Bakhtiar Going To Paris

Iranian Leader To Seek 'Advice' Of Khomeini

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Prime Minister Shahpour Bakhtiar said Saturday he would fly to Paris within 48 hours to meet with Ayatullah Ruhollah Khomeini and "seek advice" from him on Iran's future. It was unclear whether Khomeini would receive Bakhtiar, whose resignation he has been demanding.

Aides to the ayatullah, who led the popular uprising that drove Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi from his kingdom, were jubilant when Bakhtiar's announcement was made. Later they appeared to have divided. Khomeini aides in Paris said no decision on whether to receive Bakhtiar would be made until today.

Special Address

Bakhtiar's surprise announcement came in a special radio address Saturday night, hours after hundreds of thousands of Khomeini supporters marched in the streets demanding that Bakhtiar allow the ayatullah to return.

Bakhtiar said, "As a patriotic Iranian, who considers himself as a small member of the glorious movement and as a person who believes in the leadership of the ayatullah ... I have decided to go to Paris within 48 hours to have the pleasure of meeting him and to seek advice on the future of the country."

Dr. Ibrahim Yazdi, who has relayed most of the ayatullah's statements from Paris to Iran since Khomeini arrived in France from Iraq last Oct. 6, said without qualification that Khomeini would meet with Bakhtiar, and that Khomeini had known in advance Bakhtiar was coming.

"Resignation" Wanted

But Sadegh Ghotbzadeh, another chief aide, later told reporters that "it is evident that Mr. Bakhtiar will be received by the ayatullah Khomeini if he is coming to offer his resignation" as prime minister. Ghotbzadeh said any other motiviation offered by Bakhtiar would be studied with care before Khomeini decided whether to receive him.

Queried on the contradiction, Yazdi said the two aides were expressing "our own understanding" of the developments, and added "it is very natural that two people may reach different conclusions."

Meanwhile, Bakhtiar still refused, at least publicly, to say when he might open Iran's doors to Khomeini. He did say he expected any meeting with Khomeini to last no more than three days.

Abolition Demanded

Khomeini, head of Iran's dominant Shiite Moslem sect and whose title ayatullah means "mark of God," has demanded abolition of Bakhtiar's government and the Iranian monarchy. But there were persistent reports in recent days of negotiations among the key parties in the Iranian crisis — apparently including the army — aimed at forging some kind of agreement on the political course the country will follow.

Bakhtiar said Saturday he has been negotiating with Khomeini on arrangements for his return and other, unspecified matters.

Bakhtiar has rejected Khomeini's demand that he and his Cabinet resign. But at the same time the prime minister has lauded Khomeini as a wise leader with a huge popular following.

Khomeini had originally planned a triumphant return to Iran on Friday but his plans were blocked when the military shut down the country's airports. His aides Saturday still spoke of the possibility of flying to Iran early this week, but Bakhtiar said the return was being delayed indefinitely.

The prime minister, who previously has hinted at military plots against Khomeini, said "agents and enemies" were loose in the country and he could not allow the Moslem religious leader to return from exile in France "without preparations." He also said "technical difficulties" at Tehran's airport were preventing the homecoming.

The 78-year-old Khomeini, in exile for almost 15 years, spearheaded a yearlong campaign of often-violent demonstrations and strikes that drove the shah into an indefinite "vacation" abroad. He contends the three-week-old Bakhtiar government is "illegal" because it was appointed by the shah.

Except for the cities of Abadan, Gargon and Rasht, Saturday's marches were generally peaceful.

Religious sources said seven persons were killed in clashes with security forces in Abadan, a southwestern oil city. The state radio reported one death and several injuries in violence in Gargon and other disturbances in Rasht. Both cities are on the Caspian Sea.

"Death to you, Bakhtiar, if Khomeini is delayed!" marchers shouted in Tehran, where several hundred thousand people took part in a parade and rally at the city's Shahyad arch.

The marches took place on the traditional anniversary of the prophet Mohammed's death.

The shah and Empress Farah, who left Iran Jan. 16, remained secluded Saturday at a royal guest palace in Marrakech, Morocco. A spokesman said the monarch had no immediate plans to leave.

The royal couple's four children arrived there Saturday aboard an Iranian air force jet that picked them up in Lubbock, Tex., where they had been staying for two weeks.

Federal Laws Make Deportations Of Iranian Students Improbable

By KAY BELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

WITH THE THREAT of a violent anti-shah demonstration in Lubbock seemingly over, many law enforcement officials have indicated that even if such a demonstration by Iranian students had erupted there would have been little legal recourse against the foreign students.

"Our hands are tied," one local law officer said. "We can arrest them if they break a state law, but when it come to the federal restrictions, we can't do a thing."

And federal hands, especially in the area of deportation threatened by U.S. Attorney General Griffin Bell earlier this month, also are tied to a large extent.

Two days after a bloody demonstration by about 2,000 Iranian protesters in Beverly Hills, Calif., Bell announced that, "All participants in such violence will be deported to the extent the law permits or requires."

However, present deportation statutes neither permit nor require mass deportations, even of radicals. Only students — the primary leaders of most of the nation's protests against Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi and his family — who overstay their visas, take jobs or are convicted of crimes of "moral turpitude" can be deported.

Since Bell's stern warning to foreign visitors in the United States, only one Iranian protester in Texas has been arrested and threatened with deportation. And some skeptical Justice Department sources have hinted that the Jan. 17 arrest of Hassein Jahanfar in San Antonio may be the last.

While Immigration and Naturalization Service agents say that Jahanfar's alleged participation in the California demonstration would be "an integral part" of deportation proceedings, other Justice Department officials say the strongest claims for ousting Jahanfar from the country are charges his visa expired Dec. 31 and that he did not re-enroll at San Antonio College for the spring semester.

During the California melee, in which Jahanfar is thought to have participated, police were bombarded with rocks and bottles, cars were overturned and burned and brush was set

Teng Arrival Today To Open New Era For U.S., Chinese

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping of the People's Republic of China is due to arrive in Washington today for an eight-day state visit that will mark the beginning of a new era in American relations with China.

Like most state visits, Teng's will be a symbolic representation of an earlier diplomatic decision — the agreement between Washington and Peking to normalize diplomatic relations after 23 years of enmity and seven years of coolness.

The Teng visit, first ever to the United States by a Chinese communist political leader, promises to be one of the most spectacular and widely watched events the world has ever witnessed.

Teng left this morning, Peking time, for the United States, the official Chinese news agency Hsinhua reported. Teng was accompanied by his wife and a 20-member party, the agency said. Teng is scheduled to arrive at Andrews AFB outside Washington at 1 p.m. CST.

Nearly 1,000 reporters and cameramen from around the world have applied for credentials to join the regular White House press corps in covering the visit. Two chartered jets will carry the press behind Teng when he visits Atlanta, Houston and Seattle after his summit at the White House with President Carter.

The issuance of credentials for broad media coverage of the visit is intended by the White House to display Carter as a leading actor on the world stage, one who is capable of rearranging the balance of global forces into an alignment more favorable to the United States.

But according to administration officials, the coverage also is important for Teng. His visits to an automobile factory near Atlanta, airplane factories near Seattle and to the space center in Houston will be telecast back to China. The telecasts will give the Chinese people a look at the kind of modernized, industrial society that Teng envisions for their country by the turn of the century.

The Chinese and American audiences also are likely see some opposition to the policies of Carter and Teng. Several groups, ranging from Maoists to adherents of the Republic of China in Taiwan, have applied for permits to demonstrate during Teng's visit. Security will be tight.

Beyond their symbolic activities, Carter and Teng also have scheduled at least six hours of private conversations to lay the groundwork for Chinese-American cooperation in economic and political matters.

If he sticks to his public pronouncements, Teng is likely to urge Carter to take a harder line against Soviet expansionism, which the Chinese regard as the major danger to world peace.

Murder, Rape Charges Filed

A CAPITAL murder charge was filed Saturday morning against Gary Lynn Vester, 20, in connection with the April 1, 1978, shooting death of Robert Rios Rivera.

Vester, of 601 Quirt Ave., also was charged with aggravated rape in the same incident. He is accused of raping Rivera's 22-year-old female companion after killing Rivera. Justice of the Peace Wayne LeCroy denied bond on the capital murder charge and set a $100,000 bond on the aggravated rape charge.

Rockefeller Death Ends Long Public Career

NEW YORK (AP) — Nelson A. Rockefeller, the dominant member of a family whose name is synonymous with power and wealth, died without attaining the prize he most cherished, the presidency of the United States.

Rockefeller, 70, suffered a heart attack while working on an art book in a private office on West 54th Street in mid-Manhattan, family spokesman Hugh Morrow said Saturday afternoon. Earlier, Morrow had told reporters that Rockefeller died in his office in the RCA Building in Rockefeller Center.

Morrow issued the corrected statement after reporters learned that an ambulance had gone to the West 54th Street address. Morrow said he was told the attack occurred at Rockefeller's office, and that "led to an incorrect assumption by me" that it happened in the Rockefeller Center office.

About five hours earlier, Rockefeller had accompanied his wife and two young sons to hear a lecture by former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, a longtime friend.

At his death, Rockefeller was preparing a book on his personal art collection, worth an estimated $33 million. He was to announce on Saturday plans to open a new retail store to sell reproductions of works he owned.

Rockefeller's body is to be cremated and buried Monday in private services at the Rockefeller family cemetery at the family estate in Westchester County. The family has said a memorial service for family and guests would be held Friday at the Riverside Church on Manhattan's Upper West Side.

Rockefeller, former governor of New York and vice president under Gerald R. Ford, had devoted himself to his art collection after leaving active politics in 1977.

Three times in eight years, he campaigned for a presidential nomination, his failures being ascribed variously to a divorce, a tarnished liberal image and poor timing.

President Carter, citing the circumstances of Rockefeller's ascendancy to the vice presidency in 1974 after the Watergate scandal, praised Rockefeller's "integrity and vigorous optimism."

"He had special concern for the less fortunate, for the arts, for the processes

24 Jet Passengers Freed By Hijacker

NEW YORK (AP) — A woman claiming to have nitroglycerin commandeered a United Airlines jumbo jet with 131 persons aboard Saturday night. The plane landed at Kennedy International Airport and negotiations began, authorities said.

After about 2½ hours of talks with the woman, 24 pasengers — 18 adults and six children — left the plane, a Port Authority official said.

Also FAA spokesman Irwin Goldstein said that an FBI agent was on board the plane, and talking to the woman.

About an hour after the plane landed at the sprawling airport, it was brought to a gate at the United terminal. The hijacker demanded that a telephone line be set up so she could talk directly with United officials, said a spokesman for the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey, which operates the airport.

Al Puttre, the Port Authority police spokesman, said, "She's the only one (hijacker) as far as I know."

The woman was described as about 5-foot-2 and about 40 years old.

Inside the terminal, police blocked off the concourse.

The pilot of the plane reported he had received a note saying nitroglycerin was aboard the plane, officials said.

The note the pilot received also demanded that one of three entertainers read a second note to the news media. The contents of that note, supposedly hidden at Los Angeles International Airport, were not immediately known.

In Los Angeles, FBI spokesman John Morrison said FBI special agent in charge Ted Gunderson had taken Charlton Heston, one of the entertainers named in the pilot's note, to the Los Angeles airport.

Irv Cuevas, regional manager of United public relations in Los Angeles, said company officials were waiting for a telephone call from New York.

By JOHNNY HOLMES
Avalanche-Journal Staff

SEMINOLE — In apparent violation of federal and state laws, Texaco Inc. has pumped more than 940,000 barrels of oil and released into the air excessive amounts of lethal hydrogen sulfide gas through a battery of storage tanks that officially does not exist.

The Wharton Unit Tank Battery, some 8 1/2 miles southwest of here in Gaines County, has leaked hydrogen sulfide, a highly poisonous gas responsible for more than 20 area deaths in the past decade, at least four times since October, according to a Texas Air Control Board spokesman.

On each occasion, the spilled gas was "well in excess of the legal limits set by the Texas Clean Air Act," according to Vic Fair of the TACB.

The board, which must grant a construction permit before such a facility can be built, was not aware the $7 million plant existed until a Gaines County woman filed a formal complaint with the board in October, according to Fair, five months after Texaco crewmen say the battery began operating.

"We didn't know the battery was even there until we received a formal complaint from Mrs. Bill Price of rural Seminole on Oct. 18 concerning a high concentration of hydrogen sulfide in the air," Fair said.

One Seminole city official who contacted by The Avalanche-Journal was both concerned and philosophical.

"Some of these oil companies just do what they want to around here," he said.

Texaco officials contacted by The Avalanche-Journal seemed generally unconcerned about the apparent violations.

Chris Kirsted, a public relations official to whom calls to the Houston office were referred, agreed the Wharton Unit had been built without legal authorization.

"I guess we did go about this out of the logical order," Kirsted said. "Apparently there was an oversight somewhere down the line."

When asked whether such procedure is common, he responded, "I don't think so."

The Environmental Protection Agency, which under law must perform tests on the site before a storage battery can be operated, did not know the Wharton Unit existed until contacted by The A-J.

"Texaco has never contacted us about this facility," said Eddie Lee, a public information specialist in the EPA office in Dallas.

Earlier this month, Texaco applied for a TACB permit to construct a tank battery on the exact site where the Wharton Unit now stands, but none has been granted, according to Les Montgomery, a TACB permits engineer.

Meanwhile, the Wharton Unit, a collection of oil storage tanks, chemical treatment facilities, an oil and gas separation system and a network of underground pipelines linking it to 100 nearby wells, receives and disperses up to 5,500 barrels of oil daily, according to Wharton Unit production foreman Dub Wright.

Two new oil storage tanks, each with a 2,000 barrel capacity, were installed Jan. 18 at the plant, which has been operating since May, according to crewmen at the site.

By failing to notify the EPA and oper-

Snow Hits Vast Area

By United Press International

Another layer of snow draped the Plains from Oklahoma and Arkansas to the Canadian border Saturday and freezing rain extended from the southern Great Lakes into western New York.

Three inches of snow fell on the southern Missouri towns of Springfield, Monett and Vichy. Two inches fell at Springfield, Ill., during a two-hour span and another 4 more inches were predicted. Heavy snow warnings were issued for central Illinois.

"The roads are holding up because there's no wind this time," said Trooper Allen Cooksey of the Illinois state police in Springfield. "But they're all snow-packed and slippery and driving is very hazardous."

Freezing rain that stretched into New York state glazed roads and weighted down trees and powerlines.

Rain-swollen clouds finally moved out of Rhode Island but not until they had dumped nearly 5½ inches during a week-long downpour. A record 11.6 inches has fallen in the state during January, far outdistancing the old record of 9 inches set a year ago.

"We broke that easily ... and the month isn't even over yet," said weather spokesman Frank Kehir. No rain was predicted again until Wednesday.

Chicago residents, already battered with more than 75 inches of snow this winter, faced forecasts of another 1 to 3 inches.

The forecasts were issued as Chicago Transit Authority spokesmen reported the city's crippled mass transit system will not be back to normal for another three weeks — providing no new storms occur.

Nearly 2 inches of rain doused Panama City in northwest Florida during the night. Tallahassee reported more than 1½ inches.

A cold front pushed showers across the Pacific Northwest and the rain turned to snow over the Cascades and northern Rockies. Three inches of snow fell at Stampede Pass in Washington.

VA HOSPTIAL JOBS

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration is being urged to end a hiring freeze that has been in effect at Veterans Administration hospitals across the country. Rep. Ray Roberts, D-Texas, said Saturday that hospitals charged with caring for the health of the country's war veterans are beginning to experience difficulties in getting the job done.

Connally Accentuates Positive

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former Texas Gov. John B. Connally has launched a presidential campaign aimed at maximizing his considerable experience in government and minimizing his considerable liabilities.

Connally became the first of the "heavy hitters" to formally enter the battle for the Republican presidential nomination last week, sounding the theme that he is the man most qualified to be the nation's leader.

And Connally says that even after two years on the job, Jimmy Carter is a leadership lightweight who has no business being there.

Connally does have impressive credentials — 40 years in public life, starting as an aide to Rep. Lyndon B. Johnson and including three terms as governor, secretary of the Navy, treasury secretary, adviser to three presidents.

But Connally carries a long string of liabilities beyond the problems caused by his indictment and acquittal on charges he took bribes from milk producers during the Watergate era.

For instance:

—He is a Democrat turned Republican, a conversion that, no matter how honest, brings automatic rejection from some voters.

—As a conservative he has to share that portion of the GOP vote not only with Ronald Reagan but Rep. Phil Crane and several other potential candidates. Reagan already has much of that vote locked up.

—Connally can't be sure of even the Texas delegation. He will have to fight for it with fellow Texan George Bush, the leading moderate in the race so far, as well as with Reagan who overwhelmed Gerald Ford in the state's 1976 primary.

—Even without the milk indictment, Connally has always had the image of being a fast-talking Texas wheeler-dealer. Others with long memories view him as a Vietnam War era politician.

Connally ignored his liabilities and took the offensive in his announcement speech. He went down the laundry list of national problems and challenges and offered strong, conservative solutions and programs.

Inflation is the nation's biggest problem, he said, and rather than tinkering with the economy, drastic solutions are needed. We ought to cut the federal budget 5 percent across the board — including defense, he said.

He complained a president spends his first four years trying to win a second term. He called instead for a single six-year term that would let the president get things done without worrying about his political future.

Connally is gambling that charisma, long experience and innovative ideas will overcome the memories of voters who associate him with Watergate, Richard Nixon, Vietnam, Lyndon Johnson and backroom deals.

His success may well be an indication of how well another presidential contender, Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., can overcome Chappaquiddick.

Federal Laws Found Violating Fed Law

CHICAGO (AP) — A federal appeals court has ruled that Illinois may not enforce federal water pollution laws because the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency violated federal law when it granted that privilege to the state.

The 7th Circuit Court of Appeals' ruling Friday, in a suit brought by the Citizens for a Better Environment, held that the EPA's guidelines failed to give public organizations access to state enforcement plans.

The court said EPA must strengthen its guidelines and Illinois must resubmit its enforcement plans. Meanwhile, the state water pollution program will remain in effect.

YOUR PERSONAL BIORHYTHMS

By Bernard Gittelson, Author of "Biorhythm: A Personal Science"

The personal science of biorhythm can tell you how your day will go. Now you can judge the highs and lows of not only yourself, but loved ones and friends, and celebrities and stars. Biorhythm, our newest scientific discipline, is the study of the built-in natural cycles that powerfully influence our behavior.

BIORHYTHMS FOR JAN. 28, 1979

PHYSICAL
Criticals: 7, 19, 33, 42, 53, 65 ..... Can be your fault
Highs: 1-6, 20-29, 43-52, 66-75 ..... Good day for exercise
Lows: 8-18, 31-41, 54-64 ..... Dwindling powers

EMOTIONAL
Criticals: 1, 15, 29, 43, 57, 71, 85 ... Probable anxiety
Highs: 16-28, 44-56, 72-84 ..... Temperament high
Lows: 2-14, 30-42, 58-70 ..... Emotionally enervating

INTELLECTUAL
Criticals: 4, 20, 37, 53, 70, 86 ..... Anxiousness may prevail
Highs: 5-19, 38-52, 71-85 ..... Strong mental faculties
Lows: 1-3, 21-36, 54-69, 87-95 ..... Weigh decisions

Enter your own permanent numbers in the chart in the bottom right-hand corner. To figure your own permanent numbers, follow these three steps:

Step 1: From the year chart, find the numbers corresponding to your year of birth. For instance, if you were born in 1947, your number for Physical would be 21, Emotional 17, Intellectual 19. Note whether your numbers are preceded by an A or B; this will be used for Step 2.

Step 2: Now find the corresponding number for the month you were born. If your month is February, and your year numbers were preceded by a B, your month numbers would be 8 for Physical, 3 for Emotional and 31 for Intellectual. Enter your own numbers in the figure chart for Step 2.

Step 3: In the figure chart, enter your day of birth three times, one each for Physical (P), Emotional (E) and Intellectual (I). (If you were born on April 3, for instance, place a 3 in each column.)

Add the three columns to derive your permanent biorhythm numbers for your Physical, Emotional and Intellectual cycles. Now you can refer to today's rhythms.

These numbers are yours permanently. Check them each day for your biorhythm reading.

Police Storm Bank; 25 Hostages Freed

TOKYO (AP) — Fifty police stormed a bank in Osaka shortly after dawn Sunday and freed 25 hostages who had been held more than 40 hours by a gunman demanding $250,000, authorities said. Police said the gunman, who shot and killed two policemen and two bank clerks during the occupation, was critically wounded.

First reports said the remaining hostages were safe. Some were carried out on the backs of police and draped in blankets. A fleet of ambulances pulled up around the bank building, and some of the hostages were placed on stretchers.

The gunman, wearing a white mask and brandishing a double-barreled shotgun, had charged into the bank shortly before closing time Friday, demanding that the money be put in a red knapsack strapped to his back.

Police spokesmen in Osaka said the officers, part of a 500-man force that had surrounded the bank since Friday, made their way into the building through entrances on the first and second floors of the three-story building.

The gunman, identified as 30-year-old Akiyoshi Umekawa, an unemployed resident of Osaka with a criminal record, had permitted police to remove the bodies of the four dead early Sunday as floodlights played on the building.

He had made no new demands since demanding money Friday and had remained mostly uncommunicative, giving no explanation for his action.

Thirteen hostages, three of them wounded, had been set free earlier during the tense siege around the bank in the commercial city 250 miles southwest of Tokyo.

The hostages the gunman kept in the bank were all bank employees, police said.

One of the customers freed earlier told police the gunman was polite to the customers but showed hostility toward the employees.

ITINERARY

COLOGNE

After DAY 1 of travel from Lubbock you'll be welcomed and assisted upon arrival. On DAY 2, transfer to your hotel for check-in and registration. Balance of the day is to rest up and to acquaint yourself with the hotel and the city of Cologne.

DAY 3 — Today we have a morning city sightseeing tour of Cologne which includes the Roman ruins, the Town Hall, the Guerzenich — a medieval meeting hall, the ultramodern Opera House, the priceless Dionysus Mosaic, and a famous visit to the famous gothic cathedral.

RHINE CRUISE

DAY 4 — Transfer to the pier and board a gleaming white Rhine Steamer. Cruise on the most scenic and legendary part of the Rhine; past famous vineyards, quaint wine towns, towering castles and the famed Loreley Rock. Disembark in St. Goarshausen. A motor coach will drive you to your hotel in Luxembourg via Trier.

LUXEMBOURG

DAY 5 — Morning city sightseeing of Luxembourg will include the Citadel, the Promenade De La Corniche and if open, parts of the 16 mile tunnels and casements connecting the 53 forts. Leave Luxembourg and drive to Bastogne where the big battle took place after Christmas, 1944. Continue to Brussels and your hotel.

BRUSSELS

DAY 6 — Brussels, capital of Belgium and headquarters of the European Common Market, its modern buildings punctuate the skyline, smart shops and elegant restaurants line the streets. Tour includes the Grand Place, the Clock Tower on the Palais de la Dynastie; and the notorious Mannekin Pis Fountain. Your route today will show you the famed attractions that have made this part of Europe so magnificent. Your accommodations await you as you arrive in Amsterdam.

DAY 7 — Amsterdam: Morning city sightseeing tour of Amsterdam, will include the Rembrandt House, where the great artist lived; Queen's Palace, The Stock Exchange and the famous Rijksmuseum, with its outstanding collection of Dutch and Flemish art. En route you will have ample opportunity to glimpse Amsterdam's unique canals, and street life.

LONDON

DAY 8 — London: upon arrival you will be met and transferred to your hotel. Balance of the day free to acquaint yourself with the city.

DAY 9 — Sightseeing tour of the city includes the West End of London, a view of Oxford Street, Piccadilly Circus, St James' Palace, Buckinham Palace and the changing of the Guard, a visit to Westminister Abbey, Knightsbridge, Kensington, the Houses of Parliament and Regent Street. Afternoon set aside for shopping. Evening free.

DAY 10 — Transfer to air port in time for departure to Athens.

ATHENS

DAY 11 — Athens: sightseeing tour of Athens includes the Acropolis, site of the Parthenon, Erectheum and Propylaea ruins; the Agora, recently excavated market place; a reconstruction of the Olympic Stadium; the Temple of Zeus; and the Archaeological Museum.

DAY 12 — Cruise: Morning transfer from the hotel to Piraeus Pier in time to board your cruise ship the MS Atlantis.

GREEK ISLES CRUISE

SPRING FLING CRUISE SCHEDULE: on the MS "ATLANTIS"

DAYS 13/14/15 — During your four day cruise you will visit the following ports: Mykonos-Ephesus-Potmos-Rhodes-Heraklion and Santorini.

MYKONOS:
Called the "Capri of the Aegean", this island has more than 350 small chapels built within its hilly, rocky 29 square miles. Greek music and handcrafts abound in this world-known international resort. Visit its beautiful beaches, see its churches, windmills, and village of houses along narrow, winding paths. A "Must" isle to visit.

EPHESUS:
Site of the great Temple of Artemis (Diana) one of the 7 Wonders of the World. See the mile-long Marmorean and the Arcadian Way, paved in marble. Visit the theater, the agora, and the baths. Also, the Cathedral of St. John, Temple of Serapis, and many new excavations.

PATMOS:
An island of extraordinary natural beauty, rich in its Christian tradition and Biblical history, Patmos has a hilltop monastery overlooking a landscape of superb scenery. It was here that St. John the Evangelist wrote the mighty Apocalypse while in exile.

RHODES:
Where the huge Colossus of Rhodes, one of the 7 Wonders of the World, once stood astride the harbor entrance. Just 10 miles from the Asia Minor coast. Rhodes has all nature's most lavish blessings in its scenic splendor.

HERAKLION:
The capital of Crete, largest of the Greek Isles, Heraklion is Crete's largest seaport. A short tour takes you through unspoiled Old World countryside to Knossos, capital of the 4000 year-old Minoan civilization, oldest in all Europe.

SANTORINI:
An island of exquisite natural beauty, Santorini is the crescent-shaped rim of an ancient volcano. Legendary site of Atlantis, lost kingdom beneath the sea. Ride muleback up a zigzag path carved out of cliff rock 1200 fee above the ocean.

DAY 16 — Returning to Athens early in the morning from the cruise. This day has been set aside for last minute shopping, recuperating or sightseeing on your own.

DAY 17 — Filled with fond memories we depart in the morning for the airport to board your jet flight back to the U.S.A.

Study Links Mexican Oil, Gas Futures

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mexico likely will be forced to reduce its oil production unless it can sell the natural gas with which its vast oil reserves are mixed, a Library of Congress study concludes.

Two key senators said the study underscores their belief that the Energy Department made a serious mistake in refusing to buy Mexican natural gas at world market prices.

Since that decision Mexico has stated it no longer intends to export its natural gas reserves but will instead create a distribution network to consume the gas domestically.

The Library's Congressional Research Service said that since Mexico's conservation policies preclude burning off excess gas, it is likely that oil production goals will have to be reduced.

"The gas is unavoidably produced in association with the production of oil," the report said. "If Mexico does not export gas, cannot use all of it domestically and refuses to waste it, then projected oil production will have to be reduced."

"It is a mistake for the Department of Energy to take a hardline position at this time on Mexican natural gas," said Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass.

He said he believes the United States must maximize the availability of natural gas as the 1985 U.S. deadline approaches for decontrolling domestic natural gas prices. Otherwise U.S. consumers will have little chance of seeing those prices rolled back in a free market, he said.

The study concludes that Mexico's vast new oil reserves should be highly desirable to the United States because they are close to American refineries and are far more secure than present sources of U.S. oil in the Middle East and elsewhere. Most of that oil is in the hands of the member nations of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

"Even if Mexico sold not one drop of that oil to the United States, it is clearly in our interest to augment world supplies from non-OPEC sources and to shift the world's reliance away from the Middle East," Kennedy said.

Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said the United States must take no steps to prevent Mexican oil from flowing north.

"Mexican oil and gas can help to forestall the day of energy reckoning for which we must prepare" Church said. "With proper planning, oil and gas purchased from Mexico can replace OPEC crude oil.

The report said Mexico's proven petroleum reserves total 57 billion barrels and Mexican officials believe their nation's overall petroleum potential is about 120 billion to 200 billion barrels.

It said Mexico seems intent on achieving greater independence from the United States through diversifying its oil exports.

Mexico is now seeking new markets in Bulgaria, Greece, Turkey, Yugoslavia and Romania and has signed export contracts with Japan and France.

Witnesses Set To Complete Murder Case

WASHINGTON (AP) — For six days, American-born Chilean secret agent Michael Vernon Townley testified on how he was sent to the United States for the purpose of "eliminating, killing, assassinating" Chilean dissident Orlando Letelier.

An electronics expert who worked in the midnight darkness to plant a bomb under Letelier's car, Townley was the star prosecution witness in the trial of three-anti Castro Cubans charged with roles in the 1976 killing.

Now prosecutors face the next step: corroborating his testimony.

the U.S. District Court trial. None of the corroborating witnesses will know as much about the crime as Townley. But they may be needed to convince the seven-woman, five-man jury that Townley was telling the truth.

"Mr. Townley isn't the person you want to sit next to at a Sunday worship service," noted U.S. District Judge Barrington D. Parker in the courtroom on Jan. 18 with the jury out of hearing.

Townley admits he agreed to testify only after the government offered him a deal. In return for his cooperation and a plea of guilty to planting the bomb, Townley received a 40-month to 10-year sentence. A murder conviction could have brought life imprisonment.

The government also agreed to recommend parole at the minimum time and to protect Townley's family while they are in the United States.

Jurors also heard Townley say he has no regrets about planting the bomb that exploded under Letelier's car on Sept. 21, 1976, while the former Chilean ambassador was rounding Sheridan Circle on Washington's Embassy Row. A Letelier co-worker, Ronni Moffitt, also died in the explosion.

"He was a soldier. I was a soldier. He was carrying on a battle against the government of Chile," the secret agent said.

Townley worked for DINA, the Chilean secret police agency that was part of the Chilean military regime Letelier opposed. He had been ambassador to the United States in the elected government that the military overthrew.

Defense attorneys for defendants Guillermo Novo Sampol, his brother Ignacio and Alvin Ross Diaz tried to destroy Townley's credibility during cross-examination.

They picked at inconsistencies in Townley's statements to U.S. government attorneys, the FBI and Chilean investigators. They got him to admit he knew little about the man he killed. Townley said he was only carrying out an order "to the best of my ability."

"You tell me one thing Alvin Ross Diaz did to help you kill Orlando Letelier," defense attorney Lawrence Dubin demanded last Wednesday.

"Mr. Ross did nothing directly ... to help me kill Orlando Letelier," Townley responded.

Defense attorneys hope the jury will remember answers like that, at least until they can start presenting their side of the case in about a week.

Laredo Policeman Suspended Over Charges

LAREDO (AP) — Police Chief Victor Garcia has suspended without pay the No. 2 man in his department pending disposition of obstruction of justice charges filed against the officer.

Capt. Jose Campos Davila, a 35-year veteran of the force, is accused of being the middle man in an alleged attempt to bribe another officer to change sworn testimony.

Davila has 10 days to appeal the suspension, ordered by Garcia Friday night.Davila, an Austin-area attorney and a private investigator were arrested byh federal Drug Enforcement Administration agents Tuesday night at a Laredo motel.

Officers seized $14,800 in cash and a small amount of marijuana in the Tuesday raid. Also arrested and charged with obstruction of justice were attorney Robert J. Kuhn of Del Valle, Texas, and private investigator Doyle Darwin Huckabee of Austin. Bond was set at $30,000 for all three men.

A former Webb County sheriff's deputy, Florenzio Rendon, said he was offered a bribe to retract testimony concerning fingerprints that helped convict a man accused in a Laredo drug case.

Rendon, now head of the Nueces County Major Crime Task Force, told authorities that Kuhn, the defendant's attorney, and Huckabee both offered him money to retract his testimony.

A DEA agent said Davila arranged the meeting between Rendon and the two other men, reportedly for half of the payoff, which was estimated at $15,000.

CLAMPDOWN VOWED

WASHINGTON (AP) — District of Columbia authorities are vowing that a crackdown on illegally parked cars in the nation's capital is for real. Douglas Schneider, the city's transportation director, says authorities plan to place immobilizing clamps — or boots — on some 30,000 cars owned by parking violators in the coming months.

Clements Tends To Neighbor

By BILL KIDD
A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — For a man who was tagged as someone "not running for governor of Mexico," Bill Clements sure is paying lots of attention to Texas' neighbor to the south.

Analysis

And rightfully so.

Clements was struck — unfairly, his aides say, due to a statement taken out of context — with that above-quoted remark, which, it was insisted during the campaign, didn't reflect any lack of interest in Mexico.

For Clements to emphasize his feelings about Mexico, it would be hard to come up with anything much more obvious, or dramatic, than his announcement after only hours in office that he'd be going to Mexico City to meet with President Lopez Portillo one week after his swearing-in.

Clements' trip is interesting from several viewpoints.

As he noted, in announcing the journey, Texas and Mexico share common problems as well as a common border.

Illegal aliens, drug trafficking and energy matters were among the matters for the two leaders to discuss — with Mexico's oil and gas reserves coming in for particular attention.

Clements, although he's a governor, can't conclude any treaties; that's one of the things the federal government has pre-empted, along with other matters.

So the Mexico City discussion was on the level of two elected officials talking about mutual concerns — not a summit conference to produce an agreement.

But the meeting will allow efforts on those concerns to go forward through official channels, having had a bit of a push from the state level.

The trip also may be a form of notice being served on the Legislature and Jimmy Carter that Bill Clements intends to come on strong — and won't hesitate in pushing for his programs.

In his "State of the State" address to lawmakers, Clements promised he wouldn't step on their toes — but also made it clear he won't have his stepped on either, if he can avoid it.

President Carter, who will be meeting with President Portillo next month, has already been put on notice that he has no friend in Bill Clements — and the thought of possibly upstaging Carter a bit might tickle the new governor's fancy.

That notion may have occurred to some members of the Mexican-American Caucus (which has now split into House and Senate branches), as there was some grumbling about Clements' trip from their quarter.

Clements called in members of that group and various South Texas leaders for a closed door session before his flight, to get suggestions and comments.

Several caucus members indicted reservations about the whole affair, although Clements did get some commendations for his interest.

Some measure of the lukewarm reception there may be due to a suspicion by politicians that Clements isn't really sincere in his apparent interest.

Some measure undoubtedly is due to the fact that their interests and Clements' interests, from a political standpoint, don't coincide.

They fear — and given the performance of past Legislatures, rightly so — that if programs are cut and services reduced, it will be their constituencies which feel it first.

Moreover, part of the reason for the division of the Mexican-American Caucus has been indicated as being desire to gain more visibility and to prepare for the inevitable battle over legislative and congressional redistricting which will come in 1981.

The last redistricting fight saw increased minority representation in the Legislature, and minority groups (including Republicans) hope to see that repeated after the 1980 census, but there seems to be a fear that Clements might somehow attempt to minimize those gains.

Then, too, many of those caucus members had hoped, and expected, that John Hill would be in the Mansion that's now home to Clements — and it's still too near Nov. 7 for those wounds to have healed.

But Clements has been holding out olive branches of various sorts, and selecating aides such as G. G. Garcia of Harlingen, to help show that he's the governor for all Texans — and going to Mexico may be the first way he shows that.

Ham Radio Class Offered By Club

Persons interested in learning how to be a ham radio operator can join novice classes now being offered by the Lubbock Amateur Radio Club.

Getting a ham radio license requires passing an FCC examination on electronics theory and Morse Code, and members of the club say they are willing to help beginners prepare for getting a license.

Once an amateur radio operator has a license, he or she can speak to other radio operators throughout the world.

Operators often compete among themselves for the greatest number of states, counties and countries they can contact by radio. Japan or New Zealand contacts are so common that many American ham radio operators have established regular schedules with these and other countries.

Those interested in more information about becoming a ham radio operator or joining the Lubbock Amateur Radio Club can contact Chuck Halcomb at 744-3229.

AFL-CIO Official Named In Voting

AUSTIN (AP) — Joe Gunn, who recently resigned from the Texas Employment Commission, was elected Saturday as secretary-treasurer of the Texas AFL-CIO.

Gunn, 47, a member of the Communication Workers of America from Madisonville, won the election by the state executive board, 23-13, over Andy Anderson, Ironworkers Local 84, Houston.

Gunn will succeed Sherman Fricks, who resigned as secretary-treasurer after being elected business manager of Pipefitters Local 211 in Houston. Fricks was elected to the state job in July 1973.

Harry Hubbard is president of the Texas AFL-CIO.

Budget Plan Rated Imprecise As Economic Map

NEW YORK (AP) — Trying to budget expenses on a month-by-month basis can be difficult enough. An emergency trip to the dentist or a failure of the car's transmission can send a balanced budget into the red.

That is worth remembering when one considers the budget plan laid out by President Carter this past week. The budget calls for spending $532 billion in the fiscal 1980 year, which doesn't begin for nine months.

The game plan also calls for reducing this year's $37.4 billion deficit to $29 billion.

As a direction for government, the budget Carter called "lean and austere" drew generally favorable comments from businessmen and some criticism from others who were concerned that cuts will hurt the poor and the jobless.

But a precise economic roadmap it is not, simply because a lot can happen between now and next October when the new budget year begins.

There has already been a marked change in the emphasis of President Carter who declared, in his economic message to Congress a year ago, that "we cannot be content when six and a half million people actively seeking jobs cannot find work..."

And later in that same message, Carter declared that "recent experience has demonstrated that the inflation we have inherited from the past cannot be cured by policies that slow growth and keep unemployment high."

There are now about five and a half million actively seeking jobs who can not find them, which is a significant improvement from a year ago but still almost 6 percent of the work force.

The government's new direction deliberately pursues a policy of trying to slow economic growth in order to restrain inflation. Carter forecasts that the economy will grow at a rate of less than 2.5 percent this year, down from 4 percent last year, and concedes that will cause unemployment to increase.

The dramatic turnaround was caused by inflation, which was running around 6 percent a year ago. But it rapidly moved up to double-digit levels and finished the year at around 9 percent, its highest level in four years.

Judging by this year's results, there is reason to believe the budget proposed by Carter may not bear a close resemblance to the one finally passed by Congress and that the deficit figure could change by billions of dollars.

In January of 1978, Carter's budget proposal called for $503 billion in spending for the current fiscal year and a $60 billion deficit, including about $25 billion in tax cuts that were supposed to be effective in 1979 to help stimulate the economy.

As things turned out, the Congress passed a $493 billion budget with a $37.4 billion deficit and an $18.7 billion tax break that didn't take effect until this year.

Although it is early yet, Carter's new budget proposal for fiscal 1980 is already coming in for some criticism based on his economic assumptions about the future course of the economy.

Alice M. Rivlin, director of the Congressional Budget Office, and G. William Miller, chairman of the Federal Reserve, both said they thought the administration's projections were a bit optimistic.

Mrs. Rivlin estimates that the inflation rate will be closer to 8 percent than the 7.4 percent rate predicted by the administration, that unemployment will rise to 6.7 percent instead of the 6.2 percent foreseen by the administration, and that the budget deficit will reach $41 billion instead of $29 billion in the new budget year.

In a news conference late in the week, Carter defended his administration's projections as accurate. He said the economy appears to be vigorous now, that the dollar is stable on world currency markets, and predicted "there will be good results from the anti-inflation effort."

In other business developments this past week:

—Adverse weather and continued meat shortages pushed food prices up again December and helped post another increase in the consumer price index. The Labor Department said the consumer price index for the month rose .6 percent from November, or at an annual rate of 7.2 percent. Government economists said the rate would have been higher, about 9.6 percent, without the effects of California's Proposition 13 property tax cut which lowered the average housing costs portion of the index.

Consumer prices for the year rose 9 percent from the previous December.

—L&M, Lark and Chesterfield cigarettes may no longer be made by Liggett Group Inc., the nation's sixth largest cigarette producer. The Durham, N.C., company said it has reached an agreement in principle to sell its U.S. cigarette operations to C&O Development Company, a Kenly, N.C., shipping company.

Liggett sold its foreign cigarette business last year to Philip Morris Inc. and has been diversifying in recent years into wines, liquors and foods.

—Exxon Corp., the world's largest oil company reported a 49 percent profit increase in the fourth quarter, due entirely to foreign operations, and reports from some other oil companies showed large profit gains. Texaco said its fourth quarter earnings climbed 72 percent.

—American Express Company's bid to acquire McGraw-Hill, one of the world's largest publishing houses, took some more twists and turns this past week as one of the most widely watched merger fights.

'Vagueness' Of Civil Service Act Cited

By KAY BELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A suit filed by two Lubbock police officers against the city's Firemen's and Policemen's Civil Service Commission points out some of the "vagueness" in the act which created the controversial system, leaving it "wide open" for "a multitude of abuses," according to Texas Municipal League Director Dick Brown.

In a telephone interview from his Austin office, Brown claimed that the 1948 Texas Firemen and Policemen Civil Service Act, under which the commission operates, is creating as many, if not more, problems than it was designed to solve. To support his contention, Brown cited numerous investigations and court challenges recently prompted by provisions of the act.

The Lubbock suit, Brown said, is a prime example of just one of the problems of the 30-year law, which was designed to keep police and firemen out of the realm of politics.

In November 1978, officers James H. Taylor and Ralph R. Bowen Jr., filed suit in Judge John R. McFall's 237th District Court alleging that the city commission illegally deprived them of seniority points in a promotional examination.

Their suit was prompted by the commission's decision earlier that month to credit police department seniority only on the basis of uninterrupted service.

Both men had been eligible for promotion to the rank of corporal following an Oct. 19 civil service examination, which in part was scored by the amount of time each applicant had served on the force.

However, the validity of the test scores was challenged by officer Roy Green, who argued that the two men had served interrupted tenures with the force and should have been awarded only the seniority points for their service immediately preceeding the examination.

Both Taylor and Bowen were re-employed by the department on Oct. 3, 1977. Taylor earlier had served from May 1, 1968, until Oct. 25, 1974. Bowen had been a city patrolman from Jan. 2, 1972, through Aug. 2, 1974.

The commission sustained Green's appeal, and subtracted the earlier service points from Taylor's and Bowen's final scores, after the three-member panel did not receive a clarification of the intent of the 1977 statute governing this situation by state attorney general.

"Some fairly recent (amendments) are not clear," city Personnel Director Tom Witt said. "Some local civil service commission is going to have to go out on a limb and make a decision (about these unclear sections) before anything can be settled."

But last month, a district court in Wichita Falls did "go out on a limb" in its ruling on a case there which is almost identical to the Lubbock situation.

A Wichita Falls district judge ruled that the 1977 amendment entitled officers to all their seniority points, regardless of whether their service was continuous.

"Some of the lower ranking officers did not appreciate that other officers got more seniority points on a promotional exam when they had not been with the force for a continuous period," Kyle Morrison, Wichita Falls Assistant City Attorney explained.

"The case first went to the civil service commission and then was appealed to the district court. The judge did determine that under the facts of the case, the rule as amended in 1977 meant that officers should be awarded their total service time," Morrison said.

"Basically, it sounds as if (the Lubbock Police Department) is facing the same situation as we did," he added. "But I don't know if this case will have any bearing on the Lubbock case."

If the case here progresses as did the Wichita Falls one, even more problems could arise.

Even without the total points, Bowen's score still was high enough to mandate his promotion to corporal. But Taylor, who lost points for more than five years, was dropped from the promotion list following the commission decision.

If the court reverses that finding, police officials said, Taylor would be promoted to corporal, with retroactive pay at that rank, and the other officer who made corporal would once again be dropped back to his original rank of patrolman.

And Brown adds that the seniority system confusion the Lubbock case could create is not the only problem with the procedure. The service point system also "inherently inhibits initiative," he said. "A young officer doesn't have a chance to advance."

Some local police officers also have voiced this opinion, saying that they almost automatically are eliminated from a step up in rank if several other candidates have served more time on the force.

Under current procedures, an officer or fireman hoping to advance must take a civil service examination. Scoring of the test is calculated by adding the candidate's raw score from the test plus seniority points.

Applicants earn one seniority point for each year of service up to a maximum total of 10 points. Even if an officer with two years experience makes the same raw score on the exam as an officer with 10 or more years on the force, the man with the least experience automatically falls behind eight points.

But most members of the Lubbock Police Department argue that experience should be just as important in considering an officer's advancement.

"There are just some things that no amount of studying in a book will replace," Bill Morgan, public information officer for the department, said. "Experience traditionally pays off in every situation."

But sometimes that waiting for experience prompts members of a police or fire department to quit, or, as in Fort Worth, to try to "speed up" their seniority level by paying older members to retire early or take a demotion in rank, creating openings for promotions.

In late December, the Fort Worth city manager's office was instructed by the City Council there to investigate reports that fire fighters have been paying money to other higher-ranking officers to encourage them to leave their rank.

Firemen who choose to quit can begin collecting retirement, or if they opt for voluntary demotion, they still are eligible for the retirement benefits of the higher rank they forfeited, according to the civil service law.

Brown said that while the Fort Worth case is an extreme one, it points out the possibilities for abuse of the civil service act. And the Texas Municipal League (TML), he said, is continuing its effort to eliminate some of those abuses.

"There are so many things wrong with that law," Brown said. "But we just have to take it one step at a time.

"Right now we (TML lobbyists) hope to present legislation (to the Texas Congress) withing the next couple of weeks to allow a (fire or police) chief to appoint his immediate assistants.

"The way the system works now, the chief doesn't have a management team and we think that is a very inefficient way to run a city department. He is at the mercy of the system."

While city officials here admit that there are some problems in the civil service system, they say it has worked very efficiently in Lubbock, whose voters adopted the optional system shortly after it was enacted in 1948.

"There are some things about the police and firemen civil service system that don't particularly work to the advantage of anyone," Witt said. "But I don't know what we would replace it with. It seems like it would have to be something pretty formidable."

Organized Crime Fighter Named
New GSA Inspector General

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter has chosen organized crime fighter Kurt Muellenberg to be inspector general at the scandal-ridden General Services Administration, government sources said Saturday.,

The choice came as senior GSA officials and congressmen criticized Carter for taking too long to pick an inspector general to head the government's year-long investigation at the troubled purchasing agency.

The sources said the nomination of Muellenberg, head of the Justice Department's organized crime task force, will be sent to the Senate for confirmation after a White House announcement early next week.

Muellenberg was chosen over Martin Danziger, a United Mine Workers official who used to work for the Justice Department, and Erwin Borowski, GSA counsel and former Securities and Exchange Commission attorney.

Sources said Carter's choice for the post has a solid background in uncovering corruption, the main task of the newly created position of inspector general at the government's main purchasing agency.

Of the three final choices, Muellenberg was the only one not recommended by GSA Administrator Jay Solomon, who will be leaving office within the next six months.

200 Vietnamese Celebrate Traditional New Year In Lubbock

By RUTHANNE BROCKWAY
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Close to 200 Vietnamese met in Lubbock Saturday night to celebrate the Vietnamese New Year with the traditional altar, wine, flowers, incense and prayers.

In a room at the Wesley Foundation decorated with both the American and South Vietnamese flags, the group celebrated the Year of the Goat, which officially begins today.

But noticeably lacking in the room were members of the older generation. Most faces were young and unwrinkled by worries.

The older generation — an important part of the Vietnamese family — is for the most part still in South Vietnam.

"My parents were determined to stay, " said Dr. The Van Nguyen, president of the Lubbock Vietnamese Mutual Association and a physician in Hale Center. "They love the land."

For those who left South Vietnam to begin a new life in the United States, the Vietnamese New Year is a time to blend old traditions with new realities.

Most of the people in the room have been in the United States since April 1975, when their homeland was taken over by North Vietnam.

But even with new styles of clothing, traditional culture remains a strong part of the celebration.

"Even though we are far away from our country, our minds and hearts are in our country, " said Quyen Nguyen, publicity officer for the Vietnamese association.

Although Miss Nguyen, who helped emcee the program, smiled most of the evening she also had a somber side. "We can't be totally happy as long as some people are in jail or living under Communist rule, " she said.

For many who went to the altar Saturday night for a traditional silent prayer of peace, good health and good luck, there also was a moment of prayer for the success of more "boat people" leaving South Vietnam.

South Vietnamese refugees, trying to flee to nearby countries, have been stranded in fishing boats, waiting for permission to emigrate.

"We all ask you to support and have a friendly attitude to the boat people in Southeast Asia who are living under less than basic conditions of existence but with strong hope," Dr. Nguyen said.

He explained that because the sea is very rough during this time of the year, there have been few attempts lately by South Vietnamese residents to escape via fishing boats.

"But after March the sea is calm," he added, saying that he expects many will plan their escapes then. "Our eyes and bodies cry while watching the boat people living in Malaysia. The picture of a Vietnamese elderly man dying helplessly but peacefully (after a boat capsized) and pictures of women and children crawling out the waves to a foreign but free land may tell you enough about the courage and determination of the Vietnamese seeking freedom."

The closest destination for the boat people is Malaysia. For those who make it to the United States there is a chance of employment, but not always in the field for which they were trained.

Dr. Nguyen considers himself fortunate. He arrived in the United States in 1975, spent a while in a refugee camp in Arkansas and was sponsored by a farming family in Abernathy to come to this area. Since April 1976, he had been associated with a hospital in Hale Center where he is in family practice, the same profession he had in Vietnam.

"There is only about 5 percent unemployment for our people here, " he said. "And that's a good ratio really."

He estimated that 90 percent of the Vietnamese in the Lubbock area have been here only since 1975.

"After three years they are very well settled, most have houses and fairly good jobs. They are happy, " he said.

Hefty Losses To Thieves, Burglars Reported

Numerous Lubbockites Saturday reported hefty losses to burglars and thieves.

Irene S. Wilson, director of the Methodist School of Nursing at 2002 Main St., said that between Dec. 22 and Wednesday, intruders made off with $2,000 worth of silverware. She told police there was no sign of forced entry to the building.

Burglars ransacked Charles M. Putman's 3222 Duke St. residence before taking clothing, a 16-gauge shotgun, a 12-gauge shotgun and a .22-caliber rifle. Putman said he discovered his front door unlocked when he returned home at 12:45 a.m. Saturday. He set his loss at $1,500.

A $150 television and $900 worth of jewelry was taken by burglars who entered Blas Mojica's 2314 Baylor St. home between 7 a.m. and 5 p.m. Friday through a bedroom window.

W.C. White said $1,000 in tools were stolen from the bed of his pickup truck Friday night. White said the vehicle was parked outside his 4822 36th St. home at the time of the theft.

James Edward Clay of 227 Indiana Ave., No. C215, said a $100 television, $300 in tools, $350 worth of stereo equipment and record albums valued at $50 were among the items stolen from his residence Friday night.

Bobby L. Moseley, owner of World Wide Stereo at 2008 34th St., reported that a $275 reel-to-reel tape recorder and a $225 cassette tape deck were taken by burglars who broke the front glass of that business about 10 p.m. Friday. He said it would cost him another $300 to replace the window.

Jim Dale Wilson, assistant manager of College Inn at 1001 University Avenue, said $500 in meat was stolen from a freezer in the cafeteria of the residence hall Friday night.

Raymond Lemons said a kitchen window was the point of entry at his 2417 E. 29th St. residence for burglars who made off with two stereo speakers, a .32-caliber pistol and a .22-caliber rifle.

Intruders broke a window at the Burger Barn, 3210 Ave. H, Friday night and got away with appliances and food, according to owner Shannon C. Hughes. Hughes said the total loss, including replacement of the window, would be $250.

Dennis Williams said burglars pried the back door of his 4207 40th St. home Friday and took two televisions, together worth $300, and a $55 suitcase containing cosmetics.

Julia Delgado told officers that her purse, containing $40 cash and two checks totaling $155, was taken from her 1306 24th St. home early Friday.

Charles A. Ross Jr. said that when he arrived about 7:45 a.m. Saturday at the Jackson Delinting Plant, North University Avenue and Erskine Street, where he is manager he discovered three door panels kicked out and all of the firm's machinery running. He said it would cost about $400 to replace the doors.

Pope Urges Priests Against Radicalism

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II, hailed by as many as 5 million Mexicans in a triumphant ride through the city, inaugurated a bishop's conference Saturday and later cautioned priests against becoming political or social leaders.

At the inaugural, he said the Roman Catholic Church is "looking for the ways" to fulfill more zealously its mission in Latin America. He warned against "contradictory" and "not always correct" interpretations of church policies.

The pope's address dampened expectations for a clear call to the clergy for an activist role in solving South America's political and social woes.

After his address, in a meeting with hundreds of Mexican priests and members of religious orders, the pope took a stronger stand, recalling his statement of last November advising priests "not to give in to socio-political radicalisms which in the long run become inopportune, counterproductive."

The pope told the priests and others, "You are spiritual guides who try to orient and improve the hearts of the faithful. You are not social leaders, political leaders or employees of temporal power."

He said it was up to laymen to improve temporal matters, using a Christian approach.

People clustered in the hundreds on roofs and hung from lamposts. Many carried binoculars and old opera glasses to get a glimpse of the first pope to visit Mexico. They pelted him with confetti, rose petals and flowers as his open car twisted through the crowds on its way the shrine.

The pope spoke at Mexico's national shrine, the basilica of the Virgin of Guadalupe, after a hours-long motorcade through the city. He spoke to a crowd of 200,000 assembled in and around the shrine for the opening of the conference.

The pope aligned the Roman Catholic Church on the side of the poor by "encouraging integral liberation of individuals and peoples."

The church's role in helping relieve major social and political problems in Latin America has been a hotly debated topic among churchmen and is expected to be a central issue at the conference.

Vatican prelates said the pope may speak more specifically today when he adresses the bishops at the conference site in Puebla, 75 miles south of Mexico City.

The pontiff noted that more than 10 years have passed since the last Latin American bishops' conference.

"And interpretations have been given that have at times been contradictory, not always correct and not always beneficial to the church," he said.

He said the church "is therefore looking for the ways that will enable her to understand more deeply and fulfill more zealously the mission she has been given by Christ Jesus."

The 250 white-robed bishops attending the conference, preceeded by acolytes carrying candles, concelebrated a two-hour Mass with the pontiff.

Police estimated that at least 5 million cheering, waving, joyous Mexicans turned out to watch the pope's motorcade inch through the heart of Mexico City to the shrine.

At one point, John Paul stopped the motorcade, stepped down from his open vehicle and mingled with the multitude, touching hands, blessing babies and acknowledging the roar of the adoring crowds.

Throng Surges

Security men were hard-pressed to hold back the throng during the several minutes the pope stood on the broad Insurgentes Avenue.

"It is the largest accumulation of people I have seen in my life," said Capt. Enrique Ortega, a policeman working for the Red Cross.

The basilica, a shrine to Mexico's patron saint, stands on the site where legend says an Indian peasant saw three visions of the Virgin Mary in 1521.

About 400 million persons were estimated to be watching the ceremony in the modernistic new shrine by televion hookup.

The crowds far exceeded the estimated one million that roared a massive welcome to John Paul when he arrived Friday for his five-day visit.

Receives 800 Polish

Before beginning the crosstown trip, the Polish-born pope received 800 members of the city's Polish community at a church residence.

Some churchmen predict the bishops' gathering may be as rocky as the earthquakes that hit Mexico just before the pope's arrival.

"Those earthquakes may not have been as much a divine welcome of the pope's first visit to Mexico as they were a presage of the problems he faces at the conference in Puebla," one prelate said Friday as the pontiff celebrated Mass in Mexico City's Metropolitan Cathedral.

Texaco Tank Unit Target Of Gaines Gas Leak Probe

ating without the TACB construction permit, the Texaco tank battery is in apparent violation of two EPA regulations and a TACB regulation requiring the unit to be checked and tested by the two offices before construction and operation legally can take place, according to officials in the EPA and TACB offices.

The first EPA rule, listed as Section 40, Code of Federal Regulations 60.110, sets performance standards for the new units, according to Lee.

The second rule, published in the June 8, 1978, Federal Register, calls for tests to determine the unit's effect on deterioration of air quality in the area, Lee said.

But, unaware the tank battery existed, Lee said no one from the EPA had performed the necessary tests on the site.

Since Mrs. Price's complaint in October, the TACB has issued Texaco five notices of violation on the Wharton Unit, four dealing with excess emissions of the potentially lethal hydrogen sulfide, Montgomery said.

On Oct. 26, acting on her complaint, a TACB crew from Odessa found the plant in violation of a part of the Texas Clean Air Act listed as 131.08.00.001, which requires an oil company to acquire a TACB construction permit before it can build and operate an oil storage tank battery.

That same day, the crew also cited Texaco for violating another portion of the Texas Clean Air Act listed as 131.04.02.001, which states "no person may allow the emission of an average of more than .12 parts per million (ppm) of hydrogen sulfide during a 30-minute period."

Ensuing violations were issued the Wharton Unit, Montgomery said, including:

•Nov. 2, for emissions of 1.21 ppm of hydrogen sulfide.

One of the local complainants told of yet another incident in recent weeks when the poisonous gas escaped from the plant, forcing Texaco crewmen to go door-to-door through the area, warning residents of the danger.

"The oil companies support us here very well, but we're very concerned about our safety," Seminole Mayor Bob Clark said. "We don't want another Denver City," he said, referring to an incident in the neighboring town in February 1975, when nine persons died after breathing hydrogen sulfide emitted by a leaky wellhead.

As the list of hydrogen sulfide-related violations grew, the TACB called Texaco officals to Austin for a compliance meeting, Montgomery said.

In the meeting, which took place Dec. 12, Texaco promised to install a vapor recovery system to control the hydrogen sulfide and arrange for a construction permit, he said.

A vapor recovery system was installed at the Wharton Unit, but Texaco workers at the site say the unit may be undersized and could fail at any time, allowing more of the gas to escape.

"The hydrogen sulfide comes up with the oil and gas pumped from the wells," a crewman explained. "When the pressure inside the gun barrel (a 3,000 barrel capacity tank into which crude oil, natural gas, water and hydrogen sulfide from a well are brought) gets too high, the hydrogen sulfide is forced into the air like fumes coming out of a car's exhaust pipe."

The crewman said Texaco could put into use a flare, which would burn off the escaping gas, or a pipeline, which would redirect the hydrogen sulfide back into the system with less pressure, but neither has been installed.

"We most certainly could shut them (Texaco) down if they are operating illegally," said Bill Stewart, TACB executive director. "It's not easy to shut them down, but it's not unheard of either."

"Yes, we could file litigation against Texaco for the violations, especially for building and operating the storage tanks without telling us," said Mike Peters of the TACB compliance division.

Stewart said his office simply could ask Texaco to correct its problems, or it could go through the Texas attorney general's office.

Wright says he's proud of his unit and would match it with any in Texas in terms of safety. He indicated that most of the hydrogen-sulfide related problems have been cleared up, even with the recovery system some feel may be too small.

And though Texaco still is awaiting the green light from the government to build the Wharton Unit Tank Battery, its crew members already are looking forward to the day when they can pump their millionth barrel of crude through the system.

Oilfield Fumes Post Grim Death Record

No thought haunts an oilfield worker like that of death by "sour gas" poisoning.

Hydrogen sulfide is so strong and swift that, in some cases, a person can die before his body has time to react to the unmistakable rotten egg stench.

Known across oil country as "sour gas," hydrogen sulfide is termed by several medical experts as "hellishly" lethal. The gas is an inherent impurity in most Southwest crude oil wells, rising from the wells along with the oil. Texas Health Department officials say the oil in the Gaines County region "contains a very significant hydrogen sulfide content."

The silent killer is responsible for the deaths of more than 20 West Texans in the last decade, including 17 within a four-month span.

— Nine persons, seven from the same family, a house guest and an Atlantic Richfield Oil Co. worker, died Feb. 2, 1975, near Denver City, when a pipe connection on a well ruptured. ARCO officials said the pipe contained only four percent hydrogen sulfide at the time the leak occurred. That incident was termed "the worst oilfield-related tragedy in the nation in recent years" by longtime members of the field.

— Six oilfield workers died Dec. 1, 1974, near Abilene as they attempted to repair a ruptured crude oil pipeline. Four of the men were employed by Gulf Oil Co.

— Two Amoco employees died Oct. 1, 1974, near Sundown while they tried to clean a heater treater vessel.

Numerous other incidents have occurred over the years, some causing entire towns to be evacuated, like Mentone was on New Year's Eve, 1975.

A spokesman for the Air Quality Division of the Texas Department of Health said 10 parts of hydrogen sulfide per million is considered the maximum safe limit, while 500 ppm is enough for instant death. At levels between 10 and 500, the gas paralyzes the respiratory system and the nerves.

Two months after the Denver City incident capped the grisly string of hydrogen sulfide-related deaths, the Texas Railroad Commission, an arm of the state government which oversees much of the oil and gas industry, established a nine-point rule concerning the proper handling of hydrogen sulfide. Since that time, the incidence of mishandling of the sour gas has decreased but, as a veteran oilfield worker said, "As long as we've got oil in West Texas, we're going to have hydrogen sulfide, too."

Dimmitt Case Retrial Seen

DIMMITT (AP) — District Attorney Jimmy S. Davis says he will seek a new trial in the case of a hospital administrator accused of refusing to admit a Mexican-American baby who died later that day.

The first trial of Plains Memorial Hospital administrator Jack Newsom ended in a mistrial Friday when jurors were deadlocked at 4-2 for acquittal. Newsom is accused of a Class C misdemeanor that requires only a six-member jury. The maximum penalty for conviction is a $200 fine.

A new trial could be held as early as Monday, but Davis said he hopes it will be put off at least a week. He said he had little choice in pursuing the case.

"This thing has so much significance for everybody now that I couldn't just walk away from it," the Castro County prosecutor said.

of government itself and, most of all, for the vision that guided this nation," Carter said.

Ford, in Amman, Jordan, on a private tour, said: "The nation loses a truly great leader who unselfishly devoted his lifetime to helping his country and its people. The world has lost a statesman with vision, understanding, and wisdom."

Kissinger, onetime adviser to Rockefeller, called him "the greatest American I've ever known...His family will mourn his infinite capacity for love. The world will be without his faith and compassion. He died with confidence in freedom and the human spirit."

Nelson Aldrich Rockefeller was born July 8, 1908, in Bar Harbor, Maine, the third oldest child of John D. Jr. and Abby Rockefeller. He was the oldest surviving member of a family that included five sons and one daughter.

His eldest brother, John D. 3rd, died last July at the age of 72 in a car wreck on the family estate, Poncantico, in Westchester County. Another brother, Winthrop, was 61 when he died in 1973 after serving two terms as governor of Arkansas.

Two other brothers, Laurance and David, survive.

The family fortune was founded in the late 1800s by John D. Rockefeller, the oil magnate who invested $4,000 in a small Cleveland oil firm and parlayed it into a fortune now estimated at more than $1 billion.

Of the third generation members of the Rockefeller dynasty, it was Nelson who gained the highest degree of national and international attention.

He served as governor of New York for 15 years, an adviser to presidents for 40 years, and for two years as Ford's vice president, having been appointed as a result of the Watergate scandal.

Despite a personal fortune which he estimated in 1974 at $181 million, he was known as a tireless worker.

On the campaign, where he spent so much of his time during the last 20 years of his life, Rockefeller's trademark was the ready handshake and the genial, "Hiya, fella."

And as if to prove his common touch, Rockefeller once responded to a group of student hecklers in upstate New York with an obscene gesture accompanied by a large grin. The next day, the picture was prominently displayed in newspapers around the nation.

Despite his wealth and influence, the White House was to remain elusive.

Each time he sought the presidency — successively, in 1960, 1964, and 1968 — his party chose more conservative candidates.

Rockefeller withdrew from the Republican presidential sweepstakes in 1960, after a late start, ensuring the nomination of Richard Nixon; he lost a battle to conservative Barry Goldwater and was booed at the convention in San Francisco in 1964 and then lost again to Nixon in 1968.

He never again ran for the presidency, although he toyed with the idea, and gained the vice presidency following Richard Nixon's forced resignation.

Teng Arrival Today To Open New Era

server, Harry Harding of Stanford University, recently wrote: "Chinese foreign policy bears striking similarities to American policy toward the Soviet Union in the 1950s. It has a strong Dullesian flavor," a reference to the John Foster Dulles, the secretary of state who crusaded to contain the Soviets.

Carter, on the other hand, will say that the United States expects to treat the two communist giants equally.

Already, State Department officials who deal with the Soviets have expressed fear that the warmth and spectacle of the welcome accorded to Teng will make it more difficult to arrange a suitably comparable summit meeting for between Carter and Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev later this year.

"Teng is new and sexy, so he's hot. Brezhnev is not," said one official who declined to be identified publicly.

Other topics in what Carter termed Friday as a "broad agenda" will include possible Chinese and American moves in Korea and Indochina.

According to one official, who also insisted on remaining anonymous, Carter will explain to Teng his views of human rights, "but he's not going to lean on him. He'll talk about it so that later, if someone asks him whether he broached it, he can say he did."

The administration is primarily interested in Chinese policies on emigration, because these policies have a direct bearing on the economic relationship the United States would like to build with the Peking government.

According to a law passed by Congress in 1974, a country with a communist economic system must allow free emigration before it can enjoy the benefits of most-favored-nation trading status with the United States.

Carter Relates Brezhnev Call About China

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter says the Soviets were so worried he might sell arms to China that Leonid Brezhnev contacted him directly and got his assurance that it would not happen.

"We have responded very clearly to President Brezhnev, who contacted me directly about these sales," Carter said during his customary Friday interview with visiting editors. The transcript was released Saturday.

"We certainly have no intention to sell weapons to the Soviet Union or China," Carter said. "The Soviets need not be concerned about that."

The president also said restraints will be applied to the sale of technologically advanced equipment and computers to determine whether any item "could contribute in a substantial way to the military capabilities of both the Soviet Union and China."

Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping arrives in Washington today, the first high-ranking Chinese to pay an official visit to the United States in 30 years.

Carter was spending the weekend at Camp David, reading briefing papers in preparation for his discussions with Teng, which begin Monday.

He said he already has studied the "verbatim transcriptions" of earlier top secret conversations with Chinese leaders conducted by Presidents Nixon and Ford, former Secretary of State Henry Kissingr and Carter administration officials.

"I think we have gotten a fairly good picture of the attitude of Mao Tse-tug, Chou En-lai and, more recently, Chairman Hua Kuo-feng and now Teng," Carter said.

Mao and Chou, both now dead, were Communist party chairman and premier of China respectively in the days when Nixon and Ford opened and expanded U.S. links with Peking.

Carter said he looks forward to discussing with Teng "how the new Chinese and American friendship can stabilize further the western Pacific-Asian region.

"... One obvious item on the agenda would be to see maximum Chinese influence be exerted on North Korea and, in response, we will exert maximum response on South Korea to bring those two groups of leaders together to alleviate tension there."

Carter's remarks were made in advance of an announcement that South Korea has accepted a North Korean proposal to hold preliminary discussions on unifying the divided country.

Some observers believe the new U.S.-Chinese relationship was the spur for that move.

While destruction of property and assault, and specifically an attack on any law officer, are considered crimes of moral turpitude, an alien must be "convicted of (such) a crime within five years after entry and either sentenced to confinement or confined. . .in a prison or corrective institution for a year or more. . ."

By these standards, federal officials say, only those aliens actually arrested for and convicted of such crimes during the course of a demonstration can be threatened with deportation. Any other protesters who do not commit such acts cannot be deported simply because of their participation in a group that contains violent members.

Such detailed statutes concerning deportation procedures prompted one Justice Department employee to state, "I don't want to start arresting Iranian students and begin deportation proceedings until I get something in writing (from the Attorney General's office).

"I don't want to be in the same boat the FBI was in during the '60s (the height of Vietnam protests) and end up arresting them and then being told to let them go because we've violated their civil rights."

Bell apparently has decided to take precautionary steps to eliminate similar problems for the Justice Department if large-scale deportations are warranted.

His promise to take strong action against the Iranian protesters has now evolved into an intensive check into the status of the estimated 40,000 Iranian students in the United States to pinpoint their locations and have the records easily accessible if they become involved in violent protests.

A recent look into immigration files in Los Angeles revealed that 29 percent of the 500 foreign students in that area were not enrolled in universities as claimed.

Dallas immigration officials declined to comment on whether a similar visa check is underway for their region, which covers the 120 northernmost counties of Texas, including the Lubbock area, and Oklahoma. Some officials estimate there are about 6,000 Iranian students living in the district governed by the Dallas office.

Dallas INS District Director William J. Chambers, however, did outline normal deportation procedures, which, if required on a large scale in Lubbock, could cause considerable problems.

All aliens in the district who face deportation would have to be processed through the Dallas office, he said.

Students found in violation of their visas usually are given 30 days to voluntarily leave the country. If they do not leave by that time, Chambers said, deportation proceedings are instituted and the student is presented an order to show cause why he should not be required to leave.

After that, the student is brought before an immigration judge, who rules whether the student is deportable, Chambers explained.

This finding still can allow the student to leave voluntarily, thereby preventing the student from acquiring the stigma of being deported, or the judge can issue a "straight order deportation," for which the INS makes the arrangements to remove the student from the United States, Chambers said.

Since there is no local INS office in Lubbock, the job of initiating deportation proceedings here would fall to the four-man Border Patrol unit, an INS branch.

Chambers said the Lubbock Border Patrol agents have the authority to grant voluntary deportation orders. But if the Lubbock agents feel the student may disregard the order and leave for another city, Chambers said, the Lubbock authorities could "place him in physical custody and notify us in Dallas."

The student would be held in Lubbock until an immigration judge in Dallas was available to hear the case and he then would be transported to Dallas, Chambers said.

But with the time, distance and recent possibility of massive demonstrations involving students who might be deported, one Justice Department official pointed out that Lubbock is not the ideal setting for such enforcement.

"There's nowhere to hold them and realistically not enough manpower, even with local police, to handle the type of protests that have happened in California and Oklahoma for example," he said.

"When you add to that the considerations of holding (deportable protesters) and the time it would take to complete deportation proceedings, it's virtually impossible.

"Four (local INS agents) against a Beverly Hills-type situation? No way," he added.

Prime Rate Drop Rumor Sparks Market Rally

by J.L. Hutchenson
Schneider, Bernet & Hickman, Inc.

The stock market came to life late this week on speculation that Bank of America, the nation's largest bank would cut its prime rate. The Dow Jones industrial average, which was up sharply for the week, finished at its highest level in more than three months in active trading.

Although Bank of America denied the rumor about an hour before the close of trading on Thursday that it planned to lower its prime rate from its current 11¾ percent level, the market did not lose any of the ground it had gained.

Other developments that fueled hopes interest rates might be approaching a peak were the recent easing of the 91-day auction paper rate and the recent strength in the bond market.

Analysts said that investors are hoping that the end of the high interest rates is near. There has been evidence recently that many large banks are moving into the stock and bond markets, and this could reflect the belief that interest are topping out. However, it is wise to remember, they caution, that banks hold one of the worst trading records imaginable when it comes to timing buying or selling opportunities.

Many investment advisors feel that the probabilities are good that 1979 will be an up year for the stock market. They caution, however, that if the economy continues to remain strong and inteterest rates move up materially from current levels (from one-half to one percentage point) the stock market will have a very rough time indeed as this will put more upward pressure on the inflation rate.

Joining this weeks rally were the computer, defense, airline, housing, chemical, retail, drug, electronic, movie, oil, paper, steel, tobacco and savings-and-loan stocks. Some auto and machinery issues also gained. The metals retreated.

Analysts view the upswing this month as a postponed year-end rally. They feel that the market probably will start soon to discount a recession this year.

Other factors that contribute to this week's upswing was the firming action by the dollar on the foreign exchange markets and a warm reception to President Carter's federal budget for fiscal 1980.

Many experts feel that the recent surge in the market will continue, although they feel that there is some chance for a buying panic to ensure if the market can work higher in the next few weeks. Most feel that there is a greater likelihood for the stock market to move higher over the intermediate term and go lower-term.

Interest Rates May Be Peaking

NEW YORK (AP) — Speculation is running high on Wall Street that interest rates, after rising sharply all last year, might be at or near the point of topping out.

These hopes are pinned to a pronounced slowing in recent months in the growth rate of the nation's money supply, which some believe signals that the Federal Reserve's credit-tightening campaign against inflation is beginning to get results.

If the growth of the money supply has indeed slowed as much as recent Fed statistics suggest, the logic goes, then the central bank isn't likely to be pushing interest rates up any further.

A few observers even go so far as to suggest that slower monetary growth might produce a significant slowing in the inflation rate by mid-year or so.

Many Wall Streeters want to see more evidence before they get caught up in the excitement. And a number express deep-seated doubts that all the pieces are in place for such happy events to unfold.

For one thing, the strong and sometimes spectacular showing of corporate earnings reports for the fourth quarter seems to conflict with the idea that demand for money could be cooling off.

Besides, said one skeptical insurance-company money manager: "We're talking about a $29 billion federal deficit at the peak of an economic expansion. It just isn't supposed to be that way."

But despite such reservations, the securities markets are registering considerable optimism among investors. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks climbed 22.26 to 859.75 in the past week, reaching its highest level since last October.

The New York Stock Exchange composite index gained 1.14 to 56.99, and the American Stock Exchange market value index was up 1.31 at 162.35.Big Board volume averaged 30.38 million shares a day, against 27.45 million the week before.

Yields on long-term interest bearing securities, which compete with stocks for investors' money, have fallen in recent days as bond prices rallied.

Chairman William Miller of the Federal Reserve Board described the bond market's strength as a "vote of confidence" in the Fed's effort to restrain monetary growth and reduce inflation.

While the question of the future direction of interest rates is important to the stock market as a whole, it is particularly sensitive for electric-utility issues and their shareholders.

Since utilities are most often bought for their dividend yields by investors primarily interested in regular income, the stocks tend to move closely in line with bonds and other interest-bearing investments.

Thus, in last year's climate of steadily rising interest rates, utility stocks were among the market's poorest performers. Standard & Poor's utility index fell 12 percent during the year, while S&P's industrial index was rising 1 percent.

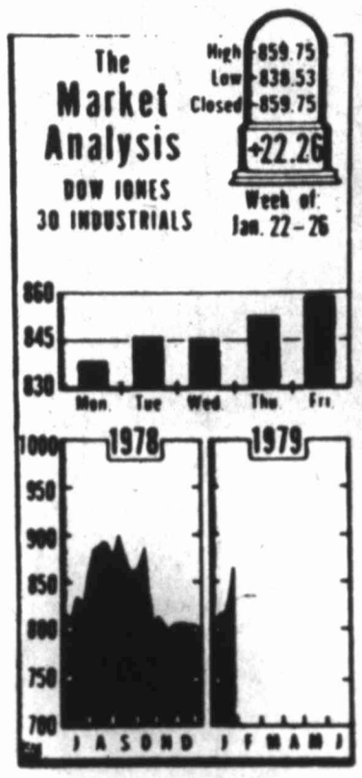
Conversely, amid the past week's hopes for lower rates, the Dow Jones average of 15 utilities rose 1.66 to 104.06.

If the skeptics are right, and the hoped-for decline in interest rates doesn't materialize, a continuation of such gains in the utilities' stock prices would seem unlikely.

But what if rates do indeed come down? William LeFevre, an analyst at Granger & Co., went back to the last interest-rate cycle to see what happened then.

On Sept. 30, 1974, at about the time the rates were beginning to fall from their peak, Dow Jones' utility average stood at 61.16. By June 30, 1977, after rates had fallen to their lows and were starting up again, the average had reached 114.68, for an 87.5 percent gain.

Said LeFevre: "While no guarantees are offered or implied, history has been known to repeat."



Texas Bank Names Directors

Ransom Gallaway, president and chief executive officer of Texas Bank, announced Saturday the approval by the board of directors of two new appointments at the bank.

John L. Green, pioneer Dickens County businessman-farmer, was named to the board of directors in an advisory position, and Donna Hulett, longtime Lubbock resident with more than 28 years' experience in banking, was named manager of the bank's credit-card department.

TVA To Appeal Judge's Order

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The Tennessee Valley Authority, the nation's largest utility, will appeal a judge's order that it must move its headquarters from Knoxville to Muscle Shoals, Ala.

U.S. District Court Judge Frank McFadden in Birmingham, Ala., ruled on Thursday that Congress originally intended the TVA to operate out of the northwest Alabama city. He said the utility should relocate its principal office there.

Louis Gwin, spokesman for TVA general counsel Herb Sanger, said Friday that TVA plans to file notice of its appeal with the court in Birmingham. He said the appeal would probably be heard by the U.S. 5th Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans.

TVA, created in 1933 by an act of Congress, serves power customers throughout a seven-state area, including Tennessee, Kentucky, Virginia, Alabama, Mississippi, Georgia and North Carolina.

Muscle Shoals presently is the site of TVA's National Fertilizer Center and agency offices for its Division of Power Utilization and the Division of Environmental Planning.

McFadden's ruling was in response to a 1977 lawsuit filed by then-Alabama Attorney General Bill Baxley, now in private practice in Birmingham.

In My Corner

By FRANCES LOWE

Someday I'd like to have a psychologist explain to me why success always occurs in private and failure in full public view.

Why is it, that when I visit my mother-in-law, I always break something — usually something precious and irreplacable? At home or in my own mother's kitchen, while I am not the picture of efficiency, I manage to stumble around without breaking things. Let me offer to help Lydia in the kitchen, however, and I am bound to drop the plate that has been in the family for three generations.

There is some great natural law at work here.

It is the same law that applies when you are determined not to look at a certain feature of a person's face and your eyes keep going back to it again and again.

Or when you know you should not mention a particular subject to a particular person, and it leaps out of your mouth at the first opportunity.

Or the one day you go to the grocery store in torn jeans and with your hair up, your boss' wife decides to shop at the same store.

Or, when the insurance man is evaluating your homeowner's policy with your husband, your child throws a brick through the window

If we could choose where, and in front of whom, we would make our great mistakes, it would be bearable, but it never works out that way.

My husband says that when he or his brother got into any kind of trouble their dad was somehow always there. If they skipped school they met him on the street. If they were careening through town in their old car, he would be standing on the sidewalk, watching. If they came into the house in the wee hours of the morning, he would meet them at the door.

We must somehow send out little signals to the people we would least like to see at a particular moment, "I am vulnerable; come and see."

Why is it that the day you decide not to have your hair set, somebody decides to take pictures?

How come people always drop by for coffee the day before you clean house, never the day afterwards?

Why is it that the sweetest, most mannerly child in the world turns into a monster when two little old ladies from church come to call?

Why is it that if you decide to sleep late, your new neighbor comes over, poised and charming, to get acquainted? Or the day you decide not to get dressed at all, and answer the door in your old bathrobe, it is an old school chum of your husband?

Why is it that the recipe that turns out perfectly for you every time you fix it for your family, goes awry when you decide to take it to the covered dish supper?

How come you can leave "War and Peace" on the coffee table for six months, and nobody notices, but the day you bring home a girlie magazine, (because somebody said an article in it was really good) everybody you ever knew comes by? Or, worse yet, the trashy novel with the lurid cover that you are reading at night when the kids are asleep, turns up in your purse when you open it to pay for lunch with a friend of your mother?

(I had a lurid novel once that pursued me. I came down with a virus on vacation, and my husband bought me a book at the tobacco stand to read. I threw it away at the hotel, but the maid kindly put it on top of my suitcase, where it was the first thing my aunt saw when she helped me unpack at her house. I threw it in the trash there, but, without a word, she tucked it into my purse before I left. I threw it away at home, where my little girl found it and brought it to me (of course I had company), explaining, "Somebody threw this book in the trash by mistake, Mommie, and why does this lady not have any clothes on?")

A continuing source of chagrin for women my age (younger women seem to have this stuff under control) has to do with men and cars.

I have never, never done anything really dumb in the car without a man standing by, watching.

I never do a hurried, sloppy job of parallel parking, or park a foot from the curb, or leave the car with the lights on, without looking up to find a man watching me with a silly grin on his face.

When a man has a fender-bender, it is always the other guy's fault, and your man is lucky to have escaped with his life. My fender benders are always my own fault and before a large audience.

The old car acquired the enoromous dent in one fender when my husband, with great skill and presence of mind, prevented us all from being killed the day we encountered two enormous hogs sleeping in the middle of a south Georgia highway.

The little dent in the fender is mine, from when I backed over my neighbors' mailbox. When I rang the doorbell to apologize, it was of course the husband who answered.

The worst thing that can happen is to do something stupid and have to tell your husband about it. Not long ago, after a day at the office and a dinner meeting, I dashed across town to attend the Princess' PTA meeting. It was a cold night and I was late and had to park several blocks from the school. I locked all the car doors carefully and didn't realize until I got out and slammed the door that the motor was still running.

There was no way to hide it, of course. I had to walk to the school, stumble over a row of people to find my husband, explain the situation and get his keys, stumble out over the same feet, and repeat the whole process. By the time I arrived back, red-faced and puffing, I felt every eye in the auditorium on me.

I was telling the story on myself next day with some friends, and every woman there had a similar story to recount. I had a friend who locked herself out of her house so often it became a joke in her husband's company. Finally she had several sets of keys made and hid them in various places about the house and her person, so that she wouldn't have to let him know.

We women will never be liberated until we get this thing under control.

COUPLE OBSERVES ANNIVERSARY — Mr. and Mrs. William D. Beedy of Floydada will observe their 50th wedding anniversary with a reception from 2-5 p.m. today in their home. Charles Beedy of Claude, Mr. and Mrs. Bradford Beedy of Spearman and Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Beedy of Floydada, children of the couple, will host. The former Winnie Wilson and Beedy were married Jan. 29, 1929 in Floyd County. The couple has seven grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Trivia Quiz

1. Which of the following was not a make of auto in the U.S.?
A. Graham
B. Hupmobile
C. LaSalle
D. Wooster
E. Cord

2. Who was the blond bandleader on "Super Circus," a television show from a long, long time ago?

3. What did Myrt Power and Redmond O'Hanlon have in common? (Extra credit points if you can come up with their home states as well.)

4. Mickey Mouse's girlfriend was Minnie. How about the other great of the comics world, Mighty Mouse? Who was his best girl?

5. Can you recall the name of the pet duck owned by Burns and Allen?
A. Blanche
B. Herman
C. Ronnie
D. Von Zell
E. Dagwood

6. Orson Welles played the title role in the movie. Later there was a brief television series that, like the film, was based on a novel by Graham Greene. All three had the same title. What?

7. Where would you find, among others, Marie Dressler, Wallace Beery, Jean Harlow and John Barrymore gathered for a meal?

8. Who played Will Rogers briefly in "Look for the Silver Lining," and then in a starring role in "The Story of Will Rogers"?

9. And who played the wit's wonderful wife in that film biography?

10. Does the word "swingle" ring a bell?

(c) 1979 by Dan Carlinsky
Distributed by Enterprise Features

1. D. never rode the roads.
2. Mary Hartline.
3. Both were popular winners on "The $64,000 Question." Power was a Georgian (she was the baseball expert) and O'Hanlon a New Yorker (he was the cop who knew Shakespeare.)
4. Mitzi.
5. B.
6. "The Third Man."
7. In the movie "Dinner at Eight."
8. Will's kid, Will Jr., who twirled a mean rope himself.
9. Jane Wyman (Ronald Reagan's Mrs.)
10. It should call to mind "The Swingle Singers," a vocal group of a couple of decades back that specialized in jazzed-up versions of baroque music.

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: I have just begun to baby-sit and it would be helpful if I had some rules to go by. Will you please write some "Do's and Don'ts" on baby-sitting?
Besty B. In Birmingham

Dear Besty: How's this:
When you are asked to baby-sit:

Be businesslike. State the days you will be available, the experience you've had and the pay you consider fair. Never accept a job from a stranger. If you don't know the person calling, ask who recommended you, then call that person and check it out.

If you can't provide your own transportation to and from the job, ask what arrangements can be made.

Find out in advance the name, address, phone number, number of children and how long you will be expected to stay. It's always a good idea to get acquainted with the family (and especially the child) before you go to baby-sit.

Always ask beforehand what your duties will be.

When you take a job, be sure your parents have the name, address and phone number of the people for whom you are sitting.

Before you are left in charge of a child, be sure you know where the parents can be reached.

Have the phone number of the family doctor, paramedics and a close relative or a trusted friend or neighbor handy in case of emergency.

Ask how you should handle incoming phone calls, and always keep a pencil and paper near the phone.

Get full information about locking doors and windows, lights to be left burning.

Ask what you should do if the doorbell rings.

Get special instructions (diapers, bottles, bedtime snacks, children's use of television or radio, "lights out," etc.) and write them down if there are many.

If medications are to be given, have parents write down all pertinent information (name of medicine, amount, time and child's name.)

Accept escort to your home as planned unless the person who is to drive you home appears drunk. Then insist on phoning your own parents to make other arrangements.

When you are left in charge of a child:

Guard against strangers. Don't unlock the door for anyone! If you see a strange face in the window, or if someone tries to get in, call the police at once.

In case of fire, first get the baby and other children out of the house or apartment, then call the fire department from a neighbor's phone.

Guard against accidents: Be alert to possible hazards such as medicines in bathroom, knives, scissors and other dangerous utensils in kitchen; poisons, cleaning fluids, etc., under sink within baby's reach.

Check frequently on a sleeping baby.

Remember, you are a guest: take food only if you have permission. Eat moderately and wash dishes you've used.

Don't explore. Don't open closets or drawers or read personal mail left open to view.

Don't allow friends to visit you while you are baby-sitting. Give your job your undivided attention. Avoid making personal phone calls. Keep line open for incoming calls from baby's parents.

By CONNIE CHAPMAN
Family News Staff

This final article of the series on domestic violence looks at some of the human aspects of the problem. Previous segments have dealt with the law, the way the police handle such situations, and the various agencies in the community which work with such cases.

Keeping in mind that statistics mean lives, the following figures give some insight into the magnitude of the complex problem of domestic violence:

• It is estimated that 28 million spouses in the United States are abused by their mates. (A 1978 study for the Attorney General of Ohio)

• An incident of mate beating occurs every 30 seconds. (FBI statistics)

• Approximately 100,000 to 200,000 youngsters are regularly abused by their parents with such things as cigarettes, hot irons, cords, sticks, fists, and booted feet. Close to that number of children are sexually assaulted.

• At least 2,000 children in this country die yearly from abuse or neglect. (These last figures come from the National Center on Child Abuse and Neglect.)

• Abuse of the elderly is estimated to reach into the thousands. (A study by the former director of the Detroit Visiting Nurse Association.)

Who are the people responsible for these crimes of abuse and neglect?

While it is very difficult to pinpoint the specific people whose tendencies may lead them to commit such acts, it is safe to say that all ages, both sexes, and all economic groups are included. Persons working in community service agencies here in Lubbock who were interviewed for this series agreed that it is indeed true here. Thus it is a problem that touches every family in the Lubbock area either directly or indirectly.

People who work with the whole scope of the problem talk about "the spiral of domestic violence." This indicates that a person who was abused as a child is a high risk to become a child abuser himself or herself, and frequently also to abuse or neglect elderly parents.

Role models are very important and people tend to treat others as they themselves were treated.

Counselors and social workers are quick to point out that even sexual abuse is often not a physical act committed for its own sake, but rather a way of striking out for dominance and self-importance. One characteristic of the perpetrator is that he or she often has a low level of self-esteem.

External pressures often are cited as reasons for abuse being heaped on the family. Often it is thought that only lower classes with severe economic limitations and attendant pressures are so motivated. Counselors are in agreement that middle and upper class persons also feel pressures to maintain their jobs, their life-style and community status and that these pressures also can be factors contributing to violent action.

Margaret Elbow, executive director of Family Service Association of Lubbock, and a nationally recognized authority on dealing with domestic violence and its causes, has identified characteristics of the wife-beater. She has designated the categories the controller, the defender, the approval seeker, and the incorporator.

Saying that the family is the basic unit for granting stability to an individual, Mrs. Elbow described basic needs for the stability of persons in each of her four categories. The controller is looking for autonomy; the defender for protection; the approval-seeker for confirmation; the incorporator for affirmation and validation.

The categories are based on recent studies and on her observations as a social worker-counselor.

Much of this description is also true of child abusers of either sex.

The same study also described some of the abused person's characterisitics and some ways of dealing with the victim. One important step is that the woman (or abused child) needs to be helped to realize that he or she did not cause the incident. A woman may also be given some help with developing ways to prevent another similar outbreak. Typically, the woman is very protective of the abuser and may "take him back" more quickly than an outsider — either a professional or a friend — may think advisable.

The Rideout case in Oregon, with which this series began, is an example. It must be said that the subsequent reuniting of the couple, even after the much publicized so-called marital rape trial, is quite typical.

Child abuse and spouse abuse have been receiving national attention for some time. The ramifications of the spiral applying to abuse of the elderly is just beginning to receive attention and concern, however.

The entire complex problem of domestic violence will be the subject of a community-wide conference to be held at First Christian Church here March 2 and 3. This meeting will be open to all interested people and will include a sharing session where participants may express their views on aspects of the problem and explore possible community resources for dealing with it.

FAMLY IN CRISIS — Margaret Elbow, executive director of Family Service Assciation of Lubbock, talks with a couple experiencing family problems. Agencies and counselors who work with family situations encourage both spouses and also the children to engage in the process of seeking new ways of dealing with family tensions. Insurance Premiums, Pension Payouts Effected By Life Expectancy Increase

By BETTY YARMAN

NEW YORK (WNS) — Smaller life insurance premiums and larger pensions payouts are some of the expected results of a largely unnoticed but highly dramatic increase recently in the life expectancy of Americans.

Between 1950 and 1970, the average life span increased at a modest pace. Demographic experts said that the average life span lengthened because of a decline in mortality rates at young ages, caused presumably by the wider use of antibiotics, improved nutrition and sanitation, and better care of newborns.

But, notably between 1971 and 1976, improved life expectancy at birth was found to have come from improved mortality in later years — for age 45 and beyond, and particularly from those age 65 and over.

According to the U.S. Public Health Service, the number of years remaining for those aged 65 average 13.8 in 1949-51, 15.0 in 1969-71. This figure had jumped to 16.0 years by 1975.

Thus today's 65-year-old can expect to live another 16 years, a full year longer than did a 65-year-old just five years ago, and more than two years longer than a generation ago.

Analysts point out such improvements are affecting Americans of all sexes and races throughout the population, and that the increases have been faster among non-whites than whites, and among women than men.

Already some insurance companies are responding. New England Mutual Life, attributing the increase of life expectancy to the deceased 55-mile-an-hour speed limit on our highways as much as to medical progress and better self-care, points out that it has been reducing its premiums for the past two years, and plans another reduction in 1979.

John Hancock Mutual Life, which has also cut its premiums, cautiously wonders if this longer-life trend will continue at its current high rate, asking just how far medical advances can go.

The Martin E. Segal Co., a firm of consultants and actuaries who specialize in the pension area, explains that the government's figures are for the population at large, and that mortality rates for pension plans are likely to predict an even longer life expectancy.

That is because pension plan tables cover only persons actively engaged in the labor market, or those who have retired, whereas the U.S. figures include all persons, even such statistically poorer risks as the chronically ill and the disabled.

As a result, actuaries are urged to look closely at pension mortality rates in the future, since the increase in the life expectancy of the total population inevitably could be reflected in the life expectancy of those covered by pensions.

This should indicate larger pension payouts and a higher proportion of retired persons in the population than has been predicted by many current tables.

"On the other hand," caution the Segal Company experts, "it is too early to give a final assessment of the significance of life expectancy trends of the 1970s. Conceivably, they may represent a statistical curiosity: a 'bump' in the charts which will iron out in the long run."

After that word of caution, they then wind up with a sentence that must coincide with the hopes and aspirations of all of us: "More hopefully, they suggest an ever-lengthening life span for Americans."

Soroptomists To Sponsor Fashion Show

Soroptomist International of Lubbock will sponsor a fur style show at 7:30 p.m. Feb. 5 in the Civic Center Banquet Hall.

Guests will be served champagne and cheese while watching the style show, hosted by Jean Gragg of Gragg Furs, Inc., of Wichita, Kansas.

Benefits from the show will be used for Soroptomist projects including youth citizenship scholarships, grants to resident students and International Year of the Child program funding.

Jean Gragg, the only woman Golden Guild Master Furrier in the world, has been a member of Soroptomist International since 1951 and has served the organization as vice president, as well as holding various regional and local offices. In 1974 she was elected District Director of District II, which includes seven states, and in 1976 she was elected Governor for the South Central Region.

Tickets for the style show are $6.50 per person. Reservations may be made by calling 799-2175, 747-5232 or 792-0087.

Tune In Tomorrow

By JON-MICHAEL REED

ALL MY CHILDREN: Ray held Edna and Donna hostages during a blizzard. Claudette acted the innocent to Linc after she slept with Eddie and encouraged him to force Kelly to work when Kelly was released from the hospital. Jeff and Chris came to blows after Frank's old pal, Dr. Russ Anderson, told Jeff that Chris' San Francisco job offer had been rescinded. Chris admitted she lied about turning down the job, afraid of being the Martin family joke. Mona learned Erica's on birth control pills while leading on Tom that she wants a family. Billy housed down-and-out Lettie Jean but insisted Estelle would return. Maureen offered to give Erica disco seed money if she helps split Mark and Ellen. Chuck went to rescue Donna.

ANOTHER WORLD: Burt returned while Clarice filed divorce papers and talked marriage to Larry. While continuing to push Buzz toward Blaine, Rachel admitted to Jamie that she fears Blaine is as manipulative as Rachel once was. Scott dated Janice. Liz taunted Willis that Leueen found Gwen in New York City with an old beau. Iris encouraged Sylvie to have Blaine model her spring fashions. Eileen told Joey they are too young to marry. Albini swore to get even with Olive for refusing to testify against Pat.

AS THE WORLD TURNS: Jay learned from Lorie about Hank's rape attempts on Carol and Jay beat him to a pulp, then hired Grant as his lawyer. Joyce bought a gun and plotted to knock off Ralph and claim she thought he was a burglar. Tina goaded Lisa into a blow up at Grant about Valerie. Douglas dated Sandy and told an irked John that all hospital research has been put on hold. Jane advised Annie to sacrifice her career to save her marriage. Hank claimed that Carol had teased him and he paid off worker Jack to provide an alibi. Bob told Lisa that Alex, not Grant, is interested in Valerie.

DAYS OF OUR LIVES: Bob and Linda tussled about her affair with Neil. She tumbled downstairs and developed selective amnesia. Steve convinced Julie that Doug wanted her to go on a buying trip so he could snuggle up to Maggie. Marlena asked Samantha to return to town for her wedding. Sam relayed the news to Trish that Jeri and Timmy (Scot) are in Salem. David spent a night with Stephanie. Pete left for school and Donna made amends with Don and Marlena. Trish hinted to Artie that she did bad things to get plane fare back to the States. Mickey feared he's losing Maggie, who split for the farm. Margo was released but Tom couldn't say how long she has to live.

THE DOCTORS: Doreen forced Carolee to write to the children that she's left Steve for another man. Dr. Tracs arrived to assist in Mike's recovery. Sweeney realized that Barney is interested in her as more than a pal. Doreen stalled Mel from knocking off Carolee since Doreen relishes seeing her suffer first. Lt. Perry investigated Carolee's disappearance.

EDGE OF NIGHT: Albert drowned Cody instead of Deborah when Steve and Elliott came to the rescue. All of the Children murders had been enforced by Cody without Elliott's knowledge. Raven and Logan named their baby Jaime but Logan stalled on an immediate wedding. April's cellmate, Hannah, convinced her they could pull a jailbreak. Nancy fretted about Diana's attentions to Mike.

GENERAL HOSPITAL: Gina suspected that Bobbi switched pregnancy tests with an expectant mother. Scotty refused to run off and marry Bobbi when an epidemic affected Lee, Beatrice and hospital nurses. Tracy manipulated Mitch by promising him a governorship future. Susan impressed herself on Jeff while Heather remained hospitalized. Gary was upset when his book took a backseat to the news of Mark's research accomplishments. Steve and Audrey worried that Jeremy is not like other young boys.

GUIDING LIGHT: Jackie wouldn't tell Mike of Elizabeth's whereabouts but admitted she skipped because Alan revealed her barrenness. Lucille worried that Amanda and Gordon might reconcile, although Amanda wouldn't commit herself. Alan's tapes with Dean satisfied the cops that he wasn't involved in Ramon's murder. Alan and Jackie announced their engagement, while Jackie protected Phillip from thinking Alan was a culprit. Alan appointed Roger vice president. Rita realized Roger snowed Hillary about marrying Holly for Christina's sake. Hillary accepted Roger's offer to be Diane's assistant, while Roger made sexual innuendos to Diane.

LOVE OF LIFE: Meg threw a nobody-loves-me fuss when her family discouraged her from seeking a job for Bruce. Tom convinced Betsy to talk to Ben about their relationship. Ray called Arlene to keep an eye on his brother Guido. Ma and Pa Gaspero, Ray's folks, told Arlene about their third child, Gina. Reporter Casey was determined to dig up dirt that would close Ray's club.

ONE LIFE TO LIVE: Vicki was indicted. Carla told Sadie that it's tough resisting Jack's temptations. Karen ordered Talbot to find Katrina, who might clear Vicki, or Karen would expose Talbot's hit-and-run murder of Brian. Pat and Adam admitted their love. Karen and Tina panicked after learning that Ed and Vinnie discovered that Marco was involved in prostitution and pornography. Paul Martin suspected someone is impersonating Nicki Smith. Samantha's spirits improved since her operation. Dorian blew it with Paul after badmouthing Vicki for Edwina's expose.

RYAN'S HOPE: Edmund died and Jill was severely injured when the beach house blew up because of faulty wiring. Siobhan was threatened by a landlord thug, Pyle, to halt instigating a rent strike. Faith told Roger she can't abandon Tom. Frank took office as U.S. senator. Pat examined Annie's tremorous hand. Mary broke Thatcher's icy exterior.

SEARCH FOR TOMORROW: Wendy ran away from hearing John and Stephanie feuding about Steph's decisive vote which kicked Howard out and put Ted in as president of Collins Corp. Laine was on the prowl for Gary, while trying to figure out who was Lisa's secret financial backer for Steve's film. Travis refused to give Ted a contract until Janet's company position is secure. Jo gave Stu a get-well pep talk. Carolyn volunteered for youth counseling.

THE YOUNG AND THE RESTLESS: Stu told his daughters he'll marry Jill, who learned Kay agreed to divorce Derek. Lance tried to get closer to Lucas, while Vanessa tempted Lucas to take over the company from his brother. Suzanne realized her meal ticket is down the tubes if Kay divorces Derek. Peggy railed against Stu's decision.

SUNDOWN COUPLE CELEBRATES ANNIVERSARY — Mr. and Mrs. Ed Bowles of Sundown recently celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary with a dinner. Hosts were Mr. and Mrs. Clinton McCormick, son-in-law and daughter of the couple. The couple was married Dec. 12, 1928 in Dublin. The couple also has a son, Billy Bowles, two grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

HOUSEHOLD HAZARDS

BRUSSELS, Belgium (WNS) — Women face more danger working in their kitchens than they do behind the wheels of cars, even in heavy traffic. Such is the report of the European Commission, which estimates that almost four times more people die in home accidents than on the road. Between 4 and 5 million people in the European Community are injured annually in home accidents. The mortality rate is estimated as close to 30,000 a year. Most dangerous spots are living and dining rooms for infants, front and back yards for school kids, kitchens for late teens and young marrieds, all parts of the house for mature adults and kitchens, again, for retired folks.

'Child Restraints' Reduce Number Of Automobile Fatalities

By JOHN E. PETERSON

WASHINGTON (WNS-DN) — In 1976, 940 children under the age of 5 died in motor vehicle accidents. Some 57,000 more were injured.

Those deaths and injuries are doubly tragic because most of them could have been prevented, had the motorists involved taken the time and effort to secure their young passengers in a child restraint seat.

The Highway Safety Research Center at the University of North Carolina estimates that as many as 50 to 80 percent of the children killed in motor accidents would have survived, had an adult cared enough to make sure they were properly restrained.

A study by Dr. Robert Scherz in the state of Washington makes an even stronger case for child restraints. It found that more than 90 percent of fatalities and almost 80 percent of injuries would be avoided with restraints. Even more impressive, Scherz found that not one properly restrained child under 5 had been killed during the last six years.

Incredibly, parents buckle up their babies and children even less than they buckle up themselves. A number of studies agree that only 6 to 7 percent of the children riding in cars are being properly restrained. In contrast, studies indicate that anywhere from 17 to 44 percent of adult motorists regularly buckle their seat belts.

Surprisingly, only one state — Tennessee — currently has a law requiring small children to be properly restrained while riding in cars. Passed last January, the law allows police to ticket drivers of cars in which small children are not properly restrained. The fine, including court costs, usually averages about $30 — more than enough to purchase an excellent infant restraint seat.

Tennessee's child restraint law was enacted only after Dr. Robert Sanders, a county health officer in Murfreesboro, mobilized the state's pediatricians to participate in a campaign to persuade the public to pressure their state lawmakers.

Sanders, himself a pediatrician, points out that a baby's head is much more fragile than an adult's because its skull is still mainly cartilage rather than bone and thus its brain is only partially protected.

"A baby is top-heavy because its head is proportionately so much larger to its body than an adult's," Sanders said. "When an unrestrained child becomes airborne in an auto crash, it goes headfirst.

"A 10-pound child becomes a 300-pound projectile in a crash at 30 m.p.h.," he says. "In the same crash, a 100-pound woman would become a 3,000-pound force — enough to crush a small baby held in her arms."

Sanders concedes that it's easy to argue that a democratic society ought to allow adults the right to make their own decisions about whether they should risk driving without a belt. But he contends that argument crumbles when transferred to small children and infants.

So does Dr. Kenneth Heathington, director of the University of Tennessee's Transportation Center, and the man in charge of promoting and monitoring the new law.

"We've had only one complaint, so far," he said recently. "I got a letter from a state legislator who said, 'You ought to let people do what they want to do — the federal government is enough bureaucracy as it is.'

"Well, I agree with him in principle but this is a different situation. He surely wouldn't argue against having kids vaccinated for measles or polio before they enter school. This is the biggest killer we have."

Heathington attributes the lack of criticism to "the very friendly approach we took. For the first six months, the police didn't issue citations. We appealed to good sense. There won't be any roadblocks. In the normal course of law enforcement — say if you are caught speeding and you are not using a child restraint device for a young child — then you are going to be cited.

"In the final analysis," Heathington says, "this really is a child advocacy law. Children can't vote, can't lobby and don't buy cars, all the things adults can do to bring about change."

Heathington, like most traffic safety experts, says he could like to see a mandatory belt-usage law passed for everyone.

"I wish we had a general seat belt law," he said, "although achieving high belt usage doesn't necessarily require a law. It could be done by the insurance companies, if they would give lower premiums to seat belt users."

Heathington suggested a plan that could work this way: If you were injured in an accident and your seat belts weren't buckled, no medical insurance would be paid.

"Why not?" he asks. "Some insurance companies give cheaper rates if you don't smoke, or if you can prove that you don't drink. Why not fix it so you can get cheaper insurance premiums if you wear seat belts? I've been arguing this a long time."

Harrington is sharply critical of the Washington Institute of Highway Safety, the auto insurance industry's lobbying arm in Washington.

"They want the air bags," he says. "So they look at Australia, Sweden, Canada and all the rest that have mandatory seat belt laws and say, 'You only get 50 percent or 60 percent or 80 percent of the people using them; and when you don't enforce it, it drops to 40 percent.' But what they don't tell you is that the usage may only have been 5 percent to start with, and 50 percent from 5 percent is a pretty good increase. They are warping their interpretation."

Heathington concedes that seat belts are not "the whole answer.

"There have to be a lot of other things. But if you get half of the people and half of the kids in restraint devices, it's a whole lot better than putting them in cars without anything. And maybe even better than air bags. The cost of the air bags is so great, and they don't protect you in all instances anyway.

"That is especially true with children," says Heathington. "If you get hit from the side or from the rear, you can actually throw a child and kill him and the air bag would never inflate."

Federal accident statistics also have recorded several accidents where infants received serious injuries such as skull fractures and broken bones when they were struck full force by air bags erupting from underneath dashboards.

National Campaign Backs Ghana's Rabbit Project

ACCRA, Ghana (AP) — When you tune in your radio in this capital city of Ghana on the west coast of Africa these days, you are likely to hear a series of catchy jingles beginning, "Get the rabbit habit!" or "Make the bunny money!"

Similar advice is blazoned across billboards along the highways and in the public squares of town and villages.

The publicity is part of a nationwide campaign backing Ghana's national rabbit project, which is promoting backyard rabbit breeding as a means of increasing meat supplies, at low cost, and with a minimum of extra effort.

Although Ghana now produces all of its own rice and enough maize to meet the requirements of its more than 9.5 million people, there is still a chronic shortage of meat, and when meat products do reach the market they are priced far beyond the means of the majority of the population.

The rabbit, which is of African origin, has several characteristics that make it ideal as a source of meat in developing countries. The gestation period for bunnies is only 31 days and a healthy female can produce three or four litters, averaging six to eight offspring, every year. Starting with a buck and a doe, a backyard breeder can obtain a quantity of meat over the course of a year equal to the weight of an average cow.

Food for rabbits is readily available in Ghana. The animals will eat almost anything, including table scraps, leftovers from sugar-cane harvests, various kinds of grass, groundnut and sweet potato vines. Brewers mash, left as a residue from the locally produced millet beer and formerly discarded as useless, furnishes an excellent source of protein.

Although rabbits require clean, quiet quarters, their upkeep is not difficult and requires no great amount of time. People who work during the day can easily tend them mornings and evenings.

Ghana's National Rabbit Project got under way in 1972 and has attracted international interest and support. Since the wild local rabbit is a small animal weighing only about 2 pounds, the development of hybrids yielding more meat but hardy enough to do well under Ghana's varying climatic conditions became a first priority. The government of Switzerland provided a gift of 120 rabbits to get the project started. Other breeds have come from the U.S., New Zealand, Australia, Belgium and the Netherlands.

Realizing that it had to "sell" the idea of rabbit breeding to families all across the country, the government of Ghana in 1974 requested the United Nations Development Program and the U.N. Food and Agriculture Organization to assist in establishing an information unit in the Ministry of Agriculture. The U.N. sent Joseph Ascroft, a national of Malawi, who is a professor in the School of Journalism at the University of Iowa.

The publicity campaign devised by Ascroft is in full swing.

Posters, all designed by local artists, generated widespread interest. Schools included rabbit-breeding in their curricula and provided students with lunches containing the only meat they had eaten for weeks.

Some 160 persons traveled to Ghana at their own expense to form a national rabbit breeders' association. Competitions have been held to choose the "Rabiteer

YWCA HONORS WOMEN — The YWCA will host a reception from 3-4 p.m. today honoring its women of the month for the past year and a half. APPLE CHEESE COFFEECAKE

CAKE:
- 2 cups (about 2 medium) apples, pared, cored and sliced
- ½ cup milk
- ¼ cup (⅛ stick) butter, melted
- 1 egg, slightly beaten
- 1⅛ cups sifted all-purpose flour
- 2/3 cup sugar
- 2 tsp. baking powder
- ½ tsp. salt
- 2 tsp. grated lemon peel
- 1 cup (4 oz.) shredded Cheddar cheese

TOPPING:
- ¼ cup (1 oz.) shredded Cheddar cheese
- ¼ cup chopped pecans
- 2 tbsp. brown sugar
- 1 tbsp. flour
- ½ tsp. cinnamon

Preheat oven to 375 degrees. For cake, combine milk, butter and egg; reserve. Combine flour, sugar, baking powder and salt. Stir reserved milk mixture into dry ingredients. Stir in lemon peel and cheese. Spread half of the batter in well buttered 8-inch square baking pan. Cover with two-thirds of the apples placed in a single layer in rows. Spread remaining batter over apples. Arrange remaining apples in rows in center of cake forming a cross. For topping, combine all ingredients. Sprinkle over apples and cake. To prevent topping from excessive browning and to keep apples moist, place a piece of aluminum foil lightly over top of cake. Remove during last 15 minutes of baking. Bake until wooden pick inserted near center comes out clean, about 50 minutes. Let cool 30 minutes before serving. Yield: One 8-inch cake.

WEATHER VAIN

ROTTERDAM, Netherlands (WNS) — At 102, Johanna van Lookeren predicts the weather better than weather scientists. "All you need is corns," she said. "Constant ache means rain or snow. Spasmodic pain indicates a cold wave on the way — and so it goes." If you haven't got corns, "ask your chiropodist," she suggested.

Clothing Care Saves Energy

COLLEGE STATION (Special) — Practice wise clothing care methods to conserve energy and possibly cut utility costs.

The greatest savings can occur with reduced water temperatures for laundering, says Becky Culp, clothing specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Heating water accounts for three percent of all U.S. energy usage, she reports.

Reduce energy consumption in doing home laundry 50 percent by using warm water for washing and cold water for rinsing rather than using hot water temperatures.

In fact, between 1970 and 1976, studies show that the number of loads washed in warm water increased by 15 percent while the number washed in hot water decreased by the same amount with about 50 percent of households using warm temperatures.

However, the general rule still holds true — use hot water (130 degrees) for the most difficult cleaning jobs or for sanitation.

Also, use warm water (100-110 degrees) on fabrics with greasy, oily stains by first pretreating and/or presoaking soiled areas, the specialist recommends.

Since lower wash temperatures can lead to an increased bacteria count at the end of the wash cycle, use a disinfectant especially during flu or cold seasons or when infant clothing is part of the regular laundry.

When using cold water wash temperatures (60-80 degrees) dissolve powdered detergents before use or use a liquid detergent or one formulated for cold water washes, she suggests.

Also, more detergent may be needed for effective cleaning.

Alpha Phi Plans Lollipop Drive

"Helping Lick Heart Disease" and "Alpha Phi Helping Hearts" are the themes of the Lubbock Alpha Phi Alumnae and Texas Tech University collegiate chapter's seventh annual Cardiac Aid Lollipop Drive which will begin Thursday.

The alumnaes and collegiates hope to sell 30,000 lollipops this year. Funds from the sale will be used to purchase a Cardio-Pak Monitor Defibrillator to be used in Methodist Hospital.

Heart Projects is the international philanthrophy of Alpha Phi. Chapters throughout the U.S. and Canada sell a million lollipops each year and contribute over $100,000 annually to the American Heart Association, local heart projects and to the Alpha Phi Foundation which helps fund heart research.

The red heart-shaped lollipops, which will be displayed in grocery stores, restaurants, businesses and on the Tech campus, will be on sale until Feb. 14. Anyone wishing to purchase lollipops in bulk may call 792-7209 or 745-2753.

A defibrillator, which displays electrocardiogram waveforms, is used when the heart muscle fibrillates or begins to contract at random in a fast, uncoordinated manner. The heart cannot pump blood and in certain situations, blood circulation ceases, a lethal condition unless the rhythm of the heart muscle can be restored.

Two paddles carry an electrical current across the heart, blocking the abnormal activity of the muscle giving it an opportunity to let a more normal rhythm take over and circulate the blood again.

The portable defibrillator has a self-contained monitor screen to show how the heart is functioning while the doctor and nurses work with the patient and it can be carried along with the patient from one area to another.

Family Budget Threatened By 'Cashaholic'

By BETTY YARMON
Women's News Service

NEW YORK (WNS) -If someone refers to you as a cashaholic or a sale-aholic, watch out. For each represents characteristics potentially dangerous for the family budget.

A cashaholic, says Shirley Conran in her new book, "Superwoman" (Crown), is someone who is hopeless with money. She explains that psychologists believe cashaholics result when parents give children only pocket money for treats and presents, instead of giving them a proper allowance and teaching them to spend it responsibily.

"The result," she says, "is that the child, when grown up, thinks of money in terms of treats and personal pleasure, as opposed to dreary things like taxes and insurance premiums."

What to do? Best advice, Mrs. Conran offers, is to treat yourself as an alcoholic and lock up the bottle — in this case by not owning a checkbook or credit cards, dealing only in cash, and stop spending when your wallet is empty.

A few other tricks may prove helpful:

Form a Cashaholics Anonymous with a similarly afflicted friend, and phone her when you have the urge to spend. She can reel off a litany of bills and responsibilities, and hopefully this will deter you.

Make up a shopping list only of essential and necessary items. Stick to it, adding not one extra item.

As a last resort, shop by telephone. This may be more expensive, but you will avoid extravagant temptations.

If you can afford it, turn your income over to a professional money manager who, for a fee, will dole out your spending money, pay your bills, and generally organize your financial life. Your bank, credit union, or local office of the Better Business Bureau can give you the names of reputable finance counselors.

A sale-aholic is the term given to those of us — men as well as women, although women seem to be more afflicted — who simply cannot resist a sale.

Sale-aholics often are the reason for a merchant to plan a sale. For he knows that some shoppers will come to his sale, no matter where or when, just so long as he seems to be offering something off-price. He knows there are many of us so afflicted that we will buy at a sale without relationship to what we need or can afford.

How can the sale-aholic be protected from the ravages of his or her ailment? Given that this is a free country, and that merchants are at liberty to offer merchandise at just about whatever price they wish, there isn't much that others can do to help. But the sale-aholic would be wise to keep certain realities in mind. Learn these well, and perhaps the damage can be minimized:

1. Don't buy sale merchandise out of keeping with your lifestyle. If you live the simple life, a limousine is an absurd purchase for you regardless of its price tag. Even if it were reduced to a price you could afford, the upkeep and maintenance would put it out of line for you.

2. Sale merchandise often is merchandise that is out of style — or about to go out of style. It is not unlikely that sports merchandise offered now, in an off-season, will be superseded by other sports styles when you are ready to wear such merchandise. If you are style conscious — and you should know your own habits — you will discard the merchandise no matter how cheap it came.

3. But even if the sale merchandise offered will not go out of style, do you have enough storage space for it? Are you sure that by next spring or summer you won't have moved to another part of the country, where you ought to have something heavier or lighter? Aren't there other similar questions you should be asking yourself?

4. You rarely find a complete selection of sizes and colors. The price may tempt you to compromise by picking a shoe that is too small, or to buy something in mauve when that's the color you really hate — and will be a something you will hardly ever wear.

5. Sales are not for the indecisive, to those subject to frequent changes of mind. Much bargain merchandise is announced with the line: "All transactions are final."

6. If you like to shop in peace and quiet, again, sales may not be for you. Many stores do not accept mail or phone orders for sale merchandise. This means you will have to fight your way through an army of other bargain hunters. The going is particularly rough at the opening of the sale — which is when you should be able to find the best bargains.

FIRE ESCAPE

Since most dwelling fires occur between midnight and dawn, practice fire escape routes from the bedroom, advises Claudia Kerbel, consumer information specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

By Jessie Lee Sharpley

Today we can do more for you with Retro styling. Retro styling is suggestive of that nostalgic look of the 40's. It is not a repeat or a copy, but simply a sentimental glance back into the past to capture a style size, a hair direction, or a form.

The Retro collection features a small head look and can be achieved with different lengths of hair from the shortest short to the longest long. Military bangs are featured, and the volume flows softly for the casual look, is smoother and dramatic after dark, and can even be geometric for the smart fashion sophisticate.

One of the new details is artistic basket weaving. This weaving is used in short and medium length hair for ornamentation. In long hair the basket weaving is designed for a total creation. Ornamental twists are definitely a part of the small head look, and with the very long hair can be arranged in unbelievable designs.

The bizarre frizzies are definitely out. Hair should look healthy and feel silky.

There are so many things new and exciting in hair color which are really super for younger, softer looks with natural highlights.

Custom color would cost at least $100 in the top salons in New York, but the students and instructors at Jessie Lee's are prepared to offer this service for a fraction of the cost. In fact, student prices are available for all services.

With such reasonable prices and such fun new trends, now is the time to experiment for that "I can't believe it's me" look. Call us at Jessie Lee's, 792-6311.

Calling All Homemakers

By SYD MOORE, A.S.I.D.

One bedroom idea is to use a low chest instead of the usual night stand. This way you can make use of the storage space underneath, as well as the surface and then you can take advantage of the increased wall area above the chest by placing a group of pictures or other accessories there to make your bedroom different and attractive.

One way to end the clutter of "things" in a bedroom is to use a cabinet with shelves that can be both useful and decorative. Use it for books, television, collections, family pictures, etc. Attractively arranged it will enhance — and not clutter a room.

Another way to put new life in your bedroom is to use a new headboard. Give the room a decorator look by using a headboard that does not match the suite.

Lavishing a single dynamic pattern over bedspread and draperies offers a sure-fire way to turn a non-descript bedroom into a dramatic delight.

There's nothing that adds to the beauty of a bedroom more than a nice folding screen. Originally, screens were used for privacy in dressing. But not they're used more to create a special touch to a room.

Authors, Illustrators of Children's Books Favor Amusing 'Make-Believe' Characters

By BARBARA ELLEMAN
American Library Assn.

An elephant on a grocery shopping trip, a baseball-batting bear, a tremendous tadpole, a mushroom loving "rhinosterwurst," a liberated, scheming troll-girl, and a pig who loves to ride the wind! Non-human characters placed in fantastical situations are favorites of the writers and illustrators who create funny picture books for children.

They are not out to instill a message, convey a mood, or teach a concept; a giggle, or even a grin, is satisfaction enough.

"The Pig Who Could Conjure The Wind" is a highly original story about a flying witch pig who loves, more than life itself, the sound of bells. Miss Folly has a vulnerable heart as well and after rescuing several victims of a wind demon finds herself cursed — "You will not, from this day, ever fly when the bells start to ring." Unfortunately, the bells start tolling at the most awkward moments.

Her precipitious descent during a church service eventually lands her in jail, but presiding over her trial is an extraordinary judge who finds the notion of a flying pig quite wonderful and sentences her to polishing the highest church windows.

Shirley Murphy's hand-picked words vividly describe each situation. Mark Lefkowitz's black-and-white pen drawings lend an air of wild abandon to this clever tale.

"Helga's Dowry: A Troll Love Story" opens with a young troll-girl distraught over her single state. Not to marry is an affront to the gods, yet she, "the loveliest Troll in three parishes," cannot wed Lars because she has no dowry. Determined to win her true love over the head of her rival, rich but plain Inge, Helga ventures into the Land of People, where she uses her special magic to amass cows, gold and land. Not even Inge's sly tricks daunt the resolute troll maiden.

But upon winning the marriage portion, she turns on a surprised Lars, berating him for his greed — to the delight of the king, who immediately proposes. Humor bubbles through Tomi DePaola's story and pictures. Squat, buck-toothed, be-tailed trolls and bemused bystanders cavort across richly colored paintings trimmed with hearts and flowers.

In "Pumpernickel Tickle and Mean Green Cheese," Benjamin and his friend El (short for Elephant) are sent to the store for "A loaf of dark brown pumpernickel bread, and a half-pound piece of yellow cheese, and a great big, very green, nice dill-pickle." Fearful of forgetting, Ben repeats the list along the way while his playful companion teasingly prances around, twisting the words until they both collapse in laughter, hopelessly mixed up.

At the grocery, all that comes out is "dark brown belly-tickle. And a half-pound bumperstickle. And a very nice, very nice, great big mean green SNEEZE, please!" Struggling to remember, the two eventually hit upon the word "bread," which jogs Benjamin's memory. Soon, with Benj happily clutching the groceries and sitting astride El's trunk, the two sing out "Pumpernickel-tickle-pickle" and "Pick-a-pack-of-pickle-peas" all the way home. Nancy Patz's robust, full color line work rounds out an exuberant story in which the alliterative dialogue invites child participation.

Mercer Mayer's "Appelard and Liverwurst" is set in Cyclone County where farmer Appelard lives with his chicken, cow, goat and a fat pig named Westminster. Having lost his mule in the last tornado, Appelard can't till his fields, until the day he discovers a lost baby rhinoceros eating mushrooms in his cellar.

"Liverwurst the rhinosterwurst," as Appelard calls him, is so enamored of the vegetable that he is happy to plow the fields in anticipation of the mushroom dangling before his nose. A bumper crop results, but when Liverwurst makes chaos of market day, he is thrown into jail. About this time his mother shows up, making building blocks of the jailhouse, searching for her son. The two escape over the county line, with Appelard and his menagerie in tow. They join the rhinoceros' old circus troupe and all live under the big top successfully ever after.

In "The Mysterious Tadpole," illustrator Kellogg turns writer to create a cleverly integrated text and illustrations. Uncle McAllister's birthday gift to Louis is a run-of-the mill tadpole. When Alphonse outgrows his jar, the sink, and the bathtub, it's obvious that Louis' cheeseburger-eating pal is no ordinary frog.

The junior high school swimming pool provides a ready refuge for the summer and in the meantime Louis enlists the aid of Miss Seevers, the librarian. The three of them (Alphonse included) embark on an adventure, resulting in a permanent home for Alphonse, just in time for Uncle McAllister's next birthday gift — this time a strange-acting "stone."

"Casey At The Bat" is a joyous recreation of that famous day in Mudville with a colorful cast of animals covering all the bases. Once again the mighty Casey steps to the plate, once again he swing with shattering force — and once again echoes back the doleful refrain, "There is no joy in Mudville — mighty Casey has struck out."

While a smug, haughty, ursine Casey approaches the bat, an agile bobcat winds up on the pitcher's mound, a feisty bulldog crouches behind home plate, and an officious pink-snouted pig cries, "Strike." The energetic text and drawings provide a perfect contrast to the final page, where a lone mouse picks up debris in a very empty ball park. Echoes of many a ball game come and gone ring out with each re-reading of this long-favorite poem.

Real To Reel

By William D. Kerns

Leslie Elaine Thurman has been bitten by the acting bug, and the 1978 Miss Lubbock is enjoying the symptoms to such an extent that she appears completely disinterested in finding a cure. Though financial needs have recently seen her giving up music classes at Texas Tech University in favor of a job writing copy for KEND radio, she certainly hasn't taken a break from performing.

Indeed, whether in a starring or supporting role, Miss Thurman's goal is simply to stay on stage.

Some may remember her from "I Do, I Do" at the Hayloft Dinner Theater, "Kiss Me, Kate" at Lubbock Theatre Centre, the Civic Lubbock production of "South Pacific" or the more recent "Ladies At The Alamo," definitely a change in image, at Texas Tech's University Theater. Miss Thurman is currently cast as Meg, the rather forward lass who's suffered "her share of heartbreaks," in the First United Methodist Church's major musical production of "Brigadoon." And during a break in rehearsals Wednesday night, she revealed that, though she'd initially wanted the starring role of Fiona, she's more than happy playing Meg because her character is "simple, happy and uncomplicated."

Musical to be staged Friday & Saturday

With only two songs in the show, she admits she'd like to be on stage more — but if rehearsals are any indication, Miss Thurman will most likely be remembered regardless. If only for her energy. Mind you, rehearsals can be long, tedious, tiring affairs. But Miss Thurman was one of the few projecting warmth throughout the ensemble scenes, even when not in the spotlight. In another scene she displayed a fine stage presence by stopping in mid-giggle to ask a question of the director, immediately thereafter stepping back into her part at the precise point she left.

Asked if she's aware of the energy she transmits, the actress adopted a serious tone and answered, "The only time I have trouble turning it (energy) on is when I'm depressed by something in my personal life. But I try to show a lot of energy for the other people in the cast. A lot of them have been real nice and told me they've had fun working with me in the show. And I don't want to let them down.

"Hopefully, if I keep showing a lot of energy and enthusiasm, it will inspire others to do the same thing."

No doubt there is also the added factor of wanting to leave an impression on prominent New York director Jack Eddleman.

Though Miss Thurman credits her voice instructor, John Gillas, as the person who has most aided her career, she positively gushes superlatives when asked her impressions of Eddleman. Almost instinctively, the phrase, "He's neat" pops out. But she elaborates with, "He's really different. One can learn so much from him. He's very familiar, very aware of all areas of the stage: with acting and dancing and music and lighting. He's seen and done so much."

Indeed he has. Eddleman has directed across the country, including many stints with the New York City Opera. He staged "Candide" last year at Dallas' Theater Three, and has directed opera star Beverly Sills on more than one occasion. After watching close to three hours of rehearsals Wednesday, one also comes to the conclusion quite easily that Eddleman is a no-nonsense director. When he barked the word "Good!" sharply, the cast appeared to regard it as highpraise. But if a mistake occurred — if the tempo was too slow, if an ensemble member was out of position, is a prop was set incorrectly — Eddleman was not afraid to stomp his foot and spit out corrections in a harsh tone.

Still, Miss Thurman indicated she prefers a strict director. "If a director doesn't jump all over me when I do something wrong," she explained, "then he's not going to jump on anyone else who makes mistakes. And that can usually result in a lax cast and a crummy show."

Miss Thurman, who likes to laugh and describes herself as "crazy" and "silly" most of the time, nevertheless has a very serious goal: the New York stage. Sure, that's a goal held by thousands of young actresses, but Miss Thurman hopes to increase her chances by expanding her repertoire. Asked if winning the Miss Lubbock pageant last year helped or hindered her acting career, she couldn't even conceive of a way it might hurt. Phrasing the question differently, I asked whether she ever was forced to try harder to prove herself to people who might equate her talent with her beauty.

She laughed at the thought.

"No," she said, "I feel that being Miss Lubbock has done nothing but open doors for me. I've always used my title on job applications because I think it tells people I'm not just some dumb person from the sticks. It's helped me meet a lot of people."

Influential people?

"Some of them, yes."

Those who stereotype pageant winners may have been shocked to see Miss Thurman's portrayal of a lusty, vulgar alcoholic in "Ladies At The Alamo." That marked her first "straight, non-musical" performance, and the actress said she never once considered image problems.

She explained, "I would hope that people would know when I walk on stage that I'm no longer Miss Lubbock or even Leslie Thurman. I'm an actress playing a role. As for my role in 'Ladies At The Alamo,' it was a lot of fun. But I took the part only because I felt I could play it. My ultimate goal is musical theater. Musical comedy, I guess, because I've only recently discovered that I can be funny. But I don't want to be limited. In 'Ladies,' I played a role where I could not rely on songs. That helped.

"I'd like to be in musicals, but that doesn't mean I'd turn down a part on a soap opera or something like that if one came along..."

Weaknesses? Miss Thurman has evaluated herself and come up with two: "my dancing and my naiveness." The dancing she hopes to conquer through more and more dance classes. The naivete she feels she won't lose "until I actually do get to New York. Experience is the only remedy for that problem of mine."

But somehow this lovely actress with the invigorating personality, this woman who says she's "too much of a ham" to ever leave the theater, didn't come across as completely naive. How could she when she says things like, "I'm really enjoying learning to be a copy writer. And besides, if I ever do get to New York and try to get an acting job, it'll be good to have something else to fall back on so I can buy groceries."

("Brigadoon" will be staged at 8:15 p.m. Friday and Saturday at the Civic Center theater. Tickets are on sale at the First United Methodist Church office and Hemphill-Wells at South Plains Mall.)

'Critic's Choice' Set At Tech

Ira Levin's comedy hit "Critic's Choice" will be staged as a backstage dinner theater production at 7 p.m. Feb. 7-10 at the Texas Tech University Center theater. This is the first presentation of dinner theater by Tech, and is unique in that the play, meal and audience will all be situated on the stage.

University Center theater coordinator Jim Prior will direct the comedy. Starring are John Carney as Parker Ballentine, Julia McQuain as Angela Ballentine, Kim Lemon as John Ballentine, Mary Donahue as Ivy London, Char Corl as Charlotte Orr, Becky Rugel as Essie and Jon Whatley as Dion.

The play is a situation comedy in which Parker Ballentine, a Broadway critic, is threatened by his wife's successful ventureinto playwriting. Howard Taubman wrote in the New York Times, "The hero is a drama critic. . .What is the most searching way to test this paragon's integrity? Have his wife write a play. A stinker, naturally. . .He heckles the little woman, tells her she won't finish the play and, when it is completed, candidly informs her that it's awful. And what's worst of all, he insists that on opening night he will do his duty like a man: he'll review the play himself. There you have the beginnings of the problem."

The film version of this play starred Bob Hope and Lucille Ball.

The dinner at each presentation will be catered by the University Center catering service, under the direction of Jay Schrock. The audience will have a choice between two menus, which will include beef shishkebob and chicken terragon.

ENMU's 'Raphael Trio' Slates Concert Tuesday

Eastern New Mexico University's "Raphael Trio" will be featured in concert at 8:15 p.m. Tuesday at the Texas Tech University Recital Hall. There is no admission charge.

The trio — pianist Ruth Meyer, cellist Arthur M. Welker and violinist David Tubergen — has performed for the state convention of the New Mexico Music Teachers Association, the Chamizal National Memorial and the Roswell Chamber Music Series. More recently, the trio performed at conventions for the New Mexico Music Educators and the Southwest Division Of Music Educators.

Miss Meyer is chairman of the piano department at ENMU, holding degrees from the Oberlin Conservatory of Music, the Eastman School of Music and the University of Colorado. She received an NDEA grant for her doctoral studies at Colorado, and a Fulbright grant for further study in Salzburg, Austria.

Welker presently serves as director of symphony at ENMU, but has also worked as conductor of the Greenville Symphony and the Mississippi All-State Orchestra. He has played with the Pittsburgh Symphony, Pittsburgh Opera, Bolshoi Ballet and the Caldwell String Quartet. He received his degrees from Duquesne University in Pittsburgh.

Tubergen studied at Hope College, Yale University's school of music and New York University. He has soloed with the Battle Creek Symphony Orchestra and the Connecticut Chamber Orchestra.

The Raphael Trio's program Tuesday will include music by Haydn, Faure and Beethoven.

Guest Guitarist Alice Artzt to perform Saturday

Guitarist Alice Artzt Featured In Concert

Guitarist Alice Artzt will be featured in concert at 8:15 p.m. Saturday in the Texas Tech University Recital Hall. Tickets are currently on sale at the campus music department office, with Tech students granted a significant discount.

On the occasion of Miss Artzt's London debut in 1969, the critic of the Daily Telegraph wrote, "There was a power and a refreshing exuberance in the guitar playing of the young American, Alice Artzt, in her recital at Wigmore Hall last night." Since then critics in Europe, Asia, Africa and the Americas have unanimously acclaimed her performances.

Miss Artzt showed exceptional talent from an early age. After studying the piano and the flute, she turned to the classical guitar at age 13. She studied guitar in France with Ida Presti and Alexandre Lagoya, and in England with Julian Bream. She also studied composition with Darius Milhaud, and has done graduate work in composition and musicology at Columbia University.

Since her international debut, she has toured Europe eight times with concerts, radio recordings and television appearances in England, Wales, Norway, France, Belgium, Holland, Germany, Austria, Switzerland, Yugoslavia, Italy and Spain. She has also made extensive tours of the United States and Canada, and has performed in Mexico, Guatemala, Honduras, El Salvador, Nicaragua, Costa Rica, Panama, Jamaica, Trinidad, Surinam, Guyana, Venezuela, Colombia, Ecuador, Peru, Bolivia, Paraguay, Argentina and Brazil in yearly tours under the auspices of the United States Information Service.

She has performed in South Africa, Madagascar, Sudan, Lebanon, Syria, India, Bangladesh, Thailand, South Vietnam, The Phillipines, Hong Kong, Japan and Australia.

Her solo programs include a wide range os styles from Renaissance and Baroque lute music, which she studies from the original tablatures, to contemporary compositions. She has had works dedicated to her by sveral well-known composers, including Duarte of Engalnd, Santorsola of Uruguay and Gilardino of Italy.

She has also appeared as soloist with such orchestras as the Vienna Symphony, and has recorded several albums.

United Artists To Film 'Chilly Scenes Of Winter'

NEW YORK (Special) — "Chilly Scenes Of Winter," a modern love story, will be filmed for United Artists release by director-writer Joan Micklin Silver.

Miss Micklin, whose unique personal touch was demonstrated in "Hester Street" and "Between The Lines," has based her screenplay on the novel by Ann Beattie.

The cast will be headed by John Heard (one of the stars in "Between The Lines") and Mary Beth Hurt (who was stupendous in Woody Allen's "Interiors").

Recital To Feature Terry Cook At LCC

Terry Cook will be featured in voice recital at 4 p.m. Wednesday in the choral room at Lubbock Christan College; there is no admission charge.

Accompanist is Marilyn Arland.

CURTAIN TO RISE ON 'NIGHT MUST FALL' — The murder mystery "Night Must Fall" will be staged at 8:15 p.m. Friday, Saturday and again Feb. 9 and 10 at the Lubbock Theatre Centre. Direction is by Claudia Beach. The photo at left sees Regan Kimmel plotting another murder in the house of Mrs. Bramson. Kimmel regales Joel Hughes with some of his exploits in the center photo while, at right, Lillian Dreyer becomes excited when Bill Conley (as the inspector) tells of his exploits. Reservations and ticket information can be obtained by calling the Lubbock Theatre Centre box office. (Staff Photos by Gary Davis)

LHS To Offer Annual Winter Music Concert

Lubbock High School's music department will offer its annual Winter Concert at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the LHS auditorium. Tickets may be purchased at the door, with proceeds to be used to finance band trips to spring music festivals.

The Lubbock High School Band, directed by Jerry Starkes, will open the program with Lieb's "Dedication" and Bilik's "American Civil War Fantasy." Under the direction of Garland Jarvis, the Westernaires will then sing "Stiller Nacht" and the Hunter arrangement of "America."

The LHS Orchestra, under the direction of Boyce Wyrick, will then perform Chabrier's "Joyeus Marche" and selections from "Fiddler On The Roof." Soloists will be Martha Perez and Diana Sanchez.

All three musical groups will combine for "Joyful, Joyful, We Adore Thee" from Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.

Fernand Leger Subject For Art Seminar

Fernand Leger (1881-1955), noted for his fascination with machine forms and strong, flat colors, will be the subject of an art seminar at 10 a.m. Tuesday at the Texas Tech Museum. There is an admission charge.

The seminars are sponsored by the Women's Council of the West Texas Museum Association. Rabbi Alexander Kline is the lecturer.

Leger, who sculpted and for a time was co-editor of "Formes et Vie," was particularly noted for his evolution of a kind of cutvilinear Cubism dependant upon the dynamic shapes of machinery and their geometrical cones, cylinders, wheels and pistons.

His figures were massive and robot-like, and these figures came to dominate the broad planes and large areas of color in his post-1920 paintings.

"Two Women Holding Flowers" is from this period. His more recent masterpieces include "Transport Of Forces" and "Grand Parade," painted the year before his death. Less typical than these was his "Nudes In The Forest," painted during his early association with Braque and Picasso.

French Art Slated At Detroit Exhibit

DETROIT (UPI) — The largest assortment of French works of art ever to be shown in the United States will be on exhibit at the Detroit Institute of Arts Jan. 18-March 18.

Through some 360 paintings, sculptures, drawings, furnishings, textiles, decorative objects and period photographs, "The Second Empire" reflects the brief glittering reign (1852-1870) of Emperor Napoleon III, the last sovereign ruler of France, and his Empress Eugenie.

About three-quarters of the objects have never been shown outside of France, and the exhibition's value has been estimated at $34 million.

Tourist spending in New York State has increased $287 million during the past 16 months, according to state officials.

Archaeologists To Name Officers

Members and guests of the Lubbock Society of the Archaeological Institute of America will meet at 7:30 p.m. today in the University Center's Coronado Room on the Texas Tech University campus.

Members will elect new officers.

Tom B. Jones, regent's professor of history (emeritus) at the University of Minnesota, will present an illustrated lecture about Karanis, "Middletown" of Greco-Roman Egypt. Jones will reconstruct a picture of many aspects of life in a typical Egyptian village in the Roman imperial period. He will combine archaeological evidence with that of contemporary documents on papyrus.

ART TALK

Art Shows

By LA WANDA MURFEE

Art shows offer an interesting pasttime even if one is not in the market to purchase. Comparing artists' production can afford an education in itself. Listening to comments at an exhibit is another side of the amusement.

For an Andrew Wyeth show at the Whitney Museum in New York, people lined the street six abreast for a period of six weeks. They stood in the rain and hot sun waiting to view Wyeth's work of several years. Remarks of sophisticates, favorably and otherwise, about the realism portrayed, were as interesting as the exhibit. However, an analysis of any Wyeth painting reveals their abstract design, powerful in portrayal, simple in subject.

As a child would say he prefers only a few foods or an adolescent assumes his knowledge is all inclusive, the most frequent comment at any exhibit is "I know what I like". That statement can be turned around to read, "I like what I know," thereby expanding horizons that will in turn broaden an appreciation of many kinds of art. An exhibit that might be unappreciated or misunderstood could be the catalyst to spur further investigation into artists' methods.

Many successful self taught artists learn from scrutinizing other artist's work. An artist is easily spotted at an exhibit as he examines the items closely, studies the design, brush strokes and color. Techniques, variety of shapes and surety or struggle of application are contemplated. The exhibiting artists, whether present or not, is considered as well as the work.

Some show visitors are caught up in a particular artist's talent, and attend every display that artist has. Likewise the artist enjoys the patrons while he explains the work, how and why a piece is presented, its inspiration. Every painting has a story connected with it and few painters are reticent about talking about their production.

Still others attend shows looking for wall decoration, a rendering of certin color or subject matter. Another patron might seek inspiration of his own work and share experience and philosophies with the artist. Another group might be the serious collector who is not particularly interested in the artist as a personality. Each person attends for a different reason, but buying is seldom a purpose.

AN EASIER WAY OF DOING BUSINESS

West Texas . . . built by men and women who took the risks, the gambles . . . and let someone else be content with the guarantees.

At the First Bank of Shallowater, we're proud to be an active friend with independent businessmen like Gary Grant and Ed Finley.

Gary's been with the bank since 1968 and as he put it, "First Bank of Shallowater is more personal than a bigger bank. They've always taken care of us. It's just an easier way of doing business."

Changes Mark Gibbons Band

By DOUG PULLEN
A-J Rock Correspondent

A new label, producer and sound mean nothing but positive change for the Steve Gibbons Band. The hard working English group has suffered in the past from a distinct lack of directional control.

But the aforementioned changes mark a turning point in the group's career. The band's record distribution has changed in America from MCA Records to upstart Polydor Records, a label fast becoming the American bastion for the more intense, experimental music in rock.

The group's Polydor debut is called "Down In The Bunker," a solid album thanks in part to producer Tony Visconti, who's been working wonders with a string of groups ever since leaving Magna Carta in the early 1970s. His work with such diverse talents as David Bowie and the now extinct flamenco-rock group Carmen is indicative of the array of artistry Visconti is able to derive.

Visconti's production brings out the richness of Gibbons coarse voice, a voice which can sound one minute like Alex Harvey and the next like Bob Dylan. Gibbons is an emotive singer who, like Graham Parker, sings with as much conviction as expertise.

Gibbons' music is soulful in that devout English fashion. He sings of daily life, not in a bland way, but in a communicative style which conveys a commoner's sentiments, if not his deep feelings. The gruffness of Gibbons' voice adds credibility to his thematicism, giving songs like "Any Road Up" and "Down In The City" a gritty ambience worthy of a film director's vivid imagination.

Much of "Down In The Bunker's" success lies in the authenticity of the music. Credit must go to Gibbons' band, a four-member outfit which tries neither to obstruct the music nor fade into the background. The group is vital to Gibbons' singing and Visconti's production efforts.

Particularly good is the guitar work between Gibbons and Dave Carroll. The two simply flow together, with Carroll's guitar playing forming a strong basis around which Gibbons' voice can intertwine.

The Steve Gibbons Band derives much of its power from the sheer energy implicit in the restraint of the music, which is written by Gibbons. His themes of street life, a life where one must live constantly "on the razor's edge," are not merely genuine, but chilling as well.

Don't get the impression Gibbons is proselutyzing, trying to convince the listener of the glories of such a challenging life. He's not. Gibbons merely exalts in the working class environment in which he was raised. Gibbons communicates this through observations, images which represent the ups and downs of life: love, hate, pleasure, pain, good times, bad times.

This simple quality makes "Down In The Bunker" a pleasurable album. The LP isn't the type of record intended to knock your socks off (though "Eddie Vortex" may). "Down In The Bunker" is about the grit and grime of life as it is, not life as we would like it to be.

Dates Set For Annual Products Show

Dates for the second annual Home Products Show, sponsored by the Associate Council of the West Texas Home Builders Association, have been set for May 11-13.

The show will be held in the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center and is open to the public.

Among the approximately 128 exhibits will be items and furnishings not only for remodeling and newly constructed homes, but for modernizing every area of a present home. Booth space is still available for rental. Membership in the association is not required.

Attendance at last year's first show was estimated at 5,000, and the Associate Council is predicting at least double that total this year.

The Associate Council of the West Texas Home Builders Association is comprised of member suppliers and services for Lubbock and area home builders.

Persons interested in securing a booth for the show should contact the West Texas Home Builders Association office at 799-4188.

Davidson To Direct Ritter, 'Nice Guys'

CULVER CITY, Calif. (Special) — Martin Davidson will direct MGM's "Who Says Nice Guys Finish Last?" for producer Stephen J. Friedman.

John Ritter stars in the big screen romantic comedy scheduled to go before the cameras early this year. The screenplay is by A.J. Carothers.

Davidson recently directed "Almost Summer" for Universal. He was also responsible for the discovery of three new young stars — Sylvester Stallone, Henry Winkler and Susan Sarandon.

O'Neill Birthday Celebration Set

NEW YORK (UPI) — Plans already are under way to celebrate the 100th anniversary of the birth of Nobel playwright Eugene O'Neill, who was born Oct. 16, 1888. A committee set up to organize the festivities has announced plans for annual celebrations every Oct. 16.

This summer a number of O'Neill's plays will be produced, under the direction of O'Neill expert Jose Quintero. The New York Shakespeare Festival has offered the use of its Public Theater facilities and the Circle in the Square company has offered its Broadway theater for these plays. Jason Robards, Colleen Dewhurst and Geraldine Fitzgerald have volunteered to join the acting company.

McPartland's Quintet Scores Musical Coup

By WILLIAM D. LAFFLER
United Press International

Marian McPartland is an outstanding jazz musician who can stand a piano on end, and her stylings blend nicely with other artists.

In 1977, Marian brought four other women together into a jazz session and pulled off a musical coup even though only two of them had known each other before the meeting.

Eight of the tunes may be heard on "Now's the Time!" (Halcyon HAL 115), a jazz record that belongs in every collector's library.

The quintet consists of Marian McPartland on piano, Mary Osborne on guitar, Vi Redd on sax, Lynn Milano on bass and Dottie Dodgion on drums. Miss Dodgion had played with Miss McPartland previously in a trio.

Each of the five artists get into the action but there is no tendency among any of them to dominate. The result is almost an hour of good jazz.

The McPartland piano is always ready to enhance a melody and create an opening for a fellow musician to move in.

One of thenstandout numbers is "Sophisticated Lady," with Mary Osborne offering a stunning performance on guitar. And Vi Redd's sax is really saxational on the album title tune and "But Beautiful." With Lynn Milano and Dottie Dodgion feeling the pulse with the base and drums, the jazz beat heightens.

Most of this concert is based on pop-type compositions, such as "Laura" and "I'll Remember April." There is only one slightly far-out number, Thelonius Monk's "Straight, No Chaser," but the quintet holds it within melodious bounds.

Halcyon Records has national distribution, but if "Now's the Time!" is unavailable in certain stores, information may be obtained from the company at 302 Clinton St., Bellmore, N.Y. 11710.

Pierre Auguste Renoir, the famous French Impressionist painter, died in 1919

FERRANTE & TEICHER TO APPEAR — Famed piano duo Ferrante and Ticher will be featured in concert at 8 p.m. Feb. 10 in the Civic Center theater. Tickets are now on sale at the Civic Center box office.

'Werther' To Be Texaco Opera

James Massenet's three-act opera "Werther" will be broadcast at 1 p.m. Saturday over the Texaco-Metropolitan Opera Radio Network. It will be aired locally on radio station KTXT-FM.

Singing principal roles will be soprano Regine Crespin, tenor Alfredo Kraus, soprano Kathleen Battle, baritone Lenus Carlson and bass Andrew Foldi.

During the first intermission, French opera authority Robert Lawrence will offer a musical and dramatic analysis of "Werther." The Texaco opera quiz will return at the second intermission with panelists Alberta Masiello, Ivan Davis, Terry McEwen and William Weaver. Edward Downes is quizmaster.

British Move Famous Oak Tree To New Location

HATFIELD, England (UPI) — One of England's most famous trees has been moved, root and trunk, to a new location. It is the oak under wmich the first Queen Elizabeth was sitting in Hatfield Park when she learned — on Nov. 17, 1558 — she had become queen.

Little was left of the tree but a branchless dead trunk. Owners of Hatfield House decided to move it out of the English weather and preserve what remains indoors.

Some 500 date-palm shoots were recently airlifted from California to Bombay and New Delhi. The shipment, arranged by the United Nations Development Program, is part of a project to assist India to re-establish its self-sufficiency in the cultivation of date palms.

'Class Of Miss MacMichael' To Open In Lubbock On Friday

NEW YORK (Special) — "The Class Of Miss MacMichael," a new comedy film starring Glenda Jackson, Oliver Reed, Michael Murphy and Rosalind Cash, will open Feb. 2 at the South Plains Cinema in Lubbock.

The film was produced by Judd Bernard from his own screenplay, based on Sandy Hutson's novel. It was directed by Silvio Narizzano.

Shot on location in and around London, it stars two-time Oscar winner Glenda Jackson as Connor MacMichael, a teacher whose desire to "reach" her anarchic class by treating them as human beings brings her into bitter conflict with the school's headmaster, Terence Sutton, a bloated egocentric portrayed by Oliver Reed.

American actor Michael Murphy stars as Martin, an American publishing executive working in London who is Miss MacMichael's skeptical boyfriend. Their romance reaches the crisis stage when Martin, already jealous of Miss MacMichael's consuming interest in her incorrigible students, is offered an important job in Boston and he asks her to accompany him to the United States as his wife.

Rosalind Cash, a young American actress portrays Una Ferrar, another concerned teacher at the school who is also Miss MacMichael's closest friend.

"The Class Of Miss MacMichael" is based on a novel by Sandy Hutson, a Californian who taught in a "special" school in the London area during the late 1960s. The school, named Selkirk in the film, contains tough, rebellious youngsters who are one step away from reform school.

The adolescents in the film outnumber the adults 40 to one. It's a huge and boisterous cast with some exciting young discoveries: a pert, curly-haired cross between Shirley Temple and Lee Remick, a handsome Nigerian (playing a dangerously disturbed youth) who had never ever seen a movie camera before, and another London East Ender who decided to base his characterization on his brother (a convicted felon).

Glenda Jackson, who won Academy Awards for her performances in "Women In Love" and "A Touch of Class," and a British Academy Award for "Sunday, Bloody Sunday," has co-starred with Oliver Reed twice before in "Women In Love" and "The Triple Echo." Among her other memorable film performances are "The Music Lovers," "Mary, Queen Of Scots," "Bequest To The Nation," "Hedda" and "Sarah."

Her most recent films are "Nasty habits" and "House Calls," the latter with Walter Matthau.

Country Notes

By Bob Campbell

WOODY GUTHRIE WOULD have liked Butch Hancock.

Forty years after Guthrie came out of the Dust Bowl Panhandle with his hair full of dirt and his blood full of songs, Hancock has come out of West Texas upbringing with a collection of Guthrie-style ballads called "West Texas Waltzes and Dust-Blown Tractor Tunes."

The title song, "West Texas Waltz," has been recorded by his friend and musical collaborator, Joe Ely, but several songs on the privately produced album are as much worth listening to as the one so humorously describing the joys of country dancing.

"I Grew to Be a Stranger," telling how education and travel made him "a stranger in the land that I love," is one that most West Texas prodigal sons would understand.

"Texas Air" is a musical landscape, making its delicious air and clean colors of the countryside as clear in the song as they really are, and is the prettiest song on the album with Hancock picking the guitar like Guthrie or Jimmie Rodgers and playing harmonica through a good instrumental break.

THE BEST SONG lyrically is "Just One Thunderstorm," which opens like this:

> "The ground turned white for miles around,
> and all the farmers cried.
> Hailstones killed a flock of birds > that found no place to hide.
> Some horses in the pasture > barely made it to the barn —
> all of that from just one thunderstorm."

The only weakness I see in the album is that Hancock waltzes around the key too much on some songs and makes "Just One Thunderstorm," "Little Coyote Waltz" and a couple of others hard listening.

His writing, though, is wholly original.

A Lubbock native, Hancock grew up here and at Clarendon. He had been playing in bands some around Austin but recently has dropped out of music to build a house there.

Holly Tape, Concerts Slated

Big news for Buddy Holly fans: Saturday will mark the anniversary of the famous rock and roller's death, and local radio station KLLL plans to mark the occasion with a special taped documentary from 4 to 6 p.m. The two hour session includes not only quite a bit of music, but also old recordings of Buddy Holly singing jingles for KLLL and interviews with Holly, Richie Valens and the Big Bopper. I am told there is also a segment from the WNEW-TV interview in New York City with Holly and deejay Alan Freed.

• • • • • • • •

Who says Lubbock doesn't get big concerts? Just look at what's on the horizon. Rock band Boston will perform Feb. 8 at the Lubbock Coliseum. The same hall will be the site of a concert by country sensation Merle Haggard on Feb. 17. And on March 2, we'll undergo some changes in latitudes and attitudes as Jimmy Buffet and his Coral Reefer Band climb on the same stage. Across town at the Civic Center, famed piano duo Ferrante & Teicher will appear Feb. 10.

• • • • • • • •

Time is running out if you still plan to participate in the A-J's readers' poll of the Best and Worst movies of 1978. "Coming Home" is still holding strong as the reader's preference for top honors, but letters this past week saw "An Unmarried Woman" make a big jump as well. My picks — and yours — will be printed Feb. 11.

• • • • • • • •

A-J rock correspondent Doug Pullen also will be printing his picks for Best and Worst albums of 1978 in next Sunday's A—J entertainment section. Look for it.

BIG SPENDERS

ATHENS (UPI) — Over $1 billion was spent by foreign tourists in Greece during the first nine months of 1978, says Takis Lambrias, secretary general of the Greek Tourist Organization. Compared with receipts during the same period in 1977, that represents a 32.9 percent increase in tourist income in foreign exchange.

Theater Going Into Past For New Plays

LONDON (UPI) — Britain's National Theater is reaching far back for its 1979 plays — to the ancient Greeks, the Jacobean era and Tolstoy.

The top-flight theater recently announced seven new productions for the first part of 1979. Only one new play is among them, Simon Gray's "Close of Play."

The others include "The Oresteia" trilogy by Aeschylus, newly translated from the ancient Greek by Tony Harrison; a Tom Stoppard version of "Open Country," a 1911 play by Arthur Schitzler; and playwright-philosopher Michael Frayn's new translation of Count Leo Tolstoy's "The Fruits of Enlightenment;" a rarely performed Jacobean drama by Thomas Middleton and William Rowley, "A Fair Quarrel;" and a rarely revived play by Somerset Maugham, "For Services Rendered."

Cable TV Expanding Rapidly In U.S.

Cable television saturation across the nation has reached the 20 percent mark, according to a network survey published in a recent issue of the industry publication, "Broadcasting."

The network survey predicts that by 1985, cable saturation will amount to over 30 percent. Some 12.8 million households are currently reported being served by 4,000 cable systems. Revenues generated by the systems total approximately $1 billion.

Cable television has been referred to as a "sleeping giant," due to its rapid increase in growth in the past few years. With the introduction of communication satellites and multi-channel viewing, cable television has become something everyone is watching.

In Lubbock, one of the nation's fastest growing cable communities, over 28 percent of the homes, (only 2 percent away from the 1985 prediction), subscribe to the service. Additionally, almost 5,000 homes receive the premium programing of Home Box Office.

Jim Brown, manager of Lubbock Cable TV, suggests a number of reasons for the rapid national and local growth:

"People want more of a selection of programing to watch than just what the networks offer and especially in the prime time areas. Cable's multi-channel service actually supplements the networks with a variety of shows from movies to sports. Much of this selection is available when the viewer wants it. Through a survey taken here in Lubbock, it was found that it's simply a matter of the selection and the economics of seeing feature films.

Lubbock Cable TV brings in programing to Lubbock from Dallas, Fort Worth, Atlanta, Amarillo and Madison Square Garden in New York.

According to some cable experts, including Henry Harris, president of Cox Cable, cable is foreseen as also being used in the home for meter readings, burglar surveillance, teaching, shopping, and energy measurement.

A Columbus, Ohio, cable system now serves 20,000 subscribers with two-way television. The viewer can answer questions for a survey or actually participate in game shows. The system, named "Qube," operates from a box that the viewer can hold as he watches television.

Cable television originated in rural communities which had difficulty receiving conventional, over-the-air programing because of terrain. Due to the consumer demand, cable companies have spread their webs in almost every major community in the past few years.

Crippled Childrens' Drive Set

Letters of solicitation will be mailed Monday, kicking off the annual fund raising campaign of the Lubbock County Society for Crippled Children.

Workers for the Crippled Childrens' Socity have only one fund drive a year and all money collected benefits children in the South Plains.

"The Society has no state or national affiliation and all money remains in Lubbock and is used only to help needy crippled children," organization president Alan Henry said. Lubbock residents donate their time and services, Henry said, therefore money is used for the purpose for which it is collected.

Half the money collected is used to buy braces, crutches, wheel chairs and orthopedic equipment. Transportation is also provided to medical centers for those children whose parents can't afford it.

The remaining half of the money is given to the Lubbock Cerebral Palsy and Neuromuscular Center for its operational budget. The society co-sponsors the center with the Rotary Club of Lubbock.

The society has been in operation for the past 57 years.

Other officers, including Henry, are Mrs. J.J. Scull, Jr., vice president; Curtis Barrett, secretary-treasurer; Ed Irons, immediate past president and Dr. Esther Snell, director of the Crippled Children's campaign.

There are more than 17 million tractors at work in the world, according to the U.N. Food and Agriculture Organization. Some 12 million are used in North America, Western Europe, Australia and New Zealand.

Imaginative Chalet Offered Again-As Two Bedroom Plan

By HIAWATHA ESTES

We recently featured this exterior but with three bedrooms. It proved to be one of the most popular designs ever to appear in our column. The three bedroom design is available but at a different price structure and is illustrated in our book, Ranch & Modern Homes. We received many letters asking for a two bedroom with the same exterior. This home has been designed in response to these numerous requests.

This imaginative chalet will definitely command its share of attention regardless of where it is located. Its steep roof, band sawn barge rafters, corbels and wooden trim surrounding the sliding doors together with its large amount of glass area places it in a class all by itself. A design such as this costs less to build per USABLE square foot than an A-frame and has just as dramatic an exterior, if not more so.

Outdoor living has been emphasized by locating wooden decks in front of the first floor living room and the second floor front bedroom. These decks are surrounded by a wooden railing with an interesting design.

From the entry, there is access to the wonderfully spacious living room, the kitchen-dining area or the second floor bedrooms. An unusual amount of glass guarantees that the living room will have more than its share of sunlight. The fireplace has been located so it will not interfere with furniture arragement and may be enjoyed from any area of the room.

The kitchen and dining area are combined in one large room. The room is enlarged visually as only cabinets separate the two areas. A generous amount of cabinet space is in the kitchen along with a storage closet and pantry.

Complete working drawings for plan 2956 can be purchased for only $18.50 for the first set and $9 for each additional set ordered at the same time. This plan will be available at these special prices until May 28, 1979. Please allow at least three weeks for delivery. A large reproduction rendering of the exterior is available for $3. Also available are six home plan books illustrating in excess of 950 plans — a $9.75 value — for only $7.75 plus $1 for postage and handling. Send all orders to: Hiawatha Estes, P.O. Boc 404-J, Northridge, California 91328.

Sharon Nelson Named To First Federal Post

Robert A. Edwards, president of First Federal Savings and Loan, has announced the election of Sharon Mills Nelson to the position of secretary to the board of directors.

Only two other persons have held the position: Pearl Fonville, and more recently, Charley R. Pope as interim secretary.

Mrs. Nelson has been employed at First Federal since February, 1967, and has occupied the positions of assistant branch manager and loan officer before being named to her present positions as secretary to the board, assistant vice president and director of personnel.

Mrs. Nelson is a Lubbock native and a graduate of Monterey High School and Texas Tech University. She has been an active volunteer for the United Way, American Heart Association, and the American Cancer Society. She is currently a member of the board of directors of Lubbock Civic Ballet.

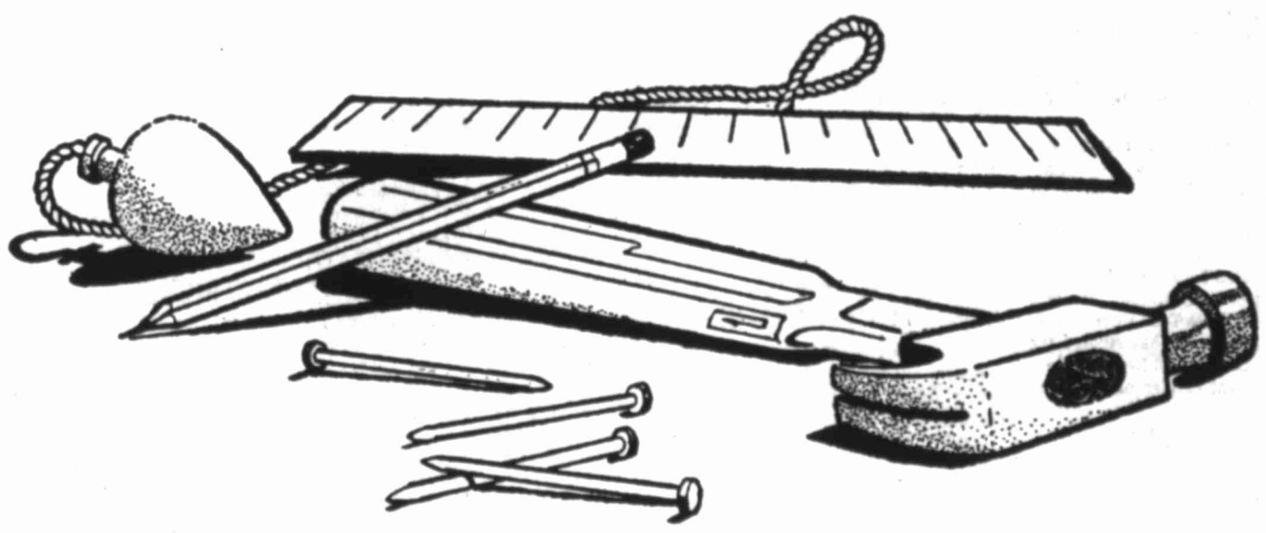
BUYING, BUILDING, REMODELING?



It's time to consider the heat pump. Southwestern Public Service Company can suggest the system that will give you the most for your energy dollar, and come up with some accurate information on installation and operating costs.

The heat pump is the electric savings machine. And usually a machine of such sensitive operation calls for a lot of space and some pretty technical installation procedures. NOT SO WITH THE HEAT PUMP! "Split systems" — most adaptable to homes — consist of an outdoor and indoor section, easily tucked away in a closet, garage, basement or attic. The single package unit looks very similar to a central air-conditioning unit that's placed outdoors. Both systems can be installed in most every home or office that has central air ducts. If you're buying, building or remodeling, it's time you said . . .

Five Given New Bank Posts At Shallowater

SHALLOWATER (Special) — Three officers were promoted and two new officers were named in a recent board meeting at the First State Bank, according to Mabry J. Brock, president.

Bill Henrichs, who has served as senior vice president of the bank since August, 1978, was promoted to executive vice president, and Patricia Young, who has been with the First State Bank since July, 1970, was promoted to vice president and cashier. Joe D. May was elected assistant vice president, Diana Higginbotham was elected banking officer, and Jane Blackburn was promoted to assistant cashier.

Henrichs came to Shallowater from Texas Bank and Trust in Sweetwater, where he had served as vice president. Henrichs began his banking career in 1964 with a bank in San Angelo, and has had extensive training in all phases of banking operations, credit, agriculture and commercial lending. He is a graduate of Angelo State University. Henrichs, his wife, Linda, and son Billy are residents of Shallowater.

Mrs. Young has been serving in the capacity of cashier in the bank for a number of years. She is a graduate of Shallowater High School and has completed several courses in the American Institute of Banking. She completed the Texas Tech University Intermediate School of Banking in 1976 and the Advanced School of Banking in 1978. She is the wife of J. D. Young, a Shallowater resident and employee of General Electric Supply. They have a son, Kenneth, who is a senior at Shallowater High School, and a daughter, Mrs. Carroll Shanks II of Seminole.

May was employed by the bank in September, 1977, taking on the duties of credit manager and security officer. In addition to those duties, he has been given the additional responsibilities of general loan officer. May is a native of Lubbock, a graduate of Monterey High School, and a graduate of Texas Tech University with a bachelor of business administration degree in finance. Prior to joining the bank, he was employed in the research and marketing department of T.I.M.E.-DC Inc. May and his wife, Linda, have two children, Jared and Dana, and are presently residing in Lubbock.

Mrs. Higginbotham has been with the bank since September, 1977. She has had previous banking experience in Wichita Falls, Fort Worth, and Waco, where she served as executive secretary. Prior to her promotion as banking officer, she was administrative assistant at First State Bank. Mrs. Higginbotham is a graduate of Holliday High School. She has had additional education at Midwestern University and American Institute of Banking. She is the wife of Gary Higginbotham, regional manager for Spartan Chemical Co., and has two children, Eric and Surinda, a student at Shallowater High School.

Mrs. Blackburn has been with the First State Bank of Shallowater since January, 1973. Prior to that she was employed by Muleshoe State Bank for 3½ years. She is a graduate of Muleshoe High School and has had additional training in the American Institute of Banking. She is the wife of Bobby Blackburn, who is employed by McCarty Curtis in Lubbock. They have two children, Dana and Joe Bob, who are students in Shallowater.

Officers Named For Liberty State Bank

W. R. Collier, president of American State Financial Corp., has announced the appointment of officers for Liberty State Bank, which will open in the spring at 66th Street and Indiana.

J. W. Holt will be president and Terry Bryson will be cashier.

A graduate of Texas Christian University, Holt has been in the field of banking since 1964. From June 1964, to June 1967, he held the position of assistant national bank examiner in the Comptroller of the Currency office in Dallas, and was promoted to national bank examiner in June 1967. He joined the Citizens Bank of Lubbock County in Slaton as vice president in Febraury 1968; was named executive vice president in December 1968; and president in December 1974.

He has been prominent in civic affairs in Lubbock County, serving as president of the Slaton Chamber of Commerce-Board of City Development; member of the governing board of Slaton Hospital Foundation; chairman and director of Slaton Housing Authority, member of Slaton Industrial Foundation Board; member of Lubbock County Juvenile Advisory Board.

Other activities included president and director of Slaton Lions Club; and president and director of Lubbock Chapter of A.I.B.

Holt and his wife, Jo, have two children, Brent and Kristi.

Bryson attended Texas Tech University and Tarleton State University. He is a graduate of the Texas Tech Intermediate School of Banking and has studied the Principles of Commercial Lending. He is currently assistant cashier of American State Bank, where he has been audit assistant and loan officer.

Bryson was formerly employed by a local bank from March 1976, to September 1977, and a savings and loan association from June 1975 to March 1976.

He and his wife, Cindy, have one daughter, Natalie.

In making the announcement, Collier said, "The selection of these two fine bank officers is an indication of the high quality of personnel and services to be offered at Liberty State Bank."

Acton Corp. Announces Promotions

Acton Corp. of Acton, Mass., has announced three new promotions in its Lubbock operations.

James Speake has been named general manager at Lubbock, according to George M. Phillips, vice president.

Delbert Vaughn will serve as general sales manager and Harold Kutter has been appointed comptroller of the newly established Acton Snack Co., a subsidiary of Acton Corp.

Speake is a 15-year veteran with Morton Foods, also a snack food subsidiary of Acton.

His previous experience with Morton's includes positions as manufacturing manager at the Dallas plant and plant manager at the Corpus Christi branch. He has spent the past four years at Lubbock in sales, plant and regional management.

Vaughn is a nine-year veteran of Morton Foods. He recently served as regional sales manager at the Fort Worth Division. He was district manager in Tulsa, Okla., for six years.

Vaughn and his wife, Carolyn, and daughters, Lisa Suzanne and Kelly Rene, will relocate to Lubbock.

Kutter comes to Acton Snacks from another of Acton Corp.'s snack food subsidiaries, Old Vienna Snacks in St. Louis, Mo., where he was an accountant.

Kutter has a B.S. degree in business administration from Southern Illinois University, where he specialized in accounting and marketing.

He will relocate to Lubbock.

Beverage Distributor Institutes Energy-Saving Program By Reducing Weekly Deliveries

Chuck Mayers, owner of Lubbock Beverage Co. Inc. has instituted an energy-saving program which he believes will hold down prices to retailers despite increases from manufacturers.

Mayers, who operates the local distributorship for Miller Brewing Co., recently shifted his delivery schedule from a five-day to a four-day week, and suggests that other route-oriented companies could reduce deliveries of non-essential items to save fuel in four-mile-per-gallon trucks.

Lubbock Beverage Co. employees also reportedly welcomed the move, which reduced base pay but maintained commissions at previous levels, resulting in an increase in per-hour income.

Mayers said he devised the plan after reading a recent industry report revealing that average delivery truck fuel consumption was four miles per gallon. He operates three trucks, and decided he could hold the line on increased prices if the shorter delivery-week were adopted. Retailers also have agreed to participate in the plan in return for a continuation of previous prices.

Now in its third week, the experimental program appears to be working, according to Mayers. He makes deliveries Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday.

Some 35 beer trucks currently operate in Lubbock, in addition to a "vast number" of soft drink vehicles.

Mayers thinks the plan will be beneficial to any company who tests it, and will hold costs to the consumer by maintaining price levels to retailers.

The Lubbock distributor has operated the firm for the past three years. He reports sales in 1975 were 66,000 cases. In 1978, the total had risen to 207,000.

Nationwide, the Miller Brewing Co. shipped 31.2 million barrels of beer in 1978, up 29.1 percent from the 24.2 million barrels shipped in 1977. The increase is the largest in Miller's history.

Seminar Slated

A two-day photographic seminar has been scheduled Feb. 3-4 at South Park Inn by the South Plains Professional Photographers Association.

A wide range of material from basic composition to the completed print will be presented by photographic professionals Nolan Bailey of East Texas State University; Mac Dejana of Meisel Photochrome Corp.; and Bud Shannon of Zintgraff Studios.

Registration for the program will get underway at 12 noon, Feb. 3.

Bailey, who is a faculty member of East Texas State, will present the first section of the program from 1-3 p.m. He is an instructor of portraiture, commercial photography and color technology.

Bailey is a graduate of Louisiana Tech and Brooks Institute of Photography. His ETSU students have earned over 500 photo awards since 1971, including seven prints chosen by the national association. Two of those prints are currently in the organization's loan collection.

Shannon will conduct the session from 3:30 to 7:30 p.m. He has scheduled a demonstration in the techniques of photographing an aircraft.

Bailey will speak again when the seminar convenes at 10 a.m. Feb. 4. A business meeting will follow at 1:30 to 2 p.m.

Dejana, whose knowledge and experience have been acquired over a period of 25 years in professional color lab quality control, and as a pioneer in color technology including the dye transfer process, speaks to photographic groups throughout the nation. He will talk on a topic entitled "Composition and Originality and Master Print."

The association will hold a print critique at 8:30 p.m. Feb. 3. Photographs must be unframed and mounted on 16x20 stock if they are smaller than 16x20.

Japan's 'Riviera' On Kyushu Island

TOKYO (UPI) — Nichinan Coast National Park on the southeast side of Japan's southern island of Kyushu is known as the "Japanese Riviera."

The long, narrow park stretches for about 100 miles along the Kyushu coast on both sides of an excellent modern highway that passes through some of the most unusual scenery in Japan.

Palm trees line the highway and the coast is strewn with poinsettias and other warm weather flowers.

The park boasts Japan's only cactus garden, with more than 2,000 varieties of cacti imported from Mexico and the southwestern United States.

FCC Cracking Down On Linears

By MIKE WENDLAND

The FCC, in its most impressive enforcement effort to date, has raided a manufacturing plant in Porter, Okla., and confiscated nearly 450 linear amplifiers intended solely for illegal CB use.

But in what could be the most significant part of the raid, FCC officials also seized the firm's sales records.

We intend to follow up on them, said one FCC agent. We're going to use the record to find out who bought linears. Then we're going to start making some house calls.

The amplifiers seized were all aimed at the CB market. Many were capable of boosting a CB 4-watt signal to 1,000 watts.

The raid was authorized by the U.S. Attorney's office in Muskogee, Okla., and conducted at a place called Brewer Labs. The FCC said that the 447 linears confiscated were valued at over a quarter of a million dollars.

It was really a big operation, said the FCC source. They wound their own coils and assembled these things like real pros. It took a moving van to haul all the amplifiers away.

The raid was just the start of a nationwide drive by the FCC aimed at ridding CB of linear amplifiers.

A Tennessee CB dealer, Edward Milliken of Double J Electronics, was recently sentenced to five-years' probation after pleading guilty to selling a CB linear. The FCC raided his office and confiscated 160 amplifiers.

And across the country, individual CBers are being issued violation notices in record numbers for possession of linear amplifiers.

The FCC has been vowing a crackdown on linears for months. It appears that this time they weren't just talking.

Q. I've seen advertisements for a CB scrambler that will make my CB conversations private. Are they legal? —M. Y., Pittsburgh, Pa.

A. Nope. Scramblers, automatic encoding and decoding devices of the type used by many police departments to foil public-service-band scanner monitors, are in direct violation of CB Rule 22, which requires all communications to be in plain language.

Q. What's the latest on the plans to make a UHF home for CB?—O. T., Santa Barbara, Calif.

A. Australia is the latest country to move to shift the CB service to a more reliable frequency spectrum. It recently created a 476 MHz UHF CB-type service and indicated plans to phase out the present CB service at 27 MHz by 1982. Canada recently opened up a 900 MHz CB band. The FCC is officially still considering such a plan, but insiders don't expect any real action for several months.

(For a complete discussion of CB radio, including the latest CB slang and step-by-step instructions on how to do everything from asking for a traffic report to making airwave friends, see my 180-page book, THE WENDLAND CB GLOVE COMPARTMENT BIBLE, available postpaid for $3.95 from Andrews and McMeel, 6700 Squibb Rd., Mission, Kan. 66202.)

CB Static: Readers Air Gripes

Dear Mike: The FCC has been doing a lot of enforcement around here lately. They go into the tough parts of the inner city (Detroit) but just mail out violation notices to those who live there. But out here in the safer suburbs, they pull inspections, knocking on the doors and coming right into the house. That's not fair, if you ask me. If they are going to enforce the law, they should do it equally in both places.—G. S., Lincoln Park, Mich.

Dear Static: CB may have problems in the big cities, but out here where life isn't so hectic, it works just fine. In fact it's like a giant party line. And people here respect each other. CB has changed our lives for the better. We're a closer community because of it.—T. R., Casa Grande, Ariz.

Dear Mr. Wendland: I think the FCC should create sideband-only channels. Sidebanders are better operators than AMers and deserve the extra room. AMers are basically animals.—T. H., New Orleans, La.

The Voice of Business

WASHINGTON — Thanks to American ingenuity, we are now able to make measurements of Venus that can detect different temperatures and wind velocities and tell us when it is raining on the planet 135 million miles away.

While Pioneer Venus 1 circled Venus, a fleet of four space probes recently descended through the cloud-covered, superheated atmosphere of the planet, sending data that will shed light on centuries-old scientific mysteries and help us to better understand Earth's environment.

"This experiment," said one scientist, "is as precise as seeing the minute hand on a watch that is 3,000 miles away."

The stream of valuable scientific information will continue for a year as the orbiter circles the planet every 24 hours.

Truly a great human achievement, and another notable American "first" in space.

But, here on earth, we are still toddlers when it comes to being able to tell whether we are getting our money's worth in benefits from the estimated $100 billion a year spent on government regulation of the economy.

The state of the art — our ability to assess the costs and benefits of regulation, weighing one against the other — is in its "infancy," according to a high-level government report.

Wayne L. Granquist, an associate director of the Office of Management and Budget (OMB), passed along that startling information to a group of Senators not long ago.

In his testimony, he also indicated that the only reliable data available was on costs (not benefits) of environmental regulations and federal paperwork.

"In some cases, we are certain that large costs are imposed with little benefit," Mr. Granquist said.

A report cited by him, concluding we are still in our infancy in cost-benefits analysis, was made by the Department of Commerce, which reviewed some 40 different studios.

This news from top government sources comes as something of a shock to many of us who have been advocating that the government develop and use these analytical techniques, particularly on environmental rules that add billions to operating costs of industry.

Private economic studies have shown for months that government regulatory requirements are a significant cause of inflation. When he appeared before the same Senate group, Robert S. Strauss, the President's inflation advisor, agreed.

Mr. Strauss and Mr. Granquist, of course, hold highly responsible jobs, working with other government officials to implement President Carter's mandate to start cleaning up the regulatory mess. I cannot endorse those efforts too strongly.

The public is becoming increasingly dismayed over excessive and unreasonable regulatory expense and burdens, not with reasonable safeguards against pollution, unhealthy working conditions, unsafe products and fraud and deceit in the market-place. Government's responsibility is to keep costs of regulation in balance with benefits that accrue to the public.

But while the government is getting its act together, consumers and business alike should give thought to the role of Congress. Regulators make the rules and implement the laws — but Congress enacts the laws.

Giving Congress the right to review and veto agency regulations would give the public a check on regulatory activity it now does not have. This is a good idea and one that already has gained strong support in the House of Representatives, where 200 members of the 95th Congress endorsed the veto concept.

THE U.S. AND YOU

William Steif

IF YOU WERE TO inherit $100,000 in Idaho your legal fees would be about $900, your court costs about $32.

But if you inherited $100,000 in Michigan, your legal fees would be $4,800 plus another $2,000 if the lawyer who drew up the will also served as the estate's executor. Michigan court costs would be around $947.

You'd also have to wait nine months for your inheritance in Michigan. You'd get it in about 32 days in Idaho.

Michigan typifies the majority of the 50 states, but that seems to be changing. Its state legislature has nearly finished enacting a variant of the Uniform Probe Code that's slowly making an impact on other state lawmakers.

The Uniform Probate Code is the work of a 96-year-old organization you've probably never heard of, the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws. The Chicago-based organization, partly funded by the states and partly by the federal government, tries to improve state laws.

John McCabe, the conference's legislative director, says the project to "modernize and simplify procedures" for probating estates got going in 1969 when a model code was drafted.

"It's very controversial," he says, "because it challenges vested interests. It's comprehensive, covering every area of transfers at death — nature of the will, people who die intestate (without wills), guardianship, trusts, family protection, family allowances, spouse's share."

But "the gut issue," he says, is how an estate will be administered.

THE MAJORITY OF states use what's called the "solemn form" process. This boils down to the probate courts supervising every step in disposition of an estate, and the estate's "personal representative" or "executor" going to the probate court for an O.K. on each step.

A minority of states use the "common form" process, treating an estate's personal representative like a trustee with fiduciary responsibility. The court does not exercise close supervision (although it retains jurisdiction).

The Uniform Probate Code rejects the "solemn form" process, says McCabe, to simplify probate and cut costs. Probating most estate's is a routine legal act; under the Uniform Probate Code, if an interested person sees problems in an estate's handlings he can ask for close court supervision. Most estates don't need that kind of supervision.

What "vested interests" oppose reform?

Chiefly, says McCabe, probate judges and small-bore lawyers whose fees range from 2 to 6 percent of an estate's worth.

Richard Wellman, a University of Georgia law professor who's a probate expert, says there's a probate judge in each of Georgia's 156 counties and notes there are eight in Wayne County (Detroit), Mich., alone.

In New York State probate jusges are called surrogate judges; in Virginia and West Virginia they are called commissioners of accounts; in the District of Columbia the probate judge is called a probate register.

NO MATTER WHAT they're called, their function is the same and essentially represents "a rip-off" says Wellman. "Good law offices charge by the hour," he says, "only rumdums charge a percentage."

The American Bar Association has been behind the Uniform Probate Court for years. So has Chief Justice Warren E. Burger.

Yet only 11 states — Alaska, Arizona, Colorado, Idaho, Minnesota, Montana, Nebraska, New Mexico, North Dakota, Utah and now probably Michigan — have adopted versions of the Uniform Probate Code since 1972. There's hope Maine and Arkansas will act soon, and a campaign is underway in Iowa.

If you are interested in this reform, write McCabe at Suite 510, 645 Michigan Avenue., Chicago, Ill., 60611, or Wellman, the School of Law, University of Georgia, Athens, Ga., 30601. They have a series of pamphlets they'll be glad to send you to help your own organizing effort.

TODAY'S EDITORIAL:

Clements Cuts To Bare Bones

GOV. BILL CLEMENTS left himself ample room to manuever in staking off the arena in which he proposes to battle for tax reform and a slower rate of growth for the state budget.

In his "State of the State" address, the new Republican governor repeated his challenge to the Legislature to grant Texans $1 billion in tax relief but did not spell out his proposal in detail.

He also called for more gubernatorial powers to manage the state budget and to control state boards and commissions through authority to designate chairmen and also to remove appointees with Senate concurrence.

The first and last of these would require constitutional amendments.

CLEMENTS CLEARLY intended his proposals to be a framework for establishing his relations with the Democratic-controlled Legislature rather than as a hard-and-fast demand for action.

He called it "the first chapter in an ongoing dialogue" with legislators and said its central theme was that "government should be directly accountable to the citizens."

He thus recognized the political reality that many of his suggestions will be controversial, in approach as well as in substance, and that compromise is an essential ingredient of a successful legislative program.

Clements' proposal to eliminate the 10-cent state ad valorem tax, for example, is certain to run into opposition from educators who remember how rundown the state's college campuses became when they had to depend on the Legislature to appropriate building funds.

The tax now is dedicated to construction of college and university buildings.

BUT THE GOVERNOR tossed the ball back into the Legislature's court to find ways to prune appropriations for day-to-day operating funds for the state.

It's not up to him, Clements said, to defend budget cuts that would be necessary if taxes are to be reduced. Rather, he said, "those who are attempting to increase the budget by 22 percent over the budget of just two years ago must define in detail and fully justify such increases."

The Legislative Budget Board, which includes Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, presiding officer of the Senate, and House Speaker Bill Clayton has recommended just such a "bare bones" budget.

Speaker Clayton since has suggested lopping 2 percent across the board from the LBB proposal to leave $400,000 for tax relief.

OTHER ELEMENTS of the governor's proposals include three other Constitutional amendments to give Texans the right of initiative and referendum, to require a two-thirds vote in each house of the Legislature to raise taxes or impose new ones, and to ban either a personal or a corporate income tax.

He suggested, too, that the governor, lieutenant governor and attorney general be limited to two four-year terms. He also repeated his call for reducing the state payroll by 25,000 employes through attrition.

Thus, while there was nothing new in Gov. Clements' proposals, he put himself solidly on the side of sound, conservative management of the state budget and resources.

And he did so in a mood of cooperation rather than confrontation with the Legislature. It was a good beginning.

AN EDITORIAL:

PUC Without 'C'

A MISGUIDED but persistent group of consumer activists is pushing mightily for an even greater degree of state regulation over utility companies.

While saying that the Public Utilities Commission established in 1975 has "solved most of the abuses and problems utility customers had endured for the last 30 years," a coalition of consumer organizations wants a bigger voice in running things.

Lawyers to be paid by the taxpayers should "represent customers" at PUC hearings, the group argues. In other words, having created the PUC to protect the public interest against private enterprise, the activists now want public counsel to protect the public interest against the PUC.

Worse still, the consumerists want a law requiring the governor to appoint consumers to the board of directors of investor-owned utility companies. This is pure socialism and will lead to worse, not better, and ultimately to more costly utility service.

Federal regulation of business, with its attendant bureaucracy, is ample proof that consumers are best served by less—not more—governmental meddling. It's too bad the consumerists won't open their eyes to that fact.

ART BUCHWALD:

Super Bowl Sunday Not 'Holy Day' To Everyone

WASHINGTON—A bunch of us were standing around the bar on Monday talking about Super Bowl Sunday, and what a dandy day it had been. We all had that warm feeling you get when you have shared a great common experience.

I was telling everyone how I had watched the game on a large super screen which my friend Stevens had bought just for the occasion. Next to being at the game itself, this gave me quite a bit of clout.

I noticed that the only one who wasn't enjoying the scene was Apple. With good humor I said, "Where did you see the Super Bowl, Apple?"

"I didn't," he replied. There was a hush.

"Did someone die in your family?"

"NO," APPLE SAID.

"I know," Bailey interjected, "you were on an airplane flying back from a business trip."

Apple shook his head.

"Your television set was broken?"

"My television set was perfect. As a matter of fact, my wife and I watched 'To Kill a Mockingbird' with Gregory Peck. It was excellent."

"What were you doing watching a movie instead of the Super Bowl?" I wanted to know.

"I don't believe in the Super Bowl," Apple replied, "and neither does my wife."

OGILVY SLAMMED down his beer, "What the hell do you mean—you don't believe in the Super Bowl? Are you some kind of atheist nut or something?"

Apple was really cool. "I believe in God, but I don't believe in football."

I thought Woodstock was going to slug him. "Super Bowl Sunday is the holiest day of the year. One hundred million Americans observe it, believe in it, live for it. And you're trying to say it don't do nothing to you?"

"It may have religious significance for some people. But it doesn't have meaning for my family. I have no objection to other folks believing that the day has some super power as long as they don't try to inflict their beliefs on me."

THE BAR WAS tensing up. I tried to be the peacemaker.

"Apple may have a point," I said. "After all, what makes America the greatest country in the world is not that you have to watch 'The Game,' but that you DON'T have to watch it if you don't want to."

"If you don't like it here," Ogilvy spat out at Apple, "why don't you go back where you came from?"

"Ogilvy's right," Nelson said. "Millions of dollars were spent to give us the Super Bowl. The two greatest teams in American football played their hearts out, and many fell on the field of combat.

"They put on a half-time show that would put the Roman circuses to shame. American advertisers spent every nickel they had to bring us a day we will remember for the rest of our lives. Only a pervert would be tuned in to 'To Kill a Mockingbird.'"

"I'M SORRY YOU all feel this way," Apple said, "but we do have separation of state and sports in this country.

"Besides, I believe the Super Bowl has been hyped up to the point where it has lost all sportsmanlike meaning. It is now nothing but junk food."

I wish Apple hadn't said that. But our lawyers tell us that, no matter how much Apple sues us for assaulting him, no jury of 12 just men is going to award him a dime when they find out he doesn't believe in Super Bowl Sunday.

Christian Students' Rights Opposed By ACLU, He Avers

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

I wonder how sincere our local chapter of the ACLU is concerning First Amendment rights of Lubbock students. While their efforts to silence public prayer may seem impressive, their quietude concerning Christian students' rights to hear something besides monolithic humanistic propaganda is more impressive.

Examples of such humanist propaganda in public educational materials are not hard to find. Some of the more common would be: 1) the dogma that natural laws are eternally immutable (in science courses); 2) the dogma that there exists no intellectual authority above the human mind (in all courses); 3) the dogma that any subject taught in the school—even mathematics—can be taught "neutrally" with respect to religious and philosophic presuppositions.

I am interested to see how many Lubbock taxpayers would be willing to seriously scrutinize LISD curriculum materials to find whether we have another area of violation of First Amendment rights, one that is conspicuously neglected by ACLU efforts.

Let's remember that the First Amendment is a two-edged sword that cuts both ways: the state cannot establish religion, even a humanist one, in prescribed courses of public education.

School's No Place To Pray Or Worship, Writes Reader

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

I wholly agree with the thoughts expressed in Rev. Clark N. Ross' letter in The A-J Jan. 23. Worship belongs in the churches, where each person can choose the form that suits him best, and where he is not compelled to participate in a worship that is not his own.

The Framers of the Constitution knew this when they drafted the Separation Clause of the First Amendment, because they had experienced the evils of state-sanctioned religion that Mr. Ross mentioned in his letter.

Certainly our schools should teach our children the moral values that prevail in our society, but these values must not be taught from a religious standpoint.

They are humanistic values which don't stem from any particular theology in the first place, and to attempt to tie them solely to Christianity or any other single religion is not only a violation of the Separation Clause, but an affront to all other religions of the world.

Humanistic values underlie our very existence as a civilization, and they certainly have a place in both the churches and the schools. Worship and prayer has no such universality, and therefore has no place in the public schools under state sanction.

New Deal Woman Has Her Say Over School Prayer

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

The articles on school prayer pro & con are a constant irritant to me. If these people would spend as much time checking on the quality of our education and who's teaching and are they qualified, I think they would find more to do worthwhile.

Some children never hear the word Christianity or prayer except for the few moments some schools devote to it. If they do not hear it again at home, it will usually mean nothing to them.

Just possibly these few moments will mean enough to reach a problem child or a child with problems, and keep them from our over-crowded detention homes, or eventually prisons.

I have gone to school with non-believers and kids of a different faith and they were never forced to participate in any ritual that was against their religion or beliefs, such as the oath of allegiance or saying a prayer. These students at that time were not hassled because of this, nor are they now, according to my children.

Let's promote our taxpayers court money to go for better education and qualified teachers and not for a several-year battle over 3 minutes of our childrens' time, that could possibly mean a great deal to them, or nothing at all.

He Says '$600,000 Too Much' Just To Gather Yule Trees

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

In re your comments of Jan. 13, I go along with the city. Dumpster pick-up is singularly enough. Per capita doesn't foot the bill, per taxpayer does.

Come on, A-J. You really don't want to restore a $600,000 per annum expenditure primarily just to gather up cast-off Christmas trees, do you?

Reader Agrees With Letters On Students, 10 Questions

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

I am including two letters I clipped from The A-J Jan. 21st which I heartily agree with their thinking. If the Iranians do not like the United States, as it is, just please pack their bags and return to Iran. The sooner the better will suit a lot of United States citizens.

The "Ten Questions" letter surely does "hit the nails on the heads" in my way of thinking.

I've never written to the paper before, but just couldn't resist doing so now.

Dimmitt Mayor In Defense Of Citizens Over Incident

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

This letter is in response to the widespread publicity over the death of an eleven-month-old Mexican-American baby whose parents were transient farm workers living at the Agricultural Housing Project here.

It was certainly a tragedy for the baby to die without every effort being made to save its life.

It seems to me that most of the stories of this incident have implied an intolerance of others by the people of Dimmitt in general. The news media have printed it, and the public has indicted 5,000 people as being guilty.

I would like to point up some facts concerning Dimmitt and Castro County.

Just after the turn of the century, people started settling our country. They braved all kinds of hardships, droughts and windstorms to establish the county, its school districts, churches, et cetera, with a common bond of "all for one and one for all." They sacrificed loved ones, even companions, to settle this area and make it productive.

They are some of the finest American people, who have labored and sacrificed to build and grow. They have given their sons and daughters in service of their country. They have bought bonds and paid taxes to support our federal and state governments and to underwrite the costs of county, school and city services.

The people I am talking about are solid, upright settlers who have an honest concern and love for others. On many occasions they have expressed this by the way they have helped those in need, regardless of race or creed. As our county grew and these people came to work on our farms, I have seen their employers help them in time of need many times.

The churches here have built Spanish-language missions, held Bible schools and furnished buses to provide transporation to services. Our people and institutions have held classes in sewing, family budget management, child care and other topics, and have been generous in giving clothing and supplies to try to help them.

There are some insinuations being made, some fingers being pointed, that imply the people of Dimmitt and Castro County have a hatred in their hearts for these Mexican-American people. As Paul Harvey would say, this is Page 2. Please read it with an open mind. I do not believe these solid American people should be subjected to this criticism.

In the last twelve months we have seen a native son elected to fill the post of Cong. George Mahon in Washington, D.C. I believe his election is indicative of the upward aspirations and the attainment of excellence for which the people of our city and country have always strived.

I am forced to take a stand in public defense of these people. They are not guilty.

VIRGINIA PAYETTE:

See Billy Foul Up

MEMO TO MIZ Lillian: It may just be time to take Billy out to the woodshed. Or at least "set him down for a li'l talk."

No mother likes to be told her favorite chick has just topped what one critic calls "a long record of boorishness and despicable behavior." But there comes a time when even the most doting parent has to face up to the fact that her darlin' baby boy isn't so darlin' these days.

Billy may be, as you have so often said, a lot smarter than his older brother, but what's smart about urinating on an airport runway in the presence of an Arab diplomat? Any 3-year-old knows better.

He may also be the pet of the Carter clan, but he is turning into a smart-aleck showoff, the kind that used to force teachers to call parents in for those dreaded "conferences."

Maybe they don't do that any more. Maybe they never did in Plains. Maybe they should have.

IT'S PRETTY obvious what's ailing Billy: Big Brother is President of the United States and he isn't. And he can't abide the fact that Jimmy gets all the attention and the glory.

So he does what any jealous sibling does: He acts up. This not only makes folks notice him, but, in Billy's case, it has the added advantage of getting Big Brother in trouble on a worldwide scale.

It also, things being what they are in this country, makes him something of a celebrity. Folks may sneer behind his back, but they're willing to pay him $5,000 or more to open gas stations and freak shows, sponsor a new brand of beer, and judge contests at the county fair.

And Billy's willing to take it. After a couple of years of going anywhere and doing anything (as long as the check is good), he's a certified show-biz character pulling in around $300,000 a year.

IT IRRITATES him some when people talk about it, but it doesn't keep him from bragging that he "makes more than Jimmy does." Maybe this compensates for staying home to run the peanut factory while Jimmy went on to what may or may not be the most powerful job in the world.

Then there are the little digs he can't resist dropping in now and then. Like whenever he spots a live microphone on the horizon

One of his favorites is letting everybody know that Jimmy was his second choice for President, that the man he really wanted (and admires more than any politician he knows) is George Wallace.

Billy knows he's an embarrassment to the White House and he revels in it. Nothing gives him greater glee than the fact that Big Brother can tell Cabinet officers, Pentagon officials and government biggies to zip their lips, but is helpless when it comes to keeping Billy in line.

"I DON'T tell him how to be President," he smirks, "and he doesn't tell me what to do." Not that he wouldn't like to.

Billy's latest caper, that five-week roadshow he's putting on for 60 Libyan officials, sent Jimmy on national TV to say he hopes everybody realizes he can't control his brother and that it would be "counterproductive" to tell him to please shut up in public.

"He would react very strongly," the President admitted. "It would probably cause him to re-exert his independence."

Translation: He might do something even worse than play host to a bunch of big shots from a country that's not No. 1 on our national courting list at the moment, or raise a national flap with off-the-cuff remarks about how "the Jewish media tears up the Arab countries full time."

Jimmy uses up a lot of headline space washing his hands of Billy's attempts to upstage him. And the White House says Billy cooked up the Libyan tour without checking with them.

Not so, says Billy. Not only did he clear it with the State Department, he told Jimmy all about it during the Christmas holidays. Besides, he doesn't care what the White House thinks.

So, it's up to you, Miz Lil. Maybe you can appeal to Billy's southern chivalry, or family loyalty, or something. And if that doesn't work, well, you must know something you can threaten him with.

Every mother does, and if what it takes is a little ladylike blackmail, who's going to know? Or care?

L.M. BOYD:

...Pass It On

GREAT BRITAIN, too has pushed through a lot of new sex equality laws. One such prohibits the subjects from advertising for a "pantry maid." Eton College, therefore, worded its ad with special care: "Wanted: Somebody to help in the pantry and dining room, a person to share a flat with another woman." The first four who responded to the ad were men.

Debate continues over that old query as to why when a man comes in from the cold he usually stands with his back to the fire to warm himself while a woman generally stands facing the fire. Still can't come up with an explanation. Can you?

Berry's World

Blacklock: Life Behind The Globetrotter Mask

A SELLOUT CROWD jammed the Lubbock Coliseum a few days back to see the Harlem Globetrotters, the clown princes of basketball, run their familiar weave and work their magic in a tradition which dates back to 1927, forced by a severe costprice squeeze to personalities than flesh and blood. The price of a ticket, after all, promises entertainment and nothing more. But rub off a clown's makeup, they say, and you may discover something other than a big smile. And that was just the case with James Blacklock, a Texas native and five-year veteran of the Globetrotter squad.

During an extensive interview before the game, Blacklock sat in his hotel room and spoke openly not only about his feelings for the 'Trotters and his fears during tryouts, but also about his years of depression, his initial regrets about not playing professional basketball and, yes, even about the cruelties he's witnessed as a team member.

In order to explain what he liked best about being a Globetrotter, Blacklock felt the need to backtrack. "I've got to tell you I had a very, very unhappy childhood. That is, my childhood was not very exciting," he said. "I went through a lot of turmoil, uh, just the family style of life. My father left us when I was 12. My mother died of cancer. But even before that I had a sister who wasn't doing too well in school, and she ran off and didn't return until after mother passed on. There were a lot of things going down in my family that I was really depressed with as a kid. And there were nine of us in the family.

"My mother took care of all of us, and I wanted to do something different. I didn't want to bring pain and hurt to her, but only joy. And through this feeling, I think God helped me develop these kinds of skills. Helped me to be a better person. I think he just kind of took me and said, 'Hey, this is the way I want you to go.' It sort of turned me around. I could have gone any number of different ways a lot of my friends had taken: gone to prison, jail, become an addict.

"But I went the way God wanted me to go to set an example for my five younger brothers."

The first thing Blacklock did was increase his participation in sports, so much so that he attained basketball All-American status at Yates High School in Houston, and also set several conference swimming marks. "I'd been doing sports," he recalled, "but I was never very interested in it. Then my coach took me aside one day and told me, 'You're a good swimmer, a good basketball player. You've got to determine what you want to do. Maybe you'll get a scholarship.' I never thought of that. Then coach tells me there's more in basketball than in swimming, so I decide to concentrate on that.

"It brought my mom a lot of happiness, and it took away a lot of her pain. Even though she suffered for a number of years. My senior year at the University of Texas (where Blacklock captained the Longhorn basketball team), she had five major operations which I didn't know about. She had them keep it from me because she didn't want to disturb my being in school and playing ball. She knew me, and she knew I would be upset. I take things a long way when they're personal.

SO ANYWAY, I have to tell you this to tell you what it's like being on the 'Trotters. It's opened me up. It's made me look not so much back at what happened, as maybe to the future and the good things that might happen. If my mom was here, she'd go ape knowing I was playing with the 'Trotters. And I get the feeling every now and then — we all do when we've lost someone close — that she's watching me and she's happy I'm doing something constructive. I'm doing something a lot of guys would love to do. I'm making people happy. I'm going all over the world to play in front of popes, kings, queens, presidents, every kind of big and little people in the world. Heck, Easter Sunday a year ago I was in Jerusalem. Who would have ever thought I'd go to Jerusalem?

"I was sheltered for a long time. Being with the 'Trotters has really helped me to open up and to know people. And to know myself, which is most important. It's a dream come true."

But it's also a dream Blacklock never experienced while bringing the ball down court for the Longhorns. Fact is, he said, "To be perfectly honest, I never even saw a Globetrotter game before joining the team. I'd seen little pieces on TV — I'm a television fanatic — but never a whole game. And I sure never thought about playing with the 'Trotters. I thought these guys were the kind you put on pedestals. Guys like Geese Ausbie, Meadowlark Lemon, Curly Neal and Marques Haynes were a special breed in my mind. They are still.

"Marques is a legend and I'd never even seen him before I got to the tryouts. These are guys I felt you don't ordinarily see day to day walking on the street, or at discos or department stores. I thought someone hid them away until it was time to put them on television."

Blacklock finally learned about the Harlem Globetrotters through a financial dispute with the NBA. Drafted out of UT by the Washington Bullets and undergoing what he termed "contract problems," he returned to Houston and began working with a poverty program for underprivileged children. This United League Leadership Program had been founded by a fellow named Tex Harrison, a former Globetrotter. Hearing of Blacklock's situation, Harrison arranged for the youngster to be invited to a special Globetrotter camp in Los Angeles one month before regular training camp started.

"I first told Tex I'd just come from one heartbreak and I didn't want to experience another one," Blacklock said. "My mother had just died during this period of time and I was sort of flip-flopping around. . .I spoke with members of my family, my brothers, and they said it wasn't every day someone gets invited to a Globetrotter camp. So I thought I'd give it a shot."

THE CAMP WAS certainly not what he visualized, as he remembered, "I didn't know what to expect. I guess I expected to walk into the gym and find people spinning balls off their heads and fingers and toes, guys bouncing balls between their legs and passing behind their backs.

"But I found out the camp was for 10 guys especially picked from across the United States. The 'Trotters do have a scouting system, and they knew who I was. Basically, they want to find out at camp how much basketball skill you have, and how good is your skill. So they tested us for a week just on basics: dribbling, passing, jumping, peripheral vision. They want to find out how much skill you have before they start trying to develop your skills and combine them with theirs.

"You have your kind of game and the Globetrotters' kind of game, and you blend them in together. It takes a long time. It's taken me four years to blend them in."

At first, Blacklock was under the impression he was competing with nine other men for one of five available openings. Then, when the 10 at his camp were thrown in with 40 from other camps, they were told only one spot was open. 50 guys competing for one job. His reaction? "I thought 'they done it to me again' and then I had a holocaust fit in my room."

JAMES BLACKLOCK: From UT basketball to Harlem Globetrotters

As it turned out, there actually were five spots available and Blacklock was named the number-one rookie at camp. But he didn't have any idea where he stood for some time. He said, "For a month, they (coaches) didn't say a word. Didn't even look at you half the time. And yet the relationships with the coaches and players were closer than those at the Bullets' camp. Marques Haynes and (Meadowlark) Lemon were very close with the players. They didn't tell us who they thought was doing good, but they were always there if you had a question or just wanted to be listened to. They never try to change your game. They never try to change your personality. They just try to see what kind of person you are on — and off — the court."

So now he's a Globetrotter, signed and touted as a top rookie. What next?

Blacklock leaned back in his armchair, laughed at the memory and revealed, "What's amazing about the Globetrotters' camp is that you've only got two weeks to work with the veterans. That's another testing part. Everyone is then split into two teams, the national and international, each with different training hours. Then you're thrown in with the veterans and shown the basic things the 'Trotters do: the figure eight, the weave, who to pass it to, when to pass it to him.

"As a rookie, you basically learn the weave. That's all."

He continued, "But there's one thing I have to say about (player-coach) Marques Haynes. He's been around a long time, and he's seen guys come and go. He puts you in a position where you never expect to be, maybe in front of 20,000 or 30,000 people. Usually the guys that been on the team longest play most of the game because they know what to do and when to do it. But Marques may slip you in there and freak you totally out, just to see what you've learned. Just to test how you react in a particular situation.

I REMEMBER ONCE Marques had a sick relative and had to leave town. The night before, he told me I'd be dribbling in the second quarter of the game. Heck, I didn't have any time to go out and work on my dribble. I didn't have any routine to dribble. I'm freaked out. I don't know what's happening. So I go out and the Lord was with me and I did a good job. It was lovely, beautiful, unreal.

"But I think the key for first year players is to listen, to look, to watch, to ask questions. The Globetrotters only teach you so much, and everything else you have to learn yourself."

This is Blacklock's fifth season wearing number 18 on the familiar red, white and blue uniform. But he said it took him at least three years to gain confidence in his ability. And he credits Haynes for bringing him along slowly. Blacklock played in his first game as a 'Trotter — something most rookies do not do — but only because Haynes put him in the game at a time when his team was playing straight basketball. He explained, "Marques' method is to let you get your feet wet just a little bit. Then when you feel you're ready — not just when he feels you're ready — he increases your (playing) time more and more."

The question had to be asked as to whether Blacklock ever harbored doubts about the prospect of experiencing more happiness and satisfaction playing in the National Basketball Association. "You know," he answered, "there is always a certain amount of competitiveness within a person who has been competing for years. And when I joined the 'Trotters and found there wasn't as much competitiveness here, I began to miss it a little bit. But I never told anybody I wished I was in The League (NBA). Because I could have gone; even after the Bullets held my rights for two years, they sold them to Atlanta. And then Atlanta kept calling me for two more years.

"...But I figure if I can get out there every night and compete with the opposition team and not lose any of my skills, but instead just get better and stronger, then I would be competing and I wouldn't miss that part of the NBA."

The old "bucket of paper" trick — works every time!

But since there are some who criticize actors for doing television sit-coms instead of Shakespeare, or singers for concentrating on pop tunes instead of "serious" music, one had to wonder if Blacklock ever found himself being looked down upon by acquaintances or friends for giving up the pros, the NBA, in favor of the Harlem Globetrotters. The young veteran answered, "I tell you, I have a few friends playing for the (Houston) Rockets and a few more friends around the league, like Tom Henderson of the Capitol (Washington) Bullets. And this past summer Tom expressed to me — we were playing in an all-star game together in Houston — that even though his team had won the championship last year, he envied me for playing with the 'Trotters. He wished he could play with the Globetrotters. He actually said that.

"And it made me feel real good to know that there are a lot of guys in the league who would love to play for the 'Trotters. I once envied him, you know, for playing in the pros. But I've gotten over that.

"Ironically, though, this summer after the Rockets sent Lucas to Golden State with Rick Barry, I was asked to come to camp because the Rockets said they didn't have enough guys to scrimmage with the rookies. I said OK. So after those four days were over, they asked me to come to veterans' camp, and I said that would put me in camp as a free agent more or less. They were sort of trying to trick me, but I just said 'no, thank you.' I think they wanted to feel me out and see how I fit in with the rest of their guys."

But not all of his Globetrotter memories are happy ones. Sure, Blacklock is quick to point out that the teams' popularity is not diminishing, that "the reactions get louder and the crowds more plentiful." But he adds that the audience involvement portion of their shows has seen both "good and not-so-good reactions." Pressed to give an example of an audience participation routine which did not work perfectly, Blacklock brought up an overseas occurence still startling in its cruelty.

As he put it, "One thing I remember is when we were in Australia two years ago. Our comedian was Geese Ausbie, and during the fourth quarter Geese would usually get a kid out of the audience and take him on the court or over to the announcer's table, and he'd tell the crowd it was the kid's birthday and for everybody to please stand up and sing 'Happy Birthday.' That particular night Geese got a kid in a wheelchair and took him to the table. He gets the mike and tells the 10,000 or 12,000 people there to stand and sing 'Happy Birthday.'

"But this night they wouldn't stand at all. And Geese was shocked, because this had never happened before."

Blacklock paused for effect, then continued, "At the time Geese was playing with a very bad leg. He had a bone floating around in his leg and he kept his leg propped up in ice during the day so he could play at night. He took numerous pain pills. They wanted to send him home, but Geese said 'no' because he wanted to finish the tour for the fans counting on him. He was in bad shape, nearly crippled. So anyway, the crowd wouldn't stand, even though he asked them three times.

"SO GEESE TOLD them, 'Look, here's a guy who can't stand. He has no legs. And here's 10,000 of you with strong, God-given legs and you won't stand for this kid. Well, if you're not going to stand, I'm not going to play the rest of this game.' And man, the audience just didn't care; they just sat there. And so with tears running down his face, Geese asked them two more times and then he hobbled off the court and goes into the dressing room. We were all crying, too, and we still had to finish the game ourselves."

Offering a remarkable understatement, Blacklock concluded softly, "And that's one of the few times we didn't get a good response from an audience."

Though there are many who might feel jealous of Blacklock just because he does get to visit Australia, Hawaii, France and practically every other part of the world with an airport, he wearily reveals that life on the road is not all that glamorous. "Living out of a suitcase is one of the most horrifying things we do," he sighed. "We stay in Holiday Inns most of the time and they all look the same: two beds and a TV staring you in the face. Then there's restaurant food every day — and sometimes not even that. Sometimes we play in small places and, by the time the game's over, everything's closed.

"Like last night we played in Wichita Falls. Everything was closed late. And we don't have transportation to go across town; we have to get taxis."

Surprisingly enough, Blacklock did not express any sort of depression on being away from his family (he's married) for such long trips. He explained, "This is a unique, funny situation. It's 24-hours-a-day laughter. This is Richard Pryor time. There's something always going on. It's never dull. We've got comedian after comedian after comedian on this squad. . .And we're only serious to a point. We know we're going to be on the road together for nine months, so we don't chew each other out. If a guy feels he's mad at another guy, he stays away from him for a few hours or a few days until things heal up.

"It's a lot different with 10 guys than if you had 10 women together, with all of them borrowing each other's rollers and cold cream and getting mad. We're 10 men and we know we got to get along. We got to travel together, eat together, play together, sleep together. If something happens, we're all in it together. It's tradition."

Blacklock does try to telephone his wife whenever possible, explaining that high costs make it difficult to call from overseas. But he appeared positive the wives of the players also suffered no mental difficulties in coping with long absences. "Most of the wives are working," he explained. "Most are career oriented. They're mostly college graduates, and some have families. I think basically if a woman has something to do while you're away, she's fine. If she has to sit at home and not do anything other than count the money, it's difficult on her."

The Globetrotters' present tour finds the clown princes taking on a team called the California Chiefs. But Blacklock insists the games are never completely regimented, saying, "We adlib a lot. A lot of times, we ourselves don't know what we're going to do next. We follow the comedian. Now we do have a lot of set plays, like when you shoot from behind another guy's back. No guy is going to let you reach around and shoot behind his back. . .So the Chiefs are included because, without them, we wouldn't be able to put on a show.

"But they only know the set things, and sometimes even they're caught by surprise. Remember, these guys are being paid to try to beat us. And as you'll see tonight, they'll be trying very hard. So we have to get enough points to build up a good lead before we can start fooling around.

"There have been a lot of close games lately. They have a lot of good players. So yeah, there are certain pieces that they know we have to do. But everything else they try to stop."

Do the opponents, in this case the Chiefs, really get upset at losing?

"Sure they get upset," said Blacklock. "They get uptight a lot. There might even be tempers flaring tonight. But I'd get mad, too, if I had some guy tricking me. It takes its toll night after night. There haven't been any fights yet, but sometimes you just find yourself hoping one won't develop."

Earlier, Blacklock had discussed his placing the Globetrotter legends on pedestals. Recently however, one of those legends, Meadowlark Lemon, stepped down from that pedestal and retired. Fans across the globe moaned. But Blacklock, when asked for his impressions, intimated it may indeed have been time for Lemon to leave the squad. He said, "I never played with Meadowlark, except for training camps. But one thing you got to keep in mind about the Globetrotters: They're never caught with their pants down.

"They've been training guys for years for special spots. The time was coming when Meadowlark might retire. But ironically — and I may get into trouble for saying this — we've had a guy playing with us by the name of Geese Ausbie that I think is better than Lemon is now. I mean, Meadowlark had his years when he was great. But I came along in his declining years. Ausbie, on the other hand, has been around for 17 years and he's a fantastic player. He was a great Hall Of Famer in his home state of Oklahoma. He was drafted in baseball by the St. Louis Cardinals, but chose to play with the Globetrotters.

"I'M TELLING YOU this man can do some things!"

"I've never seen Goose Tatum play, but they say he was the best ever and now they compare Geese Ausbie to him. They never compared Meadowlark Lemon to Goose Tatum. And from what I've heard and read, Goose was the best 'Trotter in history."

Fine and dandy, everyone agrees Geese Ausbie is one of the funniest and most talented Globetrotters. But this has also created a bit of controversy because not everyone gets to see him perform. There are some people who get mighty upset when the Globetrotters come to town year after year, and yet it's always the squad without big names like Curly Neal and Ausbie. Does this sort of fan reaction to fame upset Blacklock?

"It doesn't bother me to the point I'm raving mad," he answered. "But yeah, it bothers me. I try to be fair to myself and realize these guys have been around a long time. They've made great names for themselves. But it bothers me when a kid runs up to you in the gym and says, 'Where's Curly? Where's Meadowlark?' And man, we hear that all the time.

"But you have to respect these older guys. Like Marques Haynes: OK, maybe he's known more by the older fans than the younger ones. But everywhere we go, he gets a standing ovation. Even last night in a small town like Wichita Falls, he got a standing ovation. People know him because he's great. Heck, you gotta remember Carter is the president, but you still see people asking about Harry Truman, Eisenhower and even Nixon."

Though a dribbling specialist — the one who slides to his knees and maintains a dribble, all the while generally making the opponent covering him look the part of a fool — James Blacklock admits he's still more basketball player than entertainer. As he puts it, "We have charisma as a team, yes. As an entertainer, no, the individual charisma is not there yet. It's coming. But I don't want to go out and shave my head to get attention. I want people to know me for what I can do, to know me as Jimmy Blacklock."

But cut his veins and he may not bleed 'Trotter red, white and blue. Still open, still honest, he answered the question of whether he hoped to stay a Globetrotter forever with, "How long is forever? That's difficult to answer. To be perfectly honest, I don't know.

"I don't try to predict where I'll be three or four years from now. That's for the Lord to decide, to help me and guide me. I just plan to go out and do my very best and improve my skills and enjoy life, then see what happens."

In the meantime, of course, he'll keep playing the part of clown prince — entertaining millions in the Harlem Globetrotter tradition, but never letting go of his memories of sadder times.

'Trotters Win Again

The Jan. 20 contest between the Harlem Globetrotters and the California Chiefs in the Lubbock Coliseum could only serve as proof that both teams want desperately to emerge the victors. The 'Trotters experienced one of their coldest nights ever, missing a good many shots and turning the ball over numerous times. Often, the comedy of the game seemed to completely disappear.

With 1:21 remaining in the first half, the score was still knotted at 41-41. The 'Trotters then ran off a string of field goals and went into the dressing rooms at intermission holding a 49-41 lead. But not until a technical foul was called on a member of the California Chiefs for disputing a referee's call a bit too harshly.

The second half saw the 'Trotters build a lead and still have time to put in the familiar routines: the water bucket filled with paper, the ball on a string, dead ball and football lineup. So much so that the final score saw the favorites win by a 13 point margin, 83-70. Even still, the lack of satisfaction on the Globetrotter bench was obvious, as many players loudly bemoaned their cold shooting.

James "Twiggy" Sanders, the squad comedian, managed to keep everyone entertained though.

Some fans were heard to wonder as to the whereabouts of player-coach Marques Haynes. Actually, Haynes had decided very late to catch a plane to Miami and see the Super Bowl on Jan. 21. According to Globetrotter James Blacklock, Haynes had been giving away his playoff tickets, but decided to catch the final big game between the Dallas Cowboys and the Pittsburgh Steelers. Why? Because Marques Haynes is the father-in-law of the Cowboys' excellent wide receiver, Drew Pearson.

Southwest Conference basketball is nothing new to three members of the Globetrotters: Jimmy Blacklock of the University of Texas, and Theodis Lee and Louis Dunbar, both former standouts at the University of Houston. Blacklock was quite inquisative before the contest about Texas Tech University's standing in the current SWC basketball race. But when told Tech lost recently to SMU in Dallas, his reaction was, "What! You're kidding! I just saw Baylor wax the crud out of SMU on TV this afternoon."

Blacklock also declined to make predictions on the Super Bowl outcome, saying instead, "Only the guys on the team who are betting have favorites. I myself just hope it's a wide open offensive game and ends up something like 40-39."

He nearly got his wish.

As usual, the Globetrotter halftime show offered a trio of unique international acts, including several balancing acts and jugglers.

City School Preparing For National Catholic Week Observance

The national observance of Catholic Schools Week will be held Feb. 4-9. Events during the week will call attention to the program offered by the Catholic schools in this area, as well as offer a seminar on parenting.

At St. Elizabeth-St. John Neumann Elementary School, 22nd Street and Frankford Avenue, each day will highlight this year's theme for the week, "Next to the Family—the Catholic School."

Besides daily seminars which will focus on "The Family as the Learning Bridge to School," parents will bring special programs to the children in the school, sharing their careers and talents.

Some of the parents' programs will include Capt. Douglas E. Ferling of the Reese Air Force Base Learning Center Branch, who will give a multi-media presentation of pilot training in the United States Air Force; and Dr. James Moyer, a Lubbock anesthesiologist presenting a program on "A Trip to the Operating Room."

Mrs. Jacquelyn Reis, a local quilting instructor and award winner for her quilts, will work with the combination first and second grade class at the school in designing and making a tied quilt.

Other speakers, including a dentist, Texas Highway Patrolman and a veterinarian, will be among persons bringing programs on their careers.

The special observance will begin with a pancake supper and open house Feb. 5, to be followed each day with special activities, such as Parent Share Day, Students' Film Festival, Staff Appreciation Luncheon and Family Fun Night.

A proclamation by Mayor Dirk West, declaring official Catholic Schools Week, was presented Thursday in the City Council chambers.

The seminar on parenting is entitled "Home To School: The Learning Bridge."

It begins at 10 a.m. Feb. 6 with Dr. John Fillipone, obstettician and gynecologist, speaking on "Pre-Adolescent Sexuality." During this program there will be films and discussion on the maturation of boys and girls.

At 9:15 a.m. Feb. 7, Dr. Nicky R. Holderman, a graduate of the University of Houston's College of Optometry, clinical instructor in the pediatrics department at the University of Houston and now practicing in Lubbock, will speak on perceptual training and warning signals to visual problems.

At 10:30 a.m. Feb. 7, Mrs. Jane Cardea, a Registered Nurse and instructor of nursing at Methodist Hospital's School of Nursing, will present films and a lecture to help parents identify high blood pressure in their children.

At 9:15 a.m. Feb. 8, Mrs. Clara McPherson, who has taught 25 years at Texas Tech University and been a nutrition consultant for Headstart Programs and nursery schools in Texas, will present a program on what the caring parent needs to know about nutrition.

At 10:30 a.m. Feb. 8, Mrs. Sue Arimitsu, a graduate of Kent State University and the University of Alabama and an instructor of special education at St. Elizabeth-St. John Neumann School, and Dr. Max Manley, who is in the Education Department at Texas Tech and a consultant for Heritage Hall, will conduct a panel discussion on "The Barriers to Successful Learning."

At 7:30 p.m. Feb. 8, Dr. William F. Landers, a professor of phsychology in the Department of Phsychology at Texas Tech, will speak on the pros and cons of television and how it affects children.

At 10:30 a.m. Feb. 9, Leroy Behnke, a deacon at St. Elizabeth-St. John Neumann, will present a lecture and discussion on spiritual growth in the family, entitled "Spiritual Retardation: The Greatest Obstalce to Development."

The seminar on parenting is open to the public and is free of charge, according to a school spokesman. There will be a nursery provided for small children.

LOCAL SCHOOL WEEK OBSERVANCE—Students and teachers of St. Elizabeth-St. John Neumann Elementary School, 22nd Street and Frankford Avenue, are preparing for the local observance of National Catholic Schools Week Feb. 4-9 in Lubbock. This year's theme for the week is "Next to the Family—the Catholic School." Besides daily seminars which will focus on "The Family As The Learning Bridge to School," parents will bring special programs to the school children, sharing their careers and talents.

Church Program Dealing With Current Topics Set

First United Methodist Church will sponsor programs dealing with current topics of interest every Sunday night for four weeks beginning in February.

Topics to be discussed are "Contemporary China," "Covenant Living and Times of Change," and a Bible study on the Book of Matthew.

Speakers for the "Contemporary China" program will be Mr. and Mrs. Ray Diekemper Feb. 4, presenting a slide show of their recent trip to China; Dr. Robert Dietrich, professor of Asian Studies at North Texas State University, "A Revolution—It's Not A Picnic," Feb. 11; a local personality, "China—The Search for Community," Feb. 18; and Feb. 25, a speaker on "Taiwan and Current China."

Topics to be discussed in the "Covenant Living and Times of Change" program include the following: Feb. 4, "What Is A Covenant," speaker, Rev. J. Waid Griffin; Feb. 11, "Business Relationships and Covenants in Business," speaker, Bob Garritson; and Feb. 18, "Family Relations," speaker, Mrs. Wildren (Bryan) Edwards of the Home and Family Life Department at Texas Tech University.

The third program, a Bible study on the Book of Matthew, will be given by Dr. Sam Nader, pastor of the church.

All sessions will be held at First United Methodist Church Feb. 4, 11, 18, and 25. The last session of each program will be an open session for questions and answers.

The program is sponsored by the Commission of Missions and the Commission of Social Concerns at the church and is open to the public at no charge.

Further information may be obtained by calling the church office at 763-4607.

Robert Wells Joins Pastoral Counseling Team At Center

ROBERT WELLS

In addition to pastoral counseling, Wells will be leading Transactional Analysis therapy groups and classes, as well as Bi/Polar seminars.

Wells joined the staff of Second Baptist Church in June, 1966, and resigned his position there Dec. 31, 1978. He has served as chairman of the board of CONTACT Lubbock, Inc. He chaired the steering committee that began CONTACT Lubbock in 1971 and participates in the training of telephone workers connected with the ministry.

RELIGION NEWS

The Lubbock resident has served on the national board of CONTACT Teleministries USA, Inc., since 1971 and is currently chairman of the national board. He is the immediate past chairman of the Community Planning Council of the United Way in Lubbock and a member of Southwest Lubbock Rotary Club.

In 1975 Wells received a Rockefeller Parish Minister's Fellowship to participate in therapy training at the Western Institute for Group and Family Therapy in Watsonville, Calif., under the direction of Dr. Bob Goulding.

Film Series 'How Should We Then Live' Set At Tech

The film series, "How Should We Then Live?", based on the book written by Dr. Francis Schaeffer, will be shown this week and next week at the University Center Theatre on the Texas Tech University campus.

The series' showing is sponsored by the Friday Night Tape Class and the University Center Programs.

The series consists of 10 30-minute films and the showings will be moderated by Dr. Arthur Johnson, professor of philosophy at West Texas State University in Canyon.

Schaeffer, who appears in the film series as a moderator, wrote the book from a Christian viewpoint. Schaeffer has been called a "missionary to intellectuals."

In the book and film series, Schaeffer examines the decline of Western thought and culture as opposed to the humanist theory of the rise of Western thought and culture.

Steve Bailey, an officer of the tape class, said that the series is for anyone interested in the state of humanity today.

The first three films of the series will be shown beginning at 1 p.m. Saturday, with the next three films beginning at 2 p.m. Feb. 4. Two films will be shown beginning at 1 p. m. Feb. 10 and the last two films in the series will be shown beginning at 2 p m. Feb. 11.

There is a charge for the film series and further information may be obtained by calling the University Center Cultural Events office at Texas Tech.

Positive Thinking

By Norman Vincent Peale

I SAT ONE DAY in the office of the owner of a great store. Filled with splendid merchandise this store justifies its fine reputation. And the history of the man who built it is the romantic old American story. I asked him the reasons for his accomplishments, starting with literally nothing and achieving such outstanding results.

He thought for only a moment. Then he said: "God, my wife Helen, my associates, America and hard work. That's it in a nutshell."

He went on to illustrate the points he had made by telling me that he had come to that city with "twenty-five cents in my pocket and my bride by my side." Both of them put in long hours of hard work and, in a few years, in partnership with another man, were able to open a shop of their own. Unfortunately, the partnership didn't work out, circumstances made things even worse, and eventually they lost the store.

"I found myself on the streets of this city once more," he told me. "But this time I was a little ahead of the game. I had a thousand dollars left, the same wife, more experience, faith in God, myself, and in these United States. I just started in and went to work again.

"THERE IS A PASSAGE in the Bible," he continued, "that helped me no end in that trying situation. It is, 'In your patience posses ye your souls.' If you get a lot of faith, some real spiritual experience and enough understanding so that you don't get upset or lose your head, and if you practice patience and keep up your courage, and put your mind in God, you can solve any situation."

This man then gave me the phrase I use as the theme of this column. "I discovered," he said, "that you can find a happy outcome to any trying situation, provided you go at it in the right way." What he said and the way he said it fascinated me and has been in my mind ever since. So many people come to me about various difficulties in which they find themselves and they ask, "What is the right way to meet a trying situation?"

THE FIRST THING is to hold in mind the conviction that there can be and will be a happy outcome to every trying situation, even yours. Believe that there are creative values in any trying set of circumstances. It may sound trite, but it's true that, "Every cloud has a silver lining," if you believe it and look for it. It is all too easy to concentrate on the darkness and gloom. But the wise thing is to search hopefully in the shadows for any possible gleam of light that may be there. I have said this many times, and I say it again now: If you will look with a positive, open-eyed, optimistic approach into any situation, you will find a chink of light; you will find hopeful possibilities.

The second point is simply to do what you think is the right thing to do. You can never go wrong doing right. No one ever has. You only get wrong results when you do wrong things. So in trying situations don't make the mistake of doing a wrong thing, and to know what is right practice calmness and pray, then be honest with yourself and you will get the right answer.

Also, and this is very important, treat people right. No one can discount the importance of people's reactions to you. And that leads to the third rule. Ask for God's guidance. Ask God to show you what to do and how to do it. Then think and study and work hard. In other words, do your best and God will do His best, and what do you need more than that. This is the effective way to make the most of all opportunities.

U.S. Scientific, Industrial Revolutions Create Changes In Way Of Life, Death

Deaths & Dying

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second in a series of 15 articles exploring "Death and Dying: Challenge and Change." In this article, Prof. David E. Stannard of Yale University discusses how attitudes toward death in the United States have changed from the 17th century to the present. This series was written for Courses By Newspaper, a program developed by University Extension, University of California, San Diego, and funded by a grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities.

THREE AND A HALF CENTURIES is less than a moment in the span of human events, but, for Americans, it is the entirety of our history.

During that time the scientific and industrial revolutions have created truly momentous changes in our way of life — and in our way of death. Indeed, since neither life nor death can exist independently of the other, changing images of the one must invariably imply related changes in the other.

And it is images that are important here; since the ultimate meanings of life and death remain mysteries, it is the shadowy image and the elusive myth that have strongly affected the way we act in the face of the final question.

Most of the earliest American colonial settings were classic pioneer societies, dominated by young, rootless, adventure-seeking males. Life was cheap and death was frequent.

Since people meant little to one another in life, so too in death they were largely ignored. Laws requiring burial were often necessary, merely to insure that bodies not be left untended. Funerals, if they were held at all, were most often stark and simple — and only rarely were permanent markers left to indicate the place of interment.

TO THIS GENERAL RULE, the Puritans of 17th-century New England were a vivid exception. Unlike the immigrants to most other colonies, the Puritans came in

QUESTIONS:

1. Why were burial laws often required in colonial America?
2. What was the purpose of Puritan funeral legislation?
3. What did most Puritans expect of their life in the next world?
4. Why did 19th century ministers feel compelled to invent reasons for people to stay alive?
5. How did the industrial and technological revolutions change our experience with death?

ANSWERS:

1. To insure that bodies would not be left untended.
2. To restrict the extravagance of funerals.
3. "Everlasting Punishment," and the horrible prospect of Hell.
4. Because the idea of death and its rewards had becomme so popular during this time.
5. They resulted in a loss of individuality and community and an increasing sense of cosmic loneliness.

families. They were not necessarily young, and they were far from rootless. The need to maintain a closely-knit cooperative community was so critical to the eventual success of their holy mission that life was highly valued and no one's death was ignored.

In contrast, the Puritans' funerals finally became so elaborate and expensive that they, too, required controlling legislation — not to insure proper burial, but on the contrary to restrict extravagance at funerals lest families be impoverished by spending outlandish sums in honoring the dead.

In these two earliest colonial settings, then, we can observe dramatically different behaviors in the face of death as a result of dramatically different images of life. Indeed, these two settings illustrate a rule that historians, sociologists, and anthropologists have repeatedly seen at work: in societies in which each individual has a unique, important, and irreplaceable function, death must not be ignored, but must be marked by a community-wide outpouring of grief for what is a genuine social loss.

On the other hand, in societies in which one individual is seen as little different from any other — in which little damage is done to the social fabric by the loss of an individual — the death of anyone outside one's immediate circle of family and friends can be virtually ignored.

DEATH, OF COURSE, has meaning not only to society, but to the individual as well. Among the Puritans this was especially so. For them, life after death was, according to the minister Increase Mather, potentially a place of "Everlasting Punishment" where they would "broil in that horrible fire of the wrath of God." They viewed humankind as essentially evil and, except in rare cases, generally deserving of the excruciating prospect of hell. Thus, they focused enormous energy on the contemplation of death and on intense searching for some evidence to indicate that they might be among the few whom God promised to save.

By the early 19th century the religious world of most Americans had turned this image of life after death upside down. It had become fashionable to view man as essentially good, and life after death as heavenly.

Death was thus celebrated and romanticized. It was more beautiful than life. The frail, wan face and body of a girl dying of consumption became the popular image of ideal young womanhood. Ministers felt compelled to invent reasons why people should not voluntarily rush headlong into death. For the 19th century American, the joys and rewards of heaven beckoned.

IT WAS AN ASTONISHING and turbulent time. But, like the lives of many of the children whose sentimental gravestones dotted the pastoral cemeteries that were then in fashion, it was relatively short-lived.

For several centuries science and philosophy had been raising serious questions that went to the heart of religion. Just as Copernicus, in the 16th century, had argued that the earth was not central to the universe, so Darwin, in the 19th, argued that man evolved from other creatures and was not specially created in God's image. Man became inessential, even trivial, to the ongoing reality of the universe. The result of these ideas was a rapidly spreading sense of cosmic loneliness.

Whereas in the past the debate had been concentrated on the nature of the afterlife, now it was over the very existence of any afterlife. And if eventual heavenly reward for even the holiest of earthly behavior was increasingly doubted by many — perhaps most —Americans, the clear alternative was to seek earthly gratification and to avoid thought of death altogether.

But life, too, was changing. The industrial and technological revolutions of the 18th and 20th centuries dramatically eroded the sense of self that any man or woman might hold. Few people could still feel themselves essential to any human enterprise. At work, at play, even at home, people began to realize how easily replaceable they had become.

EVERY SEGMENT OF LIFE — even leaving it — had been compartmentalized and turned over to specialists. From the cradle to the grave there was not a single major endeavor that could not be handled "better" — more smoothly and efficiently — by professionals.

Americans were thus lonely not only in cosmic terms, but in communal terms as well. And death, so long a part of the natural order of things, became an illogical, meaningless affront. It had to be banished. And it was.

Even the money that Americans would spend on funerals — when the fact of death was impossible to avoid — would now be spent predominantly for the services of an expert who could make a corpse appear "lifelike." It became a cliche to observe that as Americans had become obsessed with sex in their quest for earthly satisfaction, they had simultaneously driven thoughts of death into the realm of the forbidden, the realm traditionally reserved for pornography.

Today we are again in the midst of tumult and change. All the powers of modern mass media — books, television, film — focus repeatedly on death: from lachrymose fiction to how-to-do-it instruction, from serious social criticism to the new mysticism that presents itself in so-called scientific proofs of the existence of life after death. This very series in the Courses by Newspaper program is as good an example as any of our new-found concern with death.

BUT, UNLIKE MOST of those who have preceded us in the drama of human history, we have no immediate and generally accepted images or myths that might transform concern into comfort. We remain confused — in a universe and a society that provide no answers.

If human history has any lesson for us to learn, it may well be that we must begin to reforge the social links that were shattered by the industrial and technological revolutions. The myths and images that would emerge from such a reassertion of the community would be, as they always have been, created by ourselves. But if they were at least appropriate to our ongoing time and place, they would help us to confront with less confusion that which is, and always has been, humankind's most mysterious yet inevitable fate — death.

The views expressed in Courses by Newspaper are those of the authors only and do not necessarily reflect those of the University of California, the funding agency, the distributing agency, or the participating newspapers and colleges.

Next Week: Robert Fulton and Eric Markusen of the Center for Death Education and Research at the University of Minnesota discuss the distorted images of death presented in our popular culture.

Beet Growers Association Picks Top Producers

"Yields among the top 10 growers were all above 28 tons per acre, and sugar content was consistently above 14 percent," Jones reported.

The top 10 contractors list comes in addition to the naming of the Texas-New Mexico Sugar Beet Growers Association's outstanding producers.

Winners of the top grower awards were named at the association's annual banquet, and were selected on the basis of a contest plot in excess of 10 acres.

Those winners included Dudley Bailey of Clovis, first, with a yield of 40.8 tons per acre and a sugar content of 16.5 percent; Troy Christian of Farwell, second, with a tonnageof 40.4 per acre and sugar content of 15.09 percent, and Halaco Ag Inc. of Farwell, represented by Melborn Jones of Farwell, third, with a yield of 37.2 tons per acre and a sugar content of 15.14 percent.

The top 10 contractors list is based solely on commercial production acreage, as opposed to contest acreage, according to Jones.

The association's three top growers were in evidence in the top 10 as well, although there were some reversals in roles.

Troy Christian was the top overall contract grower over 126 acres with a yield of 36.8 tons per acre, sugar content of 15.12 percent, and overall sugar yield of 11,141 pounds per acre.

Dudley Bailey was second with 32.3 tons per acre over a 67-acre tract, with a sugar content of 16.18 percent and overall sugar yield of 10,436 pounds per acre.

Bailey also placed third with his statistics on 124 acres, which included a tonnage of 31.3 per acre, sugar content of 15.84 percent, and overall sugar of 9,934 pounds per acre.

In fourth was H. J. Clark on a seven-acre tract with a tonnage of 30.9 per acre, sugar content of 15.08 percent and overall sugar of 9,316 pounds per acre.

Fifth place went to Halaco Ag Inc. on 160 acres with a tonnage of 31.9, sugar content of 14.41 percent and total sugar of 9,198 pounds per acre.

G. E. Bailey was sixth on 47 acres with tonnage of 30.6, sugar content of 14.87 percent and total sugar of 9,099 pounds per acre.

Doug Carpenter's 120-acre tract was seventh, with tonnage of 30.2, 15.05 percent sugar content, and total sugar production of 9,079 pounds per acre.

In eighth place was Wendol Christian with 28.9 tons per acre over 118 acres, sugar content of 15.61 percent, and overall sugar of 9,030 pounds per acre.

Beet association President Bill Cleavinger was ninth on a 20-acre field with tonnage of 29, sugar content of 15.02 percent and overall sugar production of 8,703 pounds per acre.

Tenth place was captured by Steve Olson on 22 acres with a tonnage of 28.6, sugar content of 15.01 percent and overall sugar productio of 8,572 pounds per acre.

"The top 10 list includes producers from Clovis, Bovina, Hart, Wildorado and the Hereford factory areas, so growers from all of the Hereford Holly factory's receiving areas are including on the list of top beet producers," Jones commented.

"I think this list is just another indication of the fact that despite some adverse growing and harvest conditions during the 1978 crop year, the growers did a good job of producing high quality sugar beets in the High Plains area," he added.

Energy Council Recommends Gasohol Factory For Texas

AUSTIN (Special) — The first solid recommendations to move Texas into commercial production of fuel from agricultural materials were made here recently during a committee meeting of the Texs Energy Advisory Council (TEAC).

The special committee on agriculturally derived fuels, headed by Agriculture Commissioner Reagan V. Brown, will pass on recommendations to the TEAC which would provide funding for a pilot plant to produce alcohol for fuel.

Members of the committee, made up a cross-section of representatives from industry, government and agricultural producers, were briefed by three of the world's leading experts on fuel alcohol production.

Representatives of one of the world's largest alcohol engineering firms told the group the state had "tremendous potential" as a large alcohol-producing area.

"You have the type of agriculture necessary; you have the people; you have the spirit," noted biochemist Klaus Rokita of Vienna, Austria, commented.

Rokita, along with Jerome H. Korff, of Houston, are employed by the international firm which has designed the engineering and technology for half of the 580 alcohol plants currently in operation in Brazil.

Leslie Levine, head of biomass research for the U.S. Department of Energy (DOE), also briefed the committee on current research work. Levine said $8 million of the total $42 million research budget at the DOE is going into biomass research projects.

Among recommednations to be presented to TEAC was that the State of Texas encourage initial pilot programs by contracting to purchase alcohol for blend use in state vehicles.

"If financial backing for a pilot project is not approved, the committee recommended funds for a complete site and engineering study," Brown said. "That would be the first hurdle to pass on the way to full production."

The group moved to support a legislative exemption of alcohol fuel pilot projects from the Texas Alcohol Code, which has severely restricted initial efforts by Texas groups.

"We are very enthusiastic about the use of alcohol as one remedy to fuel shortages in the U.S.," Brown said. "We know Texas' farmers can produce the materials necessary. And rising gasoline prices, dictated by the OPEC nations, have narrowed the economic gap between regular gasoline and gasohol (a blend of gasoline and alcohol).

"We have the technology to produce fuel using a variety of agricultural materials, most of which can be grown on acreage not now in use for food commodities. And yet, at present, we do not have one fully commercial fuel alcohol plant in this country. I'd like to see that first plant in operation in Texas."

The committee emphasized tht fuel alcohol production would not reduce food production or export capacities. Much of the alcohol production comes from use of by-products.

For instance, corn used for alcohol distillation provides residues which make excellent cattle feed. Citrus peels, below-grade fruits and vegetables and other crop residues, which would normally have little economic value, are considered "extremely good materials" for fuel production.

PLAINS AGRICULTURE

By DUANE HOWELL

INTEREST BY LIVESTOCK PRODUCERS in hedging on the futures market has been increasing rapidly the past few years.

A large amount of literature on the subject deals with the question of "how to hedge." Just knowing how, some specialists say, is not a complete criteria for a good marketing plan. A producer also must know why.

There are basically two reasons a livestock producer might want to hedge his cattle or hogs. One is that the producer may feel that the current futures market price reflects a price higher than what the cash market will be when his animals are ready for delivery. Another is that a producer may not wish to accept the risk of prices lower than those presently indicated by the futures market.

THE TWO BASIC REASONS FOR HEDGING are to obtain either higher prices or more certain prices (reduce price risk).

Each producer, specialists point out, must evaluate his risk situation and decide which is the more important, price level or price risk, in order to make a sound pricing decision. The ideal situation would be to obtain the highest price with the lowest risk, but this rarely happens.

The producer whose primary objective is to obtain a higher price will not hedge unless the price he can obtain from the futures market is higher than the price he expects to receive from the cash market at delivery time.

Therefore, he must be able to accept the risk if his price expectation is wrong. To achieve that objective, the producer must be able to predict accurately cash market price levels months in advance of when the livestock will be sold.

A PRODUCER IN THIS POSITION can fail to achieve his objective two ways. He can fail if he hedges at a lower price than what he could have obtained from the cash market. And he can fail if he doesn't hedge at a given price and must later sell his livestock at a lower price than he would have received if he had hedged.

The producer whose primary objective is to reduce price risk has a better chance of success in achieving his goal through hedging. To obtain a more certain price only requires that a hedger is able to estimate the difference between the futures price and the cash market "basis" more accurately than he can forecast future prices.

Although estimating the difference is less than perfect, price differences between markets tend to be more stable and easier to predict than what cash market prices will be many months into the future.

Fulfilling an objective of reducing risk and obtaining a certain price requires only that profits or losses in the cash market be offset by profits or losses in the futures market.

THE FINANCIAL POSITION OF THE operation is vital in determining hedging objectives. A producer who is in a sound financial position with good equity and no cash flow problems may have no real incentive to hedge. On the other hand, a producer who has borrowed to the maximum and faces a tight cash flow problem may want to hedge in order to reduce his risk exposure.

In some instances producers who are borrowing money to run their operation may be forced by the lender to hedge. In this case the lender determines the risk-bearing ability of the operation. A producer in this situation is faced with the choice of accepting current profit levels or not being able to produce.

Even the same producer will find, as time changes, his incentive to hedge also may change — such as at the bottom of a cattle cycle versus at the top of the cycle.

"Hedging is a decision that must be made by each producer depending on his own situation," says one specialist. "When considering hedging, the producer must first determine his objectives, for without an objective the producer has no solid foundation for his decision and cannot evaluate its effectiveness."

Tech Student Chosen For 4-H Travels

Texas Tech University student Jackie Brown of Truscott has been selected as one of three 4-H members from Texas to participate in the 1979 International 4-H Youth Exchange program.

The IFYE program enables 4-H members to travel to another country for an extended period of time. The IFYE program is condidered to be one of this nation's most productive sources of international good will.

Miss Brown was a member of 4-H for seven years. While an active member, she had projects in foods, clothing and conservation of natural resources and held several offices in junior leaders and county club activities.

She attended ecology camp as well as the first Texas 4-H Congress and was a Gold Star girl in 1975. Miss Brown also received the 4-H Danforth Scholarship to the American Youth Foundation Leadership Camp in Shelby, Mich.

At Tech, Miss Brown is a home economics major and a member of the Home Economics Council and the Home Economics Honorary Society and an officer in the American Home Economics Association, Phi Upsilon Omicron, Omicron Delta Kappa and the Honorary Leadership Society.

She is a member of the Junior Council and a Senator from the College of Home Economics in the Tech Student Senate and area administrative officer and "Little Major" in Tech's Angel Flight group.

The 21-year-old student will receive a bachelor's degree in home economics in May and hopes to work on a master's degree in marketing and management after she returns from the IFYE program.

Grain Supply Eyed By U.S. Producers

By RODERICK TURNBULL
Kansas City Board of Trade

KANSAS CITY — As farmers contemplate their planting plans for the coming growing season, and assuming that in America they are fully aware what they are producing for world markets, they have available some rather amazing figures concerning feed grains.

In the current marketing year, which included the 1978 growing season in the northern hemisphere plus 1979 for the southern, the world is producing more feed grains than in any other year in history.

On the other hand, it also is consuming more at home and in world trade then ever before. But the world isn't going to use all it produces so the carry-over actually will be growing again. However, the carryover at the end of this year, as a percentage of utilization, won't be as high as it was in the early 1960s.

In every category, the United States plays a major role. The United States accounts for about the 30 percent of the world's feed grain production, 20 percent of the utilization, over 60 percent of the world trade and it will have about half the world's carryover.

That 60 percent share of the world trade which is accorded the United States is dramaic evidence of the importance of the global market to American farmers, although of course the home market still is the American farmers, largest on this one type of grains. Obviously, the growth in the world market is more important to American farmers than to those of any other nation.

The global feed grain situation has been well summarized by James P. Rudbeck, an agricultural economist in the grain and feed division of the Foreign Agricultural Service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture. The data he has collected will be important to the grain trade at the Kansas City Board of Trade and other exchanges as well as to farmers.

Every year, the world has more people, but even more important, when it comes to the utilization of feed grains, is the fact more and more countries are increasing their livestock and poultry production in numbers while others simply are feeding more intensely. For the record, though, it should be kept in mind that around the whole world, not all feed grains are fed to livestock.

In many nations of Asia and South America what are regarded as feed grains in North America are used for human food. In fact, about 30 percent of the world's feed grains, corn, barley, grain sorghum, oats and rye, is used directly by humans while 60 percent goes to livestock and poultry. The other 10 percent, it is estimated, is accounted for by industrial uses and seed.

It is interesting how the utilization figure has been growing from year to year. In 1974-75, accoarding to USDA estimates, world utilization of feed grains was 633 million metric tons; in 1975-76, it was 646 million metric tons; in 1976-77 the figure was 682 million and it rose to 688 million in 1977-78. The estimate for this year is 709 million. That's a jump of 76 million tons since 1974-75 and if all this increase were converted to corn it would be more than 3 billion bushels.

In the same period, that is 1974-75 to 1978-79, world production increased from 628 million tons to 732, or 104 tons. If all this were corn it would be more than 4 billion bushels. This helps explain why the carryover has been boosted from 58 million tons up to 105 million or a total boost of 47 million tons in four years

The 47 million ton carryover would be about 1.8 million bushels in corn equivalent.

One more figure important to American farmers and the grain trade is that world trade in feed grains has increased from 64 million tons in 1974-75 to a projected 86 million this year or a gain of 22 million tons which could be interpreted to be about 880 million bushels of corn. U.S. exports have accounted for most of this gain.

It really is remarkable when analyzing all these figures to consider how increases are registered in nearly every catergory of measurement every year.

The one catergory where logic or history suggest some variation should be considered probable sometime is in production. For five straight years in a row, world production of feed grains has increased each year. It certainly isn't surprising if students of agriculture conclude that in some years crops won't be as good as they were the year before. However, it does seem that when taking the world as a whole, when one part has a failure, another makes up for it with good yields.

The variation in world production usually is not as great as in any single country.

Most of the world's feed grain production is in the northern hemisphere. About the only uncertainty left in this 1978-79 marketing year on total production is in the countries south of the equator where percentagewise the harvests on feed grains are not so big.

Corn accounts for about half of the world's feed grains, barley about a fourth, grain sorghum one-tenth, and oats and rye the balance.

Rudbeck notes that this does appear to be a unique year in that at no place in the world does there appear to have been or are the prospects for a really bad feed grain crop failure. On the other hand, the biggest producers, the United States, the Soviet Union, the Common Market countries and several other have had record crops.

The figures here all have been for feed grains and do not apply to wheat or soybeans. They should help to set the stage for American farmers who are contemplating "the mix" for their 1979 spring plantings.

Industry Increases Drilling Activity

TULSA, Okla. (Special) -U.S. drilling, which increased for the fifth straight year in 1978, will inch up again this year to the highest level since 1950.

A survey by the Oil & Gas Journal shows the industry expects to drill 49,379 wells this year, up 2.53 percent. That is 1,218 more wells than the preliminary total for 1978.

The 1979 forecast is nearly 9,000 wells shy of the U.S. record of 58,160 wells drilled in 1956.

The survey of 1979 drilling plans also points to:

—Heavy concentration on wildcatting, with 11,358 wildcats targeted, the largest number since the 11,739 drilled in 1957. This is up 638 wells or nearly 6 percent from the 10,720 wildcats estimated last year. The percentage increase is a bit less than the 7.6 percent wildcat gain for 1978 over 1977.

—A much smaller increase in development drilling. Projected figure is 38,021 wells, up 1.5 percent from estimated 1978 total of 37,441.

—An all-time high for footage, which should reach 237 million, breaking the U.S. record of 233.9 million feet of hole set in 1956. The 1978 footage is estimated at 229.1 million, which ranks as the second highest total ever.

—An increase in depth of the average well, for the third consecutive year, to 4,797 feet. That compares with an average depth of 4,022 feet in the record 1956 completion year. The deeper drilling trend of the past three years, however, is just now bringing the average back toward the high level reached in the early 1970s. The average in 1972 was 4,809. And the record average was 5,034 in 1973. At the drilling industry's low ebb in 1971 —only 27,000 wells—the average was 4,701.

—A big drilling year by the U.S. majors (the 20 largest firms). They are expected to increase total wells drilled by 11 percent and wildcats by 32.2 percent.

—No clear pattern for independents, with some planning increases and some decreases. Most of the larger independents, however, do plan stepped up drilling.

—Canada's biggest drilling year in history from the standpoint of total wells and footage. The survey puts the Canadian completions total this year at 7,084 wells and 25.2 million feet of hole. That compares with 5,976 wells and 20.5 million feet in 1977 and 6,900 wells and 24.4 million feet last year—consecutive record years for Canadian drilling.

The increase over 1977 would have been still higher except for a nontraditional year-end dip in rig activity during the last two months of the year. The active rotary rig count for the U.S. reached its peak of 2,385 Oct. 30, 1978, then dropped 166 rigs during the next nine weeks.

New Discovery Well Tested By Occidental

LOS ANGELES, Calif. (Special) -The sixth biennial Oil Spill Conference, sponsored jointly by the petroleum industry and the federal government, will be held March 19-22 at the Los Angeles Bonaventure Hotel, Los Angeles.

More than 1,500 delegates and exhibitors from all over the world are expected to attend. One hundred and fifteen technical papers dealing with the prevention, behavior, control and cleanup of oil spills will be presented. A number of films on these subjects will also be shown.

The papers will stress cleanup operations: cleanup cooperatives; training techniques; monitoring; new pet prevention and control techniques; new equipment developments; oil transfer practices; dispersants; fate and effects of oil; natural resource damage assessment; and the national and international socio-economic-legal aspects.

Sponsors of the international conference are the American Petroleum Institute, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and the U.S. Coast Guard.

Solar Enthusiast Sees Big Gap In Theory, Practical Aspects

By MAX B. SKELTON

HOUSTON (AP) — Julius D. Heldman describes himself as an unabashed enthusiast of solar energy.

But the Shell Development Co. vice president says the difference between theoretical solar energy and practical solar energy is the difference between dream and reality.

Solar energy is here to stay, he says, but the costs have to be brought down to the level of other energy forms.

And, he adds, a crash program similar to the one that put men on the Moon will not get the job done.

Such a space program-type approach, Heldman said, can work when the task is assembling several fairly mature technologies into a whole.

"Unfortunately, development of practical solar energy will be step-by-step," he said.

"We're going to have to develop one process, and then use that technology as a base for developing the next. In a situation like that, you can effectively substitute money for time only to a very limited degree."

Heldman's responsibilities with Shell Development include patents and licensing and sponsorship of new ventures in emerging technologies.

Over the past six years, a good part of his professional life has been devoted to developing solar power. His view on future prospects appear in the winter edition of Ecolibrium, the Shell Oil Co. quarterly publication devoted to scientific thought and achievement on energy and environment.

Heldman says he is as optimistic as ever about solar energy but is increasingly concerned by overly optimistic expectations of what solar can mean for this country and the world.

"Energy from the sun holds tremendous promise to a world painfully aware its traditional energy sources are both increasingly expensive and ultimately finite," he said.

"But we cannot allow enthusiasm for solar energy to blind us to the realities of what it will take to convert potential into reality. Overly optimistic expectations for solar will inevitably mean disappointment. They may even prove dangerous if they cause complacency and inaction by allowing us to overlook or minimize current energy sources."

He added, however, a great deal of the basic technology for solar has been developed.

"There are essentially two ways we can convert sunshine into active energy," he said.

"We can collect the sun's heat, and then put that heat to use in various ways. And, we can convert the sun's radiant energy directly to electricity, through the use of devices known as photovoltaic cells. Photovoltaic cells were the source of electric power on the Skylab space mission."

Heldman said virtually every basic solar energy technology is in place in a theoretical sense.

"We can do all these things in experiments," he said.

"The work that remains to be done might be called the second stage of the technology. To have practical solar energy, we must do two things. We must package these technologies for widespread application. And we must bring down the production costs so solar makes sense, on a dollar basis, to consumers."

Photovoltaic production of electricity, he said, is about 30 times more expensive than it would have to be to compete with electricity generation now available.

Heldman said, despite the work still to be done, it is reasonable to assume the nation may be deriving from solar devices perhaps as much as one-half of 1 percent of all its energy by 1990 and from 3 to 5 percent by the year 2000.

"And, as we move forward, I think solar may account for greater and greater shares of total energy used," he said.

"These figures are not as optimistic as some being tossed about. But they are by no means pessimistic. We're talking about energy equivalent to the electricity used in several millions of American homes. To reach these levels, quite a bit of development will have to be done."

Apache Gauges Wheeler Well

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (Special) - Apache Corp. reports it has completed a natural gas well in Wheeler County, approximately four miles west of the Oklahoma border. The well confirms a dual zone gas discovery the company announced in April, 1978.

The well, Stiles No. 2-17, Section 17, Block A-3, had a natural flow rate of 15.4 million cubic feet of gas and 14 barrels of oil per day on a 16/64-inch choke. Flowing tubing pressure was 6,000 pounds, and shut-in tubing pressure was 9,600 pounds.

Drilled to a depth of 16,870 feet, the well was completed through perforations in two Morrow formation zones between 16,676 to 16,686, 16,694 to 16,726, and 16,774 to 16,782 feet.

Apache Corp., the operator, holds an 87.5 percent working interest in the well. Other interests are held by Arkla Production Co., 10 percent, and Stephens Production Co., 2.50 percent.

Two additional wells, the Stiles No. 3-3 and the Stiles No. 4-18, in which Apache holds an 87.5 and 93.75 percent working interest, respectively, are currently drilling on the 7,680-acre prospect.

Apache, is an oil and gas program, exploration and production company, with industrial and agricultural operations.

Tenneco Plans Atlantic Test

HOUSTON (Special) -Plans for starting two new exploratory wells in the Atlantic Ocean off New Jersey have been announced by Tenneco Oil Exploration and Production and Aminoil USA, Inc.

Both wells will be drilled on Block 642 in the Baltimore Canyon area. Block 642 is owned 65 percent by Tenneco and 35 percent by Aminoil. It is situated immediately south of Block 598, where Texaco Inc., with Getty Oil Co., Sun Oil Co. (Delaware), Allied Chemical Corp., Transco Exploration and Freeport Oil Co. announced a natural gas discovery last August.

Tenneco and Aminoil are joining with the Texaco group, with Texaco as the designated operator, to drill the first well along the north line of Block 642. The well is being permitted to a depth of 19,000 feet. The Odeco Ocean Victory, a semi-submersible rig, will be used upon completion of the No. 2 well on Block 598.

For the second well, Tenneco and Aminoil are joining with Exxon Co. U.S.A. to drill along the east line of Block 642. Exxon owns the lease immediately to the east. Tenneco will be the designated operator.

The Zapata Ugland, also a semi-submersible, will be moved from the North Sea to drill the second well. The rig is expected to first arrive in Davisville, R.I., for modifications and refitting and will then move to the drill site.

This well is also being permitted to 19,000 feet.

Tenneco Oil is a major operating unit of Tenneco Inc., and Aminoil is a unit of R. J. Reynolds Industries Inc.

In 1945, the Arab League announced a boycott of goods made by Jews in Palestine.

Increase Seen For New Lines

TULSA, Okla. (Special) -Pipeline mileage laid in the non-communist world this year will increase slightly from last year's total, according to industry analyses and an annual survey of pipeline companies and contractors.

Industry plans to lay 24,645 miles of pipeline this year—955 miles more than last year. New work will be split about evenly between the Western and Eastern hemispheres.

Construction is expected to continue brisk beyond 1979, as major projects such as the Alaskan Highway gas pipeline get underway in the U.S. and Canada.

Western Hemisphere line construction this year will be led by the U.S. with 7,200 miles to be laid. This is up 750 miles from last year.

Canada expects its pipeline construction to involve 1,225 miles of new lines, up 225 miles.

Construction mileage will be up in one Eastern Hemisphere area and down in three others, the Journal reports.

The gainer is Africa, where line construction of 3,600 miles is planned, up 600 miles over last year.

Declines in the Eastern Hemisphere are expected in the Far East with 640 miles of new lines to be laid, 60 miles less than last year; Europe, 3,480 miles of new lines, down 120 miles; and the Middle East, 4,000 miles of new lines, down 800 miles.

Gas pipelines are beginning to dominate construction worldwide as natural gas gains value as a commodity. The trend likely will continue, although no downturn in pipelines is seen for crude and products.

Pipelines will follow crude and gas production as it moves into remote and offshore areas. The Alaskan crude line won't be the pipeline industry's last superproject, as proposals to move Arctic gas and crude south prove.

But the going for major projects will continue to be tough—physically, as construction moves into harsher environments; financially, as costs soar and investment requirements swell; and politically, as pipeline contractors and operators are forced to tiptoe through regulatory minefields to do their jobs.

THE ROUSTABOUT

By RAY WESTBROOK

THE GENERAL ELECTRIC Research and Development Center at Schenectady, N.Y., has completed a four-year study of a new concept in the delivery of energy.

The power delivery system studied by GE consists of chemical pipelines which can transport heat at high efficiency from a variety of sources.

Funded in part by the Department of Energy, the project concluded that heat can be moved directly from nuclear, coal and solar facilities to homes and industrial plants at more than twice the efficiency of conventional methods.

A thermal energy loss of only 20 percent would be logged in a 100-mile pipeline, according to the researchers.

The method depends upon a chemical heat pipe system, which is made up of two chemical reactors separated by a pair of pipelines that may be 100 miles or more in length.

It is simply an arrangement where the "input" end of the chemical heat pipe is hooked to a heat source, while the "output" end is located at the point where the heat is needed.

A PROJECT REPORT explains that, at the input end, a special mixture of liquids or gases absorbs heat and, with the help of a chemical catalyst, undergoes a change in the chemical reactor.

"Essentially, the gases or liquids are converted into a new chemical combination, with the heat energy 'locked up' in their molecular structure," the report says.

The high-energy mixture is then pumped to the other end of the pipeline, where it undergoes the reverse chemical change in the other chemical reactor, returning the liquids or gases to their original low-energy form and releasing the heat energy they carried.

To complete the cycle, the original mixture of gases or liquids is then pumped back to the heat source in a return pipe to begin the process again.

RESEARCHERS THEORIZE that in a chemical heat pipe installation, thermal energy could be produced at a nuclear, coal or solar plant in a remote area and supplied to several industrial plants and cities as much as 200 miles away. The heat would be used directly for industrial processes as well as for generating electricity.

Heat left over from generating electricity could be used to provide space heating for homes, thereby replacing oil and gas that are normally used.

Dr. Craig S. Tedmon, research and development manager for energy science, said, "If this technology proves to be technically and economically feasible, a number of distant applications could be served by a single large thermal plant, resulting in cost and energy savings."

Tedmon added, "Since the thermal plant would be sited in a remote area, it would have minimal impact on the urban regions that it serves."

PETROLEUM PRODUCT DEMAND increased only 1.4 percent during 1978, according to the American Petroleum Institute's Monthly Statistical Report.

Demand in 1978 averaged 18,700,000 barrels per day, compared to 18,434,000 in 1977. The 1.4 percent increase is in sharp contrast to the 6.9 percent rise in 1976, and the five percent increase in 1977.

Among the various petroleum products, gasoline demand, which increased most last year, was approximately three percent above 1977's level.

Demand for distillates (including home heating oil) rose only 0.4 percent last year, while demand for heavy fuel oil decreased one percent, API reports.

The association notes that the continuing decline of crude oil production in the lower 48 states was more than offset by increased shipments of Alaskan crude oil. As a result, overall domestic crude oil production increased 6.7 percent, from 8,179,000 barrels per day to 8,727,000 barrels daily.

While total imports (crude oil plus products) began to rise sharply during the latter part of 1978, an overall decline of 7.1 percent was recorded for the year. December totals were 8.4 percent higher than in December, 1977. Imports averaged 8,108,000 barrels per day last year, compared to 8,724,000 barrels in 1977.

Offshore Platform Begins Production

AMARILLO (Special) -Mesa Petroleum Co. has announced that production has commenced from Platform A, located on South Pelto 13 offshore Louisiana in the Gulf of Mexico.

The six-well platform which developed reserves from South Pelto 8 and 13, began producing at a daily rate of 3,700 barrels of oil and condensate and 18 million cubic feet of gas. Production from this platform is expected to reach maximum rates of 6,500 barrels of oil and condensate and 25 million cubic feet of gas per day.

Platform B will be installed on South Pelto 13 in the second quarter of 1979. This nine-well platform will also be used to develop reserves from both tracts.

Ownership in the tracts is as follows: Mesa Petroleum Co., 25 percent; Santa Fe Energy Co., a wholly-owned subsidiary of Santa Fe Industries Inc., 25 percent; Reserve Oil Inc., 13.5 percent; American Natural Gas Production Co., 12.5 percent; General Crude Oil Co., 12.5 percent; Oxy Petroleum Inc.; and Aminoil USA Inc., 4.5 percent.

Mesa Petroleum Co., with headquarters in Amarillo, is engaged in exploration and production in the United States, Western Canada and the North Sea.

Time for the all-day Vitamin C

Many people take Vitamin C this time of year. And more and more prefer Neo-Vadrin, the modern time-release form. Laboratory tests prove each capsule releases Vitamin C continuously for 8 to 10 hours. It's the form now recommended by many physicians, dentists and pharmacists.

1 capsule works all day.

Arkansas Bounces Texas Tech 63-57

By JIM FERGUSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

FAYETTEVILLE–It may be against Geneva convention rules, but Gerald Myers tried to use a little germ warfare against the University of Arkansas Saturday night.

Despite suffering with a lingering case of the flu, the Texas Tech basketball coach started reserve Ben Hill. Causing the rumor that Hill would breathe a few times on UA All-American Sidney Moncrief, thus giving the bug to the Hogs star.

In a way it worked as Moncrief was held to 10 points below his season scoring average of 22 per game. But despite winning the battle, Tech lost the war as the Hogs captured the Southwest conference contest 63-57.

The loss evens the Raiders SWC mark at 4-4, while the Hogs, managing to halt a two game losing streak here in Barnhill Arena, up their record to 5-3 in conference play.

It was again the play of the Tech reserves, or rather National Guard, that almost pulled the contest out of the hat for the Raiders.

Trailing by 12 points, 50-38, with 9:36 left in the game, Myers started substituting freely, inserting reserves Ralph McPherson, Jeff Taylor, David Little and Tommy Parks. Only Ralph Brewster was left of the starting lineup.

Tech, which trailed Arkansas by as many as 15 points, 36-21 with 18:27 remaining in the game after Scott Hasting connected on a three point play, started it's comeback attempt with 7:23 left to play.

Realing off 11 unanswered points over the next four minutes (Little had six of those points, Taylor and Parks one), Tech got within one of their host, 50-49.

And that pleased Myers--a bunch.

"Our guys played well off the bench," the coach pointed out. "We stirred things up at the end and we had some opportunities to go ahead, but we never could put the ball in."

Although Tech was unable to put the ball in the hole, that certainly didn't mean the Hogs couldn't, and didn't, especially from the free throw line. Over the final three minutes, Arkansas hit 12-of-13 free throw attempts to put the game out of reach. The Hogs ended the game by canning 17-of-21 from the line and 23-of-46 field goals, while Tech hit the same number from the field (23) but could not stay up with UA from the free throw line.

First Brad Friess hit a one-and-one with 3:13 remaining and that started the avalanche as U.S. Reed, Scott Hastings and Steve Schall followed in a row with freebies. Then as time was running out Reed was fouled by Little, who went out via the foul route, and Schall and Friess hit again. The count was six in a row.

"Our team played very well except for a five-minute stretch in the second half when we went crazy and threw the ball away," said coach Eddie Sutton. "But we held our poise and showed some courage when they cut the lead to one."

It was over that five minute stretch Sutton was speaking of when the Raiders went to their full-court press, forcing the Hogs into seven turnovers.

"It was really kind of a dull game," said Myers. "But we stirred things up at the end. We went to the zone to step it up inside because that's where they were getting their points. We forced the tempo the final ten minutes and got into the game."

The Raiders were led by Brewster who had 12 points over UA's two big men, Schall and Hastings. Hill added 11 points.

Moncrief hit on 10 points and Steve Schall added seven points as Arkansas rolled to a 31-21 halftime lead over the Raiders.

Matched with everyone except Myers himself, Moncrief came alive starting at the 14:56 mark when he hit a 12-foot jump shot to put UA up by four points, 12-8. He later sank a pair of back-to-back aerials to help the Hogs up their lead to 9 with 3:15 remaining.

During the first 20 minutes, the Raiders turned the ball over 9 times, and on six of those occassions Arkansas turned them into points.

Aggies Bombard Owls; Texas Stops SMU

HOUSTON (AP) — The quick hands and long-range sharpshooting of Tyrone Ladson, combined with the strong inside play of Rudy Woods, led Texas A&M past Rice 81-62 Saturday afternoon in a regionally televised Southwest Conference basketball game.

The victory lifted the Aggies to a 17-4 season record and a 6-2 mark record in the SWC. Rice fell to 6-12 and 3-5. A&M used a full-court press in the first half that forced the Owls into numerous turnovers. Ladson converted three first-half steals into baskets and finished the game with 18 points, 14 of them by intermission.

Woods dominated the backboards and also finished with 18.

The Aggies led 36-21 at the half but scored the first 10 points of the second half to turn the game into a rout.

Texas A&M scored virtually all of its points from the field. It attempted only one free throw.

Aggie coach Shelby Metcalf said he made an adjustment at the half that opened the inside for Woods, who had just four points over the first 20 minutes.

"We'd been overloading in the first half, and we kept the floor more balanced in the second half," he said.

Woods said he didn't do anything differently.

"The offense just started clicking like it's supposed to," he said. "Everyone got hot in the second half, and I started getting my shots."

Rice coach Mike Schuler said the hot outside shooting of Ladson and Dave Goff in the first half forced him into a man-to-man defense the second half "and it let Woods get going. He is a great young prospect, just awesome, and will be tremendous as he goes along."

He said the game got away from the Owls because they gambled with a zone defense the first half, and it didn't work.

"We did not attack the pressure in the first half, and i hurt to have 10 straight possessions with no score. We played hard, but we were disappointed we did not win," Schuler said.

"We got a good kicking, but our players did not quit and it could have been a real blowout, but was not."

TEXAS 98, SMU 62

All five Texas starters scored in double figures Saturday night — led by Jim Krivacs' 24 points — as the 17th-ranked Longoorns crushed Southern Methodist 98-62 to stay atop the Southwest Conference.

Except for John Moore, who scored 18 points, all Texas starters sat out at least the final 10 minutes of the game.

It was Texas' seventh consecutive SWC victory after an opening loss to Texas Tech. SMU fell to 2-5 with the loss. It was SMU's fourth consecutive conference loss.

The victory also kept Texas' new home court record a perfect 24-0 over the past two seasons.

SMU never led and the partisan crowd, which included numerous former Texas basketball players, amused itself by cheering for the subs almost as soon as the second half started.

Ron Baxter snapped a four-game slump in which he had scored only 28 points by throwing in 16 for Texas. Tyrone Branyan and Phillip Stroud each had 12.

Brad Branson tallied 19 for SMU and Reggie Franklin, who did not enter the game until 11:23 of the first half, had 15. SMU's high scorer, freshman Billy Allen, fouled out with 9:12 remaining in the game and was never a factor.

Krivacs was shooting at the career record of 1,513 points set in 1955-57 by Raymond Downs.

Texas, the defending champions of the National Invitation Tournament, has now won 14 and lost four. SMU is 7-10.

BAYLOR 77, TCU 69

Johnson, the Southwest Conference's leading scorer, hit on 12 of 22 shots from the field and converted seven of 10 free throws to help Baylor raise its season record to 11-7 and its SWC mark to 5-3.

The Horned Frogs, now 5-12 and 0-7, were playing without two starters and a top reserve. Coach Tim Sommerville suspended starters Steve Scales and Jeff Vincent and reserve Kenny Haynes for one game only because they missed a Friday night curfew.

LCC Falls Short

By RUSS PARSONS
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

If you were going to be kind about Lubbock Christian's 75-74 overtime loss to McMurry Saturday night, you'd say the Chaparrals, darn 'em, were victimized by their inexperience.

But Larry Hays was in no mood to be kind.

"We kind of gave that one away," said the LCC coach. "I think that inexperience excuse is getting kind of old. We've got to find another one."

To save space, let's just catalogue about 10 seconds worth of LCC mistakes. Let's start with the Chaps up by two points with an 82 percent free throw shooter at the line and only three seconds remaining in regulation.

Bruce Carver, who in all fairness had played well all night, botched the front end of a one-and-one. McMurry brought the ball inbounds but before the Indians could get across half-court, and with no time showing, LCC's Brian Fortner layed a foul on guard Donnie Ray Cruse, the McMurry star.

Cruse went to the line needing both ends of a one-and-one to tie the game. He came through.

No matter, LCC came out strong in overtime and when guard Bill McGee converted a nice three-point play with only six seconds to play, the Chaps were up 74-73 and once again appeared to have the game won. Not so fast.

Cruse again took control of the situation, grabbing the inbounds pass, scurrying up court and then driving the lane like the invisible man for a short jumper at the buzzer, the game winner.

"Starting in the first half, we had a chance to get in a real good position," Hays said. "But everytime we'd get up, there'd be those key turnovers again.

"At the first of the year we could say it was inexperience, but now the press isn't bothering us, I don't know what the problem is.

"Then at the end we give Cruse the shot. During the timeout I said we didn't what to give Cruse the ball and if he got the ball we wanted to stop him at the free throw line. That's the kind of mental mistake I'm talking about.

"But he showed the kind of player he is, he moved around us like we weren't even there."

Most of the night the Chaps had kept a lid on the high-scoring Indian guard and in fact, he finished with only 16 points after going 1-of-6 in the first half.

One key factor affecting the outcome was LCC losing post Keith Wharton with almost seven minutes to play in regulation. But Fortner came in and did a good job picking up slack, finishing with 19 points and 9 rebounds, team highs in both categories.

Fuzzy Zoeller Moves Ahead At San Diego Open

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Fuzzy Zoeller, one of golf's more happy-go-lucky guys, came from 5 shots off the pace with a 67 and established a 2-shot lead over chipper Jerry McGee Saturday in the third round of the $250,000 Andy Williams-San Diego Open.

McGee, who blew a 2-stroke advantage with a 74, said he was "lucky to be where I am" after his struggling effort and then looked ahead to Sunday's final round.

"Fuzzy hasn't won yet, so he's gonna be nervous," McGee said, then giggled.

"But then, maybe he won't be. As goofy as Fuzzy is, he just might not be nervous at all. He's a character. You can't tell about him.

"He might not even show up."

That, however, seemed unlikely.

"I'm gonna try my damnedest," said the free spirit Zoeller.

The hard-hitting Zoeller, winner of more than $100,000 last year but still seeking his first PGA Tour title, had a 54-hole total of 210, 6 shots under par on the 7,047-yard South course at the Torrey Pines Country Club.

"Winning is just a happening," said Zoeller. "It hasn't happened yet. Maybe this is the one. I'm gonna try my damnedest."

He birdied four times in a stretch of five holes to take the lead, then stretched the advantage to 2 shots with a two-putt birdie 4 on the final hole.

McGee, the second-round leader, slipped to a 74 in the bright, sunny weather that bathed the cliffs and crags of the oceanside course. He takes a 212 total into Sunday's final round of the chase for a $45,000 first prize.

Billy Casper, a 47-year-old veteran, Gil Morgan and Bill Kratzert were another stroke back at 213. Casper shot a 69, Kratzert 71 and Morgan 72.

Seven more players, including Lee Trevino, were at 214. That left 12 men within 4 strokes of the top spot going into the final 18 holes.

In addition to Trevino, those at 2 strokes under par were Tom Purtzer, Victor Regalado, Leonard Thompson, Grier Jones, Jerry Pate and Tommy Aaron. Aaron, the first round leader, slipped to a 75. Trevino, Purtzer and Regalado had 70s. Thompson shot a 71 and Jones matched par 72. Pate had a 15-foot eagle putt on the 18th hole, but three-putted for par and a 72.

Tom Watson, the Player of the Year the last two seasons, shot 72-216 in this, his first tournament of 1979.

Zoeller, 27, who has gained a reputation as one of golf's longest hitters, used his length to an advantage on the final hole, a 501-yard par 5. He was in the fringe in two strokes, putted up to about three feet and tapped that one in for the birdie that put him 2 shots in front of the field.

"It's kind of a surprise," he said. "I didn't expect to shoot 67 in only my second week out of the Indiana snow." He paused for a while as if in deep thought and then, straight-faced as could be, said: "I think, however, I'll take it anyhow."

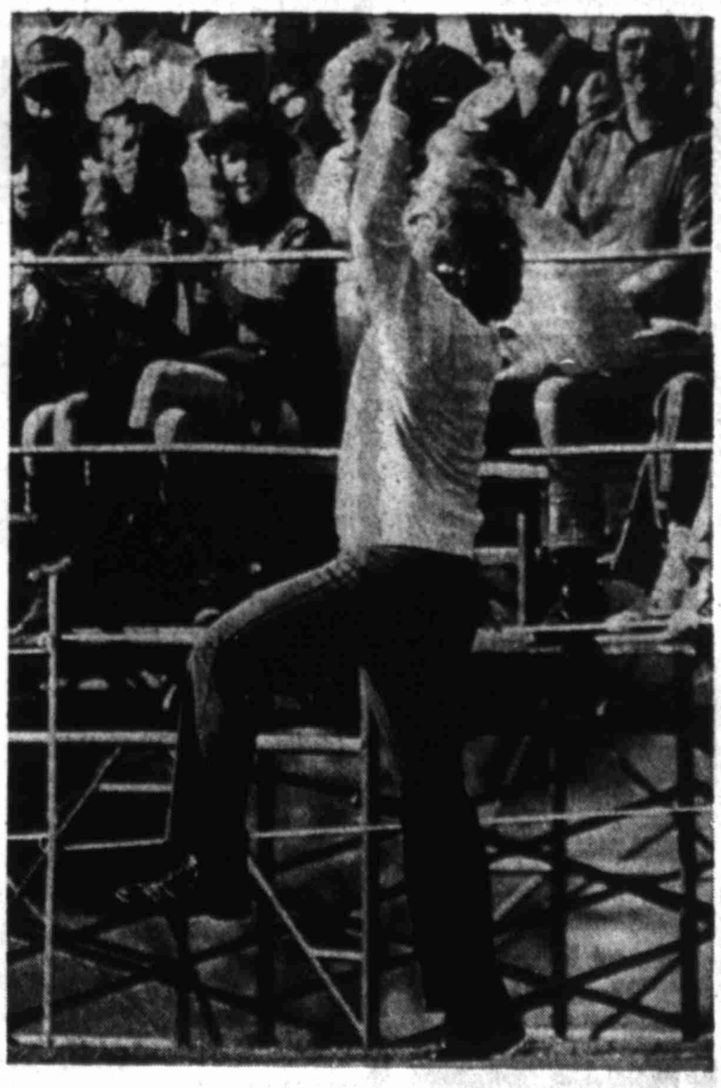
He scored from about 15 feet on the second hole, missed the green and bogeyed the fourth, then got back to even par for the day with another 15-foot birdie putt on the eighth hole.

He two-putted for birdie-4 on the next, needed only an 18-inch putt after a 4-iron shot on the 11th and birdied the 12th from 10 feet.

McGee had difficulties off the tee and trouble with the varying speed of the greens.

"I'm kind of elated," he said despite the loss of his lead. "I'm lucky to get in with a round like I had and still be just a couple of shots back. There should have been some good scores today. The conditions were perfect. I don't know why no one made a real charge except Fuzzy.

"I'm lucky to be where I am."



Jerry McGee putts out of a sand trap while Fuzzy Zoeller reacts to a missed shot at the San Diego Open.

Prep Baseball Coaches Gearing Up For Season

By BOB BAJACKSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

If the punters on the Estacado football team had the hang time on their kicks that the Matador catchers have on their throws to second base, there would be no need for speciality teams.

Oh, the heartbreak of building a baseball program...

Estacado and Dunbar both will lay baseball foundations this season. The two east side city schools have not fielded teams since 1970.

And according to University Interscholastic League rules, high school squads can begin practicing Feb. 1. So, while all five city baseball teams wait to hear the umpire exclaim the two sweetest words in the English language, "play ball", all the diamond mentors were anxious to do the next best thing—talk baseball.

"I can honestly say that I'm one of very few coaches in the country that can claim we have no returning starters from last year," laughed Estacado coach Vince Buffamonte.

At Dunbar, coach Kelley Rogers had a little more serious attitude.

"Like in all our sports, the biggest problem we have is number of athletes," said Rogers. "Our strength is that our kids really have a good attitude and are hard workers."

Rogers believes that Dunbar is at a bigger disadvantage in developing its baseball program than Estacado from the simple fact of numbers.

"We only have three classifications to draw from," replied Rogers.. "Estacado has four. We're building for the future. For that reason, we won't have many seniors on the club."

Buffamonte is using the same strategy. And the Estacado coach claims that telling a senior he's not going to be able play is the hardest part about building a program .

"When I was at Lubbock High, I was accused of selecting pin-stripes because it made us look taller," said Buffamonte. "But when I came here (Estacado) I had the vision that there were a bunch of giants. So, I ordered royal blue uniforms. Oh, boy, did I blow it. We 're midgets."

Rogers expects the Panther roster to carry 49 players. Broken down, Dunbar's squad will consist of 10 seniors, 16 juniors and 23 sophomores.

At Estacado, Buffamonte hopes to carry a varsity and junior varsity squad that consists of 33 players.

"I think it's to our advantage that we do have the extra class to pick from," said Buffamonte. We tell our kids that they have to abide by a certain set of rules the first time I met with them. If they can't do that, I don't want them."

The Matador squad will have 18 freshmen, two sophomores, seven juniors and only three seniors.

"Really, the most powerful program in the city is the one I just left," said Buffamonte. "Ask Bart (Lubbock High coach Hernandez). They're going to be a powerhouse this year."

Well, is that true coach Hernandez?

"No," smiled the Lubbock High mentor. "We have a chance to have a good club. ' Our pitching staff and outfield both are question marks."

Hernandez, who was an assistant to Buffamonte last year, is counting on Sammy Chavez, Andy Vasquez and David Rush to solifify the hurling corps.

"We don't have anybody that throws smoke," said Hernandez. "Rush probably throws the hardest, but he's not overpowering."

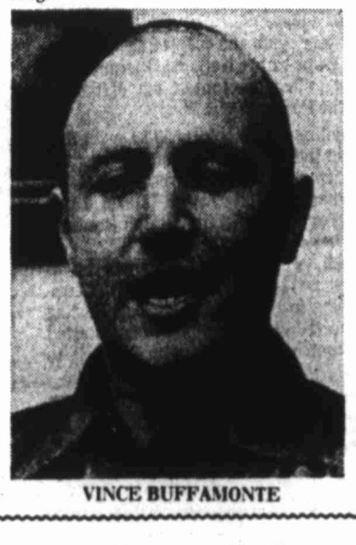
In regard to the outfield, the Westerner mentor is moving Larry Walker, who played second base on the junior varsity team last year, to centerfield. Walker will be flanked by Jamie Green and Eddie Trevino. Both only saw varsity spot duty last year.

However, one advantage for the Westerners is speed.

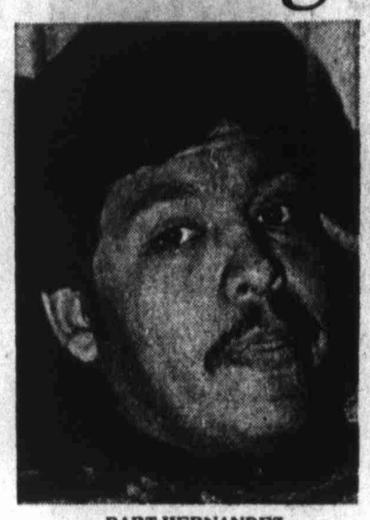
"We're going to take advantage of it, because we don't have much power hitting," said Hernandez. "We're going to have to make our own things happen. So, I imagine we'll hit and run and steal some."

Who do you feel is the team to beat in the 4-AAAA race?

"Coronado has all its starters back," said the Westerner coach. "But you can't count out Monterey. There always tough."



VINCE BUFFAMONTE



BART HERNANDEZ

Coronado coach John Dudley feels that experience is the main strength of the Mustangs. Coronado lost only three starters from the 1977 team.

"We're going to have six fulltime starters back along with two or three others that played quite a bit for us last year," said Dudley.

Names that rolled off of Dudley's tongue included Gene Serest (pitcher, shortstop), Jim Wells (first base), Robert Ledbetter (centerfield) and Ricky Powell (third base-outfield).

Dudley also expects Sam Law (centerfield) and Russell Johnson (pitcher) to join the team once the basketball season is over.

"We've always been a good hitting team," replied the Mustang coach. "We're always up around .300. The problem is that the opponent has been scoring more runs."

Dudley points to consistency in the pitching rotation for the solution.

"We have a potentially good rotation," said Dudley. "Our pitchers are just going to have to learn to be patient."

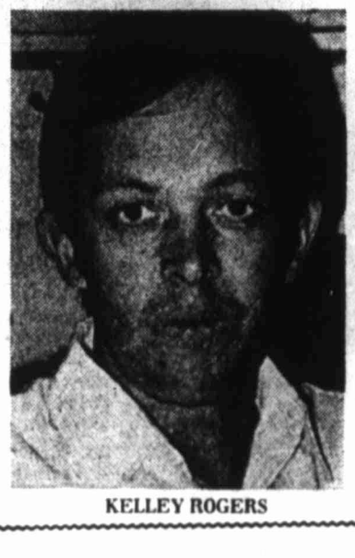
Donny Aterburn is one of the Coronado hurlers that Dudley is expecting great things from. Arterburn has a reputation for throwing smoke. Arterburn struckout 105 batters in 80 innings last year. But what kept Arterburn from dominating the opposition is the fact that he allowed 70 walks.

Dudley, who is beginning his sixth season as the Mustang coach, paid his dues as an assistant at Monterey.

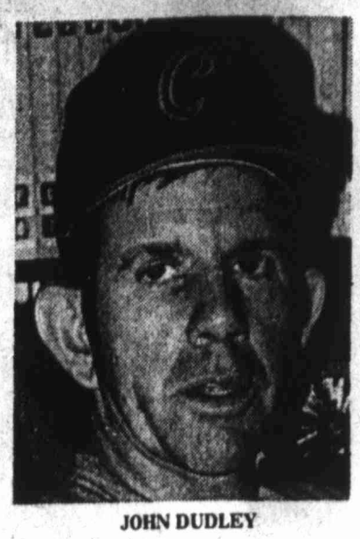
Does Dudley feel that this is the year that Coronado will be able to end the Plainsmen's dominance?

"We'll they lost their pitching staff," said Dudley. "But they still have that tradition. I would have to say this is our best shot at dethroning them."

And speaking of tradition, from Slide Road to Ave. Q, everybody who has ever heard of Abner Doubleday's sport knows about Monterey domination of baseball in the South Plains.



KELLEY ROGERS



JOHN DUDLEY

Right, Plainsman coach Bobby Moegle?

"Everybody, says that Monterey has all the athletes," responded Moegle. "Yes, we wound up in the state championship game last year, but our entire pitching staff is gone."Used to be, there was quality ahletes two out of every three classes. But now it's one out of every three years."

Moegle is a percentage baseball man. And despite losing 11 seniors, the Monterey coach has a good percentage of quality of underclassmen returning.

"We have four or five back," said Moegle. "The kids remember the state championshp game last year and they'll be hungry.

Moegle is pointing to outfielders Ricky Pinkerton and Andy Barron for leadership.

As fulltime starters last year, both possess the skills to inspire a team.

Aging Russell Finds New Life

GREAT FALLS, Mont. (AP) — Unlike his teammates, Cazzie Russell doesn't have his name on the uniform he now wears for the Montana Sky of the upstart Western Basketball Association.

Perhaps it's because the former National Basketball Association all-star doesn't plan on sticking around for long.

The 34-year veteran of 12 NBA seasons, a victim of age and growing frustration, admits he might be playing his last pro season.

The age problem Russell explains freely:

"In professional basketball, you take out one-year leases. I've just been lucky enough to take out 12-year leases."

But Russell's frustrations are a much deeper subject. He grows impatient with the apparent selfishness of his present teammates, a collection of NBA hopefuls, almost-weres and never-will-be's.

Russell also is resentful about his departure from the NBA.

"Of course I'm bitter, " he said after a recent game on the Sky's home court in Great Sky's home court in Great Fallss, a city of 70,000.

"I think sometimes that i got the bad end of the deal, that politics played more of a part in my leaving than my playing did."

"People in the NBA know what they're' working for. There's a good attitude. Guys down here don't take it seriously."

The 6-foot-6 forward broke into the pros in 1966 as the first-round draft choice of the New York Knicks. He played five seasons in New York, three with the Golden State Warriors, three with the Los Angeles Lakers and the one season with the Chicago Bulls.

As a starter for the Lakers, Russell played in all 82 games of the 1976-77 season, averaging 16.4 points per game.

The next year, Russell was cut by the Lakers — two days before the season opener.

The Lakers said his defense and rebounding were weak.

Russell said there was more to it.

"I was playing well ..." he said. "But they released me because I didn't get along well with a couple of the guys on the team. It was all politics."

Besides, releasing him so close to the beginning of the season made it difficult to be picked up by another team, Russell said.

After some brief work as a radio-TV sports commentator, the former Michigan All-American joined the Bulls, for whom he played 36 games last season and was then released.

Last December, the call came from the Sky, a squad at the bottom of the seven-team WBA.

For Russell, it was a chance to continue playing the game he loves. But the difference between the NBA and the WBA is staggering.

Except for one other player on the Sky's 10-man roster, Russell is the only one over the age of 24, and sometimes his youthful teammates are a source of anger. After one recent loss, the usually optimistic Russell was particularly upset.

"This team really has no concept of team play. I'm not effective as a player if the team plays as a bunch of individuals. I keep telling them to move the ball, to seek out the open man, but they don't listen," he said.

But Russell's frustrations have not diluted his love for basketball and his intensity has made him a favorite of the crowds in Great Falls.

Coach Rex Hughes said he is continually amazed by Russell's enthusiasm for the game.

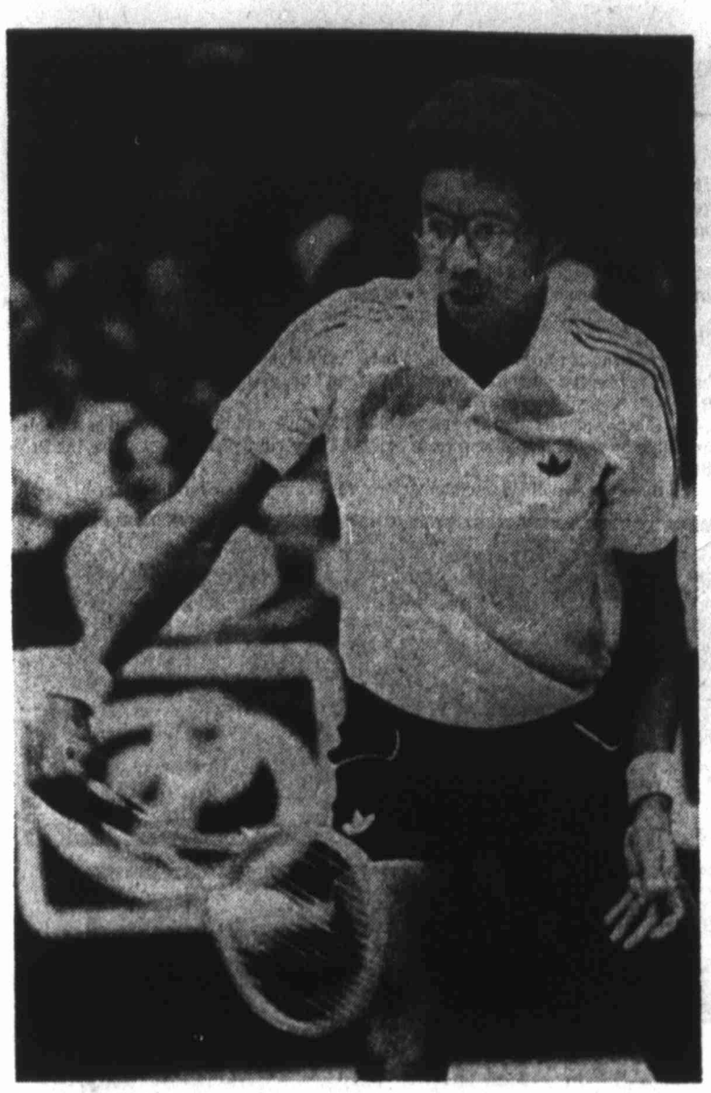
Ashe Rallies Past Gerulaitis



MEET THE BALL–Arthur Ashe meets the ball as he makes a low backhand return against Vitas Gerulaitis in the Pro Indoor Championships. Ashe won 1-6, 4-6, 7-6, 6-4, 6-4. (AP Laserphoto)

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Arthur Ashe and Jimmy Connors advanced to the finals of the U.S. Pro Indoor Tennis tournament Saturday in matches as different as their styles.

The taciturn Ashe lost the first two sets to Vitas Gerulaitis and then rallied to beat the player 11 years his junior 1-6, 4-6, 7-6, 6-4, 6-4 in a five-set marathon.

Connors, on the other hand, bantered with the crowd and pantomined his mistakes, but beat rocket-serving Roscoe Tanner without too much struggle 6-3, 6-3, 3-6, 6-1.

Ashe and Connors meet Sunday for the $40,000 first prize. Connors seeks his third title here, and Ashe his second, if you count something played in 1967 on a high school court. Ashe was still an amateur, and the prize money barely covered expenses.

Connors took the first set after breaking Tanner's service in the seventh game. Connors rallied from 0-30 with the help of crosscourt passing shots and a ball netted by Tanner.

In the third set, Gerulaitis broke Ashe's service in the third game and merely had to hold service to complete the match and reach Sunday's final round for a $40,000 first prize.

But Ashe, whose first serve had deserted him, evened the set at 5-5 by breaking Gerulaitis with a crosscourt backhand passing shot. Ashe held service to force the set into a tie breaker, which he won 7-4.

The sudden turnaround appeared to inspire Ashe, who missed the entire 1977 tennis season with an injury and came back last year to earn almost $200,000 and regain Top-20 ranking.

The 6-foot-1 Ashe broke Gerulaitis in the ninth game of the fourth set, the winning point coming when Gerulaitis drove over the baseline. Ashe then held his serve to win the set 6-4, and even the match at two sets apiece.

Ashe broke Gerulaitis in the first game of the fifth set of the three-hour and 30-minute match and then held service to complete his stirring comeback. He won on a second match point, when Gerulaitis netted a backhand return of service. Ashe won the final game 9-7.

In the final set opening game break, Ashe won when Gerulaitis double faulted.

For the fourth-seeded Gerulaitis, it was the sixth time in seven meetings with Ashe, dating to 1973, that he lost. His only victory over Ashe was in the fourth round at Wimbleton in 1976, the last time the two played.

Gerulaitis, who last year won $425,845, was steadier in the back court in the first two sets. He was more accurate on first serves.

The 10th-seeded Ashe appeared to lack the consistency and power that featured his play earlier in the week-long tournament.

In the first set, Gerulaitis broke Ashe's service in the fourth game, highlighted by two slams off lobs by the pressured Ashe. Gerulaitis broke again in game six, winning four of the six-point games.

Gerulaitis took the second set despite being penalized a point in game two that lost his service. The penalty was assessed after Gerulaitis hit a ball into the stands behind him in anger at himself for a poor shot.

But the 6-foot Gerulaitis, a native New Yorker, came right back to break Ashe in the third game. He held service, and then broke through again in the fifth game with a placement drive along the line. He went on to take the set 6-4.

Gerulaitis reached the semifinal by defeating Zjelko Franulovic of Yugoslavia, Johan Kriek of South Africa and seventh-seeded Harold Solomon. Ashe reached the semifinals with triumphs over Bernie Mitton of South Africa, Marty Riessen, an upset over second-seeded Guillermo Vilas of Argentina and sixth-seeded Brian Gottfried.

The top-seeded team of Wojtek Fibak of Poland and Tom Okker of the Netherlands gained the final round of the doubles championship by beating the sixth-seeded team of Frew McMillan of South Africa and Bob Carmichael of Australia 6-1, 6-4.

The winning team in doubles will earn $13,000 Sunday. Fibak and Okker will play against the winner of Saturday night's other semifinal match between John McEnroe and Peter Fleming against Dick Stockton and Eric Van Dillen.

Largent Happy To Represent Seattle

SEATTLE (AP) — Seattle Seahawks wide receiver Steve Largent says playing in the Pro Bowl is an honor, but he particularly likes the company.

"It's not just their football talent. This is really a quality group of people, in every way," he said after Friday's practice under Chuck Fairbanks, the New England coach who is trying to break his contract.

Largent, a three-year veteran in the National Football League, will become the first Seahawk to participate in the All-Star game Monday night in the Los Angeles Coliseum.

"This is the best experience I could have," Largent said. "You get a chance to meet the fellows from the other teams. It(s a lot of fun."

The American Conference squad has a 45-minute meeting in the morning and practice is limited to 90 minutes. Otherwise, the players are free to sight-see.

"It's very loose," Largent said. "We just put in the basic formations, to get halfway organized."

Largent will be at flanker, behind Lynn Swann of Pittsburgh. Wesley Walker of the New York Jets and John Jefferson of San Diego are the split ends.

Largent said the AFC quarterbacks, Terry Bradshaw of Pittsburgh and Bob Griese of Miami, are "a little opposite" in their passing.

"Bradshaw throws the ball very hard," he said. "Griese has more touch on the ball."

Will AFC players concentrate on proving superiority over the National Football Conference players?

"No, it's more a case of being just a game. I don't think there's any bad feeling," Largent said.

Pro Bowl Ends Longest Season

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The National Football League's longest regular season is finished, the playoffs done and the Super Bowl written into posterity. But yes, for those with an insatiable appetite for football, it's not over yet — there's still the Pro Bowl.

Monday night's annual clash between the NFC and AFC all-stars does not have the high stakes, the drama or the circus atmosphere that accompanies the Super Bowl. But it does have one big thing going for it — the best football players in America.

There will be more than a slight flavor of a Pittsburgh-Dallas rematch in the Pro Bowl.

Dallas' Roger Staubach, whose fine performance was overshadowed by that of Bradshaw in Pittsburgh's 35-31 Super Bowl victory, will start at quarterback for the NFC.

"I think everybody's just enjoying themselves," said Bradshaw. "But Monday night, there's going to be a lot of personal pride on the line, knowing the best players are out here. I think everybody will be pumped up for the game."

Other Cowboys on the offense include Tony Dorsett, Billy Joe DuPree and Tony Hill. The NFC defensive roster lists Cliff Harris, Thomas Henderson and Charlie Waters. Dallas' Harvey Martin and Randy White also were selected for the game, but are injured and won't participate.

"It'll make the off-season a lot easier for me if we can win this one," said Staubach, still fretting over the loss to Pittsburgh. "You know, going to the Super Bowl and losing is worse than not playing in it. To lose again Monday would really be depressing."

Staubach's Cowboy teammates, too, are finding it difficult to live with the Super Bowl loss.

"I sat down and cried like a newborn baby," said Henderson, Dallas' outspoken linebacker. "I guess winning isn't everything. It can't be, everybody loses sometimes. But it hurts."

The Cowboy players may have some added incentive, and the NFC squad as a whole undoubtedly would like to help erase the "AFC superiority" talk by winning the Pro Bowl.

Charity Tourney Aids Tech Netters

A charity tennis tournament at the Lubbock Country Club has raised $2600 for the Texas Tech tennis program and the final matches will begin today at 12:30 p.m.

The tournament is a round robin doubles affair and each team consists of one member of the Red Raider squad and one member of the Lubbock Country Club.

After the first day of matches the team of Dub Rushing and Doug Davis were leading in the men's division. Lisa Booker and Sheree Godwin and the team of Dean Cone and Debbie Donley were leading in the women's division.

COACH NEEDED

U.S. Boxers Collect Win Over Russians

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Heavyweight Tony Tubbs, a 21-year-old hailing from Cincinnati, Ohio, outpointed Russia's Eugene Gorstkov in the final bout Saturday to boost the United States to a 6-5 team victory over the Soviet Union for America's first triumph in these international bouts since their inauguration in 1969.

Russian boxers had one the first 10 in the international series before this United States team came out ahead. Many in the throng of about 2,500 watching at the Hilton Hotel thought the count should have been 7-4 and that Lemuel Steeples of St.Louis was robbed of the decision over Russia's world amateur champion Valery Lvov in the 139-pound class.

Two Russian officials, Dan Pozniak and Artjumen Lavrov, both gave the edge to Lvov by one and two points while Tony Filipelli of the United States had Steeples ahead by five points.

"No question about it, Steeples should have won by four or five points," commented Bob Surkein, chief of the USA delegation. "This made history. But it should have been 7-4. The decision in the Steeples fight was very bad."

Richie Sandoval of Pomona, Calif., whose brother Albert is a top-rated professional bantamweight, started the United States on its way to victory with a decision over Alexander Bodnia in the 106-pound class.

WTSU Dominates Indoor Meet

By CHUCK McDONALD
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Robert Wilson really shouldn't have competed in the three mile run Saturday during the seventh annual Lubbock Christian College Indoor Meet. Because the Texas Tech sophomore woke up Saturday morning with a temperature of 102.

"We didn't really think he would be able to run," said Tech track coach Corky Oglesby. "But he said he wanted to..."

Not only did Wilson compete in the event, but he won it easily with a time of 5:34.0. The closest man to him was teammate Tony Lozano who finished in 15:39.92.

"I could hear footsteps behind me but I wasn't sure if it was someone I'd already lapped," said Wilson. "I wasn't feeling too good so I just wanted to make sure I won."

But Wilson's victory was one of only two events the Raiders were able to capture. And host team, LCC was unable to garner a single first place finish.

"We just didn't do very well," said Tech's Oglesby. "But I was pleased with the way (Greg) Lautenslager and Wilson did."

Lautenslager picked up his medal in the mile run in which he cruised to a first place finish with a time of 4:28.89.

The Raider junior spent most of the final lap looking over his shoulder to see if anyone was closing in on him.

"Once I got that lead at the end I wanted to make sure nobody was going to catch me," said Lautenslauger.

Actually Chaparral runner Kyle Smith was pretty close to the winner. Smith finished second with a time of 4:30.95. But he was as close as any LCC athlete came towards winning.

"We just have a small squad and we've got a some injuries right now," said LCC coach Hugh Rhodes."That hurt us.

But I thought it was a good meet even though our part wasn't too successful. We had good competition and the times were pretty good for this time of the year."

Rhodes was particularly pleased with the competition in the high jump. Ten jumpers were still in the action by the time the bar had been raised to 6-4. Randy Pool, of West Texas State, won the event with a leap of 6-8.

"This was easily the best field we've ever had in that event," said Rhodes.

Although no team points were kept West Texas State would have won the meet. WTSU, with a strong field of foreign runners, dominated the sprints and relay events.

Randy Pool, of WTSU, was the high point man in the event with 16 points. In addition to his first place finish in the high jump, Pool was third in the 60 yard dash.

The Tech athletes were not discouraged by their poor showing.

"This is always a bad meet for us," said Tech runner James Mays. "But we'll be ready next week. I'll be in better shape then."

Tech faces WTSU in a dual meet in Canyon next week.

It might have been a bad meet for some of the athletes but it was a good one for the fans.

With the smell of popcorn in the air, the meet took on the atmosphere of a Saturday afternoon matinee.

Ocasio Floors Jimmy Young

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — Osvaldo Ocasio of Puerto Rico won a unanimous decision over veteran Jimmy Young of Philadelphia Saturday in a 10-round heavyweight fight. The win may have earned Ocasio a chance to face World Boxing Council champion Larry Holmes in March.

The 21-year-old Ocasio took charge of the bout in the third round, opened a cut inside Young's left eye in the sixth and opened another cut almost between the eyes in the ninth round.

As the final seconds of the fight ticked off, Ocasio knew that he had won the bout and started waving his hands victoriously.

The two judges and the referee gave Ocasio the fight with the same score, 97-95.

Ocasio, using his youth well against the 30-year-old Young, scored with long rights followed by lefts to confuse his opponent, who was content most of the fight to use his defense and a quick left hand.

Before the fight, promoter Don King said a date already had been set for the winner to meet Holmes on March 23 "if the winner looked good." King said the fight would be staged in San Juan, Las Vegas or New Orleans.

Holmes, who watched the fight, said, "I'm willing to fight the winner. I have no choice. I want to fight all comers. I am the best heavyweight in the world."

Young, a slight favorite, was fighting perhaps the most important bout of his career at Roberto Clemente Coliseum. He admitted the loss could possibly be the end of his boxing career. The fight was carried on ABC-TV.

For the match, Ocasio weighed 209 pounds and Young was 214.

The victory was Ocasio's second straight over Young, virtually eliminating the loser from a title shot later this year. Ocasio had outpointed Young last June at Las Vegas.

Ocasio received the type of support he expected from the local fans and was cocky about the outcome of the fight from almost the beginning. But it was not until the third round that Ocasio bulled his way into Young, scored on a long combination and pushed his foe into the ropes.

With that success, Ocasio started yelling, "Hey, hey," faking with his hands, then attempting to charge again. A cut was opened on Young's left eye just as the sixth round ended, but it did not seem to bother him.

The cut in the ninth round, with 55 seconds remaining, did bother Young as blood streamed down his face. The ring doctor stopped the fight momentarily to check the eye before allowing the bout to continue.

Ocasio opened the cut again with 46 seconds left in the 10th round.

A&M Whips Tech Fems

AUSTIN (Special)–Texas A&M used the 16 points of Peggy Pope to blast the Texas Tech women 62-46 in the Texas Classic tournament.

The Aggies shot 44 percent from the field as compared to only 33 percent for Texas Tech and took command of the boards with a 41-30 rebounding edge.

The Aggies were ahead only by three at the half, 30-27, but soon widened that margin in the second half as they outbucketed Tech by nine during the contest.

Pat Werner also aided the Aggie attack with 10 points while Lynn Webb led the Raiderettes with a tally of 10. Texas Tech now has a 8-15 record for the season.

The final standings of the tournament had host Texas on top, followed by Stephen F. Austin, North Texas State, Houston, A&M and Tech.

STARS ON THE BENCH--Washington Bullets rookies Roger Phegley (22) and Dave Corzine (40) warm up prior to an NBA game with the Chicago Bulls. Both rookies have spent the majority of the initial pro basketball season on the bench. (AP Laserphoto)

NBA Rookies Require Patience

CHICAGO (AP) — The two rookies sat in the stands an hour before the opening tip. Downstairs, in the locker room, their Washington Bullet teammates were getting ready for the game.

The rookies glanced at the empty court where they soon would be warming up with the rest of the Bullets. Then, when the game began, they would sit down — for a long time.

They have found that patience and understanding are as important as shooting and defensive ability for rookies trying to make it with the champions of the National Basketball Association.

"I'd like to be playing more, but all you can do is work as hard as you can," says Corzine.

"I didn't expect to come into Washington and turn anything around," says Phegley. "They're the best in the world and they've been going with the program they've had the last few years."

Corzine, a curly-haired, 6-foot-11 center from DePaul, and Phegley, a handsome, 6-foot-6 guard from Bradley, were both first-round draft picks of the Bullets this year.

They returned Jan. 19 to the state where they made their basketball names to face the Chicago Bulls. But Corzine played only two minutes and Phegley just the last minute of the game. They each have averaged about five minutes' playing time per game this season.

"The unfortunate thing for them is they're trying to break into a team that's solid and established," said Washington coach Dick Motta. "They're the 10th and 11th men on the team."

Although they wear the same red, white and blue uniforms as Wes Unseld, Elvin Hayes and the rest of the Bullets, the rookies refer to their team as "they," not "we."

And, although both are confident of their abilities, there have been times when they've wondered just where they fit in.

"The talent on the team is such that they really don't need me," Corzine said. "They have such great players ahead of me."

Corzine is the third-string center behind Unseld and Mitch Kupchak. Phegley is the fifth guard behind Tom Henderson, Kevin Grevey, Charles Johnson and Larry Wright.

Still, Motta feels both rookies have enough talent to do well in the NBA.

"I think David has a future as a backup center in this league, maybe a starter," Motta said. "I think Phegley would be playing more on other teams.

Corzine led DePaul to the finals of the NCAA Midwest Regionals last year, where the Blue Demons lost to Notre Dame. He was acclaimed as a good passer, but the knock against him was that he was too slow.

Phegley received a baseball scholarship to attend Bradley and began practicing informally with the basketball team. "When organized practice rolled around, I was still there," he said.

Their college experiences may have helped them to cope with their current situation. Corzine was one cog in an effective DePaul machine, while Phegley had to show people he could play basketball as well as pitch a baseball.

"I was never into being the star of the team," said Corzine. "I just played ball."

"My story started a long time ago in college as a walk-on," said Phegley. "I never thought of myself as being a great basketball player. I just tried to help out where I could."

With Washington, they have had to do their learning from the bench.

"I think you can learn an awful lot about what your teammates do in certain situations, how your coach operates," said Phegley. "I've been told to pick up as much as I can."

Corzine has a slightly different view.

"You can learn some things (from the bench). But I think you probably could learn more playing 10 minutes than watching a whole season," he said.

Neither is worried that he will embarrass himself when he does get on the court to spell a tired or injured player or to pick up experience when the outcome has been decided.

"I don't think I don't belong here," said Corzine.

Motta said he recently pointed out to Phegley that second-year forward Greg Ballard, Washington's seldom-used first-round pick last year, is getting more playing time this season and is doing well.

"He (Phegley) said, 'When I started at Bradley I was on a baseball scholarship and I had to fight from the bottom up. Now I figure I'm starting a little higher,'" Motta recalled.

But, when asked if he was discouraged with his inactivity, Phegley let slip some of the anxiousness of an NBA rookie who has had to make the transition from star to substitute.

His answer: "No. Not yet."

Announcing an IBM Seminar for Dentists

If you're a dentist, you've probably thought about how a computer could help with your expanding information needs.

Well, now there's a free IBM Seminar designed for dentists just like you. It features a discussion of the applications and benefits of an IBM system in dental management accounting.

Incidentally, each of our systems can handle a wide range of important jobs, including the preparation of account statements and insurance forms—Before the patient leaves your office.

In addition, dental management accounting programs are now available from a variety of sources, already programmed for use with IBM's small, low-cost, easy-to-use computer systems. You needn't develop your own programming--it's already been done for you.

If you'd like to attend the free IBM seminar for dentists, call your Lubbock IBM General Systems Division Office...ask for Ronna Davis to reserve a seat.

'Kamikaze' Clark Readies For Cuevas

LOS ANGELES (AP) — When Scott Clark played high school football in Florida, his specialty was stopping running backs in their tracks.

"He was the Kamikaze type. He hit so hard he had several concussions and once split his helmet making a tackle," recalled Dominic Polo, rotund trainer for the 5-foot-8, 150-pound welterweight boxer.

A couple years later, while doing roadwork for an upcoming bout, Clark stopped a bullet. Fortunately, the spent slug plunked harmlessly off his chest.

Monday night at the Forum, the eighth-ranked Clark tries his hand at stopping the deadly left hook of Jose "Pipino" Cuevas, welterweight champion of the World Boxing Association.

In the past 19 months, seven other challengers have tried to dethrone Cuevas. All seven were knockout victims, five of them falling in the first or second round.

Only 21, Cuevas, with 27 knockouts in 34 pro fights, already ranks No. 9 on boxing's list of all-time punchers. But the 20-year-old Clark and his corner man are confident they can defuse the doomsday punch.

"Even Superman had a weakness," said Polo. "Cuevas has a chin doesn't he? How did he lose five fights if he was invincible? Joe Louis was invincible when he faced Max Schmeling. Muhammad Ali was invincible until he faced Joe Frazier. "It only takes one punch."

Cuevas, from Mexico City, had a 15-5 record and had just lost before defeating title holder Angel Espada in July 1976. He will be paid $150,000 for the 15-round title outing.

Clark, too, has a remarkable knockout record, with 19 in his 29 fights. He has won his last 23 straight bouts, easily avenging his lone loss — a 1976 split decision to Jimmy Owens. In the rematch last October, Clark decked Owens five times before ending it with a third round knockout.

Clark, son of an Orlando, Fla., high school football coach, turned pro at age 17 after a so-so amateur record.

"Ninety nine percent of my friends told me I was making a mistake," said Clark, whose nickname, "Golden Boy," came from his choir boy looks and curly blond hair.

"They said that I'd be a mediocre club fighter. Well I'm here, at age 20, and getting a paycheck for $25,000."

He attributes his fast rise and 28-1 record to dedication. "In the old days, the boxer would drink all week and fight on Saturday nights. I'm probably one of the best athletes who ever boxed."

Polo agrees. "He was named Most Valuable Player on his football team and he was a catcher in baseball. He's in bed by 8 or 9 o'clock every night."

"Ask him who is favorite fighter is" prodded Polo. "He'll tell you 'David.' Of David and Goliath."

Colts Owner Mulls L.A. Move

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Baltimore Colts' owner Robert Irsay met with Los Angeles Coliseum officials Saturday to discuss the possibility of moving his National Football League team to Los Angeles in 1980.

Irsay also said he has had preliminary discussions with officials in other cities seeking an NFL franchise. But he declined to identity the other cities or give any details.

The Los Angeles Rams have signed a contract to play at Anaheim Stadium, about 30 miles from the Coliseum, after their lease at the Los Angeles stadium ends this year.

"I would prefer to stay in Baltimore," Irsay said. But he told of long-standing disatisfaction with the conditions at Memorial Stadium, and said he has met with zoning problems over his plan to built a Colts' practice and office facility in nearby Towson, Md.

"I am encouraged by what appears to be obvious sincerity on Mr. Irsay's part," said William Robertson, the Coliseum Commission's chief negotiator in efforts to obtain another NFL franchise by 1980 or soon thereafter.

Some members of the Coliseum Commission also met Saturday with NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle, but the meeting gave no indication of any change in what Robertson called, "Mr. Rozelle's party line."

Rozelle has said he is against allowing an established team to leave a city where it is making a profit.

Asked about Rozelle's position, Irsay said, "That's his opinion. I think it would be due process to bring it to the other owners."

Irsay said former Maryland Gov. Marvin Mandell "promised me there would would be millions and millions of dollars to spend on the Baltimore Stadium, but in my seven years there only $300,000 was spent.

"I have been asking that the stadium be brought up to the conditions of other stadiums where our team plays, in terms of washrooms, clubs for the fans, press facilities and other considerations."

After confirming that another meeting with the Los Angeles Coliseum representatives was scheduled for Monday, Irsay declined to say whether talks had proceeded to specific details of a lease and possible improvements to the Coliseum, built in the early 1920s.

Maryland Topples Notre Dame; Illinois Loses

By The Associated Press

Notre Dame wasn't surprised by Maryland's last second strategy but the play worked to perfection, setting up a three-pointer by Larry Gibson which gave the Terps a 67-66 upset victory over the first-ranked Irish Saturday.

With five seconds left in the nationally televised game, the Terps brought the ball inbounds to Greg Manning, who fed Gibson in the lane. The 6-foot-9 center tied the score with a field goal and then, after being fouled by Stan Wilcox, dropped in the winning free throw with one second remaining.

Manning was not in the line-up when Maryland first brought the ball in with 11 seconds left, but he was inserted for the last play.

"Manning was one of the options on the last play," Maryland Coach Lefty Driesell said. "If he has the jump shot, take it. If not, penetrate and take the shot, or hand off. It could not have worked better, but I didn't think we would get a three-point play."

Notre Dame coach Digger Phelps said: "We had the last play figured out during the timeout. We knew Manning would get the ball. It was the same play they ran against North Carolina. We went over and over it and diagrammed it, but we just had a breakdown."

Gibson said he went toward the basket when he saw Notre Dame sagging on Manning along the baseline. "I was looking for a pass, or a rebound if he missed the shot."

Gibson said he was not bothered by the foul by Wilcox because "Coach Driesell hits me harder than that in practice." As for his free throw, which came after two Notre Dame timeouts, Gibson said: "It was just a regular free throw. I tried to think of it like that and shoot it that way."

Rod Roberson scored 20 points and Northwestern never trailed en route to an 83-65 upset victory over fourth-ranked Michigan State.

The loss dropped the Spartans to 4-4 in the Big Ten while Northwestern gave coach Rich Falk his first conference triumph after seven losses.

Marty Bodnar's lay-in at the buzzer after a steal by Tom Staton gave Michigan a 56-54 Big Ten basketball victory over eighth-ranked Illinois.

Senior Bob Moore drilled a 35-foot jump shot at the buzzer to give Nebraska a 66-64 overtime win over Kansas in a regionally-televised Big 8 Conference basketball game.

Moore, a 6-3 guard and forward from Pittsburgh, Pa., took an inbounds pass with four seconds remaining, dribbled over the mid-court mark and hit a high-arching, two-handed push shot for his 10th point of the game.

The victory, Nebraska's fourth in six conference games, guaranteed the Huskers no less than a share of the conference lead.

Kansas missed a chance to avoid an overtime when Wilmore Fowler missed a 25-foot jump shot as regulation play ended in a 61-61 stalemate.

Trojans Take Sweep

The win gives the girls a 6-0 district slate. Notre Dame is 4-2—with both losses coming at the hands of CTK.

Carrie Mosser had 22 points and nine rebounds for the Trojans and Shannon Washburn added 19 rebounds and 14 point for the CTK attack. Chris Lewis scored 17 for Notre Dame.

And the CTK boys also stretched their district mark to 6-0 by walloping the visiting squad 68-24. The Trojans led 15-1 at the end of the first quarter and it was all downhill for Notre Dame after that.

Jimmy Durham had 14 points and 10 points for the Trojans and no one on the visitors squad could muster more than four points. Sean Flynn had 12 for the winners.

The CTK boys, who clinched the division on Tuesday, are also 6-0.

Test-Tube Baby Specialists Tell Methods

LONDON (AP) — A how-it's-done guide to creating a "test-tube baby" is going on sale at a London college for $30, including postage. But the authors say it's not for do-it-yourselfers.

The package of notes and slides was devised by gynecologist Patrick Steptoe and physiologist Robert Edwards, who pioneered the method and delivered Britain's first two "test tube babies."

The first, Louise Brown, was born in Oldham, Lancashire, July 25 last year and Alastair Montgomery was born last Jan. 14 in Glasgow. Both are fine, the two specialists told a news conference Friday night.

Steptoe and Edwards insist, however, that their method cannot be simply picked up from their guide, nor from scientific papers and lectures.

"It can only be learned by coming to Britain," Steptoe said. Unfortunately, he added, "we have nowhere to demonstrate it at the moment."

Edwards works at Cambridge University and Steptoe has retired from the state-run National Health Service. The NHS provided facilities for Steptoe at Oldham and District General Infirmary. Later arguments about the high cost led to the unit being dismantled, he said.

He said he expects the next test tube baby to be born in Australia. He said several medical teams are pursuing the process but he thinks the Australian team is "the most advanced."

Neither specialist will make any money out of their how-it's-done guide. The proceeds will go to London's Royal College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists, of which Steptoe is a senior member, said college spokesman Dr. Tony Brown.

Steptoe and Edwards chose the college for the first scientifically detailed lecture about their method, which preceded their Friday meeting with reporters.

The birth of Louise Brown drew immense publicity. The two specialists were widely believed to have become rich as well as famous, when the British Associated Newspapers group signed up the Brown family for exclusive, syndicated stories for an undisclosed sum.

Steptoe and Edwards said they have been approached with a private offer to fund a clinic near Cambridge to carry on their work for infertile women who desperately desire children.

The Guardian newspaper reported Saturday that Associated Newspapers is backing the project.

Edwards emphasized, "We have a lot to learn," and both specialists said it's unlikely that large numbers of women will be able to have babies this way in the forseeable future.

Their method involves taking an egg from the ovaries of a woman who cannot conceive normally, fertilizing it with her husband's sperm and, after two or three days, transplanting the embryo from its laboratory culture into the womb, where it develops naturally.

They said that in 32 implants they had four successful pregnancies. There were the two births and two embryo failures. One of those aborted at 20 weeks, possibly because of accidental rupture of the membranes, and the other because of chromosome imbalance in the mother.

Late last year doctors in India reported a live birth that used a similar process but involved freezing the embryo.

Judge Abolishes Abortion Rules

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (A) — A federal judge has struck down a Missouri regulation that bars welfare funds for abortions except when the mother's life is in danger.

U.S. District Judge Elmo B. Hunter on Friday ruled the regulation must meet broader federal guidelines that also permit the use of welfare money for abortions in cases of rape or incest, as well as when the mother's physical well-being is in peril.

The state Division of Health estimates that 16,300 abortions were performed in Missouri last year, although it is unclear how many would qualify for welfare funding under Hunter's ruling.

TRIAL HEADQUARTERS — Henry Glovatsky poses in front of the Union Hotel in Flemington, N.J. recently. Lindbergh Baby Kidnapping Haunts New Jersey Neighbor

By JULES LOH

FLEMINGTON, N.J. (AP) — Henry Glovatsky was just a boy of 6 but he well remembers the event. Ugly, he recalls, nightmare best forgotten, surely not a memory to hold through cheap curios.

"My mother kept the house locked and stayed up nights. She had no reason to be afraid. Our little chicken farm was not exactly a target for kidnappers, but that's how illogical those times were.

"I remember nothing of the trial, of course, but what I know about it is more than I care to know. It must have been dreadful."

The event that caused fear to seep like evil mist through the quiet Jersey hills was the kidnapping of Charles Lindbergh's baby in 1932. The trial, in 1935, substituted fear for spectacle.

The irony is that Henry Glovatsky, who had rather forget, has become, willy-nilly, the custodian of a landmark of that horror, a place which, lo these long years later, has yet remained a shrine for a steady procession of aging gawkers.

"I wish people wouldn't send me souvenirs of the kidnapping trial to put on display," he said. "I don't want them.

"I'm happy to display mementoes of Lindbergh's flight, and I do. That was a proud day and he was a neighbor, a resident of this county. I'd rather not celebrate his grief, but it seems there is no avoiding it. That's what people ask about."

Henry and his wife, Pearl, are proprietors of the Union Hotel, a grand old two-story building dating back to 1814 when it was a stagecoach stop. It hasn't changed much since.

The Glovatskys took over the place three years ago — rescued it, really — restored it from a rundown hangout to its proper dignity, that of a gracious matriarch presiding over Main Street.

In all its 165 years of comforting weary wayfarers, or simply hungry ones, the hotel is famous, alas, for but one gaudy moment.

That was the 46-day trial of the Lindbergh baby's accused kidnapper, Bruno Hauptmann — the "Trial of the Century" as the papers hawked it — when Flemington was a place-name on American tongue and Main Street in midway.

The Union Hotel, directly across Main from the Hunterdon County Courthouse, was the gathering spot for the press luminaries of the day come hither to report every breathless syllable of testimony.

Damon Runyon was here, and Walter Winchell and Edna Ferber. Gabriel Heater broadcast from his upstairs room. Most couldn't get rooms and slept on dining room tables. Dorothy Kilgallen slept behind the bar — one of the bars. They opened a second bar, such was the journalistic thirst, and it became known as Nellie's Tap, honoring a stray sheepdog the reporters adopted as a mascot.

Outside, hordes of tourists bought keepsakes: replicas of the kidnapper's ladder; dirt from under the Lindbergh window — actually from back of the courthouse, put in paper cups swiped from the water cooler. They also bought, for a dime each, pennies overstamped with the spired courthouse on one side the Lord's Prayer on the other.

"I have stacks of pictures and other stuff people have saved and given me," Henry Glovatsky said, "but I keep it in the basement.

"There is so much more to this old inn. It is a nice place to dine, to have a quiet drink. That's all I want it to be. If that were its only reputation I'd be happy."

Nellie's Tap, by the way, is no longer. It is now a separate dining room, the Eagle Room. Lucky Lindy, the Lone Eagle. Kiwanis and Lions clubs meet there on alternate Tuesday.

Speed Limit Debate Begins In Colorado

DENVER (AP) — Colorado has become the second Western state to begin debate on a measure to increase the 55-mile-per-hour speed limit to 65 mph even though it would mean the loss of federal highway money.

The bill was introduced in the Colorado House on Friday, one day after Wyoming's Senate approved a similar proposal.

Officials in other western states — including Oklahoma, Montana, New Mexico, Washington and Utah — have voiced strong interest in overturning the 55 mph limit imposed nationwide in 1973 as a fuel conservation measure.

States could lose millions in federal highway aid if they buck the national limit.

Colorado state Rep. Bob Stephenson, in introducing the 65-mph measure, charged the federal government with "blackmail" by threatening to cut off highway funds.

"First, we pay federal tax on the gasoline, then they give it back to us in the form of highway aid — but only if we agree to go by their speed limit." Stephenson said.

Stephenson said he is uncertain how much his state could lose. It received $140 million in federal highway aid this fiscal year.

Eye Examination?

Since 1935 particular people have had their eyes examined by the Doctors of Optometry associated with T.S.O.

The phoropter is used to determine the corrective prescription required, if any.

Being particular about your eyes and their care is the right way to be; so why not depend upon the doctors of optometry associated with TSO, as others do? They take care of recording and considering a history of your eyes. Numerous tests are made to determine muscle balance, ability to focus your eyes at various distances and best visual acuity at distance and near. At TSO, careful examination procedures and skillful laboratory processing assure you of accurate prescription eyewear for clear, comfortable vision.

If you need professional eye care, think of TSO. At TSO we care how you look at life.

Iranian Struggle Makes Gas Shortage Possible

By United Press International

Political turmoil that has virtually closed Iran's oilfields is finally beginning to directly affect the American consumer.

One major company has announced plans to ration its deliveries of all kinds of gasoline, two already have allocated unleaded brands and another company said it may have to impose a 10 percent cutback in supplies to retailers in February.

Oil industry officials said Iran's troubles contributed to a drop in total U.S. crude oil inventories below 300 million barrels in the week ending Jan. 19. The crude oil inventory has not been that low since April 1977.

The latest figures for gasoline and heating oil inventories, however, are at levels the oil industry considers acceptable.

Even so, Texaco Inc. asked for and received Energy Department permission Thursday to cut gasoline allocations to retailers throughout the country next month to February 1978 levels, at least partly because of the disruption of imports from Iran.

"Texaco is currently supplying its customers on a normal basis but prudence dictates that Texaco take action to bring demand for its gasoline in balance with its anticipated supplies," a Texaco spokesman said, calling the interruption in deliveries from Iran "a factor" in the decision.

The United States used to import daily from Iran about 900,000 barrels of crude, comprising 10 percent of America's imports and about 5 percent of its petroleum needs.

That total has been drastically reduced. Iran's production has been so damaged by oilfield and refinery strikes that Iran has been importing refined products from the United States.

Iran's oil is important to the industry because much of it is of a lighter grade that is more easily converted into unleaded gasoline and which is not in abundant supply in the best of times.

Shell and Standard Oil of Indiana, which distributes under the name Amoco, introduced allocation of supplies of unleaded gasolines in December but did not blame the Iranian situation.

Shell will drop its rationing next month and Amoco will decide early next week whether to continue its allocation program.

Other oil companies have been generally cautious in their public statements on the Iranian situation. One official said the companies did not want to start speculating on future allocations for fear there would be a run on gas stations and hoarding that might create a phony shortage.

James E. Lee, president of the Gulf Oil Corp. said in St. Louis Thursday that Gulf expects it to be a while before Iran again opens its oil spigot to foreigners. Iran had been Gulf's second largest foreign supplier of crude, producing 300,000 barrels of oil a day in 1977.

"We're in for a fairly long period of unsettled conditions in Iran," Lee said.

Another oil company' Standard Oil of Ohio, said there was a possibility of spot shortages and intermittent gasoline allocations by individual oil companies.

Sohio Senior Vice President Charles H. King Mosier said in Cleveland that Sohio might be forced into a temporary cutback in gasoline supplies as early as Feb. 1.

"We are talking about a possible reduction of about 10 percent," King said. "We do not know how long we would have to do this. But if we do, it will affect all of our product lines."

Economist Likened To Texas 'Oil Patch' Type On Energy

By BILL KIDD
A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Dr. Pierre Andre Rinfret, major economic advisor to three American presidents, may spend most of his time in New York and Paris, but he can sound like a true Texas "oil patch" type when he starts talking about energy.

Rinfret, head of the international economic and financial intelligence firm Rinfret Associates, Inc., was in Austin to address the 53rd annual convention of the East Texas Chamber of Commerce, and held a news conference with reporters during his stay.

Rinfret, who provided analyses for Presidents Kennedy, Johnson and Nixon, and served as principal economic spokesman for Nixon's 1972 presidential campaign, is creator and host of "The Real World of Economics," a public television series.

But he can come on like an outraged East (or West, North or South) Texas oilman when he talks about the current federal energy policy.

We have, he says, "the most insane energy policy of any country in the world" — with the goal of subsidizing the American consumer's desire for cheap power, and "to make sure there's not adequate domestic production to meet the demand."

"When it comes to oil, we are asking American producers, in essence, to pump oil, and distribute it, and see it, at prices below world market prices...They've got to be marons to do anything like that."

Rinfret also sees th U.S. balance of payments problem as tied to that policy of bringing in large amounts of expensive overseas petroleum, and a failure of the U.S. to play the world trade game according to the same rules used by other countries.

He doesn't, he stresses, favor protective barriers or any mechanisms which could disrupt world trade, but feels the U.S. should trade with other countries on a "quid pro quo" basis.

For example, he says, German exporters receive a 25 per cent tax rebate from their government, while the U.S. provides no such incentive. Or, he adds, consider the much higher import duties charged by Japan on U.S. goods entering that country compared to Japanese goods entering the U.S.

"Let's play the game even on both sides," he argues. "The minute you start, we'll have a balance of trade surplus."

Farm products, he comments, have been a major factor in preventing the U.S. balance of payments problem from being more severe than it has been.

American now has net exports of $22 billion a year in farm products, he notes, whereas the amount prior to 1973 was $3 billion.

In 1973, the Russians and Chinese began to buy wheat — leading to increased farm exports.

"The farmer is adding about $20 billion a year to the surplus of the United States...If we did not have the farm sector in the American economy...we would have ourselves a $45-50 billion trade deficit instead of $25 billion."

But unlimited and unrestricted farm exports aren't likely to occur at least any time soon, regardles of the American government's position on such matters, he feels.

The biggest barrier to trade between countries is how agriculture is subsidized and farmers in all major countries are subsidized, Rinfret says.

The U.S. also has the problem of where to export, since Russia has adequate wheat supplies at present, and Africa generally can't afford to pay for additional supplies.

China, which is producing only enough food for subsistence levels, will become a major market, Rinfret believes, adding that while there will be a good market for beef in world trade, "the biggest market in years to come is for grains."

One side effect of that, he notes, will be increased prices for wheat throughout the world.

On domestic matters, Rinfret says his firm predicted last March there would be a recession in 1979, and still feels "it will start to show by the second quarter."

The economy, he says, will slip "somewhat fast" in the third and fourth quarters, with prime interest rates peaking in late March or early April — and dropping to nine per cent around the end of the year.

And inflation, he says, "will stay where it is or get worse" — running at 8 percent or more for 1979.

Sen. Byrd Raps Carter's Downplay Of Energy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd criticized President Carter Saturday for virtually ignoring the nation's energy problems in last week's State of the Union address.

"Less than 12 words were in the president's speech about energy and not one word on coal," the West Virginia Democrat said at a news conference. "Has energy suddenly become a stepchild?"

Carter's State of the Union address, which dealt primarily with spending restraint and inflation, mentioned energy only once and then in the context of the anti-inflation fight.

As part of a list of possible anti-inflation moves, the president said Congress could take action "to conserve energy; increase production and speed development of solar power."

Byrd said he was surprised by Carter's lack of comment on energy, particularly in light of the president's declaration during the last session of Congress that the nation's energy problem was the "moral equivalent of war."

Byrd, who represents a major coal-producing state, also criticized the Carter administration for reducing its support for coal conversion at a time of a natural gas glut.

Last year, Carter-supported legislation was passed to encourage industry to convert from oil to more abundant supplies of coal. Congress also enacted laws to gradually deregulate the price of natural gas.

Byrd complained that increased supplies of natural gas resulting from the new law had caused the administration to encourage conversion to natural gas, instead of coal.

"I don't understand this switch in policy," Byrd said.

On another issue involving the coal industry, the majority leader expressed concern that Japan was increasing its import of non-American coal and thereby increasing its trade surplus with the United States.

To combat the problem of the U.S. trade deficit with Japan and other nations, Byrd proposed creation of a new Cabinet-level department on international trade.

He said his staff is drawing up the legislative proposal which would consolidate government efforts to promote U.S. trade. Currently, those responsibilities are spread among several departments of government.

Rhineland City Welcomes Travelers

INTERNATIONAL GATEWAY — The mighty Rhine flows through Cologne, Germany, within sight of the world's largest Gothic cathedral. Cologne is the first port of call during the special 17-day Spring Fling '79 European tour. The Lubbock Avalanche-Journal and Lufthansa Airline travel package will enable South Plains residents to tour as a group from Lubbock to Europe and return.

ByTED J. SIMON
A-J Outdoor Editor

You couldn't select a better place than Cologne to begin tour of Europe. The West German city offers a memorable blend of the new and the old.

The old in this capital of the Rhineland dates back more than 2,000 years. But, because the city was nearly flattened in World War II it is now a showplace of glass and steel — and that means modern accommodations with air conditioning.

Describing the breath-taking beauty of the Cologne Cathedral is almost impossible. The height of the twin spires alone has inspired countless artists and poets. When Rand McNally composed its list: The 101 Wonders of the Modern World — the cathedral was one of the first subjects selected.

Construction of the cathedral began in 1248 to house relics of the Magi brought to Cologne in the 12th century. It took nearly 500 years to complete the construction of the world famous structure. But, because the construction over the centuries remained true to the original plans, the entity is graceful in every stage of development. From the silver and gold shrine of the Three Magi to the 515-foot-high spires — the soaring structure is a wonder to behold.

South Plains residents participating in the Spring Fling '79 European tour will be given an extensive tour of the great ecclesiastical edifice. It is the largest Gothic cathedral in the world.

Tour participants will also see the priceless Dionysus Mosaic, discovered during the construction of a bomb shelter in World War II. The 700-square-foot mosaic, composed of more than a million stones, was the dining hall floor of a Roman mansion that presumably burned in the fourth century. It's believed that the mansion's walls and roof collapsed, thus protecting the floor and its scene for 16 centuries. The beautiful scene includes Bacchus, the god of wine — Amor, the god of love, riding a lion — plus a party of dancers and satyres.

Lubbockites and their traveling companions from West Texas will also visit the ultramodern Opera House. Though the sight seeing schedule includes many sites in Cologne, the itinerary does allow free time for rest, individual excursions, or shopping.

Ava Kertes, a passenger sales consultant in Dallas for Lufthansa Airlines, is delighted that Lubbockites will have some free time to thoroughly enjoy the city of Cologne. By the way, Eau de Cologne was first made there in the 18th century.

"Cologne is a very fashionable city," noted Miss Kertes. "Most people there are elegantly dressed. I like to take a cup of coffee at one of the sidewalk cafes nd watch the people going by."

The restaurants in Cologne serve various wursts (sausages) and excellent sauerbraten. Some of the restaurants specialize in wild meats such as venison and boar. You might want to try Cologne caviar — that's a slice of dark sausage with mustard on a roll. It's delicious!

No wonder that world travelers claim that the city is Germany's number one gourmet metropolis. By the way, the inexpensive house grape will be a carafe of excellent Rhine wine.

Shoppers will find good buys in quality leather goods — wallets, handbags, and belts. Umbrellas, walking sticks With carved handles, and binoculars make perfect remembrances of a visit to Cologne.

Founded by the Romans in 32 B.C., Cologne was a cornerstone of the Roman Empire. The city has known the influence of Charlemagne, the Normans, and the French revolutionary forces. Now the city is preparing for the friendly invasion of Lubbockites.

Because the May 6 departure date is limited to 40 persons from this point of origin, it is best to make arrangeents as quickly as possible. Persons interested in the Spring Fling '79 European tour may write The Lubbock Avalanche-Journal International Travel Desk, P.O. Box 491, Lubbock, Texas 79408. For detailed information, contact any local travel agency.

Cologne is just the beginning for this bargain tour package. The following day there's a cruise along the Rhine past castles and valleys and vineyards. Then there's Luxembourg, London, and.... well, it's a trip of a lifetime!

If you are a seasoned world traveler, this package tour saves you money while allowing some free time for personal interests. Or, if you have never been to Europe before, then this tour enables you to travel without the problems of reservations, timetables and having to cope with several foreign languages for baggage transfers.

Spring Fling '79, as a community service of The Lubbock Avalanche-Journal and area travel agencies, includes in the round trip price of $2256, first class hotel accommodations with breakfast and dinner, tour escorts, plus transportation.

Big Problems Mark Meeting Of Prelates

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The 250 Roman Catholic bishops meeting in Puebla this week must confront knotty problems ranging from growing sexual freedom to the politicization of priests in order to chart their church's course into the next century.

The 17-day Third Latin American Bishops Conference, billed as the most important session for the prelates this decade, has been given added weight because of the visit of Pope John Paul II.

The pontiff chose to inaugurate the conference to show his concern for the future of the church in turbulent Central and South America, home to nearly half the world's 750 million Roman Catholics.

An unofficial Associated Press survey of church officials in several Latin American nations shows that their concerns will center on:

——Problems such as Uruguay's, where as few as 2 percent of the population practices the faith, even though the nation is considered more than 90 percent Catholic.

——More than a score of priests have died fighting alongside leftist guerrillas in politically troubled nations.

——The number of foreign priests, upon whom Latin American Catholics have depended for centuries, is falling rapidly.

Church involvement in secular affairs is expected to be the most volatile issue of the congress.

Activist priests say the church should advocate revolution, if necessary, for social reform and a new economic order. Conservatives say the church should aim more at moulding souls by providing moral guidance.

Social woes are depressingly evident as about one-third of the Latin American population exists in extreme poverty, church officials say.

A decision on church involvement in such problems could endear it to the millions of poor anxious to escape their lot, but could bring it into conflict with strong-arm governments.

"The current generation ... wants a church which looks to all men, particularly the poor, the unprotected and the oppressed," said Brazilian Cardinal Aloisio Lorscheider.

In Brazil, the National Conference of Bishops has taken strong stands against the government on issues of human rights, income distribution and land problems.

In tiny El Salvador, the Church is involved in a war of nerves with President Carlos A. Romero's military-backed regime. Romero accuses priests of helping leftist guerrilla groups while church leaders accuse the regime of gross violations of human rights and apathy toward the nation's poor.

Two years ago, some 40 Jesuit priests were either expelled or denied re-entry when they left. Half a dozen were murdered by pro-government, right-wing groups and one priest was shot by police only last week.

Priests have also been slain in Guatemala, Honduras, Nicaragua, Panama, Colombia, Argentina and Chile.

There are 300 million Latin American Catholics, with 600 bishops, 45,000 priests and 140,000 nuns in the region. Church officials say the number of clergy is not nearly enough.

In Honduras, a nation of 3.2 million persons, there are 400 priests, 80 of whom are Honduran. Two priests, including an American, were killed in 1975 and their bodies stuffed down a well after the priests became involved with peasants demanding land.

The church appears to be in the midst of a rebirth in Argentina, where the number of seminary students hit 1,400 in 1978, up from 343 in 1973. But church officials appear deeply divided over political repression.

Church sources said 13 priests and seminarians were killed, eight more imprisoned and six priests and nuns have disappeared since the military coup in March 1976, led by generals who support the more conservative Catholic clergy.

The church in Uruguay is perhaps the weakest in Latin America, owing to a history of anti-clerical settlers from Spain and Italy. Church officials say 90 percent of the country's 2.7 million persons are baptized Catholics, but only about 2 percent practice the faith.

In late 1975, the archbishop ordered Catholic clergy to refrain from pastoral or social programs that might throw them into conflict with the government.

Venezuelan clergy will report to the conference that their church suffers from a shortage of priests who find it difficult to combat a sudden rise in prostitution, illegitimate children and divorce.

"We have a population in which the majority is baptized, but marred by religious ignorance and lack of a real sense of obligation," the report said.

DIRECTOR OF INFORMATION SERVICES

New Mexico Institute of Mining and Technology seeks a Director of Information Services with a wide range of public-information skills: Newswriting; writing, editing, and layout of brochures and posters; both still and movie photography; and community relations. Familiarity with darkroom procedures and photo-offset printing is also required. Experience in writing on technical topics for the general public is desired.

New Mexico Tech is a small technical university of 1100 students offering degrees through the Ph.D. and with extensive research and development activity. Four divisions comprising the Institute are the College, the Bureau of Mines and Mineral Resources, the Research and Development Division, and the Petroleum Recovery Research Center. The Director of Public Information has responsibility for the public-information program of the entire Institute, supervises two other professionals as well as support staff in the print plant and the photo lab, and manages a budget. The Director cooperates closely with students, faculty, division directors, and other administrators, and reports directly to the president.

Applicants should have professional training in public-information work and at least three years of relevant experience, preferably in a college or university, or in a research organization. Breadth of skills and flexibility to handle multiple responsibilities, often under time pressure, are important qualities. Familiarity with the State of New Mexico and its news media is desired. The salary is open, depending on experience and qualifications.

Applicants should submit a detailed letter and resume and the names of several references to the Chairman of the Search Committee, Dr. George S. Austin, Bureau of Mines and Mineral Resources, Campus Station, Socorro, N.M. 87801. Deadline for receipt of applications: February 16, 1979.

Systems Analyst/ Programmer

Openings in the Lubbock Area

If you have a solid record of achievement as a systems analyst/programmer, with strong technical knowledge and experience, you may be the person to complement our team of professionals.

You should have 2-5 years experience that includes design, development, debugging, installation or support in the discrete or process manufacturing or construction field. Exposure to applications, maintenance, mini-computer, microcomputer and/or terminal software would be desirable.

NCR is a leader in the data processing industry. As one of the most respected companies in the field, we offer competitive earnings, a comprehensive employee benefit program and an atmosphere where the challenge, reward and recognition are as great as any opportunity in the business world today.

We are seeking a person with a technical college degree or a business degree with computer sciences courses. In lieu of a degree, we will consider those with equivalent experience. We are also looking for a self-starter — an enthusiastic individual with confidence and a high energy level. If you are successful in your present position and want to expand your potential, forward your resume and salary history to Mrs. Veronyka Vance, NCR Corporation, 1711 34th St, Lubbock, TX 79412. RAINTREE ADDITION—$67,500
FARRAR DEL NORTE—$58,250
WOODLAND PARK—$92,500
BRENTWOOD CLUB—$143,500

WHY BUY OR LEASE PURCHASE?

Lock in todays prices! The single family home has been and will be the best investment you can make for your family! History will show an 8%-12% increase per year on single family homes in the correct locations in Lubbock. Compare todays prices with 1960, 1970, 1979. Had you purchased a home in 1960 you would have paid $10 per sq. ft. In 1970, $20 per sq. ft.. In 1978 $28 per sq. ft. YOU CAN STILL BUY MORE HOUSE FOR THE MONEY IN LUBBOCK THAN ANY OTHER AREA IN THE SOUTHWEST!

ALL OUR HOMES ARE FULL ENERGY SAVING HOMES!

COUNTS

1. Mazda has produced piston engines for 48 years
2. Mazda produces more cars per year than AMC, Honda, Volvo and British England combined
2. Mazda produced 804,000 cars in 1978. More than Honda has produced since their existance.
4. Mazda has the #1 rated EPA pickup in the U.S.
5. Mazda RX-7 is one of the 10 best cars in the world (Road and Track)
6. Mazda pioneered the rotary engine, and Detroit engineers predicted it is one of three engines that can meet all 1985 standards, the other two are Sterling Steam & Turbine.
7. Mazda sales increased 42% in Dec. 1978 outselling Fiesta by 2181 units.
8. Mazda has 14 assembly plants, 4 distributors and over 600 dealers to serve you.

NOTICE
TO THE OWNERS OF PROPERTY ABUTTING UPON THE HEREINBELOW MENTIONED PORTION OF SLIDE ROAD AND TO ALL OTHERS AFFECTED:

The Governing Body of the City of Lubbock has heretofore ordered that the following portion of Slide Road in the said City of Lubbock, Texas be improved by installing concrete curbs and gutters as designated below:

It is found and determined that the cost of curb and gutter improvements on such portion of said Slide Road with the amount or amounts per front foot proposed to be assessed for such curb and gutter improvements against the abutting property and the owners thereof, on the portion of said Slide Road are as follows:

Slide Road from its intersection with the South Property Line of South Loop 289 to its intersection with the North Property Line of 82nd Street, known and designated as Sub-Unit Number 35 of Unit Number 2233; the estimated cost of the outermost curb and gutter improvements is $54,105.27; the estimated amount per front foot to be assessed against the abutting property and owners thereof for said curb and gutter is $5.45.

And arrangement for the making and construction of such curb and gutter improvements has been made and entered into by the City of Lubbock, Texas, and rolls or statements showing the proposed amounts to be assessed against the abutting property, and the owners thereof have been filed with the City, such rolls or statements showing other matters and things, and have been approved and the City Council of said City has fixed a time and place for hearing to the owners of property abutting upon said portion of Slide Road and to all others affected, at which hearing the amounts to be assessed against the respective parcels of abutting land and the owners thereof for improvements in the units upon which the particular parcels of property abut, the amounts of benefits to the respective parcels of property by means of the improvements in the unit upon which the particular property abuts, the regularity of the proceedings with reference to such improvements, the apportionment of the cost of such improvements, and other matters and things will be determined, and after such hearings assessments will by ordinance be made and levied, and such hearing will be held by and before the City Council of the City of Lubbock, Texas, in regular City Council Meeting Room in the City Hall in the City of Lubbock, Texas, on the 22nd day of February, 1979, at 2:00 P.M. o'clock. The rolls or statements showing the proposed amounts of such assessments are on file in the office of the City Secretary and copies thereof are in the office of the City Engineer of the City of Lubbock and open to inspection of any interest parties at any time, and of all said matters and things all such owners of property, as well as any and others in any wise affected or interested, will take due notice.

By order of the City Council of the City of Lubbock, this the 16th day of November, 1978.

No notice other than that herein provided for shall be necessary and such notice shall be due and sufficient notice to any and all persons, firms, corporations and other parties.

That a hearing be given and held by and before the Governing Body of the City of Lubbock, Texas, to all persons owning or claiming any property abutting any part or portion of said Slide Road described in Section II, of this Resolution, as well as all owning or claiming any interest in any such property. Such hearing shall be given and held on the 22nd day of February, 1979, at 2:00 P.M. o'clock on the second floor in the City Hall, City of Lubbock, Texas, and the City Secretary is hereby directed to give notice of the time and place of such hearing, and of other matters and facts in accordance with the terms and provisions of an Act at the first called session of the 40th Legislature of the State of Texas and known as Chapter 106 of the Acts of said Legislature which has been adopted as an amendement to and made a part of the Charter of the City of Lubbock, Texas, and as amended by Chapter 176 Acts of the 60th Regular Session of said Legislature. Such notice shall be by advertisement inserted at least three times in a newspaper published in the City of Lubbock, Texas; the first publication shall be made at least twenty-one (21) days before the said hearing; and, additional written notice of the hearing shall be given by depositing in the United States mail, at least fourteen (14) days before the date of the hearing, written notice of such hearing, postage prepaid, in an envelope addressed to the owner of the respective properties abutting such highways, avenues, and/or alleys or portions hereof to be improved, as the names of such owners are shown on the then current rendered tax rolls of the City of Lubbock, and at the addresses shown, or if the names of such respective owners do not appear on such rendered tax rolls, then addressed to such owners as their names are shown on the current unrendered rolls of the City at the addresses shown thereon. Said notice shall comply with and be in accordance with the terms and provisions of this resolution and said Acts as amended.

PASSED AND APPROVED BY UNANIMOUS VOTE OF THE GOVERNING BODY OF THE CITY OF LUBBOCK, TEXAS, THIS THE 16TH DAY OF NOVEMBER, 1978.

Being President Of Senate Not Rockefeller Goal

By LEE BYRD

He spoke as president of the United States Senate, a title he forever thought one word lengthy. But at least, he noted, occupying that chair was one thing a vice president had to do.

"I bequeath to my successor two helpful mottos of this office of high calling," he said. "First, 'They also serve who merely sit and wait;' and second, 'Wait and want not.'"

In the end, Rockefeller genuinely wanted not. Three bids for the presidency dashed, and finally appointment by Gerald Ford to a vice presidency wrought by scandal.

"I'm simply not cut out to be No. 2," he had said many times earlier. And once Rockefeller was No. 2, it turned out that his own party didn't want him there, either.

But he and Ford remained true friends, even after GOP conservatives pressured the president into opting for another running mate in 1976. "If you accept your role as assistant to the president, you do whatever he asks you to do, and you do not expect him to ask you to do anything," Rockefeller said.

The party's conservative wing never trusted him. Even after he had gone home, professing great pleasure at the chance to be a fulltime husband and father, to enjoy and promote his art, even after he declared that "I don't even see politicians anymore," his old adversaries like Ronald Reagan weren't buying it.

Rockefeller retiring, Reagan wrote in 1977, "is about as likely as the sun ... setting in the East."

Neither did he have many friends on the left. Probably no politician was cursed with such an abundance of conspiracy theories over his motives, and particularly his wealth. Surely, some argued, Rockefeller had struck a nefarious bargain with Ford: the president would turn over the White House to the Rockefeller cartel.

Rockefeller got a temper about these things. In early 1975, at the end of a long day that had seen him preside over the Senate during a tough rules battle, then fly to Detroit for a boilerplate speech in Ford's behalf, he kept reporters aboard Air Force One at the nearby Andrews AFB runway into the wee hours of the morning trying to get it out of his system.

"I'm tired of the constant harping," about his ambitions, Rockefeller said, settling his exhausted, 5-foot-11 frame into a reporter's seat. "It is a disservice to Americans who are up against some very serious problems that affect their lives right now."

With that, aboard the presidential aircraft, he declared himself out of presidential politics forever. "One of the reasons I can be helpful to the president is simply that I'm no longer a political threat. I'm 66 years old. If I were in my 40s or 50s, that would be different."

They might have been different, too, if Rockefeller had been a Democrat instead of a Republican. But "I didn't become a Republican," he said in 1976. "I was. I was born a Republican. Harry Truman tried to get me to shift, and I said to him 'I believe in the two-party system very strongly, I believe this is essential to our democracy.'"

"Secondly, I would rather pull people forward — my temperament is that way — than to be in a position of trying to hold them back. In the Republican Party, I'm in a position of pulling forward."

What would have happened, though, had he followed Truman's advice? "I probably would have been nominated by the
