Food Prices Give Boost To Inflation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer prices rose 9 percent in 1978, the largest increase in four years, but the inflation picture improved in the last two months of the year, the Labor Department said today.

Price increases were held to 0.6 percent in December because of smaller increases in medical costs and the property tax cuts in California, the department said.

But food prices began spiraling again, rising 0.8 percent for the month, due mainly to higher meat and milk prices.

The purchasing power of the average worker declined 0.1 percent in the month and by 3.4 percent over the course of the year, the department said.

The year-end consumer price report affects the pay of up to 2.6 million persons who have December or fourth-quarter cost-of-living clauses in their labor contracts.

The 9 percent increase for the year is the largest since a 12.2 percent rise in 1974. Prices rose by 6.8 percent in 1977.

Food prices rose 11.6 percent over the year, while housing costs went up 9.9 percent, medical care 8.8 percent, transportation 7.7 percent and entertainment 5.8 percent.

The 0.6 percent increase in December would amount to between 7 and 8 percent if it continued for a full year. It followed a smaller increase of 0.5 percent in November.

The costs of buying, renting or operating a home rose by a relatively small 0.4 percent in December for the second month in a row, the Labor Department said.

Housing prices increased 1.1 percent and interest rates were 1.6 percent higher.

However, the department said, "these costs were largely offset by a sharp decline in property taxes in California which resulted from the passage of Proposition 13 on June 6, 1978."

The tax cut was not included in the index until December because that was the month most taxes were due without penalty.

Without the tax cut, the department said, the over-all increase in the Consumer Price Index would have been 0.8 percent instead of 0.6 percent for December.

Food bought at grocery stores rose 0.8 percent in December after a 0.2 percent rise in November.

Beef, pork and poultry prices rose for the third straight month, while milk prices climbed substantially. Fruit and vegetable prices declined, but by less than in November.

Clothing prices were stationary in December, but used-car prices went up 2.5 percent and gasoline prices rose 1.9 percent.

Medical care rose 0.4 percent after climbing 1.1 percent in both October and November. The slower increase was caused primarily by smaller increases in charges for hospital rooms, physicians' services and other professional care.

The Consumer Price Index ended the year at 202.9, meaning that the average products that cost $100 in the base period of 1967 cost $202.90 in December. The 9 percent increase was for both categories: the department measures: all urban consumers and urban wage earners and clerical workers.

Twisters Dip Into Florida

A-J News Services

Tornadoes tore through homes in Louisiana and Florida today, and another storm whipped the Midwest with heavy snow, high winds and freezing rain. The Midwest storm knocked out power, blocked roads and disrupted air travel.

Clouds moved back into the Southwest and forecasters indicated a slight chance of rain tonight and Thursday in West Texas, with the possibility of snow by the weekend in the Texas Panhandle and upper South Plains.

A cold front pushing eastward toward the Great Lakes today dumped an additional 6 inches of snow on Chicago, still digging out from under 20 inches left by a blizzard a week ago.

The snow, driven by gusty winds of up to 30 mph, forced the cancellation of some flights at O'Hare International Airport, and snowdrifts blocked a number of roads in the western suburban areas.

"We're operating on a marginal basis right now," said Jerry Angela, passenger service manager for United Airlines at O'Hare.

Many rush-hour motorists abandoned their cars on major expressways, blocking the path of snowplows, said a spokesman for the Illinois Department of Transportation.

In storm-plagued Milwaukee, 7.3 inches of snow fell overnight to add to the record 32 inches already on the ground, and a number of schools were closed. Parts of Michigan got at least another 6 inches.

"It's the worst we've had this year," said a sheriff's department dispatcher in Outagamie County, Wis., where most roads were closed.

A half-dozen tornadoes were reported today in the Florida Gulf Coast town of Bradenton, where roofs and porches were ripped from about 50 trailer homes.

Military Blocks Khomeini

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Iranian military leaders loyal to Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi closed the Tehran airport today and grounded the national airline to prevent the return from exile Friday of Ayatollah Khomeini, the leader of the year-long fight to overthrow the monarchy.

In Paris, a spokesman for the 78-year-old religious leader said he would leave Paris Thursday night as scheduled, using a chartered Air France plane, but would turn back if the airport was still closed Friday. However, when asked if he might try to land at another airport in Iran, the spokesman replied: "Possibly, yes."

Tehran's martial law authorities, meanwhile, announced that the airport would remain closed through Friday.

The U.S. Embassy warned Americans to avoid the airport and its surrounding area on Friday because of the large crowds expected in the event of Khomeini's return.

Prime Minister Shahpour Bakhtiar, whose government Khomeini has spurned as illegal because the shah appointed it, disclosed to Parliament that he had sent a "trusted representative" to Paris to negotiate with Khomeini.

He said the envoy carried a letter from him indicating his willingness "to do anything within the framework of the constitution, including any desired changes in the constitution."

"But as I have said before, I will not leave the fortress of the constitution, and I would like to reiterate it today," said Bakhtiar, himself a longtime opponent of the shah.

Abulhasan Banisadr, one of the ayatollah's chief aides, said in Paris that Khomeini will not receive a representative of Bakhtiar unless the envoy is carrying the prime minister's resignation.

Three tanks blocked the main entrance to Tehran's Mehrabad Airport, where striking Iran Air workers had readied two Boeing 747 jumbo jets to be flown to Paris to bring the Shiite Moslem patriarch home after 14 years in exile.

The air force, controlling airport operations because of the strike wave paralyzing the country, "will prevent any takeoff or landing of Iran Air planes," an air force source said. Armed troops and military troops were reported patrolling alongside the runways.

Ayatollah Taleghani, the Shiite Moslem leader in Tehran, called a rally at the airport to give the "revolutionary flight" to Paris a send-off. Several thousand persons pushed past a policeman at a side gate and stood in a driving snow as Taleghani addressed them, but a truckload of soldiers broke up the crowd.

The aged ayatollah, one of Khomeini's chief lieutenants in Iran, was allowed to drive away.

"The people will grow more angry when they see the government action," he said through an interpreter. "Instead of preparing all facilities to receive Ayatollah Khomeini, they make sabotage to prevent his return."

Employees of the national airline said the starter switches and fuel pressure transmitters had been removed from the two planes that were to have been sent to Paris.

Royal Family Expected To Leave Lubbock Soon

A-J News Services
Iranian Ambassador to the United States Ardeshir Zahedi "may be coming" to Lubbock Friday to accompany members of the Shah of Iran's family to Morocco where they will join the Shah, according to a Washington source.

It is believed the family will leave aboard an Iranian Air Force jet that landed at Reese Air Force Base Tuesday. The Avalanche-Journal had learned Tuesday that the plane was not expected to leave before late today or Thursday.

Zahedi told ABC News Tuesday that he will accompany the Shah's family and that they will probably leave over the weekend.

Reese spokesmen, however, would not comment on plans concerning Zahedi or the royal family.

The Iranian jet is expected to fly the Shah's two youngest children and his mother-in-law to McGuire Air Force Base in New Jersey and then to Morocco.

Speculation that the family would be leaving the city grew Tuesday afternoon when a moving van arrived at the weekend home of the crown prince, where the family is staying. Movers loaded several packing crates aboard the truck.

Moving company officials, however, would not comment on the destination of the crates.

This morning two cars were seen going to Reese AFB from the crown prince's home, apparently with articles to be loaded aboard the Iranian plane.

The Iranian jet landed at Reese shortly after 4 p.m. Tuesday from Dover Air Force Base in Delaware with only a flight crew aboard, according to a spokesman.

Though State Department sources confirmed that the plane arrived to pick up members of the family, they would not reveal its destination.

Reese officials said that the crown prince would continue with his flight training at the base and that travel plans for his family do not involve him.

Speculation that the shah would possibly come to Lubbock has ceased following an announcement by Ali Tabatabai, a spokesman for the Iranian embassy, that the shah has postponed his visit to the United States.

Earlier, the monarch was expected to fly into this country and to stay at the estate of publisher Walter Annenberg in Palm Springs, Calif.

Sources close to the shah said he called off the trip because of concern over what he believes is President Carter's support of Ayatollah Khomeini, the leader of the shah's opposition.

The State Department said that the Iranian ruler would be welcome in the United States, although officials have not had any direct contact with him since he left Iran for what may be permanent exile.

Connally Seeking GOP Nomination In 1980

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Texas Gov. John B. Connally today entered the race for the 1980 Republican presidential nomination with a call to the nation "to overcome the crisis of the spirit which is assaulting our national resolve."

Connally, whose political career spans both major parties, served as Secretary of the Navy under President John F. Kennedy and Secretary of the Treasury under President Richard Nixon. While governor of Texas, he was wounded by the rifle shots which killed Kennedy at Dallas in 1963.

Connally declared his candidacy in a speech at the National Press Club. He characterized President Carter, a Democrat, as "a sincere, patriotic, hard-working man" who has failed "to provide effective leadership."

"The Carter administration is wrong for the times in which we live," he said.

Connally is the third candidate to jump into the race for the 1980 GOP nomination. The others are Rep. Philip Crane of Illinois and Los Angeles businessman Benjamin Fernandez.

In his speech, Connally emphasized the need for greater reliance on free enterprise and a strong national defense.

"Business has been stifled, berated and ridiculed, while labor has been painted as monolithic and avaricious," he said.

He called government, business and labor "integral components of the same economic team," and said the nation "will regain its full economic strength only when government decides to face the fact that the three great forces in the American economic system must work together."

Connally endorsed proposals to amend the Constitution to require a balanced federal budget. He also proposed a constitutional amendment to limit presidents to a single six-year term.

On foreign policy, Connally said this nation's willingness to enter into a new strategic arms limitation treaty with the Soviet Union must be linked to Russian policies around the world.

"We must not give them what they want in SALT and a free hand to act against our interests in other areas," he said.

On human rights, Connally said, "The question in countries like Korea and the Philippines is whether they have a government which provides for some human rights or a communist government which would deny all human rights."

Connally also called for increased production of coal and greater incentives for oil and gas exploration and production.

"We may have to revise the mining laws," he said. "We may have to revise the environmental restraints. We have to provide the balance that permits the nation to survive economically while we make progress environmentally."

Months of political spadework trying to line up support preceded Connally's announcement today, and his strategy will be to run in the primaries to prove his ability to attract votes in all parts of the country.

Once a protégé of staunch Democrat Lyndon B. Johnson, Connally became, in the early 1970s, a favorite of Richard M. Nixon, a Republican whose partisanship equalled Johnson's.

Solons Differ On Carter Speech

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is sounding a keynote of restraint for a Congress whose leaders agree with his austerity, but are already arguing about proper targets for the budget cutters.

Republican lawmakers were openly skeptical, and liberal Democrats voiced opposition.

"The president charged business and labor and the Congress to work together to beat inflation," said House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass. "I will do whatever I can, as speaker, to do what the president wants."

Assistant Senate Majority Leader Alan Cranston was not so effusive. "I differ with the president on the proposal to increase defense spending by huge sums when we are the strongest nation on earth," the California Democrat said.

House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, called Carter's commitment to fight inflation commendable and said,

"He will have the active support of Congress." But Wright predicted "there may be some disagreements as to where the cuts should come."

Carter's State of the Union message, delivered to a joint session of Congress Tuesday night, dwelt heavily on inflation and the strategic arms limitation treaty with the Soviet Union, which the Senate must ratify by a two-thirds majority.

With negotiations on the treaty in their final stages, Carter made a strong appeal for support of the agreement once it is finalized and sent to the Senate, probably early this year.

"I will sign no agreement which does not enhance our national security," said the president.

Moments later, he added, "I will sign no agreement unless our deterrent force will remain overwhelming."

Addressing congressional concern over whether the United States could rely on the Soviets to adhere to any treaty, Carter said, "SALT II will not rely on trust. It will be verifiable."

With its domestic emphasis on austerity, the speech followed by a day Carter's budget for 1980, a document he described as "lean and austere" and reflecting the need for sacrifice "if we are to overcome inflation."

Midway through his first term in the White House and following an election in which inflation emerged as the major issue, Carter called on Congress and the nation to "change our attitudes as well as our policies."

"We cannot afford to live beyond our means. We cannot afford to create programs we can neither manage nor finance, or to waste our natural resources; and we cannot tolerate mismanagement and fraud. Above all, we must meet the challenge of inflation as a united people."

"New Foundation," emerged as the catch-phrase of the Carter address.

"We are building a new foundation for a peaceful and prosperous world," he said in the opening lines. "We build the foundation for a strong economy."

"We build the foundation for a government that works."

"We must continue to build a new and firm foundation for a stable world community."

And the president closed his address by saying: "Tonight, I ask you to join me in building that new foundation — a better foundation — for our country and our world."

Rep. John Anderson of Illinois, third-ranking in the House Republican leadership, said the Carter speech was "an obvious attempt to inspire the people. ... Despite the constant reiteration of the phrase 'new foundations,' we did not see a new structure emerge from the president's speech."

Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., said, "The See CARTER BIDS Page 14

Brown Undecided

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. says he hasn't made a decision yet about whether he'll run for president next year.

BROWN

"I'm not prepared to come to any conclusion," Brown said about his candidacy in a radio interview Tuesday. "I am reasonably cautious and giving it a lot of thought, and I'm not prepared to make any decision today."

Brown, 40, who challenged Carter for the 1976 Democratic nomination in five primaries, said his position hasn't changed in recent months, but he's dropped the word "remote" from references to his future as a candidate.

'One Term' For Billy

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger says he's in favor of the president's brother Billy Carter becoming "a one-term entertainer."

Kissinger made his suggestion Tuesday when asked: "What advice have you for Billy Carter as he furthers his diplomatic career?"

The question drew a burst of laughter from delegates to the NBC Radio Affiliates Conference, crowded into a small French Quarter theater here.

Billy Carter recently drew protests from Jewish groups when he played host to a group of Libyan officials.

U.S. Citizen Held By Chinese Thrilled By Sight Of Home

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — Daniel Kelly, who spent most of his life in Chinese labor camps because he refused to renounce his American citizenship, was dazzled by his first sight of the motherland he knew only through books.

"I never thought it would be like this," Kelly said Tuesday.

"It's wonderful, fascinating. It's what I always was dreaming for. This is what I fought for."

Kelly, 38, spent 21 years in mainland China labor camps. His crimes: refusal to renounce his U.S. citizenship and an escape attempt.

Kelly was born in China, the son of an American Presbyterian minister who married a Chinese woman. His only knowledge of the United States had been through books — old ones.

His father died in 1957. Kelly tried a year later to escape China by swimming to the island of Macao, but was caught and sentenced to forced labor.

Kelly's mother, his wife and three children were allowed to leave China for Hong Kong last month.

They boarded a plane Tuesday and flew to the United States, landing first in Seattle and then flying on to Indianapolis where Kelly and his sister, Elizabeth Peabody, were reunited for the first time in 30 years.

"Since I was a boy, I dreamed of going home to America," he told reporters in Seattle. "I knew that I was an American. I didn't feel Chinese. I think in English, and when I was alone, I talked to myself in English. I stuck to my guns."

He said "it was worth it" to refuse acceptance of Chinese citizenship, "because if I make up my mind to do something, I do it — even if I die for it."

He credited his release to improved U.S. relations with China and the new Chinese leadership.

Kelly had to pay lip service, ultimately, to the Chinese demands.

"I had to sign the forms as a Chinese — the Chinese passport," he said. He said he signed as Lin Hsiao Shu, his Mandarin name.

Kelly and his sister embraced in a blaze of television lights and photoflashes at Indianapolis International Airport.

Mrs. Peabody left China in 1948 at age 9 with her older brother, Andy, now a career Navy pilot at Corpus Christi. They were raised as foster children in Des Moines, Iowa.

Asked what he hopes to do in the United States, Kelly said it would take some time to determine how he will make a living. He explained that his years of manual labor on Chinese farms hadn't prepared him for any profession or trade.

"Perhaps I can teach Chinese," he added. "My Mandarin (the formal language of China) is very good. My dialect is perfect."

He said he also would like to work at helping improve U.S.-China relations.

"If I could be of any help in the West understanding China and China understanding the West, I would."

Billy's Complaint Leads To Journalist's Arrest

AMERICUS, Ga. (AP) — Billy Carter's latest clash with the press has resulted in the arrest of a freelance journalist on charges of assaulting the president's brother.

Billy Carter swore out a simple assault warrant Tuesday against Pete Peckarsky, 31, of Wauwatosa, Wis., after a dispute with the journalist at Carter's service station in Plains, Sumter County Sheriff Randy Howard said.

Peckarsky was released on $2,000 bond after his arrest.

Howard said Peckarsky reportedly went to Carter's home in nearby Marion County and "had words" with Carter's wife, Sybil. The writer then went to the service station, where a dispute arose.

Howard said Carter told officers Peckarsky tried to hit him with a metal pipe but missed. The nature of the dispute was not disclosed.

Carter, who has had previous verbal run-ins with reporters, said he ran when confronted with the pipe.

"He had a tire tool, man," he said. "They say he swung at me, but I didn't see it."

Deputy Charles Hanks said Peckarsky was wearing a bullet-proof vest when he was arrested.

Ben Easterlin IV, an Americus attorney representing Peckarsky, said the writer "maintains that he is not guilty of any of the charges."

Peckarsky, who works out of Washington, D.C., was in Sumter County to gather material for a series of articles about the Carters, he said.

Senator Hospitalized For Alcohol Abuse

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Herman Talmadge, D-Ga., whose financial dealings are under investigation by the Senate Ethics Committee, is undergoing hospital treatment for what aides say is alcohol abuse and exhaustion.

Talmadge, 65, was admitted Monday night to Bethesda Naval Hospital, according to his press secretary, Gordon Roberts.

The hospital duty officer would not comment on Talmadge's condition, saying he had instructions to refer all calls to Roberts.

Roberts issued a statement saying Talmadge, who has served in the Senate for 22 years, asked to be admitted for treatment of "exhaustion, fatigue and alcohol abuse, which associates said was a result of prolonged stress and pressures."

Doctors said a thorough physical evaluation, rest and medical care will require the senator to be hospitalized for several days.

Talmadge is chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee and is No. 2 Democrat on the Senate Finance Committee and heads that panel's subcommittee on health.

His handling of official expenses and campaign contributions came into question last year as a result of efforts to reach a property settlement after a highly publicized divorce.

The Senate Ethics Committee is investigating allegations that Talmadge ordered the diversion of $39,000 in campaign contributions and expense funds into a secret Washington bank account.

Daniel Minchew, a former aide to Talmadge, has said Talmadge ordered him to open the account at Riggs National Bank in Washington. Talmadge contends Minchew established the account without his knowledge and that money deposited in the account in 1973 and 1974 amounted to a "plain case of embezzlement."

The Ethics Committee informed Talmadge in December that it has substantial evidence for five charges, including accusations that he turned campaign contributions to personal use and obtained reimbursement for falsely claimed Senate expenditures.

Last year Talmadge returned $37,125 in reimbursements for Senate expenses that were improperly claimed between 1972 and 1977. He said the repayment was made after his own audit turned up errors by his staff.

Inflation Grabs Americans' Extra Money In 1977

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans had a little more money in their pocketbooks in 1977 than the year before, but inflation took away most of it.

A new Census Bureau report on household income showed Tuesday that the 6.5 percent rise in prices between 1976 and 1977 practically wiped out the 7 percent income gain.

Figures show the median income of America's 76 million households rose to $13,570 in 1977, compared to the 1976 median of $12,570.

Discounting for inflation, the bureau reported that meant an effective increase in buying power of only 4.7 percent.

The report also shows the composition of American households has changed, largely because more young people are postponing marriage and childbearing and more unmarrieds are living together.

It noted that these changes may account for lack of growth in median household income during the 1970s. Discounting for inflation, the 1970 median family income would have been worth $13,630 in 1977 dollars — actually a little more than the actual 1977 figure of $13,570. In raw figures, the 1970 median household income was $8,730.

Other figures show the average size of the nation's households shrank from 3.1 persons in 1971 to 2.8 persons in 1978.

Also, there are fewer family-households than there were a decade ago, significant since families tend to have more income than households of unrelated adults.

The government defines a household as one person living alone or a group of people who share the same housing unit. Median household income means that half the households made more than the specified amount and half made less.

Between 1971 and 1978, the proportion of households with husband-wife families declined from 89.4 percent to 82.3 percent; families with no spouse present increased from 11.1 percent to 17.7 percent; and singles or unrelated individuals living together increased from 19.6 percent to 25.1 percent.

The median income of the "wifeless" households was $10,520 and the median income of the "husbandless" households was $6,330.

The households in which neither a wife nor husband was present included those instances in which a single person lived alone; the spouse was dead, divorced or separated; or unmarried people were living together.

The report shows that 2.1 percent of the country's households made $50,000 or more in 1977; 16 percent were between $25,000 and $50,000; 11.5 percent between $20,000 and $25,000; 15.6 percent between $15,000 and $20,000; 17.9 percent between $10,000 and $15,000; 28.3 percent between $5,000 and $10,000; and 16.5 percent below $5,000.

Median household income in 1977 was $14,270 for whites; $8,420 for blacks and $10,660 for Spanish-origin households. There was no significant change for any of these groups.

The median income of owner-occupied properties in 1977 was $16,400 compared to $9,520 for renter-occupied properties.

Faulty Self-Image

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am 5 feet 5 and weigh approximately 100 pounds. The problem is that I still feel fat. I eat one meal a day which usually consists of steak and/or cottage cheese, a roll with margarine, iced tea and then I'll splurge and have dessert.

My question is, "Will the dessert make me fat?" I mean I've heard so much about carbohydrates and I'm afraid that even though my consumption is about 1,000 calories a day, I'm afraid the carbohydrates in the dessert will cause the fat to form on areas of my body where fat cells exist. I'm so confused about that.

People have told me I am slightly anorexic and maybe they're right but I am so afraid of getting fat I have to constantly be denying things to myself because if I eat them I am afraid it will turn to fat and I don't want to look like a blimp.

Also, if I drink a couple of alcoholic drinks in the evening I compensate for it by fasting for the next couple of days. Then I worry about all of the vitamins and nutrients I'm not getting. If you can understand this, I'd sure appreciate some advice. It's becoming harder and harder to live with this constant obsession.

DEAR READER — I'll be completely candid with you and tell you you need help. By help I mean psychiatric or psychological support. At your height, you are as skinny as a rail.

The description of your dieting habits leads me to think that you are suffering from malnutrition. You're describing yourself as a person who has anorexia nervosa, people who think they are fat when they are not. You have a faulty self-image of your body.

The fat cells you have have been destroyed long ago. The walls of fat cells can be digested just like other tissues of the body can if you are starving yourself.

I am not at all concerned about those desserts you eat. I'm concerned about what you're not eating. You really must have professional help to unravel why you have this faulty image of your body.

Meanwhile, I would suggest that you increase your diet immediately, preferably by eating three good meals a day and start developing a regular exercise program. At first you should do some simple walking. The exercise might help stimulate your appetite and make you feel better about things in general.

For people with your problem there is no substitute for professional help. I hate to alarm you but individuals who get started on this track can end up with very serious consequences.

Even though an individual may begin to look like a fugitive from a concentration camp, she still has the false idea that she is fat as you express it. This can progress to the point of requiring hospitalization and many young women have been known to die from malnutrition before adequate professional help is obtained.

I hate to frighten you but this is a serious condition and you must understand that and get the kind of help that you need at once before you do any further damage to your body.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 4-8, Balanced Diet, Recommended Daily Dietary Allowances (RDA) which will tell you what you absolutely must have each day. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019. But you need professional help to straighten out the basic reason for your faulty self image.

Coast Guard Seeks To Improve Safety

WASHINGTON (AP) — Measures to correct potential safety problems on the Coast Guard's two main training ships will be completed before the vessels go on training cruises this summer, officials say.

A Transportation Department task force found the level of safety in training programs had decreased, although Transportation Secretary Brock Adams said this weekend the programs still have an adequate margin of safety. The task force began its investigation after last fall's collision between the Coast Guard cutter Cuyahoga and an Argentine freighter. Eleven crew members aboard the Cuyahoga died in the accident on Chesapeake Bay.

Prime Minister Aims Economic Appeal

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — Prime Minister Carlos Mota Pinto has broadcast a national appeal for help in getting Portugal's economy back on track.

The new prime minister painted a grim picture of the country's fiscal situation Monday and denounced "political agitation" as a major obstacle in the way of recovery. He labeled as "collective irresponsibility" a series of recent walkouts by industrial and municipal employees, and urged workers to increase productivity.

Dog Litter Law Lacking Teeth

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The animal regulation department is asking the City Council to expand its enforcement powers and make a new dog litter law's potential bite as powerful as its touted bark.

Animal control officers currently must observe the offense firsthand before issuing a citation. They may not act on a citizen complaint alone. So far, no citations have been written since the new law went into effect Jan. 1, said department General Manager Robert Rush.

A council committee is expected shortly to recommend that the law be amended to allow the officers to issue citations on the word of a citizen. The new law requires owners to clean up their pets' droppings or face fines of up to $25.

TODAY'S EDITORIAL:

'Sin Tax' Out Of Order

TAX PAYING is no pleasure for anyone, but that doesn't mean the pain is evenly distributed. Despite periodic attempts by Congress to eliminate discrimination from the tax code, inequities are forever popping up. These days, it is the two-income family that suffers the most, victimized by the so-called "marriage penalty" which extracts significantly higher taxes from a husband and wife who both work than most couples would pay if only one of them worked or if each were single. Sen. Charles McC. Mathias Jr., R-Md., is leading a drive to eliminate the marriage penalty by giving couples a choice between filing jointly or separately as though single. Although his bill did not get far last year, Mathias plans to try again—and he believes growing public awareness of the problem will help focus congressional attention on it.

WHAT MAKES the penalty so onerous is the fact that more than half the married couples filing joint returns each year are now two-earner families, and that majority is increasing steadily as more and more women enter the labor market. This is a social and economic revolution which the government has been agonizingly slow to acknowledge. The basic structure of the present income tax laws, which favors one-earner married couples, dates back to 1948 when 80 percent of all households were comprised of husband-and-wife families. In an overwhelming majority of families, the husband was the sole wage-earner. A lot has changed since those days. But the tax code bias hasn't.

CONGRESS ACTED in 1969 to correct tax discrimination against single persons, but it has failed to address the marriage penalty problem. The penalty hits nearly all families where the second wage-earner contributes one-fifth or more of the total income, but it is steeped for couples with more or less equal income.

For income earned in 1977, for example, a couple earning $15,000 apiece paid $1,013 more than its members would have singly. A married man earning $10,200 with a spouse earning $6,200 paid $262 more in taxes in 1977 than they would have filing as singles.

A reform is clearly overdue, not only as a matter of equity but for moral reasons as well.

In a society which purports to honor and encourage marriage—as opposed to the increasing cohabitation between unmarrieds—the present tax structure deserves the epithet it has received, i.e., a "sin tax subsidy."

ONE MAN'S OPINION

Ah Steer, Or Bull?

ROSALYNN CARTER, it turns out, was photographed at separate political rallies with both the Rev. Jim Jones, the alleged mass murderer of Jonestown, and with John Gacy, the alleged mass murderer of Chicago. The moral is that you'll meet some unusual characters if you hang around political rallies.

Question of the Month: If President Carter is so concerned about human rights abroad, why didn't he make freedom for the mainland Chinese a condition of normalizing relations with Red China?

Vicious Circle: In Point Pleasant, N.J., burglars took to reading obituaries so they'd know where potential victims would be. Then the police started reading the obits so they'd know where the burglars would be.

Next, the burglars will be reading the obits again so they'll know where the police will be...

WITH A BUDGET that calls for federal spending of $9,667 for every family of four in America, you have to give President Carter credit for being able to call it a "lean and austere" proposal without smiling more than he usually does.

A $29 billion deficit may be his idea of "a budget that is good for the American people" but to me it sounds a whole lot like what Ol' Dad used to say when he came at me with a dose of castor oil.

Holmes Alexander:

Sermon-ettes On The Mount

WASHINGTON—"How come everybody calls us Democrats the War Party?" complained President Jimmy Carter who'd gone up the mountain to communicate with Presidents past.

"The last thing I want to do is turn up as an ally of either Russia or China, but that's the way it's headed."

"Blame it on Barry Goldwater," came James Madison's voice from the firmament. "I didn't want to be the first Revolutionary postwar President but those war hawks like Clay and Calhoun, pushed me into the War of 1812."

"Barry Goldwater wants us to maintain our national honor at whatever cost."

"But blame it on Goldwater," was the advice that came from a red-headed spirit that appeared momentarily from a cloud over Monticello. "One war hawk's as good as another as an excuse for fighting."

"PRESIDENT WASHINGTON warned us to be always prepared for war, and we might never have to fight one."

"That's what the ultra-Americans are saying about me," groaned Carter.

"Well, by the Eternal, why didn't you move on Castro while the Cuban military forces were in Africa?" demanded the Tennessee tone of Andrew Jackson. "Action first, explanations afterwards—that was my way. It takes all kinds of men to be President."

Carter spoke up again. "President Washington also warned us against entangling alliances. How did I ever get so entangled? There's Russia and China. There's Sadat and Begin. There's the Shah of Iran and Ian Smith of Rhodesia."

"THEN I'VE GOT this invasion of illegal immigrants. I ought to execute them, but what kind of born-again Baptist would that be?"

"My name's James Polk," said an invisible personality. "Something in me as a Democrat drove me to make war with Mexico, and I greatly enlarged our country. But all I wanted to be was a one-term Peace President."

"There's a curse upon our heads," said a professor-President named Woodrow Wilson. "I sent General Pershing on a punitive expedition to Mexico. Then I broke my election promises by joining World War I."

"I even sent an expeditionary force into Russia to put down the rebellious against tyranny. Imagine—three wars by a peace-loving Presbyterian President."

"That's nothing," broke in the inventor of the Fireside Chat. "I broke solemn pledges to the mothers of America about sending their sons to fight foreign wars. I got involved in a two-front war which was no concern to America."

"We are not masters of our fates," intoned the sad voice of John Kennedy. "I tried to insure reelection by sending military advisors to South Vietnam, but the American troops there not only died by the thousands, but the American spirit died at home."

Grumbled LBJ: "I had to go down in history as the only American President to lose a war."

"You didn't beat me to the title by much," said

He never did convince me that that brand of medicine was good for me, either.

In trying, as always, to please everybody, President Carter wound up pleasing hardly anyone. Believe it or not, there are folks like Sen. Ted Kennedy—who would like to defeat Carter in 1980—who profess to believe that the President is being too stingy with the next generation's dollars.

The best way to help the poor folks—not to mention the middleclass taxpayers—is to control inflation. A $29 billion deficit and a budget of $531.6 billion won't do it.

A zero deficit and a 10 percent cut in federal spending plans, to about $460 billion, just might. It'd be worth a try.

From the Quote Wrack: "I believe if we were down here on an annual basis, we would tend to become more like professional politicians and not have the communication we have with the folks back home."—Texas House Speaker Bill Clayton, saying he has changed "180 degrees" from his former support of annual legislative sessions.

"Somehow," says My Neighbor Twice Removed, home after a weary day at work. "I can't feel sorry for a farmer who is taking a Winter vacation by driving a warm air-conditioned tractor halfway across the country, burning tax-exempt gasoline and pulling a mobile home with all the comforts of a hotel!"

CARROLL McDONALD, newly translated from its competitor to head municipally owned Lubbock Power and Light, says he has run into no surprises in his new job.

There is a pause on the other end of the telephone line and then McDonald adds, "except that there are some darn good people over here and LP&L is making money."

He knew that would bring a chuckle from me. As one who always has believed that competition between LP&L and Southwestern Public Service Co. is good for the people, I used to talk with McDonald frequently when he was the local manager for SWPS.

McDONALD NEVER could be convinced that LP&L was the money-maker that City Hall claimed it was.

"But I've looked at the published figures and at the books," he now says, "and they match."

He also says he now agrees that LP&L is good for Lubbock either for putting profits into the general fund of the City or (as I believe) for keeping electric rates from going higher.

Rates charged by SWPS outside Lubbock now have leaptfrogged ahead of the rates here, he points out.

McDonald was in the real estate business here for a while after leaving SWPS and before answering the call from LP&L. He jumped from one good utility to another good one.

James J. Kilpatrick:

Public Propaganda Broadcasting

WASHINGTON—Some hard thinking needs to be done, in Congress, in corporate offices, and within the Corporation for Public Broadcasting (CPB) itself, on the whole business of editorial responsibility for the programs the corporation sponsors.

An uneasy feeling will not go away that nobody is in charge of the store. The issue is important. The CPB has a budget this year of $119.2 million in tax funds. It is a fair assumption that ever larger appropriations will be sought in coming years.

The Carnegie Commission on the Future of Public Broadcasting is expected to make some expensive recommendations toward that end in a full-dress report next month. From the time the corporation was established more than ten years ago, many observers—both liberal and conservative observers—have been troubled by fundamental questions.

THEY ARE the same kind of questions that have been raised about federal involvement in the writing of social science textbooks and the making of grants to individual poets and playwrights. What business does our government have in the broadcasting business?

Until quite recently, such appropriations were widely regarded as beyond the scope of the federal government. Now these outlays seem to be growing. It's time for some fresh concern about whether we are drifting.

These reflections are prompted in part by Reed Irvine's running feud with the CPB. Irvine is the editor and moving spirit of Accuracy in Media.

A COUPLE OF months ago, he delivered a powerful broadside against the corporation for its part in financing a series of 13 documentaries produced by WGBH in Boston.

In Irvine's view, three of the 13 programs were "uncontestably Marxist propaganda." Three others, as he saw them, supported Marxist themes that capitalism is inherently bad.

Four of the remaining seven, he contended, also were slanted journalism. Irvine protested bitterly at what he perceived as an abuse of the requirement for objectivity and balance.

New Irvine is the prototype of the man who won a reputation as an even-tempered fellow by staying mad.

In my judgment, Irvine was quite right. The film amounted to very nearly pure propaganda.

Except for two minutes of mild exceptions and reservations, the program was one long, rapturous rave review for the "charismatic leadership of Fidel Castro" and the "young idealists of democracy and freedom" who couldn't think of a better way of life" than revolution fashioned.

The WGBH series was financed by $500,000 in tax funds, $250,000 from the Polaroid Corporation and $475,000 in foundation grants. Once the contract was signed with WGBH, none of the grantees had anything more to do.

THE CPB DOES not screen the productions it sponsors. The corporations and foundations merely put up the money. The films are broadcast through the Public Broadcasting Service, but neither the PBS nor its 280 affiliated stations have any control over content.

Editorially speaking, nobody but the producer is responsible for anything—and the producer is beyond anybody's reach.

The CPB's position is that balance and objectivity are sound principles, but documentaries get dull if they try to be wholly balanced. Government officials ought not to control content.

This would be censorship, in violation of First Amendment freedoms. The best course is to contract with reputable producers, and to leave them alone. And so on.

I don't know the answer. But I was burned up by that Cuba film, and I suspect my liberal friends, if they had viewed a publicly financed film extolling Chile or South Africa, would have felt precisely the same way.

Harry Truman. "But I blame the Korean liasco on MacArthur."

"I move that this war-making convention adjourn," said the senior Democrat. "Jimmy Carter's got more peace conferences to hold and then he may have a war to fight with Armed Forces that have gone co-ed.

"At least none of us warlike Democrats ever let sex raise its ugly head with the Star Spangled Banner."

Loan Arranger Wins Showroom Showdown

IF YOU ARE among the millions of Americans planning to buy a new car in '79, your decisions will be enormously complicated by surging auto prices, record high interest rates and longer-term loans. And the complications can cost you hundreds of dollars.

Just in the past five years, interest costs on auto loans have more than doubled—and this category now ranks with fuel as the third largest car expense (after depreciation and insurance).

(1) Longer-term auto financing is a way of life these days, with 25 to 38 percent of direct and indirect auto loans via banks now in the three to five-year category, an American Bankers Assn. survey discloses.

(2) The longer your auto loan (or loan for any other purpose), the greater your total costs, even assuming equal interest rates for the different loan durations, with a five-year loan five times as costly as a one-year contract.

(3) THE LONGER your loan, the higher the annual interest rate also is likely to be, with four-year borrowing rates 1/4 percent above rates for three-year loans and five-year terms 1/2 percent higher than the 36-month levels.

(4) You must figure in the cost of the interest you lose on your cash down payment for a car, as well as the interest you pay on the loan to determine your true expenses.

(5) You must also factor in an expected inflation rate during the term of your loan. And the longer your loan, the more your estimate on the inflation rate will be a rank guess.

To calculate your costs and select the best terms will be defiantly difficult—and don't underestimate this.

BUT ASSUMING you buy a typical $6,000 car this year, below is the least you can expect to pay if you make a $2,000 down payment and finance the remaining $4,000.

* On a one-year loan at the 10.76 percent annual rate in effect during the ABA's survey, your monthly payments would be $352.06. Your total interest would be $236.95.

* On a three-year loan at 10.77 percent, the figures are $130.52 per month; $698.71 in total interest.

* On a four-year loan at a rate of 11.15 percent, the monthly payment comes to $103.67; total interest, to $976.34.

* For five years at 11.26 percent, monthly payment costs come to $87.49; total interest, to $1,249.35. This is $249.87 annually, almost $13 a year more than the one-year loan cost.

* NOR ARE YOUR buying costs over at this point, for you are forfeiting interest on your $2,000 down payment (or on the $2,000 your old car would bring).

Even if you had kept it in a savings account returning you only 7 percent annual interest (and Lightly Speaking...

When a man isn't smart enough to come in out of the rain, five will get you ten he's probably playing golf.

From Dickey Data: The people who worry most about automobile emission standards weren't around when the horse was the principal means of transportation.

you can get much more than this now), that's an additional $140 for 12 months; $450 for three years; $700 for four years; $805 for five years.

Your true auto-buying cost of money, therefore, adds up to about $377 for a one-year loan, but more than $2,054 for five years—some $411 a year.

And all these figures assume zero inflation a laughable assumption indeed! Just consider what happens if you assume a more realistic—and yet conservative—inflation rate increase of 7 percent in the next five years. Assuming this 7 percent rate also simplifies your calculations on interest lost.

At the 7 percent inflation rate, your true interest paid for the five-year loan—in dollars adjusted for inflation—drops to just $315 from $1,249.

The reason is that the $87.49 monthly repayment declines to $86.97 the second month, $86.46 the third month, etc.

Interest "lost" is reduced to nothing, for your $805 interest "lost" is wiped out in five years. (It will take $2.8 five years from now to buy what $2,000 buys today.) Your TOTAL "interest" is $315, an annual rate of 1.5 percent—really "cheap" money.

WHEN INFLATION hits the 9.4 percent rate, your 11 1/4 percent borrowing becomes "free." But by then, you won't get 11 1/4 percent loan; you'll have to pay much, much more.

If you borrow then, and the inflation rate recedes in the coming five years, your true costs will remain high.

The longer your auto loan, the higher your costs become a any rate—and the better your guessing must be to get the best deal. You're facing a "statistical smorgasbord" of figures, and you must pick with care.

It's always less expensive to buy for cash if you can discipline yourself to save, regularly, what the monthly loan repayments would have been.

New Yorker's Collection Consists Of Old Autographed Bricks

By JULES LOH
PEEKSKILL, N.Y. (AP) — One spring morning a decade ago Ray Chase, spading his garden, turned up an old brick. Tossing it aside, he noticed the lettering on it: "Peekskill No. 1."

"For several days the brick nagged at me," he recalled. "I couldn't get it out of my head."

"I brought it inside and washed it off. I kept going back to it, handling it. Finally I took it to a local historian and found out it was made here in town about the turn of the century."

That was the start. Now Ray Chase's collection of bricks numbers 827, his collection of new friends nearly as large and his store of historical footnotes and brickmaking lore rich and growing.

Brickmakers the nation over, the world over, it seems, found it fashionable to autograph their work in a conspicuous place, like right on top, long before that practice became a status gimmick among the makers of T-shirts, neckties and jeans. One brick in the Chase collection (circa 1900) is proudly etched "O.S.P." which stands for Oklahoma State Prison. Another manufactory of the same era, in Oregon, so there would be no mistake, added the slogan "Convict Made."

Such information about the origins of bricks does a reading tour of Ray Chase's basement yard, data from A to Z. To wit: Adamole, Bickerstaff, Camargo, Diablo, Excelsior, Fiske, Griffen, Hosket, Ivemore, Jova, Kline, Laclède, Mexico, Navarro, Olympia, Palsley, Q.R. Glass, Resist, Sycamore, Timoney, United, Valentine, Waco, XXX, Young. Well, from A to Y.

"Aren't bricks fascinating," Chase said, gazing lovingly at the close-packed shelves lining his basement wall.

"Look at this one. It was put out by a doctor in Kansas named S. J. Crumline who was trying to stamp out tuberculosis. The bricks were used in Abilene around 1900. There aren't many left."

Etched in the brick: "Don't Spit On The Sidewalk."

"When they tore down the house where I lived as a boy I found a brick dated 1914, the year I was born. That brick means something to me, even though it's not particularly rare."

"The Hudson Valley is a good source of bricks," Chase said. "I like to put on boots and walk the riverbank, searching. "At one time there were 54 brick factories across the river in Haverstraw. They took out so much clay that one day half the town slid in the river. Killed 10 people."

"Each brick represents a friend, or an experience. When someone gives me a brick, that's the one that goes in my collection even if a similar brick in better shape turns up later."

Venezuela's Relations With Trinidad Showing Signs Of Strain

By LINDSAY MACKOON

PORT-OF-SPAIN, Trinidad (UPI) — At a time when oil-rich Venezuela is trying to extend its influence in the English-speaking Caribbean with calls for Third World unity and economic cooperation, its relations with the neighboring island of Trinidad are showing signs of severe strain.

The most recent diplomatic thorn involves the detention by Venezuelan authorities of 50 Trinidad fishermen and a five-man oil drilling crew in the Gulf of Paria. The fishermen were accused of poaching in Venezuelan waters, held for several hours, and released minus 25 nets industrial development, tourism, and air services.

Trinidad's cries of Venezuelan imperialism go back to a dispute between Guyana, another former British colony, and Venezuela seven years ago. Venezuela claimed more than half of Guyana's national territory, an issue which has dragged on for a century. Trinidad's Williams intervened at the height of the tension between the South American neighbors, leading to the signing of the Port-of-Spain protocol, an agreement to shelve the issue for 12 years.

Guyana-Venezuela relations, however, have improved tremendously since. Venezuela feeds its mills with Guyana aluminum, and the government receives economic assistance from Caracas.

Many island governments point to the $10 million Venezuelan loan to rescue LIAT, the airline linking the islands, which is owned jointly by the Caribbean nations and Venezuela's $10 million contribution to the Barbados-based Caribbean Development Bank as proof of good intentions.

Through these and other projects, Venezuela will continue to wield influence in the Caribbean.

Commentary

confiscated by the Venezuelan coast guard.

The Trinidad-Tobago government issued a communique saying it was "clear" the barge and fishing boats were in Trinidad's territorial waters and later expressed "serious concern" over the actions to Venezuelan Ambassador Abdel Kadar Marquez.

Claims by both nations to the Gulf of Paria — rich in oil and shrimp — have been the root of differences over the past 40 years. Separating the countries by about seven miles, it annually yields one million pounds of shrimp and earns Trinidad $4 million in foreign exchange.

Trinidad Prime Minister Eric Williams accused Venezuela of harboring imperialistic designs for the Caribbean, an issue which stirred a major controversy in the region. "I warn you that the recolonization of the Caribbean is in full swing," Williams said.

Last year, Venezuelan President Carlo Andres Perez traveled to the former Dutch colony of Surinam, Jamaica, Guyana, and Barbados mainly to discuss economic and trade issues. But before leaving office he probably won't get to Trinidad, considered the seat of the English-speaking Caribbean's most powerful government because of its oil wealth.

Like Venezuela, Trinidad is an oil exporting country. Unlike its neighbor, it is not a member of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries although it charges OPEC prices for its exports.

Venezuela's influence has spread throughout the Caribbean, and most island leaders have visited Caracas as guests of the Venezuelan president over the past few years.

Perez said last year, "We shall never condition our assistance to any self-interest," and Prime Minister Eric Gairy of Grenada called Venezuela "a very friendly country," adding, "I have no apprehensions of its intentions of recolonization."

Most of the countries and territories dotting the Caribbean Sea — from the Bahamas to Guyana — have established economic links with Caracas relating to

Big-City Elections, Disputes Worry Democrats

By JONATHAN WOLMAN
WASHINGTON (AP) — In-party warfare may break out among big-city Democrats in 1979 with a flurry of off-year mayoral elections. Contests in Philadelphia, Boston and Cleveland are worth watching closely.

Party officials, both in and out of the White House, fear that mayoral candidates will bloody one another, thus weakening big-city party organizations on the eve of the 1980 presidential campaign.

"The big cities will be crucial to the Democratic ticket in 1980," says Jane Hartley, an aide to President Carter. "It would be especially nice to have unity in places like Philadelphia, Cleveland and Boston."

Incumbent mayors Dennis Kucinich of Cleveland and Kevin White of Boston will face tough campaigns if they decide to seek re-election. Their stiffest challenges could come from within the Democratic party.

In Philadelphia, where Frank Rizzo lost in an effort to change the city charter so he could run again, Democratic rivals are lining up for a shot at his job.

Democratic incumbents are expected to win in Chicago, Houston, San Francisco, Baltimore and Denver — cities where party officials expect orderly Election Day organizing that will set a solid stage for the Democrats' White House efforts next year.

Despite declining populations in big, Democratic-run cities, they remain a bulwark of support for the party's national ticket. Democrats find it difficult to win close presidential races unless Republican suburban and rural strength is offset with big-city pluralities.

Textbook examples were Pennsylvania and Ohio in 1976, where President Carter earned his victories with large-city pluralities. In 1980, both states will have Republican governors, and Democrats must look to city officials for organization strength.

In Cleveland and Philadelphia, there may be more blood than unity.

Kucinich is a maverick Democrat, strongly opposed by local party leaders. They are trying to convince former Lt. Gov. Richard Celeste to take on Kucinich in the fall election.

In Philadelphia, where Rizzo has held control since 1972, traditional liberal-conservative rivalries loom in the May primary. But this year, prominent blacks are running too, creating more divisions than usual.

Two whites are among the top contenders: former U.S. Rep. William Green, a liberal, and city council member Albert Gaudiosi, a former ally of the archconservative Rizzo. Black candidates include former Urban League head Charles Bowser and state Rep. Hardy Williams.

To complicate matters, council member Ethel Allen is reportedly considering a campaign as a Republican. Few black women have ever run under a big-city OOP banner.

In Boston, Kevin White is expected to seek a fourth term. That would mean a rough fight among White, state Sen. Joseph Timilty and David Finnegan, president of the School Committee.

Timilty is a political ally of President Carter, but Carter probably won't get involved since White heads the Conference of Democratic Mayors, a group organized specifically to help get out the vote for the party's national ticket.

In Chicago, Michael Bilandic, heir to Richard Daley, is completing his first full term this spring. He faces a challenge from fellow Democrat Jane Byrne, a longtime Daley loyalist who fell from grace in City Hall after she accused Bilandic of improper involvement in aiding a boost in city taxi rates.

Acting mayor Dianne Feinstein is expected to win the San Francisco mayoralty left vacant by the assassination of George Moscone.

In Houston, Jim McConn has announced he'll seek a second term in the mayor's job. Thus far, he is unopposed.

Mayor Robert Folsom of Dallas also is seeking a second term, with city council members John Leonard, Dick Smith and Willie Cothrum all reportedly weighing a possible challenge in the April race.

In San Antonio, Lila Cockrell seeks a third term in April. Her only announced opponent is former Mayor Charles Becker. Though five persons on the 11-member city council are Mexican-Americans, none is expected to run.

William McNichols is expected to seek a third term in Denver, where he'll face challenges from two Democrats — Patricia Muffic, former head of the Consumer Fraud Office, and Garry Mitchell, a lobbyist for the Colorado ski industry.

McNichols is president of the U.S. Conference of Mayors.

Scientists Find Answer To Nitrite Problem

EAST LANSING, Mich. (UPI) — If people can learn to like bacon with a faintly metallic taste and a slightly peaked appearance, Michigan State University researchers may have the answer to the nitrite problem.

The reported link between nitrites and cancer has caused increasing concern among consumers, leading to a federal proposal that soon could sharply reduce the amount of the chemical allowed in bacon.

Recent and more ominous studies have raised the possibility of a total ban on the substance, which is the only available means of protecting against botulism in cured meats.

James Price and Ken Stevenson of the MSU food science department are conducting experiments that indicate potassium sorbate — a preservative used in cheese and bread — could serve the same antibotulism function as nitrite.

Despite a U.S. Agriculture Department ban on its use in meats, the MSU scientists insist the substance is perfectly safe for human consumption.

"In other studies, potassium sorbate was fed to test animals in large doses comprising 5 to 10 percent of their daily diet," Stevenson said.

"The only major side effect noted in the animals was weight loss, and that was because the chemical didn't taste good in high concentrations," he said.

Price said use of the substance in meat has been banned as a "misleading practice" because it blocks normal spoilage.

Although it kills bacillus and other microorganisms in the same way as nitrite, potassium sorbate lacks some of that chemical's other desirable qualities, such as preventing discoloration and rancidity.

If officials allow reduced amounts of nitrite to be used in conjunction with potassium sorbate, the problem would be solved, Price said. Otherwise, he said, consumers had better prepare for some changes.

Bacon treated with potassium sorbate alone discolors readily, he said.

"Within a few days you have bacon which looks funny ... brown or grey," Price said. In three weeks or less it turns green.

Price said potassium sorbate also does not prevent oxidation of fats like nitrite does, so the bacon becomes rancid after 60 days.

Bacon treated with potassium sorbate has "a mild, almost non-objectionable metallic-type taste," he said.

"Not everybody can pick it up," he added.

"Bacon will just look and taste a little different and will have to be eaten a little sooner after processing or purchase," Price said.

New Recruits Scarce For Commando Unit

BONN, West Germany (AP) — The West German police commando unit that carried out the spectacular rescue of hijack hostages 15 months ago in Somalia is having trouble attracting new recruits.

One reason given is that they get the same pay as policemen in less-hazardous jobs.

The lightning raid that freed 86 hostages from a Lufthansa airliner at the airport in Mogadishu, Somalia's capital, was the baptism of fire for the commando force formed after the 1972 Munich Olympics massacre of 17 Israeli athletes by Palestinian guerrillas.

In the commando raid in Somalia, three of the four Palestinian hijackers were killed and the fourth seriously wounded in the surprise attack that won the commandos tributes for bravery. But the fame proved fleeting.

A plan to nearly double the police strike force to 320 men soon after Mogadishu had to be abandoned because of a lack of volunteers from the Federal Border Guard and state police forces, the Interior Ministry says.

Now the 180-man group known as GSG-9 from its German initials can't even find enough replacements for veteran commandos rotating to other law enforcement jobs after five or six years' duty, a ministry spokesman told The Associated Press.

To plug the manpower gaps, the ministry has decided to recruit ex-soldiers of the West German army, give them a 10-month crash course in police techniques and then assign them to commando duty. "It's the only possibility," a ministry spokesman said. "All other efforts to recruit sufficient qualified candidates from the border guard and state police haven't been successful."

But the plan has run into stiff opposition.

The West German Policemen's Union opposes the switch in recruitment policy, claiming it would harm the image of police and lead to a "remilitarization" of the 22,000-member Federal Border Guard. The conservative opposition has called for a parliamentary review.

The criticism stems from the bad name acquired by police who were integrated into the nationwide security system with the Nazi SS (Elite Guard) during Hitler's Third Reich.

The border guard was formed in 1951 while West Germany was still demilitarized after World War II and was forbidden to have an army. According to the constitution, the border guard must be a police force. In practice, however, it appears military in many respects although it doesn't have any heavy weapons.

Volunteers hand-picked for physical stamina and emotional stability are sent to a commando school in suburban Bonn for training in hand-to-hand combat, small arms, explosives, aerial assault and other skills.

A nine-week basic training course is followed by 13 weeks of special training, including courses in psychology and law.

The commandos have been used only once at home to combat terrorists. But they are kept in readiness by serving as bodyguards and escorts for government officials and visiting dignitaries.

They are on permanent alert and can be ready to go in 15 minutes. They were given a quick course on how to storm a Boeing 737 without hurting passengers before flying to Mogadishu to liberate the hostages.

Lack of special incentive pay and the extremely demanding standards appear to be primary causes of the recruitment problem.

GSG-9 commandos earn about $15,000 a year, or about the same as colleagues in less-demanding police jobs. Many candidates are said to wash out of the training program, but no figures have been made public.

The commandos who make it are tenaciously loyal. Despite attempts by German enterprises to lure the commandos into jobs as private bodyguards for twice the money, the ministry claims not one GSG-9 member has quit.

PFLP Chief Explains Hijackings

DAMASCUS, Syria (UPI) — Why sanction air hijackings and why were they later abandoned?

The question was put directly to Dr. George Habash, the intense and determined Marxist who heads the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, which, prior to 1972, claimed responsibility for numerous air hijackings and raids on airports.

"This is a long story, but I don't know why you in the West made it seem as if the PFLP only specializes in this hijacking business," Habash said in a rare interview last Friday.

The interview took place in Damascus, where Habash is attending the 14th session of the Palestine National Council, the highest policy-making body of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

The hijackings, he said, were justified by the world community's failure to take cognizance of the Palestinian question.

With the creation of Israel, he said, "we were dismissed like sheep from our homes and told to live in tents."

At first, Habash said, the Palestinians relied on world opinion for relief. "But, sorry to say, 20 years passed and our people remained as they were."

"When we started our armed struggle, we were really under the full conviction that we had the right to use all means of armed struggle in order to make our cause well-known at the world level."

"And that is why we took this line of hijacking."

After 1972, Habash said, "We felt this tactic was being misunderstood and that is why we said, 'OK, let's leave this line — our cause is so well-known now — and let's concentrate on our real strategy which is a peoples' warfare strategy.'"

Habash also voiced his suspicions of a Palestinian rapprochement with Jordan's King Hussein and said he was ready to cooperate with the opposition in Iran despite ideological differences.

In his view, King Hussein is only biding his time, waiting for a better offer from the United States and his rejection of Camp David is only temporary.

"King Hussein cannot accept Camp David because it gives him nothing, it gives him nothing at all," Habash said.

"That is why we are afraid that this new relation between the PLO and Jordan will be a mere step along the way to an American settlement of the Palestinian problem."

"THE LARGEST MANUFACTURER OF AUTOMATIC WATER CONDITIONERS IN THE WORLD"

By LEROY POPE
NEW YORK (UPI) — The American hotel and motel industry needs about $2.5

billion a year in fresh capital for the next 20 years and there seems little way to raise it in the United States.

Consequently, foreign ownership of hotels and motels is bound to increase sharply, says William T. Sommer, economist for Lavenoth & Horwath, management consultants to the lodging industry.

The need for big new investment in hotels and motels could lead to construction of anywhere from 1.3 million to 4.2 million new rooms in the coming two decades, depending on how fast financing can be obtained, according to a Lavenoth & Horwath survey.

A steady annual rise of 4 to 5 percent in business and pleasure travel in the United States will produce the big demand for new accommodations, Sommer said. Even if the net construction increase in 20 years is only about 1.4 million rooms, which is Sommer's personal guess, that would be a gain of 80 percent over present capacity.

The severe depression of the real estate investment trust industry is a prime reason why domestic capital will not be available in sufficient amounts to meet the lodging industry's needs, he said. The pension funds and the insurance companies are not likely to provide the money either, he added.

Surplus foreign money is one and possibly the most practical source of the money, he said.

"There is no way to determine how much foreign firms already have invested in the U.S. lodging industry, but the amount certainly is growing. Japanese investment in Hawaii and on the west coast has jumped in the past five years. At least two U.S. hotel chains, Travelodge and Knott, are owned by an English company. The Dunley group now is a subsidiary of Aer Lingus, the Irish airline. Les Hotels of Britain, France's Novotel, Italy's CIGA, and at least one Arab company are already operating here. A South African firm and even a chain based in communist Hungary are looking for American lodging investments."

Novotel, which made its first investment in Minneapolis, has just announced it will pour $150 million into 19 hotels in the United States in gateway cities having direct airline connections with Europe.

Sommer said there is no reason for the industry not to welcome the big foreign investments but there is one drawback. The flow of foreign money isn't enough because the Europeans, Japanese and Arabs usually are looking for equity (ownership) investments and what really is needed is a flood of loans.

Perhaps, he said, the favorable trend in foreign exchange rates and the prospect that interest rates in the United States will stay relatively high may make the foreigners more interested in debt investment in the U.S. lodging industry.

Sommer is confident about the long range growth outlook for travel in the United States despite the Commerce Department's report that travel slumped 5 percent in the first quarter of 1978. He blamed that on the severe winter last year and said the Commerce Department's studies actually project a steady long range gain.

Sommer also said reduced airfares will more than offset any drop in travel caused by rising gasoline prices. Airline travel has been growing by 9 percent a year while automobile travel increases by 4 percent a year or less.

Investors Keep Eye On Fed

By CHET CURRIER
NEW YORK (AP) — Unlike most of the fads that come and go in the investment world, the weekly practice of Federal Reserve-watching has become an enduring ritual on Wall Street.

Ever since the credit-crunch of 1974, through good times and not-so-good, the Fed's Thursday afternoon reports on monetary conditions have been the subject of intense scrutiny by investors.

The object of this activity is to look for clues to the future direction of inflation and interest rates, as influenced by the Fed's efforts to slow down or speed up the growth of the money supply.

In the current economic picture, slow or no growth is considered "good news" because it theoretically means that the supply of fuel for inflation — excess money in circulation — is being reduced.

Private economists and experts at the Fed alike repeatedly point out that it is risky, if not downright foolish, to try to read much significance into weekly fluctuations in the preliminary money-supply figures. But the enthusiasm of stock and bond traders for these statistics shows no sign of flagging.

That was vividly demonstrated by a chain of events that began with the data the Fed issued on Jan. 11, listing the basic measure of the money supply — known as M1 — as unchanged for the latest reporting week. The many traders who had been expecting a sharp rise in M1 took the news as a stunning and pleasant surprise.

In late trading that day on the Pacific Stock Exchange, and in all the markets the next morning, the reaction was swift and clear: Stock and bond prices and the dollar rallied, and gold prices tumbled. On Friday, Jan. 12, the Dow Jones industrial average showed a gain of 8.23 points and closed at a three-month high.

But a week later — last Thursday — the Fed substantially revised the M1 figure for that week to show a $1.7 billion increase.

And even before the change was made, a number of voices had been raised questioning the usefulness and reliability of the data.

As John W. Schulz, an analyst at the firm of Breen Murray, Foster Securities noted, "It is impossible to escape the impression that the Fed has miles of leeway" in calculating what figures it will report.

There is seasonal adjustment of the statistics, and subsequent revision, but that's not all. Schulz cited a report from New York's Morgan Guaranty Trust that observed:

"The M1 figure computed weekly by the Fed staff is a wholly artificial estimate of the currency and demand deposits, holdings of the non-bank public — arrived at by a massive adjustment of deposit data.

"To a reasonably accurate figure for 'gross' demand deposits at Federal Reserve member banks, the statisticians have to add what is literally a guess at the gross deposits at non-member banks."

Minneapolis High School Students Learn Lesson About Marriage

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — David Weets believes he's found a good way to teach a hard lesson. He's pairing off his students and assigning marriage.

Weets, of Kerkhoven, Wis., a sociology teacher at Kerkhoven-Murdoch-Sunberg High School, said the "simulated wedding experience" isn't meant to advocate or condemn marriage as an institution.

"The purpose is to show as closely as possible some of the problem areas," he said. "You have to plan for marriage."

While parents showed initial concern, the class of 15 seniors — plus an observer to even it out — found the experience enlightening, Weets said.

"They all said they never knew there was so much work to getting married. Others said they didn't know it took so much money."

As part of the lesson, Weets had students prepare for a mock ceremony, including addressing invitations, hiring a photographer and buying a ring.

To face economic realities, the students had to shop for cars from cooperating local businessmen, arrange insurance coverage, rent an apartment and try to find a job.

In addition, the students invented a "wheel of misfortune," Weets said. "It gave you the kind of problems you run into in marriage. For example, your wife comes home and damages the car fender. Or there's a mistake in the check book. Or hospital bills. Those things have to be resolved."

To simulate the child-rearing aspects of marriage, Weets had the students take care of potted plants.

Weets, 35, who has been married 14 years, said "the thing that impressed me most was the way the students went about it in such an adult way."

In fact, the students were so mature that at least one "bridegroom" came down with a real case of pre-wedding jitters, he said.

Indonesia Not Expected To Renew China Ties

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — Indonesia is not expected to follow soon in the footsteps of the United States in renewing normal diplomatic relations with China, diplomatic sources say. This is likely to mean that nearby Singapore, with a 75 percent Chinese population, won't either.

Indonesia suspended diplomatic ties with Peking in 1967 in the aftermath of a Communist coup attempt two years earlier. The Indonesians accused the Chinese of complicity in the attempt.

One senior Western diplomat said Chinese-Indonesian normalization seems at least two years away. He added that Jakarta would want to see what becomes of Taiwan, seat of the Nationalist Chinese government.

Indonesia and Singapore are the only members of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations to lack formal ties with Peking. Malaysia exchanged envoys with China in 1974 and Thailand and the Philippines did so in 1976. Singapore's official position is that it won't open an embassy in Peking until Indonesia does. Singapore became a nation in 1965 and never had diplomatic relations with mainland China.

The big obstacle to normalization by Indonesia is the status of 3.8 million ethnic Chinese here. About one million of them hold Chinese citizenship and an estimated 800,000 are stateless.

"Totoks," which means "of pure blood," are Chinese who arrived relatively recently. Most speak Chinese and are culturally oriented toward China. "Peranakan" Chinese were born in Indonesia, speak its language and are partly integrated.

In December 1966, the government urged the Chinese with Indonesian citizenship to adopt Indonesian names. Officials say almost 250,000 did so in the next 2 1/2 years.

Indonesia's Chinese control a large part of the economy. One banker said about two-thirds of retail trade is in their hands. A diplomat estimated that Chinese control 80 percent of the private capital.

Chinese businessmen are understood to have close financial ties to the political leadership which is largely in military hands.

The total population is more than 140 million, about 90 percent of it at least nominally Moslem. Some Moslems envy the unassimilated Chinese their wealth and question their patriotism. Racial conflict has been common.

The worst violence followed the coup attempt on Sept. 30, 1965, which was supported by what was then one of the world's largest Communist Parties, claiming three million members and drawing inspiration from Chairman Mao Tse-tung.

After Maj. Gen. Suharto, who is now president, rallied the army and quelled the uprising, there was an anti-Communist and anti-Chinese bloodbath that left more than 200,000 persons dead and 100,000 behind bars. Many of the victims were Chinese. The Communist Party is banned and some of its former leaders live in China.

Diplomatic relations deteriorated until they were officially suspended by Jakarta in October 1967. Indonesia continued to recognize the mainland as China, but allowed Taiwan to open a trade office here.

Indonesia and China seemed ready to patch things up several times in recent years, especially after the new regime took over in Peking. Jakarta pulled back at the last minute at least twice due to Peking's recognition of Indonesian Communists, diplomatic sources said.

Adam Malik, the former foreign minister who is now vice president, said early in 1977 that relations would be restored after general elections that May. But Chairman Hua Kuo-feng greeted Indonesian Communist Party Secretary Jusuf Adji in Peking on May 18, less than two weeks after the election. Indonesia opted out.

President Suharto said last March that preparations were under way to improve relations. In what was almost a replay of the incident a year earlier, an Indonesian trade delegation in Peking for the May Day celebrations saw Adji standing in the same celebrity group as Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping.

Teng's visits to neighboring Malaysia and Thailand in November also irritated officials in Jakarta. Teng eyed, in Indonesian eyes, by not renouncing support for communist guerrillas in Malaysia and Thailand.

In both cases Teng said aid for the insurgents was a matter between the Communist Party of China and local communist movements, not to be confused with state-to-state relations between governments. Although it was simply a restatement of long-established Chinese policy, Indonesia would not accept Teng's explanation.

Foreign Minister Nechir Kusumaditja said last month a thorough registration of all Chinese in the country must precede normalization.

Diplomatic sources said the Cabinet has decided on methods to be used in offering quick naturalization and this machinery is to be put in motion in the next few months.

French Eye Cooperation With NATO

PARIS (UPI) — Shifting international tensions and a steady buildup of Soviet nuclear forces in Central Europe are prompting France to seek closer cooperation with the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Twelve years after withdrawing its own forces from NATO and ordering the U.S. military to leave its soil as an alleged threat to its sovereignty, France is fretting about a possible diminution of the American military presence in Europe.

Far from condemning U.S. armament efforts, French leaders are worried about President Carter's decision not to build the B1 super-bomber and the neutron bomb. And they are sizing up apprehensively the repercussions of the prospective U.S.-Soviet SALT II disarmament accord on America's military posture in Europe.

The late President Charles de Gaulle's hopes of being repaid in kind by Moscow for taking France out of integrated NATO commands and ordering U.S. bases out of France have withered on the vine.

Moscow politely ignored de Gaulle's dream of a French-led Western Europe and the Soviet realm living in harmony "from the Atlantic to the Urals."

The rumble of Soviet tanks invading Czechoslovakia in 1968 shattered de Gaulle's dream of a harmonious concert of European nations. The ceaseless buildup of Soviet forces along the Central European front has prompted French governments since de Gaulle's fall in 1969 to take a fresh look at France's isolated position.

Closer cooperation between the French military and NATO began slowly under de Gaulle's successor, President Georges Pompidou, and has accelerated under President Valery Giscard d'Estaing.

No French leader plans to take France back into NATO. The orthodox Gaullists and the Communists have enough clout between them to block any return to the pre-1966 subordination of the French military establishment to the Americans.

But most French civilian and military officials have long been aware that France could not stay out of a major world conflict considering its key geopolitical location and widespread interests.

French and NATO general staffs compare notes with growing frequency. France participates in the early warning system and has recently joined computerized Allied exchanges of urgent information and consultation.

French armed forces chief of staff Gen. Guy Mery, a Giscard appointee, has declared that in the event of a Soviet attack French forces stationed in West Germany would almost certainly join battle on the side of the Allies right from the beginning.

Mery's statement appeared to reflect simple common sense. The French know a general Soviet attack westward would hardly stop at the French frontier. Such an attack would of necessity also hit positions held by French forces, which would certainly not get prior notice from Moscow to pack up and withdraw from West Germany, the French assert.

Mery's statement brought sharp protests from Moscow and the Soviet-aligned French Communist party.

But other French military leaders and officials in recent months have been almost equally outspoken. A growing number of military commentators and members of parliament have expressed fears that the huge superiority of Soviet conventional forces in Europe pose a threat of a sudden thrust westward and that Moscow, expecting a no-holds-barred conflict with China, might try to blitz western Europe to seize its hostage.

Productivity May Be Answer To U.S. Problems

By JOHN CUNIFF
NEW YORK (AP) — Productivity. "It is the most neglected factor in basic economic textbooks and economic policy," said William Freund, the economist. And yet, it may be the answer to America's problems.

Merely by raising annual productivity growth to what it was a decade ago, he said, 16 million jobs could be created in the 1980s. Inflation could be restrained. Per capita income could be raised 48 percent.

The beauty of productivity increases is that everyone benefits and nobody loses. Factories are modernized, jobs upgraded, working conditions improved, incomes raised. We know how to do it; we haven't.

 In the past decade, the growth in U.S. productivity, or the efficiency with which goods and services are produced, has shrunk to 1.8 percent from 3.3 percent. It is now one of the lowest in the world.

In announcing his anti-inflation program President Carter made only a passing reference to it. And Professors McConnell and Samuelson, the most popular economic textbook authors, "give it very short shrift," said Freund.

For these and other reasons, the New York Stock Exchange, where Freund is chief economist, decided to publish a scholarly contribution to economic literature: "Reaching a Higher Standard of Living."

The most important finding, said Freund in an interview, is that productivity increases produce a much greater restraint on inflation, the number one economic problem, than has been commonly understood.

And the major proposal: a national commitment to higher productivity, including lower taxes, investment credits, research incentives, better education, fewer government regulations, and steps to risk-taking.

 Included also is a recommendation that saving, from whence comes the capital for investments and economic expansion, be made more rewarding, a suggestion coinciding with one made simultaneously by thrift groups.

The latter, represented by the U.S. League of Savings Associations, point out that the U.S. income tax system encourages debt, by making interest deductible, and penalizes savings by taxing interest earned.
 Combined, the many reasons that contribute to lowered productivity have forced millions of people onto a treadmill, where they trudge toward an illusion of better times, the Exchange study indicates.

Apart from periodic ups and downs, it observes, real income has remained almost flat since 1967, despite large increases in money wages. The total gain 1967-1977: $2.50 a week, pretax.

It's no coincidence that inflation raged during the very same years that productivity growth slipped. Just as a gain in productivity growth can sharply restrain inflation, Freund notes that a decline in the productivity growth rate can spur inflation. It's a two-way catalyst.

But why did the growth rate decline so abruptly and persistently? Professor John Kendrick of George Washington University, former Commerce Department chief economist, contributes a detailed paper to the study.

Slower technological progress, resulting from a slowdown in capital formation (savings) that left less money for research and development, accounted for 25 percent of the decline, Kendrick estimates.

A slowdown of "labor and capital mobility" accounted for another 25 percent, the study states. What does it mean? That labor and capital moved too slowly in response to changing supply-demand conditions.

Again, what does it mean? Simply that money and capital movement was restrained by restrictive union and company practices, by government regulations, by ignorance of where opportunities existed, and by costs.

Other factors were involved in less significant ways. A deterioration of land quality, for example, made a small contribution to the decline. Agriculture productivity slipped; mine productivity actually declined.

To correct the situation, to get money flowing into industry, requires a national commitment, the Exchange says, one that "will require a high degree of cooperation among government, management and labor."

Only through long-run increases in productivity growth, it says, can the economy generate more jobs, less inflation and a higher living standard. There is no other way, it says.

"Unfortunately," says William Batten, chairman, in prefacing the study, "long-entrenched Keynesian economics has left productivity out of economic analysis for several generations."

Keynes, he observes, was more concerned with making jobs than with measuring their effectiveness, and so during the Great Depression totally non-productive jobs were deemed worthwhile.

"Today, however, the challenge is to find ways to place job seekers into jobs which provide adequate supplies of services produced as efficiently as possible. Productivity has come of age," he writes.

Chicago-Based Group Gives Aid To Artists

CHICAGO (UPI) — In these days of maze-like bureaucracies, Tem Horwitz says artists often must know more than how to sculpt and paint to be successful in their pursuit of creativity.

For instance, he says, it can pay for artists to know how to write effective grant applications, to be aware of the rules governing tax exemptions, and to know how to keep account books suitable for the Internal Revenue Service.

Horwitz, 34, is director of the Chicago-based Lawyers for the Creative Arts, one of a growing number of organizations seeking to help artists wade through the proliferation of legalese and bureaucratize they face in trying to mold masterpieces.

"For artists living in this time and place there is a bureaucratic maze which often is hard for them to master," Horwitz said in an interview. "Many are unprepared for it because most art schools don't give them any preparation. Many have kept themselves removed from these kinds of concerns and tend to be naive about them."

Horwitz's non-profit organization with its $30,000 budget funded through private and government grants has 150 volunteer lawyers who are willing to give free legal advice to fledgling artists.

"We get questions on all types of problems," Horwitz said. "Some art organizations want to become non-profit organizations and gain tax exemption and that often is complex. Attorneys are needed."

"We help artists with contract problems, get copyrights to protect their work, collect money from galleries."

"We give advice on how to make grant applications."

"Many try to write zippy things and tend to be obscure about their project. Straightforward writing is better."

"We also can tell them where to call. Some may brood over a problem for months where we can solve it with one quick call."

The organization has volunteer certified public accountants willing to help artistic groups set up books and establish an accounting system, a necessity in dealing with the IRS.

Horwitz said increased public monies for the arts and requirements which in many cases make funds available only to non-profit art groups have made it more important for fledgling artists to have access to legal help.

He said the organization last year aided artists with 1,000 queries and 170 cases were referred to volunteer attorneys for further help. Some artists have established continued relationships with volunteer attorneys and in some instances attorneys have received works of art to hang in their office for their efforts, he said.

Free legal help generally will be given by the attorneys to artists with less than $6,000 annual income or organizations with less than a $100,000 budget.

The organization was formed in 1972 and similar groups exist in New York and San Francisco, Horwitz said. About 25 other groups recently have been formed or are in the planning stages across the country and art schools are becoming more aware of the bureaucratic problems faced by artists, Horwitz said.

"We help many artists just starting out," he said. "In 10 years many may be prominent on the American art scene."

In the last century, Horwitz said, artists took on the image of outsiders too preoccupied with their art to worry about worldly things.

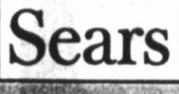

"I think artists always have had to deal with these things, only they have to more now than ever. In the Renaissance many artists were businessmen, statesmen and had their patron backers."

Pills Being Used As VD Treatment

ATLANTA (AP) — Pills for the treatment of gonorrhea have been given equal status to the more common treatment of two penicillin shots, the national Center for Disease Control has announced.

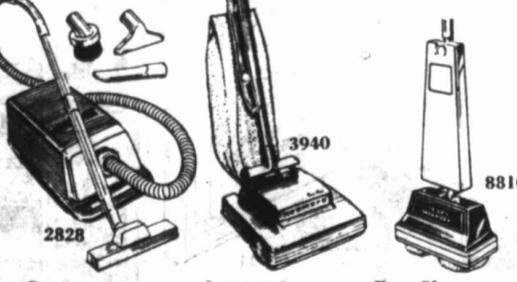

The pills are not new, but previously the injections were listed as "the drug of choice," said Dr. Paul Weisner, director of the CDC's Venereal Disease Control Division. Gonorrhea strikes about a million persons annually in the United States. Weisner said he hopes acceptance of the pill — rather than painful shots — will remove barriers to early treatment and prevent the sterility the disease causes in hundreds of thousands of women.

City Police Capture Suspects

By JACK DOUGLAS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Police say they possibly have solved three robberies, seven rapes and about 30 burglaries as the result of separate arrests made Tuesday.

Acting on confidential information, police went to a 43rd Street residence about 9 p.m. and arrested two men and two females suspected of being involved in the Monday night robbery of a 7-Eleven Store at 4201 Boston Ave.

The men, ages 20 and 21, and a 21-year-old woman were being held in the county jail this morning. A 17-year-old girl taken into custody at the Lubbock home was released pending filing of formal charges because she is pregnant.

Reports show that two men, one dressed in a dress, entered the convenience store about 11:40 p.m. Monday and robbed the attendant of $50 cash, some change and three cartons of cigarettes.

Further investigation indicates the women arrested Tuesday were in the bandits' getaway car, police say. A 16-year-old girl has also been named as an accomplice in the holdup, but had not been taken into custody early today.

Investigators say the two men are also suspects in the robbery of the Town and Country Food Store at 40th Street and Avenue A on Jan. 16, and the Jan. 11 holdup of the Reddi-Mart at 1601 66th St.

The convenience store robbery resulted in the loss of $100 cash and the holdup five days earlier netted bandits more than $300 in loot.

In a separate incident, a 26-year-old city employee was booked into the county jail Tuesday night in connection with seven rapes and two rape attempts since last October.

Police Information Officer Bill Morgan said the man, who works at the city garage, was arrested at the police station after being questioned about rapes occurring Jan. 10, 15, 17, 18, and Dec. 4 and 12 and Oct. 26 of last year.

The man also is a suspect in reported attempted rapes on Jan. 13.

Also Tuesday, police arrested two Lubbock men who are believed to be involved with almost 30 house burglaries dating back to January 1978.

Officers received a call to a house in the 3100-block of Avenue V about 9:30 a.m. Tuesday and spotted a Mexican-American man and his white male companion leaving the residence.

The Mexican-American suspect was caught by pursuing officers just moments later about 150 feet from the house in the backyard of a residence in the 2100-block of 32nd Street. Officers found his alleged companion about 40 minutes later hiding in a dumpster in the 2100-block of 31st Street.

Police recovered items believed stolen from the Avenue V residence and a subsequent search of a home in the 2200-block of 27th Street turned up a "large amount" of property reported stolen, including goods taken in a house burglary last January.

Police Lt. Bill Rutherford said today eight break-ins had been cleared by the Tuesday morning arrests. He also said that number could climb to more than 30 before the investigation is over.

Local Man Charged With Retaliation

A 31-year-old Lubbock man was being held this morning in the county jail in lieu of $100,000 for allegedly threatening a witness in a case.

Raul Davila of 5014 Ave. G was arrested at 4:30 p.m. Tuesday in the 100-block of N. Uvalde Ave.

Bond was set by Justice of the Peace Wayne LeCroy after Davila was charged with retaliation.

Davila is suspected of threatening a witness in an ongoing case. He had been charged Jan. 4 with possession of marijuana.

Woman Back At Firehouse

IOWA CITY, Iowa (UPI) — Firefighter Linda Eaton reported to work today and said she would not compromise in her battle to breast-feed her son at the firehouse — a practice which has already resulted in a one-day suspension.

"The way things are being done makes it all physically draining," she said. "I plan to try this like any other day."

Miss Eaton said she regretted being forced to resort to court action over the dispute.

"I guess it had to be worked this way since it couldn't be worked out between us," she said. "It's unfortunate it has to be this way."

Miss Eaton said she feels strongly about her decision to go against department policy and nurse her son. She was suspended for one day Monday after breast feeding the child during her lunch break.

Plaintiffs Conclude Case In At-Large Voting Trial

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

With one rebuttal witness and a witness testifying on appropriate attorney's fees, the plaintiffs in the federal court suit challenging Lubbock's at-large method of electing city officials concluded their case this morning.

Final arguments are tentatively scheduled to begin at 9:30 a.m. March 22. Briefs from plaintiffs and intervenors are to be filed Feb. 9. The city will submit briefs on Feb. 26 and rebuttal briefs are due on March 5.

Mary Louise Ruiz, who works for the Slaton City Attorney, testified today that minorities have been elected to the Slaton City Council from single-member districts.

Slaton's Ward 4, which she said was about 60 percent Mexican-American and 40 percent black, has elected either a black or Mexican-American council member for the past 10 years.

Currently a black woman represents the ward on the council.

Lubbock attorney Warren Goss testified that the six attorneys for the plaintiffs were entitled to $75 to $100 an hour for work outside the court and between $800 and $900 a day per attorney for each full day in court.

Goss cited the complexity and sophistication of the case in justifying the fees and noted all attorneys except one are working for free unless attorneys' fees are awarded.

Goss also said a controversial case such as this could harm the private practice of the attorneys involved.

"The case is extremely undesirable," he said.

However, Travis Shelton, who is representing the City of Lubbock, noted most attorneys going to the outset of the case "if it's going to be unpopular or if they're not going to get paid."

In testimony Tuesday, three political science professors appearing as expert witnesses in federal court clashed over the effect of the at-large election method on minority representation.

Two of the experts, testifying on behalf of the City of Lubbock in the case to determine whether council members should be elected from single-member districts, said the at-large elections have had little impact.

However, the expert for the plaintiffs in the class-action suit repeated his assertion that the at-large elections were a major hindrance to minority representation on the council.

Witnesses for each side accused the other of using "inappropriate" statistical tests to support their conclusions.

U.S. District Judge Halbert O. Woodward said "one witness says this, another says 'ain't so. That's not meaningful to me in fact — it's not going to change any minds."

The city completed its case with the experts' testimony and the plaintiffs immediately rebutted their conclusions with their own witness who previously had testified.

Dr. Susan McManus, a University of Houston political science professor, said the method of electing council members has a "very, very insignificant effect" on minority representation on the council.

The under-representation of minorities according to population on the council is "far worse" in some cities with single-member districts, than in cities with at-large elections, she said.

Minorities in some cities which changed from at-large voting to single-member districts have fared worse, Dr. McManus said. In San Antonio where the election method was changed, the council has "an awful time getting anything done because of extreme polarization" on the council, she said. "You can't just measure minority representation in terms of color or sex," Dr. McManus said. "You must measure representation in terms of the governmental council's responsiveness."

One way to measure that responsiveness is through the distribution of city services, she said. After examining city exhibits detailing the service distribution in Lubbock, she concluded the city has been responsive to minority needs.

"There is overwhelming evidence of responsiveness of this government to minorities," she said.

One reason for that responsiveness may be because Lubbock is in the category of small cities which are growing and have higher income and educational levels — a category more "supportive of minorities and of policies for those less fortunate," Dr. McManus said.

The construction of single-member districts in a city is "very difficult," she said, because "no matter how you draw it, whatever group is excluded will charge gerrymandering."

"And it is gerrymandering, if you're going to guarantee the election of a certain group," she said.

Plaintiffs' expert Dr. Charles Johnson of Texas A&M criticized Dr. McManus' conclusions about responsiveness of Lubbock's city government, saying the facts and figures concerning the distribution of city services don't show whether the city was responding to any needs with the services.

"Many of the responses of the city are symbolic and usually come after some kind of confrontation," Johnson reiterated.

Johnson also challenged Dr. McManus' data concerning cities which switched from one election system to another. "She is implying before and after, but there is no before data," he said.

The political scientist also defended "lumping" of blacks and Mexican-Americans together in his study.

"The two racial groups represent a 'community of interest sharing similar histories of discrimination and similar policy priorities,'" he said.

He also said he stands by his conclusion that racially polarized voting exists in Lubbock, with blacks and Mexican-Americans showing a preference for minority candidates over white candidates.

Court Rules Oilmen Deserve Hearing

AUSTIN (AP) — Two Houston oilmen who claimed their lawyer and a rich friend cheated them out of a share of the Webb County gas boom should have their day in court, the Texas Supreme Court ruled today.

Without writing an opinion, the court upheld a Waco Court of Civil Appeals decision ordering a trial of a suit filed by Wilbur L. Ginther and Howard C. Martin against Henry J.N. Taub.

A Laredo trial judge threw out the case without a full trial, ruling for Taub and lawyer William A. McNaughton.

Ginther and Martin had been partners since the 1930s and were successful drillers in the 1950s and 1960s. They acquired a 2,716-acre Webb County oil and gas lease, called the Alexander Lease, but fell on hard times and couldn't make their $1 an acre rental payment in 1972.

Taub, after seeing confidential geological information on the lease, agreed to make the payment and couldn't make their $1 an acre rental payment in 1972.

Later, Ginther and Martin accepted Chapter XI bankruptcy upon the advice of McNaughton, who was also Taub's lawyer and sometime business partner. McNaughton handled their dealings with the bankruptcy court.

When the 1973 lease payment came due, Taub again paid it and acquired a half interest. The appeals court said McNaughton's application for bankruptcy court approval of the assignment said the oilmen didn't have any cash to make the lease payment. But, it said, bankruptcy court records showed Ginther and Martin actually had $13,680.

Filed in 140th District Court, the suit is against Jesse Alvin Glenn, 32, of 6263 Elgin, No. 285, who was recently indicted for attempted murder in the case.

It also names Bobby Ball, Mac Lewis and Eli Masso as owners and operators of the club, the Eight-Second Ride at 5203 34th St., and Timothy Joseph Crawley of 2518 22nd St. as president of K.E. Inc., the parent corporation of the club.

The shooting victim, Joe Clayton Dodson, was shot in the left side of the head, the suit says, and as a result is paralyzed on his right side and is unable to speak.

The suit alleges Dodson went to the club with two friends, "and after being there a short while they were ordered to leave by the defendant, Jesse Alvin Glenn, and after they had walked out of the premises of said club, the said Jesse Alvin Glenn took a .357 magnum pistol out from behind the counter where it was normally kept at said club, and followed the plaintiff out of said premises, and without any justifiable cause or reason, shot the plaintiff in the head."

Club officials told police after the shooting that Dodson had pulled a knife on Glenn; police reported, however, that the man was unarmed.

The suit was filed by Monte and Mary Beth Dodson on behalf of their son, who has been hospitalized since the shooting.

It reports medical expenses so far of $30,000 and predicts at least $50,000 more in medical expenses.

People Block Takeover Of Church Data

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — About 400 persons jammed into the main offices of the Worldwide Church of God this morning, preventing sheriff's deputies from escorting a court-appointed receiver to take control of the church's records and finances.

No violence was reported.

Armed with a court order issued Tuesday, the deputies tried to escort an aide to the receiver, retired Superior Court Judge Steven Weisman, into the church's main offices at the college.

While church members sang "Onward Christian Soldiers," a small contingent of deputies tried three times to get through locked doors about 8 a.m. The deputies tried a key, but it didn't work.

Several thousand church members were on the campus, including several hundred inside the main office. They locked the doors from the inside.

Superior Court Judge Julius Title had appointed Weisman as receiver after a suit by several church members and the state attorney general's office. The suit alleged that church founder Herbert Armstrong and his chief aide, Stanley Rader, siphoned off millions of dollars of church revenues for personal use.

Tahoka Family Files Suit In Shooting

Truce Halts Border Duel

A-J News Services
TEL AVIV, Israel — Israel's Cabinet took no action today on compromise proposals to nail down a peace treaty with Egypt, but asked for more talks with U.S. Middle East troubleshooter Alfred Atherton.

The Cabinet went into special session as a cease-fire took hold between Palestinian gunners in Lebanon and Israel, ending five days of rocket and artillery exchanges in which the Israelis began hammering civilian areas in a switch in policy.

Prime Minister Menachem Begin emerged from the two hour and 20 minute Cabinet meeting to say only that more talks were needed between Atherton and the Israeli negotiation team to narrow the gap toward concluding a peace treaty with Egypt.

The talks have been in progress a week. Atherton met privately immediately after the session with Eliahu Ben-Eliassar, the head of the negotiating team. A full round of talks will be held later today.

But they said Israeli gunners slackened their week-long artillery barrage on Palestinian and Lebanese leftist positions in south Lebanon. The shelling was the most intense since the Israeli invasion of the area 10 months ago.

The cease-fire went into effect at 6 a.m. (11 p.m. Tuesday), the spokesman said, bring to a halt the exchanges between Israeli and Palestinian gunners.

In Beirut, residents said Israeli long-range gunners swapped fire with Palestinian guerrillas today, but the intensity of the barrage "was much less than that of the weekend."

He has spent most of his political career as a Democrat, including three terms as governor of Texas, the only elective office he has held.

He was indicted on bribery charges in an offshoot of the Watergate scandal, stood trial and was acquitted in April 1975.

As a Democrat, Connally was regarded as firmly in the party's conservative wing.

He switched to the Republican Party on May 2, 1973, when the Watergate scandal had the GOP on a downward slide in popularity polls.

the bus and knocked it from the tracks, said the driver, Janice Renbarger.

Gov. Edwin Edwards planned to declare the town a disaster area today and National Guardsmen were called in to clear debris.

Under increasingly cloudy skies today, Lubbock temperatures this afternoon were expected to climb to the mid-50s before cooling to the low 30s tonight, the National Weather Service said.

Illinois residents were denied a respite from 10 days of severe winter weather when a new storm brought up to 3 inches of snow.

West and southwesterly winds of 10 to 15 mph today were expected to shift to a southerly direction tonight at 5 to 10 mph.

Forecasters today call for warming weather throughout the state except the extreme eastern portions still affected by the recent cold front. Temperatures should range from the low 40s in Northeast Texas to the 60s in the southern part of the state, the NWS said.

Increasing cloudiness is expected over West Texas while clear to partly cloudy skies should remain over much of the rest of the state.

$1 Billion In Coal Illegally Mined

WASHINGTON (AP) — As much as $1 billion worth of coal may have been illegally mined in the East — if the pattern suspected in Alabama is any indication, according to Bureau of Land Management officials.

Tom DeRocco, spokesman for the agency's Eastern States Office, said Tuesday the bureau is investigating 30 cases in Alabama in which coal owned by the federal government may have been illegally mined. The agency has no way yet of knowing if the problem exists elsewhere, he said. But he added that estimates found that if the Alabama pattern holds, as much as $1 billion worth of coal may have been illegally mined.

Davis, Girlfriend Plan Ski Weekend In Colorado

FORT WORTH (AP) — Millionaire businessman Cullen Davis is trading one "cold damp place" for another, now that the murder-for-hire charges against him have been temporarily set aside by a hung jury.

Davis, 45, spent five months in jail after being arrested last August on charges he plotted the death of District Judge Joe Eidson, the presiding judge over his divorce proceedings with his estranged wife, Priscilla.

But with Monday's mistrial declaration in Houston, Davis and his blonde girlfriend, Karen Master, are planning a ski trip of several days to Aspen, Colo. His stay of several months in the Houston lock-up was "the worst experience of my life," he said.

The state said it will press for a new trial against Davis because "good conscience demands" it, Tarrant County District Attorney Tim Curry said Tuesday.

But Davis' immediate concern after returning from Colorado will be the resumption in February of his hotly contested divorce trial with his estranged wife, Priscilla.

Davis and Miss Master have said they plan to marry once his divorce to Priscilla is final.

Many were calling the mistrial a victory for the defense; others were declaring it a triumph for the prosecution.

Curry said he has to chalk it up for the defense.

"The point is that as long as the defense can keep a man out of jail, they're winning. The tactics will now be to delay," he said.

Davis' chief defense counsel, Richard "Racehorse" Haynes, is so successful he can "pick and choose" when to go to trial again, the Fort Worth prosecutor added.

Curry said he personally would like to go to court with another Davis trial within six months, but doubts that is realistic.

"It boils down to whether a man of his resources and his money should get a free ride in the system. I don't think he should. I think the law ought to apply to everyone, regardless. I don't think it does at this point," Curry said.

At the same time, defense attorneys were saying the mistrial was the best they could have done under the circumstances. They said critical comments by trial judge Wallace Moore against Haynes influenced jurors against Davis.

"They may be friends out of court, but Moore's disgust for Haynes' conduct during the trial has been clear, and that's got to hurt," one defense lawyer said.

A World War II fighter pilot, the chain-smoking, no-nonsense judge was in several dogfights with Haynes throughout the three-month trial, which Moore described the same way Davis viewed the Harris County Jail.

"It was the worst experience of my life," Moore said.

Interjecting frequent challenges to the relevancy of Haynes' prolonged questioning of most witnesses, Moore at one time asked:

"Is this another rabbit-trail question?" Moore, who had predicted three weeks of testimony, was bitter when it stretched to 10. He said there was no excuse.

"When it takes five minutes for a five-second question, and that question is asked over and over, the system is being abused," Moore said.

Asked if the trial had strained his friendship with Haynes, Moore said quickly: "No."

But after a pause, he added: "But I don't care if it did."

Davis isn't the only one planning to get away for a brief vacation.

Moore, who said they can count him out when they're looking for someone to preside over a new trial, vowed to go sailing "far away" to conquer his exhaustion.

The trial, he said, had a fundamental effect on him. "It killed me," he said.

Trustees Discuss Possible Boundary Change Request

By JEFF SOUTH

Avalanche-Journal Staff
If school trustees don't increase the enrollment of downtown Lubbock High, they are inviting the federal government to order citywide busing, a parents' group said Tuesday.

School officials, however, said the argument could be turned around: proposing to change the Lubbock High attendance zone might reopen the desegregation case, allow the U.S. Justice Department to push again for systemwide integration and further delay voter-approved construction of new southside schools.

Those possible legal consequences, explained school board president Charles Waters, are why the board has been meeting with its attorney in closed session.

Waters said his colleagues will have to weigh the possible legal disadvantages Thursday morning when they publicly decide whether to ask U.S. District Judge Halbert O. Woodward for permission to redraw Lubbock High attendance lines.

Lubbock High parents asked the school board last summer to boost their school's enrollment so that Lubbock High could compete better in athletics and academics with other Class AAAA schools, such as Monterey and Coronado.

If attendance lines are not changed, Lubbock High enrollment is projected to drop to 1,138 students by 1981. In contrast, Coronado would have 2,016 and Monterey, 2,064, a staff report says.

Moreover, while Lubbock High would be more than 60 percent priority, its neighbors to the west and southwest would remain predominantly white.

School administrators have drafted numerous possibilities for moving parts of the Coronado and Monterey attendance zones into the Lubbock High attendance area. The proposals would affect only future high school students, not those presently in attendance.

The school board has been studying the Lubbock High matter with school attorneys in closed-door "executive sessions." Some citizens have criticized the board's secrecy, and on Tuesday "Lubbockites for Lubbock High" issued a news release warning the board not to deny their request.

"Coronado High School is badly overcrowded, and Monterey High School soon will be. Lubbock High School is nearly half empty," the organization's statement said.

"The U.S. Constitution prevents a school district from promoting segregation and one remedy, as we all know, is busing."

"If the school board refuses to assign additional students to Lubbock High School, it is proof that this board is still promoting segregation and this board will, in all probability, cause every student in Lubbock to be bused."

Waters declined comment on the group's statement. However, the school board president Tuesday disclosed the reasons for closed meetings on Lubbock High.

The board is not meeting secretly to discuss the political consequences of an attendance line change, Waters said. Although there are "strong feelings" among the three schools involved, such opinions are being considered separately, he said.

The board has met in closed session because of the "implications beyond changing the boundaries. There may be legal ramifications far beyond the mere bolstering of the Lubbock High enrollment," Waters said.

If the board proposes an attendance zone change, the proposal must go to Judge Woodward. Waters said Woodward then would seek comment from the Justice Department, the plaintiff in the school system's decade-old desegregation case.

"I have no idea what the Justice Department might do — no one does. But it's possible that, according to its past record, the Justice Department would come in with a counterproposal that would involve desegregating the entire system," Waters said.

The Justice Department already is asking the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals to order systemwide desegregation here, he noted. Assuming the school district gets by this time, the department could use the Lubbock High case to make yet another 5th Circuit request, Waters said.

"Whether any of this will happen, we don't know. But we do know it can happen — it is a possibility," he said.

School attorney Charles Cobb has been briefing the board on what the Justice Department might do, Waters said. If that speculation should get back to the department, it "could be very detrimental," Waters said.

Moreover, he said that as long as the Justice Department ties up the desegregation case, "there may be a further delay in the sale of bonds" approved by voters two years ago. The bonds, part of the present 5th Circuit case, are meant to fund new southside schools and systemwide improvements.

"I don't mean to sound overly pessimistic. I'm not saying the Lubbock High boundary lines cannot be changed," Waters said. "But there are possible legal ramifications, and these things must be weighed."

Waters said similar factors were weighed when the board proposed the $11.9 million building program in 1977. "We knew there was a risk that the Justice Department might step in," but the board decided the need for new facilities and improvements was worth the gamble, he said.

"I honestly don't know what the board will do" on the Lubbock High matter, Waters said.

The board meets at 7:15 a.m. Thursday in the Lubbock Independent School District administration building, 1828 19th St. A representative from each of the three high schools involved is expected to address the board.

The board also will consider a request by the local chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union that the district ban school-sponsored prayer. Cobb has briefed the board on that subject, too.

Sources said Cobb's interpretation of the law "may give us (the board) some flexibility" because court rulings have been contradictory. The ACLU, however, says the law is clear and has threatened to sue the board if school trustees allow organized prayer.

Also Thursday, the board will consider administrators' recommendation that students be allowed to take up to 10 religious holidays per year without being penalized. The holidays must be approved by the pupil personnel director.

The proposed policy is in response to a request by the Worldwide Church of God.

Subaru Recalls '77, '78 Models

WASHINGTON (AP) — Subaru of America, Inc., has announced that it is recalling 170,000 of its 1977 and 1978 vehicles because of unsatisfactory engine operation and the possibility of the throttle valve sticking in cold weather.

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration said Subaru has found that the defects may occur in vehicles driven at high speed for several hours in temperatures 20 degrees below zero.

The agency said the problems are caused by condensed water vapor drawn from the crankcase ventilation system, which freezes in the carburetor. The agency said it knew of no accidents or injuries caused by the defects.

Although the problem occurs only in cold weather, Subaru said it would recall all 1977 and 1978 models to improve the affected systems.

Recall letters are being sent to owners.

Doctor Believes Chronic Pain Originates, Ends In Head

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Chronic pain is one of the most perplexing medical problems because it can be caused by virtually anything and a Baltimore psychiatrist says it often either originates or ends up in a patient's head.

Dr. Nelson Hendler, who operates a pain and stress clinic for chronic sufferers, believes there is more of a link between physical and psychological maladies than many doctors are willing to recognize.

"The head bone is connected to the rest of the body," he said.

And he says many people — whether they endure chronic headaches, muscle pains or internal aches — all too often are simply not believed by their physicians.

"Unfortunately, a lot of people are relegated to the purgatory of psychosomatic pain," said Hendler, an assistant professor of psychiatry at Johns Hopkins University.

One of the maladies often unrecognized by doctors because it does not show up in measurable form on X-rays or test results is the headache, said Hendler.

"Headaches are the worst-treated disorder in the United States," he said. "There's no such thing as just a headache. There are about 60 types."

Headaches often are triggered by physical problems that people do not link with the pain, said Hendler. He noted, for example, that certain types of foods — or even sexual intercourse — have been diagnosed as sources of headaches.

Headaches and other chronic pain, such as muscle spasms, also can often be manifestations of stress, Hendler said. "This is the most stressful society man has ever lived in," he said.

As with other disorders, chronic pain, whatever its form, must be properly diagnosed to be treated, but diagnosis is not easy since the cause of the pain can be "anything from purely physical to purely psychological," Hendler said.

He said finding a cause that defies physical diagnosis requires taking an extensive case history of the patient.

After learning about such things as a patient's work and eating habits, hobbies, sex life, relationships with other people, and daily routines, a profile emerges. "But if you're not a good detective, then the pain might be misdiagnosed," said Hendler.

Once the cause of chronic pain or stress is determined, the condition can be dealt with, but not necessarily cured, the psychiatrist said.

Drugs can be prescribed, he said, but harmful side effects can develop.

"We overuse drugs," said Hendler. "Valium is one of the most overused drugs and has a whole range of deleterious side effects. There must be better ways of dealing with stress than popping a pill or taking a drink."

If physical therapy or drugs do not aid a chronic pain sufferer, applied psychiatry often helps an individual live with the pain, Hendler said.

EXERCISE FOR THE EXECUTIVE MANSION — A moving van arrived at the Governor's Mansion in Austin Tuesday and several possessions of it's newest occupants, Governor and Mrs. Bill Clements, were unloaded; among them a king-sized bed, a queen-sized bed and some clothing. Then one of the movers came of the van carrying an exercycle. Newsmen were not told which member, or members of the executive family would put the "mileage" on the contraption. (AP Laserphoto)

Texan Says Brock Railroaded Detroit Through Committee

By MILLER BONNER
WASHINGTON (AP) — Ask a Republican where to find "Big D" today and he'll point you toward Detroit, not Dallas.

The Michigan city snared the 1980 Republican National Convention Tuesday in a show of "backroom" politics, claimed an angry Texan.

"The decision is a disappointment not only for Dallas and Texas but for the entire Republican Party," spewed Texas committeeman Ernest Angelo Jr. after a heated, 90-minute floor debate and three votes decided the issue in Detroit's favor. The final 95-52 margin made it official.

Earlier, a motion that would have allowed delegates to note their preference in a secret ballot failed 74-72 after a North Carolina committeeman switched his vote and broke a 73-73 deadlock.

"It makes me sick to my stomach that the committee didn't have the guts to go against the chairman," said Angelo.

Angelo said Bill Brock, the RNC chairman, railroaded Detroit through the selection committee in order to fulfill his desire to broaden the GOP's base.

Both Brock and the Texans claimed a secret ballot would have produced a victory for their respective sides.

Although Detroit is in the home state of former president Gerald Ford, several GOP officials said they feared a Dallas convention would give an unfair advantage to Texans John Connally and George Bush as well as Ronald Reagan, who swept the state's 1976 presidential preference primary.

Angelo, the conservative mayor of Midland and a Reagan backer, was joined in his assessment of Dallas' defeat by state GOP chairman Ray Barnhart and, to a lesser degree, by state Sen. Betty Andujar, R-Fort Worth.

Mrs. Andujar, one of seven persons on the selection committee, said the committee was never allowed to vote on Dallas or Detroit during its closed-door sessions. The committee made Detroit a "consensus" selection.

During a floor debate with Barnhart, selection committee vice chairman Ody J. Fish of Wisconsin said every member of the committee was allowed to address the group and if a vote had been taken it would have been "overwhelming and perhaps unanimous with an abstention" for Detroit.

And if Brock, who chaired the selection committee, had brought the issue to a vote?

"I think Monday it would have gone 5-2 for Dallas," said Andujar.

But by Tuesday morning the discussion centered on the logistics of the convention sites and Andujar admitted that Detroit emerged with a slight edge over Dallas due to a larger working space at the convention center, better parking facilities and its ability to meet the RNC's prime date of July 14.

A Dallas convention would have had to be held on Aug. 11, 1980.

CHECK 'OPEN DATING'
WASHINGTON (AP) — Here is a food shopping suggestion from the U.S. Office of Consumer Affairs: "Many perishable items carry 'open dating' — the date by which a product should be sold or used. Check especially dairy products to make sure that the date on the carton shows the product is fresh. You don't want to waste money on spoiled food."

Requested Zoo Site Approved By City

By LISA PAIKOWSKI
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The Parks and Recreation Board Tuesday approved a request by the Lubbock Zoological Society to hold a portion of Yellowhouse Canyon for two years as a proposed site for a zoo.

The board attached the provision that the society present detailed cost estimates and plans before the board decides whether to lease the land for the project.

The society has proposed a three-phase zoological garden to be built in the area of the canyon planned for Lake 8. The garden would be funded by donations, educational and corporate grants.

Board members, however, expressed doubts about the feasibility of the project and the cost estimates presented at the regular monthly meeting by Zoological Society president Skip Crawford.

Crawford estimated a cost of half a million dollars for construction of the first phase of the project with an operating budget of $100,000 a year after completion.

He said the estimates came "from looking at other similar facilities," including the Abilene zoo, which he said has an operating cost of $193,000. He said that those figures include a cost for exotic animals that would not be included in the Lubbock project.

Phase II would be the construction of the cat exhibits and Phase III would consist of other exhibits needing buildings, such as nocturnal animal exhibits.

A water filtration system for the small mammal area would be included in Phase I.

Crawford projected that 50 percent of the operating budget would come from gate receipts and concessions, and the remaining funds would have to be raised.

"The most successful method right now," he said, "is the adopt-an-animal program. Someone maintains an animal or exhibit for a year at a time."

He said that a support survey done by the society showed that 95 percent of those polled want a zoological garden in Lubbock. He added that the society has the endorsement of the City Council and the Chamber of Commerce for the project.

In other business, the board approved a request by four local motorcycle organizations to use Area 7 of the canyon and Mackenzie Park for motorcycle races July 4, 1979.

Members also voted to look again at a preliminary plat bounded by 19th St., Oakridge Ave., 15th Drive and Milwaukee Ave., at the time of annexation, to determine whether the city should ask for dedication of the property below highwater as a park.

The board labeled a request by Southwest Little League for a pee-wee baseball field to be built at Maxey Park.

Salinas To Sponsor Malpractice Measure

State Rep. Froy Salinas announced Tuesday he has filed House Bill 681, which will amend the present act that provides medical malpractice coverage for the medical staff and students to include the Texas Tech University School of Medicine.

The University of Texas and Texas A & M medical schools already are covered by malpractice insurance, something which Salinas said "insures a proper learning environment."

Salinas said he plans to co-sponsor House Bill 168, which would provide compensation for resident physicians for their education and training.

Money for this program would come from the general revenue of the state, according to Salinas, to insure that local taxpayers would not be overburdened by the costly training of medical doctors. Currently, malpractice insurance for residents at teaching hospitals is paid by the hospital from local tax revenues.

Dave Butler, director of community relations for the Health Sciences Center Hospital said the Lubbock County Hospital District fully supports both proposed bills.

"We feel the resident of Lubbock County should not have to bear the expense for training residents who may go elsewhere in the state or even out of the state," Butler said.

Salinas also said that although he will be in Austin for the legislative session, there will be someone in his Lubbock office from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. and 5:30 to 7 p.m. Monday through Friday and from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. on Saturdays.

In addition, there is a 24-hour answering service at 763-4468 for persons who wish to call and leave a message.

The Slim Gourmet

We can't say where fish got its reputation as brain food, but we can tell you that seafood IS a smart idea for calorie counters. If you're looking for a main course that offers the most protein for the fewest calories, few foods beat fish!

A pound of boneless beef rib steak offers only 67 grams of protein, and costs you a whopping 1,800 calories... or more! See how similar amounts of boneless fish compare:

One pound offers:
Codfish .....80 grams .....354 calories
Flounder.....76 grams .....358
Sole .....76 grams .....358
Halibut .....95 .....454
Swordfish.....87 .....535

In cooking fish, keep in mind that each tablespoon of fat or oil adds at least 100 calories. Try these low-fat cooking techniques:

FISH STEAKS BAKED IN MEDITERRANEAN SAUCE
1 lb. halibut or codsteaks
1 tbsp. lemon juice
¼ cup dry white wine
1 small onion, peeled, sliced
16-oz. can tomatoes, undrained
1 clove garlic, peeled
3 or 4 sprigs fresh parsley
1 tsp. dried oregano
salt and pepper to taste

Preheat oven to 450 degrees and set fish aside. Combine remaining ingredients in blender or food processor. With quick on-off turns, process ingredients until tomatoes are coarsely chopped, but not pureed. Pour into a baking dish and place in the oven, uncovered. When sauce begins to bubble, place fish in the cooking sauce, in a single layer. Spoon some of the sauce over the fish. Bake, uncovered, basting frequently with the sauce, until fish flakes easily, about 12 to 16 minutes, depending on thickness. Add water to sauce, if necessary. Makes four servings, about 150 calories each with halibut, 130 calories each with cod.

MARINATED SEASTEAKS, BROILED A LA GRECQUE

1 small onion, peeled, minced
6 or 7 bay leaves
1 tbsp. lemon juice
1 tsp. water
1 lb. cod, halibut or swordfish steaks
2 tps. olive oil or salad oil
Salt and pepper to taste
Sprinkle onion and bay leaves on the bottom of a shallow heat-proof pan with a non-stick finish. Add the lemon juice and water. Place the fish steaks in a single layer. Cover with plastic wrap and refrigerate several hours, turning fish steaks once or twice during the time.

About 20 minutes before dinner time, remove the pan from the refrigerator and turn the steaks again. Brush the surface with 1 teaspoon oil (omit oil for swordfish) and broil 5 to 6 minutes about 3 inches from heat source. Turn, brush with remaining teaspoon of oil and broil an additional 5 to 6 minutes, or until fish flakes easily. Makes four servings, about 120 calories each with cod; about 145 calories each with halibut or swordfish.

ITALIAN BROILED SOLE FILLETS WITH BASIL AND GARLIC

1 lb. fillets of sole (or flounder), fresh or defrosted
2 tps. olive oil (or salad oil)
2 tps. lemon juice
2 cloves garlic, finely chopped
1 tsp. dried basil
salt and pepper to taste

optional: paprika

Arrange fish fillets in a single layer in a non-stick pan just large enough to hold them. Stir oil, lemon juice, garlic and basil together and spread over surface of fish fillets with a spoon. Season to taste. (Sprinkle with paprika, if desired.) Broil, without turning, about 4 inches from heat source. Spoon pan juices over fish every 2 minutes, cook until fish flakes easily, about 6 to 8 minutes, depending on thickness. Makes four servings, about 115 calories each.

TREBLE TROUBLE

LEWES, England (WNS) — Elizabeth Aylward, who used to sing with the Royal Opera Company in London, has retired to a quiet life here but complains that her neighbors make too much noise. Neighbor Adrian Abberley, 40, counters that his wife has had a nervous breakdown because of the din in the star's residence. "We are seeking a court order to silence the sound of so-called music from the Aylward house," he said. "She gives singing lessons day and night, and even television doesn't block out the miserable noises."

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: In your column the other day, you told us the difference between a jackass and a mule. But you didn't go far enough. You should have added that a jackass is also a Democrat. We usually know them by their braying.

Old Mule Skinner

Dear Skinner: The symbol of the Democratic Party is the male donkey — also known as a jackass — which is a far bray from saying that all Democrats are jackasses.

Be advised that the symbol of the Republican Party is the elephant. But that is not to say that all Republicans are thick-skinned, harmless unless provoked, and can be taught to do tricks easily.

DEAR ABBY: My sister and I are widows (in our early 60s) and live in separate houses in a small town. We are congenial, go everywhere together and enjoy each other's company. You might say we're inseparable.

My married daughter lives in another town close by. She says I am in a rut (she is right) — that my sister and I see too much of each other and need to go our separate ways for a while. So my daughter has invited me to take a trip with her to get away from the same old routine — and she doesn't want to include my sister.

I told my daughter I couldn't just up and go on a trip without inviting my sister because she would be hurt, and I couldn't blame her. I know how I would feel if she did that to me.

So, I am on the spot. Should I go with my daughter and hurt my sister, or stay home and hurt my daughter?

Undecided

Dear Undecided: Your daughter may be well-intentioned, but she is putting you on the spot. Perhaps a vacation away from your sister would get you out of a "rut" — but at what a price! As long as you and your sister enjoy each other's company and are congenial, perhaps that "rut" is not such a bad one. Pass up the trip with your daughter. If you were to go, feeling as you do, your conscience would prevent you from enjoying it.

At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK

It's amazing to me how influential advertising is in this country.

Take disco... please. You can't pick up an ad these days without seeing a new product born out of disco fever. There are disco dresses, disco hair, disco suits, disco shoes, disco perfume, disco water beds, disco handbags, disco cars, and disco crackers.

I have asked 600 people of varying ages about disco and have yet to find one who actually dances a la disco.

Where are all these people who must be choreographed right down to the frenzied flex of an elbow, lest they inflict serious pain on one another? Where is that vast population who picks up a stranger to dance, goes out on the floor and proceeds to twirl and spin in complete harmony like they had four size C batteries in their backs?

Everyone talks disco, but who does it? Most dances are like that. I have only my mother's word, but the minuet was more PR than action. How many men do you know who could count, dip, sway, run in a circle, stand toe-to-toe and be devastatingly clever at the same time?

It was the same with the Virginia Reel. Of course, skipping was considerably easier because chewing gum hadn't been invented yet and you didn't have that distraction.

People never got into the "twist" either. Oh, there were a couple of women at parties who looked like they were a corkscrew trying to get a stubborn cork out of the bottle, but they never got the hang of it.

And the "Hustle" always reminded me of an encounter group with rhythm.

The only dancing that ever made sense to me was the do-your-own-thing craze of a few years back. You could groove to the restroom and return and your partner would never know you were gone. No stepping on feet, no apologizing for not bending, no head getting caught in an armpit... just keep time in your own little world.

I suspect there are a lot of closet disco dancers who imagine themselves in a three-piece white suit with a cleft in their chin about three feet deep who dance frenetically in front of the mirror and never sweat.

It's time to come out of the closet and keep the momentum going. If you don't I'm going to get stuck with a pair of disco shoes that have never been anywhere but under a table.

"The facts of the case are not in dispute. It is up to you to decide whether East or West was guilty of negligence in permitting South to make his contract of four spades.

"The bidding is a vital piece of evidence. After North had shown a balanced hand of 13-15 points, South introduced his second suit — with his unbalanced holding, he preferred to play in a suit contract. North showed a preference for spades and South went to game.

"West led his fourth best heart. East won the ace and returned the seven. On this trick South followed with the queen. West took the king and now had to decide whether declarer had started with three hearts and one diamond (he had shown nine cards in the black suits in the auction), or with two cards in each red suit. He decided on the latter and shifted to the queen of diamonds. Declarer was quick to seize the opportunity by covering with dummy's king. East won the ace, but now he had no way to get back to his partner's hand for a heart ruff.

"East maintains that West should have known that South was probably 3-1 in the red suits, for had he been 2-2, he would have rebid three no trump at his third turn instead of four spades. West argues that since virtually all of South's strength was in the black suits, he would bid the same way regardless of his red-suit distribution. Have you reached a verdict?"

"We have, your honor. The major share of the blame lies with East, for there was no way for West to know declarer's distribution.

"Defense is a difficult art, and you should make every effort to solve partner's problems for him. East had the opportunity to direct the defense, but he failed to seize it.

"After winning the first trick with the ace of hearts, East should not return a heart immediately. He should first cash the ace of diamonds!

"When East now returns a heart, it is crystal clear to West that he can do no better than win the king of hearts and continue a third round. East's ruff then defeats the contract."

China's New First Lady Symbolizes Simple Working Woman To Observers

By RICHARD BREEZE
Women's News Service

HONG KONG (WNS) — China's first lady likes to pedal to work on a sturdy bicycle like millions of other Chinese workers.

Cheng Ming, a well-informed Chinese-language magazine here, has partially lifted the curtain shielding the private life of Chairman Hua Kuo-Feng. In its latest issue the monthly said that China's first lady is 47 and that she is known by her maiden name as Han Chih-Chun.

It added that Mrs. Hua — an equally correct form of address — works at a state-run organization for export of light industrial products. She is apparently concerned with personnel matters.

These details were disclosed as wives of Chinese officials moved into the international spotlight for the first time by traveling abroad with their husbands. This development is another sure sign of the new, relaxed mood in Peking.

Cheng Ming's report described the first lady as being — like her husband — tall and sturdy. She wore her black hair trimmed short and had large, expressive eyes under thick eyebrows.

Until recently the Huas lived in a relatively modest two-story dwelling in one of the hutongs (lanes) in the eastern sector of the capital. Neighbors would sometimes see Mrs. Hua, trim in her gray uniform, pedaling energetically off to her job. Her husband used a large, chauffeur-driven Red Flag sedan that is equipped, the magazine reported, with bullet-proof windows.

Sources here said that the Huas had now moved into a pavilion in the sprawling, closely guarded compound reserved for the top leadership.

The first family has a reputation for simplicity: while working in Hunan province — where Hua Kuo-Feng was first secretary — both liked to bike to work and opted for cloth shoes and other casual clothes.

The magazine reports that the Huas have four children. The youngest, a girl, is a teen-age university student and the eldest is in the army.

Observers here were struck by the fact that Mrs. Hua did not — as far as is known — accompany her husband during his spectacular diplomatic foray into eastern Europe and Iran in August. She stayed home they noted while wives of ministers are starting to travel.

Cho Lin, wife of Teng Hsiao-Ping, the 74-year-old peppery vice premier, appeared at a Peking public function where foreigners were present for the first time on Sept. 27. Attending an airport welcoming ceremony she wore the regulation gray pants suit but her wavy hair was swept back in near-Western style.

Mrs. Teng was at her husband's side when he started his historic visit to Japan, as were the wives of foreign minister Huang Hua and those of two other leading officials.

This sudden emergence of Chinese officials' wives was discreetly pioneered earlier in November by Chao Lan Hsiang who accompanied her husband on a visit to West African states.

The handsome wife of Foreign minister Huang Hua, like Mrs. Teng, is a working wife. Both former revolutionaries and politicians in their own right, they have jobs in their husbands' administrations. Vice-premier Teng is also chief of the General Staff, which makes him overall head of the army, navy and air force.

Meanwhile Mrs. Hua stays in the background. Questioned here, the official New China News Agency said it had no photographs of the chairman's wife to distribute.

The magazine reported that the chief of state had firmly rejected suggestions that his wife be given a choice slot in either the Communist party's central committee organization or the council of state.

The fact that the wife of the chairman is staying off the international and the domestic stage could be related to the disruptive role played by Chiang Ching, widow of chairman Mao.

A radical firebrand who detested Mr. Teng, Chiang Ching built a minor personality cult about herself before she was arrested with other leading left-wing radicals on Oct. 6, 1976.

While the wives of her former rivals for power were being feted in Tokyo, Chiang Ching's world remained restricted to virtual house arrest and grueling political re-education.

Reports here said that Chiang Ching recently asked the central committee to boost her allowance per meal from one renminbi (50 U.S. cents) to six renminbi ($3.16 cents).

The reports added that the committee agreed that the 64-year-old one-time film starlet should be allowed to wear her black wig. Mao's widow suffers from baldness.

Authoritative sources here close to Peking denied rumors in Hong Kong that Chiang Ching was dead.

"She is still detained and continues to undergo re-education. We cannot understand Western journalists' interest in Chiang Ching. She is alive all right but politically she is dead," the sources said of China's former first lady.

Scout Troop Finds Way To Earn Money

By SHARI LEWIS

Many kids write and ask how they can put jingling stuff into their pockets, so I've been digging for hidden gold.

This idea just appeared in my mail bag. A Scout troop in Indiana realized that coupons in magazines and newspapers regularly offer from 10 cents to a dollar off on household products. These coupons are meant to get people to try other brands of cereals, cleansers, dog foods and so forth from the ones they generally use.

These boys figured that if you didn't have a dog or cat, the animal food coupons were of no use to you; and if you didn't smoke, money back on cigarettes didn't mean a thing. So they clipped all the goodies out of their magazines and newspapers at home, and then checked with their folks, so none of the savings would be denied their own families.

Soon the troop had a huge pile of coupons which they divided into categories (dog or cat food, birdseed, cigarettes and so forth). Each boy went to his neighbors, told them that the troop was trying to raise money to buy its own camping equipment and offered the coupons at half-price. (The 25-cents-off coupons for 12 cents.)

You'll find that some of these coupons read "good in USA only," but I spend enough time in Canada to know that papers across the border have those clip-outs too — so go to it, and we'll have a whole new wave of Canadian and Yankee clippers!

Anthris Gets Inspection Designation

Raymond Anthris, owner and chief inspector of Lubbock Grain Inspection and Weighing was presented a certificate of designation Tuesday from the U. S. Department of Agriculture to operate as an official grain inspection agency.

The Federal Grain Inspection Service, the agency responsible for administering the nationwide system of official inspection, authorized the designation. FGIS Deputy Regional Director Homer Dunn of Dallas made the presentation.

Designation as the official inspection agency gives licensed inspectors employed by Anthris the authority to inspect, grade and certify grain according to official standards as provided by the Grain Standards Act.

Lubbock Grain Inspection and Weighing requested that its designation be transferred to Anthris last September. Leland Bartlett, FGIS administrator, said the request for transfer was made to eliminate any possible appearance of a conflict of interest in the inspection of grain at Lubbock.

The designation authorized Anthris to provide official inspection services to all or a portion of 19 Panhandle counties including Andrews, Borden, Cochran, Crosby, Dawson, Dickens, Gaines, Garza, Hockley, Howard, Hudspeth, Kent, Lubbock, Lynn, Martin, Mitchell, Scurry, Terry and Yoakum.

Lubbock Grain Inspection and Weighing, formerly known as the Lubbock Grain Exchange, began serving Panhandle grain producers and grain elevators in 1928. Last April, the exchange incorporated as the Lubbock Grain Inspection and Weighing Service, Inc.

Anthris became chief inspector of the Lubbock Grain Exchange in 1944. He became a licensed inspector when he was 22 years old, after being raised around his father's grain inspection station at El Reno, Okla.

He worked for the Agriculture Stabilization and Conservation Service until moving to Amarillo in 1941 as assistant to the chief inspector of the Amarillo Grain Exchange.

The Anthris staff represents more than 70 combined years of experience in inspection, grading and analytical experience in grain inspection.

His staff includes three licensed inspectors. Kenneth Critchfield has eight years of service with the Lubbock agency. Gaylan Martin has five years of service and Danny Prince has been with the agency for seven years. Anthris also employs three samplers and technicians.

The purpose of FGIS is to insure that the grain standards are applied uniformly. The FGIS, established in 1976, may authorize private agencies to operate in the official inspections system under criteria contained in the 1976 Grain Standards Act.

Scott Hartman, FGIS field office supervisor at Fort Worth, will supervise official inspection services of the Lubbock agency as well as eight other Texas and Oklahoma agencies.

Chavez Rejects Intervention During Talks

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Cesar Chavez has overruled United Farm Workers negotiators who agreed to call in the federal Council on Wage and Price Stability to help settle a strike by lettuce harvesters.

The walkout, which began last Friday, involves about 2,000 workers at four Imperial Valley farms that produce about 30 percent of the nation's winter iceberg lettuce. A prolonged strike, coupled with recent subfreezing temperatures, could cut production and drive up prices to consumers, growers said.

The UFW is negotiating with 28 vegetable growers in the Imperial Valley, in southeast California, and in the Yuma, Ariz., area. Twenty-four of the growers are not affected by the walkout.

Tom Nassiss, the growers' chief negotiator, said UFW negotiators reluctantly agreed Tuesday — at the companies' request — to call in the federal wage council.

But Chavez, the UFW president, in a telephone interview later, said, "We're not buying that."

Solomon Plans To Stay As GSA Top Official

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite White House claims that Jay Solomon is leaving as head of the General Services Administration, GSA officials say Solomon does not plan to resign and is going "to sit here and wait it out."

"The truth is that Solomon is planning to stay as long as he has the support of the president," said one official who asked not to be named.

Solomon, who helped launch the current investigation of corruption at the government's giant housekeeping agency, met with President Carter for 45 minutes Monday following reports that White House aides were seeking his replacement.

The White House meeting produced a series of conflicting statements.

Presidential press secretary Jody Powell told reporters that Solomon had informed Carter last fall he intended to leave his post early in the new year. And Powell said the GSA administrator was expected to resign within a few months.

Solomon, however, then issued a statement that said: "I told the president I intended to see through the investigations. ... I think the only chance to see this investigation through is to stay on. And when I do leave, it will be at a time and in a manner of my own choosing."

Since the GSA investigation is not expected to be concluded in the near future, Solomon's statement appeared to conflict with Powell's remarks.

GSA spokesman Peter Hickman later revised Solomon's statement to say that the GSA chief would leave when the investigation was on "a sound footing," probably in a few months.

GSA officials contended Tuesday that the later statement was changed at Powell's insistence and did not reflect Solomon's actual intentions. They said the president expressed support for Solomon during the White House meeting and left the decision on resigning up to him.

White House spokesman Rex Gramus said Tuesday night that the statements by Powell and Solomon were in agreement on the GSA chief's planned departure and that he saw no purpose in responding to comments by unnamed officials.

Solomon was unavailable for comment Tuesday.

Sources close to the GSA investigation say the problem over Solomon's job was apparently touched off by his insistence that Carter name GSA general counsel Irwin Borowski to be acting inspector general before Congress reconvened.

If the president had acted before Congress returned Jan. 15, the inspector general would have immediately been able to use subpoena power granted the office under a new law, instead of having to wait for Senate confirmation.

White House spokesmen said the delay was to permit the administration to consider more candidates for the job. However, sources close to the GSA investigation said the administration objected to Borowski because he was "too aggressive."

Judges To Rule On Validity Of Pardons

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Two criminal court judges say they will probably rule next week whether prisoners pardoned by former Gov. Ray Blanton must be set free, even though the new governor acted to block their release.

Lawyers for two of the 18 inmates involved argued in separate hearings Tuesday before Criminal Court Judges John Draper and Raymond Leathers that Gov. Lamar Alexander is defying state laws by refusing to release the prisoners.

"I would submit that the governor is defying an order of the judiciary of this state ... The executive office and the attorney general are simply playing games here," said David Pack, an attorney for prisoner Fred Smith in arguing before Draper.

The judges were told the commutations are valid and that Alexander has no right to block release of the prisoners.

Ed Yarbrough, attorney for armed robber Joseph McKenna, told Leathers that Alexander's hasty inauguration three days ahead of schedule last week was improper because the Legislature didn't approve the early ceremony.

Alexander was sworn in last Wednesday evening, saying state officials feared Blanton would commute more sentences. Two days earlier, Blanton commuted the sentences of 49 state prisoners and pardoned three others. The action made 29 prisoners eligible for immediate release, but only 13 left prison before Alexander took office and stopped further early releases.

Smith is an accountant sentenced in August 1977 to 10 years in prison for murdering his wife. McKenna is a one-time restaurant manager imprisoned in July 1973 for 35 years for robbery with a deadly weapon.

"Once the governor has signed the commutation, it is final and can't be tampered with," Pack said as his client, clad in a wine-colored leisure suit, watched silently.

Fowler Bucks House Demos, Captures Ways, Means Seat

WASHINGTON (AP) — When Rep. Wyche Fowler won his one-man struggle for a seat on the House Ways and Means Committee, "nobody was more surprised than I was," says the Georgia Democrat.

Not only did Fowler manage to bump a leadership choice for the tax-writing panel, Rep. Sam B. Hall of Texas, but he even led Tuesday's balloting in the House Democratic Caucus which filled five vacancies on the panel.

Hall, a freshman, had been backed by House Majority Leader Jim Wright, also of Texas.

Fowler was one of two challengers to the House leadership Tuesday and win spots on committees to which they weren't nominated.

The other, conservative Rep. Jim Jones, D-Okla., persuaded the Democratic caucus to give him a seat on the House Budget Committee, an action that kicked a strong Carter administration ally, Rep. Joseph Fisher, D-Va., off the panel.

Fowler, 38, the former deputy mayor of Atlanta, was undaunted when the Democratic steering committee — usually the final word on committee assignments — didn't give him the spot he wanted.

He mounted a private campaign, but tonholing members and urging them to buck the leadership's steering committee and give him a place on the Ways and Means Committee.

The steering committee recommended a slate of five candidates to fill the five vacancies. Fowler was one of three members to put their own name in nomination.

After four ballots, the other two challengers and one on the leadership slate — Hall — had fallen by the wayside but Fowler's support had grown with each ballot until he had won the support of 247 of the 277 House Democrats.

"I am absolutely staggered," Fowler said after the results were announced.

Fowler was first elected in 1977, filling the unexpired House term of U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young, and has since developed a reputation as a moderate-to-conservative Democrat.

In other House power shuffles, convicted Rep. Charles C. Diggs, D-Mich., announced Tuesday he would not seek re-election as chairman of a House subcommittee on Africa while appealing his three-year prison sentence.

Diggs, convicted on payroll-kickback charges, had previously relinquished his chairmanship of the House District of Columbia Committee.

On Tuesday, the Democratic Caucus voted to give the chairmanship of the District panel to Rep. Ron Dellums, D-Calif.

The caucus also voted, 157-88, to make Rep. Jamie Whitten, D-Miss., chairman of the House Appropriations Committee.

Whitten beat back a challenge mounted by liberals who wanted to give the job to the more-liberal Rep. Edward Boland, D-Mass.

Although Boland is a close friend of House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, the speaker backed Whitten in a floor speech.

Whitten, 68, takes over the chairmanship of the Appropriations Committee from Texas Democrat George Mahon, who did not seek re-election to Congress.

Action Taken To Legally Dissolve Peoples Temple

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Two months after the jungle death ritual that ended in the deaths of more than 900 cultists, a California judge has approved the first legal steps to dissolve the Peoples Temple.

Superior Court Judge Ira Brown Jr. approved a dissolution petition Tuesday offered by temple attorney Charles Garry, but said the cult must remain a legal entity until its financial affairs are settled.

Brown also agreed to appoint a receiver with power to distribute an estimated $12 million in temple assets and settle claims against the California-based non-profit corporation.

Surviving temple directors, facing a growing number of lawsuits, sought the dissolution. Brown stayed more than a dozen suits against the temple.

He also ordered a coalition of clergy to draft a plan within 30 days to return the unclaimed bodies of nearly 600 temple members from Dover, Del., where they are now stored, to San Francisco.

Yeoryios Apallas, deputy state attorney general, told the court 599 bodies were unclaimed, and 314 bodies had been released to relatives.

More than 900 members of the San Francisco-based sect died in a murder-suicide ritual Nov. 18 at Jonestown, Guyana, a colony founded by the Rev. Jim Jones in 1977. Jones was among those who died.

The federal government Monday filed a claim of $4.2 million for costs to date of returning the bodies to the United States. Also Monday, the five children of slain Rep. Leo Ryan, D-Calif., filed suit seeking unspecified damages against the temple.

Ryan and four other people were killed at a jungle airstrip after visiting the Jonestown commune, where Ryan was investigating reports of brutality.

Jurist Pushes For Finish To Testimony

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The judge hearing Michelle Triola Marvin's lawsuit pushed for an end to her testimony, as actor Lee Marvin waited in the wings to testify.

Marvin's lawyer, A. David Kagon, prodded by Superior Court Judge Arthur Marshall to "move on," said he would spend about one more hour on Miss Marvin's cross-examination.

Marvin was expected to take the stand later today as a hostile witness.

In her fifth day on the witness stand Tuesday, Kagon led Miss Marvin through detailed descriptions of her three terminated pregnancies, Marvin's alleged drinking problems and a $6 million movie deal she said she arranged for Marvin.

Miss Marvin, 46, a former Las Vegas showgirl and singer, is suing the 54-year-old actor for $1 million plus half of his earnings during the six years they lived together. The case has set legal precedents on the appellate level and is expected to influence similar cases.

Miss Marvin dissolved in tears again as she discussed an abortion she said she underwent in 1967.

Her lawyer, Marvin Mitchelson, was perturbed at the length of Kagon's inquiry.

"Your Honor," he told the judge, "Counsel has exhausted several lines of questioning but would like to keep this witness on the witness stand until she drops off of it."

London Publisher To Drop Edition

LONDON (AP) — The London Evening News, which publishes the British capital's only Saturday afternoon edition, announced it will drop that edition and raise prices in April in an attempt to get in the black.

Associated Newspapers, publishers of the tabloid, said in a statement it was also cutting its work force by 580, raising the newspaper's price from 16 to 20 cents, and abandoning three of its seven daily editions.

Lubbock Teen-Agers Charged In Holdup

Two 17-year-old Lubbock youths Tuesday were charged with aggravated robbery in a Jan. 5 service station holdup.

They are Rayford Wayne Carpenter of 4319 48th St. and Alton Ray Fulton of 3514 28th St.

Carpenter was placed under $50,000 bond and Fulton under $25,000 bond.

They are accused of robbing Al's Texaco at 42nd Street and Boston Avenue. Also named in charges filed by the criminal district attorney's office was Jerry Wallace Campbell, 32, of 4206-B Canton Ave., who was accused of burglarizing a United Supermarket at 4234 Boston Ave. Jan 21 and placed under $10,000 bond.

Volunteers To Help People With Tax Returns

By R. GREGORY NOKES
 WASHINGTON (AP) — Thousands of volunteers will help retired and low-income people with their tax returns this year, while the Internal Revenue Service will give advice to millions of other taxpayers.

The IRS has trained 30,000 persons to staff booths and libraries, schools, fire stations and other public buildings to help people with special needs.

These unpaid volunteers also will go to nursing homes, hospitals and retirement communities from January through April. They will concentrate on helping with problems that frequently arise for elderly and low-income taxpayers.

For example, many low-income persons are unaware they may be eligible for the earned income credit, a cash payment of up to $400 for poor working families. It may be available to families earning less than $8,000 a year even if they had no taxes withheld.

A special problem for the elderly is confusion over the variety of regulations concerning income from pensions, life insurance payments and other annuities. The formula for computing a retirement tax credit for some people can be difficult to comprehend.

Although the tax booklets that are sent with the tax forms include instructions on treatment of such things as pension income and the earned income credit, the IRS knows that many people want help with their computations or have questions that are not clearly answered in the written instructions.

The IRS last year answered more than 17 million phone inquiries, 38,000 letters and helped more than 6 million people who sought help in IRS offices.

Toll-free numbers for the IRS are included in the tax instructions mailed out to taxpayers. Most taxpayers should have received their tax forms in the mail by the end of the year. But tax forms and instructions also are available at most banks and post offices.

Third In A Series

The IRS is providing special information for people whose primary language is not English. It publishes instruction booklets in Spanish, although it has no plans to publish the forms in Spanish.

Information is also available from professional tax preparers — at a fee, of course. They processed returns for about 42 percent of taxpayers last year. But the IRS is trying to make its forms simple enough for most taxpayers to be able to figure it out for themselves.

The wording of the instructions and tax forms this year has been simplified so they are understandable to someone with an eighth grade education.

The IRS reported that there were fewer errors last year because more people were able to use the 1040A short form.

JUNE'S NAMESAKE

Authorities disagreed on where the ancient Romans got the name Junius, our month of June. Perhaps from Juno, queen of their gods, possibly from juniores (youths), to whom the month was dedicated, as May was to maiores, the elders.

The short form can be used if the taxpayer had only wages, salaries, tips and other employee compensation and not more than $400 in interest or $400 in dividends.

Total income for the short form must be $20,000 or less, or $40,000 or less if the taxpayer is married and filing jointly.

The long form is required if the taxpayer itemizes deductions. Taxpayers who claim the new credits for insulation and other energy-saving measures must use the long form.

The government estimates that about 96 percent of taxpayers can compute their taxes from the tax tables that accompany the forms.

Bexar Sheriff Will Check Harassment Charges

SAN ANTONIO (UPI) — Bexar County Sheriff Rudy Garza says he doubts allegations by the Iranian Student Association are true but will investigate the group's charges that guards were harassing a jailed Iranian militant.

Iranian protest leader Hossein Jahanfar entered the eighth day of a jail hunger strike today. He has been held since Immigration and Naturalization agents arrested him Jan. 17 at the end of a two-hour anti-shah march he led to the Alamo. INS officials are working to have him deported.

A statement circulated by the San Antonio chapter of the Iranian Student Organization alleged that "fascist guards and jailers" were trying to "weaken his (Jahanfar's) militancy potential and to stop his struggle because of his political opinion, an opinion which is fully supported by more than 35 million Iranian people and freedom-loving people from all countries."

The student group charged guards were chanting pro-shah statements through a bullhorn and flashing a picture of the shah before the fasting prisoner.

Garza said he would check into the allegations and order a stop to any harassment of the militant Iranian, if it was actually occurring.

"Sure I would (order it stopped), if I knew anything like that was going on," Garza said. "I was on that floor yesterday and I didn't hear anything. I think they (guards) could care less."

The government opened deportation proceedings against Jahanfar at the time of his arrest on grounds his student visa expired Dec. 13 and he neither asked for an extension nor re-enrolled at San Antonio College for the spring semester. Immigration agents have been checking other Iranian students' visas as part of a crackdown on anti-shah demonstrators.

Defense attorney Robert Shivers Tuesday completed a brief that will be submitted to the Board of Immigration Appeals in Washington, D.C., seeking to lower a $5,000 bond imposed by local Immigration Judge Arvid Boyes. Shivers contends the bond is excessive because most "out of status" students are freed on $2,000 bonds, and because of the turmoil in Iran, students are not able to get money from the country.

However, it appeared it would be the end of the week at the earliest before the appeals board could rule on the bond. Boyes has indicated a deportation hearing for Jahanfar would not be scheduled before the first week of February.

The sheriff said Jahanfar ate a meal the day he was arrested but since that time had refused to accept food.

"Of course, he's in a cell where there's about 24 people (with access to food). He could eat if he wanted to, without us knowing it," Garza said. "The only thing we're doing is watching him, and we've got him on a doctor's list for a doctor to see him about every two days."

Prize-Winning Poet To Speak At LCC

Pulitzer Prize-winning poet Louis Simpson will discuss "The Writer's Life: Its Reasons, Ways and Ends" before about 350 freshmen Monday at Lubbock Christian College.

Simpson, a poet, essayist and critic, is the first of four speakers in the spring semester English symposium at LCC.

In addition to writing six volumes of poetry, the West Indies native wrote the biography "Three on The Tower," a study of the lives and works of the poets Ezra Pound, T.S. Eliot and William Carlos Williams.

Simpson will speak at 4 p.m. and 7:30 p.m. Monday at the Mabee American Heritage Center on campus. Funding for the fourth annual English symposium is through the Center for Business and Economic Education, of which Dr. C.L. Kay is executive director.

Simpson, one of four spring speakers chosen by the LCC English faculty, emigrated to the United States at age 17, studied at Columbia University, then served with the U.S. Army in France, Holland, Belgium and Germany. He completed his Ph.D. at Columbia in 1959 and worked as an editor in a New York publishing company.

He has taught at Columbia and the New School and at the University of California in Berkeley. Since 1967 he has taught at State University of New York at Stony Brook.

Simpson twice won the Guggenheim Fellowship. Other honors include the Prix de Rome, the Medal for Excellence given by Columbia and the Pulitzer Prize for poetry. His poems have been anthologized and translated into several languages.

Upcoming speakers in the symposium are Stephen Spender, poet, essayist and critic, who will discuss "Readings — The Art of the Poetic Process" on Feb. 19; M. Stanton Evans, free-lance writer and Avalanche-Journal columnist, Kay of LCC who will speak on "Communicating Our American Heritage" on April 2.

Wayne's Vital Signs Good

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — It is still not known when John Wayne will go home, but doctors at UCLA Medical Center say the 71-year-old actor is progressing satisfactorily in his recovery from his cancer surgery earlier this month.

"His vital signs are good, his condition is stable and his progress is satisfactory," a hospital spokesman said Tuesday. "He is up and walking around in the hall somewhat and he is eating some soft foods."

Surgeons performing a routine gall bladder operation Jan. 12 found a malignant tumor and removed the actor's stomach, building a smaller substitute from intestine tissue.

Several days later they announced that lymph nodes also removed during the surgery were cancerous, but said they have no clinical evidence that the cancer had spread to other parts of his body.

Doctors also suggested that Wayne, who overcame lung cancer 15 years ago, had a good chance for recovery because of his positive attitude and rugged constitution.

AUSTRALIAN HONORED
 MOSCOW (AP) — The Kremlin has awarded Patrick Clancy, chairman of Australia's Socialist Party, the Order of People's Friendship, the Soviet news agency Tass reported. In a dispatch Saturday, Tass said Clancy was honored on his 60th birthday "for his energetic activities for the development of friendly relations between the peoples of Australia and the Soviet Union."

Texas Tech To Feature UFO Investigator

To millions of people around the world UFO's are real and the question is "How long have they been visiting Earth?"

Dr. J. Allen Hynek, who has spent more than 20 years dealing with the UFO experience, will shed some light on facts and fictions of UFO's during a talk Feb. 2 at Texas Tech University.

Hynek was recruited as technical advisor for the film "Close Encounters of the Third Kind." He served for two decades as astronomical consultant to the U.S. Air Force in projects "Sign" and "Blue Book," which studied UFO sightings reported to the Air Force. He is author of technical papers in astrophysics and his book "The UFO Experience—A Scientific Inquiry" has become a definitive text on that phenomenon.

A professor of Astronomy at Northwestern University, Hynek also is director of the Center for UFO Studies.

Hynek will lecture on "The UFO Phenomenon" at 8:15 p.m. in the University Center Theatre. Tickets are $2 for Tech students and $3 for the general public. For reservations call the UC Ticketbooth.

Screams Delight Film Director

By VERNON SCOTT
HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The fine art of terror has reached almost scientific status by moviemakers these days as evidenced in the latest horror film, "Invasion of the Body Snatchers," which is scaring the daylight out of millions.

Each scream, shiver and revulsed reaction is savored by Philip Kaufman, who directed the remake of the 1956 movie which became a cult film.

Kaufman, a bearded 42-year-old ex-Chicagoan with a whimsical sense of humor, turned to movies after a fiddle-footed career as novelist, math teacher in Italy and Greece and tractor driver in Israel among other things.

"Invasion of the Body Snatchers" involves creatures from another planet who arrive on earth and duplicate human beings through the growth of mysteriously ugly pods. Once the human duplicate is complete and taken over by the aliens, the original body becomes dust and is disposed of in trash collectors.

Kaufman clearly enjoyed himself working with Donald Sutherland, Brooke Adams and Leonard Nimoy. Almost every scene is fraught with unalloyed terror, not infrequently infused with contrasting humor.

Kaufman is new to horror films which are a distinct genre different from, say, the old Alfred Hitchcock suspense movies and the recent wave of occult pictures.

"Fear is a religious feeling," Kaufman said on a recent trip to Hollywood from his San Francisco home. "Religion isn't as strong as it once was, so there is a demand for scary films by people who miss the old fears."

He singled out "The Exorcist," "The Omen," "Close Encounters of the Third Kind" and "Jaws" as examples of enormously successful films which mesmerized and frightened hundreds of millions of persons around the world.

"The Body Snatchers," unlike the others, does not deal with the occult. God and the devil are not played off against one another. Neither, for that matter, are good and evil.

"I tried to create an old fashioned horror picture," Kaufman said. "I wanted audiences to respond in theaters with laughs and screams and shouts. And that's what they've been doing.

"The really scary element is the fact that creatures from a dying planet are actually taking over human bodies. There's suspense in not knowing which humans are walking around as aliens. It makes for universal paranoia in the cast and audience as well.

"I like to think that at the end of the film each person in the theater turns to the person sitting next to him and wonders."

Kaufman and his cinematographer, Michael Chapman, saw dozens of black and white "B" detective movies of the 1940s seeking to recapture unadorned horror — night scenes, shadows, unidentified "things" crawling in the dark.

"They were awfully wordy," Kaufman reported, "but the images and camera angles haven't been equalled in recent years. The darkness and mystery and shadows all created an atmosphere of fright."

"The look of a film must make the audience feel they are immediately and personally involved or jeopardized by what they see and hear on the screen. This is a much more subtle and delicate climate than simply shock value.

"Too many contemporary horror pictures rely on blowing off heads and shocking scenes of gore."

There is gore aplenty in "Invasion of the Body Snatchers," but it is often tempered by humor.

Kaufman has his own private joke in one of the very first scenes. The camera zeroes in on a priest swinging on a child's swing in a park. One is led to believe the priest will be a key figure in the picture, especially in view of the fact that the clergyman is played by Robert Duvall.

But Duvall is never seen again. Nor is the priest's presence ever explained.

Kaufman chuckled when asked why he included this nonsequitur in his movie.

"Bobby Duvall and I are old friends," he said. "He starred in 'The Great Northfield, Minnesota, Raid' which I directed. And he happened to be in San Francisco when I was doing 'The Body Snatchers.'"

"A lot of people ask me about the priest. Look at it this way: almost all the recent horror pictures needed a priest to tell the audience they are going to have a religious experience, Hollywood style."

Kaufman departed considerably from the original script of "Body Snatchers" which starred Kevin McCarthy in Sutherland's protagonist role.

"I saw the original in 1956," Kaufman said, "and was haunted by it and moved by it. We follow some of the plot line but the characters and events are different."

"We eliminated the narration and added humor. Our ending is different — audiences are left with the feeling that the earth is taken over by alien beings from another galaxy. And that, my friend, is scary."

HY GARDNER HAS THE ANSWER: Glad You Asked That!

Following is an interview with Henny Youngman — King of the One-Liners:

Who gave you that billing? "Walter Winchell. He appreciated it because he always had room in his column for a brief bit of banter. Now my British bringing up is showing!"

How did you feel when you fainted onstage in Canada? "Thank God I recuperated quickly. But I was embarrassed. I'm supposed to be a stand-up — not a fall-down comedian."

Where did you get the idea of printing small cards with witty sayings as a publicity gimmick? "I guess that goes back when I had a small printing business on Sixth Avenue. This was for eating money when my 5-piece Brooklyn band couldn't get any dates, bar-mitzvahs, weddings; you know, society stuff like that. I was a good merchandising man. To book bar-mitzvahs I used to walk along the Coney Island boardwalk and in playgrounds and ask kids when they'd be 13. Then hand them a card that read 'Henny Youngman, violinist and comedian — I can be the life of your bar-mitzvah.' I'd also print the phone number of a candy store that took messages for me."

Now that we've got a Polish Pope, do you still tell Polish jokes? "Certainly. The Polish people have a nice sense of humor, enjoy being ribbed. Like if you see two Santa Clauses, the one with the Easter basket is Polish. Then there's the new Polish jigsaw puzzle: one piece! When the Poles marched on Washington, but they got lost in downtown Seattle!"

What are you doing to ease the energy crisis? "I'm using less oil on my hair!"

We know you love wife jokes. What about doctors? "I like the doctor who gave a wealthy patient (that's before he got the medic's bill) six months to live. When he found out the sick man couldn't pay him — he gave him another six months. Buddy Hackett is the best amateur doctor in show business. He tells funny stories, not listens to them. He's a joke doctor on the side."

What other comedians are your favorites? "Bob Hope, Jan Murray, Milton Berle. Some of the kid comics have talent too, but they either make the big time in 10 minutes or they're has-beens. Trouble is these days there's no place where a youngster can be lousy."

By the way, what is the funniest gag you've heard in the last five minutes? "Several I don't think should be repeated. They're clean but in bad taste. However I like the one about a heckled guy who came home drunk and threw a brick through the television screen. Then he threw a brick into the window of a neighbor who was playing records too loudly. He also threw a brick at a couple of guys arguing. Finally, when another drunk rang his doorbell, interrupting a snooze he didn't react at all. Which surprised his wife, who asked, "Why didn't you throw a brick at him?" "You must think," her soused spouse said, "that I'm made of bricks!"

Send your questions to Hy Gardner, "Glad You Asked That," care of The Lubbock Avalanche-Journal, P.O. Box 11748, Chicago, Ill. 60611. Marilyn and Hy Gardner will answer as many questions as they can in their column, but the volume of mail makes personal replies impossible.

'Junk Sports' Invade Television

By PETER J. BOYER
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Gee, it's that time of year already. The junk season. This is when television, having run out of football and still several weeks short of baseball, serves up an offering of strange and sundry activities loosely termed "sport."

Junk sports are packaged under several names — "SportsWorld," "Sports Spectacular," "Superstars" and "Challenge of the Sexes," being a few. It's hoped that we are so hooked on the pattern of weekend sports watching that, even when there are no sports to watch, we'll stay tuned.

No substance, just form. The networks think that after those long months of football watching, we'll watch anything, as long as there is some screen activity and sportscaster noise.

Consider the fare: NBC, which should be proud of bringing us the best Super Bowl in years, is going to follow that extravaganza with a real class act — "The World Belyflop and Cannonball Diving Championships" on "Sports World."

Speaking of belyflops, CBS has one of its own, a junk sports standard called "Challenge of the Sexes." This is when poor Vin Scully, one of the best sportscasters in television, is sent to some winter sports haven to cover a hybrid version of golf or tennis or some other sport willing to be desecrated in the name of television.

The premise of "Challenge of the Sexes" is that competition between men and women can be entertaining and valid once the odds are evened a bit (a dubious idea lifted from the Bobby Riggs capers a few years ago). What CBS gives us is an exercise in silly that showcases the greed, not the skills, of the participants.

Then there is "Superstars," the flagship of the junk sports fleet. The creator of this thing must harbor a profound disdain for the American sports fan.

This ABC sports thriller supposes that we are so taken by big sports names that we'll follow them anywhere. We get to see jockeys play golf and boxers lift weights and runners play softball in exotic locations. With Don Drysdale and others calling the "action" in their best "This is serious stuff" voices, we're presented a disarming display of famous athletes trying to do something other than that which made them famous.

It's awkward and embarrassing. Come to think of it, maybe that's the idea behind the thing. Like the "Gong Show."

One of the cutest features of these contests between displaced athletes is the "post-game interview," a lampoon version of a real post-game interview. One such meaningful encounter — a classic, in fact — emerged on last weekend's "Superstars."

A baseball player had just outrun some other jocks in a 100-yard dash, displaying no uncommon grace. Drysdale showed a mike under his face and asked something like, "How does this relate to what you do on the baseball field?"

"Well," our star replied, "It's kinda like running from first to third... except a straight line is easier."

A straight line is just what's needed here — from the couch to the "off" button.

Actress Pam Dawber Criticizes Writing For Hit Comedy Show

By JOAN HANAUER
NEW YORK (UPI) — Pam Dawber thinks Robin Williams is lucky to have her playing Mindy to his Mork, and so do millions of viewers every week — but for different reasons.

The writers of the show, on the other hand, may not feel so fortunate at having to contend with an actress who's almost as determined as she is pretty.

Miss Dawber, blonder and just a smidgeon sexier in real life than in ABC's hit sitcom "Mork & Mindy," thinks Williams is wildly funny and since she considers herself an actress, not a comedian, she doesn't mind playing straight man.

"I don't care if he does improvisations — he's hilarious. I know I'm not ever going to be that. I'm easy going and I don't break out if he sometimes steps on my lines. I know he doesn't do it intentionally, and we're not a comedy team. I want to go on and do legitimate acting and Robin can go on to do Popeye or whatever he's going to do."

She speaks admiringly of Williams, whose performance she estimated was about 20 percent improvisation each week, including most of his long-run monologues.

It's the non-improvisation part of the scripts that worries Miss Dawber, who began her career as a model, but would like to go on from "Mork & Mindy" to serious Jane Fonda-style roles, to musicals, to a little bit of everything. To do that, the scripts must give her more to do than stand around looking cute.

"Both Robin and I feel we have gotten some very lame scripts and some shows we've really been winging it," Miss Dawber said. "Most have interesting story lines — did you see the one about old people? — people could learn something from that."

"The problem is that Robin can get up and scratch his nose and people have been programmed to know Mork is funny, so anything he does, they laugh. As long as the ratings are up, and ratings mean money and money is the name of the game, no one is going to worry."

"But they should develop our characters. Both of us want to be given something to do. People ask if Mork and Mindy are going to get involved. I don't know. The writers don't know. But they aren't going to have Mork move downstairs with Mindy while the show is on at 7 p.m."

Talking to her, it sounds as if there's an escalating war between the actors and the eight writers on "Mork & Mindy."

"Robin's a fighter," she said. "I have burst into tears at writers. Robin gets red in the face and his agents are very powerful. I don't want to sound like I'm doing the old star number, but we're the ones out there who have to say that stuff."

"If it's crummy, people say, 'Isn't she lousy?'"

She still can't quite believe the degree to which people believe what they see on the screen.

"You should see the letters I get," she said. They ask me, How do I feel about living with Mork — morally. People out there really believe you are that person they see on the screen."

Tomorrow's Horoscope

By Bernice Bede Osol

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Some hotshot could sell you a bill of goods tomorrow that takes you off on a wild goose chase. Before teaming up with anyone, know his track record.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Biting off more than you can chew will get you in deeper trouble than you can imagine. Be realistic in your undertakings.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) If at all possible, stay away from crowds, or large gatherings tomorrow. You're not in the mood for small talk and might be a bit too impatient with others.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Don't blame your family if things tomorrow are unreachable. It's not their fault if your expectations exceed your capabilities.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Allowing your temper to get out of hand will spoil what otherwise could have been a pleasant day. Look for humor in situations that frustrate you.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You could let your emotions take charge of your pocketbook tomorrow and blow the whole wad. Stop and think before you spend.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) A reckless associate could inspire you to behave in a similar fashion tomorrow. Together, you might do something rather foolish and unprofitable.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Feelings could run high on the job tomorrow. Try not to overreact or you may find yourself depressed and frustrated by the end of the day.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Your judgment is not at its best tomorrow. You could wrongfully place your trust in another who won't live up to it. You'll be the one who's hurt.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) There's a fire smoldering at home tomorrow and unless you are very careful not to stoke it, it will reignite. Let things die down.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Be extra-cautions with any mental pursuits tomorrow. You're unusually careless and could make a serious mistake. (This includes what you say!)

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You have a tendency tomorrow to count your material blessings before they become a reality. If you're smart, you'll wait until they're in the bank.

Cambodian Units Keep Fighting

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Vietnamese troops and units of the Cambodian army of ousted Premier Pol Pot were reported battling today for an oil refinery and a radar station near the port of Kompong Som. Small-scale fighting was also reported near the Phnom Penh airport.

Thai military sources said the Vietnamese were holding the refinery and radar station near Cambodia's only deep-water port, but were being forced to resupply their troops by air since Highway 4 linking the seaport area to Phnom Penh was unsafe for traffic.

No details were available on the fighting near the capital's Pochentong Airport, or on other skirmishes reported in widespread areas of Cambodia.

Besides the attacks, the Vietnamese are beginning to face serious logistics problems, Western and Thai sources note.

A Thai report says Vietnamese combat engineers, protected by infantry, have been moving up some of the major highways including routes 5 and 6 leading from Phnom Penh to the northwest, to repair roadbeds and bridges. These had been blown up or mined by retreating Pol Pot troops.

Analysts, admitting difficulty in judging the level of the recent fighting, say the Pol Pot troops are using guerrilla tactics and employing small units that are difficult to stop, even in areas around Phnom Penh, seized by the Vietnamese and their pro-Hanoi Cambodian Communist allies Jan. 7, two weeks after their offensive began.

Observers say Phnom Penh is secure from a major attack and noted that foreign journalists from Soviet-bloc nations sympathetic to the new regime are already in that city. China backed the Pol Pot government, which took power from the U.S.-supported Lon Nol regime in April 1975.

Singh Returns To Indian Cabinet Post

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — The long-simmering crisis in Prime Minister Morarji Desai's ruling Janata Party ended today when dissident leader Charan Singh was brought back into Desai's Cabinet as deputy prime minister and minister of finance.

Defense Minister Jagjivan Ram, a powerful party figure and the country's most prominent untouchable leader, also was named deputy prime minister, a spokesman for the prime minister said. Ram retains his defense portfolio.

Not returning to the cabinet was Raj Narain, the former health minister and an outspoken critic of Desai, who was ousted from the Cabinet with Singh last June for breaking party discipline.

Instead, Rabi Ray, another member of Singh's faction, was sworn in as health minister. H.M. Patel, until now India's finance minister, took the home portfolio as part of the reshuffle to end the seven-month-long crisis.

Singh told Parliament last month that the prime minister fired him because as home minister he had suggested an investigation of corruption charges against Desai's son, Kantilal.

Several days later, Singh's faction organized what most observers agreed was one of the largest political rallies ever held in New Delhi. An estimated 500,000 supporters attended what officially was called "The Farmers' Rally," although it happened to fall on the dissident leader's 76th birthday.

The Dec. 23 show of strength by his supporters; many of them turbaned farmers who traveled to the Indian capital on tractor-pulled carts, fueled rumors that Singh would break with the Janata Party and perhaps even join forces with former Prime Minister Indira Gandhi.

The new government has welcomed the Soviet-bloc reporters who are beginning to send dispatches stressing the horrors carried out under the Pol Pot regime, which are still in evidence in Phnom Penh.

But the radio station of the Pol Pot forces, the Voice of Democratic Kampuchea, another name for Cambodia, declared today that their strength increases daily.

"Our revolutionary troops, with cooperation of our people and hidden guerrillas, apply all means of offense to crush the aggressors," the broadcast said. "We can destroy the enemy's forces gradually, day after day. They have no time to rest, to sleep or to eat."

The radio's delayed battlefield reports, dating back to Jan. 10-13, claimed that Pol Pot forces threw hand grenades into military trucks near a hospital inside Phnom Penh, killing scores of soldiers and destroying two trucks.

The incident reportedly occurred on the night of Jan. 12 and the morning of the 13th, while the broadcast claimed that on Jan. 11 and 12 more than 50 Vietnamese were killed and one artillery piece was destroyed at a village on the banks of the Mekong River near the capital.

Prime Minister's Warning Fails To Move Striking Labor Unions

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister James Callaghan admonished striking labor unions the nation's patience is wearing thin and that they could face new laws curbing their power. But the strikes continued.

Callaghan's warning in the House of Commons Tuesday angered leftists and union bosses and widened a split between his ruling Labor party and its traditional union allies.

The prime minister rejected an opposition Conservative call for immediate tough measures to limit union power, but said: "There comes a time when the nation's patience does run out, and then despite the unwisdom of the legislation, it might have to shackle the trade unions to the overwhelming dislike of the country in the long run." He did not elaborate on what measures might be taken.

Callaghan heightened bitterness by criticizing secondary picketing tactics by striking truckers, who have effectively blockaded half Britain's ports and factories.

His comments appeared to reflect his growing concern the strike issue has damaged Labor's chances of winning a general election this spring.

Blizzards heightened misery for commuters Tuesday as 26,000 locomotive engineers staged their third paralyzing 24-hour strike in eight days — and planned another for Thursday.

Nearly 60,000 truckers continued a three-week-old walkout and public service employees staged a rash of shutdowns, slowdowns and more of the same are threatened.

Authorities in Liverpool, hamstrung by a gravedigger and crematorium attendant strike, said they are considering storing corpses in an empty factory or in refrigerated meat warehouses.

The government reported the country's unemployment total this month rose by 91,000 to 1.45 million. That did not include up to 200,000 workers laid off this month because of the truckers' strike.

The railroad engineers want a 10 per cent productivity bonus. The truckers want a 22 per cent pay increase and the 1.5 million public service employees — including hospital workers, garbage men, road and sewage workers and ambulance drivers — are demanding a raise from $84.40 to $120 a week.

The demands go far above the counter-inflationary 5 per cent limit on pay increases laid down by the government four years ago. But the unions claim their members need hefty increases to keep ahead of increased living costs.

Carlo Ponti Conviction May Lead To Seizure

ROME (AP) — Sophia Loren's husband, film producer Carlo Ponti, is threatened with seizure of $24 million of his Italian property for transferring $11 million out of the country illegally.

Ponti, 66, was convicted in absentia Tuesday by a Rome court, fined $24 million and ordered to serve a two-year prison term. The court acquitted Miss Loren of charges that she was an accomplice in the currency violations and tried to smuggle $3.5 million worth of art works abroad.

A warrant for Ponti's arrest remained in effect, but there was no expectation that he would ever go to prison. He and his 44-year-old wife have become French citizens, and France does not extradite its citizens. But the government earlier placed a lien against his property in Italy, which is reported to be worth more than $40 million.

Also pending against Ponti in his native land is a fraud charge filed Jan. 12 alleging that he illegally obtained $1.1 million in government subsidies for film productions.

The Rome court also acquitted actors Richard Harris and Kenneth Ross and actress Ava Gardner of violating currency regulations by getting paid abroad for work in Ponti films made in Italy. Miss Loren's secretary, Ines Bruscia, was acquitted of trying to smuggle some of Ponti's financial records out of the country.

Two other defendants in the trial were found guilty. Robert Van Dahalen, a film agent, was sentenced to eight months in jail and fined $820,000 and Luigi Baldini, a bank official, was sentenced to 10 months in jail and fined $1.1 million.

They will not serve the jail terms under an amnesty provision that also cut Ponti's term from four years.

The currency investigation surfaced in March 1977 when customs agents found several Italian Renaissance paintings in Miss Loren's luggage after she was prevented from boarding an airliner bound for France.

Although an agent didn't recognize her because she was wearing dark glasses and a hat and carrying a passport in her original name, Sofia Seicolone, he was curious because she was vague about the amount of money she carried.

She was allowed to fly to Paris the next day, but authorities seized the paintings.

The couple moved to France more than 20 years ago and gave up their Italian citizenship after Ponti's Mexican divorce from his first wife was not recognized in Italy. They were married in 1957. Four years later Miss Loren won an Oscar for her performance in "Two Women."

Carter Under Pressure To Halt Troop Withdrawals From Korea

By TERENCE HUNT
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is under increasing congressional pressure to stop U.S. troop withdrawals from South Korea, and he may face legislation aimed at halting the pullouts if he refuses to act on his own. Members of a Senate Armed Services Committee study group told the president and Defense Secretary Harold Brown Tuesday that the pullouts should be suspended because of new intelligence estimates of North Korea's military strength.

Recent estimates by the Army and the CIA credit North Korea's armed forces with 550,000 to 600,000 troops, about one-fourth larger than previous evaluations.

Brown said last weekend that the new estimates are unlikely to change the decision to withdraw 33,000 ground troops by 1982.

However, study group members said Brown showed more flexibility at the White House meeting than his weekend statement indicated.

Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., said Brown left the impression that his earlier statement "was a little too confined or narrow."

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., said, "I think there's more flexibility."

Some 2,500 ground troops are scheduled to be pulled out this year, with much larger withdrawals scheduled to follow between 1980 and 1982.

Nunn, chairman of an Armed Services manpower and personnel subcommittee, predicted Carter "will take another look" at the program.

Further withdrawals should be "tied to the stability of the military balance and ... political, diplomatic and military actions of North Korea," Nunn said.

The Senate report questioned South Korea's ability to turn back an invasion from the north, saying any military advantages presumed to have been held by South Korea "now appear to have vanished" with the new estimates.

The study group's report said that planned improvements in South Korea forces, including the transfer of $800 million worth of U.S. military equipment to Seoul, would not offset the withdrawal of the American 2nd Infantry Division.

Plans Almost Complete For Premier's Visit

WASHINGTON (AP) — Planning for Chinese Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping's historic visit to the United States, less than a week off, is almost complete.

Current plans call for Teng to sample American-style capitalism with visits tentatively scheduled to an automobile assembly plant, an aircraft manufacturing plant and port facilities.

State Department aides said Tuesday they were in the final hours of preparing the itinerary for Teng's eight-day visit.

In another development, 35 congressmen and business and civic leaders were leaving today for a visit to Taiwan in an effort to seek continued U.S. relations with that nation.

Rep. George Hansen, R-Idaho, said Tuesday the trip was being privately financed by the American Conservative Union, the Heritage Foundation and the National Conservative Political Action Committee.

Hansen is one of a group of congressmen who filed suit after President Carter announced his decision to recognize Peking rather than Taiwan as the government of China.

Meanwhile, the Carter administration, publicly committed to an even-handed policy in its dealings with China and the Soviet Union, is looking into ways to grant "most-favored nation" trade status to both countries, said State Department sources, requesting anonymity.

The administration has decided that a trade agreement with China is the next step in relations between Washington and Peking, officials said. They added they do not think the Chinese would approve an agreement without favored-nation status. That status reduces tariffs on imported goods.

The emigration policies of communist countries are key in decisions on trade status. The 1974 Jackson-Vanik amendment bars the United States from granting most-favored status or financing trade for communist nations that do not allow free emigration. It does permit the president to seek a congressional waiver on the grounds that the trade policy would improve the emigration situation.

Current plans call for Teng to arrive in Washington Sunday aboard a Boeing 707 owned by China's national airline. On Feb. 1, he is scheduled to fly to Atlanta where he reportedly will visit a Ford Motor Co. assembly plant.

College Professor Disputes Math Fear

PULLMAN, Wash. (AP) — Fears that pocket calculators and the "new math" might make college freshmen mathematically illiterate are mostly unfounded, says a Washington State University math professor.

College freshmen understand the concepts of higher math in about the same way they did before the introduction of the electronic pocket calculator and new math procedures, says Dr. James A. Cochran, WSU's new chairman of mathematics. "They do seem to expect somewhat more spoon feeding, however, a consequence, no doubt, of the impact of television," he said. Cochran is considering increased use of calculators at WSU.

WEATHER FORECAST — Snow and rain are expected in the forecast period today through Thursday, for part of the Midwest, the Ohio Valley, the Great Lakes and the Northeast. Snow flurries are forecast for the northern Rockies. Warm weather is predicted for Texas, the Gulf and south Atlantic states. Interior portions of the country will be sunny and very cold. ## Citizens Will Voice CD Funding Views

By SYLVIA TEAGUE, Avalanche-Journal Staff
Citizens will have their final say on how $10.4 million in federal Community Development funds should be spent the next three years at a 10 a.m. public hearing before the Lubbock City Council on Thursday.

Perhaps the most controversial item recommended for 1979-80 funding by the Community Development Advisory Committee is the acquisition of land for a park in the Overton South neighborhood.

The CDAC recommended $113,598 be allocated to begin the land acquisition process which is expected to cost about $1.5 million when completed. Council members indicated at their last meeting they favored funding several items deleted by the CDAC, including paving the parking lot at Copper Rawlins Community Center and renovating an East Broadway building for a party house.

The paving of 19th Street from Guava Avenue to Loop 289, also deleted by the CDAC, may be funded as well.

However, council members were advised at their last meeting that more than $113,000 should be set aside for the Overton South park, if land acquisition is to begin in earnest.

Of the $3.8 million the city will receive for 1979-80, $2.4 million is recommended for housing rehabilitation.

Also at the meeting, which begins at 9 a.m. in council chambers, a photograph of former Mayor Roy Bass will be dedicated.

Bass, who served as mayor from 1974 to 1978, died last month. Council members also are scheduled to decide when to pick up the pieces of a hearing on the rates Pioneer Natural Gas Co. charges Lubbock industrial customers.

The hearing was thrown into confusion when city rate analyst Ervin Looney died last month, and it is likely the hearing will have to be started over.

Discussion of paving in the central business district and modification of the 1980 Criminal Justice Project proposals also are scheduled.

Handicapped Troop Eyed

An organizational meeting for a new scout troop for handicapped boys is scheduled at 8 p.m. today at the Elks Lodge at 29th Street and Slide Road.

A spokesman for the Elks, who are sponsoring the troop, said the group is open to all youngsters of Boy Scout age, regardless of the severity of their handicap. Most of the boys who have already signed up are confined to wheelchairs, the spokesman said.

Charles Whittier and Harvey Schirmer, assisted by Joe Mangelsdorf, will be leaders of the troop. All interested boys and their parents are invited to attend tonight's meeting, the spokesman said.

Further information may be obtained by call the Elks Lodge, 792-4821.

MAGAZINE CHAIRMAN
TORONTO (AP) — For the first time in its 25-year history, Artscan magazine has elected a woman to chair its board of directors. Joan M. Vastokas, an anthropologist and art historian, is associate professor in the department of anthropology and Canadian studies program at Trent University in Peterborough, Ontario.

Two Armed Men Rob Local Pizza Parlor

The city recorded its 20th robbery of the year when two men entered Mr. Gatti's pizza parlor at 5028 50th St. about 11:40 p.m. Tuesday, held up the manager and made off with $1,200.

Shift manager Charles B. Johnson told police one of the two young, black suspects came to the counter, stuck a gun in his face and ordered him to put the restaurant's money in a bag. The other bandit reportedly acted as a lookout at the front door during the entire holdup.

Johnson said the suspects left after getting the money bag, driving off in a 1974 or '75 brown Chevrolet pickup truck. One of four employees at the parlor at the time saw the men drive away and gave chase.

He told police he followed the truck down 48th Street, but lost sight of it on Slide Road.

The suspect armed with the .22-caliber pistol was described as about 5 feet, 7 inches tall, weighing 150 pounds, with short hair. He was reported as wearing a floppy hat, denim jacket, and multi-colored scarf over his face. He also was wearing dark-rimmed glasses.

His companion was said to be about 6 feet, 2 inches tall, weighing 180 pounds, with a muscular build. He was wearing sun glasses, a baseball cap with an orange T-patch and dark jacket with red patches.

Earlier that night, a 19-year-old Lubbock man said he was robbed of his billfold, containing $38 cash, in front of a discount store at 50th Street and Avenue H.

Alan Lee Benedict of Route 7, Box 564, Lubbock, told police he drove himself to Methodist Hospital after being cut on the face with a jagged piece of glass during the holdup about 8:15 p.m. The lacerations were not serious, according to reports.

He said he was confronted by two young Mexican-Americans who assaulted him in the store parking lot, grabbed his wallet and fled in a 1968 or '69 brown two-door Pontiac.

Director Tells Of Conflicts In Agency

AUSTIN (AP) — The new executive director of the Texas Department of Community Affairs told a Senate subcommittee today the agency has a built-in conflict and maybe it should be abolished.

"This is another very disturbing element in this case," Fleischer said.

"There are a lot of things in this case that are disturbing," the judge replied.

"You know from long experience that witnesses sometimes change their testimony," Gasch said. "That is a matter for the jury. I think your motion to strike is premature at this point."

Gennaro was the fourth person to testify at the trial that he delivered cash to Flood. A fifth person had testified he gave the congressman a gift of 100 shares of stock in a Pennsylvania bank.

Gennaro, in testimony Tuesday, said he was solicited for a $100,000 kickback by Flood's administrative assistant, Stephen Elko, "for the work that was being done" to get federal help for Gennaro's financially troubled Crestwood Hills housing development in Mountaintop, Pa., near Wilkes-Barre.

Gennaro said that after he agreed to pay the $100,000 if the project was financed, Elko suggested Flood would be inspired to increase his efforts if Gennaro made a $5,000 contribution to Flood's election campaign. He said Elko suggested it be paid with $2,000 in cash and three checks of $1,000 each signed by Gennaro's relatives rather than himself.

Gennaro testified that he received one $1,000 check from his daughter Oct. 30 and two similar checks from the daughters of his brother, Emil, who was his partner in the homebuilding operation.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Mark Tuohy asked whether he then contacted Elko. "I called Mr. Elko on Oct. 31 from my office in Hazleton," Gennaro replied.

Q. Could it have been a day other than the 31st?
A. No, sir. ... I told him I had the checks and cash and I wanted to make an arrangement to deliver them. ... He suggested a bar-restaurant in Wilkes-Barre later that day at 7 p.m.

Gennaro said he went there with his brother and met Elko and another Flood staffer, Hugh Jones.

"I left the restaurant with Mr. Elko and we drove over to Mr. Flood's home in Mr. Elko's car," the witness said.

Q. What happened in the car?
A. I gave him the three checks for Congressman Flood.

Shortly afterwards they arrived at Flood's home and Elko rapped on the door and walked into the living room where Gennaro said he met Mrs. Flood and another woman he did not know. This was about 7:15 p.m.

Q. What did you do when Flood arrived?
A. I greeted him and then Mr. Elko left the room. I had an envelope from Mr. Flood which I handed to him.

Q. What was in the envelope?
A. Two thousand in cash ... 20 $100 bills.

Q. Did you try to give that money to Mr. Elko when you gave him the checks?
A. Yes, but he said I should give it to Mr. Flood myself.

Q. Did Mr. Flood open the envelope?
A. No, sir.

Q. Did you tell him what was in it?
A. I told him it was a political contribution for his campaign.

Gennaro's testimony began the eighth day of the trial. Flood, wearing his familiar black-vested gabardine suit, sat almost statue-like in a vinyl-padded armchair at the defense table.

Panel Refuses To Reconsider Henley Order

AUSTIN (UPI) — The Court of Criminal Appeals refused today to reconsider its decision overturning the murder conviction of Elmer Wayne Henley Jr. of Houston, who was given six 99-year prison sentences for his part in a bizarre homosexual sex and torture ring held responsible for the deaths of 27 teen-age boys.

The appellate court, without written comment, denied the state's request for permission to seek a rehearing of the Henley case. The court on Dec. 20 had overturned the conviction in a 6-3 decision and ordered a new trial because it said the San Antonio district judge who conducted the trial refused to consider a change of venue request.

The trial was moved from Houston to San Antonio, but Henley's attorneys sought another change of venue because of extensive publicity given the case.

On Aug. 8, 1973, while two victims still were strapped to a "torture board" after a paint sniffing party, Henley told police he had shot and killed Dean Corli, an electrician for whom Henley and a friend had procured the teen-agers.

Henley said Corli, 33, had sexually abused, tortured and murdered 27 boys during the three-year spree.

He led police to a series of lime-soaked graves where the bodies had been buried.

Houston District Attorney Carol Vance contended last month the grounds on which Henley's conviction was overturned was overly technical, and said he would retry the case if there was no alternative.

"We will press for an early trial," Vance said in December. "It's a very serious case. I feel confident that we can proceed."

Vance said he doubted the reversal of Henley's conviction would affect the conviction of David Owen Brooks, 120, a co-part in the sex-torture ring who also has an appeal pending.

Brooks was tried after Henley in Houston, and there was no change of venue hearing at his trial.

TIRED BUT ALIVE — Eighteen-year-old Richard Delorey collapses on a sofa while getting first aid at a U.S. Coast Guard station in New Orleans Monday afternoon after he was rescued from the Gulf of Mexico. # Coogs Visit Tech Tonight

By DON HENRY
Executive Sports Editor

Riding this Southwest Conference roller-coaster hasn't been too much fun for either Texas Tech or the University of Houston. It's time that the cart started an upward climb.

Only, for the two, the cart only has room tonight for one group.

The Cougars have won two in a row after an alarming start, and, in the eyes of Raider coach Gerald Myers, they have solved part of their scoring problems, the way Ken Williams poured in the points Monday night.

And, for the Raiders, "This is a pivotal-type game. If we're going to make a move, we're going to have to start doing something," said Myers.

Thus, the two clubs, owners of two of the SWC's first two post-season tournament titles, will match middle-of-the-pack records tonight in Lubbock Coliseum.

Tipoff will be at 7:30 p.m., and again tonight, the school will have both reserved and general-admission tickets on sale at the gate at 7 p.m.

Although more than 9,000 were on hand for the last home game, that didn't help as Rice whipped the Raiders 62-56. That was the largest margin of loss for the Raiders this year, and the defeat on Jan. 13 started Tech's three-game slide.

Tech is now 3-3 after losing successively to the Owls, SMU and then on Saturday night to Texas A&M 68-63. That dropped Tech to 11-5 for the season.

UH tripped SMU 82-78 Monday night to increase its SWC record to 3-4 (11-8 for the season). That was Houston's third win in its last four games. Two days earlier, it crushed Rice 101-75.

In that win over SMU, Williams ripped for 41 points, hitting principally over the Mustangs' zone defense.

"Their guards weren't shooting well for a while," remarked Myers, "and that had something to do with way they started (the SWC race). But, the last three games, Williams has been shooting well, and that 16 field goals against SMU shows they have that worked out."

"Houston is plenty strong, although they're not quite as tall as they have been. But they still like to get it in to the postmen. With (6-8 Ralph) Hamilton, (6-7, 260-pound Leonard) Mitchell and (6-5 George) Walker, they still have some physical guys."

But, Myers admitted that his main concern is his own team. "This is a very crucial game for us. Very important. If we lose this one, it'll be hard to get up into the top division."

And the top division is important in the bracket for the SWC tournament.

Gent No Gridder

By MICKEY HERSKOWITZ And STEVE PERKINS

Q. I read an interview with writer Pete Gent who said football ought to be taken out of high schools because it's destructive and that football gets boring after a few years. What physical ailments does Gent have from playing football?
Connie Wehring, Memphis, Tenn.

A. Gent's whole problem with pro football was that he was psychologically a basketball player. When he awoke on Mondays with aches and pains, he was outraged. Teammates merely accepted the same result as a norm. Gent left the NFL in protest, however, when the New York Giants cut him. He played five years with the Dallas Cowboys and will someday have a pension to ease his pain.

Q. I hear that soccer is on a decline in England and all over the world. My question is about the game in Germany. Are crowds down, or clubs going broke?
J. L. Gehrke, Milwaukee, Wis.

A. The last attendance results we have on the Bundesliga, Germany's major soccer league, is that a new-record total of eight million fans attended the 306 league matches. The top players earned $200,000 a season (August to mid-May), and the average player makes above $50,000. So don't worry for a while about German soccer.

Q. Why does the NFL football no longer have white stripes near each end, to follow it better in night games? In late games this season that extended into night, while the light was still dusk, I had trouble following the ball even on TV.
Young Rejboldt, Anderson, Ind.

A. Quarterbacks complained that the substance used to create the white stripes made the ball difficult to grip. Also, the NFL believes that night lighting has improved so much that special treatment is no longer necessary. Years ago, the NFL used all-white footballs for night games, but teams wearing white jerseys had too much advantage.

HOT LINE FEEDBACK (from Bob Piper, Saginaw, Mich.): I am writing in reference to your mention of Chester Marcol's 70-yard field goal in practice at Hillsdale College. In 1970, I was a student there and an assistant equipment manager for the football team, and I remember well the afternoon Chet kicked that long kick. It was in a series of kicks that began at the 20 and moved back 10 yards each time to the 50. He never missed a one. The squad begged Coach Muddy Waters to let him keep going. In all the practice and game attempts, I never saw the ball explode off the tee the way that one did. Since the soccer style gives a sidwinder effect, Chet aimed for the corner of the end zone. It curved in and cleared the bar by inches and the team went wild. After practice, I measured the actual yardage of his final kick—73 yards. I knew I had witnessed a football miracle.

What Would Mays Make Playing Today?

NEW YORK (AP) — "If" is a word that Willie Mays says he disdains.

But when pressed about what he thought he would be worth on today's ballooning baseball market if he were 30 years old and a free agent, the newest member of the Hall of Fame said Tuesday, "I could make $8 million."

The usually extroverted, cocky Mays was being somewhat conservative, at least according to Monte Irvin, his former teammate in the black leagues and with the New York Giants.

"On today's market, he would be worth $10 million easily," Irvin said, adding that the day of the $1 million per season player was "not far off." At present, the highest paid player in the majors is Pete Rose, who recently signed an $800,000 per year contract with the Philadelphia Phillies.

Mays, however, had no reservations about his abilities. He discussed them freely after being only the ninth player voted into the baseball shrine in his first year of eligibility, exclusive of those inducted during the initial balloting in 1936.

The "Say Hey Kid" received 409 votes of a possible 432 cast by 10-year members of the Baseball Writers Association of America. See MAYS Page 2

Bears For Real In SWC

By MIKE RABUN
UPI Sports Writer

The Baylor Bears are contending for the lead in the Southwest Conference and Coach Jim Haller admits it's fun to watch.

He also says it is somewhat surprising. Baylor meets league-leading and 16th-ranked Texas tonight before what will be the largest crowd ever to see the Bears play in Waco — 9,200 people in the expanded Heart O' Texas Coliseum.

A win for the Bears would move them into a share of the SWC lead and make them a legitimate contender for the championship they have not won in 29 years. "Before the season I thought we had a chance to be a good club," said Haller, the youngest coach in the conference at 33. "But the thing I am proud of most is the way this team has adjusted to adversity."

"Three players have had deaths associated with their families. We had a kid (James Carter) get in trouble (involving misuse of a credit card) and we had to dismiss him from the squad. "We lost Vinnie Johnson (the conference's leading scorer) when his mother died and he played in a game the day he got back with us."

But once some of that adversity had been cleared, Haller's team started to move. And the Bears made a giant stride Monday night by coming from behind to beat Arkansas in Fayetteville by three points, boosting their league mark to 4-2.

"We've had some things happen that surprised me," Haller said. "Never in my wildest dreams would I have thought Terry Teagle (a 6-4, high leaping freshman from the tiny Texas town of Broadus) would have had the year he is having. You should have seen some of the rebounds he got in Arkansas."

"And another thing that helps is that we have such a close knit club. I've never seen 10 kids as close as we've got."

"We were flying up to Fayetteville in a plane that belongs to one of our loyal supporters. It's one of those plush things with a big stereo in the back, but all they had were country and western tapes."

"I looked back and there was Vinnie and Terry really living on that music. Here is a guy from Brooklyn and a guy from Broadus and they are stomping together. That's fun to watch. We had a bumpy flight back from Arkansas, but I don't think anybody noticed."

"In the Arkansas game we missed a couple of shots we could have hit and coming down the court Vinnie was patting the guy on the rear and telling him to keep shooting because he knew the shots were going to start falling."

"It's fun to see that kind of togetherness."

Baylor will need a great deal of togetherness, along with some good shooting, to beat the Longhorns, who have won five in a row and looked awesome doing it.

Texas' most recent win was a 23-point affair over the 14th-ranked Texas A&M Aggies Monday night.

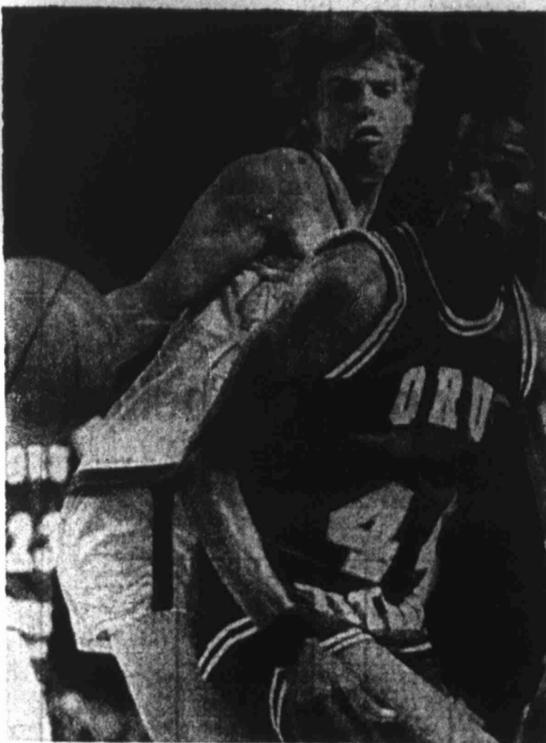

Texas A&M, tied with Baylor for second place, will host TCU (0-5) tonight. Arkansas (3-3) will try to bounce back at SMU (2-3) and Houston (3-4) will travel to Texas Tech (3-3).

Haller, in expressing enthusiasm for his team's play, said he was not sure how long it would last and Texas Coach Abe Lemons, after his team had run over the Aggies, said exactly the same thing. "But these are two different situations," Haller said. "I would think there is no reason why Texas' streak shouldn't last. They have all those players with all that experience."

"I don't have anybody on this club with more than one year of major college experience. Everybody here has been recruited the last two years. We're still improving. Maybe we have reached our peak, but I think we will keep improving."

FAIRBANKS TRIAL EXPENSIVE
BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — Going back to college has not been a cheap decision for football coach Chuck Fairbanks. Nor for the University of Colorado, which estimates it has spent $15,000 so far in legal fees to obtain Fairbanks as its new head football coach. Fairbanks is trying to leave the New England Patriots and head CU's football program. CU President Roland Rautenstrauss said Monday that he doesn't have any bill for legal fees yet, but said CU's legal counsel, Richard Tharp, has told him the total probably is $15,000 — and rising.

Record Maker Not Impressed

By The Associated Press

Big numbers are Sam Worthen's game, so it means little to him to shoot down an important Marquette basketball record.

"It's no big thing," he said after recording a school-record 14 assists during Tuesday night's 75-60 basketball victory over Oral Roberts. "I've had games with more assists in the open leagues in summers back home."

The commanding performance broke the school's single-game assist record set by Jim Boylan against Butler last March.

"I knew the record was coming sooner or later, if not this year, then next year," said the unexcitable Worthen, a 6-foot-5 transfer from McLennan Community College in Waco, Tex. "I know how I play and I know my game. This is a team thing here."

"With the type of team we have, three or four others have the kind of talent to set a record. It's just that everybody has a different role. Mine is to set up everybody for shots."

It Worthen seemed insouciant about his spectacular show, Bernard Toone wasn't. After scoring 24 points for the 13th-ranked Warriors, several of them courtesy of Worthen's terrific passes, Toone insisted that his capable teammate is a combination of last year's backcourt tandem of Boylan and Butch Lee.

"Sam can take over and get the important basket," said Toone. "Then again, he can penetrate, draw a man to him and make a perfect pass to the open man. If he keeps playing like this, there are some good things ahead for us."

Two other ranked teams were in action Tuesday night and both of them won — No. 11 Georgetown beating St. Francis (Pa.) 74-62 and No. 20 North Carolina State routing East Carolina 104-88.

Worthen had 15 points in a splendid all-around effort as the Warriors won their 14th game in 16 this season. Marquette put the game away by outscoring Oral Roberts 15-1 at the start of the second half to take a 51-25 lead.

John Duren scored 17 points and Craig Shelton had 16 to lead Georgetown over St. Francis. Hawkeye Whitney's 28 points led a balanced attack as North Carolina State beat East Carolina and snapped a four-game losing streak.

"The whole thing was beginning to be a nightmare," said North Carolina State Coach Norm Sloan of the losing streak. "We were awfully edgy. We played good defense tonight, but not great. But (after) what we've been through, we're drained mentally."

Elsewhere, Ernie Cobb's 26 points led Boston College over Villanova 83-75; North Carolina-Charlotte beat North Carolina AT 70-61 as Chad Kinch scored 28; Murray Brown's 25 points led Florida State over Georgia Tech 79-73; Tom Witkos made five free throws in the final three minutes, leading Massachusetts over New Hampshire 61-57; Ernest Graham and Larry Gibson led a 22-6 rally at the start of the second half and Maryland went on to beat Navy 82-62 and Frank Gilroy had a career-high 29 points as St. John's walloped Manhattan 80-55.

Tech Announces Grid Schedule

The Texas Tech-Arkansas game, originally scheduled for Lubbock on Dec. 1, will be played on Oct. 13 instead, according to a new Red Raider football schedule released today.

The reason for the change, according to Sports Information Director Keith Samples, was to take away a late game and fill in an open date both teams had on that weekend.

Tech now ends its season Nov. 24 in Houston.

The rest of the schedule looks like this: on Sept. 8, against Southern Cal in Lubbock at 7:30; Sept. 15, New Mexico in Lubbock at 7:30; Sept. 22, Arizona in Tucson at 7:30 (MST); Sept. 29, Baylor in Waco at 2; Oct. 6, Texas A&M in Lubbock at 7:30; Oct. 13, Arkansas in Lubbock at 7:30; Oct. 20, Rice in Lubbock at 2; Nov. 3, Texas at Austin at 2; Nov. 10, TCU in Lubbock at 2; Nov. 17, SMU in Dallas at 1:30 and Nov. 24, against Houston in Houston at 7:30.

Bum's New Contract Only Three Years

HOUSTON (UPI) — Houston Oilers head coach and general manager Bum Phillips has signed a new contract with the team's management that will continue his present dual position, but not for the five years Phillips had anticipated.

With only one week remaining on his current contract, team officials Tuesday said Phillips had signed a three-year pact.

Phillips, 55, is credited with turning the Oilers into a playoff team after he was named head coach before the 1975 season. In four regular seasons his record is 33-25 and the 1978 team advanced to the AFC championship game.

But he has experienced serious problems in dealing with Oilers executives, and that friction caused speculation in November that his success might not be enough to get him rehired.

"I guess I'm coaching out my option. I don't want to be, but I am," he said on Nov. 22. After much publicity was given his situation, he said he wanted to drop the matter and, in mid-December, he said he would sign a five-year contract within two weeks.

A major problem reportedly was Phillips' lack of freedom to make acquisitions for the team without having to have them approved by senior vice president Ladd Herzog.

Phillips did not receive the five-year pact he anticipated, Herzog said, because "the ballclub felt that a three-year contract at this time was all that we were willing to offer."

An Oilers spokesman said Phillips' assistant coaches have been offered contracts and "if they have not signed they probably will soon."

The club did not call a news conference nor did it issue a printed statement of the rehiring, Herzog said. Oilers owner K.S. "Bud" Adams Jr. negotiated the contract.

"Bum was involved in preparing his players for the playoffs, and when the season ended he took some time off. Bud is an extremely busy individual. So it was just a matter of the two getting together and sitting down," Herzog said.

Phillips, who was out of town Tuesday, could not be reached for comment.

Watson Playing At San Diego

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Tom Watson, the outstanding player in the game the last two seasons, opens his 1979 campaign this week in the $250,000 Andy Williams-San Diego Open Golf Tournament with one big goal in mind: Improvement.

And, he said, he's confident he can achieve it.

"I'll get it," he said. "It's not too far away. I'm looking for improvement in my swing so that I can become more consistent. It's not there yet, but it's close."

Improvement over his exploits of 1977 and 1978 would be almost scary.

Each year he led the PGA Tour in money winnings, last year setting an all-time record of $362,428. Each year, he won the Vardon Trophy, the award that goes to the man with the low stroke average. Each year he was named Player of the Year.

It's the first time anyone has swept the three awards in consecutive years.

In the two-year period he won 10 titles, including the Masters and a second British Open. Both the majors came in 1977. He failed to win one of the Big Four titles last year, but had a definite chance in all of them.

And that was in his mind when he admitted that, as his career progresses, he's becoming more and more major-tournament-oriented.

"Those are the tournaments that draw the attention of the press, the media and the public. My No. 1 goal this year is the U.S. Open. You can't be considered a great player if you don't win the U.S. Open," Watson said.

Connors Wins Pro Indoor

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Top-seeded Jimmy Connors' victory in defense of his $250,000 U.S. Pro Indoor Tennis title here was as expected, but came against a late entry.

Connors defeated 19-year-old Van Winitsky 6-4, 6-3 Tuesday night, after the Floridian was inserted for Tom Gorman, who withdrew with back pains.

Winitsky failed, however, to break his opponent's service, and Connors' ended the battle of left-handers with a running cross-court passing shot after Winitsky had saved one match point with a service ace down center.

Winitsky fought off two set points in the ninth game of the first set before failing to Connors' forehand in the 10th game.

"I wasn't too enthused at first about playing against a player like Connors," Winitsky said afterwards. "I didn't find out I was playing him until I got here to practice at 11:00 (a.m.)."

Two line calls interrupted play several minutes, once in the last game of the first set and another in the second game of the second set. Connors moderated his complaint to the referee. "If the umpire's going to make calls, why have linesmen?"

Twelfth-seeded Ilie Nastase of Romania, although bothered by the close proximity of other matches being played simultaneously, defeated Deon Joubert of South Africa 6-4, 6-4 in another first-round match.

At one point, Nastase wandered into the adjacent court where fifth-seeded Eddie Dibbs was in the process of beating Dutchman Tom Okker 6-4, 7-6.

"He (Dibbs) said, 'Why are you coming into the court,' and he was right," Nastase explained. "When you have interruptions sometimes, you have to win a point twice to win one point."

Hank Pfister took a first-round victory over 14th-seeded Dick Stockton 6-2, 6-4. Stockton, who won the title here over Connors in the 1977 final, fought off three match points in the 10th game of the second set.

But Pfister, last year's U.S. Clay Court champion, got a fourth match point with a volley placement off the net and won the next exchange for the match as Stockton backhanded a shot down the line out of court.

Sixth-seeded Brian Gottfried gained the third round by beating Tom Gullickson, 6-4, 6-4. Gullickson's left-handed twin, Tim, also lost, bowing 6-4, 6-3 to Gene Mayer in a second-round match.

All-Pro Mack Announces Retirement

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Tom Mack, the durable offensive guard who played every game during his 13-year National Football League career with the Los Angeles Rams, is quitting football with mostly happy memories.

But there's a measure of long-standing frustration for him, too.

"I'm really disappointed that we weren't able to win the NFL championship while I was playing," Mack said Tuesday as he announced his retirement. "I'm sure the Rams will make it to the Super Bowl sometime within the next few years, and I'm sorry I won't be able to be a part of it."

The 35-year-old Mack, preparing to play in next Monday night's Pro Bowl game, said he was afraid he'd change his mind and play next season if he started thinking about the Rams' chances of finally making it to their first Super Bowl.

"Certainly there was a tendency for me to think about staying around for next year, thinking we had a good shot at it again," he said. "But that would have been an emotional decision and I was determined to make a rational one. So I decided in December, even before we started the playoffs, that this season was going to be my last."

The Rams have done well during Mack's time with them — including winning six consecutive division titles in the past six years. But they've always lost in the playoffs.

"I must hold a record for players who've been in playoff games but not in the Super Bowl," said Mack, with a trace of a smile.

Mack, 6-foot-3, 250 pounds and a perennial All-Pro, will be making his 11th Pro Bowl appearance and feels that's a suitable way to end his career.

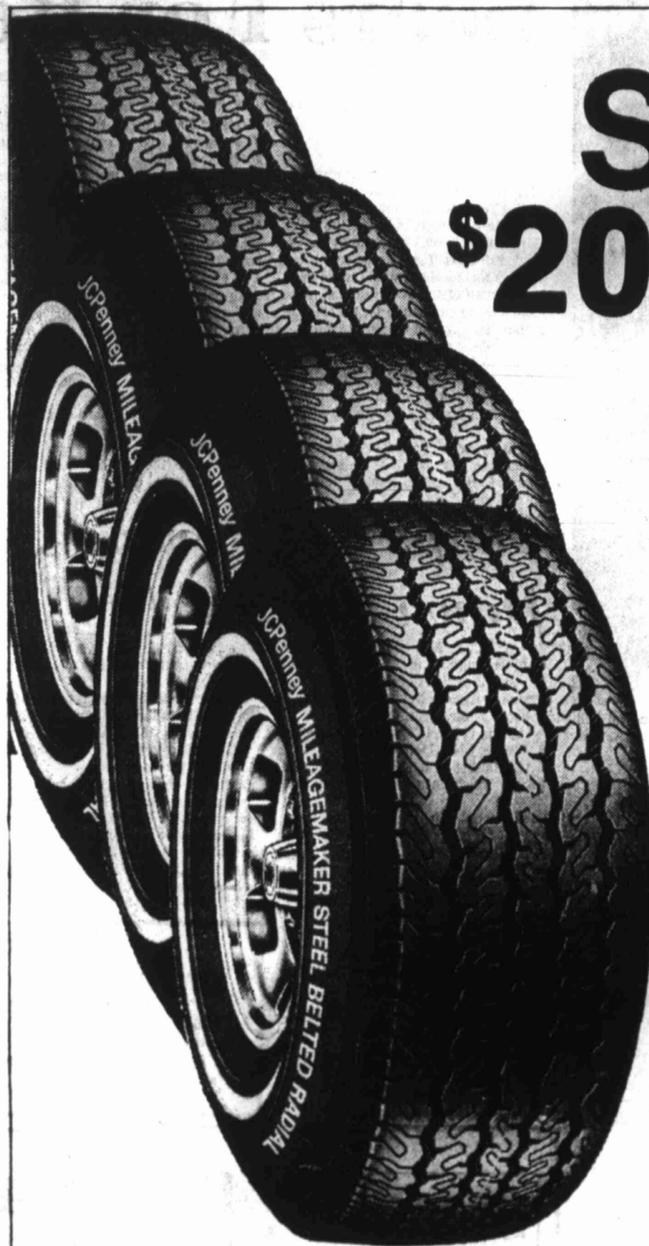

"I think playing my final game here, in the Coliseum, in the Pro Bowl will be a good note to end on," said Mack, Los Angeles' No. 1 draft pick out of Michigan in 1966. "It'll be a fitting swan song."

Looking back over his career, Mack said: "I'm very lucky that I was able to play for 13 years and never miss a game. To go that long without really getting banged up in this business is unusual."

"Although I'm looking forward to working fulltime at my new job, I know I'm going to really miss football. It's been a big part of my life for more than 20 years."

Mack will work fulltime as an engineer with a firm that builds electrical generating plants, a job that he's previously done during the off-season.

"I feel like I proved myself in football," Mack said. "Now I've gotta prove myself somewhere else."

Love Was Always Key Word In Willie Mays' Baseball Success

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

You are a tyke just learning to swing a man-sized baseball bat and put a little spin on your curve ball, and your dreams are some day to be a Joe DiMaggio or a Sandy Koufax and land in the Hall of Fame.

Okay, kids, then listen carefully to Willie Howard "Say Hey" Mays Jr. "The word is 'love,'" said the 47-year-old onetime center field great of the Giants, elected almost unanimously Tuesday for a spot at the shrine in Cooperstown, N.Y., and a glistening bronze plaque to hang there beside DiMaggio, Ty Cobb, Honus Wagner, Walter Johnson and other diamond immortals.

"I hope it doesn't sound too corny," Willie continued, fidgeting nervously in his blue plaid Sunday-go-to-meetin' suit and flaming red tie. "To me love means dedication and sacrifice. You have to love the game.

"It's not true, of course, but my wife once said to me, 'Willie, I think you love baseball more than you love me.'"

Love, insists Willie, also includes unselfishness. "I never thought about making great plays," he said. "I never played for myself. I always wanted to play for the people. The people who watched me loved me. I played for them."

Love, he added, did not mean an erosion of confidence.

"I always knew I would be in the Hall of Fame," Willie said. "When I was 10 years old, growing up around Birmingham, I played with 25-year-old guys. At 15, I was playing semipro baseball. At 18, I was in organized ball with Trenton. At 20, I broke in with the Giants.

"I put a lot of hard work into the game — 22 years in the majors. Why should I doubt my ability? Why should I doubt that some day I would be in the Hall of Fame?"

When reporters sought to get Mays to assess other players and measure their accomplishments with his own, they were startled by his honest bluntness.

"Who is the best ball player you ever saw?" someone asked. "Me," replied Willie, just like that.

"I hope I am not being bashful," he added, using the wrong word. "When I played baseball, I felt nobody in the world could do better than me."

"But excluding yourself, whom do you think was best?" the questioner persisted.

"I would have to do it by categories," Willie responded. "I was a center fielder. So, I'd say Roberto Clemente."

Monte Irvin, a teammate of Mays' first in the black leagues and later with the Giants, stood in the wings and relished every moment of Willie's hour of glory.

"What a guy!" exclaimed Monte, an aide to Commissioner Bowie Kuhn. "I was his roommate. I never saw a kid with so much desire and enthusiasm. He bubbled over. On today's market he would be worth $10 million easily."

Willie credited Monte with keeping him on a proper keel in those formative years.

"He was like a father," Willie acknowledged. "He took care of me. He knew where I was at all times. He sent me to bed early, 9 or 10 every night. No carousing. No girls. Just good living."

Mays, who hit 660 home runs and batted .302 over his 22-year career, told of a reluctance both to follow the Giants franchise to San Francisco in 1958 and to return to New York with the Mets in 1972.

"I didn't want to go West at first," Willie said. "To people out there, there was only one ball player: Joe DiMaggio. I felt there would be a problem. But they said, 'Let's go play, you did it.'"

Mays returned to New York at the insistence of the late Mrs. Joan Payson, owner of the Mets.

"I was getting old — they knew I couldn't play," he said. "But somebody said, 'Hey, we got to take care of this kid.' The last three years were the worst, the most embarrassing of my life. I wasn't able to give the Mets what I thought I should."

Star Quarterbacks Argue

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Terry Bradshaw, fresh from helping Pittsburgh prove it's the best football team on the planet, says flatly that he believes the American Conference is better than the National Conference.

Dallas' Roger Staubach, ever the diplomat, politely disagrees.

Those two — the players who made Super Bowl XIII super — figure to be influential in resolving the debate at the Coliseum next Monday night as the National Football League's longest season ends with the Pro Bowl.

Bradshaw, who led the Steelers to a 35-31 Super Bowl victory over the Cowboys, will be the starting quarterback for the AFC and Staubach will be at the helm of the NFC team.

"I think the AFC is the better conference because it's more exciting," Bradshaw said Tuesday as Pro Bowl preparations began. "I think the AFC teams are a little more open. Maybe it's a carryover from the old American Football League."

"But that's not to say there aren't exciting teams in the NFC," Bradshaw continued. "Dallas, New Orleans, Atlanta and other NFC teams play a pretty open style of game."

"I don't think you can say one conference is better, or more exciting," said Staubach. "Certain teams in the AFC are more exciting than others, and the same goes in the NFC."

"I think the total results of games played between the two conferences are pretty close, and I know we (the Cowboys) have an outstanding record against AFC teams."

Each conference owns four Pro Bowl victories, and Bradshaw and Staubach agreed that an AFC-AFC rivalry has developed.

"I think the players feel pride for their conference," Bradshaw said. "We certainly want to win Monday night."

"I think there's a sense of team pride involved in the Pro Bowl," said Staubach. "It's not the same as regular team pride, where you've spent years with one team. But it's sure enough to make you want your conference to win the Pro Bowl."

There were a couple of last-minute substitutions on the NFC defensive unit, as Green Bay end Ezra Johnson and tackle Doug English of Detroit were named to replace Dallas' ailing Harvey Martin and Randy White. Martin suffered a torn hamstring muscle in the Super Bowl, and White is nursing a fractured finger suffered in the playoff game against Los Angels. The Cowboys' vocal linebacker, Thomas Henderson, was a no-show at the first day of Pro Bowl preparations, but NFC officials said they expected him to arrive later.

Meanwhile, Chuck Fairbanks' coaching future is up in the air as he awaits arbitration that could either bind him to the New England Patriots or release him to take the University of Colorado job. But his immediate plans are quite concrete.

Slaughter Admits Hurt By Hall Exclusion

ROXBORO, N.C. (AP) — Enos Slaughter spent part of the day mending fences on his farm. But the 63-year-old former baseball outfielder found another gap that won't be so easily fixed — his absence in the baseball Hall of Fame for the 15th straight year.

"I really feel bad and a little hurt," Slaughter said when he heard the news that he was 27 votes shy of the 324 required for admission.

"I had strong hopes, but believe me, I didn't lose any sleep over it, and I won't lose any now."

Slaughter played in the major leagues for 21 years, 13 of them with the St. Louis Cardinals. His career batting average was .300, and he bettered that during eight seasons. Slaughter played on two Cardinal World Series teams and on three Series teams while with the New York Yankees.

"I feel I deserve to be in the Hall. Just look at my records — they tell the story," he said.

As expected, Willie Mays was voted into the Hall of Fame, receiving 409 of a possible 432 votes by 10-year members of the Baseball Writers Association of America. Second in the voting, and also falling short of the required number, was former Brooklyn Dodger center fielder Duke Snider.

It was the 15th year that Slaughter fell short of the required number of votes, and he is no longer eligible unless elected by the Veterans' Committee. Its next vote is in five years.

"Look at the guys who have made the Hall in recent times: Eddie Mathews, Ralph Kiner and Yogi Berra. All they had over me were home runs. And the same for Ernie Banks," he said.

"It seems like in order to make the Hall of Fame, you've got to hit home runs... The way I look at baseball, there's a whole lot more to the game than hitting home runs," Slaughter said. Mathews' lifetime batting average was .271, Kiner's was .279 and Berra's was .285.

Slaughter said, however, that he thought Mays deserved the selection.

Mallory Reportedly Turned Job Down

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Bill Mallory, fired as head football coach at the University of Colorado, says he has turned down an offer to become defensive coordinator for Ohio State University.

Mallory said on a local radio sports show Tuesday that he has decided instead to seek a head college coaching position.

He had been offered the Ohio State post by new Buckeye Coach Earle Bruce, who replaced Woody Hayes earlier this month, and said earlier that he wanted to come to Ohio State.

Lakers Red Hot For Knicks

By The Associated Press

Los Angeles may be a nice place to visit, but the New York Knicks would just as soon have it left off their itinerary.

The Knicks' first visit to Los Angeles this season resulted in a 147-124 loss to the Lakers. Tuesday night the home team went one better.

Hitting 63 of 92 field goal attempts, a torrid 685 percentage, the Lakers routed the Knicks 148-124 in a game that saw little effective defense played by either team. It was Los Angeles' highest point total of the National Basketball Association season.

"The way the game was played tonight, a lot of people were going to score points," said Lakers Coach Jerry West. "We were running the fast break real well."

Forward Adrian Dantley, making his first start in more than seven weeks after being sidelined by a hyper-extended knee, shot 11-for-15 and scored 30 points. Other Lakers had equally impressive numbers: Jamaal Wilkes was 13-for-15 for 28 points, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar 8-for-12 for 19, Norm Nixon 7-for-9 for 16 and Don Ford 7-for-8 for 16.

However, the hottest shooter of the night was New York's Bob McAdoo, who made 17 consecutive field goal attempts and scored 45 points, his high as a Knick. McAdoo missed his attempt to tie the NBA record of 18 consecutive field goals, set by Wilt Chamberlain, when his 12-foot jumper midway through the final period rattled the rim and fell off.

In other NBA games, the Seattle SuperSonics beat the Washington Bullets 103-100, the Cleveland Cavaliers edged the Denver Nuggets 108-107, the Chicago Bulls topped the Boston Celtics 100-90, the Indiana Pacers trimmed the Atlanta Hawks 110-105 and the New Orleans Jazz nipped the Kansas City Kings 118-116.

The Knicks hit 50 percent of their shots, good enough to win most games, but not good enough to beat the sizzling Lakers.

Before many of the fans at the Forum had a chance to get settled in their seats, the Lakers held a 9-0 lead.

It was a sign of things to come.

The Lakers led 40-36 after the first quarter and outscored New York 16-4 to start the second period. New York trailed 79-67 at the half, by which time Dantley already had 21 points and Wilkes 10.

Los Angeles stretched its lead to 114-93 after three periods and coasted home despite McAdoo's shooting streak. The Knicks' 6-foot-10 forward missed five of his last six shots and finished with 19-for-27. He was also the game's leading rebounder with 10.

"I didn't know anything about the record," McAdoo said. "I don't pay attention to those things. If I would have known, I probably wouldn't have tried a jump shot with a guy in my face, but a layup instead."

"Besides, I don't want a record when we're getting our tails whipped."

Maybe the only good news for the Knicks was that they don't have to come back to Los Angeles again this season.

Sonics 105, Bullets 99

In a rematch of last year's NBA finalists, Gus Williams scored 24 points and made nine steals as Seattle erased a 66-49 third-period deficit and beat the Bullets. Washington managed to score just 16 points in the fourth quarter against the aggressive Sonics defense.

"We take a lot of pride in our defense," said Sonics Coach Lenny Wilkens. "We did a lot of double-teaming and helping out at the end. That was the difference."

The Bullets, who beat Seattle in seven games for the NBA title last spring but have lost both their meetings this season, made only six of 19 shots and committed eight turnovers in the fourth quarter.

"You can't expect to win when you throw the ball away that much," said Coach Dick Motta of the Bullets.

Ponies Make Pretty Poor Hosts

By JIM FERGUSON

Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

No one will ever call the Coronado Mustangs a congenial host.

What the Mustangs did was invite the Plainview Bulldogs into their home, make it appear the "Dogs had a chance of coming out of the District 4-AAAA basketball game with a win, and then before the guests knew what had happened — zip — the Ponies pulled the rug out from under them.

Now is that nice?

Playing the part of a downright naughty boy, the Mustangs allowed the Bulldogs to come back from a 10-point deficit in the third quarter to tie the game at 44-44 at the end of the stanza.

But before the Bulldogs knew what hit them during the final verse, the Ponies scored 10 unanswered points, leaving PHS with a 54-48 loss.

"It's unexplainable what happened," said CHS coach Barry Arwine. "They really came back on us... something we hadn't expected."

Or had they?

The Bulldogs, still very much in the loop title chase had they beaten the Mustangs, gave it their best shot in the third quarter — outscoring Coronado 20-12 — but in the final period the visitors from the north gave it their worst shot.

It wasn't until the 1:33 point in the fourth stanza that the Bulldogs got their first bucket when high scorer Erwin Davis connected on a 16-foot jumper, cutting CHS' lead to 8, 54-46.

Davis was Plainview's only threat for most of the game, hitting eight shots from the field and three free throws from 19 points.

"We had trouble with him," confirmed Arwine. "He really played a fine game for them."

During Plainview's third-quarter surge, which saw it come from a 44-36 margin to time the game at 44-44, Davis hit five of the points.

However at the start of the final period, Mark Reed cannot two free throws. Scott Williams bucketed a four-foot jumper. Sam Law connected on a pair of freebies and Steve Ahlenius layed in a shot, to help CHS to a 52-44 lead. Law hit a 14-footer to boost that margin to 10, 54-44, with 3:11 left.

And by then it was time to call in the dogs.

The win sets up a showdown with Monterey Friday night in the MHS gym for the first-half title. Both teams enter the game with 3-0 loop marks.

Some may have thought the Mustangs may have been looking a little ahead to the encounter with Monterey, but Arwine said that just ain't true.

"We had to beat them first," said Arwine. "If we had lost and then beat Monterey, there's a three-way tie. So a win was a must."

Reed, who went five-for-five from the free-throw line, was Coronado's leading scorer with 15 points. Law and Ahlenius followed with 13 and 12 points, respectively.

Mats Top Canyon

By BOB BAJACKSON

Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

When Estacado coach J.J. Wood entered his office following Tuesday night's District 1-AAA battle against Canyon, the Matador mentor sarcastically said, "That was the most consistent performance we've had this year."

And although the Matador mentor was mostly speaking in jest, his statement was accurate — at least in the final of the contest. Estacado caused three Canyon turnovers in the final minute of the contest to nip the Eagles 57-53.

"We weren't mentally ready to play," said Wood. "We didn't have the intensity until the final minute."

Trailing 53-50 with 1:14 remaining, postman John Jones moved the Matadors within a point on a tip-in.

Next forward Winston Gipson, the game's leading scorer with 28 points, connected the first theft with a bucket from the left corner to give Estacado the lead for good 54-53.

Estacado guard Mike Chatham was guilty of holding Eagle forward Gary Geil, but the Matadors used a timeout to let Geil think about the one-and-one situation.

The strategy seemed to pay off as the Canyon forward missed the first free throw and the Matadors controlled the rebound.

Estacado then called its final timeout to go into a delay offense.

The Matadors played a passing game at the top of the key before guard Chatham was fouled with 13 seconds to play.

Canyon then used its final timeout to let the Matador guard worry about the free shot. But once play began, Chatham hit nothing but net on both charity shots as Estacado built a 57-53 advantage.

As Canyon guard Larry Whitson crossed the 10-second line, Matador forward Fred Dunn stole the ball for the final time. Estacado played keep away for 11 seconds until Turner drew an intentional foul.

The 6-5 Matador postman, who has been having trouble sinking free shots this season, hit on both tries for the final margin of victory.

"The key to the game is that we didn't have our best ball handler (Kendall Walling) on the court," said Canyon coach B.B. Kendrick. "He missed the trip for disciplinary reasons."

CTK Gets Another Win

By CHUCK McDONALD

Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Christ The King basketball coach John Opperman has a simple philosophy about putting points on the board.

"Our press is our offense as far as we are concerned," said Opperman following CTK's 81-45 romp over Amarillo Alamo Catholic high Tuesday night.

Opperman's Trojans pressed the visitors all over the court, forcing them into numerous turnovers and intercepted passes. And off of these steals usually came an easy CTK bucket.

"It (the press) is the only defense we run," said Opperman. "We started off slowly with it at the beginning of the season but since district has begun we've been press all the time."

Opperman's defensive scheme has worked pretty well since the Trojans began loop play. CTK clinched the district crown with their victory last night with a 5-0 slate.

"We didn't play that well overall to-night," he added "but we played well in spurts."

One of those spurts came in the second period when the jumped out to a 51-30 halftime lead. And CTK reeled off 10 unanswered points at the start of the second half to put the game out of reach.

Then the Trojans relaxed their defense somewhat and the scoring pace slowed down considerably. Everyone on the CTK bench got in on the action in the final period to put the game on ice.

"Since district play has begun, we've become a real balanced team scoring-wise," Opperman commented before the game.

He couldn't have called it better.

The Trojans had all five starters score in double figures. Ed Connors led with 18, Sean Flynn had 16, Jimmy Durham 15, Matt Washburn 12 and Randy Kitten adde 10.

Some Benefit, Others Hurt By Proposed Budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — One group of college students would no longer get federal grants to pay their tuition. But others would for the first time get subsidized loans to pay education bills.

Fourteen-year-olds would no longer get special summer jobs, but many might be eligible for an expanded program of health care.

Disability pensions for veterans would go up and federal subsidies for school children's lunches would go down.

These and hundreds of other items are included in the half-trillion dollar federal budget proposed by President Carter, a massive document that is often hard to relate to individuals. The budget talks in billions and millions of dollars, while most families struggle with hundreds or thousands.

But the federal budget is made up of minute parts, many of which touch the lives of poor people or rich people or just about everybody.

Some of the parts are easier to see and understand than others.

Taxes are the most obvious part of the federal budget for most Americans.

For a family of four with one worker making $17,500 a year — about the median income — Carter's budget means federal income taxes of $1,609 and Social Security taxes of $1,073. The income taxes will be $136 below 1978 levels and the Social Security levy up $14 from that year.

For this family there is a much less obvious feature built into the Carter budget — inflation. Although federal spending doesn't call for inflation at a certain rate, it does project what the rise in consumer prices will be.

For this family of four, the "inflation tax" of lowered buying power for calendar 1980 would total $1,103.

For a similar four-member family with one worker earning $30,000, inflation's bite jumps to $1,890 in 1980.

At the same time, the 1980 budget would mean federal income taxes of $5,917 for that family, down $315 from 1978. But Social Security levies will jump $517 over 1978 to $1,588.

Inflation also has other effects on individuals and the federal budget.

For example, the number of college students eligible for Basic Education Opportunity Grants that provide up to $1,800 for education costs is projected to drop in fiscal 1980. The reason, the budget says, is that inflation will push more families into higher income brackets and thus make them ineligible.

But those same students will be able for the first time to get federally insured student loans under the new budget. They will then be able to borrow the money for tuition and other costs at a low interest rate. But they will have to pay the money back, in contrast to the grants, which they do not have to pay back.

Fourteen-year-olds would no longer be eligible for federally funded summer jobs if Carter's proposal is adopted. You would have to be 15 or older in the summer of 1980 to get a federally funded slot.

But the Carter budget would also mean that many of those same teen-agers would be eligible for a special medical care program aimed at detecting and correcting health problems before they become too severe.

Pensions for disabled veterans would be raised by 7.9 percent under the Carter spending plan and then raised periodically with cost of living increases.

But school lunches would cost more under the Carter proposal. He wants to cut the government subsidy by a nickel a meal for school breakfasts and lunches for children from homes with incomes of more than $12,945 a year. This would force schools to raise the prices of meals in their cafeterias to make up for the lost revenue.

Public Employment Reduction Suggested

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's 1980 budget would phase out 158,000 adult jobs and 250,000 summer youth jobs from the government's giant public employment program while providing new incentives for private industry to hire the chronically unemployed.

Carter proposed in his new budget Monday that $729 million be trimmed from the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act program, reducing its cost by 7 percent to $9.6 billion. The cut stems mainly from a gradual reduction in adult jobs from 625,000 to 467,000.

But most of the savings would be eaten up by an estimated $500 million in tax credits that the administration would give to firms that provide jobs, mostly for young, poor adults.

Government officials predict that the new Targeted Employment Tax Credit, passed by Congress last fall as part of its new tax bill, will prompt the creation of 60,000 private-sector jobs during fiscal 1980.

The administration proposes the cut in CETA on the basis of its forecast that the nation's unemployment rate, now at 5.9 percent, will rise only to 6.2 percent in 1979, and stay there through 1980.

That forecast is more optimistic than predictions by private economists, who expect unemployment to rise this year to 7 percent or more.

However, the Labor Department said the administration "will consider changing its public service employment requirement if unemployment departs significantly from the (6.2 percent) projection."

Each 1 percent rise in the jobless rate represents about 1 million people.

Labor, minority and urban leaders have complained about the CETA cuts that Carter had been expected to make, noting that unemployment among minorities is above 11 percent. For black teenagers it is 35 percent.

In defense, Carter argued in his budget proposal that the economy has improved "substantially" since 1977, when CETA was expanded sharply to combat a jobless rate of more than 7 percent. The administration also responded that it is not proposing cuts in jobs targeted for the poor.

Administration officials contended that they are reshaping CETA to place more emphasis on aid to those who need it most and to put more job-creation responsibility on the shoulders of private business.

At its peak last year, CETA created 725,000 jobs, but Congress ordered that the program be reduced by next Oct. 1, when the 1980 fiscal year begins, to 625,000 jobs. The administration reduced the program ahead of time — reaching that mark last year.

Specific CETA proposals in the budget include:

- The number of public service jobs reserved for the hard-core unemployed would remain at 267,000, the same as in fiscal 1979.
- Jobs for people who are idled during economic downturns would be reduced from 358,000 to 200,000 during fiscal 1980. The number of jobs created under this portion of the program is tied to changes in unemployment, and the 200,000 figure assumes a 6.2 percent jobless rate.
- Overall spending for youth employment and training programs would be reduced by about $110 million to $2.1 billion.
- Summer jobs for disadvantaged youths would be cut from 1 million to 750,000 by excluding 14-year-olds from the program. The reduction would save $136 million.
- Spending for the Youth Employment and Demonstration Projects Act, the basic year-round youth programs, would remain at $1.2 billion, but the number of jobs would be increased by nearly 10,000 to 203,700 because of a shift to less expensive program activities.
- Spending for the Job Corps would rise slightly from $375 million to $400 million, and the number of jobs would rise from 36,000 to 44,000 — a goal authorized by Congress in 1977 but not reached by the Labor Department.

Many Urban Policy Points Abandoned

WASHINGTON (AP) — Less than a year after it was unveiled, President Carter is abandoning or scaling back major elements of his urban policy. His 1980 budget blueprint also proposes a reduction in the government's housing subsidy efforts.

The budget carries a significant cut in Carter's urban policy proposals. The budget text says a re-examination of the urban programs was necessary because of austerity efforts.

When he released it last March, Carter's urban policy carried a $2.9 billion price tag for 1980. Carter's new budget plan proposes $1.3 billion for urban initiatives, rising to $2.7 billion in 1981.

A billion dollars worth of labor-intensive public works projects is cut from the Carter spending plan, as is a $200 million fund geared to reward states which implement national urban goals.

The two programs — sacrificed to austerity — were among the best-publicized of all the urban initiatives unveiled by Carter last March.

Another urban policy program, the National Development Bank, is being re-submitted to Congress this year, as expected.

"The current austere budget has forced a thorough re-examination of federal programs providing community development assistance to states and local communities, including the program increases and initiatives contained in the president's urban policy," says the text that accompanied Carter's budget plan.

The bank's survival is due to Carter's emphasis on economic development, and to the fact that the bank is not a big-budget item. The bulk of its $3.5 billion in budget authority will go for loan guarantees to stimulate private investment in slow-growing city and rural areas. Such loan guarantees are off-budget items since they cost nothing so long as the loans are repaid.

Projected bank spending for 1980 is about $200 million, when first unveiled by Carter, spending was earmarked at $602 million.

The urban parks program, considered for abandonment at one point during the budget process, remains alive, but at a reduced level. Spending is planned at $20 million in 1980; Carter's original proposal called for spending $62 million in 1980.

ACTION's new program to help mobilize neighborhood volunteers was cut way back. The original Carter urban plan called for spending $37 million in 1980, his budget calls for $8 million.

Also, Carter is scaling back his proposed $660 million "countercyclical" aid program to pump federal dollars into state and local governments to help them overcome ups and downs in the national economy. The plan was rejected by Congress last December.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here are major segments of President Carter's fiscal 1980 budget, which he submitted to Congress on Monday:

ECONOMIC OUTLOOK: The budget anticipates that consumer prices will rise 7.4 percent in 1979, not as much as the 9.2 percent inflation rate in 1978. Unemployment may increase from 5.9 percent to 6.2 percent.

DEFENSE: Spending increase of $10.8 billion to $122.7 billion. It is in accord with a promise to NATO to increase defense spending by 3 percent after inflation is considered.

THE POOR: Spending increase of $4.5 billion to $68.5 billion. Programs include Medicaid, food stamps, subsidized housing and nutrition programs.

JOBS: Public service job program would be cut by $729 million to $9.6 billion. It would eliminate 150,000 adult jobs and 250,000 summer youth jobs, but businesses would get a tax break for hiring young, poor adults.

NATIONAL DEBT: Interest paid will be $57.1 billion. The national debt is expected to rise from $787 billion now to $899 billion by October 1980.

FEDERAL GRANTS: Aid to states and local governments will barely increase, from $82.1 billion to $82.9 billion.

SOCIAL SECURITY: Spending will increase by $13 billion to $115.2 billion. Proposals will be made to eliminate what Carter calls some unnecessary benefits. Taxes might be cut in 1981.

WAGE INSURANCE: Anti-inflation program to insure workers against 7 percent inflation may cost $2.5 billion in 1980 if it is enacted.

ENERGY: A reduction in Department of Energy budget from $8.95 billion in the current fiscal year to $8.89 billion, when offsetting revenues are taken into account.

FOOD AND NUTRITION: The Agriculture Department proposes to spend more than $10.8 billion on these programs, compared with less than $9.6 billion in this fiscal year.

AGRICULTURE: Reduction from $20.2 billion in fiscal 1979 to $18.4 billion in fiscal 1980, based on an expectation of "average" weather for farmers.

FOREIGN AID: A total of $8.3 billion is budgeted for financial and economic assistance, compared with $7 billion in fiscal 1979.

Allotment For Energy Programs About Same

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter proposed Monday to spend about as much money on energy programs in fiscal 1980 as this year while shifting the emphasis slightly from big demonstration projects toward advanced research and development.

In a budget which he termed austere, Carter listed energy as one of his top three priorities, in company with defense and aid for needy Americans.

As a result, spending by the Department of Energy — on its basic energy programs — holds the line in Carter's tight budget, despite some reshuffling of funds among those programs. Spending would total $6.5 billion in the year beginning next Oct. 1, compared with the current $6.56 billion outlay.

The administration's budget description notes proposed spending increases on solar energy research and development, further boosted by anticipated tax credits for solar installations under legislation passed last year.

Solar spending, in fact, shows a 26 percent increase from some $639 million in fiscal 1979 to $804 million in the new budget. The increase takes the form, mainly, of a rise in solar research and development from $333 million to $465 million, up almost 40 percent.

But solar's gain is nuclear energy's loss, with some $124 million cut from programs on nuclear fission, from the current $1.1 billion to $987 million.

The proposed cuts result largely from the administration's policies not to reprocess spent fuel from commercial nuclear power plants and not to proceed with the Clinch River breeder reactor project in Tennessee.

While it opposes reprocessing to extract usable fuel from spent fuel because of fears that such technology might encourage the spread of nuclear weapons, the administration has proposed that the government take responsibility for storing spent fuel.

The new budget anticipates new income of about $100 million from this activity, which is subject to approval by Congress.

Programs to press development of the fossil fuels — oil, natural gas and coal — are cut moderately in the proposed budget.

Carter proposed to build a demonstration plant for converting coal into pipeline-quality gas, but to build only one of two proposed demonstration plants for turning coal into either a liquid or a clean solid fuel.

State, Local Needs Feel Austerity Bite

WASHINGTON (AP) — A 20-year period of unabated growth in federal aid to state and local governments may be ending.

Federal grants — for dozens of programs ranging from Medicaid and highway construction to school lunch programs and revenue-sharing — have been increasing at an annual rate of 14.6 percent. In his 1980 budget plan, President Carter proposes almost no increase at all.

Administration officials say the abrupt no-growth blueprint is due to an overall need for austerity and the reduction of several big-ticket anti-recession programs.

Carter's budget would earmark $82.9 billion for federal grants in the 1980 fiscal year beginning next Oct. 1. It is barely above the $82.1 billion that will be spent this year. Considering inflation, the $800-million increase is actually a decline in real dollars.

If Congress goes along, this austerity would leave state and city officials to fend against inflationary pressures and tax-cut fever without assistance from Washington.

The no-growth state and local allocation actually involves increases in some areas — such as Medicaid, educational aid and public housing — offset by large cuts in public service jobs, public works grants and fiscal aid to governments.

The Carter budget would reverse two significant trends:

- From 1955 to 1978, the federal contribution of state and local spending climbed from 10.1 percent to 26.7 percent. Under the Carter budget, 23.6 percent of state and local outlays would be federal money.
- From 1955 to 1978, grants to state and local governments increased as a percentage of all U.S. spending, from 4.7 percent to 17.3 percent. Under the Carter plan, this would slide back to 15.6 percent.

Even in 1981, when grants and aid are projected to increase to $88 billion, the new trends would be maintained.

According to an administration analysis of the 1980 budget plan, the relatively slow growth in grants planned from 1978 to 1980 is a direct result of four major factors:

- The need for budget austerity in the war on inflation.
- Efforts to hold down health costs through hospital cost containment and anti-fraud efforts.
- Shifts in demographic trends that could result in savings to state or local governments.
- Public works outlays are due to decline from $2.1 billion this year to $300 million in 1980. Public works money was spent on projects such as firehouse or library construction, or road and public building repairs.

CETA (Comprehensive Employment and Training Act) public service job cutbacks will result in a $35-million decline in spending. The number of such jobs will be cut from 625,000 at the end of fiscal 1979 to 467,000 at the end of 1980.

And the administration proposes to replace the $1 billion anti-recession aid program, which pumped federal dollars into all the states as well as hundreds of cities and counties, with a $150 million program targeted to help cities with especially high jobless rates.

Congress killed off the larger program last December.

Said the Carter analysis: "When this administration took office there was a need for economic stimulus to reduce unemployment and promote economic recovery... grant outlays increased 14 percent in just one year, from 1977 to 1978.

"These stimulus programs were designed to be temporary, and their phasing-down in 1980 reflects the substantially different economic conditions today."

The administration also is predicting a $1.2 billion savings in health programs as the result of anti-fraud programs and hospital cost containment efforts. However, its cost containment bill was defeated in Congress last year and faces a tough struggle in the current Congress.

Health Care Receives High Priority

WASHINGTON (AP) — By controlling the ever-rising costs of hospitalization and health care, President Carter hopes to offset the cost of major new programs to help children, alcoholics and the mentally ill and teach people how to stay healthy.

The president's budget proposals for the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, released Monday, asked for record outlays of $19.4 billion in fiscal 1980, which begins Oct. 1. The great bulk of that total would be paid out in higher Social Security benefits for most recipients.

At the same time, Carter proposed cuts in some "unnecessary and wind-fall" Social Security benefits, coupled with a promise to consider reducing Social Security taxes paid by workers and their employers in 1981.

The president indicated he has modified his plan for overhauling the welfare system, which failed to win congressional approval last year. And he said the budget emphasizes programs aimed at critical health needs "as early steps toward" his promised national health insurance plan.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., has vowed to wage a campaign for speedier implementation of a national health insurance program.

The budget generally reflects a no-growth policy in education during a period of concern about inflation and fiscal restraint. There would be some increases for elementary and secondary school aid and decreases in basic grants for college students.

The cornerstone of the HEW budget, which would increase spending by 10.3 percent over the estimated total of $180.7 billion in fiscal 1979, is a demand that hospitals voluntarily hold their fee increases to 9.7 percent or face mandatory controls.

Explanatory budget documents said the voluntary program would reduce federal spending for health care by $1.7 billion when compared to what would be spent if hospitals do not comply. The hospital industry launched its own voluntary effort last year in a so-far successful tactic to stave off legislation to stop inflation in the health care industry. About $1 in every $5 spent by HEW now goes to provide health care through Medicare and Medicaid.

Carter also announced plans to ease the cost of paying health bills by reducing federal subsidies for malpractice insurance and helping hospitals retire unused or unnecessary beds.

In a cost-saving gesture that won him a quick rebuke from the International Chiropractors Association, the president proposed to stop paying $35 million a year to chiropractors who treat Medicare patients.

Proposed Defense Budget Aimed At Steady Soviet Buildup

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter proposed Monday spending a record $122.7 billion on defense next year to counter a steady Soviet military buildup expected to continue despite a pending agreement to limit strategic nuclear arms.

Carter's budget would increase spending by $10.8 billion and speed development of a big, accurate, mobile, long-range missile designed to elude possible Soviet surprise attack.

Although the twice-delayed missile project probably will get much attention, Carter noted that most of his fiscal 1980 defense budget will be spent to strengthen the conventional striking and staying power of the nation's ground, sea and air forces geared to fighting heavy Soviet forces in Europe.

"The budget anticipates successful completion of a new strategic arms limitation treaty that will reduce the danger of nuclear war and help restrain future increases in strategic spending," Carter told Congress.

But he warned that "the treaty will not automatically make our strategic forces secure or end the arms competition."

In a separate statement, Defense Secretary Harold Brown said Carter's new military budget recommends "resources which reflect President Carter's determination to counter the Soviet military buildup and to fulfill his pledge to NATO to increase U.S. defense spending by 3 percent per annum in real terms."

According to Pentagon budget analysts, the increased spending for fiscal 1980, which begins next Oct. 1, will represent a 3.1 percent "real growth" rise after allowing for inflation.

Carter's decision to increase spending has brought criticism from Democratic liberals, who have complained that adding to the defense budget siphons money that otherwise would be available for social programs.

Along with his fiscal 1980 budget, Carter sent Congress a request for an additional $2.2 billion in budget authority for the current 1979 year, but action on this supplemental request probably will come too late to affect spending totals this year.

The $2.2 billion supplement, which the Carter administration had forecast last year, is intended to make up for funds denied by the House and Senate after Carter successfully vetoed legislation that would have included a giant new nuclear-powered aircraft carrier.

In his message to the new Congress, Carter stressed that money is needed this year "to pursue full-scale development of a larger, more accurate intercontinental ballistic missile capable, with modifications, of being deployed in submarines, aircraft or land bases."

This move has been delayed twice previously by Carter because of indecision about how the new missile would be based. But a key decision on basing is expected by April and Carter's request for a total of $935 million was made in anticipation of a go-ahead decision by his administration.

In another key aspect of the nation's nuclear striking forces, Carter proposed $475.4 million for full-scale production of 225 new cruise missiles, which could be launched from B-52 bombers against targets inside the Soviet Union.

At the same time, the budget would provide $41 million to push ahead with a new, longer-range Trident II missile which could strike targets 6,500 miles from their submarine launching tubes.

Such programs will continue and even grow in the future, despite the pending strategic arms agreement with the Soviets, defense officials say.

The new budget calls for more than $1.6 billion for an oil-powered aircraft carrier, but it represents a defeat for the Navy, which wanted a bigger ship than the 60,000-ton new design vessel Carter approved.

And the president dealt the Navy another setback, in effect, by signaling that he plans no more nuclear-powered surface ships. That means that a cruiser equipped with the advanced Aegis air defense missile, planned for construction in 1983, will be an oil-burner rather than nuclear-propelled as originally planned.

Carter stressed a "shift toward less expensive but still highly capable ships" will involve conventional power only.

However, he gave the Navy an eighth nuclear-powered Trident missile-firing submarine, which he withheld last year, along with 14 other new ships, including the carrier, six frigates and other vessels.

For the ground forces, the president proposed these improvements:

- Additional mechanized infantry and armor battalions for European-oriented divisions.
- A one-third boost in artillery guns and additional anti-tank weapons in Europe.
- More equipment stockpiled in Europe to await arrival of troops sent from the United States in a war emergency.

Also, Carter proposed across-the-board increases in major Army weapons buys, including the first purchases of a new "fighting vehicle" designed to carry infantrymen into battle alongside the new XM-1 tank.

For the Air Force, the president proposed buying 144 new A-10 attack planes designed to strike Soviet armor columns, an additional 60 F-15 fighter planes, 175 of the advanced F-16 air combat fighters, and three more Sentry airborne warning and control craft.

To improve U.S. ability to resupply its overseas forces in a crisis, Carter asked for another $190 million for a new combination cargo and transport plane.

The Marine Corps lost its prized AV-8B "Jumpjet" battlefield bomber, which failed to make the budget this year.

A controversial project to install a system of below-ground cables in upper Michigan to communicate with submarines deep in the ocean was kept alive with a $13.5 million budget request while Carter decides whether to finally approve or disapprove its currently planned location.

Plan Makes Merchants, Bankers Partners

ST. LOUIS (AP) — When Bobbie Stites goes to the supermarket, she puts food in her shopping bag and cash in her savings account.

She gets a discount for paying cash and the store deposits that savings into her bank account.

It's called Savings Plus, a brainchild of John Wilson, a Sikeston, Mo., lawyer. He says the plan makes partners of merchants and bankers — to the advantage of the 100,000 or so consumers participating in it. And he's making money from fees paid by the stores.

"I think it's fantastic," says Mrs. Stites, a Dexter, Mo., mother of four. "I use it every time I go to the grocery store."

Here's how it works. Consumers willing to pay cash — whether it be for groceries, gasoline or just about anything else — are given a discount ranging from 1 1/4 percent to 20 percent but averaging 5 percent. Rather than subtracting the discount from the price paid by the shopper, it is sent to the consumer's bank, where it is deposited in a savings account.

Result: the consumer builds up savings, the bank adds customers and accounts, and — in theory, at least — the merchant attracts more buyers. He makes up in additional volume what he sacrifices in discount rates.

Pam Patterson of St. Louis figures the plan will enable her to save $200 a year. "I use it everywhere I can," she says, adding it was especially valuable during the Christmas shopping season.

"It's a good deal all around," says Wilson, who gets his cut from fees paid by participating stores and from operators who try to round up willing merchants for the banks.

In the 12 months since Savings Plus sprouted in southeast Missouri, 10 banks, 2,500 merchants and about 100,000 consumers have joined the system, Wilson says.

He says he expects those figures to double by next spring and predicts the system will spread nationwide within 18 months.

"Even now it's hard to keep up with the requests," Wilson says. He says new franchisees will open soon in Ohio, Louisiana, Arkansas and Oklahoma, and franchisees in seven other states will join the system by the end of 1979.

Wilson's company, American Business Enterprises, collects a fee of 2 percent to 3 percent of the purchase price of an item from merchants. That covers administration costs, training and promotion. In 1837, a fire destroyed nearly all the business district of St. John, New Brunswick.

"If the merchant agrees to give consumers a 5 percent discount, we request 3 percent on top of that," says Jim Hulen, treasurer of American Business Enterprises. He said the system is making "a small amount," but he wouldn't elaborate.

Savings Plus has been a success, Wilson says, because people are willing to forego the convenience of credit buying in favor of paying cash — given the incentive of a discount.

"This makes you think a little harder about pulling out the old credit card every time," Mrs. Stites says.

The moon is moving from the last quarter toward a new moon.

The morning stars are Mercury, Venus, Mars, Jupiter and Saturn.

There is no evening star.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Aquarius.

American sculptor Paul Wayland Barrett was born Jan. 24, 1865.

On this day in history:

In 1908, the first Boy Scout troop was organized in England by Sir Robert Baden-Powell, a general in the British Army.

In 1922, Christian Nelson of Onawa, Iowa, received a patent for his "Eskimo Pie," a brick of ice cream encased in a coating of chocolate.

In 1965, the world mourned the death of famous English statesman Sir Winston Churchill, known as the "first citizen of the free world" and leader of Britain during the darkest days of World War II.

In 1975, a bomb believed to have been set by Puerto Rican nationalists ripped through a 19th-century annex to New York City's historic Fraunces Tavern. Four people were killed and 44 injured.

A thought for the day:

Sir Winston Churchill said, "Nothing in life is so exhilarating as to be shot at without result."
