Midland County's 'gin game'

Because of one of the worst crop yields in recent times, some Midland County cotton farmers are plowing their fields under. But those who plan to market their fiber depend upon a fascinating machine — the cotton gin. Read the full story in this Sunday's West Texas Life.

Mario and Hope Barboza were burned out of house and home, and they weren't even there.

So were their six children, ages 8 to 17, while they were in church. Their parents were visiting kinfolk in town.

Even their Christmas tree and the wrapped gifts went up in smoke or were charred or rendered useless by smoke or the "saving" water squirted by the firemen.

But those losses didn't approach that of their clothing, most of their furniture, major and minor appliances, dishes and the sundry items a family accumulates over the years.

"They (firemen) don't know what caused it," Mrs. Barboza said of the fire. "If they don't know, I sure can't tell them."

"I lost everything," she said. The trauma of the fire is over, the work of rebuilding the house south of Midland is beginning.

Meanwhile, the Barboza family does have shelter, they're staying with her brother, Juan Sanchez, and his family, in an apartment behind the Sanchez place at 309 E. Maple Ave.

It's a crowded situation. Barboza, the family's 37-year-old laborer provider, and his brother-in-law Sanchez are cleaning up the house for the rebuilding effort.

Now may be the time for Good Samaritans to come into play.

The family needs help in the form of clothing, kitchen utensils, dishes, furniture, lumber and other building material to patch up the frame house, and food for the energy the work requires.

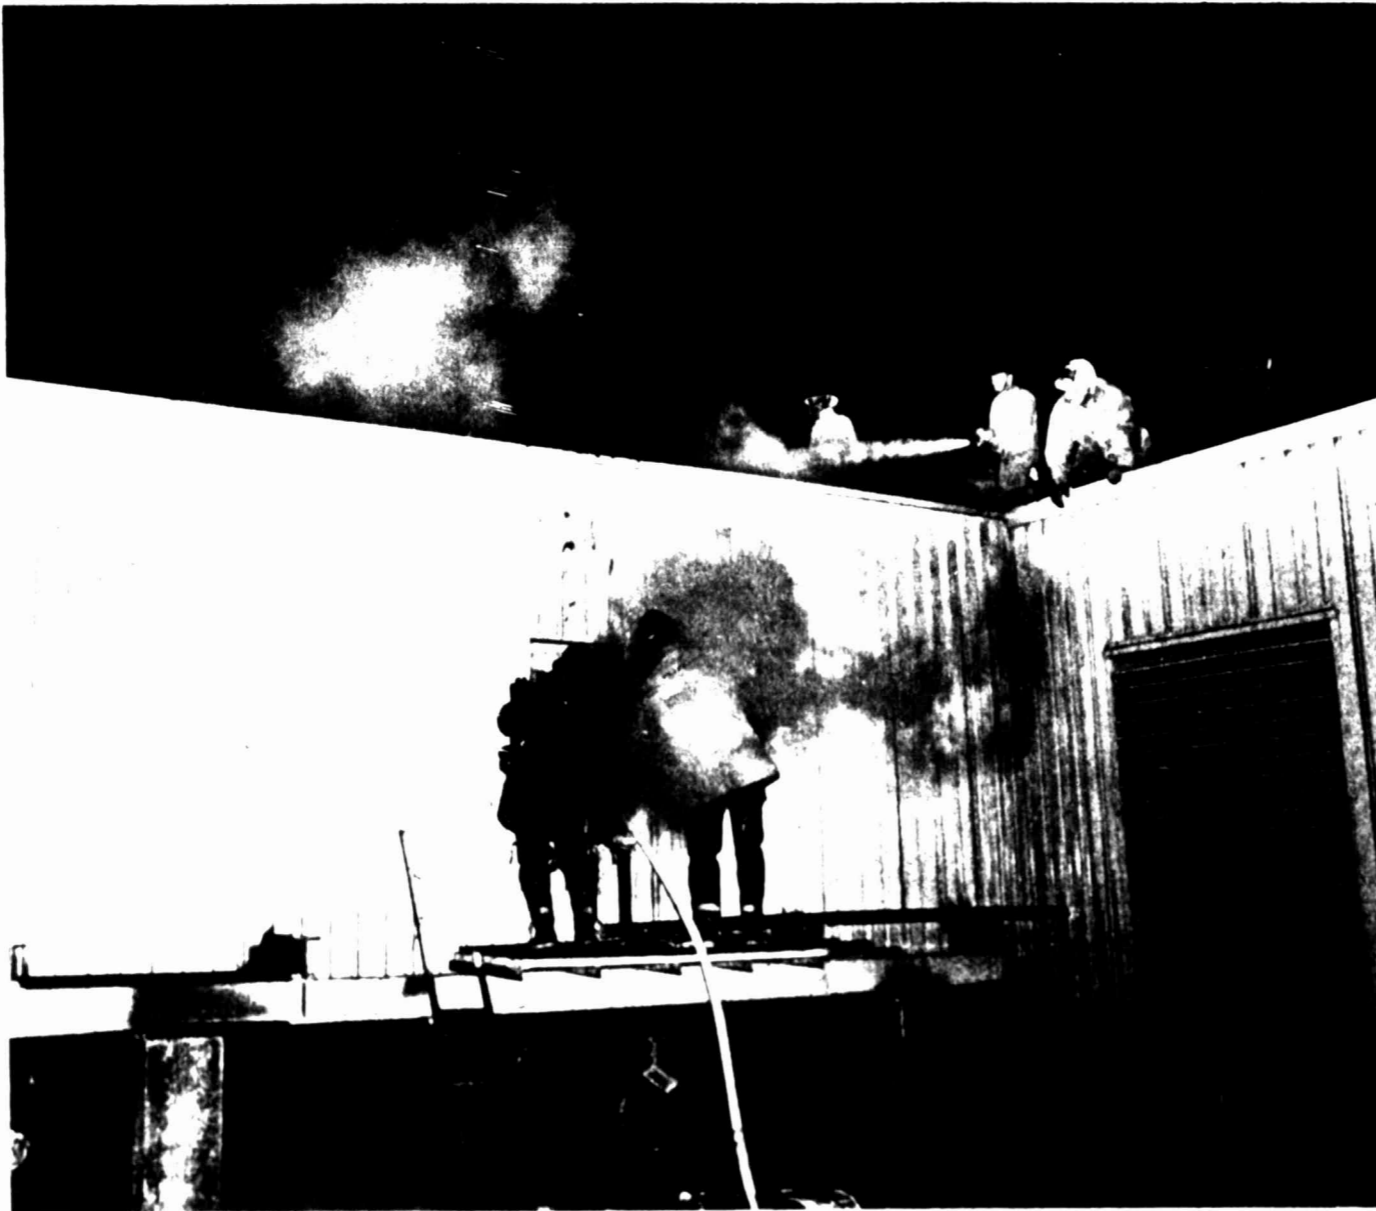

Armand Baldinelli, for one, is trying to look after the family. He was one of seven children himself and knows the strain and stress in bringing up a large family on an often too limited income.

"It's a good time of the year for people to open up their hearts," he said.

He knows the family mainly through the father, who had done some work for him. And Baldinelli said he is impressed with Barboza's workmanship.

"They lost everything — pots and pans, the kitchen sink," Baldinelli said, as he was driving out to see the progress Barboza has made in the first stages of fixing up the place. It's a mile south of the Interstate.

Midland firemen called to two fires in six hours

By MARK VOGLER
R-T Staff Writer

City firemen were called out to fight two major fires within a six-hour period Thursday night and early today.

One fireman was injured and heavy damage was caused to the cooling tower on top of a downtown office building and to a residential dwelling as a result of the two blazes, according to fire officials.

At approximately 8:30 p.m. Thursday, firefighters responded to a fire in the 12th floor cooling tower of the Vaughn Building at 400 W. Texas Ave.

Fire Chief Raymond Lewis said the fire apparently broke out in an area near a heating and air system which had been undergoing extensive remodeling.

"There goes a $10,000 remodeling job," said building manager Pam Rhoden, as she watched from the top of the building.

Probable cause of the blaze, Lewis said, was the ignition of epoxy fumes by two diesel burning heaters being used to keep construction materials from freezing overnight.

Firemen used two "standpipe lines" on the 12th floor to reach the fire. They also took one hose up an elevator.

There were an awful lot of explosions going on near the cooling tower. Corrugated asbestos siding was going off the top of the building and falling down on to Texas Avenue. It was just like snow," recalled Lewis today.

Fourteen men and five fire department vehicles were dispatched to the scene.

Firemen received the second major fire alarm at 12:41 a.m., this time involving a west central residence.

Fire units arrived at 2312 Princeton Ave. to find the roof of a one-story brick veneer home owned by Otis Z. Helmer ablaze.

It Leroy Ledford, 44, of the Midland Fire Department received lacerations of his right arm when he reportedly slipped and fell on a broken plate glass window.

Ledford subsequently was treated and released at Midland Memorial Hospital, according to a spokesman.

Members of the Helmer family were at home at the time of the fire, but none was reported injured.

Fire Chief Lewis said origin of the fire was suspected to be an electrical heater enclosed in the patio area of the house.

But fire officials were expected today to conduct a further investigation of the fire's cause.

Much of the roof of the house was burned, the attic was gutted and the building sustained heavy smoke and water damage, according to fire department officials.

Four units with 15 men brought the Helmer housefire under control.

Golda Meir dies at 80

By ARTHUR MAX

JERUSALEM (AP) — Golda Meir, the one-time Milwaukee schoolteacher who led Israel through five turbulent years and the Mideast's most devastating war, died today at age 80.

The immediate cause of death was not announced, but a hospital spokeswoman said the former prime minister had suffered from malignant lymphoma, a cancer of the blood, for more than a decade.

This illness was a closely guarded secret throughout her 1969-74 term in the nation's highest office.

Mrs. Meir died at 4:28 p.m. (9:28 a.m. EST) after more than three months in Jerusalem's Hadassa Hospital. She had been released for the high Jewish holidays in October, but re-entered the hospital for the last time Oct. 29.

At first it was reported she was suffering from back trouble caused by a slipped disc, then that she had developed a viral infection and was being treated for jaundice — a liver condition in which bile pigments enter the blood and cause yellowing of body parts. Earlier today, the hospital issued a statement saying she was in unsatisfactory condition, "giving grounds for anxiety."

Hospital officials said family members were at her bedside. She is survived by a son, Menachem, a daughter, Sarah, and a sister, Clara Stern of Bridgeport, Conn. She was separated from her husband, Morris Meyerson, in 1933 and he died in 1951.

Mrs. Meir had been in virtual seclusion for the last weeks, refusing to see anyone but immediate family. She repeatedly insisted that "now I am a private person," and she forbade the hospital to issue bulletins on her condition.

Hospital spokeswoman Hadassah

Golda Meir

Gillon said Mrs. Meir's blood ailment was first diagnosed 12 or 13 years ago. She was first treated with radiotherapy and later with chemotherapy. Mrs. Gillon said Her doctor was Gabriel Izak, head of the hospital's hematology department.

"This is mourning for all the people of Israel, both in Israel and the Diaspora," President Yitzhak Navon said in a statement broadcast over government radio.

Labor Party chief Shimon Peres said his party, which Mrs. Meir led for many years, was now like an "orphaned family."

"Our movement feels like it lost its spiritual head — one of the greatest women our history or any history has ever known," Peres said. "She was a proud, courageous and devoted leader who could always penetrate to the heart of the people, identify their

Mid-teen temperatures forecast for Basin area

A sweep of arctic winds, whispering "bundle up," descended on the Midland area this morning and plummeted temperatures to a record low of 22 degrees in the pre-dawn hours.

The mercury was slowly easing up to the mid 20s later in the morning.

But it's probably going to get much colder — possibly in the mid teens — tonight, said a weatherman for the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

There's no relief in sight from the cold weather," said the weatherman, who attributed the frigid air to "very high pressure" areas building up in Canada, the Northwest and the Southwest.

This morning's temperature reading tied a record low for today of 22 degrees, set in 1932.

Roadways were freezing but dry this morning, said a spokesman for the Texas Department of Public Safety. And no road hazard warnings were being issued. Conditions for icy roadways were ripe — except for the lack of sleet, snow or freezing rain.

The most recent precipitation was a light freezing drizzle that fell over the area Thursday morning. The Weather Service recorded only a trace of rainfall.

But the falling mercury in the thermometer isn't likely to fool the weatherman and break the all-time record low for the Midland area — minus 8 degrees recorded in January of 1962.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON Infertility may be temporary

Dear Dr. Solomon: When I was married two years ago, I was on the Pill. For the past few months, however, I've been trying to become pregnant, but with no success. Can the Pill have affected my ability to have children?—Edith

Dear Edith: It is highly unlikely that oral contraceptives will cause permanent sterility. However, there may be some temporary loss of fertility after their use is discontinued. This temporary effect is seen both in women who have already had children, as well as those who have not.

The prior use of oral contraceptives should not have affected your ability to become pregnant—merely delayed it a bit.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I've been employed as a machinist for the past 14 years at the same plant.

In general, I like the work and the pay isn't bad. Almost a year ago, however, one of the men in the shop was promoted to foreman, and things haven't been the same since. He's the kind of person who takes credit for everything that goes good, and blames the guys in the shop for everything that goes bad. Anyway, when I went for my annual checkup last week, I was told my blood pressure had gone up. Do you think there's a connection between what's been happening in the job and my blood pressure?—John

Dear John: There very well could be such a relationship. It is not unusual for a person who is anxious about his job, his family, financial matters, or anything else to show an increase in both systolic and diastolic blood pressure. You do not indicate what your blood pressure had been or what it is now. Since you do not say that your physician has prescribed medication or made other recommendations, I must assume he is satisfied that your blood pressure does not pose an immediate threat to your health.

The fact that you have an annual physical examination is all to the good. If you have not already done so, however, you should inform your doctor about your current anxiety with your job. Any such pertinent information could be helpful to him in managing a potentially troublesome condition.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I remember several weeks ago you answered someone's fear about cataract operation. I wasn't interested because it didn't apply to me then. I now have to have the cataract operation. What advice did you give them?—Mrs. C.N.

Dear Mrs. C.N.: It is important that you not be discouraged or afraid because you have been told you have a cataract. There are over 400,000 cataract operations performed in this country each year. And with the new improved surgical techniques and the advances in replacement lenses, this once difficult procedure has become one of medicine's brightest accomplishments. Complications can and do occur. But the overwhelming odds are that you will do fine and will see as well after your operation as you did before the cataract developed.

Firm files application

AUSTIN—An application has been filed by BTA Oil Producers of Midland to sell $1,500,000 worth of securities in Texas. State Commissioner Richard D. Latham reports.

The application was one of 12 totaling $16,037,334 filed with the State Securities Board in the past week, Latham says.

The board granted 10 applications to sell $14,609,630 in securities during the week, he reports.

At this school, art not 'sissy stuff'

By HARRY ATKINS

SOUTHFIELD, Mich. (AP) — Don't try to tell students at Leonhard Elementary School that the fine arts are sissy stuff. They know better.

Through programs run by volunteer parents, the school is giving students first-hand experience in several of the arts.

In fact, some of the children, even first graders, already are published authors through one such venture. At the school's publishing center, the students create, illustrate, bind and display original works.

"The children may not grow up to be authors," says Carol Mitchell, who runs the center, "but they certainly have a better understanding of, and appreciation for, the book publishing process."

The young authors even sound like pros. They throw around terms like "manuscript," "proofread" and "illustrate" as blithely as they would a dodgeball.

The PTA-sponsored program began about two years ago when a writer of children's books visited the school. She explained to each class how books progress from an author's idea to the finished product, and had the students write stories of their own.

To highlight the experience, she asked teachers to type the stories. Then she asked the children to illustrate their work and make them into books.

The experience was so popular that children kept asking to do it again — and the publishing center was born. Now, any time a child has a story idea he or she thinks publishable, it's taken to the center.

"The whole thing has just been incredibly well-received," says Fred Lebowitz, Leonhard's principal, who concedes he used to be wary of such enrichment programs involving parents because "after the ini-

"The quality of the parental involvement is just outstanding...."

"They're getting the kids to like something that could be deadly. They know it's not sissy stuff now."

...enthusiasm wears off, the parents usually get bored and stop showing up."

The success of the publishing center has given birth to spinoff programs, including one that introduces children to great paintings.

"The quality of the parental involvement is just outstanding," Lebowitz says. "They're getting the kids to like something that could be deadly. They know it's not sissy stuff now."

The publishing center is actually a spare corner of a storage room, furnished with table and chairs, typewriter, sewing machine and materials to construct books — cardboard, scraps of wallpaper and fabric, glue and crayons. It is staffed by two or three volunteer parents twice a week — Monday afternoons and Wednesday mornings.

"It normally takes a child three 15-minute appointments to complete a book," Mrs. Mitchell says. "And at every step, he makes choices to insure a personalized project."

The child takes a rough draft to the first appointment, and volunteers go over it with the student to help organize the story and make corrections in it.

The story is typed, and at the second appointment, the child makes the cover. When the child arrives for the third appointment, the book has been bound and it is time to illustrate.

Every spring Leonhard stages a book fair at which all classes, first through fifth, display their work.

"There are ribbons for the best submissions in each grade," Mrs. Mitchell says, "and the children thrive on the competition."

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN—Congress has gone too far in deregulating the nation's airline industry, the chairman of the Texas Aeronautics Commission charged Tuesday, and only emergency action will prevent chaos from engulfing our transportation system.

David Witts of Dallas commented on a law signed recently by President Carter removing fare and filing restrictions from interstate commercial air carriers. And although the TAC has historically favored industry deregulations, Witts says the new law will hurt carriers and their passengers more than the original controls.

State officials disagree, however, on the effect of deregulation. David Hughes, head of the Transportation Division of the Attorney General's Office, says the TAC may have "overreacted" in adopting emergency rules, he says possibly don't apply to the intrastate commuters the TAC regulates.

Those new rules require little more than an intrastate line's notification to the commission of its plan to change routes or fares. The rules don't say much about pending applications, but one TAC spokesman says the hearings that were previously required won't be held.

The TAC still will require an intrastate carrier to outline its proposed service route, fares, and financial resources, but the commission fears that will lead to unrestricted competition and confusion in the state's expanding air passenger market.

Hughes believes the TAC is simply on the defensive by trying to retain minimal control over its carriers, while fitting in with Congressional guidelines for intrastate airlines.

"I don't know that's a correct interpretation of Congress' action," he said.

Furthermore, he adds, there won't be any correct interpretations until the issue of intrastate regulation in an atmosphere of wide open competition is tested in court.

It's not an ideal way to write rules, he agrees, but under what he termed poorly written Congressional guidelines, it may be the only way.

Witts remains convinced Congress is aiming at all carriers, and that Wahington has cleared the way for fly-by-night operators to move into airports, take ticket money, promise service and abandon passengers on the concourses with no way to get their money back.

"Our concern here is the effect on the people of Texas when there's absolutely no regulation of any kind. We have a very good system in place, but it's a system of benevolent regulation."

"If you completely eliminate all regulation," he adds, "any number of things can happen. And all of them are bad."

'Old Gang' shows up for Nixon

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hail, hail, the old gang was here when Richard Nixon came to call. It was the biggest gathering of Nixon loyalists since they all wept together at his farewell from the White House.

Few of the really big names of the Nixon era were at the party Thursday night. H.R. Haldeman and John Mitchell are still in prison. John Ehrlichman hasn't sounded too friendly lately. Next to Nixon's, the most recognizable face was that of Rose Mary Woods, the most faithful of them all.

It wasn't a formal affair; Nixon described it as "a meeting of a number of old friends, many of whom I haven't seen in four years." The applause he got was evidence that, indeed, these were friends.

No boos from the members of the February Group, an informal association of Nixon and Ford White House staff members who meet every three months or so to have a drink together and reminisce.

Nixon had been in New York, recently returned from a 7-day trip to France and Britain, and decided at the last minute to accept the organization's standing invitation.

It's called the February Group because on Feb. 10, 1975, 18 people got together over drinks and decided to meet again occasionally. At least that's the explanation by founder W. Dewey Clower.

To the crowd of more than 200, Nixon joked that "it's always good to get out of town" when his wife is Christmas shopping. And to reporters, he said he wanted to take the occasion to wish the nation "the very best for the season" and "a happy, prosperous and — most importantly — a peaceful New Year."

It was the former president's second return to Washington since he bade his tearful, emotional goodbye as president in the East Room on Aug. 9, 1974. He was back briefly last January for Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey's funeral.

Waiting for Nixon at the Mayflower Hotel — less than a mile from that East Room — were Herb Stein, the economist, and Pat Buchanan, the speechwriter; Rose Woods, the confidential secretary, and Max Friedersdorf, the congressional liaison.

Only one of the 25 men who served prison terms as a result of Watergate was there: Former appointments secretary Dwight Chapin, looking heavier and more prosperous — his eight months jail time long behind him.

There was Dick Tuck, the prankster, handing out "Great Wallposter" handbills "dedicated to Richard Nixon and his breakthrough to Red China."

And there was Milt Pitts, the presidential barber, who confided that when he went to see Nixon in California, "I was going to give him a haircut ... but he had one three days earlier."

Reporters wrote all that down, just like in the old days. Bruce Whelihan, once of the White House press staff, briefed them on what was said inside — just like in the old days.

Victor Lasky, who wasn't in the Nixon administration but was invited anyway because he wrote a book called "It Didn't Start With Watergate," was asked whether Nixon was returning to politics.

"I would hope so," he said, "but I'm not that stupid."

Nixon spent an hour and 15 minutes kissing, bearhugging and handshaking through the crowd, commenting on the many women who were still "Miss" after all these years.

"I'm afraid Washington is not a good place for pretty single girls," he said as he left for New York and a late night dinner with wife Pat — who, presumably, had finished Christmas shopping for the day.

Ford says neutron bomb already in arms repertory

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Former President Gerald R. Ford said Thursday the United States has had the neutron bomb for the last few years and he doesn't understand the latest fuss over the weapon.

"It's available for the defense of NATO. It's available to meet any aggression by the Warsaw Pact nations."

"The new proposal," Ford told KXAS television in Fort Worth, "is to make a better weapon militarily, and to make a cleaner weapon to do less damage to the civilian population."

"So I think those that object to the new proposal are being very short-sighted. We can have a better weapon and a cleaner weapon. I think we ought to proceed with the second generation, not use a dirty weapon and a less effective one," Ford said.

The former president was interviewed at Texas Christian University, where he lectured Wednesday and Thursday.

Ford did not elaborate on his statements about the neutron bomb, but the Defense Department in Washington said the United States has only the capability to make neutron bombs. The department said the country does not actually have any neutron bombs.

No perfect convention site found for GOP

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — "There is no perfect convention site," said Bob Carter, a member of the selection committee for the 1980 Republican National Convention after a tour of New Orleans facilities, including the Louisiana Superdome.

Four of the seven cities being considered have been visited, and both positive and negative factors were found in all four, said Carter, a national committeeman from Washington, D.C.

The committee makes another visit to the Superdome today before leaving for Dallas.

The group was promised Thursday that if it picked the Superdome for the convention, there will be unlimited access to set up TV equipment ahead of time and the floor will be outfitted with a new $350,000 curtain.

"That makes it work," said one network official. "Otherwise it wouldn't have worked."

Representatives of the three major TV networks were among the three-dozen visitors with the GOP's committee which got its first look at the Dome Thursday. The networks will have a say in the selection.

Access to the Dome was considered one of the reasons New Orleans did not get the 1976 convention and it was considered a problem this time because of other events scheduled for 1980.

The curtain would be a 75-foot backdrop which committee leaders said is needed to provide a proper frame for the convention.

Superdome manager Denzil Skinner said the curtain will take about nine months to deliver and erect, but it will not be bought unless either the Democrats or Republicans decide to meet in the Dome.

The Republicans earlier visited Detroit, Minneapolis and Miami Beach. Kansas City and Dallas are next.

New York, while not on the committee's itinerary, has pledged $4 million to land the convention.

Rioters burn U.S. firm

By PHILIP DOPOULOS

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) - Anti-government rioters today burned down the Iranian headquarters of Grumman Corp., an American aerospace firm, during clashes with troops in Isfahan, 500 miles south of Tehran, the U.S. Embassy reported.

Six Grumman employees in the building escaped unhurt, a spokesman said. No other casualties were reported.

The spokesman said the building was set ablaze after an anti-shah demonstration got out of hand as troops moved in to disperse the protesters demanding the ouster of Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi.

The attack came only a few hours before the military government backed down and said it would allow opponents of the shah to stage a mass demonstration in Tehran Sunday. The move was seen a bid to head off a threatened bloody showdown with troops.

"We want to avoid a confrontation in the streets," said a military spokesman.

The government's decision was a reversal of its earlier warnings that it intended to combat "mercilessly" any political demonstrations during the emotion-charged Moslem holy month of Moharram, which reaches a peak Sunday and Monday.

The announcement was made after military Prime Minister Gen. Gholam-Reza Azhari met for several hours with army and political leaders as religious leaders demanding the shah's abdication promised a "blood-bath in the streets" if the government interfered.

The military also lifted a ban on religious processions for both days and eased the night-time martial law curfew. The curfew will run for those two days from 11 p.m. to 5 a.m., instead of the normal start at 9 p.m.

The decision was announced only hours after the capital's martial law administrator, Gen. Gholamali Oveisi, declared that the Sunday march was illegal. Political rallies were banned under martial law imposed Sept. 8 in Tehran and 11 other cities.

Informed sources said the army was expecting demonstrations in at least 10 cities, including the holy cities of Mashhad and Qum.

The processions are a traditional expression of mourning for Imam Hossein, the grandson of the prophet Mohammed and the founder of the Shiite sect, but it was apparent that the leader of the anti-shah movement, exiled Ayatollah Khomeini, was planning for them to be turned into a demonstration of opposition to the ruler.

Opposition political leader Karim Sanjavi of the National Front, who was freed from jail Wednesday, urged his supporters to join the demonstration outside Teleghani's home.

mid-afternoon, and the temperature dropped steadily until about 3 a.m. today when it started fluctuating between 23 and 25 degrees and finally hit bottom before dawn.

The record high for Dec. 7 is 79 degrees recorded in 1966.

The season's first killing freeze came around midnight on Nov. 27. Before that, the last freeze of the year was 28 degrees on the morning of March 11.

Highway 20 and just off Midkiff Road.

Sure enough, when he got out there, the blackened and scorched sink, torn from the kitchen, was laying in front of the charred garage door.

"I was kidding about the kitchen sink," said Baldinelli, "but there it is."

The shell of the frame house is standing; the two bedrooms were virtually untouched by the fire, but the bulk of the family's clothes were in the gutted utility room which, like the rest of the house, is a mess. Much, such as the refrigerator, stove, washer and dryer, is unsalvageable.

The roof, rafters, joists, studs and outside walls appear okay.

The firemen kept the uninsured house from turning into rubble. It was paid for.

Carter reaffirms support for Shah

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Carter today reaffirmed U.S. support for the embattled Shah of Iran, whose chances for survival he has questioned.

White House press secretary Jody Powell said the president was "very concerned about erroneous interpretations" in some published reports of his remarks at a breakfast meeting with reporters Thursday "that suggested a change in U.S. policy" toward the shah.

Powell said the president had instructed the State Department to issue a statement reaffirming U.S. policy "of support toward the shah."

Golda Meir dies in Jerusalem hospital worries and raise them to challenges."

Israel Radio, playing solemn music after announcing Mrs. Meir's death, described her as a "pioneering founder of the state." Navon's message of condolence to the family praised Mrs. Meir for 60 years of service to the Zionist and Israeli cause.

Prime Minister Menachem Begin was in Oslo, Norway, to receive the Nobel Peace Prize and no immediate announcement was issued on his behalf.

It was expected that the body would lie in state briefly at Israel's Parliament building, the Knesset, after the end of the Jewish Sabbath at sundown

Saturday. The radio said the Cabinet would meet Saturday evening to decide on details of the state funeral ceremony and mourning period.

The Russian-born Mrs. Meir, who taught in the Milwaukee school system for several years before emigrating to Palestine in 1921, had risen through the ranks of Israel's dominant Labor Party, serving as ambassador to the Soviet Union, labor minister and foreign minister before announcing her retirement in 1968 at age 70.

Then Prime Minister Levi Eshkol died in February 1969 and she was chosen to lead the party and the government.

The 1973 Mideast War, the bloodiest Israel has had to fight since its birth in 1949, proved to be her political undoing.

Egypt and Syria launched surprise attacks October 1973, sending the Israeli defense forces reeling. The Israelis eventually drove the Arabs back, but Mrs. Meir's government took the blame for the heavy Israeli casualties and the lack of military preparedness for the conflict. She resigned April 10, 1974.

Peres said today that Mrs. Meir had remained active in party councils after that, and when he consulted with her he remained "impressed and amazed by the strength of her mind and character, and the depth of her memory."

In her time, Mrs. Meir was one of the most famous women in the world.

Kris and Rita make top music together

Heard separately, Kris and Rita merely were good. But together they formed an unbeatable combination.

Kris Kristofferson and Rita Coolidge performed Thursday night at Chaparral Center in a concert that lasted almost three hours.

Following a 15-minute presentation by band member Billy Swan,

A review

Kristofferson walked on stage with a casual air and began playing the first song, speaking only a few words to the audience. With barely a break, the film and singing star then went from one song to another for an hour before taking a 30-minute breather.

Dressed in white pants and a loose white top, his unbuttoned cuffs flopping as his hands moved, Kristofferson displayed a familiar deep voice which had an almost gravelly quality until the second or third song.

Equipment problems got the show off to a slow start, but once he got going, Kristofferson didn't stop.

During one of the breaks to adjust equipment, the singer referred to an accident involving an equipment truck earlier that day.

The truck had turned over on the highway between Amarillo and Lubbock, injuring one man and damaging some of the equipment. The truck was three hours late getting to Midland.

Kristofferson interspersed his well-known songs, such as "Sunday Morning Coming Down," "Help Me Make It Through the Night," and "Why Me, Lord," with other not-so-familiar songs.

Rita Coolidge started the second half of the show, her voice having a noticeably smoother quality than Kristofferson's. Dressed in a watermelon-colored shirt tucked into jeans, Ms. Coolidge, also said little between songs.

Nor did either performer move much from one spot on the stage. While Kristofferson at least had his guitar to keep his hands busy, Ms. Coolidge appeared to have difficulty with her left hand. It hung limp throughout most of her part of the concert, a diamond ring flashing in the lights.

Both performers have separate qualities which make them outstandingly talented, but Kristofferson's deep baritone voice and Coolidge's smooth tone blended together Thursday night to form a better vocal effect than either could muster along.

The only problem was that the pair did not sing together until right at the end of the concert, and then only for a short time.

Ending on the longtime popular "Me and Bobby McGee," the two returned for another couple of songs before finally closing the show before more than 5,000 persons, the largest crowd to date for a performance in the new center.

On the whole, Kristofferson and Ms. Coolidge perhaps gave their audience more than it expected. They sang for about two solid hours, longer than many well-known singers perform in concerts today.

-LANA CUNNINGHAM

Stage hands set up equipment in Midland College's Chaparral Center Thursday afternoon in preparation for the Kris Kristofferson and Rita Coolidge concert. Jobless figures being revised by government

WASHINGTON (AP) - The federal government is in the midst of revising the way it measures the U.S. jobless rate, which critics contend does not reflect actual unemployment in the country.

The National Commission on Employment and Unemployment has been working since last April on a new method for calculating unemployment on the national, state and local levels.

At stake is some $17 billion in federal money that is distributed around the country on the basis of official jobless figures.

Mistakes about SALT

Soviet leaders continue to insist that final agreement on a new strategic arms limitation accord with the United States is a top Kremlin priority.

What they don't seem to realize is that their present policies are hardening Senate attitudes against a new SALT treaty. Either the Soviet leadership underrates the importance of the Senate in the SALT process or it has misjudged badly the Senate's mood.

Whatever Moscow's failure of perception, President Carter must accept considerable blame for inviting the Soviet belligerence which now jeopardizes Senate ratification of a SALT agreement.

In one of the administration's most serious foreign policy mistakes, Mr. Carter and Secretary of State Cyrus Vance repeatedly have said they attach no linkage between SALT and Soviet political and military misconduct outside the arms negotiations.

Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev and his cohorts obviously have taken this stated tolerance at face value. Accordingly, the Soviets feel free to proceed with their designs on the Persian Gulf oil states, to intervene militarily in Africa, to send nuclear capable MIGs to Cuba, and to maintain the full momentum of their arms build up.

In recent months, the Soviet Union also has taken surreptitious steps which pose a significant threat to the ability of the United States to verify compliance with the existing strategic arms limitation agreements as well as any subsequent accord.

By purchasing the operating manual for the top-secret KH-11 photo reconnaissance satellite from a CIA employee since convicted of espionage, the Soviets presumably have enhanced their ability to evade satellite surveillance of their military installations.

By proceeding with their killer satellite program, they are fast developing the ability to destroy or blind U.S. satellites without which this country can neither verify arms agreement compliance nor control its own strategic weapons in a crisis.

The Soviets also have resumed encoding the transmission of data from their missile test results, a serious violation of the SALT I agreement. Without access to such data, the United States cannot properly monitor Soviet compliance with either SALT I or the anti-ballistic missile treaty.

When members of the Senate delegation visiting Soviet leaders in Moscow recently raised these and other issues, Soviet Premier Alexsei Kosygin told them, in effect, to mind their own business. Moscow is reasserting its axiomatic policy of "what's ours is ours and what's yours is negotiable." It has ever been thus.

All of which reminds once more that it is impossible to do business with the Soviet Union. If the Soviet Union's word is no good, what else is there to depend on? And, certainly, the Soviets are experts when it comes to pledge-breaking. The worst part of it is that they do not intend to keep their promises in the first place, using pledges to gain advantages from nations which do keep their promises.

If President Carter and Secretary Vance do not understand by this time that Moscow's bellicose posture is no basis for detente or SALT II, we can only hope that the U.S. Senate does.

Fruit of inflation

It's great to learn that President Carter's chief inflation fighter, Alfred Kahn, has promised never again to use the word "depression" in public. Should the time ever come when that awful word would be required, Kahn pledges to say "banana" instead.

It may be assumed, then, that brokers and investors all along Wall Street are climbing in off ledges, secure in the knowledge that, by Washington edict, going bananas is the worst which can befall the economy.

Isn't this a most comforting thought? Everyone now can go right ahead and enjoy the Christmas season, without worrying about inflation or depression, at least until the bills start pouring in early next year.

CHARLEY REESE: The big need in Egypt is for basic facilities

By CHARLEY REESE
Sun Belt Syndicate

Charley Reese

CAIRO — Best way to measure the depth of problems facing Egypt is to look at how the rich live.

A billionaire can't rent a room any better than one of you can get at a Howard Johnson's in the U.S. He can't buy a better meal than you can get at any halfway decent American restaurant. He can't buy reliable telephone service. He can't drink the tap water. He must be careful where and what he eats.

In Ma'adi, where the rich live, their villas don't begin to compare with homes in most residential areas for the wealthy in this country. Apartments pointed out to me as for the rich and middle class look like public housing in the United States, only without amenities.

In short, the best a billionaire in Cairo can do is match the living standards of the American middle class, and must work at it to do that.

What is missing from Egypt, and from most of the Third World nations, are basic facilities.

In Cairo, utility, telephone, water, and sewage systems must all be replaced, virtually in toto. Cairo also needs schools, fire departments, hospitals, and emergency medical care. All of these are needed just to catch up with a rundown average American city.

The cost will be staggering, but there is a further complication: Egypt has neither a manufacturing base to turn out components of all of these systems nor the technologically trained labor to build them.

If the Egyptian government could find the money, it would have to import virtually all of the components. Then it would have to find the skilled labor to install them.

Importing labor would be politically impossible since so many Egyptians need work, but training an existing labor force would take years.

Work methods here are primitive. Scaffolding is lashed together with rope. An OSHA inspector would have a heart attack before he had walked half a block.

When you see the box Egyptians are in, you can understand bitterness of Third World leaders toward colonial powers. Basic facilities are inadequate because when colonial powers put them in, they were never intended to serve Egyptians. They intended them to be only sufficient to serve the Europeans living there.

What the British wanted from Egypt were a canal, a military base and a few raw materials. No capital investment was made to benefit Egyptians, no monies were spent to improve the living standards of the people.

This is a factual situation, which communists so skillfully exploit. It's no surprise so many Third World leaders lean towards communism or socialism. Egypt did under Nasser. To its credit, it has learned from experience that communist-style socialism is just as exploitive as old-style colonialism.

Egyptians now are trying to steer a middle course. They try to provide a base support system with government, and at the same time encourage private capital to come in. They are working hard to increase tourism.

Here again, comparison reveals the scale of their problem. With a crash program, they hope to have 50,000 hotel rooms and 3.5 million tourists by 1980. Orlando, Fla., has 31,000 rooms and around 12 million tourists.

Third world nations like Egypt are in a predicament. The Soviet Union clearly intends to reconquer them, if it can, by intrigue, followed by brute force. On the other hand, I'm not sure the West is any more altruistic. It seems intent on practicing a form of financial colonialism.

For the next few decades, Third World nations will try to walk a tight-rope. They have no power. Even the Egyptian army, for example, is entirely dependent on outside sources for its weapons...sources that could dry up overnight. They have no industrial base and no technological base. They long for unity, but don't have that either, and you can bet the East and the West will do nothing to encourage it.

The more I see of the world the more I'm convinced it has not changed since the time of the Pharaohs. Strong consume weak. There are idealists in every land, in every era, but they never have power. The strong always see to it that they don't.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Taxpayers are footing the bill

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — One of the sad ironies of government-funded programs is that the rare successes can end up being as wasteful as the many failures. An effective project becomes sanctified, and extravagance is winked at by officials who can claim credit for the success.

A case in point is the widely acclaimed children's television program, "Sesame Street." Since its inception, "Sesame Street" (with its offshoot, "Electric Company") has received $42,290,000 from the Office of Education. Millions of American preschoolers have gotten a head start on the three R's by watching Big Bird, Bert and Ernie, Kermit the Frog and their human companions.

But what the Office of Education needs is another "Sesame Street" character, say Oscar the Grouch, to ride herd on the expenditure of government funds by the producers of the show, Children's Television Workshop.

Exorbitant expense accounts, inflated salaries, non-competitive contract awards and other wasteful practices were uncovered as far back as five years ago in an audit by the Health, Education and Welfare Department. But the mystique of "Sesame Street's" success is so powerful that nothing has been done to correct the situation.

Here are some of the abuses that have turned up:

— The producers withheld $180,000 in Social Security refunds and $132,000 in rental discounts on the "Sesame Street" offices that auditors said should have been turned over to the Office of Education. The debt is still outstanding.

— Salaries at Children's Television Workshop range up to $80,000 a year; one workshop official was recently awarded an extra bonus of $80,090.

— Expense accounts have been used improperly. The records showed that "one day the secretary would take the treasurer out to lunch and the next day it would be the other way around," with both lunches written off as business expenses.

"Sesame Street" was supposed to be given federal support only until it became self-sufficient. Government and workshop officials claim they are not sure what self-sufficiency means.

You be the judge. Last year "Sesame Street" cost $7.6 million to produce. Children's Television Workshop made $7.2 million from the sale of "Sesame Street" products here and abroad. It also got $2.2 million in program fees from the Corporation for Public Broadcasting.

Any kid who learned from "Sesame Street" how to add could figure that the program was self-sufficient. And that was the apparent conclusion reached by the General Accounting Office and a House oversight subcommittee. Their suspicion was that the workshop was using funds intended for "Sesame Street" on other programs. As a result, the Office of Education contracting officer, Fred Will, refused to sign a contract awarding the workshop $2.5 million of public money.

But Will's superior at HEW, Bill Pierce, evidently used bureaucratic arithmetic and approved the $2.5 million grant.

Office of Education officials excuse their failure to crack down on "Sesame Street's" extravagance by citing the program's success. In a strange sort of way, they have a point. The record of failure among the Education Office's 350 grantees is so egregious that the agency's review and audit officials have their hands full checking on unsuccessful programs. They don't have the time or the inclination to go after their superstar.

Footnote: Workshop officials claimed that "Sesame Street" could not survive without federal funds. The taxpayers, they said, get their money's worth from the show. The organization also could not attract quality talent unless they offered high salaries, said a spokesman.

BUREAUCRATIC BACKDOWN: Evidently deaf to complaints that hearing-aid salesmen use high-pressure tactics to frighten potential customers, the Federal Trade Commission appears to be backing off from a proposed regulation that would make life more difficult for the shady operators.

Over the years, FTC investigators have come to realize that most sales abuses occur during unannounced home visits by salesmen who gain entry by offering free hearing tests. So the regulation proposed in June of 1975 required written permission from a prospective buyer before a hearing-aid salesman could call.

The latest version of the proposed regulation, however, gives salesmen the option of obtaining only an oral okay from the prospect.

A confidential memo from Senate investigators to Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., strongly criticized the FTC's "noticeable retreat" on the point.

"Obviously," said the memo, "this watered-down version will allow unscrupulous dealers to simply write down on their memo books that they had an appointment with the would-be purchaser, whether or not consent in advance had been obtained."

The FTC's explanation is that requiring written permission would be a hardship on the salesmen because of the hearing-aid industry's traditional sales pattern. Normally, an agency spokesman explained, salesmen travel in "circuits," returning to an area only after an absence of several months.

WRONG LETTER: President Carter's fumbling congressional staff, seeking to commiserate with defeated Democrats, dropped sympathetic notes to the lame ducks saying how nice it had been working with them on Capitol Hill. One of the letters was delivered to Rep. John Conyers, D-Mich. The sentiments unfortunately were misplaced. He had been re-elected by an overwhelming 92 percent of the vote.

INSIDE REPORT:

Reagan's weighty presence felt at governors' meeting

By ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. — Without lifting a finger, Ronald Reagan was a weighty presence with surprising credibility as the party's presumptive 1980 presidential nominee at the soporific meeting here of the Republican governors.

Reagan's credibility was starkly evident from the meekness — a derivative of self-defense — of non-Reaganite governors, here in profusion from the politically-centrist bank of industrial states running from Pennsylvania across the Great Lakes to Wisconsin, Minnesota and Iowa.

That self-defense, rooted in political reality, was comprised of two elements in roughly equal parts: Reagan's in-place organizational strength, which now reaches deep into Republican soil with a few conspicuous exceptions like Pennsylvania; and the lack of any practical, even visible anti-Reagan strategy by moderate governors. Lacking an alternative, many of these governors as of today look on the nomination as Reagan's to win — or to lose.

"Reagan got a handful of delegates in my state in 1976," one Midwest Republican moderate told us here. "Today he'd get 75 percent of them."

An Eastern moderate agreed. "Reagan's got the non-primary states wired," he told us. "Show me a horse we can back and we might make a race of it, but you can't name the horse."

During a confidential chat at breakfast Monday, four governors analyzed the party's 1980 nomination. Gov.s

Evans Novak

Pete DuPont of Delaware, and two newly-elected governors, Reps. Al Quie of Minnesota and Charles Thone of Nebraska, agreed that if the 67-year-old Reagan can maneuver through the 1979 minefields undamaged and enter the 1980 primary season with something like his present strength, his momentum may be irresistible. The hold out was the respected Gov.-elect Richard Thornburgh of Pennsylvania — but not even Thornburgh suggested the outline of any strategic plan for stopping Reagan.

To exploit his credibility as 1980 nominee from the always vulnerable front-runner position, Reagan operatives have been assiduously courting both the old and the new among the current crop of Republican governors, expanded from 12 to 18 in the November election, as well as the titular party leader, former President Gerald Ford. At lunch in Palm Springs Oct. 4, Reagan informed Ford that he definitely will be a candidate. That followed Reagan's courtship of Ford — in an effort to end their 1976 feud — during two joint appearances in Texas on Sept. 12, when both campaigned for William Clements, now the Texas governor-elect. Party insiders say that Ford accepted the unsurprising news about Reagan's candidacy quietly, making no effort to change his mind.

But Reagan's private word to Ford that he will definitely run ended all pretense by the former president that he and Reagan would both renounce 1980 ambitions and pool their resources to find a "fresh, new face" (to quote a Ford intimate) to lead a unified Republican party. Ford had hinted at just such a joint effort in a handwritten note to Reagan on Sept. 14, two days after Reagan's peace bid, in which he praised Reagan's 1978 campaign effort and spoke of a "common cause" between Ford and Reagan to fortify and unite the party together.

The next move in the unequal Ford-Reagan rivalry, with Reagan having the whip hand, is now up to Ford. But Ford's problem in stopping Reagan is cursed with the same riddle that the moderate Republican governors cannot solve: stop Reagan with whom? Not even the staunchest, most loyal of Ford's own partisans feel that Ford himself could stop Reagan.

As for placating the governors, Reagan strategists are plotting a Reagan "communicating role" calculated to assuage and soothe. "The governors are going to find out that we look on them as our friends," one Reagan operative told us. "They will be surprised at how solicitous Reagan is about their problems, as long as they play it straight with us."

Preliminary "soothing" moves began election night. One new governor received no less than three telephone calls from Reagan: one for himself, the others for his two top campaign aides. Others, including Minnesota's Quie, heard from John Sears, Reagan's top strategist, whose quiet, shadowy presence was sharply felt here.

As now planned, these lines of "communicating" between Reagan and non-Reaganite governors will tighten, toward a point that Reagan hopes will make it increasingly difficult for an anti-Reagan cabal to form around George Bush or any other moderate. Some Republicans, in both non-Reagan and anti-Reagan camps, despair that such tactics may work all too well. If so, Reagan's 1979 problem resolves into avoidance of error and the hope that the polls — often a front-runner's booby-trap — don't do him in.

Ex-informant reveals meeting with Priscilla Davis

By MIKE COCHRAN

HOUSTON (AP) — A one-time informant with a reputation as a "hit man" says he left a meeting with Priscilla Davis last winter convinced she wanted her millionaire husband murdered.

It's part of the strategy by defense attorneys to characterize their client, Fort Worth industrialist Cullen Davis, as the target of a conspiracy instead of the man who plotted a murder, as the state contends.

Burly, balding David Binion, 34, testified Thursday he met the shapely blonde at the Davis mansion and that she was "extremely upset" and appeared "messed up on drugs."

"Did you leave the meeting with the opinion that she called you there to do harm to Cullen Davis?" Defense attorney Richard "Racehorse" Haynes asked.

"Yes," Binion replied. On cross-examination, prosecutor Tolly Wilson posed this question: "While you were there did she ever ask you to kill or have her husband Thomas Cullen Davis killed?" "No," he responded.

Mrs. Davis says she never met Binion, a Houston car salesman who lived in Fort Worth at the time of the alleged meeting.

That was the highlight of testimony Thursday in and out of the presence of the jury in the murder conspiracy trial of Davis, 45.

The state contends the stoic oil heir plotted to kill his divorcee last August and that he paid FBI informant David McCrory $25,000 when he thought his orders had been obeyed. Instead, McCrory, 40, the state's key witness, took his story to the FBI and cooperated in a tape-recorded scheme that led to Davis' arrest Aug. 20.

Within hours, the defense team that successfully defended Davis on a murder charge last year insisted that he had been framed.

And now they are trying to show that Davis was the target in a triangular conspiracy conceived by Mrs. Davis and perpetuated by McCrory and Fort Worth karate instructor Pat Burleson.

All three have denied that such a conspiracy existed.

Binion, the third defense witness, said he was a paid informant for three law enforcement agencies when he was contacted in July 1977 by a woman identifying herself as Priscilla Davis.

He said, however, he did not respond to the telephone calls until early this year, more than a month after Davis was acquitted of murdering Priscilla's 12-year-old daughter Andrea by a previous marriage.

Andrea was killed in a bloody 1976 rampage at the $6 million Davis mansion when a "man in black" gunned down Mrs. Davis, her lover Stan Farr, and a chance visitor.

Mrs. Davis, 37, and Gus Gavrel, now 23 and crippled in the midnight attack, survived.

Binion testified that in his undercover role as an informant he worked as a debt collector for North Texas gamblers and that he purposely nourished his reputation as a "hit man and a muscle man."

Without explaining why he waited six months to respond, Binion said he went to the mansion on a snowy winter day and talked with Mrs. Davis alone in her bedroom.

"Did she seem to recognize that you were there in response to a telephone call from her?" Wilson asked.

"No," he replied. Binion said she was "upset over the cause and the outcome of the trial in Amarillo" and "she told me God will take care of these matters and he (Davis) would get what's coming to him."

After vigorous arguments and an apparent prosecutorial miscue,

Haynes succeeded in getting before the jury most of a statement Binion provided the defense prior to the Oct. 30 trial date.

That included an observation by Binion that if Mrs. Davis was "not so messed up she'd pop the question" about finding someone to kill her husband.

"You assume she contacted you because of your reputation that you could get someone killed?" Haynes asked.

"That's possible," he replied. In his arguments before the judge and not the jury, Haynes declared: "He told us he went there because she wanted a hit man and she did everything but ask him.

"...He tells us one thing and gets on the stand and says something else."

Although called by the defense, Binion obviously was reluctant to repeat what he earlier told Haynes and his investigative colleague Steve Sumner.

Haynes implied, and Binion denied, that his partisanship swung to the prosecution when a "hot check" charge against the witness was "resolved" in Fort Worth.

The crafty Houston attorney also brought out that FBI agent Ron Jan-nings of Fort Worth, a state witness here, provided bail for Binion to get him out of jail on the check charge.

Haynes also sought to show that the FBI and other law enforcement agencies displayed little interest and took no action when Binion reported his suspicions about Mrs. Davis' motive for contacting him.

The defense is expected to argue that such disinterest led Davis to mistrust authorities and contributed to his frame of mind during the conversations in which he made the incriminating, tape-recorded remarks to McCrory.

Armed forces considering gay dismissal guidelines

WASHINGTON (AP) — The armed services — told by a federal judge they must specify why a homosexual isn't fit to serve — are considering new guidelines that could drastically cut forced dismissals of military "gays."

One Pentagon source said possible new procedures could reduce such discharges by as much as 90 percent, but he cautioned that the figure was only a rough estimate and could vary depending on final decisions on the guidelines.

The subject was thrashed out by civilian and military lawyers of the Army, Navy and Air Force Thursday as they met to consider responses to a federal appeals court ruling overturning Air Force and Navy dismissals of two gay rights activists.

The Pentagon could appeal Wednesday's ruling by the U.S. Court of Appeals in Washington, but a source said the military's inclination is instead to try to draft guidelines to meet the court's objections.

All the Pentagon sources requested anonymity. The appeals court overturned lower-court decisions that had upheld the discharges of Air Force Technical Sgt. Leonard P. Matlovich and Navy Ensign Vernon E. Berg III.

The court did not say the military could not discharge homosexuals, but it insisted that more-specific grounds are required, that simple admission by a homosexual of such a sexual preference is not a good enough reason to drum him — or her — out of the armed forces.

The appeals court said neither Matlovich or Berg were given such specific reasons. One Pentagon source said the new guidelines being considered may specify dismissal if there has been an overt act such as "propositioning" someone on a military base. There are no such detailed standards now.

Another source said potential ramifications raised by the ruling include the possibility the military will have to review numerous cases of persons discharged on homosexual grounds since Matlovich's case in 1975.

Last year 525 homosexual men and women were discharged from the military.

The general practice of all military branches has been dismissal of known homosexuals. But the court pointed to Air Force regulations that say, in effect, the service could retain homosexuals on active duty "under unusual circumstances" and "provided that the airman's ability to perform military service has not been compromised."

Midlanders aren't staying 'home for the holidays'

R-T Staff Writer

If "home for the holidays" is the tradition, a lot of Midlanders are ignoring it these days. They're going "wherever they can get to," according to one travel agent.

But if you're just now deciding it would be nice to get away for awhile during the holidays, odds are you're too late.

"Any hot- or cold-weather spot, just forget," advised George Mayes of Lones Hotels Service. "I doubt if you could even get into Ruidoso."

Resort hotels and airline flights are pretty much booked solid, Mayes and Robert Behr of Allega Travel agree.

The agents said Midlanders in droves are planning trips both to visit family and to vacation in resort areas. Mayes has found Aspen about the most popular resort for the holidays, but Behr said Hawaii is the big draw.

Cruises, mostly to the Caribbean are another popular item, the two agree. Although public school holidays begin at the end of class Dec. 15, Mayes said the 22nd and the 26th seem to be the most popular departure days. And a lot of people want to come home Jan. 6, said Behr.

Europe isn't especially popular for the holidays, and, perhaps surprisingly, neither is the Holy Land, the agents agree. Mexico is always popular, said Mayes. But Behr said Midland doesn't send too many people to Mexico during peak times like Christmas.

In any case, whether it's a trip to Hawaii or to Grandma's house in Cleveland, getting there by air will be a challenge for those who haven't already made reservations.

A spokesman for Texas International said almost all flights from the 22nd through the 28th are booked full, with people who began making reservations about the first of November.

The travel agents agree it's almost impossible to get anyone to Dallas for connecting flights. Once in Dallas, said Behr, it's hard to get reservations to Miami, and then to the Caribbean, and getting to Denver is "impossible."

The two disagree on the relative volume of travel this year. Mayes said he hasn't noticed an increase in the number of travelers — "It's just always a busy time."

But Behr said more people are traveling this year, partly because of lower air fares. Another factor, he speculated, may be fear of a coming recession and an attitude of "We might as well have fun now while we can."

Even the funniest lines fail to ruffle most waiters

By HUGH MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — "They also serve who only stand and wait..."

Milton, of course, was talking about the frustrations of his blindness and not about waiters who stand around listening to the customers, which is a shame, because some of the lines overheard might have cheered him up.

"I don't want the soup du jour; I had that yesterday."

"If dessert comes with the meal and consume doesn't, can I have a salad instead? I'm on a diet."

"I always get ravioli mixed up with manicotti. Which is the one that looks like little sweat socks?"

"Does the Bombay duck come with an orange or a curry sauce?"

"Mildred, I think you'll like the Welsh rarebit; it's what they call hasenpfeffer in a German restaurant."

"Make mine the prime rib au jus without the gravy, and leave off the ice cream on the apple pie a la mode ... I'm counting every calorie."

"Bring my wife a children's platter. She's got a weigh-in tomorrow at Weight Watchers."

Lines like these regularly fail to ruffle the simulated Gallic charm of Tom Walsh, a neighbor of mine up in Connecticut who has served as maitre d', captain and waiter at a number of posh and pretentious bistros, au-berges and country clubs throughout commuter-land. Untutored in French, innocent of ever having drawn an accent grave in anger, this Brooklyn Irishman has a faultless ear that has enabled him to master Inspector Clouseau's Pink Panther patois so expertly even the chef swears at him in French.

Tom's gifted ear is always finely attuned to the prose of those he stands and waits to serve, enabling him to collect gems like:

"Chicken Kiev is the one that bleeds grease when you poke it."

"Pourboire is French for toilet ... I think it's upstairs."

"Cote de Veau en Feuilleté means it comes wearing those little white booties that will cost you an extra two bucks just for show...."

People who make a profession of serving the public don't have to stand around long waiting for lines that will light up their day and, at times, simmer their sang-froid.

Warren LeRuth, the great New Orleans chef and restaurateur, has become a connoisseur of the guilt-ridden answers his waiters receive when they ask if the customer would like to order some wine with the meal.

Here are a few classics from his collection:

"Wine with the meal? Yeah, make it scotch ... with soda."

"Not tonight.... It makes my wife sweat."

"No, I'm driving to Texas tomorrow...."

"No wine. We won't be able to taste the food ... Wine deadens the taste, you know."

"LeRuth lists his two favorites in the fine art of squelching the sommelier:

"After the waiter leaned over the host to ask if he would like wine with the meal, the host turned to his guests and said: 'The waiter wants to know if we want iced tea now or coffee later?'"

And: "After the host had told the waiter, he didn't want wine, the wife called the waiter back, turned to her husband and said, 'Aw, c'mon, don't you want some wine?' To which her husband replied, 'Do you want a punch in the mouth?'"

Une frappe a la bouche, I believe it is called in French culinary circles. It is always served slightly chilled.

Vance's Middle East Trip could develop into diplomatic shuttle

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance's trip to the Middle East beginning this weekend could develop into a diplomatic shuttle between Cairo and Jerusalem to try to break the deadlock in Egyptian-Israeli peace talks.

Vance's job is to persuade Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin to compromise their differences over the Palestinians and other obstacles to a treaty.

Administration spokesmen said Vance expects to return home by mid-week, but privately U.S. officials are not ruling out an extended stay in the region.

This, they say, is one of a number of options remaining open.

Another is setting up a second summit with President Carter — although "that's not the plan at this point," one high-level official said.

"We're down to pretty well defined issues and explored them a number of ways," said the official, who asked that he not be identified.

"We've tried negotiations, special emissaries, letters, presidential telephone calls. We're at the point the decisions that have to be made to complete the treaty cannot be made by negotiators here."

Vance will fly from London to Cairo Sunday to see Sadat. He will move on to Jerusalem Monday or Tuesday.

If these two conversations indicate he can complete a treaty, he will consider extending his stay in the Middle East, the officials said.

And, even though Vance is not partial to shuttle diplomacy, he may find himself flying back and forth between Sadat in Cairo and Begin in Jerusalem to nail down the "political decisions" required for a settlement.

"There has to be some shaking loose of their positions if the treaty is to be completed," one official said.

Could Vance stay on? "If he sees a solution in his grasp, of course he'll cancel a couple of days' appointments in Washington," said the official, on a not-to-be-identified basis.

"We would like to make the trip one that brings the two sides close enough so that negotiators here can complete the treaty," said another, equally anonymous official.

This would mean a compromise between Sadat's demand for a timetable for Palestinian autonomy on the west bank of the Jordan River and in the Gaza Strip and Begin's refusal to even accept a target date.

Also, Sadat is trying to rewrite a treaty provision designed to keep Egypt out of any future Arab-Israeli war. Begin has accepted the provision, along with all other treaty articles, and wants it to stand.

Inevitably, the two leaders will take up with Vance their requests for post-war American aid. And he may be drawn into negotiations over the details of Israel's relinquishing Sinai's off-shore oilfields.

Formal, high-level peace talks here have been suspended for three weeks, but despite the deadlock there are continuing contacts between Egypt and Israel.

Egyptian Prime Minister Mustafa Khalil, for instance, was on the long-distance telephone regularly with Israeli Defense Minister Ezer Weizman late last week while Khalil was here for talks with President Carter and Vance.

And yet, hopes for completing a treaty by Dec. 17, the projected target date, are fading fast.

On Sept. 17, in the ebullience of the successful Camp David summit wind-up, Begin forswore completion of the treaty within two months, by Nov. 17.

Sadat agreed that goal was attainable, and so did Vance — providing, he said, the two sides worked hard.

Western Europe's dope problem exists despite 'old world' habits

By ROBERT H. REID
Associated Press Writer

BONN, West Germany (AP) — High quality, low priced heroin is flooding Western Europe, police say, resulting in a pattern of rising youth addiction and drug deaths reminiscent of the U.S. experience.

Investigators believe most of the heroin comes from the Middle East, which last year began replacing Southeast Asia as the major supplier for the European narcotics trade.

"We used to hear that the 'old world' attitude would keep drugs out of Europe," said Thomas V. Cash, special agent in charge of the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration operation in Germany. "But this is very clearly not the case."

He said that the increasing prevalence of heroin, various pills and other drugs bears striking similarities to the growth of drug abuse in the United States from 1966 to 1976. "It's eerie to watch."

Heroin abuse has been on the decline in the United States in recent years — heroin-related deaths in New York City dropped from 900 in the early 1970s to about 400 this year.

In West Germany, where the drug problem is perhaps greatest, the federal criminal office reports 172 kilograms of heroin have been seized so far this year, compared with about a teaspoonful in 1968. A kilogram is 2.2 pounds.

Berndt-Georg Thamm, a Berlin drug expert, said the percentage of 12- to 16-year-olds among West Germany's 50,000 estimated heroin addicts has jumped from nearly zero to 20 percent in three years.

Heroin is sold in a purer form in West Germany, and is therefore somewhat cheaper.

For the equivalent of $85, German addicts can buy a gram of heroin, enough for about 20 injections, drug experts say. The product is 30-40 percent pure, compared with under 5 percent pure for heroin sold in the United States. In New York City, the price for a gram of heroin — the less pure variety — is $55 to $65.

Inspector Hans Johansson of the Stockholm police reported heroin seizures in Sweden climbed from 82 last year to 127 during the first nine months of this year. He termed the increase in heroin abuse among Swedish youth as "disastrous."

French police say the number of drug-overdose deaths soared from 72 last year to about 100 so far this year. They said there was also a "dramatic" increase in thefts of amphetamines and barbiturates from pharmacies.

Overdose deaths are also up in Italy — from 26 in 1975 to 57 so far this year. The government's anti-drug squad said many of the victims were between 18 and 25. In Denmark the drug death rate climbed from 39 in 1976 to 85 in the first 10 months of this year.

"Clearly the drug problem worsened seriously after the introduction of heroin," said Dr. H.E. Knipschildt, Copenhagen's chief medical officer.

The bright spots have been Britain and the Netherlands, where the arrest and deportation of Chinese believed to run international drug smuggling have led to a decline in drug seizures.

"The amount of heroin in circulation was considerably reduced following the conviction of members of six cells of Chinese traffickers," Scotland Yard Commissioner Sir David Nees said in his annual report last June.

"This led inevitably to a steep rise in the price demanded from addicts for illicit supplies of drugs."

Dutch police believe recent arrests among Chinese dealers were responsible for an increase from about $125 to $150 per gram in the street price for heroin.

DEA agent Cash said most of the heroin reaching West Germany comes from Afghanistan, Pakistan and Iran via Turkey.

Some of the 1.2 million Turkish workers who live in West Germany smuggle the heroin into this country in small — 1- to 5-kilogram — shipments, making detection difficult among the thousands of travelers crossing the borders daily.

"It's estimated that about 80 million people transit West Germany each year," Cash said. "They can't search everybody and they can't close down the country."

His automatic drawn, a West Berlin policeman carries off plastic bag containing suspected drugs in the wake of a raid, as curious Berliners look on. (AP Laserphoto)

State wants veto power over waste sites

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN—The Texas Attorney General's Office, in comments filed with the federal Interagency Review Group on Nuclear Waste Management, once again has insisted that states should have veto power over the siting of nuclear waste disposal facilities within their boundaries.

The review group has issued a draft report on procedures for selecting nuclear waste disposal methods and sites. The Texas Attorney General's Office comments, prepared by Asst. Attorney General Rick Lowerre, were sent to Washington this week.

In his comments, Lowerre wrote the review group "should propose and support meaningful review and 'concurrent' authority to insure that states not only are given an opportunity to participate fully in any siting decisions but also have the full power to protect the interests of their citizens. This means individual veto power over sites."

Lowerre said that "proper incentives" ought to be created to insure that a solution to the nuclear waste problem is found.

Such an incentive, he suggested in his comments, might be for the review group "to recommend adequate funding for research and development for a period of time, such as five years, after which failure to find a reasonable solution could result in abatement of nuclear plant licensing."

While the draft report recommends the Department of Energy be given the major responsibility for nuclear waste management, Lowerre suggests that the Nuclear Regulatory Commission is the "proper licensing agency for any disposal activities."

The comments conclude that the needs for credibility in all federal activities dealing with nuclear waste should be stressed and that the group's report should insist on full and explicit disclosure of federal programs "involving such important and controversial issues."

An Albuquerque research group has predicted at least 351.3 train accidents in 12 states involving nuclear waste during the first 20 years of operation of the federal Waste Isolation Pilot Plant near Carlsbad, N.M.

That report, prepared by the Southwest Research and Information Center, says that by using recent Department of Transportation data, 44.1 train accidents can be expected to occur in Texas involving nuclear waste.

The report was made in response to DOE statements last spring in New Mexico during a public meeting on the Carlsbad project that "transportation is not necessarily a problem."

The research group, which had described itself as anti-WIPP "but not necessarily anti-nuclear," maintains, however, that transportation is "the heart of the WIPP controversy."

DOE contractor Sandia Laboratories told the Nucleonics Week newsletter that the DOT definition of an accident involves any mishap with "$750 worth of damage," while Sandia's definition of an accident is that which would exceed "the regulations' requirements" on the potential for damaging casks used for transporting nuclear wastes.

Mother and baby of 60 pounds both doing fine

KEY BISCAIYNE, Fla. (AP) — Cora the Rhinoceros gave birth to a 60-to 65-pound calf Thursday at the Crandon Park Zoo, zoo officials said. The baby rhino was tentatively named Amani — "peace" in Swahili — said Dan Brennan, executive director of the Zoological Society of Florida.

The birth at 3:50 a.m. culminated a vigil of more than six months since the society first noticed the several-ton beast was expecting, Brennan said. Zoological Society member Rita Sgro was on duty when the calf was born, he added.

DEATHS

Herman Schauer

Herman L. Schauer, 75, of Tomball, brother of Herbert Schauer of Midland, died Thursday morning in a Midland hospital. He had become ill while visiting his brother here.

Services are pending at Klein Funeral Home in Tomball. Local arrangements are being handled by Ellis Funeral Home.

Schauer was born June 30, 1903, in Rosehill. He had lived in Tomball 37 years. He was a poultry and vegetable farmer.

Other survivors include his wife, two daughters, a brother, two sisters and five grandchildren.

Mrs. Malott

CORVALLIS, Ore. — Mrs. Lucian (Bonnie) Malott, 87, of Mt. Carmel, Ill., mother of Mrs. Jack (Margaret) McIntosh of Midland, died here Thursday.

Services are pending at Short's Funeral Home in Mt. Carmel.

Other survivors include four sons and several grandchildren.

Goldie Tate

LAMESA — Services for Goldie Tate, 74, of Lamesa, mother of R.L. Tate of Midland, will be at 10 a.m. Friday in Branon Funeral Home with burial in Lamesa Memorial Park Cemetery.

Mrs. Tate died Tuesday in a Lamesa hospital following a lengthy illness.

She was born Oct. 26, 1901, in Paradise and moved to Lamesa 24 years ago. She married J.A. Tate on Aug. 15, 1921.

Other survivors include her husband; four sons, Doug Tate of Lamesa, A.A. Tate of Aspermont, R.D. Tate of Houston and Billy Tate of Comvey; a daughter, Mrs. Bruce MacNeil of Sulphur Springs; three sisters, three brothers, 19 grandchildren and 21 great-grandchildren.

G.L. Armstrong

Services for George L. Armstrong, 73, of 1403 W. Kentucky Ave. will be at 2 p.m. Sunday in Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home with the Rev. J.B. Stewart, associate pastor at First United Methodist Church, officiating, assisted by the Rev. Steve Edwards, pastor of First Christian Church.

Burial will be in Resthaven Memorial Park Cemetery.

Armstrong died Friday in a Midland hospital following a lengthy illness.

He was born April 27, 1905, in Goldthwaite. He spent his early life in Oklahoma. He moved to the Wink and Kermit area in 1933, and was employed by Stanolind Oil and Gas Co.

Armstrong entered the U.S. Air Force in 1941 and, upon being discharged, returned to work for Stanolind. In 1957, he went to work for Superior Oil Co. in the purchasing department. He retired in 1965.

A Midland resident 13 years, he was a member of the First United Methodist Church and the Midland Masonic Lodge No. 623. He was also a member of the Suez Shrine Temple. He was a 32nd Degree Scottish Rite Mason.

Survivors include his wife; a brother, Jack Armstrong of Fort Worth, and a sister, Mrs. Cecil Reed of Ringling, Okla.

Shirlan Jackson

Services for Shirlan Jackson, 7, of 1807 E. English Drive will at 2 a.m. Saturday in the Fort Worth and Jax Streets Church of Christ with Clyde Freeman, minister, and Don Mitchell, assistant minister, officiating.

Burial will be in Fairview Cemetery under direction of Jackson Funeral Home.

She was pronounced dead on arrival at a Midland hospital Tuesday afternoon. Peace Justice John Biggs has ordered an autopsy to determine cause of death. She had suffered from asthma.

Shirlan was born Feb. 28, 1971, in Midland. She was student at Peace Elementary School.

Survivors include her parents, Ollie and Helen Jackson; three sisters, Adell Parks and Sarah Jean Gibson; both of Baton Rouge, La., and Kathryn Jackson of Midland, and her grandmother, Denny Holland of Midland.

Unemployment remains 'bright'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The unemployment rate remained unchanged at 5.8 percent in November as adult men gained most of the 540,000 new jobs that were created, the Labor Department said today.

Women and teen-agers had made most of the employment gains during the summer, but the new report showed employment among men rising from 51.4 million to 51.9 million last month.

The proportion of the entire adult and child population holding jobs rose to a record 59.1 percent last month, the department said.

The improved unemployment picture this year has been a bright spot in an economy that has otherwise been torn by surging prices and a ballooning foreign trade deficit.

But many private economists are predicting higher unemployment next year as the Carter administration tries to drive down the inflation rate.

The jobless rate has plummeted from 9.1 percent of the labor force in May 1975 to around 6 percent of this year, as the growing economy has created millions of new jobs. The unemployment rate also stood at 5.8 percent in October.

Unemployment had been 6 percent in September before declining to 5.8 percent in both October and November.

Although more men gained jobs in November, their unemployment rate remained at 4 percent because more of them last month had also begun looking for jobs than previously.

Following is the unemployment rate for other categories:

—Adult women 5.8 percent, up from 5.6 percent in October.

—Teen-agers 16.2 percent, down from 16.3 percent.

—White population 5 percent, down from 5.1 percent.

—Black and other minorities 11.8 percent, up from 11.4 percent.

—Full-time workers 5.2 percent, down from 5.3 percent.

—Black teen-agers, 36.2 percent, up from 34.3 percent.

The report also showed the duration of individual unemployment has declined sharply in the past year. The average unemployed person spent 7 weeks without a job in November 1977, but 6.1 weeks in October and 5.5 weeks last month.

In the past year, total employment has risen by 3.3 million to 95.7 million jobs, with adult women accounting for more than half the increase, the department said.

Last month the average work week for production workers rose 0.1 hours to 35.9 hours. Their average hourly earnings increased 0.7 percent in November and 8.7 percent for the year.

The average production worker earned $5.87 per hour in November, or $210.15 per week. All the figures are adjusted to account for seasonal variations.

Since the start of his term, President Carter has been trying to create jobs by keeping the economy growing steadily. But Barry Bosworth, director of the Council on Wage and Price Stability, says unemployment prospects probably will worsen in coming months.

"We are going to have to have a pause in our economic expansion" to fight inflation, he said.

Bosworth and other government officials say that does not mean a recession is inevitable, but they see little chance that unemployment can be brought down still more.

Many economists, including George Perry and Arthur Okun of the Brookings Institution, are predicting a recession by the middle of next year, leading to higher unemployment figures.

If a recession is coming, it has not shown itself in economic indicators so far. Industrial production, employment, personal income, retail sales, housing and factory orders all were strong in October.

However, the government tightened credit Nov. 1 in a dramatic move to bolster the reeling dollar on foreign exchanges, and these economists say the subsequent scarcity of money will bring on a recession.

The inflation picture showed no improvement Thursday as the government reported wholesale prices rose 0.8 percent in November.

Although the spiral in food prices eased, costs for fuel and other products rose rapidly. These wholesale prices are usually passed on to consumers within a few months.

The November report covered the first month since President Carter's anti-inflation program was adopted. Lyle Gramley, one of Carter's economic advisers, said, "It will take a long time to get inflation under control."

Carter generally has asked business and labor to hold wage increases to 7 percent and price hikes to an average of 5.75 percent — a 0.5 percentage point decrease from average price increases in 1976-77.

Government said seeking 'passive' dump sites

By JACK KEEVER

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — An assistant Texas attorney general says the federal government is looking for states "where they won't face strong resistance" to locate nuclear waste disposal sites.

Studies are underway in Texas for possible disposal sites in the Panhandle and East Texas, said Rick Lowerre. There is a pilot disposal project at Carlsbad, N.M., 25 miles from the Texas border.

Lowerre told environmentalists Thursday 11 states have banned nuclear waste disposal sites, and a number of others have prohibited the transportation of such wastes within their boundaries.

He said federal Energy Secretary James Schlesinger has assured Texas Attorney General John Hill that Texas has the authority to veto any disposal site the federal government might pick in the state.

However, said Lowerre, the president or Congress "could tell DOE (Department of Energy) to withdraw that authority and they (DOE) would have to go along with it."

"I'm not saying we should reject the sites," said Lowerre. "I am saying the veto authority is important ... we need that leverage."

Linn Draper, former director of the Nuclear Reactor Laboratory at the University of Texas, said Texas officials should insist on a thorough federal study before they permit nuclear wastes to be transported across the state.

Draper said he thought DOE would comply with such demands "if properly pressed. So far, I haven't seen that pressure."

Draper, Lowerre and others addressed a conference on environmental legislation. The two-day conference is sponsored by For the People, Inc., and the Texas Environmental Council, which includes the Sierra Club, League of Women Voters, Texas Medical Association, Houston Citizens' Council and Texas Electrical Co-Ops.

The conference was funded, however, by the National Endowment for the Humanities; Texas Committee for the Humanities; Mitchell Energy and Development Corp.; Monsanto Co.; Sun Production Co.; and El Paso Natural Gas Co.

Draper said the military has accumulated 80 million gallons of high-level radioactive wastes during the past 30 years and commercial radioactive wastes should equal that amount by the year 2000.

Additionally, 60,000 cubic meters of low-level radioactive wastes have been stored at 20 federal sites throughout the nation, some in "slipshod fashion."

Spock says disobedience necessary

EXETER, N.H. (AP) — Baby doctor Benjamin Spock, who was sentenced to 60 days in jail for taking part in an anti-nuclear protest, says sometimes civil disobedience is the only way to make people aware of the health hazards of nuclear power.

Spock, his wife, Mary Morgan, and eight members of the Clamshell Alliance, an anti-nuclear group, received 60-day sentences and fines of $200 plus court costs Thursday for their part in a September demonstration at the Seabrook nuclear plant site.

All 10 appealed their convictions and were released on bail. Another person arrested in the protest was found innocent on a technicality during the hearing in Hampton District Court.

Spock and the other demonstrators were arrested as they walked through the main gate of the nuclear plant site, which has been the scene of seven small demonstrations since mid-August.

Midland-Odessa Singles Association begins its December activities this weekend.

On Saturday, a party will be hosted at 1107 N.W. 3rd St. in Andrews by Red, better known as "Mr. MOSA." The party begins at 8 p.m. until 2. Anyone needing more information can call the host at 523-2396.

Jolly Schram of 3001 Douglas St. has invited MOSA members for a family Christmas party on Sunday. Each person attending can either bring a covered dish or pay $2 for the meal, and each child should bring a gift valued at around $1.50 for the grab bag. Jolly's number is 697-1350 in Midland. The party will be held from 4-6 p.m.

Other persons to call for details on parties are Bill Luse at 362-2472 in Odessa and Sharon Ledbetter at 683-8217 and Robin Walraven at 682-5965, both of Midland.

MOSA directors are Dean and Larry Magee, 333-3583, Odessa, and Margaret Coon at 563-2321, the 24-hour activities line of the group.

MOSA's first party was hosted Aug. 4 by Dean Hiesel. On Nov. 18, MOSA's first couple, Mr. and Mrs. Jim Baze, were married in the home of Francis Rogers at 3608 Andrews. The bride is the former Virginia Duke.

...WENDY FLOOD, former Midland dancer, now is a member of the Southern Illinois University Repertory Dance Theater. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Flood, and while here, she was a dance student of Georgia Harston.

Miss Flood is an undergraduate student majoring in dance at SIU at Carbondale.

The dance theater is a 15-member modern dance group. Its purpose is to give interested dance students the opportunity to stage and perform original dance productions.

...MARTHA DOUGLASS of Parents Without Partners reports the group will have a concession stand in Crier Park beginning at 9:30 a.m. Saturday for persons watching the Christmas parade. Hot coffee and hot chocolate will be sold and this will be a blessing if the present cold temperatures hold out till then. Especially if the snow and ice predicted materialize.

The Midland group also has scheduled a Christmas dance for 9 p.m. Saturday in the Holiday Inn. The Cactus band of Midland will provide music for dancing. The price of admission is $3.50 for members and non-members. The latter must be parents that are single.

...A DISCUSSION GROUP will hold an organization meeting at 7:30 p.m. Monday at Covenant Presbyterian Church. This is a meeting for people who are divorced or in the process of being divorced. Meetings will be held on a regular basis to discuss frustrations and problems unique to the situation of the divorced, according to the Rev. Gordon Garlington, pastor of the church.

Rev. Garlington emphasizes this is not a regular church class and anyone wishing additional information can call him at 694-2556.

...CATERED LUNCHEON at Midland Senior Center will begin at 11:45 a.m. Wednesday at the center. The senior citizens will be entertained with a musical program. Reservations can be made by calling 682-3149 or lunch can be brought, according to Marge Holland, center director.

...PARDON OUR SLIP. Mildred Lindsey is outgoing chairman of Midland Senior Citizens, Inc., and not Senior Services, Inc., as reported in a recent edition of The Midland Reporter-Telegram. She remains as a member of the board of Senior Citizens.

Government announces investigation

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID
AP Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government is taking a look at adult education programs around the country and what needs to be done to improve them.

Usually when agencies make such an investigation they propose rule changes and then solicit comments on them from the public.

Instead, the Office of Education has decided to seek your thoughts first. That way, officials said, the whole weight of bureaucratic inertia isn't already behind some proposals when new suggestions are made.

The agency will accept written comments until Jan. 2 and is scheduling a series of open meetings around the country where interested persons can discuss their ideas.

While all types of comments will be considered, the agency has some specific areas in which it wants your thoughts. These include ways to expand adult education beyond the public schools, programs to find the persons most in need of education, flexible schedules, transportation and child care services.

Interested persons can write to Paul Delker, U.S. Office of Education, 7th and D streets SW, Room 5076, Washington, D.C., 20202. The meeting schedule will be:

—Dec. 11: Robert Morris College, Patrick Henry Center, Hopwood Lecture Hall, Coraopolis, Pa.

—Dec. 12: Empire State Plaza, Concourse Level, Room 1, Albany, N.Y.; Salt Lake Community High School, Horace Mann Auditorium, 233 West 200 North, Salt Lake City, Utah; South Campus - Milwaukee Area Technical College, Cafeteria, Room A-104, 6665 S. Howell Ave., Oak Creek, Wis.

—Dec. 13: University of Southern Maine, College Avenue, Bailey Hall, Room 10, Gorham, Me.; Hilton Inn West, Arabian Room, 1-40 and Meridian, Oklahoma City, Okla.; Portland Community College, Rock Creek Campus, Theater Room, 17705 N.W. Springville Road, Portland, Ore.

New therapy to help cure of cancer

BOSTON (AP) — Doctors have developed a new form of drug therapy that doubles the chance of curing women who suffer from cancer of the ovaries, the most commonly fatal gynecological malignancy in the United States.

The new treatment, reported by the National Cancer Institute, uses a combination of four drugs instead of a single medicine as is now common.

In a study of 80 patients, women who took the four-drug combination showed complete remission of the cancer 33 percent of the time, compared with a 16 percent remission rate in those who took the single drug.

The study was published in today's New England Journal of Medicine. The doctors compared the effectiveness of four drugs — hexamethylamine, cyclophosphamide, methotrexate and 5-fluorouracil — with malphalan, the drug now used to treat ovarian cancer.

Doctors say that by the time it is recognized, ovarian cancer has often spread to other organs, and it is difficult to cure. Five years after discovery of the disease, the survival rate ranges from zero to 10 percent, regardless of whether the patient has been treated with an operation, radiation or single-drug chemotherapy.

"It is clear that advanced ovarian cancer is responsive to combination chemotherapy, but it is also clear that it remains a formidable illness," the doctors said.

Emergency rooms for crisis only

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here is a health care thought from the federal Office of Consumer Affairs:

"Hospital emergency rooms are and should be for emergencies. Do not hesitate to use them if a genuine medical emergency occurs. But, if it is possible to wait until tomorrow, and if a regular physician or clinic can be visited, you will usually save some money. Also, emergency room fees can vary from hospital to hospital. If you have a choice of facilities in your area, call and inquire about the basic costs so you can compare prices before you find yourself in a crisis situation."

Students in the fifth grade class at Trinity School have prepared a health food cookbook entitled "Love is Never Having to Say You're Sorry", here being examined by Marietta Byrom, middle, and Byron Hulse. Sherry Fishman, left, is a fifth grade teacher. Persons who would like to order the recipe book for Christmas can call the school at 697-3281. Price is $2.50 a copy and should be paid in advance. The cookbooks will be available in time for Christmas if orders are submitted by Monday. The project is a culmination of the grade's study on foods and nutrition. (Staff Photo)

Trinity class learns nutrition, compiles special cookbook

By Wanda Mouton
R-T Lifestyle Editor

The holiday season is typically a time for eating good food—lots of it. But the fifth grade at Trinity School wants to make this season of treats a nutritious one, too.

As culmination of a unit of study on foods and nutrition, the class is compiling a health food recipe book which can make an ideal stocking stuffer or Christmas gift.

The idea for the book began in the midst of the students' study on foods and their influence on a person's development, according to Sherry Fishman, fifth grade teacher.

"The class thought it would be a good idea to gather recipes for dishes that were not only healthy and nutritious, but also good to eat," she said.

"To compile as many recipes as possible in a short length of time, the class decided to sponsor a school-wide contest," she added.

The fifth grade, working under the guidance of Mrs. Fishman and Marion Holmes, divided into several groups, including a recipe committee, regulations committee, book cover committee, poster committee and public relations committee.

The public relations committee invited several persons to speak to the class, including Mrs. Jeri Daily, nutrition specialist; Mrs. Mary McFadden, third grade teacher at the school; and Mrs. Faye Craft, a employee of the Midland Diet Center.

A committee also selected the book title, "Health is Never Having to Say You're Sorry," submitted by Michael Hubbard.

As a prize for submitting the most recipes, the winning second grade class was thrown a health food party by the fifth grade. Second grade teachers are Sonja Brittain and Mary Dennis.

The children themselves directed all the activities and made all the preparations for the book, which was a valuable lesson in learning for them, according to Mrs. Fishman.

Over 300 recipes were submitted by the entire school, and approximately 290 are included in the book. Some recipes are original and many are the children's particular favorites.

The students have been writing the recipes by hand, with assistance in typing from many of the parents.

Persons who would like to order "Health is Never Having to Say You're Sorry" can call the Trinity School at 697-3281. Price is $2.50 a copy and should be paid in advance.

The cookbooks will be available for Christmas if orders are submitted through Monday. These books should be picked up at the school on December 15, said Mrs. Fishman.

"If demand warrants, the cookbooks may also be available for orders after Christmas," she added.

The health food project is a part of the school's new health food lunch program which was initiated this year.

Victorian room is leather-lined

MT. VERNON, N.Y. (AP)—The walls of the dining room of Mr. and Mrs. Pat Tucci's 80-year-old Victorian mansion are lined, not with paper, but with wine-colored leather impressed with delicate designs.

The corners and mid-sections of the walls are offset by strips of a natural light-colored wood, which is highly polished to match the doors leading to the kitchen, living room and hall.

"I was not very happy when we first saw it," recalled Mrs. Tucci about the dining room. "The maroon color made the room so dark it was depressing to look at. But once we realized how beautiful it was and how rare it was, I wouldn't let anyone touch it."

The 20-room house is listed in several architectural books as the Bussing House. The Tucis bought the house in 1966 several years after the death of the 1st member of the Bussing family.

Collector adds stamp of approval to hobby

By JOY STILLEY
AP Newsfeatures Writer
NEW YORK (AP)—Joni Miller not only acknowledges that she has "stamp fever" herself, but she is doing her best to infect other people with it.

Symptoms include carrying rubber stamps and an ink pad wherever she goes, the inability to pass a stamp rack without stopping, and itchy fingers that insist on imprinting letters, little pictures and other marks on everything within reach of her stamping arm.

"It started innocently enough when I got interested in combining art with words, and bought a rubber stamp alphabet," the enthusiastic hobbyist said in an interview.

That was an antique sign-marker set of the type used by little corner stores to list goods and prices and she played with it, making signs and greeting cards.

"In the following years I looked for other alphabets, and ran across single stamps that interested me," she continued. "A couple of years ago I really started getting stamp fever and discovered, mostly through word of mouth, little companies that made unusual stamps for people like me."

For people like her, and for others they hope will catch the fever, Ms. Miller, 33, and fellow stamp buff Lowry Thompson, 24, have written a book, "The Rubber Stamp Album."

It covers the whole range of the art form, from the history of rubber stamps and lists of companies that sell the more than 5,000 different commercially available designs or make them to order, to instructions on making your own, and suggestions as to how to use them.

"If you put a stamp in someone's hands they'll become addicted," Ms. Miller says. "It's nice to get the instant gratification from creating things, and part of it is that stamps make it possible to personalize things, which is nice now that everything is the same."

"Even if it moves you can stamp it," declares the vivacious co-author.

who as a gag recently stamped flies on the cheese at a party, using edible ink. "You can make your own wrapping paper with cards to match, invitations, decorate lunch bags for the kids, tattoo yourself, stamp on glass or fabric. And in the hands of artists, the stamp is an incredible tool."

Inks are readily available at stationery and office-supply stores in standard colors of black, green, red, blue and purple. Special colors and types, including edible and indelible ink can be ordered, along with custom-made stamps.

"You can carve your own rubber stamps from an eraser, or you can take literally any piece of clear black and white art work and have it made into a stamp. The picture can be reduced or enlarged to your specifications," Ms. Miller says.

Ready-made stamps range from 75 cents to about $6, while custom-made ones run from $3.50 to about $8, she says. You can personalize a name and address stamp with any art work that appeals to you, adds Ms. Miller, whose own address stamp has a fan blowing across the letters.

Among the stamps she always carries is one bearing a little signboard that says "A Good Place to Eat" and, she explains, "When I go to a place I enjoy, I stamp it on the check."

Ms. Miller spent many hours in the Library of Congress, researching the history of the rubber stamp, which was invented in the mid-1860s.

Beta Pi club sings carols at Westgate

Members of Beta Pi Conclave of Kappa Kappa Iota, national teachers' sorority, gathered Tuesday night at Westgate Manor Nursing Home to sing Christmas carols for the residents of the home. Afterwards, members attended a Mexican dinner at the Kimber-Lea Club House.

Hostesses for the dinner were Pat Southerland, Shirley Perkins, Maxine Robertson, Evelyn Shelby and Yolanda LeMaster. Gail Reed was a guest. In a brief business meeting, Carol Whitfield was elected to fill the post of club historian for the remainder of the year because of the recent resignation of the person holding that position.

The conclave will not meet in January, but will resume in February.

Treat your sweet tooth to a traditional cake

By ALISON DA ROSA
Copley Syndicate

Cake is an integral ingredient in American life. It's as traditional as a church picnic, as today as dessert defrosting for an unexpected company.

Cake — especially when it's made from scratch — contains milk, eggs, fruits and enriched ingredients that are good for most people.

So why not get the family together and prepare yourselves a special treat. Let a cake turn tonight into an occasion.

POPPYSEED CHEESECAKE

1/2 cup graham cracker crumbs
1 tsp. ground cinnamon

1 1/4 cups sugar, divided
3 tbsps. flour
3 tbsps. poppy seed
2 8-oz. packages cream cheese, softened
1 cup sour cream
1 1/2 tps. vanilla
6 eggs, separated
1/2 tsp. salt
1/2 tsp. cream of tartar
Whipped cream (optional)

Preheat oven to 275 degrees. Mix crumbs with cinnamon. Coat sides of a 9-inch, well-buttered springform pan with crumbs and press into the bottom; set aside.

In the large bowl of an electric mixer, combine 3/4 cup of the sugar with flour and poppy seeds. Add cream cheese, sour cream and vanilla, beating until mixture is smooth.

In a small bowl, beat egg yolks until light and lemon colored; blend into cheese mixture. Add salt to egg whites; beat until foamy. Add cream of tartar; beat until soft peaks form. Gradually beat in remaining sugar; beat until stiff but not dry. Fold into cheese mixture.

Turn into prepared pan and bake until cake is firm in the center, about 1 hour and 30 minutes. Turn of oven. Open door about six inches at the top, propping it open with a cake pan. Allow cake to remain in the oven until cool, about two hours.

Remove cake from oven and decorate with whipped cream, if desired. Makes one 9-inch cake.

Pony, dog inseparable

WICHITA, Kan. (AP)—Wherever Penny goes, Pooch follows. Penny is a female Shetland pony. Pooch is a Dalmatian dog.

Their home is a pasture on a 42-acre farm near here, owned by Marty Van Winkle and her husband, "Rip."

According to Mrs. Van Winkle, it all started when she and her family lived in Tonganoxie, Kan., a couple of years ago. A neighbor's dog, Pooch, began following Penny, a long-time family pet, everywhere.

When the family was preparing to move here, Mrs. Van Winkle was advised by a veterinarian that the dog possibly could grieve to death if permanently separated from the pony. So the dog's owner and Mrs. Van Winkle reached a decision: Pooch and Penny would be together.

Surgery brings new hope for epileptics

BY LEW SCARR
Copley News Service

SAN DIEGO, Calif. — They come from all over to knock on Pat LaSalle's door and ask her if she is the lady who has the epilepsy because she has had it so bad she is kind of famous.

But now when they knock on her door for advice and ask if she is the lady with the epilepsy, Pat LaSalle smiles and says, "I used to be."

"I remember the very first time," she said, looking back to before the recent operation that apparently has ended her disease.

"I was 16 and I was at a football rally and I woke up on the gym floor. Everyone had gone except there were a few teachers standing around me. The nurse from school was there and there was an ambulance at the back door."

"And I remember them asking, 'What kind of illness do you have? What kind of illness do you have?'"

Pat LaSalle would be trying to answer that almost every day for the next 16 years.

She was immediately ostracized when her epilepsy was diagnosed. She was told she could no longer attend high school classes because her seizures would be disruptive.

Her best friends stopped seeing her. One mother said she thought Pat was a witch. Another said she must be mentally retarded.

"I wouldn't go anywhere. I couldn't look at people. I thought I was some kind of freak. I had to go through two years of therapy to accept my epilepsy."

It was a lot to accept. She was having as many as 12 to 15 grand mal seizures a day, requiring frequent hospitalization.

When she was 17, she got a job in Los Angeles. "I was getting off a bus one day there and I had a seizure. My head was split halfway open and there were a lot of people standing around me in the street. When I woke up and blood was dripping all over ... I thought, 'Won't someone please help me?' But no one would, they just kept staring."

"I didn't understand, but I learned more and more in my therapy. I learned that I was not a freak, that there was nothing wrong mentally and that I had to open up with people and not be afraid."

She opened up and she went to work and she married and had children, and everywhere she went she told people she had epilepsy and they could like it or lump it. She kept falling down, but she was not afraid.

The grand mal seizure, epilepsy's most severe attack, renders a person unconscious swiftly, often with a wild, harsh cry. Breathing stops, the legs and body stiffen and the patient falls down with elbows bent at rigid right angles.

This part of the attack lasts from 10 to 30 seconds. The face can turn blue and become twisted. The patient may seem about to die as the spasm finally breaks. Eighty percent of the four million epileptics in this country can be controlled to various degrees with medication. LaSalle is one of those whose seizures cannot be controlled no matter how she is drugged.

She has taken as many as 22 anti-seizure drugs a day with no effect.

"I remember waking up in the street once," LaSalle says. "I had been in the hospital after a seizure and I had a lot of needle marks in my arm from the IVs and the blood drawings."

"And I woke up in the street and there were cops around me and they said, 'What kind of drugs are you taking?' They were going to arrest me for being a heroin addict."

After Pat was married she was discouraged from having children, "but I was bound and determined."

"A week before I was due with my first baby, within 18 hours I had 22 seizures. They rushed me to the hospital and took the baby Caesarean because they didn't think he would make it."

"All I was doing was falling down steps." She had that baby and another and now Danny is 11 and Jeanette is 8, and both are normal and healthy.

Pat LaSalle has never lied to employers about her epilepsy. She has had good jobs, although holding them has been difficult when slowed down with a dozen seizures a day sometimes.

Pat has had grand mal seizures beyond count and she has had many, many of the lesser petit mal attacks in which loss of consciousness is fleeting. She also has had psychomotor attacks in which there is no loss of consciousness, but the person remembers nothing of her often confused and unusual behavior.

During a psychomotor episode the epileptic often will remove her clothing. Pat LaSalle once took off her slacks in a crowded restaurant during a psychomotor experience.

She folded them neatly and walked over and handed them to an astonished male diner. A waitress, herself an epileptic, understood what was going on and had someone help Pat on with her pants.

"You have to motivate your life around these things," Pat said. "I wasn't going to give up. I was going out in life and if these things happened, they happened and I wouldn't let them stop me."

But she has never driven a car. Ironically, she had just enrolled in a driver education course in high school when she had her first seizure.

"I would never get behind the wheel of a car. I have never been forewarned of my seizures and I have never been able to control them at all. I don't want to kill myself or anyone."

Most of the many physicians Pat has seen kept stringing her out on medication, hoping one drug would work. Finally, one admitted there was nothing more he or anyone else could do short of surgery. The procedure is a kind of last resort therapy for uncontrolled epileptics. Fifty-five percent of those who have the surgery are rendered seizure-free and 20 to 22 percent experience a reduction in seizures.

She had her surgery Sept. 25, and she has been seizure-free ever since.

Now, in a way, Pat LaSalle's life is beginning all over and she wonders about that. She has had epilepsy for 16 years and now, at 32, apparently free of it, she wonders if she can be a successful person.

She has severe headaches as a surgery aftermath, especially in the morning. Her vision is distorted and she must wear a patch over her right eye to avoid seeing things double. She still tires easily and her memory plays tricks on her.

Because of this, the success of the operation and its potential upon the life of Pat LaSalle were slow to sink in.

It happened suddenly one morning as she sat with her mother at the breakfast table reading the newspaper.

"I sat there staring at the date on the paper. I kept blinking at the date and I finally realized that it was Oct. 25.

"It had been exactly one month to the day that I had my surgery and I realized my epilepsy was finally over. I began to cry and I went to my mother's arms like a little girl, and I said, 'It is actually all over, mom, and I am going to be all right.'"

"I said, 'I have a whole new world ahead of me,' and I kept on crying and my mother said, 'I know, over and over.'"

Scouting family affair for Cincinnati Hidalgo's

CINCINNATI (AP)—Scouting is a family affair at the home of Albert and Matilde Hidalgo. When Mrs. Hidalgo was chosen recently as one of only 12 Scout leaders to represent America at the 1978 World of People International Conference in Mexico, it wasn't the first time that a Hidalgo had represented the Girl Scouts. Mrs. Hidalgo's 17-year-old daughter, Maria, went in the summer of 1977 as one of the American representatives to the international Girl Scout summer program in Sweden and Denmark for six weeks. This past summer, Ana, 16, represented the Girl Scouts at a conference in Hawaii.

"Some of the girls I know would say, 'Are you still a Girl Scout?' I'd come back with 'Yes, and look where it got me—halfway around the world already,'" Maria Hidalgo said.

Both Ana and Maria now act as leaders with younger Girl Scouts. Mrs. Hidalgo's mother, also named Matilde, is into Scouting, too, and has led a Brownie Troop for the past two years.

Mrs. Cleo Pierce of Gordon, Hands Up director for the Texas Federation of Women's Clubs, left, and Darrell Joy of San Marcos, director of the Texas Crime Prevention Institute, were guest speakers at a meeting of the Twentieth Century Study Club during Crime Prevention Week. They are with Ruth Story, chairman of the Midland Crime Prevention Commission. New members introduced were Mrs. Jim Pullig and Mrs. Jane Pope. (Staff Photo)

DEAR ABBY

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Mom and Dad were happily married for 38 years. Then Dad died. Before his death he and Mom bought two cemetery lots so they could be buried side by side. Mom even bought a headstone to match Dad's and had her name engraved on it.

Mom made her home with my husband and me for 22 years and never expressed any interest in men. Then at age 79 she met Jess, a man my age (53) who could sell ice to the Eskimos. She invited him to move in with her (in my house) and the whole town started talking.

I told them they'd either have to get married or move, so they got married. Meanwhile, Jess was spending Mom's money faster than she could draw it out of the bank.

Four months later Jess dropped dead while jogging. Mom went to pieces. She bought a double plot and buried Jess in one and had a matching headstone made for herself so she could be buried next to him when her time came.

Abby, she already had a plot and headstone for herself beside Dad. Who needs two plots?

When Mom dies should we bury her with her first love with whom she lived for 38 years? Or with that free-loader who married her for a meal ticket?

DEAR DAUGHTER: Your mother is still living, so you need not make that decision yet. When the time comes, everything will fall into its proper place. Including Mom.

DEAR ABBY: I've been married a short time to a man who was married before, and I regret the fact that he still has the gold wedding band from his first marriage. He insists that it means nothing to him, yet he refuses to get rid of it. He asks, "What do you expect me to do with it? Throw it away?"

Abby, I can't understand his reluctance to part with a reminder of a miserable relationship that ended in a painful and unfriendly divorce. He wears MY wedding ring now.

Am I being unfair to insist that he dispose of his first wedding ring? Just knowing that he has it bugs me no end.

FORT WORTH

DEAR FORT: If you're wise, you'll say no more about it. The ring is not important; your husband's private thoughts are. And he'll have them whether he has the ring or not.

Whether you want a formal church wedding or a simple do-your-own-thing ceremony, get Abby's new booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send $1 and a long, stamped (28 cents) self-addressed envelope to Abby: 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212

Health care cost to rise rapidly

Arthur D. Little, Inc. predicts the rapid rise in health care expenditures will persist through 1981 despite intensifying efforts to contain it. During those years, health care spending in the United States and Western Europe will continue to grow more rapidly than GNP. Sales of health care products in the United States and Western Europe will increase at an annual rate of 6 percent in constant 1976 dollars, from $36 billion in 1976 to $48 billion in 1981.

Opening lead may be time to begin

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Continuing our week-long series on ruffing losers in the dummy, we come to the defense against such maneuvers. In general, the best way to prevent a ruff in dummy is to remove dummy's trumps; and the time to begin is with the opening lead.

Opening lead — ♦ K

West shifted to a trump at the second trick, but it was too late. Dummy won and led a spade. West captured the king of spades with the ace and led a second trump.

Now South won, ruffed a spade with dummy's third trump, ruffed a diamond and ruffed a spade with dummy's fourth trump. South ruffed another diamond, drew the last trump, cashed the queen of spades and won a trick with the seven of spades. Dummy's ace of clubs then furnished declarer's 10th trick.

PROBABLE SHORTNESS

Since the bidding indicated that dummy had good heart support and probably short spades, West should lead a trump at the first trick. When he gets in with the ace of spades, he leads a second trump.

South can ruff a spade in dummy but now cannot get back to his hand. No matter what declarer does, West regains the lead and can return a third trump. Now West gets a second spade trick, thus defeating the contract.

DAILY QUESTION

Partner opens with one notrump (16 to 18 points), and the next player passes. You hold: S-KQ732; H-AQ985; D-7; C-62. What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid three spades. Partner will raise to four spades if he has three or more spades. If he bids three notrump, indicating that he has only two spades, you plan to bid four hearts.

Bill prohibiting disposal prefiled

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN (AP) — Legislation which would prohibit the disposal of any waste materials from atomic reactor cores or reactor cooling water was prefiled Wednesday by Rep. Bill Keese of Somerville.

Keese's bill is the first of several pieces of legislation expected to be filed this session to regulate nuclear waste disposal in Texas.

Reps. Bob Simpson of Amarillo and Roy Blsck of Nacogdoches earlier indicated they intend to file legislation prohibiting nuclear waste disposal within the state.

Keese's proposed legislation would mandate a $500,000 civil penalty for each act of disposal and would give the attorney general authority to seek an injunction to halt waste disposal operations.

The 66th Legislature will convene Jan. 9.

'A rose by any of Linda's names...'

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Linda Sano's hobby is names, which she figures is reason enough to get hers changed to Linda Elizabeth Zeamygk Xylona Opaline Zerdali Drusilla Holly Clare Sakura Kim Sano.

"What the heck, I might as well have an even dozen," said Ms. Sano after filing for the name change in Hennepin District Court.

Ms. Sano said she had considered taking one name for every letter of the alphabet, but figured that would be too hard to remember. Even 12 names aren't easy.

"I've been rehearsing," she said. "I wrote it up and taped it over the fireplace and I've been memorizing it for months and months."

By acting as her own lawyer, she hopes to hold the cost of the legal name change to $24. At $2 per name, that's a bargain.

Government now pulverizing record amounts of money

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government is burning up less of your money these days. Instead Federal Reserve banks are shredding and pulverizing worn-out currency into 1-000 tons a year of green fluff.

That's about one-third of the paper money destroyed annually, said O. H. Tomkinson, a Treasury official, who added that shredding eventually will probably replace burning entirely.

Most of the confetti, which the Treasury sells for $5 to $10 a ton, winds up as souvenir items, landfill, oil well drilling "mud," plastic plates, cardboard, roofing felt and home insulation.

Thus, the Gross National Product increases as air pollution goes down in Federal Reserve cities.

But Treasury frowns on one use of the fluff — advertising about 12 ounces of the shreds and particles packaged prettily in clear plastic as "up to a million dollars."

The correct former value is $165 an ounce, the department plainly sets forth in its "Memorandum Describing the Requirements Governing the Commercial Use of Currency Residue."

Tomkinson said higher claims are being trimmed or the novelties are being replaced in the market by other fluff-filled items such as paperweights and belt buckles.

The government won't let Federal Reserve banks sell the confetti loosely for such uses as throwing at wedding couples, spreading on icy sidewalks or stuffing into pillows to be dreamed on.

Preference is given to purchasers who can take a bank's entire output of the ground-up cash.

Tomkinson said folks who latch onto some of the residue and write in asking that it be redeemed as mutilated currency should save their postage. The Treasury has a form letter for denying such requests.

What next in the multiplying uses for the remnants of beat-up banknotes? Well, for one thing you've heard of money being called "sugar," but this is a little hard to believe.

Blood Pressure and Hearing Tests Set For Midland Area

Free screening tests for high blood pressure and hearing loss will be given at the Beltone Hearing Aid Service, 104 N. "O" St., Midland from 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Thursday to Friday, Dec. 7 and 8 and from 9:30 a.m. to 12:00 noon on Saturday, Dec. 9th.

High blood pressure, the leading cause of stroke, heart, and kidney failure, can usually be controlled through medical supervision. It has no symptoms, however, and because of this, periodic testing is advisable. The tests will be performed by a registered nurse.

Factory-trained Hearing Aid Specialists will perform the hearing tests using modern electronic equipment. Everyone should have a hearing test at least once a year if there is any trouble at all hearing clearly. Even people now wearing a hearing aid or those who have been told nothing could be done for them should have a test to keep track of how their hearing is changing and to find out if they are one of the many a hearing aid can help.

The free tests will be given at above mentioned time and place. To avoid waiting, call 682-2180 for an appointment.

Billy Joel works his own way up

By PETER J. BOYER

LOS ANGELES (AP) — There are a couple of ways to go about the business of being a rock star. The standard way, followed by most, is to make your way to California, wrecking a few hotels and picking up some "urgency" (for the critics) along the way.

Once here, you write a few hit songs about the pain and alienation of a rocker's life on the road, then retire to your canyon mansion and mellow like an overripe guava. You emerge occasionally for a TV special or a half-million-dollar afternoon gig at the ballpark.

Then there is Billy Joel's way. It starts the same, except, once in California, you find yourself not writing hit songs but playing the piano at the Executive Club Lounge, handling requests for "Volare," and, if it's a hip crowd, "Feelings." You don't make the cover of Rolling Stone.

You slowly grow weary of Hollywood and all those nifty rock billboards on Sunset Boulevard, and head back East, which you realize you never should have left in the first place.

Joel is one of pop's real renegades — an urban renegade, not one of those countless drugstore rebels with the silk cowboy shirts and Knotts Berry Farm belt buckles. Joel is one of pop's rare few to escape the glamour and hype indigenous to the industry and somehow manage to live real lives.

Joel is a resolute New Yorker succeeding in an industry whose Mecca is Los Angeles, an original in a business that rewards imitation.

Even after the enormous success of his "Just The Way You Are" — probably the best love ballad of the '70s — Joel let it be known that he wanted success on his own terms; he didn't want to become a "celebrity" and pose for pictures at Studio 54.

Joel, 29, bears a striking resemblance to Rocky Balboa, the pug movie hero created by Sylvester Stallone. There is a swaggering street-ride to Joel's manner and his craft, a pride that sounds inner alarms when the Hollywood hysteresis start bearing down.

"I have this big thing about dignity, y'know, about keeping your cool," he says. "The music business will have you doing these ridiculous things. They'll have you dress up like King Kong and go to a record store to sign autographs and be on the cover of People magazine.

"They want to make a 'personality' out of you. They want to make you bigger and more important than you really are. To me, the whole thing is the song, not the singer."

In Joel's case, it could be argued, the song is the singer. Like him, his tunes carry the concrete and lamp-post ambience of the streets of New York and its suburbs, where Joel grew up as a punk (the kind who hung out on street corners and punched folks) with a penchant for music.

His rock numbers, even his love ballads, are infused with a tough-guy sweetness, Vogue these days, which makes Joel a darling to the ladies and OK-to-like for his male audiences.

After knocking about from band to band around Long Island, Joel really did come to California and he really did wind up playing the Executive Cocktail Lounge under the name Bill Martin. He was here long enough to put together his band and gather material for a solid return-to-New York album, "Turnstiles."

That 1976 album, which included such hail-New York numbers as "Say Goodbye to Hollywood" and "New York State of Mind," was successful enough to support a year-long tour and keep Joel out of the piano bar lounges.

But it was last year's "The Stranger," which included "Just the Way You Are," that made everyone stop and listen to the song-tales this New Yorker was creating, the jewels Joel calls his chronicles "of normality and regular living."

"For example, Rod Stewart or Jackson Browne talk about the road and the rock 'n' roll glamour and glitter of it all," he says. "I kinda tend to get to the middle, what I call normality and regular living. What most people consider mundane or commonplace."

"The rock 'n' roll road to experience really doesn't have much to do with what most people experience in life. I'm fascinated by what most people just do every day and don't even see how profound it is."

William Stone, who plays the principal role of Adam, stands beneath a three and one-half ton mirrored cupola during a dress rehearsal of "Paradise Lost" at the Lyric Opera in Chicago. The world premier began this week. (AP Laserphoto)

Marie Osmond to make dramatic debut on ABC

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — After 12 years as a performer, Marie Osmond makes her dramatic debut at the age of 19.

Not only does she make her debut, but she falls in love and gets her first screen kiss in the ABC movie "The Gift of Love." The adaptation from O. Henry's "The Gift of the Magi," a costume piece set in the 1890s, airs Friday night.

"Now that I've done it I really find film fun," said Miss Osmond, who normally is half of television's brother-and-sister act, "Donny and Marie." In fact, that show also airs Friday night, making the evening something of an Osmond festival.

"I was offered quite a few things before this," she said. "But we were not sure they were good because of the content. There are certain parts I wouldn't feel right doing. You've got to deal with realism, but it can be overcome. You need to do something you'd feel comfortable watching."

Miss Osmond didn't answer questions specifically about what kinds of roles she would reject, but it was obvious she meant films that deal realistically with sex.

Asked if she felt her convictions would limit her screen career, she replied, "I don't think those kinds of roles are necessary. There are so many other good parts. I think you should put across a message. The message here is love and sacrifice at Christmas."

She does, however, get her first screen kiss from co-star Timothy Bottoms.

"People say, 'Marie Osmond kisses?' Sure, she does! I'm getting married and it's natural in a relationship," the actress said.

NBC will broadcast a musical version of "The Gift of the Magi" on Thursday, Dec. 21. The 2½-hour show stars Debby Boone, John Rubinstein and Peter Graves.

The ABC movie, like "Donny and Marie," is an Osmond family production. But instead of making it at the family's production center in Orem, Utah, it was filmed on the old "Gone With the Wind" set in Culver City, Calif., and on the outdoor "Hello, Dolly" set at 20th Century-Fox.

Actually, it's not her first movie. She and Donny were in "Goin' Coconuts," but that was only an extension of her variety show image.

"This was quite a change for me," she said, "portraying a person. Finding what makes a person fall in love with her. Does she have hair, is she nice? I had butterflies, of course. Everybody does. I'm sure everyone's critical of themselves."

She was interviewed while dubbing dialogue for the film. It was not available for preview.

ENTERTAINMENT

She said she flew to Los Angeles after taping "Donny and Marie," with only three days to prepare for the movie. "Actually," she said, "Donny and Marie" is good training for getting into a part quick. We have just two days to learn a 300-page script.

"It's comedy sketches, but you have to develop quite a few characters. You've got to figure out an accent, portray her as boisterous or quiet. You have only 15 minutes to do it and we get to rehearse only five times."

She said "The Gift of the Magi" was one of her favorite childhood stories, and when she heard the family was going to do it she asked for the role. She was full of bubbly, youthful enthusiasm as she talked about the "fun," the "challenge," and the "excitement" of a costumed production.

"The movie was written with me in mind, but I can't say this is me," she said. "But I guess we're similar. It was difficult for me to get away from myself."

No shortage of causes at convention

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — There's no shortage of causes at the Democratic Party's 1978 National Conference.

Latin Americans, blacks, the poor, homosexuals, women's rights advocates and anti-Equal Rights Amendment groups, among others, have come to Memphis to plead their cases during the party meeting.

Some groups, such as the Hispanic American Democrats, are well-represented among the conference's 1,633 delegates. Others, such as the Iranian Students Association, will be trying to attract the attention and support of the delegates through demonstrations outside the convention hall.

John Echeveste, a spokesman for the Los Angeles-based Hispanic group, estimated 120 delegates and alternates are of Hispanic descent.

Echeveste said the Hispanic American Democrats want the conference delegates to adopt a resolution calling on the federal government to make a more accurate count of the nation's Latin Americans in the 1980 census.

"We think that there was as much as a 20 percent undercount in 1970," he said.

Despite name, 'Zoot-Suit Murders' is real history

Reviewed by ROBERT KIRSCH
The Los Angeles Times

Out of the events of 1943, that troubled and turbulent years in Los Angeles history, Thomas Sanchez has woven a powerful and equally turbulent novel. The battles between the zoot-suit gangs and servicemen were precursors of racial strife in postwar America. Held when an ethnic consciousness was developing in the Chicano community, it was, in every sense, a turning point.

Sanchez, whose "Rabbit Boss" was one of the great fictional statements about the Indian in America, adopts a new and different style in "Zoot-Suit Murders." Despite its title, despite its accounts of death and violence, the work is history, not spired Sinarquistas in the barrio; eccentric and a pocalypitic cults such as the one called Mankind Inc. in this novel flourish in the feverish atmosphere; baseball is the Hollywood Stars against the San Francisco Seals.

We follow the divided paths of Oscar Fuss, the barrio social workers who is, not without ambivalence, a secret informer for state Sen. Kinney's committee; of Kathleen La Rue, the ailing but beautiful zealot who comes to the barrio to preach the doctrine of the "One True Voice" for Mankind Inc.; to speak of Hidden Rulers and the need for their extermination before "San Francisco will become the center of the universe's stabilizing vibrations." It is inevitable that Oscar and Kathleen will come together, fall in love, and just as inevitable that this odd intense relationship will end in tragedy.

We are present, witnesses to this feverish time, chew Juicy Fruit, have a soda at Ortega's White Owl Drugstore, read the letters from Fuss' brother in the Navy as a comic chorus, are trapped in the chaos of riots and fights between sailors and zoot-suiters ("They wore ... broad shouldered baggy coats of yellow and chartreuse draping below their knees, flared green and purple pants cuffed skin-tight above oversized waxed shoes"), witness the charges of sailors and shore patrol, the attempted hysterical kidnapping of Barbara Carr, the movie star, watch with terrified eyes as two FBI men are murdered. The novel has an alternation of intimacy and sweep, a cinematic quality similar to that of "China Town," an excellent, near-Hitchcockian technique of irony and setting.

mystery. There are echoes of Nathanael West and Raymond Chandler in the language and description, but the telling is pure Sanchez: The narrative carefully honed, research and sense of place and era meticulously captured; dialogue with an uncanny sense of eavesdropping, and an impressive capacity for drawing living people.

Though I have called in history, the work brings us into the past as present. Sanchez has foregone the perspective of the intervening 34 years. The war is still on; the Mexican minority, especially the youth, is not sharing the better defense jobs, suffers the active hostility of servicemen and returns it in kind, state Sen. Tenney's (in this account called Kinney) Committee on Un-American Activities is investigating the zoot-suit gangs and their Fascist-in-

At least 12 die in Newark fire

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Firemen found 11 charred bodies in the blackened rubble of a tenement and looked for a 3-year-old boy also believed to have perished in a blaze described as "a roaring inferno." Fire Director John Caufield said Thursday authorities had no hope of finding the child alive after what Fire Chief James O'Bierne said was the city's worst blaze in 25 years.

Feds will enter Wilmington trial

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department says a U.S. District Court judge has approved federal entry into the Wilmington 10 case on the side of the defense.

A department spokesman said Thursday that Judge Franklin T. Dupree Jr. also approved the federal lawyers' request that the defendants be given access to an amended statement by a chief prosecution witness who the lawyers contend may have lied.

The federal lawyers are fighting North Carolina convictions of nine black men and one white woman accused of taking part in the burning of a grocery in Wilmington, N.C. in February 1971.

The petition is believed by the department to be the first time the Justice Department has sought in a friend-of-the-court role to overturn a state conviction.

Dupree made his ruling in Raleigh, N.C.

In a Nov. 15 brief, federal lawyers contended there was doubt that Allen Hall told the truth when he testified the defendants took part in the grocery burning.

They say the prosecutor in the case withheld from the defendants an amended statement by Hall that cast doubt on his testimony. And the government argues that had the statement been used in cross-examination, the jury might have returned a different verdict.

The Rev. Ben Chavis is the only defendant still in prison. The others, free on parole, also would benefit from conviction reversals since they would no longer be bound by parole restrictions and would have criminal records erased.

Three fires in one year are enough

Plea bargaining may avoid Parr trial

By KEN HERMAN

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — The apparent cause of the fires was routine. But what followed was not: a 53-year-old delicatessen owner faces charges of careless smoking in three fires at his home.

"Enough is enough," fire investigator Jim Friday said Thursday, describing how Lew Lieske was arrested on a little-known misdemeanor charge involving persons who "directly or indirectly" start a fire with their cigarettes.

Friday said Lieske was charged after neighbors complained Lieske's smoking in bed caused three fires at his house in 13 months.

The 53-year-old Lieske, speaking with some difficulty over what he described as congested lungs from smoke inhalation, complained, "The charges are unfounded, as far as I'm concerned...I don't need all this publicity." He is free on $500 bail.

If the case goes to trial and Lieske is found guilty, he could get six months in jail and a $500 fine on each count.

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — Attorneys for both sides considered a plea bargain today that could avoid a trial and keep former Duval County Judge Archer Parr out of state prison.

While awaiting the results of the plea negotiations, Parr was enjoying his first full day as a free man in about 40 months after his release from federal prison two days ago.

If the plea-bargaining fails, the former Duval County official will go to trial Monday on state charges of using county equipment and employees on his private ranch. He was released from federal prison Wednesday after serving three years and four months of a 10-year term for lying to a grand jury.

Parr, 53, was taken into custody by state officials as he walked out of the federal prison in Texarkana, Texas, but then won his freedom by posting a $45,000 bond on the state charges Thursday.

Attorneys for both sides huddled with District Judge Darrell Hester for about 45 minutes after Thursday's pre-trial hearing. A courthouse source later told The Associated Press that a plea bargain being negotiated could lead to a guilty plea from Parr in exchange for a 10-year probated sentence.

The source reported the terms of the probation would bar Parr from living in Duval County — the South Texas county he ruled as judge for 16 years. The intent is to insure that Parr will not return to power, the source said.

A previous plea bargain, worked out when Parr was temporarily released from federal prison in 1977, was rejected by Hester. That deal would have allowed Parr to serve his state time while in the federal prison.

Hester set a trial date after defense lawyer Nelson Sharpe of Kingsville decided not to waive his client's right to a speedy trial.

Sharpe told reporters the recently enacted speedy trial law will be the basis of the defense. "The statute went into effect on July 1 and requires that felony cases be tried within 120 days. The time would start at least no later than July 1. There is some contention it started running the day of the indictments," Sharpe said.

Gerald Carruth, assistant state attorney general heading the prosecution, said Sharpe's claim was "arguable."

State attorneys announced Thursday they will first seek prosecution of charges alleging Parr used county equipment and employees on his private ranch. Carruth said maximum sentence could be up to 20 years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

Parr was freed Thursday after spending one night in the Cameron County Jail infirmary. He is suffering from tuberculosis. Hester had ordered the sheriff here to take custody of Parr because "the Duval County jail is not a safe place for custody."

Hester, assigned to the Parr cases when a Duval County state judge disqualified himself, said several motions will be heard prior to the trial. The state has filed a change of venue motion claiming Parr would unfairly benefit from a San Diego trial.

Archer Parr's uncle George Parr — the late "Duke of Duval" — built a political machine that maintained tight control of Duval County for 40 years. George Parr killed himself in 1975 as investigators were gathering evidence that prompted about 100 indictments in the county.

Hester has said the Archer Parr charges are the only cases remaining from the scandal.

Archer Parr, looking pale and thin after a federal prison term that apparently was hard on him, has no political ambition now, according to his lawyer.

"I don't think Mr. Parr has any intention of participating in politics," Sharpe said. "He no longer has a law license and he won't be a candidate for any public office."

"I don't think Mr. Parr has any intention of participating in politics," Sharpe said. "He no longer has a law license and he won't be a candidate for any public office."

Task force takes look at controls

WASHINGTON (AP) — An interagency task force is taking a close look at the inflationary impact of a possible administrative move to lift controls on gasoline prices, the White House said today.

Claudia Townsend, associate press secretary, said the study has not been completed. She emphasized the task force has not made any recommendation to President Carter on whether to back decontrol of gasoline prices.

In announcing his original energy program in April 1977, Carter made decontrol of gasoline prices a prime objective, but Congress did not approve the plan. Carter told the economic summit meeting in Bonn, West Germany, in July that U.S. oil prices will rise to world levels by 1980.

Ms. Townsend indicated that the issue of the inflationary impact of decontrol was looming large in a larger study of how to move toward Carter's long-range goal of higher prices to discourage consumption and promote conservation of oil supplies.

The press spokeswoman gave no target date for completion of the study. She stressed that Carter has made no decision to move toward decontrol.

Jon Newton resigns post with commission

By JACK KEEVER Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas Railroad Commissioner Jon Newton resigned Thursday to avoid a possible conflict of interest resulting from natural gas production on South Texas land inherited by his wife.

The three-member agency regulates Texas' oil and gas industry, and Newton said he did not think the "people on the street" would have confidence in a commissioner who received oil and gas income.

Newton's resignation is effective Jan. 1, and Gov. Dolph Briscoe said he probably would appoint his successor the first of next week. Newton said he hoped Briscoe would ask his advice.

Briscoe said he would name someone who is "very capable, bright, experienced in state government and still young."

"Certainly one qualification," Briscoe said, "is that he (the appointee) can be elected two years from now" at the next general election.

Newton, 37, said he spent "close to $700,000" to get elected in 1976. It appeared he was prepared for a long career on the commission as he sold his Beeville law practice and a nursing home to get money for the race. He still has four years remaining in his term.

Newton told a Capitol news conference his wife's family has owned ranch land in South Texas for seven generations, and within the past year his wife's mother has deeded to her children portions of this land in Goia County. In recent weeks, he said, a number of natural gas wells have been completed, or will soon be completed, by companies that own drilling rights.

The royalty income "might be insignificant to some" but should exceed his commissioner's salary of $45,200 a year, he said.

"In my opinion," he said, not even setting up a blind trust to handle the income "can resolve the dilemma...The trust may be blind, but I can't say that I am blind."

Rate okay requested

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Attorney General John Hill asked the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission on Thursday to approve in advance the rates proposed by the Texas Deepwater Port Authority for an offshore port near Freeport.

The authority proposes to charge lower rates to oil companies which sign up to use the port than to companies which want to use the port without prior agreement. The port will be used to transfer oil from super-tankers to onshore pipelines.

The federal commission is charged with determining whether the rates are reasonable.

"We cannot move on our main license application, pending before the Department of Transportation, until the energy regulatory commission approves our fee schedule," Hill said in a statement.

The main application seeks to obtain the license offered earlier to Seadock.

Governor seeks price resistance

(NEW YORK) — New York Governor Hugh Carey says the nation should be ready to face an oil emergency in order to resist a call for price increases by the Oil Producing and Exporting Countries.

He says a price increase in imported oil would be "intolerable" because it would cause continued inflation.

The governor said today that Washington should not even consider a "moderate" increase because it would further erode the dollar.

He said the new federal Department of Energy should consider "rationing and emergency measures" if the oil-producing nations try to force an increase.

Carey's remarks were made as the Coalition of Northeastern Governors urged Carter to resist any price increase by OPEC.

The coalition objected that a suggested 10 percent increase would cost the seven-state region an additional one-point-one (b) billion dollars annually and "have a nationwide inflationary effect."

The governors adopted a resolution, offered by Governor Carey, which said that "even a moderate price rise would have disastrous effects on the Northeastern region."

The Northeast relies on foreign sources for more than 40 percent of its fuel supply.

Carey told the other governors, meeting at the World Trade Center, that the price of gasoline was rising "unacceptably," warning that a gallon soon would cost a dollar.

The governors delayed action on sending a letter to Carter urging that energy czar James Schlesinger investigate the alleged impending shortage of gasoline until all the governors had a chance to review the situation in detail.

Carey maintained that gasoline refineries had adequate supplies of gasoline to meet the demand.

The governors also asked for "immediate relief" concerning the problem of illegal aliens and for welfare reform.

Presiding at the meeting was Governor Brendan Byrne of New Jersey. Others attending were Governors Richard Snelling of Vermont, Michael Dukakis of Massachusetts, Joseph Garrihy of Rhode Island, Ella Grasso of Connecticut, and Milton Shapp of Pennsylvania.

Byrne said the governors were "sending a message to Washington...that we want to be equitably treated" in adoption of the national budget.

FTC issues MPG order

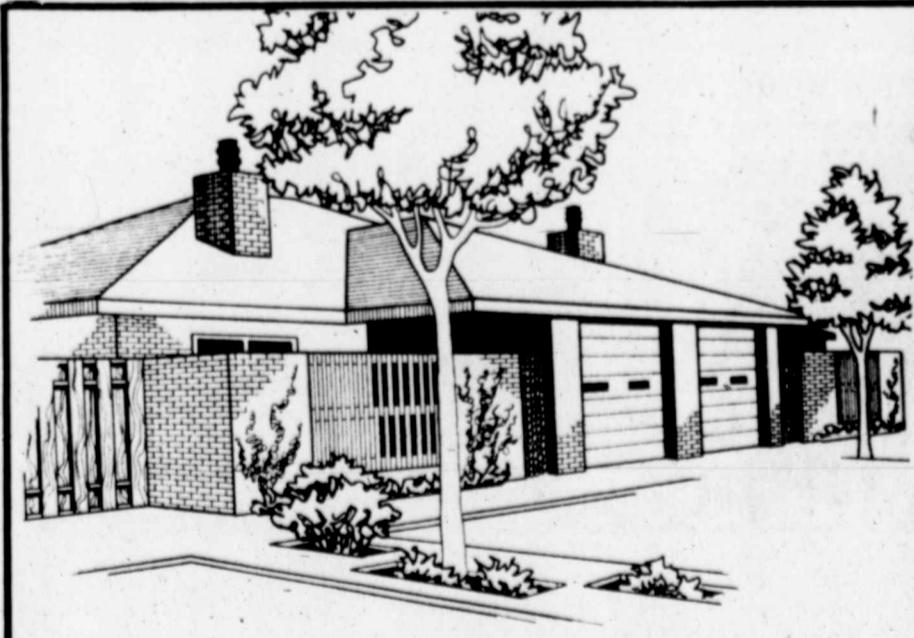

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a victory for consumer groups, the Federal Trade Commission is ordering automobile companies to make their miles-per-gallon advertising claims conform with new, generally lower mileage figures.

The commission's action, announced Friday, follows a recent change in the way the Environmental Protection Agency computes the gasoline mileage of various model cars. That computing change was designed to give motorists a more realistic idea of a car's mileage.

Many car buyers had complained that they were not getting the "city" and "highway" mileage which the EPA computed under its old system and which automobile companies still advertise.

Gas supply adequate

WASHINGTON (AP) — There appears to be adequate supplies of gasoline for this winter despite temporary shortages announced by some major oil companies, an Energy Department official says.

Alan T. Lockard, chief of general fuels regulation, said in an interview Monday that Shell Oil Co.'s announced gasoline shortages should end by the beginning of next year.

1979 fund announced

Tipperary Corp. announced it intends to file with the Securities and Exchange Commission this month a $7,500,000 registered oil and gas public drilling fund for 1979. In making the announcement, Deane H. Stoltz, president, advised the public drilling program would greatly enhance Tipperary's oil and gas exploration efforts in 1979 and beyond.

At the same time, it was announced that Donald B. Clutterback, with 12 years of successful public drilling program experience will manage Tipperary's new program.

Judge studies carols

SIoux FALLS, S.D. (AP) — A judge is studying Christmas carol lyrics not for their rhyme but for their constitutionality in a case that challenges the singing of "Silent Night" in public schools.

The American Civil Liberties Union urged U.S. District Judge Andrew Bogue Thursday to bar carols with religious lyrics from Christmas programs in the Sioux Falls school district because they violate the constitutionally mandated separation of church and state.

ACLU attorney Stephen Pevar, representing six Sioux Falls residents, said he did not object to the study of religious carols in music class, but rejects their use in school assemblies.

"He agreed that only 30 percent of the music planned for more than 20 separate school assemblies has religious content. 'But if even one (religious) song was sung it would be unconstitutional,' he said. 'If the judge finds that singing these songs is a religious exercise, then we win, because religious exercises are prohibited in schools.'"

School superintendent Dr. John Harris said rules do not bar use of religious music, but call only for balanced programming.

"We think the singing of Christmas carols is a legitimate part of the school music program... We're not trying to deny that there is a religious basis to Christmas," he said.

Donald Peterson, school district music director told the court, "As a choir director, 'Silent Night' very often has not been a religious experience for me."

A local broadcaster, Ray Loftness, said, "Children can sing religious music without being made to feel it's an act of worship. It's been my experience that people don't retain the words of these songs."

Several Sioux Falls clergymen, however, agreed with the ACLU, claiming carols such as "Silent Night" are religious.

"To me it is a glorious message about the Lord," said pastor Gary Oliver of the Seventh Day Adventist Church.

A decision on the preliminary injunction is expected soon, given the nearing of Christmas and scheduling of holiday assemblies.

Krueger concedes

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. Rep. Bob Krueger has formally conceded defeat in his election bid for the U.S. Senate against Republican John Tower.

Krueger's concession came in a three-paragraph statement released by his congressional office. It followed publication in Austin of the official results from the Nov. 7 election.

The official canvass said Tower won by 12,227 votes in 2.3 million cast.

"I congratulate him on his victory, now made official," said the statement. "I wish him well in his service to our state and nation."

Physicist in Israel

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Russian physicist Benjamin Levich arrived in Israel today after winning a nearly seven-year battle with Soviet authorities to leave his homeland.

Levich, 61, the highest ranking Jewish scientist ever to seek a Soviet exit visa, arrived with his wife Tanya and 140 other Russian emigrants on a flight from Vienna.

He told reporters he will continue to campaign on behalf of other Soviet Jews seeking emigration.

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — It is conceivable that baseball might some day have to delay a realignment of its leagues or acceptance of a new franchise while the lady gets her hair fixed.

This is strictly hypothetical, of course, but it isn't hypothesis — cold fact — that the grand old game now has a lady sitting in its higher councils, and she doesn't deny natural feminine instincts.

"Certainly, I have to have my hair done once a week. Don't all women? But that's not going to keep me from any meetings," said Lorinda de Roulet, the new president of the New York Mets.

SUCCESSOR to M. Donald Grant, Mrs. de Roulet attended the annual baseball meetings here this week, the first woman to occupy a director's role in the traditionalist, male-oriented national pastime.

She poured over papers in her hotel suite, kept in constant telephone contact with her general manager, Joe McDonald, and field leader, Joe Torre, and whisked in and out of important meetings without mussing a single strand of her auburn hair.

She boned up on issues. She came prepared. When Lorinda talked, as the stock broker commercial says, people listened.

"Really, I am a neophyte in this business," the attractive middle-aged widow protested modestly. "But this is my third annual meeting and I am more comfortable with what is going on. I don't feel lost."

The Mets, the National League franchise that has gone from rags to riches and back to rags again in its 16 years of existence, always has had a woman's touch but not until now has it had a lady calling the shots.

THE ORIGINAL owner was the late Joan Payson, one of the socialite Whitney clan and an ardent follower of the New York Giants, drawn into the game by financier M. Donald Grant, who served as president and chairman of the board.

Last month it was announced that Grant, 74, was being retired and succeeded by Joan's daughter, Lorinda, who planned to take a more active role in the conduct of the team's affairs.

Mrs. de Roulet's two daughters — Whitney, 26, and Bebe, 25 — are learning the ropes from the ground up, now serving in the publicity and promotions departments. Son, Daniel, 24, is in marketing and shows little interest in the family enterprise.

Lorinda's early life did not point to a baseball executive career. She went to the best finishing schools, married, traveled extensively. She remembers the avid baseball interest of her grandmother and mother.

"I went to some games as a child," she said, "but it was not until recent years, because of circumstances, that I became involved."

"Now the more games I go to, the more interested I become. I find baseball a fascinating game."

LIKE HER mother and her tutor, Grant, Mrs. de Roulet leans toward a conservative stance while recognizing that free agency bidding is here to stay.

"Salaries are going out of sight," she said. "There are so many deferred payment contracts that clubs are finding themselves paying not only for the guys who are playing but also the guys who are not playing."

"Where in the world is the money going to come from?" She describes herself as "positive" and "forward-looking" rather than "aggressive" and promises Mets fans early rescue from last place.

"We have a fine, young team, an excellent farm system," she insists. "We are certain we can be competitive without going bankrupt in these wild bidding wars."

Telegrams burn Majors

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The University of Tennessee's football coach says someone is trying to sabotage his recruiting efforts.

Coach Johnny Majors commented Thursday after The Associated Press reported someone is sending bogus telegrams to reporters around the country saying that the National Collegiate Athletic Association is investigating Tennessee's football program.

"It is quite evident that this is designed to hurt our recruiting," Majors said in a statement released by the university. "There's no truth to it at all."

A Western Union official in Bridgeport, Mo., a St. Louis suburb, said Thursday someone contacted the company Wednesday and instructed the firm to telephone the message to Associated Press bureaus in Cincinnati, Ohio; Lexington, Ky.; Richmond, Va., and Jacksonville, Fla.

"They're all routed to the telephone numbers," O. Alexander, Western Union customer relations supervisor, said in a telephone interview. "He didn't give any addresses."

Alexander said the caller identified himself as Haywood Harris from the University of Tennessee and billed the messages to a Knoxville phone number. If the University of Tennessee denies ordering the messages, Western Union would have to absorb the losses, Alexander said.

He said Western Union usually takes a caller at his word when he identifies himself and supplies a telephone number for billing. "If they send us a spurious message, they're subject to prosecution, not us," Alexander said.

The man who supposedly authorized the messages said Thursday he was unfamiliar with them or their content.

"We haven't been informed of anything like this. I think it's some sort of a trick, or a joke," Harris, UT sports information director, said in a telephone interview from the university's Knoxville campus. "This one is pretty easy to prove false."

Southeastern Conference colleges are permitted Saturday to begin signing high school football players to letters of intent to attend the colleges. Tennessee is among the SEC's 10 members.

A reporter in Lexington said the message he received ostensibly quoted UT President Edward J. Boling as announcing an NCAA investigation of alleged university recruiting violations and saying he is confident the football coaching staff would be exonerated. The Western Union operator told the reporter that Harris signed the message.

At NCAA headquarters in Kansas City, Mo., the association's enforcement director, David Berst, said, "I get inquiries concerning schools every day. I'm not in a position to comment on your inquiry either way, confirm or deny. Even if we weren't investigating somebody, I couldn't tell you we weren't."

And the university's athletic director, Bob Woodruff, said he had not been contacted by the NCAA concerning any type of investigation.

"Neither me nor Dr. Boling has been contacted by anyone except The Associated Press."

Ranger cagers remain unbeaten

GREENWOOD — The Greenwood boys basketball stayed unbeaten and ran their season record to 9-0 here Thursday night by getting off to a fast start in the first round of the Greenwood Invitational tournament.

The boys blasted O'Donnell, 93-28, while the Greenwood varsity girls were advancing in their division of the tournament by demolishing the O'Donnell girls, 75-42.

In other first round boys games, Borden County nipped Sundown, 51-50; Forsan trimmed Rankin, 69-32 and Klondike dumped Ira, 57-40.

In first round girls games, Borden County defeated the Greenwood junior varsity, 61-17; Ira bested Sundown, 47-36, and Klondike slipped past Forsan, 39-38.

In other area basketball action last night, the Reagan County boys' and girls' teams had successful debuts in the first round of the 40th Annual Ozona Invitational Tournament. The Owl boys blasted Coahoma, 48-41, while the girls blitzed the Ozona JV, 50-30.

In the first round of the McCamey Invitational Girls Tournament, host McCamey got off on the right foot by edging Andrews, 48-41; Ira nipped Rankin, 31-29; Crane defeated Seminole, 50-30, and Eldorado dumped Fort Stockton, 33-27.

In first round action of the junior varsity bracket in the McCamey tournament, McCamey blasted Andrews, 48-20; Eldorado came out on top of Fort Stockton, 46-40; Seminole downed Crane, 32-26, and Iraan defeated Rankin to the tune of 26-6.

Rex Evans led Greenwood's charge in the first round of their tourney as he scored 21 points to lead the Ranger scoring parade against O'Donnell. Five other Greenwood players were in double figures. Joe Mobley was right behind Evans with 18, followed by Rayne Williams, Tommy Pyle and Mark Swafford, all with 12 points.

Ronnie Taylor was the sixth Greenwood player in double figures with 10 points.

Jenni Anderson led the Greenwood girls to their ninth win of the season against only a pair of losses by scoring 21 points against O'Donnell. She received scoring support from Nancy Ortiz and Lisa Mobley, each with nine points.

Today's semifinal round of the Greenwood tourney will see Greenwood taking on Klondike and Borden County squaring off against Forsan in the boys' bracket. In the boys' loser's bracket, Sundown will meet Rankin and Ira will face O'Donnell.

The Greenwood girls meet Klondike in the semis today while Borden County and Ira lock up in the other semifinal match. Losers' bracket action sees the Greenwood JV paired with Sundown and Forsan matched against O'Donnell.

Lightweights nip helpless SWC

By The Associated Press

Southwest Conference basketball teams fell to opponents in three out of four games Thursday night — but lost by a combined total of only four points.

A 63-62 victory by Southwest Texas over Rice was still being argued in the locker room afterward because of a basket by the Owls at the final buzzer that was not allowed when officials said it was a fraction of a second too late.

In other games, Wayland Baptist of Plainview, Texas, nudged Texas Christian, 70-68, and St. John's of New York clipped Baylor, 83-82. The SWC's only victory was Texas Tech's 79-67 win over Colorado State.

With two seconds left Southwest Texas had the ball and a one-point lead in its game against Rice in Houston. They threw it in bounds and a Rice player tipped the ball to Elbet Darden, who spun and threw up a 25-footer that banked in for an apparent two points.

But the officials ruled the ball did not leave his hand before the buzzer sounded and gave the win to Southwest Texas.

"The officials called it and that's it," said a disappointed Coach Mike Schuler of Rice.

Darden said, "After it left my hands, I saw the red light come on (signaling the end of the game). I thought the shot was good."

Texas Tech remains unbeaten at 4-0 after its win in Lubbock.

"We had a real good first 10 minutes against their zone," said Tech Coach Gerald Myers, whose Red Raiders took advantage of 17 Colorado State turnovers. Tech trailed 4-2 early in the game, but then took the lead for good.

The Baylor-St. John's game in New York was not as close as the score indicated until the very end. St.

John's never trailed and enjoyed a 10-point halftime advantage, and held a 76-63 lead with less than five minutes to play. From then it was a matter of holding off a frantic Baylor rally.

TCU Coach Tim Somerville said his club lost their game in Fort Worth because of fouls and failing to capitalize on a big lead in the second half.

"We lacked concentration and intensity at the beginning of the game. We got an eight-point lead in the second half and had a chance to blow it up, but we missed some shots and committed some dumb fouls," he said.

TCU committed 19 fouls that cost them 12 points, while Wayland Baptist players were called for 14 fouls, giving up eight points at the free throw line.

Chaparrals clip Amarillo College

AMARILLO—After a harrowing road trip on ice roads into the wilds of the Panhandle, the Midland College Chaparrals were rewarded with their third Western Junior College Conference victory here Thursday night, an 83-76 win over Amarillo College.

Five Chaps scored in double figures with Robert Tate, 17, and 6-7 Luis Alvarado, 16, leading the way as Midland seized a 42-37 halftime lead. Amarillo charged back to take a one point lead early in the last half and led again on four different occasions, but Midland then began to pull away for good.

Six-nine Victor Mitchell did considerable damage inside with 22 points, but the AC converted only eight of 20 free throw attempts while MC was making 11 of 18.

Rebs lose meet opener

AUSTIN — So far, it's been a long, tiring trip with very little reward. The Lee Rebels traveled down to Austin Thursday for their first round contest in the Austin Invitational Tournament, but Austin Crockett didn't exactly give the out-of-towners a warm welcome as they defeated Lee, 79-66, to send the Rebs in the consolation round of the tournament today.

After a tight first quarter which ended with Lee trailing only 20-19, the Cougars pulled to a six-point halftime lead and just continued to build on that throughout the second half.

Tyler Alcorn topped Lee scorers

The win leaves MC with a 10-3 overall record and atop the WJCC heap with a 3-0 conference record. Amarillo, the team picked to challenge favorite Western Texas College, is 1-2.

Cullen Mayfield scored 13 points while Chuckie McGill had 10 and Tim Shelby 11. Leading scorer Tate did most of his scoring from the base line and from the 15 foot range.

The Chaps return to the Chaparral Center Monday night for a game with the Howard College Hawks at 8 p.m.

Falcons face Redskins with playoffs in mind

By The Associated Press

To Coach Leeman Bennett, the problem confronting his Atlanta Falcons isn't so confusing. "We know what we have to do," he says. "Now it's a matter of doing it. That's the hard part."

Beating the Washington Redskins on Sunday is what the Falcons have to do if they are to keep alive their hopes of winning a spot in the National Football League playoffs.

The same, it might be noted, can be said of the Redskins as they look at the Falcons.

Each team is 8-6 and, along with Philadelphia, each is on the verge of elimination from contention for a National Conference wild card.

Those three teams and nine others are vying for the remaining seven berths. Some of them could be locked up this Sunday when the schedule has Buffalo at New England, Kansas City at Denver, Oakland at Miami, Dallas at Philadelphia, the New York Jets at Cleveland, St. Louis at the New York Giants, Green Bay at Chicago, Seattle at San Francisco, Houston at New Orleans and Tampa Bay at San Francisco.

Monday night's game is Cincinnati at Los Angeles. On Saturday it's Baltimore at Pittsburgh and Minnesota at Detroit.

"The Redskins are a veteran team," Bennett says, "and we are primarily a young team. Obviously the experience factor goes to Washington. But our football team has shown the ability to come back from adversity throughout the year."

"We must do a complete turnaround from our performance against Cincinnati (a 37-7 loss). That is done and over with. I think we can put aside last week's game and come back this week and play well."

The Falcons already have shown that capability. In the fourth game of the season they were clobbered 31-7 by Pittsburgh. They were 1-3 at that point. The next week they shut out Detroit 14-0 and embarked on a six-game winning streak. "This game is a game we've got to win," Bennett said. "It is by far the biggest game we've got this year. It's a do-or-die game for both teams... It's going to be a very emotional game, but we can't afford to let the emotion get in the way of our execution. Washington is the kind of team which capitalizes on errors and we can't afford to be careless."

With two games remaining, New England (10-4) and first in the American Conference East) and Denver (9-5) and atop the AFC West) are one victory away from clinching division titles.

Pittsburgh (12-2) has already locked up the AFC Central crown. The Steelers will make their first playoff appearance at home during the Dec. 30-31 divisional playoffs and, with one more victory, can guarantee themselves the home-field advantage in the Jan. 7 AFC championships if they get that far.

In the NFC, Dallas in the East and Los Angeles in the West have clinched their divisions. Minnesota and Green Bay are tied atop the NFC Central at 8-5-1. If each team wins its remaining two games, the Vikings will win the title and the Packers will get a wild card.

With victories over New Orleans and San Diego, Houston will make the playoffs for the first time in nine years and will be the host for the AFC wild-card playoff game Dec. 24. Oakland, Seattle, Miami and the Jets are also in the running for an AFC wild card.

Broncos, Pats need victories

By HAL BOCK AP Sports Writer

Denver and New England are in unique positions this week in the National Football League.

Both teams can clinch division titles against a couple of have-not clubs. But if they stumble, the Broncos and Patriots could be in trouble because there are a couple of have-waiting in the wings next week.

Denver can wrap up a second straight American Football Conference West crown by beating Kansas City Sunday and New England can put a lock on its first division crown in 15 years by clinching the AFC East with a victory over Buffalo.

If they don't clinch, the Broncos have Pittsburgh next week and the Patriots will face Miami. So both teams will be out to get the job done this Sunday.

Last week's 11-3 pushed the season's record to 116-78 for a .598 percentage.

The picks:

Patriots 23, Bills 10
New England can smell that title. Watch Steve Grogan perform surgery on Buffalo's secondary.

Broncos 24, Chiefs 7
It has been a tough year for Craig Morton & Co., but the clincher should be easy.

Steelers 27, Colts 14
With the AFC Central title safely tucked away, Pittsburgh is tuning up for the playoffs.

Vikings 31, Lions 14
If Minnesota can score all those points on snow, imagine how well they'll do in the controlled climate of the Silverdome.

Cowboys 19, Eagles 17
Philadelphia is tough at home. But Dallas is tough everywhere.

Packers 30, Bears 17
Green Bay needs this one to stay on the inside track for a playoff berth. Chicago won't interfere.

Oilers 20, Saints 14
Here's a chance for Houston to prove it can win even without Earl Campbell. New Orleans is no push-over, though.

Jets 31, Browns 20
Wide receiver Wesley Walker gives New York the edge with one of the best long-ball threats in the league.

Dolphins 21, Raiders 10
Whatever happened to the Oakland powerhouse? If the Raiders can't win at home, how will they win on the road?

Giants 17, Cardinals 13
The NFC East basement battle. New York has scored 17 points in six of its last eight games. This time it'll be enough to win, for a change.

Chargers 23, Seahawks 20
San Diego looks awesome one week and awful the next. Maybe this is an awesome week.

49ers 16, Bucs 10
Tampa Bay is all beat up. We'll stay with the home team and the healthier one.

Falcons 24, Redskins 13
Throw out the Atlanta debacle against Cincinnati last week and you're dealing with a pretty tough defense. Right now, the Redskins can't even deal with a pretty easy one.

Rams 20, Bengals 10
Los Angeles can't let up, even with the NFC West clinched. That history of playoff failures won't allow it.

Eagles' Papale ready for Pokes

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — There is something about the Dallas Cowboys that brings out the worst in the Philadelphia Eagles.

When the Eagles meet the Cowboys Sunday, they will be trying to beat the Super Bowl champions for the first time since 1974.

But there's bad blood between the two teams. The Cowboys have finished at the top of the Eastern Division of the National Football Conference for years, while the Eagles were struggling to get out of the cellar.

"There's a certain confident arrogance about the Cowboys," said Eagles special teamer Vince Papale. "There's also a couple of guys, and I won't mention names, who you just want to take a shot at. They're cheap-shot artists."

Papale thinks the rivalry began in the mid-60s and the Philadelphia fans have something to do with it. "The rivalry exists now because it's a rivalry the fans have stirred up. Dallas, among the Philadelphia people, is not one of their favorite teams. There were years when the Cowboys would roll up scores like 55 points on Philadelphia and people haven't forgotten that."

Some Eagles, such as quarterback Ron Jaworski, think the rivalry is bitter because the Cowboys are the champions.

"They're carrying around that big No. 1 sign on their backs," said Jaworski. "Everyone wants that challenge."

The rivalry began long before Coach Dick Vermeil came to the Eagles, and Vermeil has been trying to downplay the matchup.

"Whenever we play Washington, or St. Louis or the Giants, people say the same thing. It's the fact that it's a divisional game and we play them twice a year. Plus, if they're No. 1 it creates more enthusiasm in the city and more on the squad. It motivates the team to play a little better."

Motivation should be no problem for Philadelphia this week. For the first time in a decade, the Eagles are still alive for a playoff berth. In the past, the Eagles could only play the role of spoiler in December games, but this year they're still in the running for a wild-card playoff spot.

The Eagles come into the game at 8-6. To get into post-season play they probably will need to win their remaining games against the Cowboys and the New York Giants. The Cowboys, 10-4, clinched first place in the division with last week's win over New England.

According to Papale, the game will match in intensity the Eagles' first game against the Cowboys.

"I guarantee you, you'll see a hard-hitting game Sunday. I don't think anybody here will have trouble getting ready for this game. I could play the game today and I'm still not recovered from last Sunday," Papale said.

Dancing Bear brings Redskins a final hope

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Dancing Bear has come out of hibernation.

That can mean only one thing — the Washington Redskins are battling for a National Football League playoff berth.

Ron McDole, who gained his nickname because of his prowess in tripping the light fantastic as well as chasing down quarterbacks, should be back at his defensive end position again on Sunday when the Redskins travel to Atlanta to play the Falcons.

McDole, an 18-year veteran, had started 148 consecutive games for the Redskins until he was benched six weeks ago. He got back into the starting lineup last Sunday.

"It was frustrating standing on the sidelines," said McDole. "Playing is fun. I've always played, so I've never been much of a cheerleader-type of guy. "You just feel useless not playing. I would have played the wedge if they had asked me. I hadn't been out of a game in something like 15 years. All I could do on the bench is hope that we won and things went good, and then just sit and wait."

Last Sunday, McDole split time at defensive end and defensive tackle, playing end in rushing situations and tackle against the pass.

McDole lost between 25 and 40 pounds when he wasn't playing.

"I always keep my weight up when I play," he said. "I weighed in before the season at 265, but there were Mondays when I was probably 280. When they benched me I figured I'd just let my weight go down. I'm about 240 now and I've been down to 225 in the off season."

Bugel searches for hot button

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Oiler offensive line coach Joe Bugel says the secret to forming a successful line is finding each player's "hot button" and pushing it regularly.

"I try to take each guy individually and find out what his hot button is and reach him through it," said Bugel. "You have to start early, before training camp and find out everything that turns them on."

The five buttons Bugel plans to push Sunday when the Oilers play the New Orleans Saints in the Superdome belong to center Carl Mauk, guards Ed Fisher and Conway Hayman and tackles Greg Sampson and Mo Towns.

Second year guard George Reihner normally would get his button pushed but he is sidelined with a knee injury.

"Sampson is the type of guy you don't have to brow beat," Bugel said. "You can point out a lot of things to him and he can understand. Now Mo, you can beat him with a stick and he responds to that. Mauk is the same way. He likes to be kicked and hollered at."

Bugel's methods apparently are working. Rookie Earl Campbell has received enough help from the offensive line to lead the league in rushing and quarterback Dan Pastorini has been sacked only 13 times in 14 games, another barometer of a successful offensive line.

"We try to teach our guys to have a defensive temperament," Bugel said. "We try to knock people down. That's our philosophy and we've got this attitude right now."

Bugel said his offensive line is playing better "than they have ever played in their lives. Those kids we have on the line right now are the kind you can go to war with. They won't surrender."

Sampson gets special praise from Bugel. "I think he's the best tackle in the NFL," Bugel says. "I know he's the best in our division. When he first came here he had a reputation for not being tough. But he's learning that being tough can be fun."

Bugel is especially proud of Fisher, whom he at one time judged too small. But Fisher returned from an off-season weight program and weighs in on game day at 252.

"He was always a tough player but he was just too small," Bugel said. "But he came in here at 265 and as far as having somebody in the fox hole with you, that's the guy you want. You talk about a stick of dynamite. He's a brawler."

Bugel doesn't spend all his time studying his players' psyches. There's a time for fun too.

"We try to make things enjoyable," Bugel said. "During our film sessions if somebody makes a good hit or gets knocked down, we turn off the projector and stand up and give him an ovation."

Anthony Davis hopes to answer Rams' prayer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Anthony Davis last played in the Los Angeles Coliseum four years ago finishing his college career for Southern Cal with a four-touchdown performance in the Trojans' 55-24 victory over Notre Dame.

A former Trojan tailback who has been unable to duplicate his collegiate football achievements in the professional ranks, Davis will be wearing a Rams' uniform Monday night when Los Angeles meets Cincinnati in the Coliseum.

The 26-year-old Davis was signed by the National Football League team Thursday, and will be available for duty against the Bengals, Rams Coach Ray Malavasi said.

Women find going tough

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — So you consider the life of a professional athlete as glamorous and exciting?

Consider the case of JoAnn Burrell, briefly a member of the professional Chicago Hustle team. She's back in Boise, a little disillusioned.

Burrell, a 6-foot star for Boise State for four seasons, was drafted by the Chicago team for women's professional basketball.

It sounded exciting. Furnished apartments would be provided. Transportation was available for women who did not bring their own cars. And there was a chance to compete with the best women basketball players in the country.

But when she got to Chicago, she found telephoned promises didn't come true. "The pay scale was completely different. When I got back there, they said we had to live in dorms for the first month. We had to play without any pay at all, that entire month of November," she said.

The club offered to pay living expenses, but wouldn't furnish transportation.

She said she got a feeling early that things wouldn't be as promised when she found the Hustle played at a gymnasium located in an orphanage.

The team held an open tryout. Burrell said some of the players that showed up wouldn't make good junior high basketball players.

After two practices, Burrell said she decided pro ball wasn't for her. Then she found she had been traded to Milwaukee.

She returned to Boise, where she has a part-time coaching job at Boise High School. She said she will work for a master's degree and hopes to coach.

She said she thinks women's pro basketball will make it. "But they are going to have a hard time with second-class players," she said.

There also have been promotional trips to New York, Los Angeles and San Francisco for which she gets paid $100 a day, she says. She hopes the publicity will help get her parts in theater and television commercials.

The "whole experience has been so neat," Shilling says. "The whole thing just happened. I didn't go looking for it."

"My real love is theater. I can cry in 15 seconds."

But the shapely, 21-year-old Lynita, who was paid $300 for the five hours it took to produce the bare-breasted

Chargerette to earn more

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Posing nude for a Playboy Magazine pictorial on National Football League cheerleaders has led to some "nice opportunities" for former San Diego Chargerette Lynita Shilling.

The photo session that included four other Chargerettes and cheerleaders from other NFL teams caused a sell-out of Playboy's December issue. However, it also resulted in the San Diego Chargers disbanding their cheerleading team.

photo of her that appears in the magazine, has been asked back to pose for the March issue, this time for $1,000, she says.

There also have been promotional trips to New York, Los Angeles and San Francisco for which she gets paid $100 a day, she says. She hopes the publicity will help get her parts in theater and television commercials.

The "whole experience has been so neat," Shilling says. "The whole thing just happened. I didn't go looking for it."

Sims formally presented with Heisman Trophy

NEW YORK (AP) — Billy Sims of Oklahoma, who was formally presented with the 44th annual Heisman Trophy Thursday night, also received one of six Downtown Athletic Club awards as the nation's outstanding running back.

The DAC inaugurated six outstanding player awards last year to honor players other than the Heisman winner.

UCLA's Jerry Robinson was honored as the outstanding linebacker for the second year in a row while guard Greg Roberts, Sims' Oklahoma teammate, was named the top offensive lineman.

The other DAC Awards went to Penn State tackle Bruce Clark as the outstanding defensive lineman, Michigan State wide receiver Kirk Gibson as the top offensive end and Johnnie Johnson of Texas as the leading defensive back.

All six players were honored at the annual Heisman Banquet.

The DAC outstanding player categories are listed on the official Heisman ballot. After naming three choices for the Heisman Trophy, each elector was asked to select one candidate for each outstanding player award on a one-vote, one-point system entirely independent of the Heisman balloting.

McLaren waves flag for Sneva

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — Team McLaren is waving the yellow flag in front of two-time reigning U.S. Auto Club driving champion Tom Sneva.

McLaren officials have asked Sneva to wait on them for another week while they try to line up a sponsor, Sneva said Thursday.

Sneva has said he'd prefer to join up with the McLaren driving team if it can be worked out.

Sneva has been shopping for a new affiliation since he was cut loose by Roger Penske following the 1978 campaign, in which Sneva repeated as driving king without winning a race.

Sneva has reportedly been contacted by several camps in addition to McLaren.

Detroit Pistons win worst battle

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — The Detroit Pistons and Cleveland Cavaliers are still the two worst teams in the Central Division of the National Basketball Association's Eastern Conference.

But the Pistons were a little worse Thursday night, blowing the Cavaliers out of the Pontiac Silverdome 121-105 in the only game played in the NBA.

The game wasn't as close as the score indicates. Detroit outscored Cleveland 18-3 in the first four minutes of the third quarter to take a 30-point lead and crushed the rest of the way.

Cleveland, a loser for the third straight time, dropped to a 7-18 record, worst in the NBA. Detroit takes a 10-16 mark into tonight's game at Indiana. The Cavaliers are idle.

Cleveland Coach Bill Fitch took the blame for Thursday's loss, calling it "the worst game I have ever coached."

"The game was so bad I'm not going to talk about guards, centers, forwards," Fitch said. "I just coached a bad game."

Western State heads for showdown

GUNNISON, Colo. (AP) — The Western State College football team, after a week of battling for practice time against a persistent winter storm, has headed to Texas to make final preparations for Saturday's NAIA playoff game against San Angelo State.

Both teams are unbeaten and will clash Saturday afternoon at San Angelo in the semifinals of National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics' Division I national championship.

Western State coach Bill Nixon said his squad managed a short workout Monday after the practice field was cleared off.

Mojo to survive Plainview Bulldogs

Time to brag a little about the picks in last week's Class AAAA state regional playoff football games.

This corner offered itself in hitting eight out of nine games. That's right folks. I can't believe it either, but it happened for an .889 percentage. The only miss was the Dallas Carter-Garland game in which the Owls were blanked by the Cowboys, 13-0.

And guess what, Temple did bite the dust as predicted and that came because the Wildcats were beaten by another tough bunch of Wildcats from Plano, 15-14 in a real stunner. Temple had played too many easy games and remember that Plano won the state title last year beating teams like Highland Park, Permian and Port Neches-Groves along with way. That experience does help, doesn't it.

So, going into the quarterfinals this weekend, the record reads 416 correct and 89 incorrect for a percentage of .864. Where did the ninth game come from last week? That was the Snyder-Lubbock Estacado game in which this corner picked Estacado to win and it did.

Now there are only four AAAA games to predict and a couple of Class AAA games, so here goes:

ODESSA PERMIAN faces a team that Midland fans and West Texans are familiar with in the big and burly Plainview Bulldogs. Permian gets the nod by the Harris Rating System by seven points. Mojo has been there before while Plainview has not. The Bulldogs have three great backs and will give the Panthers lots of trouble. Still got to go with District 5-4A football over that of District 4-4A, but not without a fight. Plainview does not have the speed that Arlington Heights had nor the defense that Lewisville had two weeks ago in bi-district. Permian has played the tougher schedule and has only given up 74 points in 12 games while Plainview has had 145 points scored on it with Lubbock Monterey and Clovis, N.M. scoring at least 26 points each. Vic Vines can and will throw on the Bulldog secondary. Mojo to post 21-13 victory in Jones Stadium in Lubbock Saturday.

PLANO TANGLES with Dallas Carter and reports have it that Carter has blazing speed. This one will be another dandy. Tackle Billy Ray Smith of Plano is a great one and quarterback Steve Ulmer a winner. Once again, it's hard to beat experience as the nation's outstanding running back.

The DAC inaugurated six outstanding player awards last year to honor players other than the Heisman winner.

Nervous Inglis makes NHL debut

By The Associated Press

No one could have blamed Bill Inglis for being nervous on the opening night of his National Hockey League coaching career. Buffalo's Memorial Auditorium was filled with 16,433 people, many of whom had booed the Sabres Sunday night.

Their booing, and Buffalo's fifth winless game in six outings, led to Punch Imlach's firing as Sabres general manager and Marcel Pronovost's dismissal as coach.

"Which brings us back to Inglis. "I tried to keep cool before the game," he said, "but there's no way to do that when you stand behind the bench for the first time."

It might be easier from now on, since the Sabres tied the Los Angeles Kings 3-3 Thursday night to leave Inglis undefeated.

"I told the players to go out there and have fun," said Inglis, listed as "interim coach" right now. "The way this team has fun is by scoring goals."

They took a 1-0 lead at 12:12 of the first period when Danny Gare scored on a power play, but fell behind when Butch Goring and Murray Wilson tallied for the Kings. Rene Robert tied it for the Sabres, only to have Goring restore the Los Angeles lead.

But Gare tied it for good with his second goal with 6:59 left in the second period.

"We wanted to go out and do a good job. We wanted to win for Bill Inglis and ourselves," said Gare.

"They didn't, but Inglis has plenty of hope."

"I'm proud of the fellows — every one of them," he said. "If they continue to play like that, they'll win a lot of hockey games."

"We worried about the Sabres being high for this game," said Los Angeles Coach Bob Berry. "But when you play a team with a new coach, if you can get past the first five or six minutes it's a big plus. They started fast, but once the pace of the game was set that sort of wore off."

Rangers 5, Flyers 2

The Rangers spotted the Flyers a 2-0 lead after one period, but roared back with five consecutive tallies to win at Philadelphia's Spectrum home for the first time since Feb. 6, 1975.

The triumph also snapped a 13-game New York winless streak against the Flyers, dating back to April 4, 1976.

Canucks 4, Black Hawks 2

Ron Sedlbauer snacked a tie with his third-period goal, carrying Vancouver to its third victory — with two ties — in five games against Chicago this season.

"Sedlbauer's one of those guys who floats around in some kind of trance for a couple of periods but has the talent and size to win a game for you in one period, and that's what he did," said Canucks Coach Harry Neale.

Islanders 7, Blues 1

Slumping right wing Bobby Nystrom started finding the range again for the Islanders, scoring his first two goals in 14 games and helping New York extend its unbeaten streak to 14 games.

Mike Bossy scored three goals and Bryan Trottier added two goals and three assists in the Islanders' rout of St. Louis.

Nystrom, after playing in 425 consecutive contests, was scratched from the New York lineup before a game in Los Angeles last week. He watched the play of Bossy, last year's Rookie of the Year and a right wing, and got some advice from the youngster.

"I told him not to get discouraged and to hang his head," said Bossy.

Bruins 6, Red Wings 5

Jean Ratelle scored twice to help Boston extend its unbeaten streak to 10 games. Bruins defenseman Brad Park aggravated his surgically repaired knee in warmups and missed the game, then Boston lost wing Bobby Schumatz to a broken nose in the first period.

Goalie Gerry Cheevers made 19 stops — one more than Detroit's Jim Rutherford, to give himself a 38th birthday gift.

PRINCEVILLE, Hawaii — The United States, which could badly use it, won an international victory of sorts over the weekend. We were supposed to win it. But we were supposed to win Little Big Horn, too.

The World Cup is to golf tournaments that kayak racing, pairs, is to an Olympics. Not your basic hold-the-presses event.

Still, we haven't won it since 1975. We used to win this thing easily and regularly in the days of Nicklaus and Palmer teams, and Hogan and Snead, and Nicklaus and Miller, but we've lost three in a row and four out of the last six.

There are certain events the United States is supposed to win — the 100-yard dash, wars, calf roping and apple pie. One out of five ain't bad.

Actually, the Americans play not against the field in a World Cup, but against the ghost of champions past. If they finish fourth or worse the grumbling in the states gets audible. "Never would have happened if Nicklaus were in it," they say grimly. "Ben Hogan never would have let this happen." And so on. Not to win is a disgrace. They are not permitted the luxury of defeat.

Eddie Einhorn assumes control

By HOWARD SMITH
AP Sports Writer

Eddie Einhorn, guns blazing, has assumed command of CBS' founding "Sports Spectacular." His mission: Get the thing moving again and try to catch ABC's "Wide World of Sports," solidly entrenched as top dog among the sports anthologies.

Einhorn, having battled the networks from the outside for years as an independent producer, is delighted to be on the inside. He will serve as the show's executive producer.

"They didn't want Alice in Wonderland for this job," says Einhorn. "They wanted someone who could get things done. Nobody is as qualified for this job as I am. I've been doing this kind of thing for 15 years. I love it. It's perfect for me at this stage of my career. I'm too young to retire and the independents are dying."

"I love taking things and making them work. It's a terrific challenge."

EINHORN made his fortune as founder, president and chief drummer for the independent TVS Network. He went around signing up college basketball conferences — all the major ones except the Atlantic Coast Conference — and independents to long-term deals, then marketed the games to individual stations. When NBC got interested in college basketball, Einhorn made a deal with the network to carry the games. Then he sold TVS to Dun and Bradstreet for a big bucks, stayed on as president and, in an unusual development, put together this season's Saturday package on NBC that will be in direct competition with his revamped "Sports Spectacular."

CBS, shaken by the "winner-take-all" tennis affair, has brought a host of new people into its sports operation and Einhorn is among them.

He has no illusions about the job ahead. "Wide World" rules the roost and has done so for years. NBC's "SportsWorld" has been making slow but steady progress. "Sports Spectacular" is going nowhere. The ratings are off significantly from last season and an alarming number of CBS affiliate stations are abandoning ship.

FIRST PRIZE is only $1,000. You can finish 20th at the American Optic tournament and get that. So the motivation has to be pride.

The first thing you have to do when you get on the practice range at a World Cup is close your eyes. Almost everyone out here has an eight-piece swing, copied from a book. Only a handful get the ball in the air at all. They look at the Americans' swings as though somebody had just opened the gates of heaven slightly ajar and let them look in.

Actually, a sensible format for the World Cup would be at full handicap. There are dozens of 18s out here — and a few natural 28s. To be competitive, they would need at least a shot a hole from the best players. You do not have to beat these guys. They will beat themselves. To be fair, they come from countries where there may be only one — or no — 18-hole courses. They have swings that were invented for wooden clubs. Since the same players often represent their countries for 20 years at a time, you know there is no pipeline of hotshot youngsters coming up like in America.

Still, there is the odd Oriental tale, the oddly mechanical but also effective little players who will putt and chip the eyes out of any course when they can get in birdie range, hanging around. Taiwan shocked the American team of Tom Weiskopf and Jim Jamieson at Australia in 1972 — beat them by seven shots, in fact.

No one is too shocked when South Africa wins it, either — playing with Gary Player that is. But they won it in 1974 with Bobby Cole and Dale Hayes — who beat Hale Irwin and Lee Trevino by nine shots.

THE SPANIARDS won it two years in a row. The United States was eighth to them, 10 shots in arrears at Manila in 1977.

John Mahaffey and Andy North realized they were hardly legends of golf when they took on the assignment this year. The new format calls for the U.S. Open winner and the USPGA winner to carry the flag.

Mahaffey and North would probably hardly speak to each other if they were coming down the fairway paired in the Kemper Open. But here they were in Indian country. There were players lying in the weeds — or at least the flowering hibiscus — all over the place, golfers for whom to beat the Americans would call for ticker-tape parades at home and instant celebrity all over.

EVEN THE marginal players tee it up here with the shaking knees and the blurred backswings of a rookie at his first Masters. Their task is hopeless. You might fall out of a hammock in Kenya one morning with the innate ability to run a mile in three minutes flat, but there's no such thing as a born golfer. It's like being a born diamond-cutter. Caruso got a great head start from God with that glorious voice. But there is no record of a guy born with the glorious ability to hit a 3-iron straight. If you're born in a state where it stays sunny 300 days a year, and has 8,000 golf courses, you may have an edge. But in that case there are 20,000 other golfers almost as good as you are.

So John Mahaffey and Andy North were targets for the week. I mean, hit the Americans and win the cigar.

For the Americans, the only incentive was that the winner of the individual trophy automatically is invited to the 1979 World Series of Golf. John Mahaffey took the only thing of real value out of this tournament.

THE HARDEST thing in the world to do is something you're supposed to do. Ask the Canadian hockey team that took on the Russians. Ask the German army.

The Americans, of course, are also much in demand at the VIP cocktail parties. If the Malaysians don't show up, the hostess is not hurt. If the U.S. Open champion does not show up, her reputation is a bust.

Mahaffey and North tried as hard to win this tournament as if it were the Masters. They beat off a stiff challenge from the Canadians, who led them by a full eight strokes after two rounds of play. The Americans put them away in the stretch like Secretariat.

It wasn't exactly Bobby Jones winning the Grand Slam, Hogan winning at Carnoustie the first British Open he ever saw, and, of course, World Cup golf isn't Lexington and Concord. But Mahaffey and North turned back the Redcoats, all the same — and the green coats, and Fijians in skirts, and the Spanish golf armada, and every other whites-of-the-eyes they could see. They did what they were supposed to do and they did it well. It might not be a victory at Foggy Bottom or with the Joint Chiefs of Staff, but if you want to play a little lo-ball on 7,000 yards of slippery grass and ankle-high weeds, the Americans are still the ones to beat.

Virginia to increase budget

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — The University of Virginia announced Thursday a seven-point program designed to revitalize the school's sports program, including an increase in the budget of the Department of Athletics.

Virginia President Frank Hereford said that preliminary plans have been drawn to boost revenues of the department so as to bring its annual budget, now $2.7 million, to $4.4 million by 1983-84.

In addition, Hereford indicated that small, but apparently meaningful, moves will be made to make it easier for athletes — and in fact any applicant — to gain admission to Virginia and to maintain passing grades.

Among these moves will be an "improved and expanded" remedial education program for students who fall behind in their classwork, designation of special academic advisors for athletes, the effective elimination of foreign language requirements for some students, and admission of "a limited number" of transfer students at mid-year.

Hereford outlined the program in a letter to athletic director Eugene Corrigan, at whose request he had set up a special panel earlier this year to study the sports program at the school.

Chargers house Jekyll, Hyde

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Do Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde really live in San Diego Stadium? Do the oddsmakers in Reno and Las Vegas take stomach medicine when it's time to handicap a Chargers' game?

With the Chargers, anything is possible.

For a team heralded as a dark-horse contender for the playoffs when the National Football League season began, the Chargers have been a puzzle, even to fans and opponents who have come to expect the unexpected.

Last Monday night, for example, San Diego dealt the unsuspecting Chicago Bears a 40-7 drubbing on national television. Eight days earlier, they wobbled into Kansas City and took a 23-0 beating from the punchless Chiefs.

AFTER WINNING their season opener in Seattle, the Chargers went on a slide, losing four straight games. Then they blanked defending American Football Conference champion Denver before losing two more games. Then came a four-game winning streak.

After their fourth game, a dismal 24-3 loss to Green Bay, Chargers' owner Gene Klein edged out Coach Tommy Prothro, architect of the team's rebuilding program, and brought in Don Coryell, former St. Louis Cardinals and San Diego State coach, to provide some fireworks.

The Chargers are 6-4 since Coryell took over. The season record is 7-7 with two games to play. But even under Coryell, revered in San Diego, the fans want to know why there has been the inconsistency on a club with obvious talent.

"I don't think we're a Jekyll and Hyde team," said Coryell. "I don't think we're different than any other football team. They'll play good games, and they'll play games that aren't so good."

"There's so much that goes on during a game that it's out of the team's or the coaches' control," he said. "If a team is a consistent winner, they have good personnel and very good coaching ... and they have to be a little bit lucky, too."

Then has lady luck snubbed the Chargers this year?

"I don't know. We've won five out of the last six games, and I kind of like that," Coryell said with chuckle. "Things have been going our way there."

FICKLE SPORTS writers here, used to Coryell's free-wheeling offense peppered with lots of passing, are complaining that the coach has become a football conservative. But Coryell is quick to point to statistics showing that the Chargers throw the ball at a rate equal to his Cardinals' and San Diego State teams.

"Now, it's kind of a funny thing when they say we've grown more conservative," Coryell noted. "Against Oakland, we took the ball for a 21-play drive, remember that? Everybody thought it was the greatest thing in the world."

"We as coaches are very pleased that people are interested in the team and all that, but we don't understand the criticism, because we have only one thought in mind and that is to win the game."

"And if we have to run every down to win the game, we'll run every down, and if we have to pass every play, if we have a better chance to win, we'll pass every down. And we'll do different things against different teams. All kinds of things enter into it."

THE CHARGERS seem to have a problem with depth.

Quarterback Dan Fouts is rated third in the AFC in passing with 17 touchdown tosses and 181 completions in 308 attempts for 2,351 yards. When he's healthy and the team is up, the Chargers are one of the most explosive teams in the NFL. The Bears and Broncos found that out.

But with backup quarterback James Harris at the helm, luck has turned the other way. And Fouts has missed two games with injuries.

Coryell says San Diego's 31-14 defeat by the Lions in Detroit at mid-season came partly because "we didn't have our starting quarterback."

"But then, you can't blame James Harris," he said. "Six of his passes were blocked and three of his passes were tipped and ended up as interceptions. And we dropped four possible interceptions."

"It was just one of those days when we didn't play well."

CORYELL SAID adding that two games, making the regular NFL season a 16-week affair, is exacting a toll on his team.

"It's been over five months now, five months of practice every day," he said. "The coaches, all of us, working seven days a week ... never a day off. It's tough."

"But you do with a team what the team can do best," the coach said in detailing why some say the Chargers haven't been as exciting as some would like. "We don't have a quarterback who can bootleg and roll out. Really, it comes down to what we do best."

"Our strength is trying to keep the ball and trying to win with the type of personnel we have."

Dupree fumbles spike, but having top year

DALLAS (AP) — Billy Joe Dupree jumped into the air and flapped his arms like a giant condor in flight. It was to be the most majestic of spikes.

More than 63,000 fans slapped their sides in high humor.

OK, so Dupree can't spike a football. So what? He's done just about everything else at tight end for the Dallas Cowboys this year. Dupree has become a prime receiver for quarterback Roger Staubach because opponents are double-covering wide receivers Tony Hill and Drew Pearson on just about every passing down. The result: Thirty-two receptions for 472 yards, including at least one scoring catch in eight different National Football League games.

"Dupree has had an excellent year," said Coach Tom Landry, who rations his pats on the back. "He has great dedication."

Dupree's most recent heroics included a diving catch of a 36-yard touchdown pass from Staubach in Sunday's 17-10 victory over New England.

The 6-year veteran has always been a crack blocker in Landry's offensive scheme. "If I'm asked to block, I block," said Dupree. "If they only throw to me on the goal line then I'll catch it down there."

"I'm proud of my blocking. I made up my mind before the New England game that I was going to block like hell so their guys would know right from the beginning what kind of a day they would be in for."

Dupree, the one-time first-round draft choice from Michigan State, has made two Pro Bowl teams but has never been named All-Pro. "Last year the two starting tight ends in the Super Bowl (Dupree and Denver's Riley Odoms) were both coming off good seasons, but neither of us got much support for All-Pro," said Dupree. "There are plenty of good tight ends in the league and there are a few who dominate the publicity at the position."

Hill said of Dupree: "He has deceiving speed. Teams just can't afford to double me and Drew and leave Billy Joe alone. If we don't get you one way we'll get you another."

"Billy Joe is playing exceptionally well," said Landry. "He's done everything we asked."

Asked if he was also Dupree's "spike coach," Landry almost smiled before he answered: "No!"

Knight to fill Rose's position

CINCINNATI (AP) — Ray Knight, maligned as a good field, no-hit third baseman, doesn't expect the red carpet treatment when he takes over Pete Rose's old third base position for the Cincinnati Reds in 1979.

"I don't assume I'm going to get a warm reception. They've lost their favorite son," Knight said about the Reds' fans.

After two years as Rose's backup — and six years in baseball's minor leagues — Knight has been informed by the Reds that he is the heir apparent to the job. Rose signed with the Philadelphia Phillies this week, ending a 16-year relationship with the Reds.

Knight, who started only two games last season and has only 37 major league hits, has no illusions.

"If I play up to my capability, I'll bring some people over to my side and make them Ray Knight fans. If I don't play well, I expect them to boo me out of the ballpark," he said by telephone after a successful quail hunt in his Albany, Ga. hometown.

He's aware that Reds' fans can be impatient for perfection.

Two years ago, Dan Driessen was introduced to boos when he replaced popular first baseman Tony Perez. The grumbling grew louder when Driessen got off to an 0-for-17 start.

Rose also heard hoots and howls in 1966 when he was unsuccessfully switched from second base to third.

Knight has already had a taste of criticism. "I've been called Pete Rose's caddy and been told there's no way I'll ever replace him," he said. "But I'm not replacing Pete Rose or his position. Before he was an All-Star third baseman, he was an All-Star outfielder. I'm just a ballplayer looking for a job."

Knight knows he faces the biggest test of his career with question marks surrounding his hitting ability and speed.

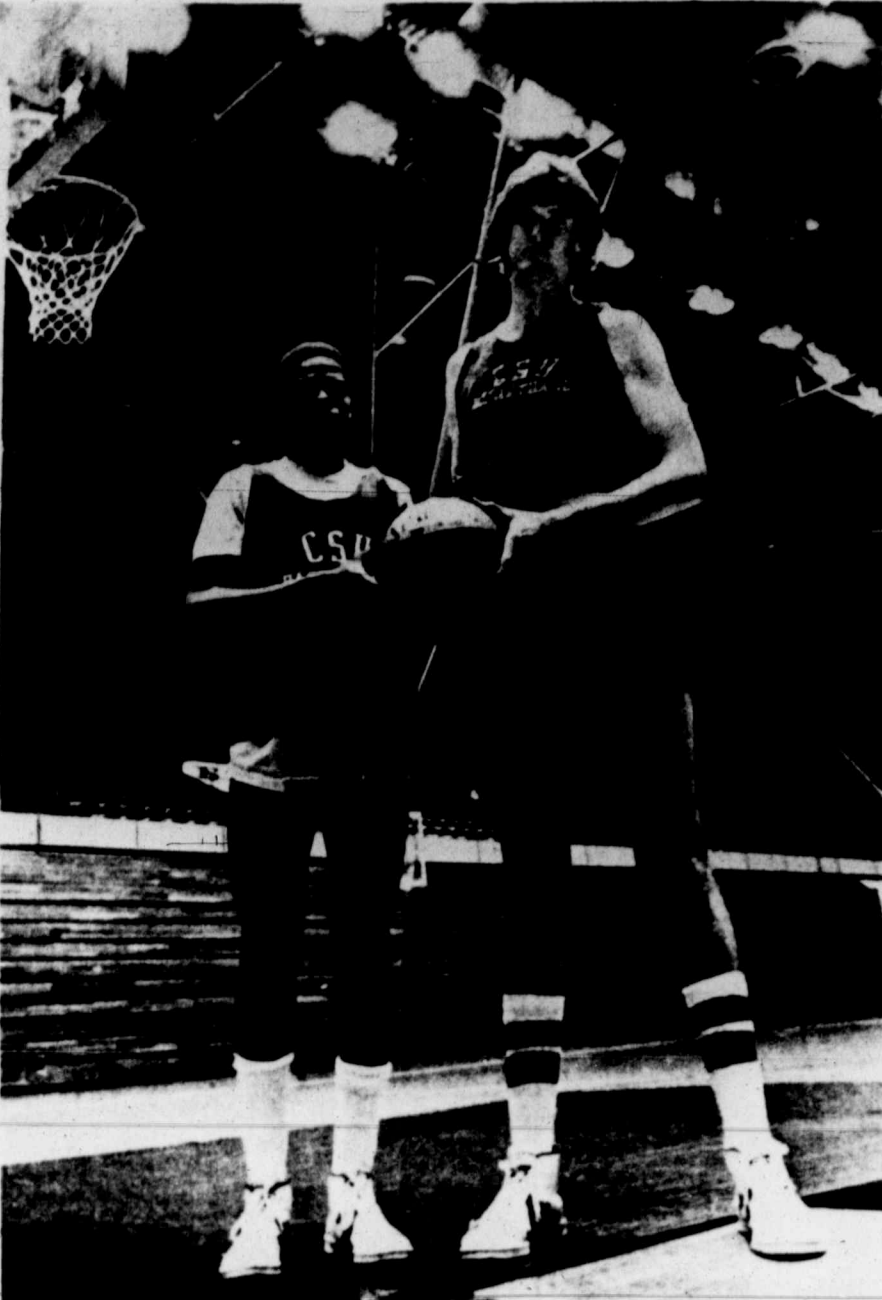

"People usually just think of me for my defense, because I won four fielding titles in Class AA and Class AAA. But I haven't had the opportunity to prove I can hit up here. They aren't aware that over the last two years I never started two games in a row. Last season I went 25 games without an at-bat. I batted four times in two months."

He finished the season hitting .200 in 65 appearances, down from his .261 mark in 1977 over 80 games.

A high school football injury left him with four screws in his ankle and difficulty in getting a good start.

"For the first five or six steps, I'm probably one of the slowest runners in the league. But I can go from first to third. I'm not a speed merchant, but I run a lot better than people give me credit for."

Knight said he will forever be indebted to Rose for advice and confidence boosting. "Sometimes I tried too hard. He told me I was putting too much pressure on myself. He said too many people think themselves into slumps."

This is the long and the short of the Colorado State University basketball program. Eddie Hughes stands 5-foot-10 while Mark Jung towers in a 7-foot-2. The incongruous duo are both starters for CSU, and you can figure out who is who. (AP Laserphoto)

Incongruous pair bring points

By The Associated Press

They are an incongruous tandem, a 5-foot-10 guard from the streets of frenetic Chicago and a 7-2 center from the desert tranquility of Tucson, Ariz. But they have come together in Fort Collins, Colo.

It is there that Eddie Hughes and Mark Jung have settled as freshmen at Colorado State University. While their backgrounds, methods of play and, of course, their physical appearances are vastly different, both have a common purpose — to spend four years honing their skills for pro basketball.

"WE LOST three starters from last year's 18-9 team," explains Coach James "J.J." Williams. "So we recruited seven kids. Mark and Eddie are starters."

"It's unusual to get such quality in one year. It's unusual to get a 7-footer and Eddie, well he sometimes plays like a 7-footer."

HUGHES HAS such phenomenal leaping ability that he can dunk backwards. He isn't afraid to go underneath the basket to battle with the big boys for rebounds.

"I've never seen someone his height who can leap like that," says Williams.

"It can help me, being short, when I go under the basket," says Hughes. "Other guys might look at me and laugh when they see me in there — until they see me outjump them for the ball."

"Being short for basketball doesn't bother me. I'm satisfied with my game. It's an advantage 'cause I'm quicker than the other guys on the court. It might've hurt me in getting offers from colleges when I was in high school," Hughes adds. "I didn't get the chance to show too many schools what I can do."

WHAT THE smaller half of this Mut-and-Jeff act can do is handle the ball and control the offense, lead the fast break, penetrate the lanes for layups and rebound. But Hughes knows he can leave the board work for Jung.

"It's kind of weird to see Eddie getting up with us big guys," admits Jung. "It's hard to box him out."

Jung has yet to see Hughes scoot between a 7-footer's legs to get rebounding position.

"I know a lot of players feel pretty bad when a guy a foot shorter is outjumping them," he says.

Not surprisingly, Jung leaves the ballhandling to Hughes, hoping his teammate will set him up "within 15 feet, where I shoot best."

Off the court, as Coach Williams notes, Hughes and Jung might be called "Mr. Silent No.1 and No.2. They don't say much."

BUT PEOPLE around Fort Collins are talking about the prize recruits.

"People see them walking next to each other in an airport," says CSU Sports Information Director Mike Mills, "a 7-2 white kid whose so pale he's almost anemic-looking and a 5-10 very dark black kid. They kind of stare. They know Mark must be a basketball player but they're not so sure about Eddie."

Until they see him jump, that is.

Skiing season heralds problems

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer

All too often, the opening of the ski season heralds the arrival of pulled muscles, sprained knees and ankles, sore backs and a few broken bones.

Even the best skiers in the world fall prey to those ailments. However, as they will tell you, a few simple precautions can help avert serious injury and make your first time out this season a lot more enjoyable.

"The main thing is to build up some endurance so you don't tire so easily," said Phil Mahre, America's top male ski racer and one of the very best in the world. "In order to enjoy skiing, you have to be in good shape, and you'll be less prone to injury."

The 21-year-old Mahre, second in the world only to Sweden's Ingemar Stenmark on last season's World Cup circuit, recommends running, sit-ups, leg exercises and stretching. "Even if you do exercise, you should stretch out afterward. There's an amazing difference," said Mahre. "If I work out and don't stretch, I get stiff."

In stretching exercises, the skier should concentrate on his back and legs, especially the hamstring muscles in the back of the legs and knees.

"If you can stand with your feet shoulder width and touch your palms to the ground, that's all that's required," Mahre said.

After Mahre broke his leg in an avalanche in 1974, he used a bicycle tire inner tube to work his way back into shape. The idea might save you a few bucks on those highly advertised exercise devices.

"I hung the inner tube over the bedpost and hooked my leg through it while I was sitting on the bed," Mahre said. "You can also stand up and stretch from side to side, and you can do your ankles with it by rotating them inside and out while you stretch. You can also hook your toe through it and pull to work on your ankles and lower leg."

Off-season activity is also important to the skier, who might just find himself resorting to tennis or even... ahem... golf during the summer months in order to keep busy.

"If you stay active during the summer," Mahre said, "you can keep yourself in shape. You can go out and ski, and get yourself in skiing shape like that."

"The most important thing to remember is that it's more enjoyable if you feel good."

With your body ready to go, what about all that equipment that's been gathering dust in the closet all summer? It needs to be shaped up, too, and Mahre has a few tips on that.

"If you did much skiing last season, your edges probably need filing. Before you put your skis away last winter, you should have had them hot waxed to keep the surfaces from oxidizing. Then they should be flat filed and side filed. If you don't know how to do this, you should take them to a ski shop and let an expert do it."

Bindings — After six months in the closet, your bindings need to be adjusted. It's a necessity. Improperly adjusted bindings can cause injuries.

If they're too loose, you can step out of them. If they're too tight, they won't let you in a fall. Again, this is probably something you'll need to get done at a ski shop.

(Solomon, by the way, has a new binding out for this winter, the 727 and 727E for competition. The recreational binding has a weight range of 90-220 pounds; the racing binding 120-250 pounds.

Kansas hires John Hadl

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — John Hadl, former University of Kansas All-America, today was named offensive coordinator for the Jayhawks' football team, a move that was expected when Don Fambrough was named head coach Tuesday.

Hadl was the first appointment to Fambrough's staff.

He served as quarterback coach under Bud Moore, who was fired last month, and was considered a top prospect for the head coaching job.

After a standout career at Kansas, he spent 16 years in professional football, setting several passing records. "I can't begin to explain how pleased I am that John is joining my staff," Fambrough said. "He has so much to offer, both as a coach and as a recruiter. Like me, Kansas is his first love. He is totally dedicated to building the best possible program."

The 38-year-old Hadl was an All-America halfback for the Jayhawks in 1960 before switching to quarterback his senior year and winning All-America honors at that position in 1961. He was a three-time All-Big Eight selection, and in 1961 guided Kansas to a 33-7 victory over Rice in the Bluebonnet Bowl.

He is one of only two players to have his jersey number permanently retired at Kansas.

Hadl's pro career included stops at San Diego, Los Angeles, Green Bay and Houston.

He retired as the third leading passer in National Football League history for both yards gained and passes attempted. He is fourth in career touchdown passes.

Ruthven uses natural studio

GEORGETOWN, Ohio (AP) — To bring himself closer to his subjects, wildlife artist John Ruthven went out and bought a natural studio — hundreds of acres of it.

For the past four years he's painted in a studio on a bluff overlooking Straight Creek Valley, once an Indian trail. Not far away is his home, on another 165 acres of land that he bought 10 years ago and turned into a wildlife preserve.

"It's necessary for a wildlife artist to be as close as possible to nature," Ruthven said.

Each afternoon, the 54-year-old artist who describes himself as a "latent pioneer" goes into the woods in much the same way wildlife artist James Audubon did.

Ruthven is aware that Audubon worked in the Cincinnati area at one time and may have traveled the same paths he now walks.

"I feel a great closeness with him," Ruthven said. "I would have loved to have seen the land in the pristine state that he found it. He had the good fortune to know he was seeing birds and animals no man had ever seen."

"He was here before the encroachment of man. I am a product of both worlds. I grew up in the city but I used to take the streetcar to the end of the line and then walk as far as I could to be out in the open," Ruthven remembers.

After World War II, he opened a commercial art studio in Cincinnati, but gave that up in the early 1960s when he established himself as a wildlife painter. Now his talents are in such demand that he is running nearly two years behind on orders.

Commissions for a Ruthven painting run as high as $15,000. His limited-edition prints increase in value as they sell out, becoming collector's items.

Watercolors are his favorite medium and he is known for painting from the inside of an animal outward, noting muscle tone and structure.

He has "skinned out" over 1,000 dead birds he has found. This has helped him obtain exact sizing and muscle tone.

Sometimes he live-traps a bird so he can "look it in the eye" and see how it feels.

"I want to know what makes it tick," he says.

A Ruthven drawing is the culmination of weeks of research. He has gone to Africa, Iceland and the Philippines for research.

Often when he's walking he'll take a camera with a long lens as well as a sketch pad.

"I'm not much of a photographer, but I use it as a recording device," Ruthven explained. "Sometimes, I only shoot pictures of feet or how an animal moves."

"When I paint the picture, I put all the parts together — the visual, the photo and the emotional."

"I can walk the same area each day and see something different... Each season brings something else for me to see. At the end of the year, I will have accumulated a lot of things that will help me in everything I do. I will have a backlog of experiences."

Ruthven admits that his commissions are often repetitious. He gets a lot of calls for cardinals.

One of his cardinals hangs in the Hermitage Museum in Leningrad. One of his Bald Eagle portraits was unveiled in 1976 at the White House.

He sprang into national prominence when he was chosen over 1,000 other artists to paint the 1960 federal waterfowl stamp.

Though his daily walks may not bring him in contact with many endangered species, his work does and he knows the importance his paintings can have in preserving a species.

"By making the painting as beautiful and interesting, I get people concerned about them," said Ruthven, who recently aroused the interest of officials in the Philippines with his painting of the monkey-eating eagle. "I bring to light the animal's particular plight by my art work."

Phillies active at winter meet

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — The Philadelphia Phillies grabbed the plum in superstar Pete Rose, but the frustrated National League club hasn't stopped wheeling and dealing at the winter baseball meetings.

The frustration is the result of three consecutive NL East titles, and three straight beatings in the league playoffs. Another division title won't be enough for owner Ruly Carpenter or disenchanted Philadelphia fans.

The Phillies gave Rose his fortune because they think he will put them over the top, and perhaps even more important pay for himself by forestalling a projected substantial drop in attendance.

SO, PAUL Owens, the personnel director, has been locked in his suite talking trade with the Chicago Cubs, Baltimore Orioles, Minnesota Twins, New York Mets and New York Yankees.

The Phillies make no secret of the fact they covet a pitcher and a second baseman.

Manager Danny Ozark is concerned that the triple fracture suffered by second baseman Ted Sizemore on his glove hand last season, still may handicap the veteran infielder in gripping the bat.

"If Sizemore could play like he did in 1977 (.281), I'd be satisfied with him at second," Ozark said of the nine-year veteran.

Ozark also can't count upon Jim Wright, a fine pitching prospect who underwent a second arm operation last season. And veteran pitcher Steve Carlton has a recurring shoulder problem.

But Ozark isn't sure, and he doesn't want to be caught short. Sizemore hit only .219 in 108 games last season.

Owens has tried to get second baseman Manny Trillo from the Cubs, but Chicago won't move him.

CHICAGO IS interested in catcher Barry Foote, outfielder Jerry Martin and a left-handed pitcher in the Phillies' farm system. They have put such names on the table as outfielders Bobby Murcer and Greg Gross, and first baseman Larry Bliittner.

"If they'd put Trillo in there it would make it much easier for Danny and I," Owens said.

So, for the moment, the Cubs and Phillies are stymied.

The Phillies talked to the Mets about pitcher Jerry Koonsman, 35-year-old left-hander who had a miserable 3-15 record last season, but posted a 3.75 earned run average. The Phillies think Koonsman could win for them.

But Koonsman has a choice of where he is traded and the Phillies are not on his list of preferred teams. The Phillies' brass say they're not going to push for a guy who doesn't want to play for them.

Baltimore is loaded with second basemen, and apparently has listed Kiko Garcia and Rich Dauer as bait for the Phillies. The Orioles would like outfielders Bake McBride or Martin. They also might be willing to throw in a starting pitcher.

THE PHILLIES say they like Garcia to a point, but aren't sure if he is the answer to their problem.

The Phillies, of course, would love to relieve the Twins of Rod Carew, one of the game's all-time great hitters, but money is the obstacle.

The Phillies feel they have the players to entice the Twins, and would pay the $400,000 limit for a free agent imposed by Commissioner Bowie Kuhn. But after giving Rose a reported $3.2 million, four-year package, Carpenter feels he couldn't satisfy Carew's salary demands and not destroy the Phillies' financial structure.

The Yankees have given the Phillies a list of players available for trade, including pitcher Ken Clay, outfielders Jay Johnstone and Gary Thomasson, and second baseman Brian Doyle. Owens says he still feels confident he will make a deal before leaving the winter meetings.

The one player many teams are interested in, but the Phillies are not trying to peddle is infielder Rich Hebner.

But Hebner, the only other free agent signed by the Phillies in the three years of the re-entry draft, is expendable because Rose is going to play first base.

Picture taking can be dangerous

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia Eagles banned a news photographer from covering future games, then reinstated him Thursday, after he snapped a picture of a smiling Eagles' cheerleader jumping out of her plunging, V-necked vest in front of a packed stadium.

"Yeh, he's banned," Eagles publicity director Jim Gallagher said at mid-morning in response to a call from an Associated Press newsman. "Why? Because a picture he took of one of our girls with a boob out wound up in Philadelphia Magazine. We thought it was in bad taste."

Two hours later, Gallagher called back and said the ban had been lifted.

"I think we over-reacted," he said. The photographer, Gene Puskar of the Lancaster New Era, said Gallagher called him Wednesday and mentioned Eagles officials had seen the published photograph.

"Gallagher said they were coming down on his neck, he being the PR director. He went on to say I would never shoot another Eagles' football game again in Philadelphia," said Puskar.

Puskar shot the picture at the Eagles-Washington Redskins game in Philadelphia Oct. 15 while freelancing for Football Digest. The cheerleader was not identified.

"It was a pregame activity that the Liberty Belles, jumping to disco records, go through," he recalled.

"They were doing the 1-2 on the high kicks. I was sitting on the sidelines with a 500 (millimeter lens). I just noticed there was a possibility something might be popping up. I saw it about to happen and it did happen. I have three frames showing a sequence."

Puskar said he sent the photograph to about five magazines, including Playboy, Esquire and New Times. He said Philadelphia Magazine agreed to pay $50, and that a Playboy editor had contacted him saying the magazine planned to run the photograph in March, along with a follow-up story on the National Football League's new, scantily clad cheerleaders.

"Because of the newsworthiness of the picture, I thought someone should be able to use it," Puskar said. "I thought it was an ironic kind of thing that touched a piece of the story that no one else had really been able to show."

"It happened in the middle of a stadium packed with 60,000. I thought it was too good for just the bulletin board at the office."

The cheerleader caught in the photograph wears a broad smile. Most of one breast is clearly visible, resting on the neckline of the vest that let her down.

Gallagher said during the first phone call that he had gotten orders from Eagles' owner Leonard Tose "to tell this fellow he's not welcome here anymore."

"In the call-back, Gallagher said, 'We now feel (Puskar) was on a legitimate assignment. We just over-reacted. In the pursuit of his professional work, he happened to get that shot.'"

"Yes, I talked to Mr. Tose. And we talked to Gene. We told him he's welcome anytime. We told him we love him."

Reached later, Tose said, "It was a hasty decision. I think we over-reacted a little bit too."

Dawson's wife found dead

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Jackie Dawson, wife of former Kansas City Chiefs quarterback Len Dawson, was found dead at their home today. Police said death may have been due to a stroke.

Dawson told police his wife went to take a shower and he became suspicious when she seemed to take too long. He said he found her lying in the shower.

Dawson said she was not breathing and he performed mouth-to-mouth resuscitation, but to no avail. An autopsy was planned at Truman Medical Center, a family spokesman said.

Mrs. Dawson, 42, had suffered a stroke in February, 1977 which caused some paralysis. Friends and neighbors said she had recovered well from the illness, although some signs of the paralysis were still evident.

Dawson is now an NBC sportscaster. The Dawsons were high school sweethearts in Alliance, Ohio and attended Purdue University together, where he was an all-America quarterback. They were married there in 1954.

After playing for the Pittsburgh Steelers, Dawson went to the Dallas Texans in the old American Football League. He moved with the club to Kansas City, and led the Chiefs to two Super Bowls before retiring in 1975.

Clements predicts agreement over future state spending

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov.-elect Bill Clements thinks there will be a "meeting of the minds" over tax and spending reductions after the Texas Legislature has been in session for a while.

Texas' first Republican governor in a century told an Austin civic club Thursday that he foresees no serious trouble in dealing with a predominantly Democratic legislature.

"I will use conservative persuasion not conservative pressure and both houses have conservative majorities," he said.

Afterwards, Clements told an informal news conference that he was confident there would be a "meeting of minds" over his efforts for tax and spending reductions and the state spending plans of legislative leaders. Clements has called for a billion dollar tax reduction. He has called the Legislative Budget Board's proposed budget, which would use up most of the available funds, a "letter to Santa Claus."

"The LBB has a job to do and they are doing their thing," he said. "About Feb. 1 I will do my thing."

Clements stressed that "my program is that we are going to reduce taxes. And on Feb. 1, more or less, I will submit a budget to the legislature that shows how we can do it."

Clements was asked about reports quoting Lt.

Gov. Bill Hobby as saying there could be no billion-dollar tax reduction.

"You keep asking him," Clements said. "He'll come around. I have a role to play in the budget process and I intend to play it."

Clements and his campaign director, Tom Read, spent much of the Austin talk in a post-election look at their campaign tactics.

Read said a recent survey showed 15 percent of voters in the governor's race made up their mind on election day and one-third of them made up their minds after Nov. 1.

Clements said the study showed that "the choice was not made on the basis of who was spending the most money ... it showed that basically there was no difference in name identification."

He said 50 percent of those surveyed said they voted on the candidate himself. "On the basis of business background, I won that two-to-one. On the basis of conservatism, I won that three-to-one," he said.

Downtown Rotary hosts party for girls ranch

Residents of High Sky Girls Ranch, both girls and supervisory personnel, were special guests of the Downtown Rotary Club Thursday night at its annual Christmas party in the Midland Hilton. Rotary-Anns were also guests at the ladies-night function.

Santa Claus, in the person of John Williams, made an appearance to distribute Christmas gifts to each of the girls.

Rotarians and Rotary-Anns who are members of the board of High Sky Girls Ranch also were recognized. They include Winston Barclay, president; Mrs. James Mims, Mrs. Gilbert C. Tompson, John Seay and James Ross.

Parker Humes, a past president of the club, served as master of ceremonies.

David Maley, executive director of the Girls Ranch, before introducing the ranch residents, expressed appreciation to the Rotary Club for its continuing support at Christmas and throughout the year. He said the ranch now is operating at full capacity with 27 girls, and that additional facilities are needed to meet existing and ever-increasing demands. He said expansion plans now are in the making. Maley is a member of the Rotary Club.

Maley also led the banquet group in the singing of Christmas carols, with Rotarian George DeHart at the piano.

In a fun and fellowship part of the program, Humes presented "All-Around Turkey" certificates in various categories to Rotarians, as follows: Jack Swallow, publications; Sam Hulse and Ted Kerr, education; John Thomas, bureaucracy; Camal Dakil, financial advice (football predictions); Jim Zimmerman, news casting; Fred Tyler, attendance; James Crowder and John Seay, golf; Ted Kerr and Jack Shepherd, programs; Marvin McCree, music; Bill Collins, religious fervor, and President Rudolph Wright, balancing act-program and newscasts.

Mishap injures 2 from Midland

A Midland man was reported to be in critical condition at Midland Memorial Hospital today as a result of injuries he received Thursday night in a two-car accident in the city.

Ronald L. Hodges, 24, of 4508 Comanche Drive was being treated in the intensive care unit for a broken pelvis and contusions of the chest, according to a hospital spokesman.

Hodges was a passenger in a car driven by Ronda Gail Roberts, 19, of 3301 Tanner Drive, police reports indicated.

Ms. Roberts was listed in fair condition at the hospital, undergoing treatment for a broken pelvis, a spokesman said.

The Roberts vehicle was in collision with a car operated by Randall Maloy Hicks, 18, of 3221 Camarie Ave. at 10:30 p.m. at the intersection of West Wadley Avenue and Lanham Street, reports stated.

Ms. Roberts was driving north on Lanham Street and Hicks was eastbound on Wadley at the time of the accident, police said.

Odessa resident injured in wreck

ODONA — An Odessa man was reported in stable condition Thursday night in Crockett County Hospital after the truck he was driving ran off the road earlier in the day.

Ozona Fire Department firefighters freed Billy Dale Nelson, 25, from the T.E. Mercer Trucking Co. truck with the help of a hydraulic tool nicknamed the "jaws of life," according to Texas Department of Public Safety officials in Ozona.

The road was blocked at the intersection of Texas 137 and 163, about three miles north of Ozona, after the accident occurred about 1:40 p.m. The truck was loaded with oil drill stem material.

Trooper Bob Bailey of the DPS' Ozona office investigated the accident.

Diamonds taken in local burglary

Items valued at $1,175 were reported taken in a burglary of the residence of Josephine Babb of 2210 E. California Ave. Thursday night, city police said.

Stolen in the break-in were a diamond dinner ring, a diamond wedding ring and a .22-caliber revolver, police said.

Becoming an expert in bridge involves time, learning process

By CHARLES RICHARDS

DALLAS (AP) — In 1966, when Minda Brachman of Dallas paid several hundred dollars to get one of the world's best bridge players as her partner for a tournament, her friends were amazed and her husband was dumbfounded.

"Malcolm didn't encourage me at all. He was totally against it," she said of her decision to pay Jim Jacoby, the syndicated bridge columnist and one of the world's foremost players, to play with her.

"But at the time, it helped my game a tremendous amount, in just every way. We won two regional events, which I never really expected to do, but it was after that that my game started to improve."

Today, Mrs. Brachman is considered a near-expert in her own right. So is her husband, the president of an oil company who decided to take on serious bridge after seeing how much enjoyment it brought his wife.

"Many people are totally against it, and a lot of people can't afford to pay a professional to play with them, but it certainly did a lot for us," she said. "If you play with nobody ever any better than you, your game is going to stagnate. You really have to play with people better than you."

Bridge is unusual in that even though there's enormous interest in the game and it has a great fascination intellectually, it has not proved popular as a spectator sport.

What has developed, said Jacoby, "is a class of professional bridge players, experts, who teach their clients to play better bridge by playing with them in these tournaments and charging a fee for doing so."

Competitive bridge in the United States is based on the master point system, in which status is awarded for finishing high and winning tournaments.

The common bond among bridge experts, Jacoby said, is not that they pull off impossible coups or intricate plays. "The secret of becoming a bridge expert is avoiding blunders. The top players simply don't make blunders. They may guess a card wrong or get too high, but as far as playing the cards wrong, they simply don't do it." Jacoby, 45, co-authors a bridge column — which appears in 250 newspapers around the world — with his father, Oswald Jacoby, who was one of the first greats of the bridge world. He works as a stockbroker in Dallas through the week.

Jacoby once taught bridge classes, but hasn't done that in several years. "I do teach high-level bridge on an individual basis, usually through participation in tournaments," he said. He gives playing and bidding tips to his partners and makes observations on their play.

He said the dramatic breakthrough, when average players become good players, comes when they finally learn to determine, through bidding and play, how many cards the other players have in each suit and which players have the key missing cards.

"You have to try to 'put' cards in your opponents' hands, and to do it requires practice and concentration. You can liken it to athletic competition, when you learn how to hit a tennis ball or swing a golf club.
