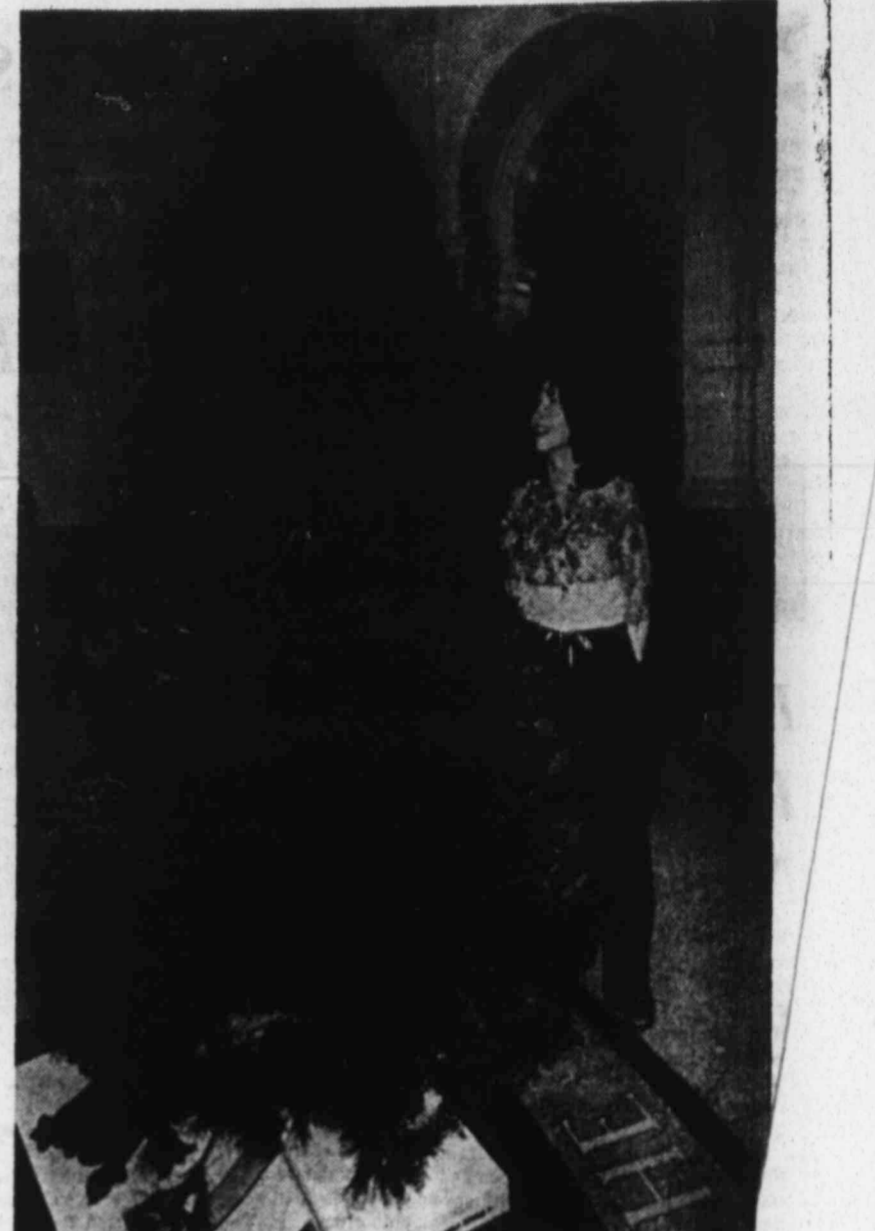

Both John and Sal Florio said they heard the name David McCrory mentioned several times but neither met him.

Sal Florio said that during the initial contacts he once spurned the inducements, explaining that, "Even if I went along with you, when I got back to New York, I'd get my brains blown out."

Subsequent to one of several drug and burglary convictions, Randall Craig said investigators told him they wanted the names of any witnesses who Davis paid to testify at the Amarillo murder trial in which Davis was acquitted of killing his stepdaughter.

Craig said he found no such witnesses. He said he also was told, "if I could remember Cullen Davis approaching me in Amarillo and saying he wanted me to hire a hit man for him, it could be beneficial."

He said he replied, "I'd like to get my charged dropped, but I'm not going to get up on the stand and lie to do it."

CAPITOL ROTUNDA TREE HAS SHRUNK — Sue Staber, who works in the capitol office of State Sen. Ray Farabee, D-Wichita Falls, looks at the Christmas tree selected for the Capitol rotunda this year. The tree, about 12 feet tall, will be decorated and placed in the center of the rotunda. In previous years the trees measured up to 20 feet tall. The smaller tree was chosen so that it can be removed during the two days served for ceremonies turned to the rotunda.

City Chamber Approves Funds To Sponsor Cage Broadcasts

Chamber of Commerce board members this morning approved $3,375 to sponsor broadcast time for Texas Tech basketball games over two Texas stations.

Board members also discussed the possibility of attending the Washington swearing-in of Kent Hance as congressman from the 19th District and Governor-elect Bill Clements' inauguration in Austin.

Radio sponsorship will be over stations KMKZ in Fort Worth and KMAC in San Antonio, two of the 10 stations in the Red Raider Basketball Network for the 1979 Southwest Conference season.

Texas Tech basketball coach Gerald Myers told board members that he "expresses appreciation for the support you've given us on the radio broadcasts for recruiting."

Board members hope to have two charter planes to the Hance swearing-in and Clements' inauguration. Hance is to be sworn in Jan. 15 and Clements Jan. 16.

"There is a conflict between dates, but we hope to have groups attend both of them," said board president Tim Hatch.

In other business, Bob Nash, KFYO assistant manager, told the chamber the National Park Service will send personnel in January to form a master plan for the Lubbock Lakesite. The plan must be drawn up before there can be any federal funding for the archeological project.

The Lubbock Lakesite Research Project, which is conducted through the Museum of Texas Tech, has had the support of the National Science Foundation, the National Geographic Society, the Center for Field Research, the Texas Historical Commission and both the county and city of Lubbock.

The chamber will hold an open house Tuesday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. The Maid of Cotton's wardrobe will be shown at 10:30 a.m., and local celebrities, including Miss Lubbock will appear at the day-long event.

Small business development department guidelines were adopted during the meeting. The purpose of the department is to foster and promote development and improvement where needed of small businesses in Lubbock.

Board members said a small business is considered to be one of not more than approximately 10 employees and gross sales which do not exceed $500,000 annually.

Suit Challenges City Ordinance

HOUSTON (AP) — A suit filed by the U.S. Justice Department challenges an annexation ordinance the city of Houston passed in 1977 and used recently to include about 94,000 residents within its boundaries.

The suit filed Wednesday asks for a temporary injunction to keep the residents of the eight areas involved in the annexation from voting in a Jan. 20 referendum on a proposal by the Tax Protest Group to limit the city property tax rate to 50 cents per $100 valuation.

Conditions Of Victims Improve

Some improvement was reported this morning in conditions of some of the victims of last Friday's collision between a McCaulley school bus and an oil field service truck which killed four persons and injured 20 others.

Doyle Bell, principal of McCaulley High School, whose basketball team was enroute to a tournament at Hermleigh at the time of the accident, is now listed in guarded condition in Hendrick Medical Center, Abilene. Previously he has been on the hospital's critical list.

James Jeffrey, 16, and Todd Stevenson, 15, are both now listed in stable condition.

Kathy Wilkerson, 16, however, remains in very critical condition there. Daren Jeffrey, 14, is listed in critical condition in Hendrick, and Debbie Decker, 16, is still listed in serious condition.

Tami Jeffrey, 15, remains in serious condition in Lubbock's Methodist Hospital as a result of injuries suffered in the accident.

McCaulley school board members in a special meeting Tuesday morning, voted to cancel the school's remaining classes this semester. They cited the small town's "shock" over the fatal crash as well as the fact that many of the injured students had younger brothers and sisters enrolled in the system as reasons for closing the schools eight days ahead of the scheduled Christmas holiday break.

School officials anticipate no problems with their decision to cut the fall semester short. The days eliminated from this semester will be added to the next term, a spokesman said, and the Texas Education Agency is working with the McCaulley schools in the matter.

OPEC Ready To Raise Oil Prices

ABU DHABI (UPI) — Qatar's oil minister today said the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries already has decided to raise prices for 1979 but the increase will not trigger an international economic crisis.

Sheikh Abdul Aziz Bin Khalifa al Thani said President Carter's plea for a price freeze for the third consecutive year came too late to be considered by OPEC members at their weekend meeting in Abu Dhabi.

"I confirm to you that a price rise is unavoidable," Al Thani told a news conference. "But the organization cannot do away with the U.S. dollar." He refused to say what the increase would be, but said it would be pegged to a level the world markets could bear.

Al Thani suggested the conference may adopt a system of staggered price increases "which would give the industrialized countries the opportunity to consider that there is a link between the oil price increase and that of other commodities."

According to a Kuwaiti weekly reporting from Abu Dhabi, the prevalent trend among OPEC oil ministers is "to increase oil prices by 5 percent as of January, and by 2 percent every three months as of April next year."

The weekly Al Hadaf said the proposed formula was a compromise solution believed to have Saudi Arabia's approval.

Asked to comment on Carter's appeal to OPEC to freeze prices into a third year, the minister replied, "The increase already has been agreed upon and those appeals should have come at the right time, not at a critical moment."

He said the 13 OPEC nations, which together produce more than 30 million barrels of oil a day, were experiencing a crisis because of the decline of the dollar and Western inflation.

Jury Indicts Ex-Policemen

HOUSTON (UPI) — A federal grand jury today indicted two fired police officers on civil rights charges arising from the death of an 18-year-old burglary suspect following a 30-mile chase in July 1975.

Walter Earl Plaster and John Stephen White were named with Clarence Murrell Burkett, another fired policeman named as an unindicted co-conspirator, in an alleged conspiracy in the death of Billy Keith Joyvies.

The three police officers were accused of helping plant a .25-caliber pistol in Joyvies' car to justify his shooting by two other officers, Garland Estes and Jessie S. Bell Jr., who were not fired.

Police officers chased Joyvies and his girlfriend in his car after police received a report he had burglarized a truck in a parking lot and stolen a tool box. She testified Joyvies did not own a pistol.

Officer Injured In Getaway

DALLAS (AP) — A policeman questioning a carload of youths for drinking was seriously injured Wednesday when the driver of the car sped away, carrying the officer on the hood until he fell off and hit a traffic sign.

Officer Fred McDonald, 29, suffered a broken arm, a collapsed lung and back and internal injuries in the incident.

Two of five youngsters in the car were later arrested, but three, including the driver, escaped.

McNorrell said he saw the youths throw an empty malt liquor can out of their car in front of the school and after exchanging words with them summoned McDonald, the officer on duty in the neighborhood.

Sunday Marks 75th Anniversary Of Wright Flight

By TED J. SIMON
A-J Travel Editor

December 17, 1903 — It was a cold morning with winds blowing from the north between 20 and 25 miles per hour across the Outer Banks of North Carolina.

Orville and Wilbur Wright stepped out of the warmth of the wooden shed to look across the sand dune of Kill Devil Hills at the choppy sea. They had been waiting several days, after years of planning, for good weather to test their motor driven Flyer. But, the weather continued to get worse as winter approached, and the Wright Brothers wanted to be home in Dayton, Ohio for Christmas.

The brothers decided too much time and effort had been involved to delay the test until after winter. Besides, other men in other parts of the world were attempting to also prove a motor driven aircraft could be built and flown.

Five men helped the brothers to assemble the tracks on which the craft would slide across the sands. Then the Flyer, looking much like gliders that the brothers had constructed in their bicycle shop, by the toss of a coin that Orville would make the first attempt. Then if the aircraft was intact, Wilbur would make the next attempt.

Orville walked over to the craft and

The Flyer was difficult to handle as it climbed to a height of six feet. The erratic behavior was too difficult to correct and the aircraft skidded to a stop after twelve seconds and a distance of 120 feet. (The wingspan of today's 747 jumbo jet exceeds that distance by more than 75 feet.)

But, the brothers didn't accept the flight as being a motor powered flight. The distance could have been covered by the craft's gliding capability.

Wilbur's turn at the Flyer, after a broken skid was repaired, saw the aircraft travel 170 feet and remain airborne for 13 seconds. After each flight the brothers discussed the craft's handling ability and how the controls should be adjusted.

Orville made the third flight that covered 200 feet and lasted 15 seconds. Still the brothers were not satisfied that the flight showed the aircraft was powered by the motor.

At exactly noon, Wilbur took the controls. Again, as the craft cleared the sands, it dipped up and down and banked from side to side. Then the aircraft winged its way over the first landing site, the second and the third.

In the distance, nearly four miles away, was the village of Kitty Hawk. Wilbur wanted to reach that cluster of houses and trees and he attempted to clear a dune. The aircraft started pitching again and a skid touched sand. The aircraft's flight came to an abrupt halt with the sounds of breaking wood and twisting metal.

But, man could build and fly a motor powered aircraft had been in the air for 59 seconds and had covered a distance of 852 feet.

A telegram was sent by the brothers to their parents in Akron telling of the successful flight. But, when the telegram was shown to an Akron newspaper, the editor saw no importance in the event. The following morning there was no mention of the flight in the Akron Journal. Other papers across the nation did see the importance of the short flight, and some papers told of the event with front page headlines.

A small monument now marks the spot where the flight originated. Once a large hill, winds have diminished the site to a small hill. The great sand dune itself has been shifted by winds some 50 yards away from the historical site. Today hardy beach grasses anchor the dune and a tall shaft of marble stands as testimony to the brothers.

Full-scale reproductions of a 1902 glider and the 1903 motor powered aircraft are displayed in a nearby visitors center. Pictures and exhibits tell the story of the Wright Brothers. Adjacent to the first flight area are two wooden buildings — a reconstruction of the Wrights' 1903 camp.

The structures are furnished with items much like those the brothers used during their stay at Kill Devil Hills. The Visitor Center and the exhibit buildings are open every day except Christmas. A 3,000-foot paved airstrip for small planes runs alongside the Wright Brothers National Memorial.

Kill Devil Hills and nearby Nags Head have modern motels and motor hotels. The Outer Banks are a chain of narrow lands that can be reached by bridge from Manteo and Point Harbor or by ferry from Cedar Island to Ocracoke.

was hauled out of its wooden shed. Several times the men had to return to the shed to warm themselves.

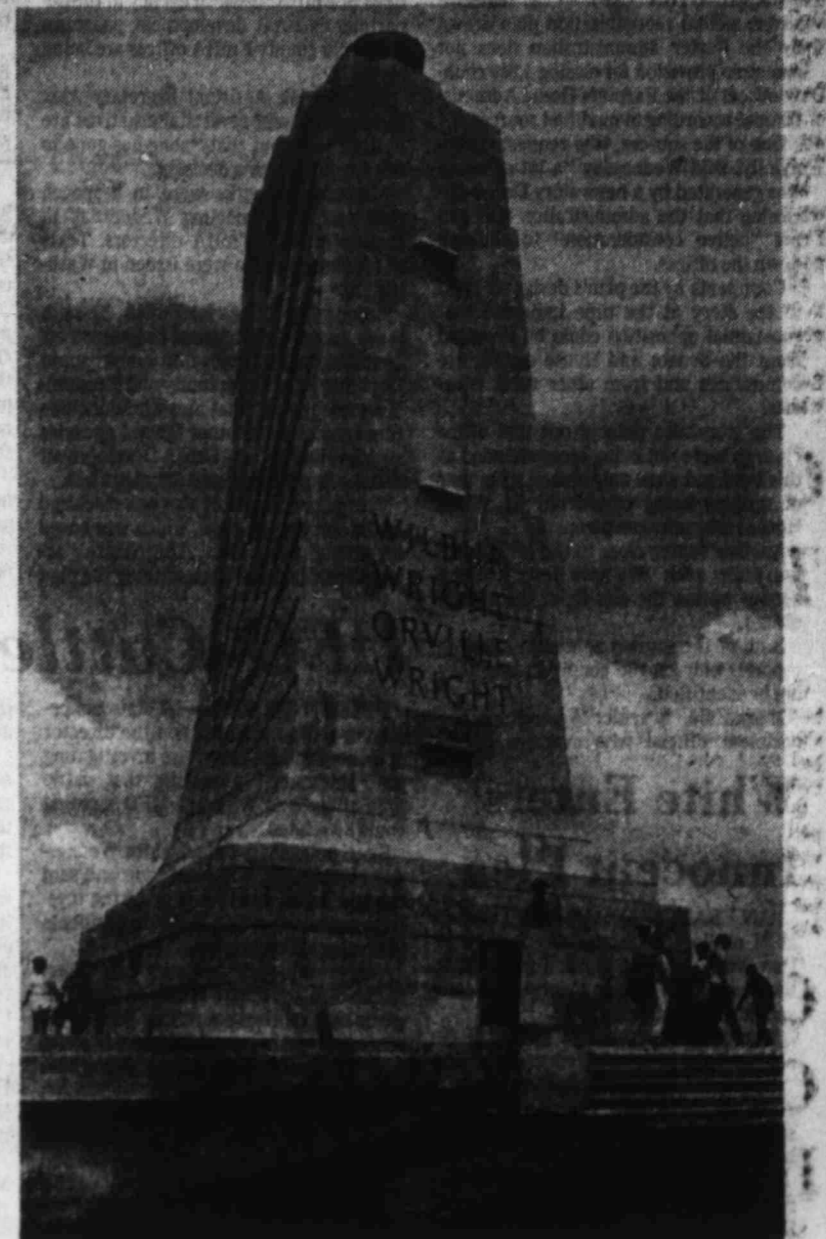

Finally everything was ready. Orville and Wilbur (impeccably dressed — as they always were — in suits, ties and stiff collars) shook hands. It had been decided stretched out in a prone position on the lower wing to test the controls. Two propellers spun at increasing speed near Wilbur's feet; the craft vibrated.

A wire holding onto the craft's tail assembly was released and the Flyer slid along the rails.

Bank, which was a tiny roadside village when the Wright Brothers first visited it in 1900. A memorial and museum commemorating their flight on December 17, 1903 is located at Kill Devil Hills.

Largest of the Outer Banks resorts is Nags Head, with its beach stretching some 20 miles from Kill Devil Hills to the northern entrance of the Cape Hatteras National Seashore. The Seashore was the nation's first such recreational area. It embraces some 70 miles of undeveloped beach. The Cape Lookout National Seashore, when finalized, will stretch 58 miles along the shores and dunes of Portsmouth Island, Core and Shackleford Banks. The seashore is reached only by boat.

On historic Roanoke Island, the first English attempt to settle the New World failed and led to one of the world's greatest disappearing acts. "The Lost Colony" — the nation's oldest outdoor drama, telling this story — is presented here each summer. Many other outdoor dramas throughout the state tell the story of a particular time in history.

The Elizabethan Gardens near Fort Raleigh (a restoration of the first colony attempt) is located on Roanoke Island.

Witness Tells Of Seeing McCrory

HOUSTON (AP) — A barmaid testified today she saw FBI informant David McCrory shooting pool several hours after a pivotal Aug. 18 meeting between McCrory and millionaire Cullen Davis. Jenny MacPartridge, 22, said she was tending bar at the Tempo Club when McCrory entered the Fort Worth night spot about 10:30 p.m. That was five hours after McCrory met Davis and secretly tape-recorded the first of two conversations that led to the murder conspiracy charge against the Fort Worth industrialist. McCrory, 40, the state's key witness, testified previously he was home that Friday night and nowhere near the Tempo Club. The bar is next door to the karate studio owned by Pat Burleson, 42, who appeared here as a hostile defense witness. The defense maintains McCrory and Burleson conspired with Davis' estranged wife Priscilla to frame the dependant in a plot to murder his divorcee. Miss MacPartridge said she did not identify McCrory as the beer-drinking customer until she saw his photograph Wednesday but remembered him because he was shooting pool with a man she knew. Prosecutors sought to show she was flown from her current home in Oklahoma City and wine and dined and well-rehearsed by an investigator for the Davis defense team. The first of three convicts was expected to testify before the jury later today. Randall Craig, John Florio and his cousin, Sal Florio, testified Wednesday while the jury was out and leveled charges at representatives of the Fort Worth district attorney, State District Judge Wallace Moore ruled the jury could hear the testimony. The state dismissed the trio as "liars." John Florio testified Wednesday that two investigators for the district attorney — Don Evans and Bob Morris — contacted him last May in a unit of the Texas Department of Corrections. He said the investigators told him they had received an anonymous letter indicating he and Sal had been summoned in 1975 by Davis to kill his wife. The letter, he said, indicated the Florios had pictures and a tape recording of an alleged meeting with Davis in the hotel where the defendant lived after separating from his wife. Florio insisted he was not the author of the anonymous letter, that it was erroneous and that he did not know Davis. After a series of meetings in Huntsville and Fort Worth, he said, "I got the impression they were going to indict Mr. Davis for attempted murder on his wife." Asked what the representatives of the D.A.'s office wanted from him, Florio replied, "They wanted me to give perjured testimony."

"Against whom?" Haynes asked. "Cullen Davis," John Florio replied. "What did you tell them?" "I told them I wouldn't do it." But both John and Sal Florio said they later agreed to go along with the scheme because of inducements from the investigators and others. John Florio said he once talked to a Texas Ranger and was told that "if I was cooperative, they could be very helpful." Both John and Sal Florio said they heard the name David McCrory mentioned several times but neither met him. Sal Florio said that during the initial contacts he once spurned the inducements, explaining that, "Even if I went along with you, when I got back to New York, I'd get my brains blown out." Subsequent to one of several drug and burglary convictions, Randall Craig said investigators told him they wanted the names of any witnesses who Davis paid to testify at the Amarillo murder trial in which Davis was acquitted of killing his stepdaughter. Craig said he found no such witnesses. He said he also was told, "If I could remember Cullen Davis approaching me in Amarillo and saying he wanted me to hire a hit man for him, it could be beneficial."

Chamber of Commerce board members this morning approved $3,375 to sponsor broadcast time for Texas Tech basketball games over two Texas stations. Board members also discussed the possibility of attending the Washington swearing-in of Kent Hance as congressman from the 19th District and Governor-elect Bill Clements' inauguration in Austin.

Radio sponsorship will be over stations KMZK in Fort Worth and KMAC in San Antonio, two of the 10 stations in the Red Raider Basketball Network for the 1979 Southwest Conference season. Texas Tech basketball coach Gerald Myers told board members that he "expresses appreciation for the support you've given us on the radio broadcasts for recruiting." Board members hope to have two charter planes to the Hance swearing-in and Clements' inauguration. Hance is to be sworn in Jan. 15 and Clements Jan. 16. "There is a conflict between dates, but we hope to have groups attend both of them," said board president Tim Hatch. In other business, Bob Nash, KFYO assistant manager, told the chamber the National Park Service will send personnel in January to form a master plan for the Lubbock Lakesite. The plan must be drawn up before there can be any federal funding for the archeological project. The Lubbock Lakesite Research Project, which is conducted through the Museum of Texas Tech, has had the support of the National Science Foundation, the National Geographic Society, the Center for Field Research, the Texas Historical Commission and both the county and city of Lubbock. The chamber will hold an open house Tuesday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. The Maid of Cotton's wardrobe will be shown at 10:30 a.m., and local celebrities, including Miss Lubbock will appear at the day-long event. Small business development department guidelines were adopted during the meeting. The purpose of the department is to foster and promote development and improvement where needed of small businesses in Lubbock. Board members said a small business is considered to be one of not more than approximately 10 employees and gross sales which do not exceed $500,000 annually.

Conditions Of Victims Improve

Some improvement was reported this morning in conditions of some of the victims of last Friday's collision between a McCaulley school bus and an oil field service truck which killed four persons and injured 20 others. Doyle Bell, principal of McCaulley High School, whose basketball team was enroute to a tournament at Hermleigh at the time of the accident, is now listed in guarded condition in Hendrick Medical Center, Abilene. Previously he has been on the hospital's critical list. James Jeffrey, 16, and Todd Stevenson, 15, are both now listed in stable condition. Kathy Wilkerson, 16, however, remains in very critical condition there. Daren Jeffrey, 14, is listed in critical condition in Hendrick, and Debbie Decker, 16, is still listed in serious condition. Tami Jeffrey, 15, remains in serious condition in Lubbock's Methodist Hospital as a result of injuries suffered in the accident. McCaulley school board members in a special meeting Tuesday morning, voted to cancel the school's remaining classes this semester. They cited the small town's "shock" over the fatal crash as well as the fact that many of the injured students had younger brothers and sisters enrolled in the system as reasons for closing the schools eight days ahead of the scheduled Christmas holiday break. School officials anticipate no problems with their decision to cut the fall semester short. The days eliminated from this semester will be added to the next term, a spokesman said, and the Texas Education Agency is working with the McCaulley schools in the matter.

Judge Convicts Young Mother

HOUSTON (UPI) — A judge Wednesday convicted a young mother who pleaded no contest to murder charges in the arson deaths of her 16-month-old twin children. Sandra Carter, 24, was convicted of setting a murder-suicide fire in her apartment Sept. 15. She told police she could not stand the heat and fled, leaving Marvin and Rosalee Carter to die. State District Judge J.D. Guyon ordered a presentencing investigation and scheduled sentencing for Jan. 24. Mrs. Carter could receive life imprisonment. Mrs. Carter, who at first claimed her son played with matches and may have set the fire, originally was charged with capital murder, which could carry a death sentence. The charge later was reduced to murder.

Jury Indicts Ex-Policemen

HOUSTON (UPI) — A federal grand jury today indicted two fired police officers on civil rights charges arising from the death of an 18-year-old burglary suspect following a 30-mile chase in July 1975. Walter Earl Plaster and John Stephen White were named with Clarence Murrel Burkett, another fired policeman named as an unindicted co-conspirator, in an alleged conspiracy in the death of Billy Keith Joyvies. The three police officers were accused of helping plant a .25-caliber pistol in Joyvies' car to justify his shooting by two other officers, Garland Estes and Jessie S. Bell Jr., who were not fired. Police officers chased Joyvies and his girlfriend in his car after police received a report he had burglarized a truck in a parking lot and stolen a tool box. She testified Joyvies did not own a pistol.

OPEC Ready To Raise Oil Prices

ABU DHABI (UPI) — Qatar's oil minister today said the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries already has decided to raise prices for 1979 but the increase will not trigger an international economic crisis. Sheikh Abdul Aziz Bin Khalifa al Thani said President Carter's plea for a price freeze for the third consecutive year came too late to be considered by OPEC members at their weekend meeting in Abu Dhabi. "I confirm to you that a price rise is unavoidable," Al Thani told a news conference. "But the organization cannot do away with the U.S. dollar." He refused to say what the increase would be, but said it would be pegged to a level the world markets could bear. Al Thani suggested the conference may adopt a system of staggered price increases "which would give the industrialized countries the opportunity to consider that there is a link between the oil price increase and that of other commodities." According to a Kuwaiti weekly reporting from Abu Dhabi, the prevalent trend among OPEC oil ministers is "to increase oil prices by 5 percent as of January, and by 2 percent every three months as of April next year." The weekly Al Hadaf said the proposed formula was a compromise solution believed to have Saudi Arabia's approval. Asked to comment on Carter's appeal to OPEC to freeze prices into a third year, the minister replied, "The increase already has been agreed upon and those appeals should have come at the right time, not at a critical moment." He said the 13 OPEC nations, which together produce more than 30 million barrels of oil a day, were experiencing a crisis because of the decline of the dollar and Western inflation.

Officer Injured In Getaway

DALLAS (AP) — A policeman questioning a carload of youths for drinking was seriously injured Wednesday when the driver of the car sped away, carrying the officer on the hood until he fell off and hit a traffic sign. "It was a wild scene," said Assistant Principal Larry McNorrell, a witness near the high school where the incident occurred. "I saw it all, and I still can't believe it happened." Officer Fred McDonald, 29, suffered a broken arm, a collapsed lung and back and internal injuries in the incident. Two of five youngsters in the car were later arrested, but three, including the driver, escaped. McNorrell said he saw the youths throw an empty malt liquor can out of their car in front of the school and after exchanging words with them summoned McDonald, the officer on duty in the neighborhood.

Suit Challenges City Ordinance

HOUSTON (AP) — A suit filed by the U.S. Justice Department challenges an annexation ordinance the city of Houston passed in 1977 and used recently to include about 94,000 residents within its boundaries. The suit filed Wednesday asks for a temporary injunction to keep the residents of the eight areas involved in the annexation from voting in a Jan. 20 referendum on a proposal by the Tax Protest Group to limit the city property tax rate to 50 cents per $100 valuation.

Sunday Marks 75th Anniversary Of Wright Flight

By TED J. SIMON
A-J Travel Editor

December 17, 1903 — It was a cold morning with winds blowing from the north between 20 and 25 miles per hour across the Outer Banks of North Carolina.

Orville and Wilbur Wright stepped out of the warmth of the wooden shed to look across the sand dune of Kill Devil Hills at the choppy sea. They had been waiting several days, after years of planning, for good weather to test their motor driven Flyer. But, the weather continued to get worse as winter approached, and the Wright Brothers wanted to be home in Dayton, Ohio for Christmas.

The brothers decided too much time and effort had been involved to delay the test until after winter. Besides, other men in other parts of the world were attempting to also prove a motor driven aircraft could be built and flown.

Five men helped the brothers to assemble the tracks on which the craft would slide across the sands. Then the Flyer, looking much like gliders that the brothers had constructed in their bicycle shop, by the toss of a coin that Orville would make the first attempt. Then if the aircraft was intact, Wilbur would make the next attempt. Orville walked over to the craft and

The Flyer was difficult to handle as it climbed to a height of six feet. The erratic behavior was too difficult to correct and the aircraft skidded to a stop after twelve seconds and a distance of 120 feet. (The wingspan of today's 747 jumbo jet exceeds that distance by more than 75 feet.)

But, the brothers didn't accept the flight as being a motor powered flight. The distance could have been covered by the craft's gliding capability.

Wilbur's turn at the Flyer, after a broken skid was repaired, saw the aircraft travel 170 feet and remain airborne for 13 seconds. After each flight the brothers discussed the craft's handling ability and how the controls should be adjusted.

Orville made the third flight that covered 200 feet and lasted 15 seconds. Still the brothers were not satisfied that the flight showed the aircraft was powered by the motor.

At exactly noon, Wilbur took the controls. Again, as the craft cleared the sands, it dipped up and down and banked from side to side. Then the aircraft winged its way over the first landing site, the second and the third.

In the distance, nearly four miles away, was the village of Kitty Hawk. Wilbur wanted to reach that cluster of houses and trees and he attempted to clear a dune. The aircraft started pitching again and a skid touched sand. The aircraft's flight came to an abrupt halt with the sounds of breaking wood and twisting metal.

But, man could build and fly a motor powered aircraft had been in the air for 59 seconds and had covered a distance of 852 feet.

A telegram was sent by the brothers to their parents in Akron telling of the successful flight. But, when the telegram was shown to an Akron newspaper, the editor saw no importance in the event. The following morning there was no mention of the flight in the Akron Journal. Other papers across the nation did see the importance of the short flight, and some papers told of the event with front page headlines.

A small monument now marks the spot where the flight originated. Once a large hill, winds have diminished the site to a small hill. The great sand dune itself has been shifted by winds some 50 yards away from the historical site. Today hardy beach grasses anchor the dune and a tall shaft of marble stands as testimony to the brothers.

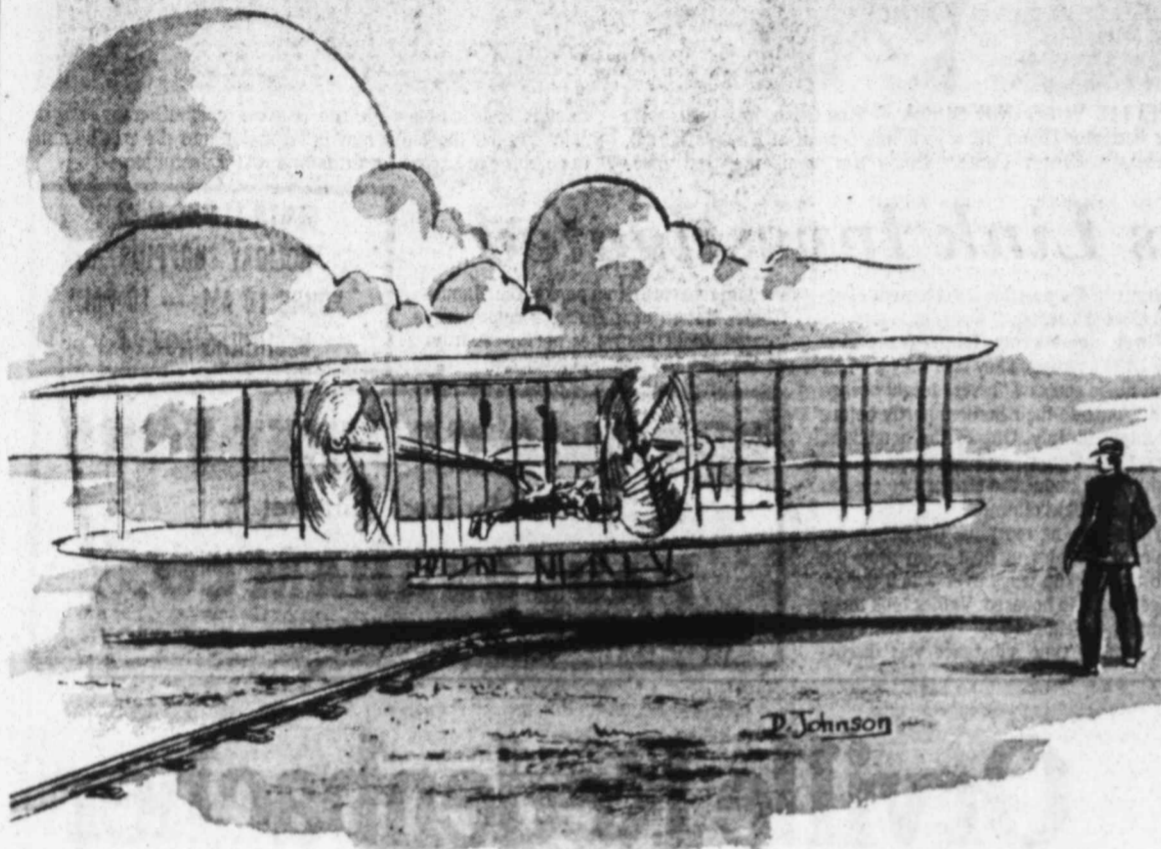

Full-scale reproductions of a 1902 glider and the 1903 motor powered aircraft are displayed in a nearby visitors center. Pictures and exhibits tell the story of the Wright Brothers. Adjacent to the first flight area are two wooden buildings — a reconstruction of the Wrights' 1903 camp.

The structures are furnished with items much like those the brothers used during their stay at Kill Devil Hills. The Visitor Center and the exhibit buildings are open every day except Christmas. A 3,000-foot paved airstrip for small planes runs alongside the Wright Brothers National Memorial. Kill Devil Hills and nearby Nags Head have modern motels and motor hotels. The Outer Banks are a chain of narrow islands that can be reached by bridge from Manteo and Point Harbor or by ferry from Cedar Island to Ocracoke.

State Has Several Tourist Attractions

Every year tourists journey to the Outer Banks of North Carolina to see the picturesque and famous landscape where the Wright brothers successfully flew their first powered airplane. For many vacationers the trip to Kill Devil Hill becomes an annual pilgrimage.

First time visitors to North Carolina soon discover that all areas of the state prompt vacationers to return again and again. A short trip in any direction will emphasize that North Carolina is known as "Variety Vacationland."

Scenery, recreation, and historical points of interest combine with a wide choice of accommodations to make true the boast by the Tar Heel State. The state's vacation attractions are in localities ranging from ocean beaches to the Great Smoky and Blue Ridge Mountains where the Southern Appalachians culminate in the highest peaks east of the Mississippi River.

North Carolina has four well-defined seasons and three distinctive regions: Coastal Plains, Midlands, and the mountains. Each season has its special attractions, and each region its interesting characteristics.

Seaside resorts are on banks, offshore islands or peninsulas permitting access to rivers and sounds as well as to the open Atlantic. The Outer Banks form a series of narrow islands extending from the Virginia line to Cape Lookout near Moorehead City.

North Carolina's chain of seaside resorts, north to south, begins at Kitty Hawk, which was a tiny soundside village when the Wright Brothers first visited it in 1900. A memorial and museum commemorating their flight on December 17, 1903 is located at Kill Devil Hills.

Largest of the Outer Banks resorts is Nags Head, with its beach stretching some 20 miles from Kill Devil Hills to the northern entrance of the Cape Hatteras National Seashore. The Seashore was the nation's first such recreational area. It embraces some 70 miles of undeveloped beach. The Cape Lookout National Seashore, when finalized, will stretch 58 miles along the shores and dunes of Portsmouth Island, Core and Shackleford Banks. The seashore is reached only by boat.

On historic Roanoke Island, the first English attempt to settle the New World failed and led to one of the world's greatest disappearing acts. "The Lost Colony" — the nation's oldest outdoor drama, telling this story — is presented here each summer. Many other outdoor dramas throughout the state tell the story of a particular time in history.

The Elizabethan Gardens near Fort Raleigh (a restoration of the first colony attempt) is located on Roanoke Island also.

Insurance Increased On Some Savings

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. has increased the amount of insurance coverage for Keogh and Individual Retirement savings accounts.

The new coverage took effect Tuesday and raises the insurance coverage to $100,000 on each account.

so. The Gardens, near Manteo, are a memorial to those colonists who made the attempt to settle the New World.

Jockey's Ridge State Park (a 13-story sand dune, tallest on the east coast) is a haven for modern-day Icaruses as they soar in brightly colored hang gliders.

Accessible by state operated ferries, the remote island of Ocracoke was once the haunt of many pirates including the infamous Blackbeard. His death off Ocracoke has many times brought up the subject of buried treasure.

Tryon Palace and its gardens have been carefully restored at New Bern. When the building was constructed in 1770 it was called the "most beautiful building in Colonial America." Also located in the Coastal Plains are Historic Edenton, Bath and Halifax.

The Moorehead City-Beaufort area is gateway for popular Atlantic Beach, Salter Path, Emerald Isle and Fort Macon. The Hampton Mariners Museum at Beaufort is a working museum where visitors learn about the sea, nature and man.

Steeped in history, a special walking tour of the port city of Wilmington allows visitors to reach back into the past. The North Carolina Azalea Festival is held there each April. The U.S.S. North Carolina Battleship Memorial is berthed in the Cape Fear River as a permanent year-round memorial for Tar Heels who gave their lives in World War II. Both young and old find excitement as they explore the gigantic war ship.

Nearby is Pleasure Island (Carolina and Kure Beaches), long known as a vacation area. The quaint village of Southport and Long Beach are nearby. The South Brunswick Islands (Holden, Ocean Isle and Sunset beaches, and Calabash) are North Carolina's southern most beaches. Calabash is famous for seafood, with 21 restaurants.

Inland the legendary "barbecue belt" connects the down east towns of Goldsboro, Rocky Mount and Wilson. The pig is cooked over hot coals and served with corn sticks, hush puppies, Brunswick stew and slaw and is considered a special culinary experience.

North Carolina is also known as "Golf State, U.S.A." Twenty-six courses are located within a 15-mile radius of the golfing mecca of Pinehurst-Southern Pines. This breaks down to 87.09 miles of golf to test the pro or duffer. North Carolina's golf courses, stretched out tee to green would extend over 1,000 miles. The World Golf Hall of Fame, a multi-million dollar facility dedicated to golf, is located at Pinehurst.

Old Salem, the lived-in restoration of the village established in 1776 by Moravians who moved south from Pennsylvania, is located at Winston-Salem in the Midlands. Thirty-one buildings have been restored and eight are open to the public.

Throughout the mountains golf, fishing, swimming, boating, riding and hiking are enjoyed in scenic areas. Many resorts are open year around. North Carolina is the southern most state where skiing is available on a large scale.

Special attractions and theme parks in western North Carolina range from Linville Caverns at Linville to The Land of Oz at Beech Mountain near Banner Elk.

FHA Offices Not Hit By Government Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — A tentative governmental reorganization plan drawn by the Carter administration does not contain a provision for closing 1,800 county offices of the Farmers Home Administration, according to qualified sources.

One of the sources, who requested anonymity, said Wednesday "a lot of heat" was generated by a news story Dec. 6 disclosing that the administration was giving "active consideration" to shutting down the offices.

Comments by the plan's designers cited in the story at the time indicated that substantial opposition could be expected from the Senate and House agriculture committees and from other rural interests.

The story also pointed out that office closings were not being recommended at this time and were only among a number of options being considered by White House reorganization planners.

Another source close to the reorganization effort said: "We have never had as a serious option the closing of the county offices."

Both of the sources agreed to talk to a reporter only on the condition that they not be identified.

Meanwhile, a senior Agriculture Department official who oversees operations of FmHA, the lead agency in the department's rural development program, said, "No county FmHA offices are being closed."

The official, Assistant Secretary Alex P. Mercure, said several alternatives are in draft form but that "none has gone to the president" for a decision.

Mercure's remarks were in a speech prepared for a meeting Wednesday in Denver of state FmHA directors. Texts of his remarks also were issued in Washington.

Among the options for FmHA, he said, is one to put development programs now operated by the agency into a new "super Department of Community and Economic Development" that also would include functions of some other federal agencies such as Housing and Urban Development and the Small Business Administration.

This part of the plan also was disclosed in the story a week ago, which was based on official documents. The phrase "active consideration" in describing the plan to close county offices also was from the documents.

One of the sources said "the only place" where talk of closing county FmHA offices showed up was in staff papers drawn up to illustrate potential savings by juggling various federal agencies.

"In the course of doing that, we put a lot of things in to look at," the source said. "But it was not in any sense an active option in our minds to close the county offices."

The source declined comment on other possible USDA reorganization plans, including one reportedly that would merge the Forest Service with the Interior Department's Bureau of Land Management in a new Department of Natural Resources.

But the source said that the plans as now conceived "do not mean just taking away" from USDA and that there is strong talk for adding some programs now in other agencies to the department.

UFO-Cattle Mutilations Link Investigated

DULCE, N.M. (UPI) — A state policeman, a retired scientist and the director of a chemical laboratory are investigating the "intriguing" possibility that cattle mutilations and a recent UFO sighting could be related.

State policeman Gabe Valdez Wednesday confirmed the investigation and said the trio hoped to solve some of the mystery surrounding the separate incidents in northern New Mexico.

Valdez said lab analyses are being made of a substance found on five live cattle at a ranch where many cows were mutilated and on a residue found at a site near Taos, where the UFO sighting was reported.

Involved in the investigation with Valdez are Bob Schoenfeld of Schoenfeld Clinical Laboratories in Albuquerque and retired scientist Howard Burgess.

Schoenfeld said tests so far showed the residue found at the two sites have similar properties, especially significant amounts of potassium and magnesium.

However, both Schoenfeld and Burgess said they could not speculate on whether there was a direct link between the ash-like residue and the material found on the cattle.

Schoenfeld said it was unlikely the material would have occurred naturally in the locations where it was found. Burgess added the potassium-magnesium combination was "not substantial enough right now to say the two mutilations and UFO incidents are definitely related, but it's intriguing."

Although the tests on the cattle and the UFO site were conducted in early July, the information was not made public until this week.

Authorities said there have been about 35 cattle mutilations reported so far this year. Valdez, who has investigated many of the incidents, speculated evidence "points to the possible involvement of sophisticated aircraft."

Three neighboring families reported the UFO sighting. They said they heard a loud noise and saw "a very bright orange light" outside their homes shortly before midnight in July. One of the neighbors, Mrs. Elias Vargas, said she saw a "roundish" form about the size of two cars as the orange light dimmed.

The following morning, the people recovered samples of dust from atop the cab of a pickup truck over which the orange light had hovered. Valdez took those samples to Schoenfeld.

A similar type substance was discovered on five cattle in a pen on the Manuel Gomez Ranch near Dulce, a community located about 120 miles northwest from where the UFO sightings occurred.

White Enters Innocent Plea

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Bail was set at $1 million for former city Supervisor Dan White after he pleaded innocent to the slayings of Mayor George Moscone and Supervisor Harvey Milk.

Municipal Court Judge Robert Reynolds set the high bail Wednesday, citing "the enormous proportions of the case."

White's attorney, Douglas Schmidt, said after the hearing that "a million dollar bail is tantamount to no bail."

"The court must consider both the safety of the defendant and the safety of the public at large under all circumstances," the judge said in setting bail after White pleaded innocent to two charges of murder.

A preliminary hearing for the 32-year-old White, a former policeman and firefighter, was scheduled for Jan. 17.

During the 17-minute court session, the judge asked White if he had agreed to the plea. White said, "I do, your honor."

White spoke only one other time: when Reynolds asked if he waived his right to a speedy preliminary hearing. "Yes, I do, your honor," White said.

DR. LAMB

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.
 DEAR DR. LAMB — I was told I have an enlarged heart. I am 81. A friend has had an enlarged heart for 18 years. She told me the hole in the heart was beginning to close. What does that mean? I would appreciate any information you can give me. Would yard work be too hard for me to do — just weeding flower beds?

DEAR READER — There are many causes for an enlarged heart. If you have high blood pressure, your heart may gradually enlarge. If you develop heart failure, which literally means weakening and over-stretching of the heart muscle fibers, that can cause an enlarged heart.

Heart failure with an enlarged heart is a common complication of disease of the arteries to the heart. In our society that's usually caused by fatty-cholesterol deposits in the arteries. Your heart can enlarge because of an obstruction to the outflow valve. I suspect that is what your friend is describing. The heart has to work harder to push the blood past the obstruction.

You can have a large heart from persistent, regular, vigorous physical activity as in long distance runners.

This adaption to exercise enables a person to pump a lot of blood when he is doing a lot of work. It is usually an indication of good health.

You need to judge your level of physical activity in relation to your response. If you can do light yard work and you feel comfortable without shortness of breath, there isn't any reason why you can't do it.

Readers who want information on what controls blood pressure can send 50 cents for The Health Letter number 1-8. Send your request with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Dr. Lamb in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1561, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — In one of your columns you discussed hemorrhoids. You said bleeding hemorrhoids should never be ignored because the pressure behind the veins causing the hemorrhoids might be a tumor. I take it this could lead to cancer of the rectum.

My husband has had bleeding hemorrhoids for several years. The bleeding has been quite profuse at times. Several years ago a doctor told him he would have to have the hemorrhoids removed. My husband was working at the time and didn't want to lay off work to get treated. The doctor told him not to put it off too long, certainly no more than two years. Actually, it has been 10 to 15 years ago that he was told this.

My husband is not overweight and has never had constipation. I'd like to know if this problem can be caused by the presence of a tumor that has been there all these years without symptoms and, if so, would the tumor be benign or malignant? Whenever he is on his feet more than usual, the bleeding becomes worse and sometimes he bleeds to the outside through his clothes. This has just been during the past two years. What is your recommendation?

DEAR READER — Because your husband has had hemorrhoids for a very long time, I doubt they are caused by a tumor. Nevertheless, I think a careful examination is important for anyone who has bleeding from the rectum, even if you think it is from the hemorrhoids.

Those bleeding hemorrhoids are varicose vein of the rectum and he will continue to have trouble until the condition is corrected.

Obstacles In Control Efforts Allow VD Cases To Increase

ATLANTA (UPI) — The effort to control gonorrhea and syphilis in the United States has run into formidable obstacles and both diseases, which last year were on the downswing, are now rising again, a federal health official said.

"We're at a critical juncture," said Dr. Paul J. Weisner, head of the venereal disease control division of the national Center for Disease Control, which coordinates federal, state and local efforts against syphilis and gonorrhea.

"We're certainly worried about it," he said. "The focal increases are not occurring everywhere, but we certainly can't ignore it."

A year ago the CDC reported a 15.2 percent drop in the number of cases of primary and secondary syphilis compared to the previous year. The number of gonorrhea cases showed a 1.1 percent reduction, a small drop percentage-wise but significant because known cases of the disease were well over the million mark.

In the first 43 weeks of this year, there have been 837,110 reported cases of gonorrhea. This compares with 826,846 cases for the same number of weeks in 1977, a 1.2 percent increase.

Syphilis cases jumped from 17,013 for the first 43 weeks of 1977 to 17,790 this year, a 4.6 percent hike.

Weisner said that for every five cases brought to the attention of health officials, another two cases are not reported.

Weisner attributed the setback in the battle against syphilis and gonorrhea to several factors, one of them the "taxpayers' revolt" in several states that has reduced state and local money going to public health clinics.

Although the federal government continues to appropriate $32 million annually in state and local grants to fight syphilis and gonorrhea, Weisner said "public health disease clinics are closing all over the place."

Two other sexually transmitted diseases, barely recognized a few years ago but which are now characterized as public health problems in many communities, also are draining people and money away from the syphilis and gonorrhea control programs, Weisner said.

The two diseases, Weisner said, are type two Herpes simplex and nongonococcal urethritis. Herpes simplex causes painful sores while urethritis produces inflammation but sometimes shows no symptoms. Health officials say, however, it can cause sterility in females and when transmitted to infants can lead to eye infections and pneumonia.

Weisner said public clamor that something be done about these diseases has resulted in a reduced effort to find and cure cases of gonorrhea and syphilis. Vast amounts of money and resources also have been thrown into a battle against a new type of gonorrhea resistant to penicillin, Weisner said. He said the penicillin resistant strain "turns out not to be an enormous health threat to the United States at this time."

British Oil Company Now Europe's Largest

LONDON (AP) — British Petroleum (BP), the state controlled oil giant, has become the biggest industrial company in Europe and the sixth largest in the world, according to a new book.

"The Times 1000," an annual review of leading companies published by Times Books, calculated company rankings by total sales through 1977 and said BP displaced Royal Dutch Shell of the Netherlands, which was first in the previous edition.

BP sales totaled 14.7 billion pounds (nearly $30 billion) and Royal Dutch 13.6 billion pounds ($27 billion).

A separate table of the 100 leading American companies showed five with bigger sales than BP — Exxon, General Motors, Ford, Mobil and Texaco.

Oil and chemical companies dominate the European top 20. Another British oil giant, Shell Transport and Trading, ranked third with sales of 11.3 billion pounds ($22.6 billion).

Smith Calls Fuel Fire 'Setback'

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (UPI) — Prime Minister Ian Smith said the guerrilla-sparked fuel depot fire was one of the "biggest setbacks" of his government's six-year war against black rebels.

Both wind and rain hampered firefighters' attempts to extinguish the blaze set by guerrilla saboteurs at a major fuel processing compound housing Shell, British Petroleum and Total facilities.

The only two undamaged tanks in the complex burst into flames today.

Fire Chief Vin Lowrie said "the last two tanks are burning." But he said "I don't think there is any more danger to life or property."

The industry ministry said news reports that 19 million gallons had been lost were "wide of the mark" and "too high" but the government said it had no intention of telling the enemy how much damage was caused.

Wind spread the flames spewing from blackened tanks to other containers and rain spattered the burning fuel, as would water dropped on hot cooking oil in a frying pan.

Jerry Musson, marketing director of Shell-British Petroleum in Rhodesia, said Wednesday 22 tanks had been destroyed, four were afloat and the last two threatened.

He said the tanks caught in the fire represent about half the total number at the Salisbury fuel depot, which also boasts Caltex (Texaco) and Mobil fuel tanks.

Despite the presence of South African oil fire experts and a Johannesburg Fire Brigade truck down in Wednesday, flames whipped by suddenly shifting winds engulfed a tank that had been in contact.

The top of the tank burst under force of a flaming stream of fuel and the 20-odd firefighters who had been spraying water on the container to keep it cool made a dash for safety.

The incident occurred about 20 minutes before a grim-looking Smith appeared to inspect the damage.

"It's a great disaster as you can see," he said. "We must not pretend otherwise. ... This is one of our biggest setbacks since the terrorist war started."

Fuel is delivered to Rhodesia in violation of international trade sanctions by the self-managed South African subsidiaries of major Western oil companies and Rhodesia must pay for it with hard currency.

"Any blow to our economy, when you know we are a country under siege, is something that is serious," he said.

Blumenthal Warns Of Recession

WASHINGTON (AP) — Admitting that the new anti-inflation program risks an economic downturn, Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal said today there is the "certainty of recession" if inflation continues unchecked.

Blumenthal said the risk of recession under the Carter program is less than if nothing were done.

"There are risks to be sure ... but certainly the risks of recession with the program are far less than the certainty of recession if inflation were allowed to accelerate unchecked," he told a subcommittee of the congressional Joint Economic Committee.

He said the Carter program, which includes voluntary wage and price guidelines, "is the best guarantee for avoiding recession."

President Carter said Wednesday night he is worried that predictions by private economists of a recession in 1979 could become "a self-fulfilling prophecy" if Americans begin to believe them.

Both Carter and Blumenthal said the nation's economy is performing well enough to avoid a serious economic decline, although Blumenthal said there are signs the economy is approaching its "realistic limits" of growth and that some slowdown is needed.

Meanwhile, Charles L. Schultze, chairman of Carter's Council of Economic Advisors, said economic growth next year will slow to "something under 3 percent," down from about 3.7 percent this year. He said unemployment could "edge up slightly" over 6 percent. It is now 5.8 percent.

"The impact of slower growth on the rate of unemployment hinges importantly on whether productivity growth improves substantially, reducing the demand for labor, or continues at the sluggish pace of 1978," Schultze said in prepared remarks before the subcommittee, which is holding hearings on problems of the U.S. dollar.

Blumenthal said initial reaction to the administration's $30 billion program to support the dollar have been favorable because foreigners are now convinced the administration means business.

"As the full realization of the extent of our measures and the degree of our determination to persevere spreads, I believe we will see further dollar strength in the markets," he said.

Blumenthal disagreed with the subcommittee chairman, Rep. Henry S. Reuss, D-Wis., that another international currency is needed to supplement the role of the dollar as the key world currency.

"As a practical matter, the dollar will continue to play an important role in international monetary relationships for the foreseeable future if the world is to continue to achieve growth and progress," Blumenthal said.

In his speech, Carter said the economy continues to show strength that even his own advisers have found surprising, pointing to recent favorable statistics on housing, employment, retail sales and business inventories.

He said the "one consistent error in economic predictions" of his administration has been "to underestimate the economic strength and growth potential of our country."

"We do not anticipate a recession next year... Our nation is strong," Carter said.

The president's address was to a meeting of the Business Council, an organization of the nation's top corporate executives. He appealed for backing for his anti-inflation program, warning that inflation could undo all the economic gains of the last two years.

Shah Urged To Change Government

the army would just fall apart."

He said if things go on as they are, "everything will collapse within a month. There'll be chaos and upheaval."

Another prominent politician said, "I see no other alternative, the time is short. This plan offers a solution that could be our last chance. It could also be the shah's last chance. He must act soon."

Political sources said the shah would have no role at all, except as a figurehead to provide continuity until Crown Prince Reza, now 18 and undergoing pilot training at Reese Air Force base near Lubbock, can assume the Peacock throne in two years.

The National Front today announced the meeting between the shah and Sanjabi, but said, "Our position remains the same as before. We shall not join any coalition government."

The spokesman said the Savak secret police chief escorted Sanjabi from his home to the shah's palace for the talks. There was no official word on the talks in the state-run news media.

The government, which made $22 billion from oil sales last year, also faced economic disaster in the form of a crippling oil strike that has forced oil-rich Iran to open negotiations to import enough oil and kerosene for domestic needs from neighboring countries.

The general strike command — in open defiance of martial law — came from Isfahan's leading clergyman to protest two days of backlash terror unleashed by armed pro-government garrisons against opponents of the shah.

The victims were taken to overcrowded hospitals where surgeons worked frantically in operating rooms covered with blood.

"Only a few shops are open," said a Western diplomat in Isfahan, the capital of ancient Persia.

He said the city's 80,000 residents stayed home in defiance of a military communique to attend ceremonies where new statues of the shah and his father, Reza Shah, were unveiled to replace two demolished by demonstrators earlier this week.

Isfahan's Moslem leader, Ayatollah Haj Hossein Khademi, told followers Wednesday night to boycott the ceremony.

"All residents must remain indoors, close their shops and postpone business activities and shopping Thursday," the mullah ordered.

Military authorities had warned of grave repercussions if the ceremony was not well attended.

The state-controlled news agency today reported clashes between rival groups in three townships, Ghalashtar, Saman and Farad Boneh, near the Iraqi border.

The agency gave no details.

Foreign journalists, including UPI's Mark Wilkie who visited Isfahan Wednesday, saw troops and farmers transported from the countryside roaming the area, armed with clubs and pistols, and shouting "Javid shah" (Long live the shah).

They stopped cars that did not display a photograph of the shah and beat the occupants.

Soldiers stopped cars at intersections and ordered drivers to turn on their headlights as a gesture of support for the shah.

Reporters said all operating rooms at the Soraya Hospital were crammed with wounded and hospital attendants were so busy they did not have time to mop the blood from the floor.

Doctors said one man who died had been shot by while he stood in line to donate blood to others injured in Monday's rioting.

Health Care Better Now, Doctor Says extension of the bus lines.

"They said they had tried it, but that there was no demand," she replied.

Generally, Dr. Orr indicated she felt the city had not been responsive to health needs in the past, but said she felt the situation had changed. "They said they wanted a good health department and I think that's why they brought me here," she said.

To a direct question from Arthur, Dr. Orr said she had been reprimanded for making public statements regarding public health.

On cross examination by Travis Shelton, one of the attorneys representing the city, Dr. Orr agreed the city has made "substantial progress" in the public health field since she arrived.

She also labeled the number of nurses in the public school system as "more than enough."

She said the cause for the hepatitis cases has not been determined, adding that she did not know whether cases were increasing or whether physicians were reporting them better.

City Council

ty rather than bring their properties up to standard, Loter said.

Councilman Alan Henry questioned whether the "as available" acquisition would contribute to blight in the neighborhood. However Loter said, "I don't think there's any way of increasing the blight."

Councilwoman Carolyn Jordan questioned the deletion of funding for a party house adjacent to the Canyon Lakes on East Broadway, the paving of the parking lot at Copper Rawlings Community Center and the deletion of the paving of East 19th Street between Guava Avenue and Loop 289.

She was told all were "sacrificed" to make funds available for the Overton South park and for acquisition of land adjacent to Canyon Lake No. 6 in Southeast Lubbock.

CDAC chairman Arnold Maeker said the committee recommendations were tempered by the appearance of citizens from those areas at the committee's final meeting.

Mrs. Jordan also questioned a CDAC recommendation that $35,000 be used to landscape Day Care Center No. 1.

Council members will hold the final public hearing on the CD funds on Jan. 25.

Also council members voted to increase fees charged by the Health Department, which is expected to increase revenue more than $70,000.

Inspection fees of food service establishments and food processing establishments, as well as other fees would be increased.

The food service and food processing inspection permits would be changed from a flat fee to one pro rated on seating capacity.

The witness said she realized the health department was a joint city-county operation prior to 1976.

In testimony Wednesday, Maj. Vince Micucci, Reese Air Force Base social actions officer, said in his opinion "racial discrimination is present in Lubbock."

"It appears to me to be a rather pervasive, demeaning attitude towards minorities in town," he said. "It's an attitude you would have expected more 15 to 20 years ago than you would now."

The Air Force officer said he investigated complaints of blacks and Mexican-Americans being denied entrance to city nightclubs and encouraged city officials to enact an ordinance to deal with such discrimination.

On September 7, 1977, Micucci said he made a speech to a meeting of the Base/Community Council in support of such an ordinance.

"I indicated the (base) commander and myself were concerned some of the minority members of the Air Force were being treated unfairly and one way to deal with that was a strong city ordinance," he testified.

Micucci said he gave the committee, which included former Lubbock mayor Roy Bass, a copy of such an anti-discrimination ordinance passed in Fort Worth while he was stationed there.

Although the response to the suggestion was positive from those attending the meeting, Micucci said he didn't hear about what the city was doing regarding the discrimination in clubs until the news media reported that the city council had passed such an ordinance.

Shelton asked Micucci if seven discrimination complaints in 18 months received by the social actions division "seemed like an inordinate number."

"Yes sir," replied Micucci. "Per population there's a larger number here than in Fort Worth."

Micucci acknowledged two of the club owners found to be discriminating against minorities had "signed an intent not to discriminate against the military," while another club generating complaints went out of business.

"Inevitably you're going to have some isolated cases of discrimination, aren't you?" asked Shelton. "Lubbock's not unlike other cities you've been to, is it?"

"Yes, in that discrimination exists," Micucci replied.

Trade Agreement Nears Completion

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's top trade negotiator says overall agreement is close on a trade agreement between the United States and 97 other nations.

Robert S. Strauss said Wednesday he has "a feeling" the countries will successfully conclude a pact that would break down many of the existing trade barriers. Talks on the issue have been going on in Geneva for the past 18 months.

Water Compromise Helps City

very arose early this year when EPA published its results of a sample taken from Lake Meredith in the spring of 1977.

The sample was handled in two different ways, he said, and very different conclusions were reached.

One testing determined a THM level of .156 mg/l — well above the .10 mg/l EPA-recommended level — while a second laboratory measured a level of only .0524 mg/l, Scherer said.

Amarillo and Lubbock water authorities criticized the EPA findings and the Texas Department of Health intervened to conduct its own tests.

State officials gathered samples from the Lubbock water treatment plant April 14 and June 16, according to Willis.

The results from the April sample met the EPA-recommended limit, he said, but in June the measured THM level at the point of distribution to the storage reservoirs was .153 mg/l.

Lubbock water officials then decided to conduct their own tests.

During a two-week period beginning June 26, daily samples were taken from treated water at the plant and at the point of distribution to the reservoirs, Willis said.

The results from June 26 (Monday), June 28 (Wednesday), June 30 (Friday) and July 2 (Sunday) indicated THM concentrations within the following ranges:

treated water at the plant — .128 to .169 mg/l; water at the point of distribution — .125 to .192 mg/l.

Willis blamed the high THM levels on the chlorine used to disinfect Lubbock's water.

The Canadian River Authority chlorinates the Lake Meredith water being piped to Lubbock every Sunday night through Tuesday morning, he said. Upon reaching the city's water treatment facility the Lake Meredith water is then chlorinated again.

The THMs are formed when chlorine combines with natural organic materials such as algae and decaying vegetation.

While conceding that THM levels must be controlled at some point, Willis also criticized the proposed .10 mg/l limit, saying it was an "arbitrary" figure the EPA had formulated.

More extensive tests are needed to determine the actual danger level with THMs, he commented.

The EPA has estimated that a .10 mg/l limit reduces the cancer risk for a 70-year-old person from one in 10,000 people to one in 100,000 people, Meacham said, in response.

Tests to date show THMs to have caused cancer in rats and mice and "therefore, might also present a carcinogenic risk to humans," the proposed regulations state.

The EPA expects to publish final THM regulations in early 1979, "possibly as early as January," Meacham said.

Recession Predictions Mixed

By JOHN CUNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — The President says there'll be no recession next year. An important Congressional agency says there will be one. And on Wall Street the views are mixed, as they always are and will be.

And what does it mean to you, this outburst of controversy that seems to be replacing inflation as the red-hot topic of cocktail party chitchat, academic philosophizing and kitchen table debate.

First, that there is a chance of a recession, high interest rates and prices seem certain to cut into economic activity. Secondly, households should be careful not to overextend themselves financially.

But you should be aware also that a good deal of the commotion involves politics, assumptions, games, and interpretations, as well as plain economics.

The politics should be clear. When President Carter maintains the nation will avoid a recession next year he might be speaking as much from necessity as from conviction. He doesn't have much choice.

Thomas Murphy, General Motors chairman, has the same dilemma: If he forecasts a weak economy he might convince potential customers that 1979 isn't the year to buy. GM almost always forecasts a big year.

Can the situation be much different for G. William Miller, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, guardian of the nation's money supply? Were he to forecast recession, he might undermine his own monetary goals.

Miller is especially sensitive to such possibilities. "We will have no recession unless we talk ourselves into it," he is quoted as saying. And so, he won't say it; and neither will President Carter.

Like any forecasts, those made by Carter, Murphy, Miller and others are only as good as the assumptions on which they are based.

Carter expects capital spending — for new, enlarged or more efficient production facilities — to bolster the economy. So does U.S. Steel's president, David Roderick. And Murphy feels people will love his cars.

There is no assurance these assumptions will prove out. In fact, the Congressional Budget Office believes that business capital spending will provide no stimulus at all, and that a recession could take place.

The game that is involved in all the recession talk is "Call The Turn." To some extent it occurs every year at this time, when economists turn forecasters, seeking to foretell the coming year. But the competition becomes intense when a major turn is anticipated.

The U.S. economic expansion is now close to four years old, one of the longest-running good-time shows of this century. Based only on statistical probabilities, it should be losing its steam. But when?

With egos bared, economists in the past month have been announcing and broadcasting their expectations for 1979. No different than you or me, they want to be able to say next year, "I told you so."

But what they say about recession sometimes isn't totally clear. While a commonly accepted definition of "recession" is two straight quarters of lowered output — the term has never been defined in law.

In fact, at least one interpretation bluntly challenges the common definition. There is, that is, a thing called a growth recession, in which production climbs very slowly and unemployment rises.

The distinction between recession and depression also remains misty. There is no defined border that separates them. What distinction are made generally are based on length of time and severity of fall.

Should we therefore ignore the controversy? Some of it, to be sure, without losing any useful knowledge unless we enjoy the give and take of the public arena.

But we shouldn't remain deaf and blind to all of it. There are serious problems, such as the personal debt load and rising prices and towering interest rates, and history tells us they must be corrected.

The smart household is one that distills what it hears and then applies its own judgement. It has been said many times before that the best indicator of your own financial condition is your wallet or purse.

Besides, those economists who are sometimes uncannily accurate in forecasting a continuation of existing trends have a relatively poor record in calling the major turns.

Military Conducts Firepower Display

WHITE SANDS MISSILE RANGE, N.M. (AP) — Army, Navy and Air Force weaponry destroyed tanks, a truck and a small building in a firepower display at this desert missile site, and the Defense Department says it hopes U.S. allies and potential enemies will take note.

Defense Secretary Harold Brown said the demonstration Tuesday was aimed at showing the Soviet Union "that the United States does intend to remain strong and be second to none in defense capability." He said the U.S. must pursue advance weapons technology because NATO forces in Europe are outnumbered, particularly in tanks and troops, by Warsaw Pact nations of eastern Europe.

FTC Votes For Vocational School Regulation

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Trade Commission, after finding many abuses, Wednesday voted a regulation on vocational schools that includes allowing students to get refunds when they drop out of courses.

"I'm convinced that unfair practices are so pervasive that we need a regulation" on vocational schools, Commissioner Paul Rand Dixon said.

FTC Chairman Michael Pertschuk said many vocational school students obtain federally guaranteed loans on which the government is obligated if the student defaults on payments.

"The evidence in our proceeding indicates that many defaults are attributable to fraud and deception by vocational schools. Students who are lured into a vocational course with false promises of better jobs and higher salaries often drop out and then default on their loans," Pertschuk said.

The regulation will take effect Jan. 1, 1980 and will cover all 7,000 vocational schools in the nation, which offer courses in such areas as computer programming, secretarial skills, aviation and cosmetology.

The regulation will require students to pay only for the part of the course completed except for a $75 enrollment charge. The FTC staff had recommended making this charge $25.

Other provisions of the regulation require a 14-day cooling-off period after a student signs an enrollment contract during which a full refund can be obtained.

It also requires that specific job placement rates and salary levels be disclosed if the school makes advertising claims such as promises of "success" or a "good job" after completing the course.

The staff said consumers continue to complain despite hundreds of FTC cases against private vocational schools.

"These efforts required, and continue to require, a substantial investment of commission resources in an attempt to prevent false, deceptive and unfair practices," the staff report said.

The commission had tried to stop vocational school rip-offs in one stroke in 1972 when it wrote guidelines listing practices it considered illegal.

Those practices include schools saying

New Jersey Court Makes TV Debut

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — The state Supreme Court has made its television debut, and the future of television in New Jersey's courts hinges on the court's review.

The court Tuesday relaxed for a day its rule against television and still photography in courtrooms to assess the impact of cameras on judicial proceedings. It was the first time cameras were allowed in a New Jersey courtroom since 1936, when photographers were permitted to record the Lindbergh kidnapping trial. New Jersey Public Television provided pool coverage for interested television stations and aired the court proceedings Tuesday night.

they are accredited when they are not, giving out false information on facilities or instructors, using "help wanted" columns to imply that employment instead of training was offered and issuing misleading information about class size and placement services.

In issuing the guides, the commission had sought to achieve a "more widespread and equitable observance of the laws administered by the commission with a view to protecting the public and to provide a basis for industrywide abandonment of unfair and deceptive acts and practices on the part of the vocational schools."

However, the staff said, "No such abandonment has occurred." Instead, it has had to conduct more costly investigations since the guidelines were issued, often concluding in nearly identical orders to stop similar abuses practiced at different schools.

The FTC consumer protection staff said it has failed to obtain general compliance either through the guidelines or through scores of individual actions. Therefore, the staff said, a 1975 law giving the commission authority to issue industrywide regulations should be applied to vocational schools.

Doubt Cast On Theory

HASKELL (AP) — Windows were open but there was no indication anybody ever climbed through them, a Texas Ranger has testified about the scene at a home where he investigated a triple murder last January.

A wrist watch, a billfold with money, and other valuables were left untouched throughout the house, tending to cast in poor light a theory that an intruder broke into the house at night, Ranger Marshall Brown told a jury Wednesday as it sat in the murder trial of a 17-year-old Aspermont boy.

Roy Glenn Swink stands accused of shooting his father, stepmother and brother in the early hours of last Jan. 24, and then trying to make it appear someone broke in their house and committed the slayings.

Brown said the kitchen window was open when officers answered an emergency call at the home in the West Texas ranching community. But dust on the sill was undisturbed, plants sitting underneath were undisturbed and no footprints were found in the damp ground outside, the Ranger added.

Over defense objections, District Attorney Joseph Thigpen introduced into evidence a large, rectangular gas tank in which Brown said seven spent shotgun shells and 17 live rounds were found. The tank was located near the Swink house in Aspermont.

Brown said Swink told him he went to Stamford to visit a girl friend in the hospital the night of Jan. 23 and had told her he thought someone was following him on the trip to the hospital.

Swink told him he got back home after 9 p.m. and later went to bed, got up about 2:30 a.m. for a drink of water, then went to bed again, Brown told the jury.

The Ranger said Swink related that he was later awakened by what sounded like gunshots and that he got up, put on his pants and went into the hallway. He said Swink told of hearing his brother, Royce, say: "I'll call an ambulance."

Swink told officers he then broke out his bedroom window with his hand, climbed through it and went to an uncle's house for help, Brown said.

Brown had testified earlier that officers found no footprints outside the broken bedroom window.

Dallas Police Test Rifle

IRVING (AP) — Ballistics tests have ruled out a deer rifle confiscated Tuesday night from three teen-agers as being the gun used by a sniper who fatally shot two persons on U.S. 183 in Irving last weekend.

The .30-caliber rifle, equipped with a telescopic sight, was found by Dallas police in the trunk of a car Tuesday night and turned over to Irving authorities, who performed ballistics tests.

"We have ruled it out as the weapon used," Police Capt. Joe Lowe said Wednesday. "We're back where we were before the weapon came in. We're continuing the investigation, but our leads are rather slim right now."

Police said they searched the youths' car after hearing several shots in an isolated area about five miles from where the sniper took shot at passing motorists Saturday night.

The youths said they had been shooting at signs in a small park just before they were stopped.

The sniper, shooting at cars on the freeway not far from the Dallas-Fort Worth Airport, killed Steven T. Gaudin, 12, of Plano, and Raymond Douglas Andrews, 42, of Arlington.

Clements Changes Tax Figures

AUSTIN (AP) — On Nov. 22, Gov.-elect Bill Clements insisted that "one way or another" he would reduce state taxes by $1 billion in addition to the "Tax Relief Amendment."

But on Wednesday, Clements backed off his rigid stance on the $1 billion figure.

"I said at the time it wasn't definitive, but I'm optimistic," Texas' first Republican governor in a century told an impromptu Capitol news conference. "Certainly I'd say that a billion dollars is a goal. It's still a goal I'll work toward."

Clements talked about possible tax cuts following a meeting with Speaker Bill Clayton.

The governor-elect and Clayton said spending proposals by the Legislative Budget Board can be trimmed in the law-making session that begins Jan. 9.

The board recommended over $2.4 billion in new state spending for 1980-1981, leaving only $80 million in new revenue from inflation, higher oil and gas prices and economic growth available for spending or tax cut programs.

Legislators use the LBB recommendations as the starting point for determining the state budget.

"I think there will be, in due course, a meeting of the minds and we'll come out of this with a program that will be good for the people of Texas," said Clements.

Clements and Clayton said they needed state revenue estimates from Comptroller Bob Bullock before deciding what budget areas to cut.

"There will be some areas in the document that can be trimmed," Clayton said. "I don't know that it would be proper to say $1 billion or $2 billion or half a billion dollars."

Clements said he has received "very good reaction" from legislators during recent private meetings.

"I'm extremely pleased. I think everyone's in a high degree of cooperation," he said. "That's not to say we all agree on everything. We don't but that's the way the system works."

Ex-Wife Denies Murder Role

FORT WORTH (AP) — The ex-wife of a New Mexico man accused in the capital murder of an Amarillo Pizza Hut manager has admitted it was her idea to rob the restaurant, but said 26-year-old David Grijalva was wholly responsible for the killing.

Prosecutors contend Grijalva, of Gallup, N.M., killed Jeanette Powers by slashing her throat, beating her on the head with a 15-pound rolling pin and then shoving her head in a dough mixer.

Kathy Sutton, the state's star witness against Grijalva, testified Wednesday she lied to police initially about her role in the incident in blaming the entire episode on Grijalva.

Miss Sutton, 20, pleaded guilty to robbery and was assessed a 10-year probation sentence for her role in the Jan. 11, 1977, incident at the pizza parlor.

Contrary to what she first told police, she knew about the pistol used in the robbery, she knew Grijalva was plotting the robbery and she knew what happened to Grijalva's blood-stained clothes after the slaying, she testified Wednesday.

But when defense attorney Dean Roper suggested she masterminded the robbery and instructed Grijalva to murder Mrs. Powers, Miss Sutton's admissions stopped short.

"Is it not true that you instructed David to take Mrs. Powers into the dough room of the Pizza Hut where she died?" Roper asked.

"No sir. It's not," answered Miss Sutton.

Roper then asked her if she personally instructed Grijalva to kill Mrs. Powers.

"I never told David to kill her," Miss Sutton answered.

Roper also asked Miss Sutton if it wasn't she, instead of Grijalva, who struck the first blow to Mrs. Powers' head with a heavy rolling pin.

Again, Miss Sutton answered no.

Parental Attention To Toy Maintenance Develops Safety, Responsibility Traits

NEW YORK (NEA) — Choosing the right toy at the right time is important to the individual development of each child. Equally important to the full physical, mental, social and emotional growth of that child is parental participation in his or her play and guidance in the proper use and maintenance of their toys.

Toy manufacturers today take great care to assure that the toys they produce are safe for the children intended to use them. It is their social responsibility, and they also consider it good, basic, business practice. Toys are subjected to extensive testing during design and development stages and after manufacture. Voluntary safety standards, developed by the Toy Manufacturers of America and published by the National Bureau of Standards as PS 72-76, are adhered to by virtually every American toymaker. In addition, the Consumer Product Safety Commission establishes and enforces regulations to remove unsafe toys from the marketplace. And it is up to the consumer to see that these practices are followed.

But careful manufacture and selection of toys is not enough. Toys must be properly used and maintained as well. Parents should be their own safety experts on toys. They must continue to be cautious and watchful, to check children during play and toys after purchase.

Children need to be taught safe play habits. To do this parents should set good examples. Look for and carefully read instructions. Share them with your child. Make sure he or she understands how to play properly with the toys and knows any danger involved in their use. Special attention given to directions will frequently result not only in safer play but in longer toy life. Parents should supervise their children's play, but the extent and nature of this supervision will vary.

To become responsible adults, children must develop a sense of responsibility for their own possessions. Among the first things a child considers his very own are his toys. Sharing in the selection of these toys provides a sense of possession. Showing how to use and care for them properly encourages him to assume responsibility for them.

Spot check toys regularly for minor damage and encourage children to let you know when toys need repair. A child does not always see significance in a small dent, crack or tear in a toy if it's still in one piece. But often a spot of glue, a tightened bolt, a few drops of oil, or even a bit of tape will prevent further damage and possibly an accident. Don't allow toys to remain outdoors overnight. Rain and dew cause rust and damage that increases the risk of accidents.

A toy damaged beyond repair should not remain in the toy collection.

In play consider your own home situation. Make children aware of space limitations and that certain toys are for the outdoors. Protect young children from any potentially dangerous toys of older children. Put these away — on high shelves or in a locked box, closet or room; older siblings should accept responsibility for taking care of them.

Also, help friends and relatives select a gift for your child that is appropriate by telling them what you feel is suitable. If the toy is still wrong, put it away and explain this to your child. It's better to save the toy for a proper time and risk a few tears now than to risk an accident or frustration at play.

Discard or give away toys that a child has outgrown and temporarily remove those in which he has lost interest but are still suitable to his development.

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: This is to protest that a bald-headed man has to pay the same price for a haircut as a man with a full head of hair.

It isn't fair. I think the barber should charge the bald-headed man half-price for a haircut.

MRS. L.P.B.

Dear Mrs. B.: So what should a barber charge the man whose hair is long and thick and requires twice as much time for a haircut? Sorry, it all evens out. Anyone who feels that the trimming he's getting isn't worth the trimming he's getting should stay out of barber shops.

DEAR ABBY: My son is living with a woman we are not at all fond of. On Christmas Eve the family gathers at my home for an exchange of gifts and I know my son will bring her.

No way will I give my approval of this living arrangement by giving them a gift together. And I certainly wouldn't give this woman a gift under ordinary circumstances. So my dilemma is: should I give her a gift?

Dear Perplexed: Yes.

DEAR ABBY: I've been seeing Ron (made up name) for seven months. We also work together. He's everything I like in a boyfriend — intelligent, considerate, good sense of humor and he puts up with my bossiness. My parents are crazy about him and I love his parents. He's 26 and I'm 23.

The problem is he wants to marry me and I keep putting him off because I think he's too short for me. I'm 5 feet 5, and Ron is only 5 feet 6. We are exactly the same weight, but my hands and feet are bigger than his.

I feel conspicuous when we're together. He just doesn't seem masculine enough for me.

My parents say I'm too picky. Ron says if I don't make up my mind by next summer, he'll start dating other girls.

I don't want to lose him and I don't want to marry him. I know good men are hard to find, but I don't want to marry him unless I'm rid of this hang-up about his size. Can you help me?

HUNG UP

Dear Hung: The word from here is DON'T marry Ron or anyone else unless your heart and mind are in unison. In my opinion size is unimportant, but then I won't have to live with Ron — YOU will.

Conventions can be useful, but they are not unmixed blessings. Consider this hand from a recent team match.

At one table, South boldly leaped to game after his partner raised to two spades. This was a distinct overbid, but it worked out well. West led a heart, and declarer had no difficulty in making his contract. He captured the king with the ace, then led a trump to the queen and ace. After winning the heart return, he ruffed a heart in dummy, cashed the king of trumps and returned to his hand with a club to draw the last trump. Declarer lost only one trump and two diamonds.

At the other table the bidding went as shown in the diagram. South, a more practical soul, did not feel that his hand warranted a unilateral jump to game, so he made a trial bid in hearts. North, looking at a sound raise and only a doubleton heart, was delighted to accept the invitation.

This was an intelligent auction, but the sequence had an unfortunate aftermath. West decided that there was no point to a heart lead, so he mentally flipped a coin to choose between the minor suits. He opted for a diamond, with most pleasing results for his side.

East won the jack of diamonds and continued with the king. When that held, the defenders needed only one more trick to set the contract, for they were sure to get the ace of trumps. The bidding made it obvious that West was unlikely to hold a useful high card, so East reasoned that his only real chance for the setting trick was via a trump promotion. Therefore, he continued with the ace of diamonds.

Declarer ruffed and led a trump to the king and ace. East followed through with his plan by returning his fourth diamond, and declarer was a dead duck. Whether he ruffed with the jack or low, West's ten of trumps was bound to score the setting trick.

Rural New York Community Appreciates Barn Renovation Efforts Of Author

By MICHAEL BONADIES
NEW YORK (WNS) — Do you dream of converting your attic, renovating your home, only to remain dreaming because of prohibitive labor costs? Or did you decide to do the job yourself, overcoming fear and inexperience, only to become hopelessly confused by a how-to book?

Renovating the dilapidated barn in her back yard, home to neighborhood rodents and birds, became a dream — a challenge — that 34-year-old Susan E. Meyer could not ignore.

The cost of professional labor was beyond her means, so she decided to renovate the barn herself. Learning as she hammered and sawed, she has recently published a how-to book on her experience.

Miss Meyer, accustomed to learning new skills as editor and author of nearly a dozen how-to books, was dismayed by her total lack of construction skills. She admits to tremendous apprehension about her ability to persevere in acquiring the needed skills.

She overcame her fears under the instruction of Floyd Green (the only builder in town who dared to take on a contract for the construction of a round house), and with the support of the community of Warwick, N.Y. (a rural town 50 miles west of New York City).

In collaboration with Floyd Green, Miss Meyer not only built her dream barn but also wrote "You Can Renovate Your Own Home" (Doubleday, $14.95). It is a book for the experienced as well as the novice, for the small job as well as the major renovation, co-authored by a woman who discovered that there was no task too difficult for her, or anyone else, to master.

Miss Meyer began by purchasing every renovation book in print. Not finding one she could trust completely, she settled for the best of each.

"I feel that my book is the best," she says, "because I stole the best from all the other renovating books. I didn't feel any of the other books were thorough throughout the entire project — some were better in some areas than others."

Taking the best from each, with Green's guidance, Miss Meyer and her friend Barbara Emmerth started small to test their patience.

"We began," Miss Meyer says, "with putting a window in an existing space. When we found we could do it, we felt we could do anything."

Green's expert instruction was invaluable but it was his emotional support that the women valued most. He shored up their courage with kind words. He told them not to worry because almost any mistake they might make could be covered up later. And not to worry because they had a tolerance of a quarter-inch — a margin of error that became reassuringly large as their skills improved.

"Floyd was always encouraging," says Miss Meyer. "He never once made us feel like incompetents. He was always there to console when we butchered something, ready to help with his good horse sense."

After four years of working on weekends and vacations, Miss Meyer's barn awaits the finishing touches. The work was accomplished in spurts. Periods of building inactivity found Miss Meyer preoccupied with article deadlines, editing a huge art book and starting a new magazine.

At 38, Miss Meyer has proven herself equal to the challenge of her once dilapidated barn and relishes her hard-earned skills and confidence. She says, "It's in the blood now. I'm ready for another project. But first, I want to live in the barn for awhile to see what I can improve on and do better next time."

New carpentry skills, publishing the book and defeating fear in addition to saving $15,000 in labor costs made for a successful project. Miss Meyer estimates that if she had paid herself a wage the labor cost would have been over $100,000. A small price, she says, for the self-reliance and the acceptance in Warwick which the renovation has brought her.

"The community," says Susan, "had a hell of a lot of respect for a woman trying such a project. I'm a real celebrity in Warwick for tackling such a job."

To her surprise she did not encounter one incident of anti-feminism in her dealings with the suppliers and workmen. If anything, she found the opposite. "It was easier, being a woman. Men take it for granted that a man knows what's what. Being a woman, I received more attention."

Miss Meyer's barn became a focal point of interest in Warwick as the renovation progressed and word spread.

The plumber's wife loved the barn so much and the fact that a woman was building it that she would bring her children to watch. The man who delivered her lumber, while admiring her undertaking, forbade his wife to visit, in the event she might get ideas.

Even now, Miss Meyer has to be careful when she's out in her yard not to end up spending all her time talking and giving tours of the barn.

"The greatest value of the project is that I've come to be part of the community," she says. Working side by side, getting to know people she would have never met under any other circumstances was the unexpected bonus.

No longer considered an outsider — a New York City sophisticate — Miss Meyer can proudly state "I've become one of the boys."

She neutralized the townspeople's reticence toward strangers by going to them for advice. Their knowledge and skills, which proved invaluable and wonderful to Susan, unfortunately are held in low esteem by themselves.

Miss Meyer foresees improvement in their self-image as the popularity of how-to books and articles continues to grow. The manual skills of survival possessed by many of the inhabitants of Warwick have taken on new importance.

"There's a great move in this country and throughout the world towards increased self-reliance," says Miss Meyer. "We're not learning from our parents the crafts, the trades, the necessary skills of survival as we used to — we're learning it from books so we won't feel helpless."

Miss Meyer vanquished that terrible helplessness she experienced when she first measured her decision to renovate against her available skills. She insists that everyone knows that the hands appearing in the photographs in her book are a woman's.

"I wanted to do the photographs with a woman's hands. I wanted to imply that anyone could do the work with the proper motivation."

Proposal Would Ban Surprise Press Searches

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some congressmen are welcoming the Carter administration's proposal to ban surprise searches of journalists not suspected of crimes. But they're also asking why that protection should not be expanded to cover everyone.

Attorney General Griffin B. Bell said Wednesday the administration will seek legislation prohibiting police from conducting an unannounced search of a newspaper office unless they suspect someone there of a crime.

The legislation would put the same restriction on searches aimed at anyone preparing information for release to the public — such as a scholar researching a book or a government employee collecting documents designed to expose wrongdoing.

Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., chairman of the Senate subcommittee on the Constitution, welcomed the administration announcement but questioned whether it went far enough. His subcommittee holds a hearing on the issue Tuesday.

"I look forward to the opportunity to question ... administration representatives more closely on the implications of confining these protections to the press," Bayh said.

Bayh introduced legislation in the last Congress to prohibit unannounced searches of the homes or offices of persons not suspected of a crime.

Several related bills also were introduced, but none got far enough along the legislative maze to come to a vote.

The legislation, like the Carter administration proposal, was prompted by a May 31 Supreme Court decision upholding an unannounced search conducted by police at the offices of the Stanford University student newspaper.

The court said police armed with a warrant did not have to give notice of such a search, even though they had no reason to believe anyone in the building was guilty of an offense.

Bayh said protection from the ruling is needed not only for the press, but to safeguard other confidential relationships such as those between a doctor and patient or a lawyer and client.

Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., a co-sponsor of the Bayh bill, called the administration proposal "a welcome sight" but added, "We need to protect all innocent citizens whose homes and offices are threatened by secret, unannounced police searches."

The administration proposal was worked out in cooperation with Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., who will become chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee next month. Kennedy said he considered the issue "a top priority" for the committee.

Kennedy's press aide, Tom Southwick, said the senator had not decided whether the legislation should be extended to cover persons not involved in disseminating news or other information.

Jack C. Landau, director of the Reporters Committee for Freedom of the Press, called the proposal encouraging but expressed "serious concern" that it would not "protect the average innocent citizen."

Bell said the proposal would still permit unannounced searches when there was "an imminent danger" of death or serious bodily injury.

Otherwise, a subpoena would have to be obtained seeking materials that police want from the premises of anybody not suspected of a crime. The subpoena could be challenged in court.

Bayh said he was especially pleased that the proposal would apply to state and local police as well as to federal authorities.

Bell said that to cover local and state authorities it was necessary to invoke the Constitution's commerce clause. But he said any newspaper or other publication could be considered part of interstate commerce.

Jonestown Defector Testifies Against Accused Cult Member

GEORGETOWN, Guyana (AP) — A witness at a preliminary hearing accused Jonestown cultist Larry Layton of wounding two defectors escaping with Rep. Leo Ryan, but the witness couldn't say who shot Ryan and four others who died with him.

The California Democrat and the others were shot to death Nov. 18 outside their plane at a jungle airstrip not far from the Rev. Jim Jones' Peoples Temple colony, where more than 900 died in a murder-suicide ritual shortly after the airstrip killings.

Dale Parks, 27, one of the Peoples Temple defectors who was in a second plane with Layton, testified Wednesday that when firing started on the airstrip, he saw Layton, a 32-year-old San Franciscan, pull out a pistol and start shooting.

Parks said he saw Layton wound defectors Monica Bagby and Vern Gosley and then point the gun at Parks himself, but it misfired, and Parks grabbed it.

Those aboard the smaller plane ran for the bush, Parks said, while gunfire continued at the larger plane at the other end of the runway. He said he did not see who was doing the shooting, but he said he saw a tractor and trailer with Peoples Temple security men aboard pull onto the airstrip just before the gunfire broke out.

Parks testified today under cross-examination Layton was a sick man, being treated for emotional distress.

He answered "yes sir" when Rex H. McKay, Layton's chief counsel asked: "Did you know that the accused was a very sick person at Jonestown?"

In brief answers to detailed questions, Parks acknowledged Layton had "gone to pieces" after the death of his mother at the jungle settlement about one month before the Ryan visit. He said he knew through his work at the colony's infirmary that Layton was taking an anti-depressant drug.

Parks answered in the affirmative when McKay asked "and these drugs were used to treat people with disturbed minds?" McKay has acknowledged he is considering an insanity defense for his client.

There has been no report that Layton shot any of the five who died. But under Guyanese law, if he is convicted of conspiracy in a murder case, he would be guilty of murder. In addition to Ryan, those killed were Parks' mother, Patricia, who was fleeing from the colony, and three U.S. newsmen who accompanied Ryan to investigate reports that some of the cultists were being kept in Jonestown against their will and were being mistreated.

The hearing is being held to determine whether there is enough evidence to bring Layton to trial.

Prosecutor Nandram Kissoon said during a break Wednesday that he would try to link Layton with Wesley Bridenbach, another cult member thought to have died at Jonestown. He said he would show that they posed as defectors members of the cult to get aboard Ryan's planes, shoot the pilots during the flight, cause the planes to crash and thus prevent the congressman, the newsmen and the defectors from reporting on Jonestown.

Informed sources said Kissoon would introduce a statement Layton gave police in which he accepted "full responsibility" for all the deaths and injuries at the airstrip.

"I had begged Bishop Jim Jones that I be allowed to bring down the plane carrying Ryan and the defectors back to Georgetown from the jungle colony some 150 miles northwest of the capital," the statement reportedly said.

It said Jones rejected the plan but Layton went ahead with it. However, he did not admit killing anyone, the sources said.

Jones died from a .38-caliber bullet fired into his brain at close range, government pathologist Leslie Mootoo told a coroner's inquest Wednesday. He said the wound was in an area usually hit by right-handed suicides, and Jones was right-handed. But he did not say the wound was self-inflicted.

In San Francisco, a U.S. federal grand jury's investigation into Ryan's death was delayed for two weeks so that lawyers for 16 Jonestown survivors who are witnesses at the investigation could study transcripts of their interrogation by FBI agents.

Fiedler Listed As Improved

BOSTON (AP) — Boston Pops conductor Arthur Fiedler was reported improved today at the hospital where he underwent brain surgery.

Fiedler, who will be 84 on Sunday, was moved from the intensive care unit to a private room at Tufts New England Medical Center.

"Dad was in good spirits today, and he was smiling," Fiedler's son, Peter, said Wednesday. Other visitors Wednesday were Fiedler's wife, Ellen, and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass.

Doctors said Fiedler suffered from normal pressure hydrocephalus, an accumulation of fluid in the brain. The condition slowed Fiedler's movements and impaired his walking. The surgery Monday involved inserting a tube to drain the fluid.

Dr. R. Michael Scott said Fiedler will not be allowed to sit up for several days. Doctors say it will be several more days before the success of the surgery can be determined.

Truck Driver Injured By Shot From Pickup

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A truck driver was struck by flying glass as a shot fired from a pickup truck shattered a cab window today in the latest incident of highway violence linked to a steel haulers' strike.

State police said Frederick Harvey, 25, of Reynoldsburg, Ohio, was hauling aluminum on Interstate 70 in Westmoreland County when the attack occurred. Harvey refused treatment, officials said.

In Erie County, a tractor trailer's radiator was punctured while it was parked at a truck stop along I-90, state police said. Meanwhile, Teamsters Local 800 in Pittsburgh scheduled a meeting today to urge idle drivers to ignore the four-week strike by the rival Fraternal Association of Steel Haulers.

"The meeting was scheduled by secretary-treasurer Charles Carelli to persuade owner-operators who are scared to go out to go back to work," said Diane Suss, a secretary for the local. She said Carelli expected about 500 people at the meeting.

FASH called the strike Nov. 11. Among its demands are the right to bargain for an estimated 30,000 independent owner-operators who haul steel, including 10,000 of whom now work under Teamsters contracts.

The Pittsburgh-based group also is seeking higher rates and unified road regulations.

While some non-FASH drivers apparently are staying off the roads in sympathy with the strike, others have said they are not running for fear of violence.

On Wednesday, state police in Pennsylvania reported four incidents of highway violence as steel industry attorneys attempted in Pittsburgh federal court to link attacks on truckers to the shutdown.

The $3 million industry suit seeks an end to the strike and daily fines of $300,000 against FASH.

State police Maj. Homer Redd testified that 260 "strike-related incidents" on Pennsylvania highways had been investigated between the beginning of the strike and Dec. 7.

Redd's testimony and three pin maps citing alleged strike-related highway violence were presented as evidence over the objections of FASH attorneys.

The steel companies are attempting to show FASH is violating a permanent injunction issued in 1971 following a similar shutdown. That order classified independent steel haulers as businessmen and said they had violated antitrust laws in the 1970 strike.

FASH leader William J. Hill claims the group has since become a labor organization and is no longer subject to the injunction. Hill says the independent drivers want freedom from Teamsters-negotiated contracts, higher rates and streamlined road rules.

Unions Oppose Change In Management

MIAMI (AP) — Unions representing most of National Airlines' employees say they would rather deal with the embattled firm's current management than risk job cuts or loss of seniority in any takeover.

"Right now, we're not that unhappy here," Bob Pech, spokesman for an eight-union coalition, said Wednesday in something less than a ringing endorsement of National's management.

"We know where we are. We're sound financially. We know what our contracts will be the next year or two. We know where we will be living."

The coalition of unions representing most of National's 8,500 employees said in a statement that, "due to the many uncertainties connected with any airline merger and/or acquisition ... it is the position of organized labor at National Airlines to oppose any merger or acquisition of National Airlines at this time."

Three airlines — Pan American World Airways, Texas International Airlines and Eastern Airlines — have been trying to gain control of or absorb National.

The Wednesday statement was signed by officials of unions representing pilots, flight engineers, flight attendants, communications workers, agents and clerical employees, mechanics, flight dispatchers and flight-simulator employees. About 90 percent of National's work force was represented by the people signing the statement.

Pech, president of the Air Line Pilots Association local that represents National's pilots, said the union leaders agreed on the common position during two recent meetings.

"As long as National stays in its same fiscal position and is a profitable, viable organization, we don't see any need to go any place or to anybody else to get what we have now," he said.

In the recent past, many National employees — and their unions — have complained that the carrier was unresponsive to workers' needs and paid lower wages than most competitors.

Just last week, National and its 1,325 flight attendants ended a 15-month stalemate by agreeing to a new contract. Sources said the pact finally brought the employees' salaries to industry-wide standards.

And after Pan Am made clear its takeover intentions last August, many employees told reporters they felt they could get a better deal from Pan Am's management than from National's.

Media Critic Seeks Divestiture

WASHINGTON (AP) — Media critic Ben Bagdikian called today for forced divestiture of some of the newspapers owned by large corporations, saying this could be done without infringing on the First Amendment's free press guarantee.

Bagdikian, in a speech at a Federal Trade Commission "media symposium," said: "Chains and conglomerates do not create. They acquire. Their contribution is not to betterment for the consumer in the way that traditional economic theory presumes in supply and demand, but the opposite."

"They deal with a commodity central to the survival of democracy and to preservation of the largest possible reservoir of information and ideas available to the public. Yet market strategies of large corporations are to limit these," Bagdikian said.

The American Newspaper Publishers Association, the trade group that represents most of America's daily newspapers, refused to participate in the FTC symposium, saying the program was slanted against the industry.

Bandits Assault Man Before Taking Wallet

A Lubbock janitor said he was confronted by three bandits at his house about 1:45 a.m. today and robbed of $70 after one of the men hit him in the stomach.

Billy Frank Miller Jr., 24, of 2304 Ave. U said the blow knocked him to the floor and one of the robbers took his wallet from his pants, then fled south on Avenue U on foot.

Police this morning were looking for three white men, ages 20, 21 and 23, in connection with the incident.

In one of two assaults reported to police this morning, Delia Montiel said she was knocked down at her Colgate Street apartment about 12:20 a.m. today by a man she had just refused to go out with.

She said the young Mexican-American man came to her door and asked her out. When she declined, the suspect became angry and forced his way into the residence, causing her to fall and hit her head, she said.

Reports show the woman ran from her apartment to a friend's residence where she called police. No arrests had been made by early today.

Police about 2 a.m. today were called to a nightclub parking lot in the 2400-block of Main Street where Jack Metz Reames said he had been assaulted by several men after he tried to break up another fight.

Reames, 19, a Texas Tech student, said he pulled one man off another and then was walking to his car when he was grabbed and kicked several times in the mouth. Reames came through the incident with only a split lip, according to reports.

Sheriff's deputies about 11:30 p.m. Wednesday arrested two men, ages 19 and 23, and an 18-year-old woman in connection with the reported break-in of Dale W. Johnson's home in Idalou.

Johnson said he and his family came home about 9 p.m. and discovered the burglary and several items taken. Further investigation, reports show, led deputies to the suspects' house where Johnson identified his property.

The suspects were being held this morning in the county jail.

Police also were investigating burglaries, one at the B&L Service Center at 2024 24th St.

Business manager Rick Delter Majors said the burglary occurred between 5:30 p.m. and 11:55 p.m. Wednesday. The loot reportedly included $932 in anti-freeze, an air compressor and strobe light.

Billy M. Wells of 3101 75th St. said his residence was broken into between 11 a.m. and 4 p.m. Wednesday and $2,890 in property stolen, including television sets, guns and a stereo system.

Christmas gifts and jewelry, totaling $1,000, were reported stolen in a burglary at Theresa Green's house at 506 N. Duram between 8 a.m. and 4 p.m. Wednesday.

Property crime complaints continued to mount Wednesday, with one construction worker telling police he lost about $1,000 worth of tools and materials to thieves.

Bob G. Neely, construction superintendent at a site at 19th Street and Frankford Avenue, said a $676 air compressor, $300 nail gun, an electric drill and 1,565 feet of wire were taken from that location between Dec. 4 and Wednesday.

L.L. Rose told officers Wednesday that a $350 rifle, $250 shotgun and a $125 .38-caliber pistol were missing from his 3814 54th St. residence.

Brad G. Gober said that $625 worth of furnishings, including a chest of drawers, sofa, chair, and refrigerator, were missing from a vacant rent house he owns at 2624-A Second Place.

Ollie Coleman of 3303 E. Bates St. said that a calculator, clock and food were missing from his home. He said the burglars entered the residence Wednesday morning by breaking a window in the dining room.

Isabel Castillo told police that car burglars Sunday made off with $310 worth of her property. She said a leather coat, camera and her purse were taken from her 1969 Oldsmobile while it was parked outside a club at 13th Street and Avenue F late Sunday.

Andrew Martinez said a $300 color television set was stolen from his 1514 32nd St. residence Wednesday morning. He said the burglars forced the back door of his home to get to the set.

Jerry Thomas Reynolds of 4700 45th St. told police that two motorcycle helmets, valued together at $180, were taken off his motorcycle while it was parked outside his home Tuesday night.

Jack B. Hart reported $60 in change was missing from the soft drink machine in the lobby of his apartment complex at 313 Ave. T. Hart told officers there was no sign of forced entry to the machine.

Russia's White Sea was named for the glistering ice that covers it most of the year.

Criminal Appeals Court Orders New Trial For Convicted Woman

AUSTIN (UPI) — The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals has ordered a new trial for a Potter County woman convicted in the shooting death of a man because the trial judge failed to give jurors the option of convicting her of criminally negligent homicide as well as manslaughter.

In 1976 Fred Drury was shot and killed by Del Moore after he drove his car into her neighbor's backyard.

The neighbor, Ray Purcell, said he ordered Drury to leave and brought a shotgun out of his house to make him depart. Purcell said he decided Drury was drunk, however, and told him he would not shoot.

Mrs. Moore then grabbed the weapon from Purcell. She testified she only meant to scare Drury but the gun discharged, killing him.

The jury found her guilty of manslaughter but the appeals court said since it could have been an accident, the jury should have been given the option of considering the lesser verdict of criminally negligent homicide.

The criminal appeals court also reject-

Deadline Set For Applicants

Today is the deadline for applications for the Precinct No. 5 justice of the peace position in Lubbock County.

D.J. Manis of Wolforth ran unopposed for the office this year, but resigned recently. He said the $354 per month salary set by county commissioners was inadequate.

The commissioners will meet at 9 a.m. Friday to consider any application. None had been received by Wednesday afternoon, County Judge Rod Shaw said.

Justice of the Peace Precinct 5 covers the same area as Commissioner Precinct No. 1 outside the Lubbock city limits or roughly the southwestern quarter of the county.

Applicants are required to be legal residents of the precinct, Shaw said.

ed Wednesday contentions by Jesse Villarreal of Corpus Christi that his deaf-mute girlfriend and her mother should have been allowed to testify against him and upheld his death sentence for murdering one of two women killed during a grocery robbery.

Villarreal was convicted of capital murder in the March 24, 1975, death of Norma Guevara, a clerk at Maverick Market in Corpus Christi. She and another employee, Dora Garcia, were found shot in the grocery storeroom.

Defense attorneys argued the deaf-mute who accompanied Villarreal to the store should not have been allowed to testify.

"Although Lucy Gonzales was able to testify during the trial only in simple terms and relied heavily on photographic exhibits, she was fully able to relate her experiences," the court ruled.

The court also said that Miss Gonzales was not an accomplice to the murders because she was inside the car and could not have heard the gunshots.

The criminal appeals court also rejected a three-year conviction against Ruben Gonzalez of Robstown, ruling the deputy constable he stabbed was performing his assigned duties during a disturbance at a dance hall.

Gonzalez claimed Juan Medina, a Nueces County constable, was arresting him unlawfully. But the court ruled that regardless of whether the arrest was unlawful, Medina was "in the lawful discharge of his duty."

—Struck down a 20-year sentence given John Luke Charles of Dallas for possession of cocaine. The court said the trial judge should have instructed the jury to consider the case against Charles circumstantial because the powder found in a plastic bag at his house was too minute a quantity for adequate testing.

Counties Permitted Ambulance Service

SAN ANGELO (AP) — County governments have authority to provide ambulance services even if a hospital district serves the area, Attorney General John Hill ruled Wednesday.

Hill's legal opinion went to Coke County Attorney Robert E. Owen.

Two hospital districts serve the county. Owen questioned whether the county had authority to levy taxes to provide medical care when the districts had "full responsibility" for indigent medical care under state law.

"The operation of an ambulance service by the hospital district did not preclude a similar undertaking by another political subdivision within the district or the cooperative effort inquired about," Hill said, referring to a previous opinion on the subject.

Drop In Japan's Trade Surplus Causes Slower Growth Of GNP

By TERRY A. ANDERSON
TOKYO (AP) — Another major Japanese economic goal for fiscal 1978 has gone down the drain, with the government admitting its target of 7 percent growth in the gross national product is impossible.

The economic planning agency's research chief, Yukinobu Iwata, told cabinet ministers Tuesday that Japan's GNP growth for the fiscal year ending next March will be 6 percent. At the same time, Japanese delegates at an international economic meeting in Bonn announced the 7 percent target can't be reached, receiving sharp criticism from some other countries' delegates.

Former Prime Minister Takeo Fukuda's government had stuck to the 7 percent goal for months after nearly all non-governmental experts had labelled it impossible.

However, newly installed Prime Minister Masayoshi Ohira admitted on taking office last week that 7 percent was unlikely, and Iwata's report was the first officially revised forecast.

The research chief said with growth rates of 4.1 percent on an annual basis for the first half of the fiscal year, Japan would have to have an annual growth rate of 14.3 percent in the second half of the year to come up with 7 percent. And that, he said, would be impossible.

While some European countries are unhappy about the failure of Japan to meet its goal, the United States — which originally badgered the Japanese into setting the target last January as a way to solve the trade imbalance problem — isn't too concerned.

American officials said that as long as exports from Japan are beginning to drop and imports are rising, giving some hope of correcting Japan's huge trade surplus, it doesn't matter whether the GNP grows at 4 percent or 10 percent.

Ironically, that decline in the trade surplus is one of the main reasons for the slower than expected GNP growth. Exports have always been a major factor in Japan's economic performance, and sagging exports mean slower growth.

What has some American and other officials concerned is the evident Japanese inability to forecast the country's economic performance. This is the third year in a row GNP growth has been sharply below target, and the Japanese government has been forced to revise trade balance figures at least four times in two years. Some of that was due to the sharp rise in the yen's value against the dollar, but as even some top Japanese officials admitted, much of it was just error.

"Also, Fukuda had been using the figures politically," said an official of one of Japan's largest banks. "He wanted to gain face at the (international) conference table, and he wanted to persuade the private sector that the economy will get better."

"Now nobody can believe any forecast the government makes," he said. "We hope Ohira will be better."

TOKYO (AP) — Japan's two largest automobile manufacturers have reported production declines in November. Nissan exports to the U.S., up 7.8 percent last year, down 31.2 percent this year.

Figures Show Economic Change

By JOHN CUNIFF
NEW YORK (AP) — Do you remember when Wall Street brokers made more than Wall Street lawyers?
 Rhetorically posed, the question sometimes is used to suggest the vast changes occurring in the securities industry, where regulators have been pressuring for change, and brokers' commissions have been cut.

Similar questions about other areas of human endeavor sometimes tell more about changes in personal, corporate or national lifestyles than volumes could do. These questions rely on numbers for documentation:

Do you remember when the prime lending rate was less than 2 percent? It was 31 years ago, in 1947, but that was before the big rise in personal, corporate and governmental debt. The prime now is 11.5.

When the federal government last reported a budget surplus? It was in fiscal 1969, when Washington took in $3.24 billion more than it spent. Since then it has spilled more than $300 billion of red on the record.

When the purchasing power of the dollar was double what it is now? That was in 1967, only 11 years ago. In the past four decades the dollar has declined to about one-fifth its former power.

 When unemployment, now around 5.8 percent of the civilian labor force, was under 4 percent? It fell that low in the 1960s, when for four straight years ending in 1969, it ranged from 3.5 to 3.8 percent.

Since then, it has never been below 4.9 percent, and has ranged as high as 8.5 percent, in 1975, despite federal budget deficits that were explained in part as being necessary to reduce joblessness.

When the median price of existing single-family homes, which rose beyond $50,000 this year, was less than half that amount? Just 10 years ago, says the National Association of Realtors, the figure was $20,100.

When automobile credit was only half what it is now? No further back than 1971. Car credit now is running more than $80 billion a year. Seven years ago it amounted to only $38.5 billion.

When the Northeast (New England and Middle Atlantic states), had greater personal income than the South (South Central, East South Central, West South Central states)? It was 1970.

The South has surged since then. In 1970, the Commerce Department reports, the Northeast produced $217.9 billion of income to $215.7 for the South. In 1976: the South $400.1 billion, the Northeast just $339 billion.

The length of time involved in such contrasts provides a clue to the intensity of change. If, for example, you dropped back to the turn of the century you would find some amazing contrasts.

When did the federal government, which now spends more than $2,000 a year for each person, spend only $7? The Tax Foundation says it was in 1902, and that as recently as 1940 it was just $77.

But very revealing figures are also provided by comparing just one year to the next.

In October, consumer installment credit was at an annual rate of $265.6 billion. In 1977, the comparable figure was just $225.6 billion, or $40 billion less. The increase is double the total of 1950.

What does it all mean? The question hardly needs to be asked. While some

Health Officials Seek Traces Of Disease

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Health officials, worried by the death of a Pittsburgh lawyer, are seeking traces of Legionnaires disease among 500 attorneys who attended a Virgin Islands conference last October.

Stephen Laffey died on Dec. 2 of the pneumonia-like disease. Another lawyer who attended the conference fell ill with pneumonia, which can be caused by Legionnaires disease, said Dr. William Parham of the state health department.

Former Partner Denies New Senator Liberal

By W. DALE NELSON
 WASHINGTON (AP) — Donald Stewart says his former law partner may have summed him up about right at a civic club "roast" honoring the new Alabama senator.

"I wouldn't describe my former junior partner as a flaming liberal," Robert Propst said. "He's more a fiery who shows his tail from time to time."

"That's probably true," Stewart said in an interview in his Senate office.

Stewart, 38, was elected Nov. 7 to the seat held for nearly a decade by Sen. James B. Allen, a leader of Senate conservatives, who died June 1.

His Republican opponent, millionaire James D. Martin, argued that Stewart's record in eight years in the state legislature showed him to be too liberal for Alabama voters, and dissident members of Stewart's own party formed an organization called "Conservative Democrats for Martin."

The national Republican Party put more than $230,000 into the campaign, calculating that Martin had at least an outside chance of victory in the traditionally Democratic state.

But Stewart won with 55 percent of the vote.

"Surely he's more liberal than James Allen, but he is not a guy who has a liberal formula to apply to everything," said H. Brandt Ayers, editor and publisher of the Anniston Star, which supported Stewart editorially.

Stewart was president of the University of Alabama student body when Gov. George Wallace was resisting integration of the state's schools.

"I did not agree with keeping students out and I worked with the administration and other student leaders to keep the situation in proper perspective," he recalled.

After his election to the state House of Representatives in 1970 and to the state Senate in 1974, he says he and Wallace agreed on many issues.

"I would say he's probably one of the best friends I've got today in the political world in Alabama," he said. "I write him and call him from time to time and get along well with him. We just disagreed back then."

In the Legislature, Stewart voted against increased interest rates on consumer loans and intervened twice in Alabama Public Service Commission hearings to oppose rate increases sought by the Alabama Power Co.

Unlike most candidates elected to the Senate in November, Stewart took office immediately, since Allen's widow, Marvon, had been appointed to serve only until the election. Stewart defeated Mrs. Allen in the state primary. He will be up for re-election in 1980, as there were only two years left on Allen's term.

He is seeking appointment to the Banking, Agriculture and Budget committees.

On the issue of the anticipated SALT agreement on nuclear arms limitation, Stewart expressed "a great deal of concern about what position we will be in when we get through. I just do not want us to negotiate away our strength." Regarding inflation, he said he favors a balanced federal budget and "cutting out unnecessary government regulation that adds to the cost of doing business and doesn't protect anybody."

Beauty Contest Organized

LONDON (UPI) — Fatties of the world have united in a Large is Lovely beauty contest.

The competition, organized by a British women's magazine, is meant to prove that large can be lovely, cuddly and beautiful, the flood of slimline advertising notwithstanding.

One of the contestants gathered in London voiced the optimism of the well-padded.

"Small men find it very attractive. I don't know if they regard it as a challenge, but I always find it's the shorter ones who want to dance with me."

"And it's true — you can have just as much fun," she said. "I've played the Fairy Queen three years running in our amateur dramatics panto. After all, who wants an insipid fairy?"

CB Convac

By INK DIPPER

"Social discipline outweighs social advantages," wrote Lord Wells-Pestell, of the British Home Office, in turning down a request by Englishmen that the CB services there should be allocated to 235 megacycles. He said it would conflict with other necessary services utilizing that part of the spectrum.

The freedom CBers enjoy in the United States is unusual. Sometime ago it was noted in this column that, except for Australia and Canada, many countries had already banned citizens band radio, or were seriously considering it.

In England, it is reliably reported, a black market in CB gear has sprung up. Units that sell in the United States and Canada for $50-$65 are worth four times as much. In Germany, according to the same source, hefty fines are now being imposed for any use of citizens band.

We put the CB question to representatives from a number of European countries. CB has been banned so that the spectrum be utilized for "more meaningful services," came the reply from the embassies of Germany, France, Belgium, the Netherlands, Denmark and Italy.

Fritz Donat, of the German Embassy, surmised in a recent interview that the restrictions in his country are the result of misuse, both currently and potentially. He pointed out that the vast variety of languages in a comparatively small land area make monitoring by local police virtually impossible, particularly if terrorists or gangsters wished to use the medium for illicit activities.

Japan, despite being the greatest national marketer of CB equipment, permits only low-range walkie-talkies, each of which must be licensed by the Post and Telecommunications Ministry.

By Japanese law possession of a CB is not unlawful. Transmitting is illegal, but receiving is not; therefore, an estimated 20,000 unauthorized operations take place daily.

In one prefecture in western Japan, police reportedly found a secret CB club with 995 members. The Ministry states that the biggest offenders of their rules are motorists and truckers.

Americans and Canadians are guaranteed broadcasting freedom by laws and regulatory agencies. No other country, in the knowledge of this column, has such freedom. However, flagrant misuse of CB can certainly bring about restrictions in the freedom CBers presently enjoy here.

If you feel a need to go beyond the present coverage granted CBers, take up amateur radio. You can have the fun, and do it within the law.

Japan's New Leader Backed By People

TOKYO (AP) — Japan's Liberal-Democratic Party led by new Prime Minister Masayoshi Ohira easily defeated opposition parties in an independent newspaper poll published today.

The random poll of 3,000 Japanese, conducted nationwide by the Asahi Shimbun after Ohira named his Cabinet, said 51 percent backed the NDP while 19 percent backed the major opposition, the Japan Socialist Party.

Fear Of Being Alone Turns Patient Suicidal

By MURRY OLDERMAN
SAN FRANCISCO (NEA)—Your son is in a mental institution for the first time, shut off from the world. Around him are people babbling, incoherent, disoriented. They are obviously off the main track.

Mark, for all his weird behavior, showed no physical signs of insanity.

It was all new to him, and he was afraid. Afraid they would put him under physical restraints, binding his legs and leather thongs, strapping him to a bed.

It was a "cuckoo's nest" — even Mark was aware of that. "I'm doing the Jack Nicholson bit," he said wryly to his parents on their first visit.

He accepted his confinement because there was real fright. He had no alternative.

But the parents wondered: Had he really done enough, had he really been so aberrational, to put into that kind of setting — which would traumatize anybody?

Mark was quite passive though, almost docile for the first time in months. In a few days, he was moved to a central ward with freedom of movement. He wandered outside and shot baskets.

His psychiatrist at the Walnut Creek Hospital, Fr. David Trachtenberg, said that institutionalization was not the solution for Mark's problems. He diagnosed him tentatively as a borderline schizophrenic.

Mark was released in two weeks to a halfway house in San Francisco, Westside Lodge, part of the community health program.

Except for the six weeks in two hospitals and summer camp when he was 10, Mark had never been away from home for an extended length of time. He was terrified by the prospect of cutting the umbilical cord to his family, and going to the halfway house meant a definite break from them.

By the time he arrived at Westside Lodge after a 45-minute drive, he was in a paranoid state. He threw himself on the floor and writhed, out of control. Froth accumulated on his lips. He groaned and cried. His eyes mirrored fright.

Mark was a voluntary patient, free to walk away any time. But he called home at odd hours of the morning and night, pleading to be taken from the lodge. He took headlong spills twice down a long, winding stairway in the old Victorian building. The second time was on the morning his parents planned to leave for a summer vacation.

The resident psychiatrist at Westside

Third In A Series

Lodge was visibly angry and canceled Mark from an overnight camping trip planned for his group.

In a meeting with the boy and his parents, he advised that all contact, phone or visit, should be cut off for a month. Absolutely. No communication at all.

The next day, Mark threw himself from a tall, second floor window at the lodge, head first. He suffered a brain concussion, both of his eyes were blackened by the impact, and his shoulder was severely bruised. He might have killed himself or suffered permanent injury if he hadn't landed on a patch of dirt.

He was rushed to the psychiatric unit at Pacific Medical Center. There he reverted to infantilism. He drooled and couldn't feed himself. He needed to be tucked into bed. Walking down the hall, he flung himself backward on the floor, landing on his head, cutting open his scalp and requiring stitches.

Yet when his parents returned 10 days later, unaware of his accident (no attempt had been made to contact them), Mark was virtually back to normal, responsive and alert — and ready for release. He was able to recall the details of his ordeal, though he was vague on his reasons for jumping.

The PMC clinic couldn't find another halfway house in the city that would accept him. Mark had a new label: to "violent" and "incooperative," add "suicidal."

The improvised "solution" was to send him to the adolescent ward at the Langley Porter Neuropsychiatric Clinic, a branch of the University of California medical center in San Francisco. He was given his third psychological testing in three months. He was also taken completely off medication.

For indoctrination, Mark was confined to his ward for two weeks, without any exercise facilities. All doors were locked from the inside. But his mood was generally good. The plan of treatment was to include a family therapy program, with his parents participating.

"Mark may be seen as characterologically antisocial," read the psychological report on him, "with an overlay of psychotic symptomatology and a possible organic deficit."

After Mark had been at Langley Porter three weeks — before therapy was started — a call to his home was placed by the resident psychiatrist, Dr. Jerome Hanowsky.

"I'm releasing Mark in half an hour," said the doctor.

Why? Mark had "acted out." He had been given penalty points for talking back to a staff aide, which meant he would be confined to the building for another week. In a pique, Mark pushed a laundry cart in the hall. It rolled into a nurse, hitting her in the hip. She was not hurt. But, said the doctor, Mark had to go.

"What would you do if we weren't at home to come and pick him up?" asked Mark's father.

"I'd still release him."

"Wasn't it dangerous to let Mark go that abruptly?"

"No."

"You mean that you would just let him out on the streets?"

"Yes."

"You would have no qualms about that? Maybe the risk of him going to jail?" his mother asked.

"Jail?" asked the doctor, startled.

"He could have gone to jail," said Mark's mother, "if he had gotten as angry as he got here and maybe thrown something at someone."

"That is a possibility," admitted the doctor. "However, I personally find no qualm about him going on the street if you were not available. I think he can take care of himself on the street."

Mark had $2 in his pocket at the time.

Authorities Ban Flights

SAN DIEGO (AP)—Port commissioners, faced with an order to cut airport noise pollution, have banned additional commercial air carriers from Lindbergh Field for one year.

In a 6-1 vote Tuesday, the Board of Port Commissioners imposed a moratorium on new airlines for Lindbergh through Dec. 1, 1979.

The vote followed a two-hour meeting at which representatives of Trans World Airlines and Braniff Airways sought permission to operate at the field.

The decision is expected to be challenged in court, authorities said.

Nine airlines currently serve San Diego, which is considered a rich market. Since Congress deregulated the airline industry, several others have received federal permission to operate here.

The San Diego Port District received two variances from state noise standards after hearings by the state Department of Transportation, which ordered California airports to cut jet engine noise.

A condition of the variances, Port Director Donald L. Nay said, was that "we prepare a plan on noise abatement."

A third variance request is scheduled for a hearing early next year, Nay said, and "we have to make an effort to show good faith." The moratorium at Lindbergh is evidence of good faith, he said.

The board's bar does not prevent airlines now operating at Lindbergh from increasing the number of flights they offer, he said.

Children Send Postcards To President, John Paul

By DIGBY A. SOLOMON
 ITANHAEU, Brazil (UPI) — Every morning at precisely eight o'clock, Ernest Swag finishes his morning cup of coffee, strolls five blocks from his home to the post office, and mails off a bundle of postcards from the children of Itanhaem to the leaders of the world.

On the cover of each card is a photo of a child dressed like Charlie Chaplin handing flowers to another child dressed as an Army general.

Next to the picture, in German, English, Spanish, French, Arabic, Russian, Japanese, Hindu and Chinese, is the plea "The Children Ask For Peace," along with a call for a ban on nuclear weapons.

So far Swag, a 53-year-old high school physical education teacher in the small (population 25,000) resort city of Itanhaem on the Sao Paulo sea coast, has mailed out 2,000 such cards, each signed by a local child under 14 years old.

The most favored leader so far is President Carter, who has been sent 1,000 cards. "The children like him because of his human rights policies," explains Swag.

Runner-up is Pope John Paul II, who has been sent 500.

"They're also sending them to Anwar Sadat (president of Egypt) and Menachem Begin (prime minister of Israel).

Jorge Videla (of Argentina) will also get one. So will Augusto Pinochet (of Chile), the Shah of Iran, Leonid Brezhnev (of the Soviet Union) and Hua Kuo-feng (of China)," he adds.

Still other children have sent cards to weapons manufacturers whose names Swag clipped out of the newspapers.

The postcard peace campaign was initiated last month by a 300-member ecological preservation society headed by the ubiquitous Swag, who also is an Itanhaem city councilman. The group wields the cumbersome name of "Society for Ecology, Scenery and Humanism."

"We give them the cards, the children pick whom they want to send them to, the fathers buy the stamps and I mail them out," Swag says.

The five-year-old ecology group wanders farther a field than other environmental protection societies in that it considers human rights and the fight against nuclear weapons all part of the struggle for a decent environment.

"We are ecologists and pacifists," Swag says. "We are against nuclear weapons."

And though the idea of heading off a nuclear holocaust through a postcard lobbying effort seems humorously naive, it is all in a day's work for a tough little group that recently sent off a hot letter of protest to the United Nations, demanding that august body ban all private beaches.

"We regard the right to beautiful scenery as a basic human right," Swag explains sternly.

This year, the group put its gospel into action by staging a series of 120-mile protest marches that gained it national publicity in its fight against a developer who dared to suggest converting 6 miles of seacoast into a private resort.

The ecological group won. Its latest campaign, the card appeal, was conceived by the group after the United Nations designated 1979 as the Year of the Child.

The group plans to mail a total of 3,000 cards from Itanhaem before Christmas, then print up new cards and distribute 7,000 of them, signed by children throughout Brazil, during 1979.

And already, Swag is thinking of what to do for an encore in 1980.

"Maybe we'll use a picture of Mahatma Ghandi this time," he muses.

Miss Hearst Comments On Ordeal

SAN RAFAEL, Calif. (AP) — Patricia Hearst, disavowing her actions as the revolutionary "Tania," says her radical alter ego was a product of the "disquieting vulnerability of the human mind."

"I feel no blame for events over which I had no control," Miss Hearst said in a three-page letter released this week.

Miss Hearst, convicted of joining her Symbionese Liberation Army abductors in a bank robbery, added that many of her "difficulties" stemmed "in large measure from a general public misunderstanding, not only of me, but of the limitations on human capacities to resist the will of kidnapers who have the power of life and death over their victim."

The letter is the heiress' first public comment on her 19-month ordeal in the terrorist underground since her 1976 trial. In interviews, she has skirted comment about her time as a fugitive.

The letter was released by National Opinion Poll magazine of San Rafael, which sought Miss Hearst's comment after polling subscribers about the campaign to convince President Carter to grant Miss Hearst clemency. The heiress is now serving a 7-year prison sentence and will be eligible for parole in July.

The poll's results will be disclosed Jan. 15 in the magazine's winter edition.

In the letter, dated Friday, Miss Hearst alluded to her long-standing contention that she was forced under threat of death to join her captors as fugitives.

As was the case at her trial, she rejected her April 1974 taped communique proclaiming herself a revolutionary who had taken the name "Tania."

The 24-year-old Miss Hearst wrote: "... 'Tania' (so-called) was not of my creation. In spite of the statements made by others who have not shared my experiences during the unfortunate period that I spent in the closet, and after, I am not responsible for her conduct."

Miss Hearst testified at her trial that she was forced to spend 10 weeks in a closet, usually blindfolded.

"It may be an embarrassment to some that I survived my ordeal," she wrote. "This is not a conclusion I reach with bitterness. Looking back, I am grateful to have survived at all, even at the cost of exposing to all the disquieting vulnerability of the human mind..."

"As with so many events of this nature, complete understanding develops as time separates us from the immediacy of the moment. I am confident that the momentum toward total understanding will continue. For the sake of my family who have suffered through this with me, I hope that day is not long in coming."

Keep Working, Retirees Urged

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new government study says "incentives may be needed to encourage older people to continue to work" if pension plans are to avoid being overburdened.

The Labor Department report issued Tuesday said the number of men retiring between the ages of 60 and 64 has increased over the last 20 years because of improved Social Security and retirement plans.

The report by economist Philip L. Rones warned: "As the proportion of the retired population increases relative to the labor force, pressures will continue to mount on the resources of the two major retirement systems: Social Security, already straining under a sharp rise in both benefits and eligible persons; and private pensions, which have been diminished by high rates of inflation."

Rones wrote: "Eventually, as the nation experiences a drop in the rate of labor force growth, more older workers may be required to remain in the labor force — easing the pressures on the nation's retirement resources."

According to the study, the percentage of men aged 60 to 64 who are still in the labor force has dropped from 83 percent in 1957 to 63 percent in 1977.

Shriver Considered To Head Conference

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sargent Shriver says he is being considered to head the White House Conference on Families but denies he has accepted the position. Administration sources say Shriver, Democratic vice presidential nominee in 1972, has been told the conference job is his if he wants it.

The conference is scheduled for 1981, following delays caused by internal controversies. Patsy Fleming, a black divorcee who served as its first director, quit earlier this year rather than accept appointment of a white, married, Catholic male as co-director.

Americans Held In Ecuador For Taking Artifacts

By JUAN O. TAMAYO
United Press International Writer
 Eight Americans were in an Ecuador prison this week because of bizarre — and perhaps false — charges they dug up $7.5 million in Indian gold artifacts and promised guns to the would-be killers of a presidential candidate.

The charges have U.S. Customs agents sniffing after a fortune in pre-Columbian gold artifacts that may have been smuggled into the United States to be auctioned off secretly to wealthy private collectors.

And Ecuador's military intelligence agents are investigating a charge that at least two of the eight Americans were involved in a plot to supply guns to Ecuadorians who wanted to kill presidential hopeful Jaime Roldos.

But official sources in Quito said Tuesday the Quito government has reported it found no evidence to support the weapons and gold smuggling charges, though the eight may be charged with illegal digging for artifacts.

Ecuadorian authorities have indicated they would free the eight Americans soon, the sources said, but it was unclear if they would have to return to face the illegal excavation charges.

Being held in a Quito military barracks are Clyde Nickelsen, 57, of Sanford, Fla., and his sons, Terry, 32, of Memphis, and Tom, 24, of Sanford, as well as Bill Scarbrough, 33, of Memphis, Susan Arpen, 21, of Jacksonville, Fla., Beverly Holcomb, 47, of Sanford, Charlotte Coebell 48, of Akron, Ohio, and Ned Mauldin, 27, of Memphis.

At home in Clarksdale, Miss., was a ninth member of the group, Richard Abbey, 29, who officials in Quito say was the key source for the charges about the gold and planned political assassination.

"I did not originate the charges," Abbey, a freelance writer who says he has the book rights to the story, said in a brief telephone interview Tuesday. "I was contacted by the Ecuadorian government and I had answers for their specific questions."

Sources close to the case reported Abbey has said he, Arpen, Holcomb, Coebell and Mauldin, joined the expedition after reading a newspaper ad for people interested in investing $2,000 each in exchange for a share of the profits.

Abbey said the ad was run by Beacon Research Service, a Tennessee firm owned by the Nickelsens and Scarbrough, who told the others Beacon had a permit to dig in southwestern Ecuador's Bahia de Caraquez area, the sources said. The sources quoted Abbey as saying the nine Americans left for Ecuador in three groups between Sept. 18 and Oct. 2 and by the time he got to the base camp Oct. 9, the others already had dug up hundreds of gold ceremonial masks, gloves, figurines and nose plugs Scarbrough estimated were worth $7.5 million.

But Abbey said the next night he overheard two Americans talking with an Ecuadorian about providing guns to people who wanted to kill Roldos, the sources said. Roldos received the most votes in the July 16 presidential election. A runoff is scheduled for sometime next year.

Abbey, realizing Beacon did not have a permit to dig, faked a back injury the next day, was taken back to the nearest town on a donkey-borne stretcher and flew home Oct. 12, the sources said. They said Abbey told the tale to the office of Sen. Thad Cochran, R-Miss., which passed it on to the State Department, which passed it to Ecuador's Embassy in Washington, which passed it on to its government, which ordered an army patrol into the Caraquez area. The patrol arrested the eight Americans Oct. 25.

If in fact the eight Americans did recover $7.5 million worth of pre-Columbian artifacts, they apparently have concealed them well, because the army patrol found no gold at the campsite.

Sources in the United States said the Customs investigation also failed to turn up any gold artifacts, though several pieces of pre-Columbian clay pottery were taken from the homes of Abbey, Scarbrough and Terry Nickelsen.

In Washington, Customs officials declined comment on the case.

Official sources in Quito also said the army patrol found only one pistol, though the sources said Abbey reported he saw several automatic rifles and shotguns.

But sources close to the case said Abbey was questioned in Memphis by an unidentified Ecuadorian navy admiral, who acknowledged several automatic weapons were confiscated from the Nickelsens when they tried to go through an Ecuadorian customs check last July.

Tax Protest Moving To England

LONDON (UPI) — California tax campaigner Howard Jarvis has called on Britons, among the world's highest taxpayers, to "get the elected officials and bureaucrats off their backs" and "get rid of the mirage of Socialism."

"The people must control the elected officials and bureaucrats and get them off their backs," Jarvis said at a news conference launching a "cut-the-taxes" campaign in Britain.

"To do that the people must be united and break the tyranny of elected officials and bureaucrats who rape the public. They must get rid of the mirage of Socialism," Jarvis insisted.

The 76-year-old author of California's Proposition 13 arrived Tuesday to give Britons advice on how to do it at the invitation — and expense — of two British organizations also devoted to tax slashing — the National Association for Freedom, a right wing group financed by privately owned industry, and the Chartered Union of Taxpayers — CUT for short.

"Remember, death and taxes may be inevitable, but being taxed to death is not inevitable," Jarvis thundered in a high decibel foghorn that rattled the mikes and shook a small group of British reporters recording his advice.

During his stay Jarvis will address industrialists' lunches and dinners, meet Conservative opposition leader Margaret Thatcher — no mean tax expert herself — and Horace Cutler, chairman of London's "parliament," the Greater London Council, visit parliament and submit to television, radio and press interviews.

What will he tell Mrs. Thatcher, one reporter asked.

"I haven't the slightest idea," he said. "I shan't tell her anything. I'll treat her like a lady and answer her questions."

Another reporter noted he will not see Prime Minister James Callaghan or other Labor government ministers and asked what advice he would have given them.

"I can't blame them if they have more important work to do than meet some jerk from California," he said. "But I'd have told them just what I said here."

One reporter asked how he would get his policies adopted in a country like Britain which has no system for petitioning the government.

Jarvis replied: "Can't the people of Britain ask Parliament to write a law permitting this? They should call up their Members of Parliament or whoever they are and say 'Hey, Joe, get this done if you want to get elected again.'"

"Our campaign," he said, "should encourage the people of Britain to get out of the 'I don't count for anything' attitude."

Someone asked how come he is flying home next week on Concorde, the most expensive way of crossing the Atlantic.

"I had two choices," he said, "either a rowboat or Concorde. My time is valuable. So I chose Concorde. It will help the company, which is losing money. Anyway, it's costing the taxpayer nothing."

Windmills Favored For Energy

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
United Press International Writer

The nation would become a land of windmills — producing energy without polluting — if young American adults could have their way.

An energy attitudes survey issued Wednesday says nice clean windmills head the list of energy producers most acceptable close to home.

The survey, funded by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, found 56.4 percent of those between 26 and 35 favor windmills over any other kind of energy producer within 25 miles of their homes.

After windmills, they would go for: 59.3 percent, safe and non-polluting large solar energy collectors; 33.8 percent, hydroelectric plants.

The least acceptable power producers close to the hearth: nuclear power plants, coalburning, coal gasification, oil shale processing.

When asked to consider trade-offs between energy development and risks to the environment, the young adults appeared to lean toward environmental protection.

Other practical aspects of their size-up of the energy situation:

- Ninety percent believe that as use of energy increases throughout the world there will be less for the United States.
- Eighty-one percent think wars probably will occur over energy supplies as world energy consumption goes up.

The survey was conducted in mid-1977 and involved 1,300 of the population born between 1941 and 1950. Participants were paid $5 for filling out a booklet full of questions. Each also was interviewed in his or her home.

The study was sponsored by the National Assessment of Educational Progress in Denver, Colo., an agency of the Education Commission of the States supported by the HEW's National Center for Education Statistics.

The young Americans, mostly part of the postwar baby boom, tend to be dunces when it comes to facts needed to make informed decisions on energy in this era of energy shortages.

However, they recognize that energy problems are serious and capable of cramping individual freedom, lifestyles and workstyles. The energy situation already has influenced many of them when buying cars and appliances, traveling to work and heating their homes.

The survey aimed to learn how well informed Americans are to meet the challenges of current energy problems and to make choices for the future.

Deficiencies include:

- Only 14 percent know the largest proportion of the nation's electrical energy is produced from coal; 30 percent mistakenly believe falling water is the principal electrical source; 16 percent know coal, as well as petroleum, can be converted into gasoline.
- Only 23 percent know heating water for use in the average American home consumes more energy than refrigerating, cooking, drying clothing or lighting the home.
- Their concerns include:
 - 70 percent believe importing foreign oil poses serious consequences for the social and economic well being of the nation.
 - 6 percent consider disposal of radioactive waste the most serious potential hazard associated with nuclear power.

Bright spots include:

- 87 percent know accelerating quickly to the appropriate speed wastes gasoline.
- 52 percent know keeping tires under-inflated for better traction wastes gasoline.
- 71 percent know a 40-watt fluorescent tube produces more light than a conventional 40-watt incandescent bulb for the same amount of electricity.
- Irony in the findings: although 95 percent know auto emissions add heavily to air pollution, more than half report they would hop in a car to go one-half mile or less.

Consultants asked to comment on the survey said they were troubled that the young adults did not have a grasp of deeper issues and concepts necessary for informed decisions.

Donald Duggan, chief of the Academic Programs Branch, Department of Energy, and Isabelle Weber, coordinator of the energy department, League of Women Voters Education Fund, agreed: — There is a need for "how to" information that can be quickly disseminated for the benefit of all age populations. — There is a need for energy information in existing school courses.

The assessment on energy knowledge and attitudes was administered by the Research Triangle Institute of Raleigh, N. C. It was scored by the Measurement Research Center, Iowa City, Iowa.

Carter Reveals Government Plan To Fight Fraud

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter has announced a government-wide campaign against fraud and a new program to save part of the $3 billion a year he said is spent on welfare paperwork at the state and local level.

The president, under attack from the liberal wing of his own Democratic Party for proposing cuts in federal social programs, insisted that fighting fraud and theft in government programs would benefit the needy.

"Efficient management is in itself an act of compassion, for it unlocks new resources to be used for human needs," he said in remarks prepared for delivery to several hundred state and local officials at an administration-sponsored "Conference on Fraud, Abuse and Error."

Carter denounced "the myth that is somehow more compassionate, more committed, to appropriate another billion dollars of the taxpayers' money than to streamline an existing program so that it delivers an extra billion dollar's worth of service."

The president announced that he will direct each administration agency and department to prepare "a plan for eliminating waste and fraud in its own activities, and will order them to designate a single official to oversee the preparation and implementation of that plan."

He described this as an expansion of the law, which he signed two months ago, setting up new inspector-general offices in 12 agencies and departments.

Carter said James McIntyre, director of the Office of Management and Budget, would oversee the expanded anti-fraud program as well as the new inspector-general system, which has not yet been put in place.

In a separate action, the president said he is asking McIntyre and Joseph A. Califano Jr., secretary of health, education and welfare, "to head a major effort to simplify and streamline the hundreds of complex eligibility requirements which contribute $3 billion each year to the cost of public assistance and other human services programs."

Carter said the $3 billion figure represents an administrative cost "over and above what actually goes to recipients."

He gave no estimate of how much could be saved through simplified paperwork.

"We will move to simplify these procedures where it really counts, at the state and local level," he said.

Carter said one state, which he did not identify, has a welfare system that "eats up 3 billion pieces of paper each year and a thousand different forms."

He said a woman in another state, whom he also did not identify, "had to spend 300 hours in one year filling out paperwork documenting her need" to get economic aid.

Stressing what has become a major presidential theme, Carter said, "This administration has declared war on waste and fraud in government programs."

He gave few details of the two new initiatives he announced. It was unclear, for example, how much authority and independence would be given to the persons selected to oversee anti-fraud efforts in those agencies that won't have an inspector-general with legally guaranteed independence.

And although Carter said the anti-fraud effort would extend "throughout the federal government," it was unclear whether he intended his directives to apply to independent regulatory agencies. He has avoided issuing orders to such agencies in the past to avoid confrontation with Congress.

Participants at the two-day conference at which Carter spoke were to learn how Califano's department loses billions of dollars a year to welfare cheats, loan defaulters and unscrupulous medical personnel, and to discuss what can be done about it.

"The overall purpose of the meeting is to find improved ways to detect and prevent fraud, abuse and waste in HEW-financed programs," the department said.

The speakers, including Attorney General Griffin B. Bell; Georgia Gov. George B. Busbee; Mayor Richard Hatcher of Gary, Ind.; and a host of local prosecutors and program administrators, will discuss how to catch people who bilk government aid programs, prosecute the offenders and clean up program management.

A major focus of the conference is the use of computers to spot problem areas and track down offenders.

Absent from the program's agenda is HEW Inspector General Thomas D. Morris, whose job Congress created two years ago to tackle the problems being discussed. An aide said Morris was intimately involved in planning the event and had delegated his deputies to discuss their special areas of interest.

Last April, Morris reported that HEW misspent between $6.3 billion and $7.4 billion — about 5 cents of each federal dollar doled out by the agency in fiscal 1977.

Califano characterized the estimate as rough and incomplete and said most of the money was lost through waste and mismanagement, not fraud. The figures also included more than $2 billion for such factors as high medical costs charged to the government because many hospitals maintain more beds than they need, or because some physicians perform unnecessary surgery.

The report touched off a storm of protest on Capitol Hill as several congressmen attempted to slash the budget by the estimated waste. Two months later, Califano wrote each member of Congress lowering the estimate by $868 million and imploring the lawmakers not to take a "meat ax" to the department's budget. "Such an indiscriminate approach shows a serious misunderstanding of the fraud, abuse and waste problem and the effective ways to deal with it," Califano said in warning that millions of elderly, sick and poor Americans could be hurt by it.

Figures Show Smoking Down

WASHINGTON (AP) — Per capita cigarette smoking this year will be the lowest in 20 years, according to Agriculture Department estimates.

A new report issued Tuesday by the department put 1978 per capita smoking at 3,965 cigarettes — fewer than 200 packs — compared to 4,651 in 1977. An earlier forecast in September was for 4,000 cigarettes smoked per capita this year.

The figures are arrived by dividing the estimated total number of cigarettes by the total adult population — all persons 18 years and older, smokers and non-smokers alike. The figures are for statistical comparison rather than actual estimates of how many cigarettes smokers actually puff.

But according to department records, this year's per capita rate is the lowest since it was 3,953 cigarettes in 1958. It rose to a peak of 4,345 cigarettes per capita in 1963.

More than 90 percent of the U.S. working population is now covered by Social Security, up from less than 60 percent in 1940.

Brown Eyes Retirement Reforms

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Secretary Harold Brown has recommended major long-range reforms in the $10 billion-a-year military retirement system to curb its cost while increasing the attractiveness of service careers.

Pentagon officials said Brown's complex recommendations, sent to President Carter this week, represent a compromise between the no-change preference of the armed service chiefs and proposals made by Carter's own special commission last April.

Carter will decide on the final package to be sent to Congress next year. The present military retirement system, unchanged for about 30 years, has come under heavy fire on Capitol Hill as outmoded and potentially a financial breakthrough.

But major projected savings from reform lie as far as 20 years in the future because, officials said, all of the nearly 2.1 million men and women now in service would be given the option of staying with the present system.

These officials stress that reform should get under way soon because of important factors other than costs, including a need to build an all-volunteer force by attracting more young people to military service.

A key feature, drawn from the presidential commission's plan, would provide new career incentives by giving active duty persons special cash payments after 10 years in uniform. These payments would be charged against their future pension rights and could be spent for a home or some other purpose.

Brown's recommendations focus on the traditional service benchmark of 20 years' minimum duty for retirement. However, he would limit the current pension rate, based on 50 percent of active pay, to 37.5 percent until the retiree reached 60. Then it would rise to the 50 percent mark, as now.

The service chiefs would rather keep the present system, which guarantees a pension equivalent to 50 percent of basic pay for life after 20 years of active duty.

This system has been criticized as needlessly expensive and on grounds it encourages military professionals to retire in their 40s, wasting many years of potential value to their services.

It is said to be ineffective in encouraging young servicemen and women to reenlist after their first terms and unfair to those who leave before the 20-year mark and, as things now stand, receive no pension credits.

Critics contend the present system will escalate in cost to about $37 billion a year by the end of this century, because full pension payments start immediately after retirement and continue for 20 or 30 years, sometimes longer.

Defense officials did not project specific dollar savings figures for Brown's proposals because of uncertainties in the future. But one of them said, "We will reduce the costs and spread the benefits."

A Pentagon manpower specialist said that "in real terms, I think we can save a couple of billion dollars a year way down the road."

This is a conservative estimate compared with that made by the presidential commission, headed by banker Charles Zwick, which predicted its "design for the future" would save $10 billion annually by the year 2000.

The Zwick Commission, in effect, proposed junking the 20-year retirement standard, and, like the Brown proposal, would allow a service person to start receiving money in lieu of pension rights after 10 years.

The Pentagon staff accepted the commission's key ideas, but made changes in the way they would be applied.

For example, the presidential commission would allow some retirees to start collecting full pensions at 55, or five years earlier than Brown's version.

Also, the commission would allow open-ended annual withdrawals from pension credits beyond the 10-year point of service.

Under Brown's proposal, such withdrawals would be restricted to assure that a serviceperson still had pension credits if he or she chose to retire after 20 years.

A typical enlisted person could draw up to $100,000 after 15 years, officials said. This would be based on a formula permitting withdrawal of the equivalent of one month's basic pay for each year of service up to ten years, and two months' pay for each of the next five years.

Federal Agents Investigating Underworld Link With Movie

BOSTON (AP) — Federal agents say they are checking possible underworld connections in the filming of "The Brink's Job," an investigation reportedly also involving the Teamsters union.

A union official in Boston, contacted late Wednesday, said he had nothing to say about a nationally televised report that federal agents were looking into the Teamsters' role in the movie production.

"I have no comment," said Arthur Zaniboni, business agent for Boston Local 205, "I just saw it on TV."

"There are investigations under way," said Gerald McDowell, head of the New England Organized Crime Task Force in Boston, after NBC News reported a federal grand jury was investigating possible payoffs to mob figures by the movie company.

McDowell said the investigations are in "the same general direction" as indicated by the NBC report. But he said, "I cannot confirm or deny the NBC report."

The head of the Boston Teamsters local, William McCarthy, an international vice president, was in Washington, Za-niboni said, and was not available for comment.

McDowell said he watched the first installment of a three-part NBC report quoting Boston police sources as saying producers of the film sought help from Ralph LaMatta, described by the sources as an underworld boss in Boston's North End.

Parts of the North End, an area that is the center of Boston's Italian community, were transformed to the 1950s era for the filming. The movie is based on the $2.4 million Brinks robbery here.

Shortly before filming ended last spring, armed men stole raw film from the company's Boston office and reportedly demanded $600,000 ransom. The film company said it had the original copy of the film, and said it rejected the demand. The holdup men were never found.

Pictures of the movie set, quietly taken by authorities, reportedly show two film crewmen with a man described as a LaMatta associate, Joseph "Joe Shoes" Cammaratta, NBC said.

"Police say the film company made payments to 'Joe Shoes' and a number of other reputed mobsters, to help persuade residents of the North End to cooperate with the movie people," the report said.

NBC quoted Cammaratta as saying he was hired as a bodyguard for actor Peter Falk, star of the movie. Asked how he got the job, Cammaratta was quoted as replying: "through friends."

The movie company was forced to hire nearly twice as many Teamster drivers as it needed, some Teamsters falsified work records, and many Teamster jobs were given by union officials to men with long criminal records, NBC said.

"Dino DeLaurentis, whose company made the movie, 'The Brink's Job,' says all the problems with the Teamsters added more than $1 million to the film cost," NBC said.

"The people who made 'The Brink's Job' say they did only what they had to do to get it done," the report concluded. "But this film is now part of a federal investigation to see if it takes payoffs to the mob and corrupt union officers to make a movie in this country."

New House Republicans Get Tips

By TOM RAUM
WASHINGTON (AP) — The class of new House Republicans was getting a few pointers from Minority Leader John Rhodes of Arizona on such essentials as where to sit in the House chamber.

"This is the Republican side and that over there is the Democratic side," Professor Rhodes instructed the freshmen at an orientation in the chamber.

Suddenly, several red-faced GOP members jumped from their seats on the Democratic side and scurried across the aisle to join their smirking colleagues.

With his flock in place, Rhodes went on to explain how the electronic voting machine worked.

Each member gets a plastic voting card to be inserted in a slot in devices positioned around the chamber, Rhodes said. Then, with the card in place, the member pushes one of three buttons to cast a "yes," "no" or "present" vote.

Tiny perforations on the card identify the member to the machine. The way he or she votes is instantly flashed to a large tote board on the front wall. Smaller display boards over side entrances give running tallies.

So why are there identical holes on the top and bottom of each card? "The average intelligence of the average member of Congress is such that it's best to have perforations in both places. That way, it can be inserted upside down," Rhodes observed.

Staff Seeks New Boss

The staff of defeated Rep. Newton I. Steers Jr., R-Md., has gotten a few nibbles but no bites yet on its offer to hire itself out as a unit for $228,000 a year.

In addition to placing an ad in a Capitol Hill newspaper, the staff in search of a new boss sent complete sets of resumes to each of the new 77 House members elected in November.

But none of the incoming members has expressed any interest in buying the staff as a set, lamented Will Grigg, Steers' top aide.

Grigg said that last week, when all the new members were in town, was probably their last chance. Staffers now have pretty much given up hopes of working together as a team and are busy looking for new jobs individually. "I'm grinding out letters myself," Grigg said.

Waste Cited

Rep. Paul Simon, D-Ill., claims the Army Corps of Engineers wastes about $7,000 in tax dollars each year by using telegrams instead of the Postal Service to notify members of Congress in their home districts of new projects.

But Corps official Locke Mouton says there's a reason: "We try to keep them informed in a timely fashion. If we used regular mail, they would get it 10 days later."

Shows Approval

Sometimes gestures and facial expressions convey more than words in congressional debates.

So it was when the usually loquacious Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., kept silent during a lively debate in the House Democratic Caucus on a rule affecting committee chairmen.

The proposal would have prohibited committee chairmen from also heading subcommittees of the same unit.

However, sponsors had agreed to exempt all current chairmen who fit into that category — so on the surface it appeared to affect no one now in Congress.

Still, Dingell used both hands to urge colleagues to their feet to vote against the plan when the "no" votes were being counted — and a huge grin replaced the concerned expression on his face when he saw the proposal had been defeated.

Although Dingell doesn't chair a full committee at present, he's in line to become chairman of the House Commerce Committee upon the expected retirement in two years of the current chairman, Rep. Harley M. Staggers, D-W.Va.

But Dingell also wants to continue to chair the energy subcommittee — which handles most major pieces of energy legislation, an area in which he has a keen interest.

Some younger members of the Commerce Committee, who have clashed with the outspoken Dingell on several occasions, were reportedly behind the proposed rules change. And it had even been dubbed the "get Dingell" plan in some quarters.

Jobless Man Returns Wallet

SANTA ANA, Calif. (UPI) — Diogenes come back.

An unemployed man found a wallet containing $5,000 in cash, walked two miles to police headquarters to turn it in, and left without saying how he could be contacted again for a reward or to collect the money, if no owner is found.

Officer Geraldo Maata said a man appeared at the station Sunday, said his name was Dwayne Morgan, and handed over the wallet with the cash in it. He found it on a bench in Madison Park, the man said, while he was looking for a job.

"It says a lot about the guy, that he did a very honest thing," Maata said. "It's nice to know there are people still like that."

"We're trying to locate the owner, but he appears to be a foreign citizen."

Under California law, Morgan is legally entitled to the money if no rightful owner appears. However, he slipped out of the police station without leaving an address or telephone number, officers said.

Industry Attempts To Block Cotton Reserve

By SONJA HILLGREN
WASHINGTON (UPI) — The powerful cotton industry has attempted to block a proposal under study at the Agriculture Department to establish a cotton reserve similar to the three-year, farmer-owned reserves for grains.

Officials say they were directed a few months ago to study implementing reserves for both cotton and soybeans. The directive came from the department's chief economist Howard Hjort.

They particularly remembered that during the 1976 presidential campaign, candidate Jimmy Carter said he was opposed to a cotton reserve.

Producers expressed concern that any time an excess of stocks exists, it hangs over the market and depresses prices. They said idling cotton acreage under the set-aside was a sufficient tool to keep supplies in line with demand.

Immediately, only to look at establishing a reserve in the future in case cotton stocks grew so large that prices fell.

Not as much work has been done on a soybean reserve as a cotton reserve, Cunningham said. He said two men were doing preliminary work on the cotton issue and only one on the soybean question.

THE WHITE HOUSE Reporter Clocks Carter

By FRANK CORMIER
WASHINGTON (AP) — When President Carter is in a receiving line, he shakes hands at the rate of 20 a minute, or one every three seconds.

A reporter clocked Carter at that pace during last week's Democratic midterm conference in Memphis.

The president presumably would have pumped hands with even greater celerity but for the fact that Vice President Walter F. Mondale was in the receiving line with him.

Mondale is more prone than Carter to exchanging chitchat with those he greets, which slows the pace.

Carter's handshaking rate sometimes exceeds 20 a minute when he approaches stationary crowds penned behind barricades. On those occasions, he employs a hand-over-hand technique. Thus he can grab one welcome with his left hand even as he reaches with his right hand toward the next person along the barricade.

If it weren't for his occasional halts to pick up infants proffered by proud parents, he could easily shake 40 hands a minute in such settings.

Question Comes Up

The phalanx of top White House and administration officials who went to Memphis were told in advance they would be expected to pay for their own transportation.

Hugh A. Carter, Jr., the president's cousin and special assistant for administration, was asked by a reporter if this edict applied to Jimmy Carter, who flew to Tennessee on Air Force One.

The question had not come up, Hugh Carter reported. But he quickly added that if the president is not billed personally, his share of the cost of the Air Force One flight will be paid by the Democratic National Committee.

Hugh Carter said the same would go for Vice President Walter F. Mondale, another Memphis visitor.

Unique Problems

Decorating the White House with Christmas greenery poses problems that, happily, do not confront the average householder.

After a shipment of Christmas trees and evergreen boughs was delivered to the White House a few days ago, workers laid out the greenery in a long row on the front lawn.

Then along came a uniformed policeman, leading a bomb-sniffing dog who nosed among the evergreens and found them suitable for presidential use.

Eschew Tithes

Carter does not tithes as a member of Washington's First Baptist Church, although contributions of all kinds approximated 10 percent of his joint income with wife Rosalynn on the federal tax return they filed earlier this year.

Nothing is encouraged in many Baptist congregations, but the Carters are not alone in eschewing the practice.

On a recent Sunday, a bulletin for churchgoers showed that 75 out of 401 members of the First Baptist Church "have covenanted to tithe during 1979."

New Approach

You may remember that when Carter hosted his first breakfast for White House reporters last month, he proposed starting a question-and-answer session immediately. He changed his mind only after press secretary Jody Powell suggested he wait until his guests had a chance to eat their scrambled eggs.

Carter held another such breakfast last week and came up with a new approach: he did not take his seat in the State Dining Room until the food had been consumed.

Concorde Flight Draws Crowds

By The Associated Press
Oklahomans by the thousands flocked to airports in Oklahoma City and Tulsa Tuesday to witness landings of the supersonic transport Concorde.

In Oklahoma City, motorists lined the main road into Will Rogers World Airport and other nearby streets and more than 8,000 jammed into the observation tower and pressed against airport windows to view the aircraft that travels twice the speed of sound.

After a two-hour afternoon stopover in Oklahoma City, the plane was flown to Tulsa, where one police official estimated the crowd at 10,000.

Department official Charles Cunningham said, "Frankly, I haven't found anybody who supports it."

Cunningham said the study was never intended to implement a cotton reserve they last weekend that a cotton reserve would not be established.

"Our industry hopes it's dead," said Macon Edwards of the National Cotton Council. "I don't know anybody in cotton who favors it."

Cunningham said the proposal has been placed on the back burner, but work on proposals might be completed in the next few months and public comments sought next spring.

Stewart Smith, another department official, mentioned the soybean reserve

U.S. Has Big Stake In Iran

NEW YORK (UPI) — American business has a multi-billion dollar stake in Iran, much of which could depend on the future of the Shah.

The stake, however, is in exports of American arms, industrial and consumer goods and in lucrative management and service contracts, rather than direct investments.

U.S. direct investment in Iran grew spectacularly last year to $217 million, but that still is modest compared to American exports to Iran. Exports totaled $3.094 billion in the first 10 months this year, 50 percent higher than last year, the Department of Commerce says.

The direct investments are modest in proportion to the size of the exports because Iranian law allows only 25 percent foreign ownership of Iranian companies, and most American companies don't consider that an attractive proposition.

Direct investments can be attractive because they can lead to big exports for the home company and to lucrative contracts to manage and service goods sold there.

It is the export trade and managerial and technological services, many of these services in military hardware and military installations, that keep 41,000 Americans living and working in Iran, half of them in Tehran, the capital.

There are 8,000 Americans working in the ancient royal capital of Isfahan where troops fired on demonstrators earlier. These Americans provide various kinds of expertise, military and civilian, to new enterprises in an ancient city famous for its architecture, its superb glazed pottery and tiles, rug weaving and its rose gardens.

The huge U.S. imports — in the past six years Iran has ordered $19 billion worth of American military supplies — and the army of American advisers and technicians encourage the Shah's opponents to call him a tool of American corporations.

In fact, American companies have provided only about half the $36 billion in military purchases the Iranians have made in the past 26 years. Britain and Holland have supplied much of the rest.

Moreover, of the $19 billion worth of U.S. weaponry Iran has ordered in recent years, about $11 billion, mainly aircraft contracts, now may be in jeopardy because the Shah's government has been cutting back or deferring the programs.

The American companies whose Iranian contracts or prospective contracts face an uncertain future include the Bell Helicopter division of Textron, Boeing Co., Grumman Corp., General Dynamics, Combustion Engineering, Babcock & Wilcox Co., General Electric and Westinghouse Electric.

Bell stopped work on a $575 million helicopter co-production program with Iran because Iran missed an advance payment in October. General Electric and the other firms in nuclear engineering have been negotiating for Iranian contracts, which now could be long deferred.

Japan, West Germany, Britain and other suppliers of goods and services to Iran are facing the same uncertainty.

Hundreds of foreign companies, many of them American, opened offices in Iran when the empire's economy took off like a jet five years ago and began registering gains of 25 percent annually.

The foreign firms all were eager to cut themselves a piece of the pie, either by landing export orders or selling their technological, administrative or educational expertise.

But the unrest in Iran this year, coupled with inflation, may result in a gain of only 3 percent in the empire's gross national product in real terms this year, some observers say.

In addition to postponing big foreign orders, the Iranian government appears to have deferred or cut back domestic industrial expansion programs by perhaps $10 billion.

Crane's Campaign War Chest Surpasses $600,000

By CLAY F. RICHARDS
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. Phil Crane, the first announced Republican presidential candidate for 1980, has raised almost three times the amount of money Jimmy Carter did during the comparable period of his 1976 campaign.

Crane told a news conference this week he has raised $647,137 since announcing for president 4½ months ago. Four years ago at this time, Carter had raised $225,503.

The Illinois conservative acknowledged he is still not exactly a household name, just as Carter was virtually unknown at this stage of his campaign. But Crane said the ability to raise money is an important barometer of success.

Crane, holding a news conference on the fourth anniversary of Carter's 1975 declaration of candidacy, said he has received contributions from 26,515 individuals in all 50 states since announcing his candidacy.

Crane said he did not know how much of the money raised has gone to pay conservative direct mail fund-raiser Richard Viguerie, but acknowledged the figure was probably substantial.

Viguerie raised more than $6 million for the re-election campaign of Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., this year, but nearly half of the total was spent raising the money.

Crane said his early start gives him a big advantage in what promises to be a crowded GOP field — especially in New Hampshire, which holds the first primary, and in Iowa, where the first precinct caucuses are held.

"In New Hampshire, there is no substitute for time, and I have that advantage," he said. He noted he is close friends with Sen.-elect Gordon Humphrey, R-N.H., and while receiving no promise of support, "I have the support of some of the key people in the Humphrey campaign."

He said he has lined up key support in Iowa, but the outcome there depends on whether popular Republican Gov. Robert Ray runs as a favorite son, as many expect.

"When you're talking about several early primaries, you have to win some and run well in all of them to prove you're a viable candidate and to be able to continue to raise the money you need," Crane said.

He said if his early campaign contributions were eligible, he has met the requirement for federal matching campaign funds in 16 of the 29 required states.

To be eligible for federal funds, a candidate must raise $5,000 in contributions of $250 or less in 20 states — but he cannot start raising that money until 1979.

Crane said he hopes he can raise enough so he will not have to accept federal matching funds.

Crane's only declared opponents so far are Benjamin Fernandez, a Republican National Committee official and the first Hispanic to seek a major party nomination for president, and perennial candidate Harold Stassen.

FBI Agent Seeks Data For Trial

WASHINGTON (AP) — A former FBI official has complained that the government failed to furnish documents he needs for his trial on charges that he trampled the civil rights of Americans while searching for radical bombers.

Former assistant director Edward S. Miller had asked for all documents in the possession of the FBI, CIA and the National Security Agency, among others, "which show that members of the Weatherman Underground Organization had connection with foreign countries."

Miller, scheduled to be tried next month along with former Acting FBI Director L. Patrick Gray III and former Associate Director W. Mark Felt, said he had received some documents.

Italian Director Prisoner Of Film

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN

EUR, Italy (AP) — Sergio Leone, the king of the spaghetti westerns, would do anything, pay anything, give anything if only James Cagney would come out of hiding and stage a prison break.

The prisoner to be freed is Leone himself. His captor is "Once Upon a Time in America," a film idea that the Italian director admits, almost in tears, "has kept me a prisoner for eight years."

The script, now boiled down from five to three hours, uses the film techniques of the 1930s to tell the story of an American generation from 1920 to 1968, the height of the Vietnam War. It is set in New York, and in Leone's mind only James Cagney can play the aged hero.

Luring Cagney from retirement in Martha's Vineyard or his cattle ranch in Pawling, N.Y., or wherever he hangs his shoes and prop submachine gun these days has become an obsession with Leone.

"To me, Cagney is the films of the '30s," Leone puffs dreamily on his third cigar of the day in his cluttered villa on the outskirts of Rome. "I have turned the earth over to try and get him. He has told friends that if he would do it for anyone, he would do it for me, but not even his mother could coax him out of retirement. Like Garbo, he wants to preserve the image of himself as he was in his best days. He has become a recluse."

And so for that matter has Leone. Although he has produced a couple of movies to which he will not lend his name, he has not been behind a camera or shot any film as a director in more than seven years.

Rotund and bearded, he sits in his gilt throne chair like Orson Welles playing the Emperor Nero and talks compulsively about the film that holds him in thrall.

"The film traces the lives of four boys and three girls from age 14 to 60, but one of the stars is time itself. Time that changes everything. It is a mixture of fable and realism, a pretext to go back into time like Proust in search of a lost America. But I must have Cagney."

Leone admits that he is "bored to death with being a producer." The only reason he keeps RAFRAN, his production company, going, "is so I can stay solvent and get behind a camera again to start shooting 'Once Upon a Time in America.'"

In Italy, he moans, "it is impossible to become the real producer that existed once upon a time in America: the one who starts with a good idea, has a script written by good writers, calls in a leading director, casts the best actors and actresses and in the end takes full responsibility for better or for worse. In Italy, at the smallest level, every director is really the author, he has to invent everything for himself. So as a producer, either I impose my will on the director and we have a catastrophe or I withdraw into myself and leave the director to his idiotic devices. That is why in the last two films I produced, I used the name RAFRAN and not Sergio Leone."

This is not the first time that he has not used his own name on a film. After he shot his first couple of spaghetti westerns in Spain and made a star of Clint Eastwood, Leone went to America to make a film in Monument Valley, the favorite location of his idol, director John Ford.

The film, "For a Fistful of Dollars," was a success in America, but to Leone's chagrin "Italian distributors did not want to import a western with Italian names on the credits. We all had to change our names. I became Bob Robertson, paying secret homage to my father, Roberto Roberti, who was a famous silent film director."

All the Italian actors, cameramen and technical staff also took American names. Then in one of those plot turn-arounds that might come out of a studio writers conference, an earlier Leone film, "For a Few Dollars" hit big in Italy and spaghetti westerns were all the rage.

"When we came to doing a western series for American TV," Leone recalls with pleasure, "we took all the American names and Italianized them for the Italian market. The whole situation was reversed."

Round as meatball, zesty as pasta arrabbiata, bubbling over with chewy conversation al dente, Leone looks like the ideal director of a spaghetti western. "But soup, not spaghetti, is my weakness," he confesses, "especially pasta fasulla, what you call lentil soup."

In what may have been another moment of weakness, or perhaps sudden-found strength to conquer his obsession, the imprisoned director announced he would begin shooting "Once Upon a Time in America" by the end of January "with or without Cagney. I must get on with it."

Then he lit another cigar, settled back in the gilt throne with an enormous sigh and recalled having seen a documentary called "Brother, Can You Spare a Dime."

It was a montage alternating newsreel pictures of Franklin D. Roosevelt's speeches with scenes from old James Cagney gangster pictures.

"Delizioso," murmured Leone, "delizioso."

The phone rang, but it was more like the bell clanging the convicts back into their cells in "White Heat."

Corporation Claims Record Plane Flight

LONG BEACH, Calif. (UPI) — The McDonnell Douglas Corp. has claimed a record for its DC-10, a nonstop flight from Long Beach to Belgrade, Yugoslavia in 11 hours, 20 minutes.

A long range model of the jumbo jet, delivered Monday to Capt. Slobodan Tanaskovic, chief pilot of JAT, the Yugoslav state airline, covered the 7,231 miles at an average speed of 638 mph, the aircraft makers said.

The flight will be submitted to the international aviation body in Paris which certifies records as the swiftest flight between the two cities, McDonnell Douglas said.

No previous record was given.

For Texture, Flavor That Can't Be Matched By "Quickies," Try Comet Long Grain Rice

Betty L. Torre, author of Rice and The Complete Beginner's Guide to Everyday Cooking.

Why switch to Comet? Quality since 1901 guarantees the best possible old-fashioned goodness and flavor. Comet Long Grain Rice prepared in the traditional way has a distinctive taste which "instant" or "quickie" rice products just don't have. Surprisingly it doesn't take that much more effort to make good rice every time so why not, and save about 50% per serving over "instant" or "quickie" rices. A rice-tomato stuffing turns baked fish into a very simple, very special dinner. Serve with a celery and olive salad and Napoleons for dessert.

Baked Fish with Rice-Tomato Stuffing

- INGREDIENTS
- 1 3-pound haddock or any firm bodied baking fish, cleaned
 - 1 small onion, minced
 - 1 1/2 teaspoons salt
 - 1/4 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
 - 1 1/2 cups cooked Comet Long Grain Rice
 - 2 cups canned tomatoes, undrained
 - 1/2 teaspoon curry powder
 - Strips of salt pork

DIRECTIONS

After cleaning fish (remove head if desired), rub both outside and inside with salt. Slit almost the whole length of fish. Fill with stuffing. Mix together cooked rice, tomatoes, onion, salt, pepper and curry powder. Stuff fish and lay in a greased baking dish. Fasten fish together with small skewers.

Gash fish crosswise on top and insert salt pork. Bake for 45 minutes or until fish flakes easily in a 400° F. oven.

Thanksgiving Comes Late

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Thanksgiving finally arrived for students at the Lincoln Elementary School who were shocked and disappointed when they were served hot dogs for the real Turkey Day last month.

Springfield school lunch director Paul Rammenberg — recipient of a protest letter from irate second-graders — donned a pilgrim's hat this week and produced a big turkey dinner for the entire school.

Students dressed in Pilgrim outfits lined up at a long table in the school corridor and, served by Rammenberg, school lunch aides and teachers, they praised the turkey and passed the pumpkin tarts. The scene was not as blissful three weeks earlier for the second-graders, who had studied early colonial culture and history for weeks to prepare for the big day. But the only turkey they got that Tuesday was ground up in their hot dogs.

"Did the Pilgrims have hot dogs at the first Thanksgiving?" asked Christopher Bozyk.

After that November lunch, 7-year-old Sandra Marrero grabbed a copy of "The Pilgrim's Party," a book the class had used to study the first Thanksgiving, and checked for references to hot dogs.

She found none, so the 25 students in her class got together with their teacher and wrote to Rammenberg.

Soldiers Told To Quit Wearing Unauthorized Berets, Headgear

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army's chief of staff has told grumbling soldiers his order is final: Everyone wearing unauthorized berets or other attention-getting headgear must take them off by Jan. 1.

In a somewhat unusual action, Gen. Bernard Rogers several days ago sent out a message stressing he meant what he said last August in ordering a halt to "a seemingly ever-increasing number of unauthorized items ... being worn by Army personnel."

The August order had been greeted by strong objections from unit leaders and others who claimed special hats or other unique uniform decorations are valuable in boosting morale and unit pride, which the unit commanders consider important in building a volunteer force.

Army officials stress that the Special Forces still will be allowed to wear their green berets and the Rangers their black berets because these have been officially blessed as regulation for such small, unique organizations.

But these officials said Rogers was taking aim at the red berets adopted by the paratroopers and black berets by tank troops, as well as cowboy-type hats and even spurs affected by some armored cavalry units.

"I recognize that morale and unit esprit are sometimes enhanced by the wearing of distinctive items," Rogers acknowledged in his August order.

"However, this benefit comes at the expense of benefits which might accrue from Army-wide uniformity."

Furthermore, the Army chief said, the practice of dressing in "non-standard" uniform equipment is a financial burden to many soldiers who feel obligated to buy them.

But the objections from the field made an impression, and Rogers discussed the matter at a conference of senior Army commanders in October.

Then, on Dec. 8, Rogers sent another message to the field "to reaffirm that the policy announced (in August) will become operative on 1 Jan. 1979."

Meanwhile, the Army is moving toward adoption of a new lightweight plastic combat helmet.

The new helmet, resembling those worn by German soldiers in World War II, covers more of the ears than the round, steel pot used by American fighting men since about 1942.

SEC Eyes Stock Repurchasing

By PHILIP GREER
And MYRON KANDEL

Wall Street's troubles may have turned off a lot of investors, but for at least one group it's created a bumper buying season. Listed corporations — which sold the stock in the first place — are stepping up the repurchase of their own shares, often because they think they're just plain cheap.

The increase in repurchase programs has caught the eye of some regulators, who say that although it isn't anything to be concerned about just yet, it bears watching. The Securities and Exchange Commission, always leery of corporations in the market, has often expressed concern about "going private" — buying up all the shares held by outsiders and leaving the public market. The commission proposed new rules more than two years ago and nothing has happened since. The recent pickup in corporate buying, we're told, is likely to bring the proposals back to the front burners.

Many corporations are always in the market for their own stock. The shares are used for executive stock-option plans, they're sold to other employees, and they can be stored as a sort of bankroll for possible acquisitions.

Most of them fall for short of going private, although some of them own big chunks of their own stock. Teledyne, Inc., for instance, which has spent more than $1 billion buying shares in other companies — and which has been battling the SEC on the disclosures it has to make — hasn't been a piker when it comes to its own shares. Mostly through tender offers to its stockholders, Teledyne has bought in almost 60 percent of its 32.3 million shares.

(Re-acquired shares are put into a company's treasury. They can't be voted and they don't receive any dividends, but they can be taken out and sold. They aren't actually eliminated because of problems with the tax laws, but for practical purposes, they cease to exist.)

The pickup in buying stems from the market's low levels. Price-earnings ratios — the relationship of a stock's price to its profits per-share — are extremely low, reflecting the general disenchantment with owning stocks. A lot of companies have found that buying their own shares is the best use they can find for their cash.

Saul Steinberg, chairman of Reliance Group, Inc., is a case in point. Last summer, Reliance got a pile of money — $190 million — it never expected to see, through the exercise of warrants to buy its stock, which the experts said would never happen. Together with the cash already on hand, Reliance ended up with more than $500 million.

"We didn't expect the money and we had no plans for it," Steinberg told us. "But we're in a financial business and we did a lot of analyzing and decided that the best return we could make on our money was to buy our own stock. The stock is selling at about four times earnings and we make about 30 percent or more on our capital."

Reliance went into the market and bought up more than 4.7 million shares of its stock — in effect buying back much of the stock it had to sell because of the warrants. The company also bought in $45 million in bonds.

At the Dreyfus Corp., chairman Howard Stein said the mutual fund management company had tried to use its money to expand into other businesses, like building, but found out it couldn't make it. "We're a little limited in what we can do with the money," Stein said. "If we buy stocks for the corporation and we're lucky, everybody want to know why we didn't buy them for the funds. So we decided that the best thing to do was to buy our own stock." Dreyfus has bought in almost half a million shares — 22.7 percent.

The whole area of company buying is somewhat vague. The SEC isn't even sure of its own authority in the field, but it has set up some guidelines. A company can't account for more than 15 percent of any day's trading in its stock and it has to be "passive" — it can't bid up the price.

Where the regulators run into problems is in drawing the line between buying up some stock because it's cheap and buying so much of it that there isn't much of a market left for public shareholders. That's the part that is going to get a new airing when the "going private" rules are trotted out again.

Boeing Seeks Technicians

TOKYO (AP) — The Boeing Company, the world's largest aircraft manufacturer, is looking for about 100 Japanese technicians to help handle increasing orders for its 747s and 727s, a spokesman for the aircraft industry reported today. He said he thought the Seattle, Wash., company would get about a third of the number it wants.

A spokesman for the Society of Japanese Aerospace Companies said 29 technicians have been selected for final review before making a trip to Boeing's headquarters in Seattle.

He said the technicians were chosen from Mitsubishi Heavy Industries, Kawasaki Heavy Industries and other jet aircraft companies.

Boeing first contacted the society, an organization of 109 companies, in mid-November to seek help in locating highly trained aircraft technicians, the spokesman said. The technicians will work for at least two years under the same wages and working conditions as Americans in the same jobs, he added.

He said he doubted Japanese aircraft manufacturers could afford to lose 100 technicians at a time when they are preparing to produce the Orion anti-submarine patrol plane and Eagle jet fighters for the Japanese government.

Trouble Hits Arkansas Gridders Again

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Two University of Arkansas football players are tied to a probe of the alleged rape of a coed in a UA athletic dormitory, sources have told The Associated Press.

A local prosecutor Wednesday night confirmed that a coed, about 21, had lodged a complaint alleging that she was raped six times early Tuesday morning in the dormitory. The university on Wednesday suspended two students pending a hearing, but declined to say whether the students were football players.

No charges have been filed. The Razorbacks, ranked No. 8, are 9-2 on the season. They play UCLA in the Fiesta Bowl in Tempe, Ariz., Dec. 25. School officials and Kim Smith, the Washington County deputy prosecutor conducting the probe, refused to name the students. However, sources close to the UA athletic program told the AP Wednesday night that the students were UA football players, and Smith said that he believed at least one of the two was a football player.

The team was wracked by scandal about this time last year when football Coach Lou Holtz suspended three key players from the Orange Bowl squad because of an alleged incident involving a woman in a dormitory.

On Dec. 20, 1977, Holtz suspended All-Southwest Conference running back Ben Cowins, running back Michael Forrest and flanker Donny Bobo from the team. The Razorbacks went on to defeat Oklahoma, 31-6, in the Orange Bowl.

Holtz was en route to Fayetteville early today following a Los Angeles appearance Wednesday night on the Tonight Show.

He said at Los Angeles, "I left home yesterday (Tuesday) and haven't heard anything about it."

"I can't make comments on something I don't know anything about. I don't want to take a chance on messing up any young people's lives."

Holtz said, however, if there was trouble involving his players, he would do what was necessary.

"The first thing for me to do is remain calm about it until I really find out what's happened," he said. "Then I'll look at what's fair and equitable, make a decision and live with it."

Smith said he wouldn't release the names of those involved in the alleged incident until Friday or Monday, when a decision will be made about whether to file formal criminal charges.

Rumors of a second dormitory incident in as many years involving a woman swept Arkansas Wednesday afternoon. University officials added fuel to the rumors by refusing to comment for several hours.

The first statement from the school came Wednesday night following a 1 1/2-hour meeting of school officials. Present were UA President Charles Bishop, Athletic Director Frank Broyles, lawyers and other school officials.

About that time, Smith said he believed at least one of the suspended students was a football player.

"The girl reported to me that she had been sexually assaulted," Smith said. "She gave me names. I assume that they were players."

He said he recognized one of the names given him by the woman as that of a UA football player.

Broyles said university rules governing the suspension of a student forbade him to comment on the alleged incident until a student-faculty hearing is held within five days.

"We discussed this situation in the meeting Wednesday with our lawyers. I want to do everything I can, but we have been instructed not to discuss it," Broyles said.

Smith said he had talked with four students who live in the athletic dormitory. He said he subpoenaed two of the students.

"I went ahead and subpoenaed two of the persons for the record, but I'm sure they would have come if they'd been asked," he said.

"I wish I knew what actually happened, but I'm sure we'll get to the bottom of this by late Friday or Monday," Smith said.

Dedicated To The Ones

EVER SINCE I was a kid, driving around in a 1949 Dodge pickup without a back windshield, I've had one dream. Someday I hope to flip on the radio—either at home or in the car—and hear, "This song goes out to you, Jim, dedicated with love from Doris." Shoot, it could be from Virginia or Stephanie or Lupe—a dedication is still a dedication.

But any radio station won't do. The dedication will have to come from a country and western job. C&W, for some of you. That's because in every country tune there's a lifetime of wisdom and humor. My favorites are the songs that deal with love, loneliness and infidelity, for some unknown reason. No other form of music is quite able to deal with these three subjects quite the way a good C&W tune can and does.

Yes, Hank Williams, you did write my life. But until I do get mine, I'll just let a few folks, like the ones listed below, dedicate songs—or parts of ones—to each other. So sit back, put a quarter under your arm and hum along if you know the words to these C&W tunes dedicated from one sports celebrity to another:

To Renee Richards, from Renee Richards: "She feels like a new man tonight."

From Bum Phillips, to Dan Pastroni: "Don't cry on my back, baby, you might rust my spurs."

To Haystack Calhoun, from Andree the Giant: "I can't build a bridge to get over you."

From Johnny Walker Red, to Kenny Stabler: "How can a whiskey six years old whip a man that's 32?"

From Reggie Jackson, to Billy Martin: "Just because you got to first base don't mean you're home free."

To Reggie, from Billy: "You can't make a heel toe the line."

From the New Orleans Police Department, to Joe Gilliam: "It's bad when you're caught with the goods."

From Emory Bellard, to Tom Wilson: "He's walking in my tracks, but he can't fill my shoes."

To any member of the PGA tour, from any groupie: "If you ain't feeling everything you say and do, you better play on through."

From Tex Schramm, to Tom Landry: "Cowboys and daddies don't every cry."

To Rod Carew from, Calvin Griffin: "There's one in every crowd, but for crying out loud, why is it always turning out to be me."

From George Steinbrenner, to Billy Martin: "Liars one, believers zero."

To Dallas, Tex., from Roger Staubach: "I'm a nine o'clock boy in a 23 o'clock town."

To Brad Corbett, from the Texas Rangers: "When are we gonna stop starting over again."

From Don Carter, to AMF: "I don't know whether to kill myself or go bowling."

To Calvin Griffin, from Rod Carew: "I'm sick and tired of waking up sick and tired."

Chaparrals Pick Sanders

Jerry Don Sanders, the diminutive kicker from Springlake-Earth, who boot-ed his way into the hearts of Texas Tech fans during the late '60s, has been named Lubbock Christian College's first head football coach, College President Dr. Harvie M. Pruitt announced late Wednesday afternoon.

"We're extremely pleased, naturally," Dr. Pruitt said, "to be getting a coach who has had both the playing experiences and a wide background of coaching experience as has Jerry Don Sanders."

"He is well-known by sports fans in this area for his accomplishments in both high school and college. He became a college star despite not having the physical size so many coaches feel is a must to be a star and I think he'll be able to relate to other athletes who are in the same mold."

"We felt our first coach had to be a man who knew our situation, could build a non-scholarship program as well as coach. We had a number of well qualified men apply for this position. Jerry Don convinced us he would be able to accomplish the things we feel are important in the area of football and we're happy he's agreed to undertake this challenge," Dr. Pruitt concluded.

J. T. King, who coached Sanders during his collegiate career at Texas Tech, was elated when he heard the news.

"That's great," said the former Red Raider athletic director. "Jerry Don's an outstanding young man. He's very intelligent person in all aspects of the game. I think that this will be a great move for both parties involved."

Sanders, a 1966 graduate of Springlake-Earth High School, followed Kenny Vin-yard as Tech's placement man in the latter years of that decade and in 1969 averaged 29 yards on 74 punts, hit 11 of 16 field goals and tallied 50 points.

An established kicker in high school where he had a 45-yard field goal, a 78-yard punt and a 70-yard field goal in practice (with a stiff breeze to his back), Sanders, who played on his high school's last district championship team, started making his presence known as a freshman at Tech.

Rice and a 57-yarder against Texas A&M and a 59-yarder against the Tech red-shirts in 1966.

Sanders grabbed SWC attention when with 16 seconds left in a 1968 game, booted a 27-yard field goal to beat SMU 27-24. Upon graduating in 1970, Sanders spent four years coaching in the Class AA Burnett school system as an assistant in football and basketball and had the track program for one year.

After that, he served as Principal of Waco Christian Schools for two years and the last 2 1/2 years has been Education and Youth Director at the Thomas Street Church of Christ in Altus, Okla.

Sanders resigned his position at Thomas Street Wednesday night and will report to Lubbock with the dawn of the new year. In the meantime, he will be recruiting in the Altus area.

"I'm interested in the overall program at LCC as far as the Christian College and athletics are concerned," Sanders said. "Athletics have been a part of my life since I was able to walk."

"I've got some notes from the conference meeting, but I haven't had time to sit down with (basketball-baseball coach) Larry Hays and talk to him about them."

"After I arrive in Lubbock, we'll make plans for spring training. I understand we have 36 days to get in 20 days of practice. The rest of the time can be spent on running and the weight programs. 'Naturally, I want to see what type personnel we have and adapt the program to suit that personnel both offensively and defensively.'

"Hopefully, we plan to make it interesting and not go the 'three yards and a cloud of dust' route. We hope to make it interesting and exciting for the fans.

"I'm extremely excited about the opportunity of being in Lubbock and initiating the football program for Lubbock Christian College," Sanders said.

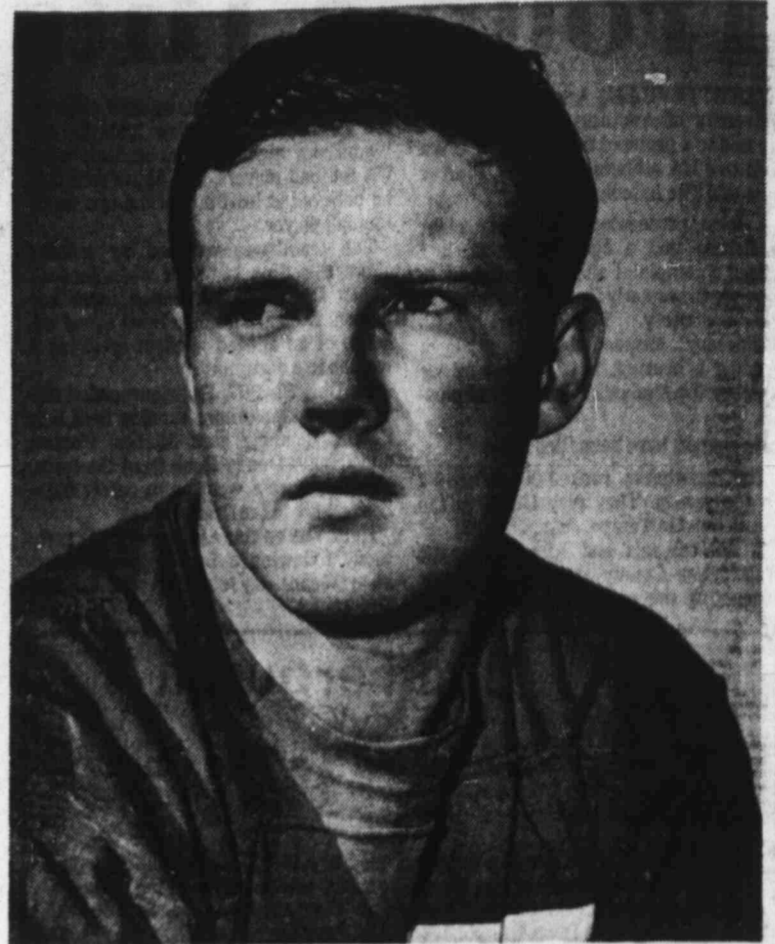

During his days at Tech Sanders was asked if the size of his feet (he punted wearing a size 6 1/2 shoe and did placements with a 6D shoe) hampered him. "I don't know," Sanders quipped, "these are the only two feet I've ever had."

Steve McCleery, who along with John Copeland—the present basketball assistant—will act as grid aides next fall said 45 present LCC students have indicated they will try out in the spring.

"We've also had about 18 calls from those not presently in school and 12 of those have said they will enroll in the spring. We also have leads on 26 others who have expressed an interest in playing football," McCleery said. "It's just a slow process getting everyone contacted, but we hope to have that accomplished within a week."

Indications are that spring training drills will be held from 10:30 a.m. until 1 p.m., but that has not been finalized yet.

Hays, who will be the school's athletic director next year, has completed an eight-game schedule for next fall: Sept. 1—McMurry; 8—at Sul Ross 15—open; 22—Tarleton State 29—at Austin College Oct. 6—at Trinity University; 13—Sul Ross; 20—Panhandle State; 27—at Tarleton State.

Bum Mad At Rumors

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Oilers Coach Bum Phillips, who has led the Oilers into the National Football League playoffs for the first time in nine years, says he's near signing a contract but Oilers owner Bud Adams won't comment.

"I want to keep working for Bud Adams," Phillips said Wednesday. "I don't want to do anything to aggravate him. I like the man."

Adams accused the press of probing something that was none of its business and declined to give Phillips a vote of approval when contacted Wednesday.

"You guys are making a big mountain out of nothing," Adams said. "We've got a game coming up and we're going into the playoffs and you're stirring all this up."

Adams said earlier he would not negotiate Phillips' contract until the end of the season.

Phillips said he had received a contract from Adams and "I've put some things on it. We're still negotiating. But there's no way I'll be coaching anywhere but Houston, Texas. All of us out here want to win, and when everybody wants the same thing you get together."

Phillips has signed a pair of two-year contracts since he became head coach and general manager in 1975. His current contract expires Jan. 31.

Baseball's 'New Look' Pleases TV

By HOWARD SMITH
AP Sports Writer

Negotiations between major league baseball and the three networks have taken an interesting turn of late with baseball's tentative plan to expand postseason play. The idea is to reorganize each league into three divisions, add a couple of wild card teams and have eight teams, instead of the present four, involved in playoffs.

Thus, there will be more teams in the running for the playoffs and, presumably, more fan interest as the season winds down.

All of this means that baseball has decided it will no longer surrender the month of September to football. The goal is simple: Prime Time Exposure in September.

"When I walked into this job last March, the thing that was most appalling to me was that we had no prime time television exposure in September," says Tom Villante, baseball's executive director of broadcasting. "And that's when the season is most exciting."

ABC, sole purveyor of prime time baseball, drops Monday Night Baseball in September in favor of Monday Night Football. This, not surprisingly, does not sit well with baseball people and they are determined to do something about it.

Baseball considers its tentative new round of playoffs as a fourth "jewel" of its "crown jewels", joining the World Series, pennant playoffs and All-Star Game as the best products the sport has to offer. These jewels are being dangled in front of the networks as bait in hopes of landing prime time exposure in September.

The three networks have been considering all of this, trying to decide what they want to go after and how much it will cost.

Network executives don't like to reveal their negotiating strategies in advance, but here are some thoughts on what they may be considering:

—ABC: ABC holds the key to the whole thing. It has the right of first refusal for prime time baseball but is locked into Monday Night Football in September for the next few years. Given that fact and the fact that ABC currently rules the roost with its successful prime time entertainment shows, it seems very unlikely that the network would consider a night of prime time baseball in September.

A report that the network's affiliates recently voted overwhelmingly against continuing prime time baseball has been vehemently denied by Villante and an ABC source, but also definitely confirmed by other sources. If there is any truth to that report, ABC may indeed wind up dropping out of the baseball picture altogether.

ABC is decidedly against any three-network division of baseball which would give everyone access to the World Series every third year. And even if ABC de-

Raiders Seeking New Placekicker

OAKLAND (AP) — The Oakland Raiders apparently will give Jim Breech, former University of California star, a shot at their placekicking job — next season if not immediately.

A Raiders executive, Al LoCasale, said Wednesday that the team might sign Breech and use him in Sunday's final game of the National Football League season but that no signing had taken place yet.

In order to add Breech to the roster, Oakland would have to drop another player from its roster before the game against Minnesota.

Kicker Errol Mann, 37, the NFL's leading scorer last season, has had a rough time this year, missing several short field goal attempts and some extra-point tries. The falloff in placekicking efficiency is one of many reasons the Raiders, 8-7, have failed for the first time since 1971 to qualify for the playoffs.

LoCasale said Mann would remain on the roster if Breech is signed. Breech set several kicking records at Cal, was drafted by the Detroit Lions this year and was released during the NFL exhibition season.

"We think he's worth looking at or we wouldn't have brought him in," LoCasale said of the Raiders' consideration of Breech.

From any player traded to the Tampa Bay Bucs, to John McKay: "From the gutter to you, isn't it?"

To the Cincinnati Reds, from Pete Rose: "The worst you ever gave me was the best I ever had."

To the Denver Bronco cheerleaders, from the man on the street: "She took everything but the blame."

To the Dallas Cowboy cheerleaders, from every male that's every sat in front of his television on Sunday afternoon: "It ain't just another lust affair."

And again to the Cowboy cheerleaders, from myself: "If you don't think I love you — feel again."

To Willie Mays, from Jimmy Connors: "It's not 'love' but it's not bad."

From an aging Joe Namath, to all those Southern California witches: "It takes me all night long to do what I used to do all night long." Poor Joe.

To Top Tail Jones, from John Travolta: "He made me dance before the music started."

From Ron Jaworski, to the Philadelphia offensive line, after last Sunday's game with Dallas: "The only thing I can count on is my fingers."

To the TCU Frogs, from F.A. Dry: "You can't even do wrong right."

From Don Meredith, to Howard Cosell: "Whoever turned you on forgot to turn you off."

From Sparky Anderson, to the Cincinnati Reds: "I knew I'd lean, but I never thought I'd fall."

To the Washington Redskins, from Jack Pardee: "I gave up 'Good morning, darling' and 'Daddy, I love you,' for this."

To Joan Weston (the 'Blond Amazon' of Roller Derby fame), from 'Little Charlie O'Connell (of the Bay City Bombers or was it the Port Worth Rangers?): "I wouldn't take you to a dogfight even if I thought you could win."

And also from Charlie, to Joan, with love: "She stepped on my heart and stomped that little sucker flat."

From Jimmy Connors, to Chris Evert: "Did I fall out of your favor because the only ring I gave you was the one you scrubbed out of the tub?"

And finally, if Tony Dorsett had been hip to C&W after oversleeping a few weeks ago, he could have answered Tom's queries about his tardiness like this: "The work I done was hard. At night I sleep cause I was tard."

Loretta Lynn would have.

Leyboldt Rejoins Seattle Seahawks

SEATTLE (AP) — Kicker John Leyboldt will rejoin the Seattle Seahawks for Sunday's National Football League game here against the Kansas City Chiefs, John Thompson, Seahawks general manager, announced today.

Leyboldt, who was released by the Seahawks prior to the regular season this year, will assume the duties of Eitren Herrera if Herrera is unable to play, said Thompson.

Herrera had an appendectomy operation Sunday.

Leyboldt, who lives in Buffalo, N.Y., played in two games this season for New Orleans, where he connected on two of three field goal attempts and four of five extra point attempts.

Hoosier Admits Marijuana Use

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — In the first public acknowledgment by any of the principals, Indiana University basketball player Jim Roberson says he and two others were kicked off the team this week for smoking marijuana.

Roberson, a senior, and sophomores Tommy Baker and Don Cox were dismissed by Coach Bobby Knight Monday. Five other players, including the top two scorers, were placed on indefinite probation, although Knight said it wouldn't affect their playing status.

On probation are starters Ray Tolbert and Mike Woodson and reserves Landon Turner, Phil Isenberger and Eric Kirchner.

Roberson, a 6-foot-9 forward-center from Rochester, N.Y., said in a television interview, when asked if marijuana were involved: "That was, you know, that was it. Straight."

Roberson added: "There were not any wild parties; there were no wild events... where some innocent child would say, 'Is that one of the Indiana basketball players?'" has an idea of how he wants his players to be. The players, I guess, just couldn't fit the mold."

Roberson said his hopes of playing professional basketball "still haven't dwindled," but added being dropped from Indiana has put a damper on things. I'm not going to give up."

Earlier Wednesday, Cox said he was bitter "but on the other hand I'm sort of happy. I haven't been too happy here. This is another stepping stone. I want to continue playing ball. I think the best thing for me to do is leave now."

Adell Turner, Landon's father, said his son deserved to be put on probation. "I told Landon that Knight has his rules and that he has to follow the training rules or suffer the consequences," the Indianapolis security officer said.

Cowens Benches Self, Lineup

By The Associated Press
 Dave Cowens, the Boston Celtics' player-coach, benched virtually his entire starting team — including himself — and the unusual strategy paid off.

Although Cowens, Jo Jo White, Billy Knight, Nate Archibald and Marvin Barnes were sitting on the bench at the outset of Wednesday night's National Basketball Association game against New Orleans, the Celtics beat the Jazz 102-96 behind the career-high 31 points of occasional starter Cedric Maxwell.

"I've been emphasizing defense since I took over as coach and the players I selected to start the game have been playing the best defense I've seen so far," said Cowens. "They earned the chance off what they showed in Houston Tuesday night. I didn't play well Tuesday, but (Dennis) Awtrey did. He deserved the chance."

In addition to Maxwell and Awtrey, the Celtics' starting lineup included Don Chaney, rookie Jeff Judkins and Chris Ford.

In other games: Washington's Elvin Hayes became the 10th player in NBA history to reach the 20,000-point plateau as the Bullets whipped the San Diego Clippers 134-117; the Philadelphia 76ers blitzed the Kansas City Kings 120-100; the San Antonio Spurs routed the New York Knicks 139-109; the Atlanta Hawks trounced the Indiana Pacers 117-101, and the Seattle SuperSonics trimmed the Los Angeles Lakers 117-107.

"The pressure (defense) worked," added Cowens, who had 13 points and 13 rebounds in his rare reserve role. "We pressed them the whole game and we pushed the ball up court. That's our game. That's the only way we can win."

Bullets 124, Clippers 117
 Hayes scored a season-high 36 points, grabbed 14 rebounds, blocked four shots, handed out three assists and had one steal in a brilliant all-around performance even though he sat out the fourth quarter. When he reached the 20,000-point mark by sinking two free throws with 3:20 remaining in the third quarter, the crowd at the Capital Centre in Landover, Md. gave him a standing ovation. Hayes is only the sixth NBA player with more than 20,000 points and 10,000 rebounds.

Spurs 129, Knicks 109
 Larry Kenon's 36 points and 17 rebounds, and George Gervin's 29 points helped the Spurs to their fifth consecutive victory over New York in San Antonio since they joined the league three years ago. Toby Knight's 30 points led the Knicks, who suffered their fourth straight loss and eighth in 10 games.

Hawks 117, Pacers 101
 John Drew's 31 points, Dan Roundfield's 21 points and 14 rebounds, and Tree Rollins' 17 rebounds sparked Atlanta to its seventh home victory in a row and enabled the Hawks to end a four-game losing streak. Ricky Sobers paced the Pacers with 26 points, including 14 of 14 free throws.

Sonics 117, Lakers 107
 Seattle raised its record to 20-6 and stretched its Pacific Division lead to three games over Los Angeles and idle Phoenix, rallying to beat the Lakers behind Fred Brown's 28 points and Dennis Johnson's 27. Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 31 for the Lakers.

76ers 120, Kings 100
 Doug Collins tallied 22 points and reserves Henry Bibby and Joe Bryant each collected 21 as Philadelphia beat Kansas City's Midwest Division leaders for the sixth straight time.

Bibby, whose total was a season high, scored nine straight points at the start of the fourth quarter and his jumper with 6½ minutes left gave the 76ers a 114-78 lead — their biggest of the game.

Okies Rate Awards

NORMAN, Okla. (UPI) — University of Oklahoma roommates Billy Sims and Greg Roberts were named today as United Press International college football Player and Lineman of the Year.

It is the first time in the 28-year history of the award that a pair of roommates have been named winners.

Heisman Trophy winner Sims and Outland Trophy winner Roberts have lived together since they first came to Oklahoma in 1975.

"It's great to win it," Roberts said. "What can I say considering I didn't expect to win anything at the beginning of the season."

Roberts, whose coaches made a habit of warning game officials that the offensive guard's quick start off the snap might appear to be an offside violation, took Lineman of the Year honors by getting a single vote more than Penn State defensive tackle Bruce Clark. Clark also followed Roberts in polling for the Outland.

"He (Roberts) moves so quickly off the football, he's going forward and then everybody else follows him," said Oklahoma offensive line coach Donny Duncan. Robert's coach said he could not think of a single weak point in the guard's play.

Sims, who was the nation's leading rusher with 1,762 yards and leading scorer with 20 touchdowns, was named UPI's Back of the Year in addition to its Player.

"I just can't top this year, with all the awards and everything," said Sims. "I just want to go out (next season) to win football games."

Sims, the sixth junior to ever win the Heisman, polled 35 points to lead his competitors by sizable margins in both honors.

Penn State quarterback Chuck Fusina finished second for Player of the Year with 16 points. He was followed by Louisiana State's Charles Alexander, Michigan's Rick Leach and Southern California's Charles White.

For Back of the Year, Sims picked up 42 votes compared to eight of second-place finisher Alexander.

Roberts and Sims, close friends as well as teammates and roommates, said they met at an alumni dinner in 1975 after they had signed letters of intent for Oklahoma.

"We were both highly recruited and all, but Billy was just Billy — he acted like himself," Roberts said.

"When I first met Greg, he was just another ballplayer," said Sims, explaining the two have become close over the past three years.

OFFICERS NAMED
 Officers of the Pan American Golf Association were named Saturday night at the club's yearly dinner. Named were Demetrio Cristan, president; Joe Bavila, vice-president; John Deleon, secretary; Blas Deleon, treasurer; and Jul Moreno, public relations.

TROJAN CAUGHT REACHING — Southern Cal's Don Carfino fouls Duke's Vince Taylor in the first half of the game played Wednesday night at the Blue Devils' Cameron Indoor Stadium. Duke Handles Trojans Easily

By The Associated Press
What had been billed as the battle of the centers was really no contest as the top-ranked Duke Blue Devils put the clamps on Cliff Robinson and defeated No. 12 Southern California 79-65.

"It was an emotional game," said Duke Coach Bill Foster, "almost as emotional as an ACC (Atlantic Coast Conference) game ... almost."

Duke center Mike Gminski fired in 25 points and led the Blue Devils' blanket defense of Southern Cal center Cliff Robinson, the Pacific 8 Conference's leading scorer as a freshman last year. Robinson was scoreless from the floor in the first half and finished the game with just six points, hitting only 2 of 13 field goal attempts.

"They executed very well," Southern Cal Coach Bob Boyd said of the Blue Devils. "While playing from behind, this is a very tough offense to stop."

Duke led 32-26 at the half, then pulled away behind Gminski, Jim Spanarkel and Gene Banks.

"Give them a lot of credit for their defense," Foster graciously said. "We were hoping to break open a lot earlier, but when we finally did, that was it."

Spanarkel added 20 points and Banks 17 for Duke. Barry Brooks paced the Trojans with 14 points.

In the only other game involving a ranked team Wednesday night, No. 3 Michigan clobbered Western Michigan 109-69.

Michigan State Coach Jud Heathcote apparently didn't see the final score in his team's third straight victory.

"We played quite well in the first half, but we're not ready to kill anybody yet," Heathcote said after the Spartans slaughtered Western Michigan.

Jay Vincent scored 27 points — 21 in the first half that saw the Spartans take a 56-18 lead — to pace the Michigan State rout.

Ray Voelkel set an NCAA record for consecutive field goals as American University raced to its fifth straight win, 105-87 over Saint Mary's. Voelkel was 4-for-4 in the game to run his consecutive field goal streak to 24.

Chris Bennett's 10-foot baseline jumper with three seconds remaining gave MacMurray a 79-78 win over Illinois College while Robin Gregory connected on two free throws with three seconds left to play to push Wittenberg past Ashland 75-74.

Teaff To Stay At Baylor

WACO (AP) — Grant Teaff, the object of an all-out push by Oklahoma State to become their new head football coach, has decided to stay at Baylor University.

Teaff, who brought Baylor its first Southwest Conference football championship in 50 years just four seasons ago, has one more year remaining on a five-year contract he received after taking the Bears to the Cotton Bowl.

Teaff was to make his decision to stay at Baylor a formality later today in a statement clarifying his situation.

A source close to Teaff said his close ties to the Baptist school was the final item that kept Teaff from being tempted by a reported $50,000-a-year offer from OSU.

Bradshaw, Campbell Top AFC

NEW YORK (AP) — Quarterback Terry Bradshaw, the leading passer in the American Football Conference, and nine of his Pittsburgh Steelers' teammates were named to the AFC Pro Bowl team today that will oppose the National Football Conference squad Jan. 29.

Pittsburgh, the AFC's Central Division champion with a 13-2 record — the best mark in the National Football League — and heading for its seventh straight playoff appearance, landed four players on the offensive unit and six on the defense.

Wide receiver Lynn Swann and center Mike Webster will join Bradshaw on the starting offensive squad, while running back Franco Harris will be in reserve.

The Pittsburgh starters on defense will be tackle Joe Greene and outside linebacker Jack Ham, with end L.C. Greenwood, middle linebacker Jack Lambert, cornerback Mel Blount and safety Mike Wagner in reserve.

The 40-man team — 20 offensive players, 17 defensive players and three specialists — were chosen in balloting by the 14 AFC head coaches and the NFL Players Association members on each team. The players' vote from each team was a consensus of the entire team. The players with the most votes among the 28 voters were the designated starters for the nationally televised (ABC) game at the Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum.

The results of the balloting were announced by AFC President Lamar Hunt and the NFL Players Association. Earl Campbell, the sensational running back from the Houston Oilers, was the only rookie chosen to either the offensive or defensive units.

The Denver Broncos, champions of the West Division for the second straight year, placed six players on the two teams, including four defensive starters — end Lyle Alzado, middle linebacker Randy Gradishar, cornerback Louis Wright and safety Bill Thompson. Other Broncos named were reserve outside linebacker Tom Jackson and kick return specialist Rick Upchurch.

The other division champion, the New England Patriots, will be represented by five players — starting offensive tackle Leon Gray, starting guard John Hannah, reserve tight end Russ Francis, reserve running back Sam Cunningham and starting cornerback Mike Haynes.

Other offensive starters include wide receiver Wesley Walker of the New York Jets, tight end Dave Casper of the Oakland Raiders, tackle Russ Washington of the San Diego Chargers, guard Joe DeLamielleure of the Buffalo Bills and running back Delvin Williams of the Miami Dolphins.

The remaining defensive starters will be end Elvin Bethea of Houston, tackle Louie Kelcher of San Diego, outside linebacker Robert Brazile of Houston, and safety Thom Darden of the Cleveland Browns.

The coaches and the NFC team will be announced later. The NFC won the 1978 game 14-13, tying the series 4-4.

FG Record Set

WASHINGTON (AP) — American University's Ray Voelkel set an NCAA record for consecutive field goals Wednesday night as he and his teammates raced to their fifth straight win, a 105-87 decision over Saint Mary's.

Voelkel shot four-for-four in the game to run his consecutive field-goal streak to 24 — surpassing the old record of 23 set by Randy Morgan in 1974.

Voelkel hit a lay-up late in the game to set his mark.

Voelkel, a graduate of Cardinal Spellman high school in the Bronx, N.Y., will try to extend his streak when American travels to Delaware Friday night.

Fem Cagers Make Way To California

BERKELEY, Calif. (Special) — The Texas Tech women's basketball team will make its first appearance ever on the West Coast when it travels to the California Women's Basketball Invitational here this weekend.

Tech, 4-8, and seeded No. 2 in the tourney behind Long Beach State, will also see teams from the University of Pacific, San Diego State, the University of Washington and hostess school California.

Tech's two top scorers, Donette Marble (14.6) and Rosemary Scott (12.7), suffered sprained ankles recently, and it is doubtful that either will see much action.

Jill Owens of Littlefield will play the post position. The three-year letterperson came out for the squad five games ago.

The Raiders must wait until Friday night to play their first game against the winner of the California-San Diego State game. The tournament begins today.

Racing Pact May Kill USAC

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Championship Auto Racing Teams (CART), a breakaway group of race car owners unhappy with operation of the U.S. Auto Club, signed a five-year agreement Wednesday with the Sports Car Club of America (SCCA) which could put USAC out of business.

Fifteen of CART's 21 members unanimously voted for a contract calling for the SCCA to promote, score, officiate and sanction championship races for Indy-type cars. The union also gave CART the Automobile Competition Committee of the United States (ACCUS) membership it needed to be eligible to run the FIA-sanctioned Indianapolis 500.

"We are quite pleased with our new association," CART President Pat Patrick said. "We will be able to control our own destiny and with the SCCA's help, go racing the way we think is best for everyone concerned."

The heart of the CART-USAC feud is that USAC rules are determined by a 21-man board of directors. The car owners who formed CART feel they lacked proper representation in the decision making that had a direct on how much money they were spending.

"All we ever wanted was a fair deal," said Dan Gurney, another CART member. "With this deal we can make our own decisions and we couldn't with a board of directors. They weren't spending their own money, but we are and while I don't want to see anyone in USAC meet a bad end, I think this thing is long overdue."

"It was harder for me to make the vote than anyone else in the room," said A. J. Foyt. "But I don't feel like we're doing the wrong thing. I feel this is definitely in the best interest of auto racing."

McConnell Picked As Player Of Week

It's not the fact Billy McConnell has hit 73 percent of his shots from the field or manage to steal the ball away from his opponents 43 times, that makes him a favorite on Gary Bowe's list.

"The thing the LCHS mentor likes about the Eagle guard is "he is a very unselfish player."

So on top of McConnell's individual statistics, he has also handed out 55 assists in the Eagles' 11 games, already this season.

"That's a lot of points to give up," said Bowe. "But that is the kind of player he is."

The 6-1 LCHS standout, who also ranks third on his team in total rebounds, has been named the Avalanche-Journal's city high school basketball player of the week.

"He has really done a fine job for us this year," said Bowe. "He may not lead the team in scoring (McConnell is third in that department), but he really adds a lot."

McConnell has been one of the key reasons the Eagles currently own an 11-0 won-loss record heading into today's start of the Reese AFB tournament, Bowe pointed out.

Also cited from the city's other schools were Wayne Williams of Dunbar, Coronado's Steve Ahlenius, Craig Ehlo of Monterey, Jeff Manley of Lubbock High, John Jones of Estacado and Jimmy Durham of Christ the King.

Ahlenius helped lead the Mustangs to the team title last week at the Amarillo Tournament, collecting 19 points in the finals. "He has really been playing well for us," said Coronado coach Barry Arnwine about Ahlenius.

Despite being held to only four points in Tuesday night's loss to Midland High, Ehlo is currently one of the city's top scorers, hitting at 20-plus points an outing.

Manley led Lubbock High's scoring surge against Borger, canning 15 points in the 78-40 loss to the Bulldogs.

Leading Dunbar's win over Coronado was Williams with 16 points. The 5-8 guard has been DHS' most consistent outside shooter this season, hitting 161 total points mostly from the 15-20 foot range.

Like Williams, Durham also carries much of the scoring load for CTK.

Reese Cage Meet Bounces Off

By JIM FERGUSON

Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff
Gary Bowe thinks it's about time Lubbock Christian High starts flexing its muscles a little bit, but don't look for the Eagles to star in "Pumping Basketball" or the such.

LCHS will attempt to show off its muscles, though, when it opens today's Reese Air Force Base basketball tournament in the President's Trophy Division (usually reserved for AAA and AAAA schools), instead of the Commander's Trophy Division, or small school category.

The event, which continues through Saturday night's finals, bounced into action this morning when El Paso Andres met Roosevelt in the opener. In all, eight games were on today's schedule.

"We're just going to try and find out what kind of team we really have," explained Bowe. "It should really be a test for us. I think we've been playing very well and also give us chance to play some good competition."

LCHS opens its portion of the tournament at 7 p.m. against Lubbock High.

Although LCHS won the Texas Association of Private School's tournament last year for the second consecutive time, the Eagles didn't fare too well at Reese. Miserable might be a good word to use, since they ended up on-for's in last season's event.

"We didn't play well at all last year," said Bowe. "But we're excited about playing this year, it should be fun."

Currently the Eagles own the finest record of any team entered, sporting a perfect 11-0 mark. Included in the mark are wins over Plainview and Estacado, a feat Bowe is proud of.

"These wins gave us some confidence," continued the LCHS head coach. "Now if we can do well, we'll continue to gain more confidence and that should help us further along."

Billy McConnell, currently hitting 73 per cent of his shots from the floor while averaging 12.5 points for the year, is one of the reasons the Eagles are expected to challenge for the tourney title.

Not only has McConnell been hot from the field, he has also dealt out 55 assists and made 42 steals. But he isn't the only LCHS'er averaging in double figures. Three others Eagles, including Tim Perrin (19.6 point), Shawn Williams (17.2 points) and Shawn Bowe (12.6), are hot.

"That's one of our boys," commented Bowe about his team's abundance of scorers. "You really can't concentrate on one player, everybody is capable of scoring their points."

LCHS isn't the only small school challenging for honors in the division dominated by the big guys. There is also Dimmitt and Roosevelt.

Dimmitt, a finalist in the Class AA state tournament last year, takes on Abilene Cooper, the defending President's Trophy champ, in the night cap at 8:30 p.m.

Others playing the President's Division are Abilene High and Dunbar. Because of a scheduling problem, Abilene was forced to forfeit its opening game with Dunbar, forcing the Eagles into the loser's bracket.

Peach Bowl Dead?

ATLANTA (AP) — The future of the Peach Bowl is in doubt, and scheduling the game on Christmas Day so it could be televised nationally didn't help, according to a bowl official.

Poor ticket sales is the reason the bowl is foundering, said George Crumbley, the executive director of the bowl committee.

"When we sought a national television contract, Christmas Day was our only option," Crumbley said. "But I think this date has turned out to be our No. 1 obstacle."

Home-town Georgia Tech will face Purdue at Atlanta Stadium in this year's Peach Bowl.

"Unless we sell 24,149 tickets locally, excluding what Tech sells, the Peach Bowl's chances of surviving are slim and none," Crumbley said. "Unless something happens soon, 1978 will be our smallest crowd." The stadium seats more than 60,000 persons.

The extra events committee of the National Collegiate Athletic Association wamed the Peach Bowl committee last spring that it must sell at least 40 percent of its tickets locally to keep its NCAA sanction, Crumbley said.

"It is the position of the NCAA that if a community doesn't support a bowl, it doesn't want the bowl," said Ralph McFillen of the NCAA committee.

Crumbley said the participating schools haven't sold all their tickets this year, either. Each school received 10,000 tickets and Purdue has already returned 6,300, he said. Tech, which has sold 5,000, has until Friday to sell more.

Jets Pick Walker As Most Valuable

NEW YORK (AP) — Wide receiver Wesley Walker was selected the New York Jets' most valuable player by his teammates on the National Football League club.

Walker leads the league in reception yardage with 1,134, a 24.7-yard average.

"There's no question in my mind about Wesley. He's all-pro," said Coach Walt Michaels. "I put him in a class with Don Maynard, Ray Renfro and other great receivers. Wesley is a team player and is not selfish. He doesn't go around saying, 'Hey throw the ball to me.' And to me it's important to be a team player since football is a team game."

Mart Price Continue To Slide

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices were lower in slow trading today marking the third consecutive session of declines.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was off 1.39 at 808.47 by noon. The Dow average tumbled more than 3 points near the opening, recovered to a fractional loss by late morning then drifted lower again.

Uncertainties on domestic and international issues have weighed on the market for several days, including the Mideast peace settlement, oil prices and domestic interest rates.

This weekend the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries will meet to set OPEC oil prices. Although there have been indications that the price increase may be within a 5 to 10 percent range, the Oil Minister of Iraq, Tayeb Abdul Karim, said today he considered that increase "unacceptable."

Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal also raised the specter of continued tight money and high interest rates. He told a congressional hearing that monetary policy "must be kept tight until inflation has been brought under control."

Overall, declining issues outnumbered gainers by a margin of almost 2-to-1 in a noon tally of trading on the New York Stock Exchange. Big Board volume came to 9.50 million shares at midday, up slightly from 9.43 million on Tuesday.

Among actively traded issues, Marathon Manufacturing fell 1 point to 29 1/2. Texaco slipped 1/4 to 23 1/2. Standard Oil of Indiana rose 1/4 to 54 1/2 and Boeing gained 1/4 to 69 1/2.

The NYSE composite index slipped 16 to 53.56. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index declined 19 to 150.04.

Feeder steers and bulls: Few head mostly choice 220-250 lbs. 60-70¢. Mostly good 195-200 lbs. 55-60¢. New 375-400 lbs. 45-55¢. Few 400-700 lbs. 45-55¢.

Feeder heifers: Mostly good 200-275 lbs. 60-70¢. 300-400 lbs. 65-75¢. Few 400-500 lbs. 65-75¢. Few 500-600 lbs. 65-75¢.

AMARILLO (AP) — Panhandle area carlot meat trade (i.e., the plant) as of 11:15 a.m. (best trade Texas Panhandle, western Oklahoma and New Mexico).

Demand fairly broad for carcass steer and heifer beef. Some sales confirmed, but no good price comparison available, but prices are higher than last week's close.

Packers reported fairly good interest for carcass beef, cut movement on the slow side. Sales reported on 8 loads carcass beef, no firmed orders.

Steer beef (6 loads): Four loads choice 3 500-900 lbs. 85-90¢. Two loads good 3 500-800 lbs. 75-80¢.

Heifer beef: Two loads choice 4 500-700 lbs. 75-80¢.

Graduated Payments Authorized

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government today authorized widespread use of a graduated monthly home loan payment plan that permits lower mortgage payments during the first few years a homebuyer owns a house.

"This should appeal particularly to young families whose incomes are likely to rise," Robert H. McKinney, chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, said after the board's 2-0 vote.

The plan may allow as many as 2.5 million more families to buy houses at a time when many are priced out of the housing market, he said.

The graduated payment was already permitted in many government-insured loans. Federally chartered savings and loans across the country will now be able to offer the graduated payment system if they wish after Jan. 1.

Board officials said growth of the program may be gradual and they could not estimate when associations would start offering the plan.

For example, a standard home mortgage of $50,000 at 9 1/2 percent interest over 30 years calls for monthly payments of $420. Under the graduated plan, the payments during the first year would be $318 a month. The monthly payment would increase in each of the first five years, reaching $457 in the fifth year. It would continue at that level until the loan is repaid.

The plan already is offered on many loans guaranteed by the Federal Housing Administration — commonly referred to as FHA loans.

Most people now buy their houses by making the same monthly payments for the entire life of the mortgage. Under the graduated plan, as before, the interest rate remains fixed throughout the life of the mortgage, but monthly payments are lower during the first few years of the loan.

The new bank package also includes the reverse annuity mortgage, a plan allowing older homeowners to borrow on the equity of their house and repay it when they sell or take it out of their estate. A savings and loan would have to present a plan to the board for approval on a case-by-case basis.

The new package also includes another plan called the variable rate mortgage. Under it, the interest rate and monthly payments are adjusted regularly, depending on interest rates in the economy. However, the variable rate mortgage is to be offered only in California, where it is already available through some state-chartered savings and loans.

The variable rate mortgage is opposed by Rep. Frank Annunzio, D-Ill., who calls it "legal loan sharking."

Body Snatchers Sentenced

VEVEY, Switzerland (AP) — Two East European refugees who pleaded guilty to stealing the body of comedian Charlie Chaplin were sentenced today, one to 4 1/2 years in prison and the other to an 18-month suspended term.

At a one-day hearing last Monday, Roman Wardas, a 24-year-old unemployed Pole, and Gancho Ganev, a 38-year-old Bulgarian car mechanic, admitted they stole the remains from a village cemetery here last March in the hope of getting a share of the "extreme wealth" they believed Chaplin left to his family.

The body snatchers demanded a ransom of $600,000 from the late film star's family. The body was recovered and the ransom was never paid.

Wardas, alleged mastermind of the bizarre crime, was given the 4 1/2-year sentence, and his accomplice the suspended term.

Presiding Judge Roland Chatelain, announcing the verdict, said the court agreed Wardas may not have carried out his threat to kill one of the Chaplin children if the demands were not met. "But the threat reached its goal to the extent that it alarmed and traumatized the family."

They were convicted of disturbing the peace of the dead and attempted extortion, carrying a maximum penalty of 7 1/2 years in prison.

Presiding Judge Roland Chatelain, announcing the verdict, said the court agreed Wardas may not have carried out his threat to kill one of the Chaplin children if the demands were not met. "But the threat reached its goal to the extent that it alarmed and traumatized the family."

Gary Owens Observes Unique Christmas In Los Angeles

By JAY SHARBUTT
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Gary Owens was asked on the first day of Christmas what his true love gave to him. "A luminous cattle prod for after-dark rustling," he sighed. But he cheered up.

"The spirit of Christmas is everywhere here in Southern California," he insisted. "Why, even Disneyland and Knott's Berry Farm are exchanging prisoners."

Owens, a man of great persiflage, knows whereof he speaks. He has observed Christmas in Los Angeles for 17 years from his podium as a top disc jockey at radio station KMPC.

A prominent graduate of the "Laugh-In" and "Gong" shows, he spent his boyhood yules in chilly South Dakota. He spent later Christmases as a radio man in eight cities from Omaha to San Francisco.

But he says Christmas in sunny Los Angeles is unique, even though there is no snow, even though every yuletide "my sons run outside to the front lawn and build a smogman."

He cited gifts folks give here. Such as "lizard-flavored nose drops." Or "a quivering Jello statue shaped like Dolly Parton. For those of taste, he mentioned a hot item here last year.

"It was a Tiffany lampshade aglow with handpainted scenes from the furtive love life of Warren Beatty," Owens said. "In Beverly Hills," he continued, "the stars give each other an agent. This sounds costly, but the town is so rich the Salvation Army band here has a string section."

Owens spoke of Christmas pageants they hold in poor communities here. Such as the Krelmayer area (no map lists it, but yule expert Owens says it is not far from the Flarkmont area).

"In Krelmayer, they have a breathtaking ceremony celebrating the Magi," he explained. "It stars Ralph Magi, a used car dealer. Each Christmas, he dresses up as Santa Claus and drives his 1968 car into his 320-pound wife, who is dressed like Scrooge. This symbolizes the triumph of good over evil at Christmas-time."

"It didn't go well last year. Magi's wife was unhurt and his car was totalled."

"And what of yule in the Flarkmont area?"

"Well," he said, "they round up all the hairy men, shave the words to Christmas carols on their backs and mail them to Malibu."

He shuddered. "I'm going to stay out of the Flarkmont area," he vowed. "I think I will go ride in the Christmas parade in Bakersfield. This year it has the theme of Lunch Meat."

But he said he may stay home and watch TV's annual barrage of Christmas specials, most of which are taped in July "and all star divorced couples ... it's really swell."

The noted yule expert was asked if he was putting us on.

His eyes twinkled, his cheeks grew ruddy. And, laying a finger alongside his nose, up the chimney he rose.

At the time, he was in an air-conditioned office with no fireplace. We are still wondering how Gary Owens did it.

TV Ratings Show CBS, ABC In Tie

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS began the season in last place and spent five weeks there. Since then, it's been a steady climb to parity with frontrunner ABC.

The two finished the week ending Dec. 10 in a tie for first place in the networks' ratings competition.

Figures from the A.C. Nielsen Co. showed CBS with five of the week's 10 top-rated programs, and 10 of the first 20, including regulars "60 Minutes," "M-A-S-H" and "One Day at a Time."

ABC and CBS finished the week with 20 points each, with NBC third at 17.2. The networks say that means in an average prime-time minute during the week, 20 percent of the homes in the country were tuned to both ABC and CBS.

"60 Minutes" finished the week No. 4, behind three of ABC's hit comedies, "Three's Company," "Laverne and Shirley" and "Happy Days."

The CBS newsmagazine has been strong in the ratings most of the season, and finished No. 1 for the week ending Nov. 26. NBC's "Weekend" newsmagazine, on the other hand, had another tough week — 63rd in the ratings.

The rating for No. 1 "Three's Company" was 33.6, which Nielsen says means of all the homes in the country with television, 33.6 percent saw at least part of the show.

CBS was helped in the competition by a couple of specials, "Third Annual Circus of the Stars" in sixth place and "All Star Tribute to Jimmy Stewart" No. 7.

NBC's top-rated show was "Little House on the Prairie," ranked ninth.

In addition to "Weekend," NBC had two other programs in the bottom five — "Grandpa Goes to Washington" in 60th place and "Project U.F.O." No. 62. ABC's "Lucan" was 61st, and CBS' special from the Kennedy Center in Washington was ranked No. 64.

Here are the week's 10 most-watched programs:

"Three's Company," with a rating of 33.6 representing 25 million homes, "Laverne and Shirley," 33.1 or 24.7 million, "Happy Days," 30.5 or 22.7 million, all ABC; "60 Minutes," 29.3 or 21.8 million, CBS; "Taxi," 28.8 or 21.5 million, ABC; "Circus of the Stars," 28 or 20.9 million, "Tribute to Jimmy Stewart," 27.9 or 20.8 million, and "M-A-S-H," 27.4 or 20.4 million, all CBS; "Little House on the Prairie," 27.2 or 20.3 million, NBC, and "One Day at a Time," 25.7 or 19.1 million, CBS.

The second 10 shows:

Personnel, Roles Vary Greatly At Dallas Theater Center

By EDWARD FULTON
DALLAS (UPI) — The revival of "A Texas Trilogy" at the Dallas Theater Center and a much less publicized production there, "Attic Aphrodite," bring into focus the value of the center and what it means to theater in general.
Barbara Purdy, 22, an apprentice in her second year in the master's degree program at DTC, is the perfect example.
Miss Purdy starred, winningly, as the floppy lead in "Attic Aphrodite" at Down Center Stage, the small theater within DTC were most experimental productions begin.
Later that month, Miss Purdy was an usher for the opening night crowd at the first play in "A Texas Trilogy," "The Last Meeting of the Knights of the White Magnolia," in the lush, upstairs Kalita Humphreys Theater.
Miss Purdy, who appeared in dinner theaters in Colorado and New Mexico and earned a degree in theater at Eastern New Mexico University, also poured champagne for the first nighters.

Preston Jones and Sally Netzel, the other two connected most closely with the two plays, have moved far from such varying duties at DTC.
Jones wrote "A Texas Trilogy" and accompanied the three plays to the Kennedy Center in Washington and then to Broadway's Broadhurst Theater in 1976. Jones received widespread acclaim in the United States and Europe, and was described as one of America's major playwrights in a cover story by Saturday Review.
Miss Netzel, who wrote "Attic Aphrodite," has either written or adapted a total of 22 plays. She has never achieved anything like Jones' fame, although one of her plays, "Sam," a comedy about Mark Twain, will be produced at the Julian Theater in San Francisco next spring.
Both are given equal billing at DTC, as writer, actor and director in the resident professional company. They are both at the center to work, learn, teach and perform.

In Jones' case, at least, he remains at DTC because he prefers it to Broadway, and he has a lot of experience on which to make a comparison.
"The difference," he said, "between the Theater Center and New York is that I can do so many things here. I write, direct, act, although I don't do as much acting as I would like to. We (his wife, also) are committed to this theater."
Jones said he has finished a screenplay based on the trilogy and he hopes for production quickly.

Kirk Douglas Plays Inept Outlaw In New Movie

By VERNON SCOTT
HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Kirk Douglas hid in the chaparral eyeing a horse-drawn buckboard rumble through a tunnel hewn from the rocky terrain of Bronson Canyon high in the Hollywood Hills.
The actor with the dimple in his chin turned to his horse, Whiskey, and asked in disbelief, "Did you see that?"
Whiskey shook his head on cue and Douglas ran, bandy-legged, full tilt after the buckboard. On reaching the mouth of the tunnel he crashed into a solid block of black rock and bounced back in a classic pratfall.
Earlier, Douglas — in the role of Cactus Jack Slade — had painted the tunnel onto the side of the mountain in a wacky attempt to maim Ann-Margret and Arnold Schwarzenegger, the good guys in his new movie, "The Villain."
The cast and crew rocked with laughter as Douglas sprawled in the dust, defeated once again in his dastardly assaults on the hero and heroine.
The scene and the movie are an entirely new milieu for the four-time Academy Award nominee (for "The Bad and the Beautiful," "Champion," "Lust for Life" and "Detective Story").
After a career of some 60 melodrama movies, Douglas has relished every scene in the first all-out farce he's ever played.
As Cactus Jack he portrays the most inept badman in the west, foiled at every turn, not infrequently by Whiskey.
In another scene Douglas flees a bank he has just robbed, jumps in the saddle in the best western tradition of quick getaways only to have Whiskey sit back on his haunches while the sheriff collars the luckless gunman.
Cactus Jack is a combination of Peter Sellers' bungling Inspector Clouseau and Wiley Coyote of the "Roadrunner" cartoon series. Douglas, dressed in villain's black, is playing him to the hilarious hilt.
Back in his plush mobile home dressing room during the noon break, Douglas feasted royally on broiled lobster and chicken in air-conditioned luxury.

He grinned broadly and then laughed. He was the picture of a kid with a new toy.
"I've never had so much fun in my life," he said. "I've been in this business more than 30 years and I've never come close to playing comedy before."
"Oh, I had a few humorous scenes in 'Champion' and a couple of other pictures, but they were fleeting moments to relieve the heavy drama. This is real farce, something I've never been offered in the past."
"People have asked me over the years to do comedy, but nothing really materialized. When 'The Villain' came along I jumped at the chance to play a character who is as wild as a guy can get."
Douglas, who takes his acting as seriously as any star in movies, approached "The Villain" with the same intensity that he tackled "Lonely Are The Brave" and "The Vikings."
"Whether it's comedy or drama, you still play a character," he said. "And you've got to make that character believable to the audience. It's impossible to play the role for laughs. The comedy comes from the events in which an outrageous man like Cactus Jack finds himself.

"It's the same sort of thing in epics. The idea is creating a character who comes through without being swallowed by the pageantry. You build credible relationships. This time my relationship is with a horse."
"The audience must be convinced that Cactus Jack and Whiskey have an understanding relationship. It's funny and maybe just a bit sad all at the same time."
Douglas put away his lunch and grinned again. He's as slim and trim as he was 30 years ago. He trained rigorously for three weeks in order to play barroom fights, being thrown through windows and falling down a mountainside.
"I'm letting it all go, hoping audiences will want Cactus Jack to succeed in all his crazy schemes. If I can do that, then I've met the challenge. No actor can hope to do more than that."

'Superman' Movie Grabs For Record Gross Sales

By DONALD C. BROWN JR.
United Press International Writer

Superman bounds into his latest flight of fancy this week. His mission: To snatch at the purse strings of America. Heroes go for big bucks these days. Pete Rose got more than $3 million. But then he is only mortal. About $50 million already has been spent in the hopes the Man of Steel can fly into the financial stratosphere in his first feature film with Warner Communications, Inc., clutching his cape tail.

After Sunday's premier Sunday in Washington, "Superman" will be shown at other benefit previews in New York, Boston, Chicago and Los Angeles before its general release across the country and Canada Friday.

The Washington premier — a benefit for the Special Olympics for retarded youngsters — was a glittering example of the increasingly popular formula of combining politics and show business to launch new commercial ventures.

The promoters of Superman came up with a triple draw — the president, Mrs. Carter, who served as honorary chairperson; and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., who, along with the other Kennedys, is a strong supporter of the Special Olympics.

Tickets went for from $35 to $1,000 a head, with purchasers of the latter being invited to an exclusive reception Saturday by Ambassador and Mrs. Fumihiko Togo at the Japanese Embassy. Holders of $500 tickets went to a party Friday at the Rockville, Md., home of Mr. and Mrs. R. Sargent Shriver.

Guests at a pre-show supper Sunday at the Kennedy Center dined on breaded chicken sticks, baby shish kebab, green vegetables and dip, and chocolate cake. They got to mix with various cast members, including Christopher Reeve, who played Superman.

Promotion Runs Up Against Trademark

SIoux CITY, Iowa (UPI) — Greater Siouxland has run up against Superman.

The city promotion group has been using a bright red-and-yellow slogan "Siouxperland" in a major promotion campaign on billboards, television commercials, buttons and newspaper ads.

However, officials of DC Comics Inc., owner of the Superman trademark, said they are concerned by the apparent similarity and feel the red and yellow coloring and the logo are the exclusive trademarks of Superman.

Both sides are negotiating, officials said.

Warner executives aren't making a prediction of the film's ultimate success — "I'd rather not venture a guess," says one — but it's obvious they have dreams of the "Star Wars" $275 million gross in the U.S. and Canada and its $400 million merchandising record.

Warner's is ready to cash in on the super-hype — in more ways than one. No fewer than six subsidiaries of the huge conglomerate are involved with "Superman" in hopes of coloring that big red "S" green:

—Warner Bros. Inc., which is distributing the film. In addition, the television production unit may produce programs on how the movie was made and the premiere parties.

—DC Comics, which receives 2.5 percent of the film's gross for the use of the "Superman" character and which will distribute 500,000 copies of a $2.50 collector's issue of the 1938 comic book in which Superman first appeared.

—Warner Books Inc., which has nine offerings connected with the film ranging from an original novel to a $7.95 package of blueprints of Superman's secret hideout, "The Fortress of Solitude."

—Warner Bros. Records, which is planning to release a soundtrack album to coincide with the movie's opening.

—Licensing Corp. of America, which will also get 2.5 percent of the film's gross and will also receive royalties from the flood of "Superman" products being rushed onto the market. LCA already has added 40 licensees to the 100 it had before the movie's debut was announced.

—Atari Inc., is planning a Superman pinball game.

"It's certainly the biggest project of this kind that any film company has ever done," said Bob Rolontz, information director for Warner Communications.

Warner executives say the buildup has done its job for the long awaited movie — plans for "Superman" were first announced in May, 1974, at the Cannes Film Festival.

"We've had such phenomenal acceptance of the products without anyone seeing a frame of the picture that when it finally breaks, the business will go wild," said one executive.

Before the movie was released, the pinoffs were selling, Warner's says 1,000 retail stores will set up boutiques to sell Superman products.

In Bloomingdale's, a large, chic New York department store, Christmas shoppers are already browsing through the "Superman-ia" boutique that includes everything from bibs to bath towels, T-shirts to tote bags and "super sizzle" jeans to $50 jogging shorts.

"I don't think Superman would approve of this," groused one shopper looking at the $75 "super shoulder tote" promoted as "super spacey in kryptonite silver and metallic vinyl."

The stock market also is interested in the acceptance of the movie with some analysts touting its chances. "There would appear to be a reasonable possibility of a blockbuster," one said. And most say a failure should not do too much damage to the stock.

"If the movie is a flop, Warner stock should decline a bit, but I don't think there will be panic selling," another expert said.

Flops, even super-flops are not unknown in the movie business, as Warner learned with its own "Exorcist II" and "The Swarm."

But "Superman" overcame a lot of obstacles just to get this far.

Marlon Brando, who was paid $3.7 million for his brief appearance as Superman's real father Jor-El, reportedly originally suggested his character be "a green suitcase," with Brando's voice emanating from it. He then unsuccessfully suggested Jor-El resemble a bagel.

Southern Illinois Town Needs Economic Boost From Movie

By SAMUEL O. HANCOCK
METROPOLIS, ILL. (UPI) — Five years ago, the only Metropolis in the nation — a Southern Illinois community of 7,000 — had its own coming out party for the invincible crime fighter from Krypton. It was loads of fun while it lasted.

The town adopted Superman in a $250,000 promotion only to see its dream of a Disneyland-like Superman Center fade by summer's end.

The opening of the "Amazing World of Superman Exhibition Center" in 1973 brought media representatives from around the world to the community on the banks of the Ohio River. The visitors still come, but at a comparative trickle.

A few months ago, town leaders talked of hosting the world premier of the new feature length movie, "Superman," which premieres this week at theaters around the globe. But that was before a fire in August shut down the Massac Theater.

Guy Lehr, an attorney and owner of the Massac, said he had not had any contact with the movie producers before the fire, but would have been happy to co-operate in showing the film.

"It's exciting to the local people and we hope they do very well," said Lehr.

Clyde Wills, 33, editor and publisher of the weekly Metropolis Planet, has a Clark Kent credit card he calls his own. And he receives Superman mail regularly.

He blames the gasoline shortage of 1973 and a delay in the opening of Interstate 24 at the east edge of town as the main reasons the Superman dream didn't reach its intended heights.

"But I think the movie will be important in getting more visitors here next summer," said Wills, his eyes twinkling behind horn-rimmed glasses.

"We still have people on their way to Florida from the north stop by here to make pictures. And Perry White, a newspaperman from Oklahoma, dropped in several months ago."

Les Easterday, executive secretary of the Massac County Chamber of Commerce, said the Superman premiere is a prospective boost to business and tourism.

"There's no doubt that the effort in 1973 put Metropolis on the map," said Easterday. "And I believe it led to this movie."

Youngsters and adults from around the nation still write to Metropolis to ask about Superman and his home. And if they drop by the chamber, they can see a Superman phone booth.

The chamber still sells a "Superman of Metropolis Award" at $10 a throw and proceeds from the sale — about $4,000 since 1973 — permits the chamber to help spread the hometown of Superman story.

A refurbished picture of Superman adorns the town water tower and a 35-foot form of a flying Superman stretches across a billboard along U.S. 45 at the east edge of town.

Robert Buchanan, owner of the Western Auto store, still sells Superman T-shirts from a stock he bought five years ago and hopes the movie boosts sales.

"It's questionable what the movie will do for us, but I'm hopeful," said Buchanan.

Stars Cause Stir At Conference

CHICAGO (AP) — There were a few tense moments when John Travolta and Lily Tomlin came to town to promote their movie: "Moment by Moment."

The elevator was guarded. Reporters went through three security checks. And then — before Miss Tomlin and Travolta would enter the room — radio and television crews were told to leave.

WLS-TV anchorwoman Terry Murphy demanded a boycott by reporters.

"All they're doing here is hyping their movie, anyway, and I'm talking about freedom of the press," she said.

"In the finest tradition of Chicago journalism, I think everyone here should walk out," agreed Gene Siskel, reviewer for the Chicago Tribune and WBBM-TV.

Even John Iltis, the Chicago public relations man in charge of the news conference, was upset. "Who do they think they are?" he asked.

A Travolta aide took center stage. "Speaking for John Travolta, I'm sorry to say but that is our policy," she said.

About 45 minutes later — after the TV cameras and radio microphones were taken away and the print media reporters decided to stay — Miss Tomlin and Travolta entered.

Miss Murphy demanded to ask a question before she left: Why were the broadcast media excluded?

Miss Tomlin said she and Travolta had not made the decision.

"At a press conference, it's disconcerting to have lights and have questions asked and answered that might be revealing and have it on film," Travolta added.

"Moment by Moment," to be released Dec. 21, is the story of a middle-aged woman, played by Miss Tomlin, who discovers that her husband has been cheating on her. She meets a young man, played by Travolta, and he falls in love with her.

Litter Dots Lawns In California

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Well-planned lawn litter is a rage in this city on beautiful San Francisco Bay. A few well-placed bottles keep dogs — and their droppings — away, some homeowners claim.

Glass or plastic, empty or full, anti-dog bottles dot the manicured lawns of as many as 300 homes here. No one knows how they work, but many are certain they do.

"They keep the dogs from going to the bathroom on the lawn," said Extell Donnelly, who placed four bleach bottles on his property.

"A lady across town phoned my wife about them three or four months ago and they've worked for me," he added.

Donnelly's secret: "It's best to put a little bleach in them and leave the top off so the dogs can smell it," he said.

The phenomenon has attracted academic scrutiny — not by scientists seeking to explain the bottle magic, but by a University of California graduate student of urban design.

"It's the ultimate low-budget approach to the problem (of dog waste) if you can't afford to put up a fence," said Anwyll M. McDonald, who counted 300 bottle-lawn homes in July.

He found uncapped bottles, capped bottles, bottles with holes punched in them, plastic bottles with the tops cut off, bottles hidden in bushes and bottles upside down on sticks.

And in two weeks roaming middle-income neighborhoods of Oakland and Berkeley, McDonald talked to hundreds of people.

He asked the homeowners, whose yards were generally among the neatest in the area, to explain how the bottles work.

"I was just incredulous," he said. "Nobody had any explanation... If you asked them, they just said, 'They work pretty well.'"

People had theories. Some said dogs were scared by plastic bleach bottles. Others said ammonia bottles worked. And still others insisted that only glass gallon jugs would do the trick.

Some residents offered special tricks. McDonald said: some used only bottles filled with window-washing liquid; others said they added ammonia or bleach to offend canine noses.

"In this neighborhood, first one person had them on his lawn, then they appeared all over the place, like toadstools after a rain," said Ted Crum of Berkeley.

At last check, it appeared the bottle rage might be declining. Some people apparently found they didn't do any good.

"Dogs only come around once every two or three weeks anyway, so why bother with the bottles," said a middle-aged man who asked not to be identified. "They look terrible, and I don't think they do any good."

EPA Investigating Pesticide Reports

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency says it is investigating as a "priority item" reports that the pesticide DBCP is turning up on crops of oranges, lemons, peaches and grapes.

A consumer group asked the EPA Tuesday to invoke emergency authority to ban further use of the pesticide on citrus crops. EPA banned use of DBCP on 19 crops last year and is expected to hold hearings on its continued use on other crops early next year.
