First, there were hammers, crowbars and sledge hammers wielded by men out to do some good by tearing down.

It would take time. There were five men, branded "Kiwanis" and thinking "community good."

They began the demolition piecemeal on a cold, cold Saturday morning.

The neighborhood would be better off, they knew, by wiping this dilapidated, rotting house off the face of Midland.

They tore away the walls and started on the roof. The studs would come down next.

Then, unannounced, came two lumbering dump trucks and the "mean" main machine, a yellow bulldozer quietly being "chauffeured" by a long, low truck. The men bringing in the machinery for the kill were professional tear-downers working for the city of Midland. On weekdays, they work on keeping up the city streets.

The Big Bull would chomp, romp, squish and smear, making rubble out of the already decaying wood and plaster shaped years ago into the form of a house.

But it was abandoned, decayed and was a blight on the community. Nobody, not even the owners, wanted it.

So, Dr. Doug Peterson and his gang in the Downtown Kiwanis Club's citizenship service committee got the go-ahead from the city to take the shanty apart, salvage what could be saved and cart the rest to the city's landfill for burial.

It didn't work out thataway, though. The professional house busters and yellow Big Bull came by.

"They came along, and we said 'What the heck!'" said Wayne Kohout, one of Peterson's men. He wasn't lamenting, either.

They picked up their tools, watched the big machinery for awhile and went home.

They weren't really "cheated" out of work and out of a deed.

"This has sort of negated our effort," said Kohout. "(But), what we wanted to have accomplished was accomplished."

The goal of the Kiwanians was the same, but on a smaller scale, of the city crew with the Big Bull and the

Hearst Corp. to purchase The Reporter-Telegram

The Hearst Corporation has entered into agreements for the purchase of The Midland Reporter-Telegram and The Plainview Herald, it was announced today. Purchase prices were not disclosed.

John R. Miller and Frank A. Benack Jr. made the announcement on behalf of Hearst, jointly with Mrs. James N. Allison Sr., the majority owner of The Reporter-Telegram Publishing Company and Allison Communications, Inc., the corporations that publish the two newspapers. Miller is president and chief executive officer of The Hearst Corporation and Benack, currently executive vice president, succeeds Miller in that role in January, 1979.

The Midland Reporter-Telegram, since the death in August of its dynamic young publisher, James N.

Allison Jr., has been one of the most sought-after newspaper properties in the nation. Virtually every major American newspaper publishing organization has recognized the highly desirable characteristics of the Midland newspaper and the West Texas market it serves.

The Reporter-Telegram, with circulations of 21,000 daily and 23,000 Sunday, has been owned by the family of James N. Allison Sr. since 1940. The senior Allison was publisher until his death in 1975 when he was succeeded by his son. The Reporter-Telegram enjoys a distinguished record of service to West Texas and received in 1978 the Texas Press Association's top award for general excellence. The newspaper reaches 80 percent of all Midland households daily and 87 percent Sundays. Midland boasts the highest percentage of college and high school graduates of any city in Texas and therefore ranks as an exceptional newspaper market.

The Plainview Daily Herald, a 10,000 circulation daily and Sunday newspaper, is published in the county seat of Hale County, located on the High Plains of West Texas. With a population of 25,000, Plainview is an agricultural-based community approximately 40 miles from Lubbock. The city has shown growth as the population in the region has shifted from farms to the city. With that shift has come the expansion of Plainview's economic base to include meat processing, chemical and fertilizer plants. Still, Hale County remains among the leaders in Texas in total

Ex-convict says he was offered $20,000 to kill Cullen Davis

By MIKE COCHRAN

HOUSTON (AP) — An ex-convict testified today FBI informant David McCrory offered him $10,000 — and then $20,000 — to kill Fort Worth millionaire Cullen Davis.

Larry Gene Lucas, a surprise defense witness, said McCrory approached him in a Fort Worth bar last July and repeatedly asked him to kill the wealthy industrialist.

"You're crazy," Lucas said he told McCrory, the key prosecution witness in Davis' murder-for-hire trial.

"You obviously need some money," Lucas quoted McCrory as saying.

"I don't need it that bad," Lucas said he replied.

He said when McCrory hiked the offer to $20,000, he said, "I've never known you to have that kind of money."

He said McCrory told him, "It's there."

Lucas said when he refused the proposal McCrory told him, "We're going to get him one way or the other."

Lucas said he told McCrory once that "I wasn't interested," told him again that "I wouldn't touch it with a 10-foot pole," and finally "to forget it."

He said he had not seen McCrory since July, the month before Davis was arrested and charged in a plot to have his divorce judge killed.

The defense contends McCrory schemed with the defendant's estranged wife Priscilla and karate instructor Pat Burleson to frame Davis on the murder-conspiracy charge.

Defense lawyer Richard "Racehorses" Haynes questioned Lucas about the source of the alleged "blood money" but prosecutors at least temporarily blocked a response.

Prosecutor Tolly Wilson brought in cross-examination that Lucas was convicted on a marijuana charge in Texas and a burglary charge in Missouri.

The defense called Lucas to the stand ahead of two previously scheduled witnesses — FBI agents whom Davis' attorneys plan to ask about an investigation last year into an extortion threat aimed at Davis.

Special Agent Bobby Oakley and James Acree conducted the investigation into the December 1977 death threat against Davis by an extortionist identified only as "D.M.R."

A typewritten letter sent to the residence Davis shared with his girlfriend included a demand for $10,000.

Defense attorneys would like the jury to believe that "D.M.R." might have stood for David McCrory. They are trying to show that McCrory and karate instructor Pat Burleson conspired with Mrs. Davis to frame Davis in a plot to kill his divorce judge.

Stronger U.S. role in Mideast peace asked

By ALY MAHMOUD

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — President Anwar Sadat has called on Secretary of State Cyrus Vance for more "active American participation" in the Egyptian-Israeli peace process and "strong, binding" U.S. commitments and guarantees to wrap up an agreement, the semi-official newspaper Al-Ahram reported today.

Quoting Egyptian diplomatic sources, Al-Ahram said Sadat told Vance during a 90-minute meeting Sunday.

"Without active American participation, it will be difficult for Egypt and Israel to achieve agreement before Dec. 17, the date that President Jimmy Carter calls for and which Egypt reaffirms the necessity of re-securing."

U.S. commitments and guarantees for wrapping up a peace accord with Israel "must be strong and binding, or peace will not be realized," Sadat reportedly continued.

The president said Egypt envisions a comprehensive, clearcut and applicable peace pact, devoid of any loopholes that could precipitate complications in the future, Al-Ahram reported.

"Negotiations (with Israel) will have to be resumed at once, with the treaty signing to take place on Mt. Sinai and with the three religions (Islam, Christianity and Judaism) and all parties to the Arab-Israeli conflict to be represented," Sadat reportedly declared. Vance arrived Sunday afternoon on a visit to Egypt and Israel to try to resolve the disagreements blocking conclusion of a peace treaty. After a meeting today with Prime Minister Mustafa Khalil and leading members of his cabinet and another session with Sadat, he was flying to Israel for the funeral of former Prime Minister Golda Meir. He will return to Cairo after the funeral Tuesday, meet again with Egyptian officials and return to Jerusalem Wednesday to confer with Prime Minister Menachem Begin and other Israeli officials.

"After that we are playing it by ear," said spokesman George Sherman when asked if the secretary would shuttle from Jerusalem back to Cairo or return to Washington.

"Our common goal is a comprehensive peace and the early conclusion of negotiations between Egypt and Israel as an important step on the road toward a comprehensive and lasting peace," Vance said on his arrival in Cairo.

There was speculation that he urged Sadat to send a representative to Mrs. Meir's funeral, a move that he was reported to believe could help get

Are Swedes preparing for 'tea party'?

STOCKHOLM (AP) — The Swedish welfare state costs its citizens more than half of their earnings in taxes and is planning new levies within the year to come — including some on hobbies.

The Swedes, not known as revolutionaries, are not expected to take to arms over the new taxes — though they did kill a king some 200 years ago for about the same reason.

But Gunnar Myrdal, a renowned economist, said in a recent broadside against fellow-socialists that the Swedish tax system, constructed by the Social Democrats, "was turning Swedes into a gang of hustlers."

Myrdal, winner of the Nobel Prize in economics in 1975, wants the government to abolish the present income tax and replace it with a progressive expenditure tax in order to minimize injustices.

"The present tax system with deductions is making nine out of ten Swedes criminals," he said, referring to those who cheat on taxes.

Milton Friedman, a leading American economist, also noted in a recent TV interview that high taxes were to blame for tax cheating. "I am quite sure the Swedes are no less ingenious than other people to get around the tax laws," the 1976 Nobel laureate said.

The tax burden, which exceeds 50 percent in the latest survey made by the Organization of Economic Cooperation and Development. That survey put Sweden on top, almost 6 percent above Norway, in the percentage of the gross national product that citizens pay in taxes.

At the latest OECD ranking in 1977, which is not yet complete, Sweden stood at 53.3 percent, followed by Norway at 47.4, the Netherlands at 46.7 and Denmark at 45.0. The United States is far down at the ranking at 30.4 percent, but still pays nearly 10 percent more than the Japanese at 20.5.

In Sweden, taxes account for at least 90 percent of government income. The government claims an estimated $22.8 billion annually in taxes from the roughly eight million Swedes and returns an estimated $8 billion in social security benefits.

The Swedes, unlike some taxpayers in other parts of the world, have pretty much accepted their fate since their last outburst 200 years ago when they murdered King Gustaf III who tried to squeeze their last cents for his wars.

But a growing number of people in the higher income brackets have fled the country for "tax paradises" such as Switzerland and Liechtenstein, and books advising how to reduce or avoid income tax through legal loopholes are bestsellers.

It is mainly the progressive tax scale — and the high rates — which discourage many Swedes. Two years ago, Astrid Lindgren, a famous author of children's books, made headlines when she disclosed that she paid a tax rate of 102 percent as a result of getting book royalties on top of a regular wage.

Film director Ingmar Bergman exiled himself in early 1976 after two policemen interrupted a rehearsal and took him away for questioning on an alleged tax fraud case. Bergman vowed not to work in Sweden again but returned this year after the charges were withdrawn.

In the TV interview here, economist Friedman noted more ordinary Swedes also

Kentucky floods drive thousands from homes

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) — About 1,000 people driven from their homes by flooding caused by three days of steady rain will not be able to return until Tuesday or Wednesday at the earliest, officials say.

Authorities estimated that more than 1,000 homes were damaged by rising water when the Kentucky River, which divides the southern and northern parts of Frankfort — Kentucky's capital — crested Sunday at 48.5 feet, 17.5 feet above flood stage.

Some parts of south Frankfort were covered with 15 feet of water, but no deaths or injuries were reported. The water was so deep on some streets that it thwarted passage of even large National Guard trucks, and boats were used for evacuations.

Conditions were worsened by temperatures in the teens and sightseeing motorists who clogged the only road to the downtown area.

One woman, isolated by water-covered streets, gazed at the lines of slow-moving vehicles on higher ground and said, "I feel like I'm in a zoo."

The floodwaters began receding early today. Drinking water, which had been cut off for 12 hours when the pumping station was inundated, was restored.

"Our city has been through its worst flood and survived," Mayor Jim Burch declared Sunday.

A 5 p.m.-to-dawn curfew remained in effect for the downtown and south Frankfort sections today, and all schools and state office buildings were closed.

Gov. Julian Carroll declared a state of emergency for flood-stricken parts of the state and was to decide today whether to activate the National Guard. Guardsmen who were in Frankfort for weekend maneuvers aided in rescue operations.

After a helicopter tour Sunday of flooded areas in central and eastern Kentucky, Carroll said, "I saw no community as hard hit or as many streets flooded as Frankfort."

Carroll, who planned to ask for federal disaster aid, also postponed the start of a special legislative session from today to Wednesday.

Longtime residents said they were astonished by the swiftness of the rising waters, and by Sunday morning they saw water at heights that weren't reached even during the record flood of 1937.

Two men, Gary Coley in front and Bill Chambers, use their boat to help evacuate people from flooded south Frankfort, Ky., Sunday. The Capital, in the background, is on top of a hill and stayed dry. (AP Laserphoto)

More taxes may rouse Swedes' ire

manage to escape taxes. "Why?" he asked. "Because the Swedes are no less ingenious than other people at getting around government controls."

"It is a terrible situation, in which it becomes socially beneficial for people to break the law. I would rather see governments cutting down government spending and government taxes than see it done indirectly by people who learn how to get around the law, how to evade and how to avoid it."

Now Sweden, with a record budget deficit of $7.3 billion last year, will increase taxes on car rentals and estate purchases; raise environmental control charges and soccer pool duties; and put new taxes on such leisure activities as fishing, boating and horseback riding.

These proposals, still to be worked out in detail, have met scattered protests. But few expect a tax revolt like the one in the United States.

Some note, however, that heavy taxes on outdoor activities could be one blow too many for athletic Swedes.

'Organizers' arranging exodus of refugees

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP) — A Malaysian businessman who escaped from Vietnam with his Vietnamese wife and two small sons says a group known as "the organizers" is arranging the exodus of Vietnamese refugees for about $2,000 in gold per adult.

Soon Wah Hoi, who said he was stranded in Saigon by the Communist victory in 1975, was among thousands of "boat people" who arrived on Malaysia's northeast coast in November, swelling the small country's refugee population to 46,500.

A former exporter of seafood and handicrafts, Soon told reporters in Kuala Trengganu, on the northeast coast, that he did not know who "the organizers" were or whether the Vietnamese government was involved in the refugee trade.

He said he and his family slipped out of their home between midnight and dawn. They were put aboard a they went through two checkpoints. But the checking was minimal because the organizers had made advance arrangements, Soon said.

The family was taken to a wooden shed near Chinkiang. They waited four days for a boat and boarded it with 200 other refugees. The organizers provided one or two boatmen to steer the craft, and after three days they reached Malaysia.

Many of the refugees now fleeing from Vietnam are ethnic Chinese who dominated commercial life in South Vietnam and took no part in the Vietnamese War. They are leaving now because the Communist government has put them out of business.

dump trucks: to rid the city of some of its more obvious eye-sores, fire hazards and eerie, deserted houses sometimes conducive to criminality.

"They started it," heavy-equipment operator Willie Ramos said of the Kiwanians with the hand tools. "And we came up here and finished it."

Big Bull, whipped around by Juan Ramos, knocked down and rolled over the shack just as it had done time and time before and would be doing time and time again.

"We're just trying to keep it (the neighborhood) clean...trying to stop the fire hazards," he said.

Abandoned, run-down, unwanted, irreparable, and virtually worthless houses that may hurt the worth of the neighborhood are condemned to the dump grounds.

Midland city officials certify that the houses, buildings and structures are worthy of annihilation. Then, they either get permission from owners to bring 'em down or condemn the structures by decree.

And the wrecking starts.

"What we are doing is just improving the neighborhood," said Bobby Kuykendall, gang foreman. His gang and the Kiwanians had just torn down a shack in front of Bunche Elementary School.

It's a slow, drawn-out process. The wrecking is done just on Saturdays and on overtime at that, most likely.

Last Saturday, the crew got around to four houses. Many more are on the "kill list." Most are in the poorer neighborhoods, of course.

Kuykendall's gang moved over to a partially burned shack on South Jefferson Street.

"Take this house here," the foreman said, even as he was scanning the neighborhood. "There was nothing you could do with it." It was years past repairing.

He looked at the modest, well-kept house across the way, and then turned toward the doomed shack that was a blight on the neighborhood.

"I'd hate to wake up each morning and look at this (the shanty)," Kuykendall said.

"It's not rich," he said of the pleasant-looking house facing the shack Juan Ramos would turn into mince-meat with the bulldozer.

"It's not fancy... (but) it's their home."

Hearst Corp. to buy newspapers farm income, topping $114 million annually.

The Plainview Daily Herald has been owned by the Allison family since 1965 and has grown steadily.

The acquisitions of the Midland and Plainview newspapers will bring the number of Hearst Newspapers to ten with circulations of 1.4 million daily and 2.5 million Sunday. The diversified publishing and broadcasting corporation also publishes 20 magazines in the United States and Great Britain, operates 10 broadcast stations, two book companies, a newspaper features syndicate and a wide range of other activities in publishing, ranching, timber, real estate and paper-making. Hearst announced only last week the acquisition of Arbor House, a quality book publishing firm.

Hearst newspapers have been located primarily in the nation's largest cities. With the Midland and Plainview purchases, Hearst now begins a program of expansion into medium-sized markets. The addition of The Midland Reporter-Telegram and the Plainview Daily Herald increases the number of Hearst Newspapers in Texas to three. The San Antonio (Texas) Light has been owned by Hearst since 1923. Bennack, Hearst's new president, was publisher of the San Antonio newspaper from 1967 to 1974.

Mrs. James N. Allison Sr. said: "After careful evaluation, I'm very pleased to announce the selection of The Hearst Corporation as the new owner of our newspapers. I'm thoroughly convinced that Hearst's commitment to continue the highest standards of journalistic quality and service to Midland and Plainview will do honor to the record of responsible publishing established by my husband, James N. Allison Sr., and in recent years by our son, James N. Allison Jr."

Speaking on behalf of The Hearst Corporation, Bennack said: "We look forward to the great opportunities for these newspapers and the communities they serve. These are clearly among the finest newspapers of their size in the nation. We are particularly gratified at the confidence shown in our organization by the Allison family. We plan to continue the same superb traditions of quality in both Midland and Plainview that this outstanding publishing family has established."

Bennack said that he and Robert J. Danzig, vice president and General Manager of Newspapers for Hearst, would be naming a new publisher for The Midland Reporter-Telegram at an early date.

"Aside from that move," Bennack said, "we intend to continue the same outstanding staff and general policies that have made The Reporter-Telegram so successful."

Concerning the Plainview Daily Herald, Bennack said, "James Oswald will continue as vice president and general manager. We are delighted with that and in Plainview, too, we expect to maintain the management, staff and general policies as they now exist."

The Hearst newspapers are:

Baltimore News American, Boston Herald American, Albany Times-Union and Knickerbocker News/Union Star, Los Angeles Herald-Examiner, San Antonio Light, San Francisco Examiner and Sunday Examiner & Chronicle and Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

The Hearst magazines are:

American Druggist, Cosmopolitan, Good Housekeeping, Harper's Bazaar, House Beautiful, Motor, Motor Boating & Sailing, Popular Mechanics, Science Digest, Sports Afield, and Town & Country.

The radio and television stations are:

WBAL AM, WIYY FM and WBAL-TV, Baltimore; WISN AM & WLPX FM and WISN-TV, Milwaukee; WTAE AM, WXXK FM and WTAE-TV, Pittsburgh; and WAPA AM Radio, a Hearst subsidiary in San Juan, Puerto Rico.

The National Magazine Company, Ltd., the British subsidiary of Hearst, publishes:

Antique Collector, British Antiques Yearbook, Connoisseur, Containerisation International, Cosmopolitan, Ebury Press, Good Housekeeping, Harper's & Queen, International Antiques Yearbook, She and Company.

The Hearst properties also include:

Avon Books, paperback publishers, Arbor House, hard-cover book publishers, King Features Syndicate, Hearst Metrotone News and Puck-The Comic Weekly, the Sunday color comic section.

Two circulation-oriented entities are: Periodical Publishers' Service Bureau, Inc., a paid-during-service magazine subscription sales organization, and International Circulation Distributors, which furnishes Hearst Magazines, Avon Books and non-Hearst publications with an organization that distributes magazines to independent wholesale distributors.

The Sunical Land and Livestock Division at San Simeon, Cholame, and McCloud, California, engages in cattle raising and the management of its timberlands.

The Pejepsot Paper Division, producers of specialty papers and managers of its timberlands in Washington County, Maine and New Brunswick, Canada.

Color television reported stolen

A color television set valued at $495 reportedly was taken in the burglary of the residence of Golga Heredia of 310 N. Fort Worth St. Sunday night, according to city police.

Entrance was gained through an unlocked door, police said.

In another house burglary incident, Michael W. Dadds of 2200 S. Lamesa Road reported the theft of items valued at $237, including a collection of eight-track tapes and record albums.

Cold nights, cool days to prevail

Cold nights and cool days likely will remain the weather picture through Tuesday, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

The low tonight is expected to be in the upper 20s. Tuesday's high should be around 60.

Winds are expected to be light and variable tonight.

Sunday turned out to be another fair but chilly day for Permian Basin residents. The mercury reached a high of 47 degrees, far below the record high of 82 degrees for Dec. 10 set in 1933.

The overnight low was 25 degrees. The record low for today is 20 degrees set in 1932.

Carter survives challenge to budget-cutting plans

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — President Carter has survived an impassioned challenge from fellow Democrats to his budget-cutting plans, and his lieutenants say he will push ahead despite the pleas of the dissenting minority.

After the only serious floor fight at the Democratic Party's midterm convention, delegates voted 822-521 Sunday against a budget resolution insisting that social programs get at least as much money in the next federal budget as they are receiving this year.

Then the delegates passed by voice vote a version asking that Carter provide "an adequate budget to support human needs" — leaving to him the decision on what is adequate.

It was a victory for the White House, but the vote may mean Carter will face more opposition than expected when he presents his budget to Congress. And the debate featured a rousing speech by Sen. Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts, who attacked Carter's budget-cutting plans on Saturday and won cheers much louder than the respectful applause given Carter earlier.

"It is wrong that prices are rising as rapidly as they are," Kennedy said. "But it is also wrong that cities are struggling against decay. It is wrong that women and minorities are denied their equal rights. And it is wrong that millions who are sick cannot afford the care they need."

But White House Press Secretary Jody Powell said Carter "can't make his decisions based on the degree of passion or even eloquence with which the dissent is given. The fervor with which an opinion is expressed can't change what the world is really like.

And you still have to make the political decisions."

Pollsters at the convention measured Kennedy's standing among the delegates as a possible candidate to replace Carter in the White House. CBS News said an informal preference poll, taken among about half of the 1,625 delegates during the three-day meeting, showed Carter the favorite with 58 percent to Kennedy's 34 percent. Party Chairman John White said he was pleased with the vote supporting budget cutting despite the 39 percent vote against.

"The Democratic Party has to face up to the problem of inflation... or it will be driven out of office just as our predecessors were in 1968 by the Vietnam War."

"I suspect the grassroots of the Democratic party would support him higher than that," White said, "because the particular make up of the midterm conference by its very nature was activist and issue oriented."

The administration position was put forth by Vice President Walter Mondale, who told the delegates Sunday morning that budget-cutting was necessary if Democrats hope to stay in office.

"The Democratic Party has to face up to the problem of inflation," he said, "... or it will be driven out of office just as our predecessors were in 1968 by the Vietnam War."

The president has made budget reduction a principal battleground in his fight against inflation, arguing that the social goals sought by the liberals cannot be attained in any poor and unemployed in his war on inflation by cutting funds for his aid.

Powell stoutly denied the charge. "I don't think there are very many people in this country who think that the president is out to destroy these programs," Powell said, "because he's not."

And Mondale told the delegates, "Don't worry about the compassion of this president."

White said the vote in Carter's favor and the lack of any other major fight spilling over onto the convention floor proved "Jimmy Carter and his party are in tune with each other."

The administration won another victory, but made a significant concession in the process, by defeating a call for immediate enactment and implementation of a national health insurance program — a special interest of Kennedy's.

Carter has called the program dangerously inflationary, and has said he wants to phase it in slowly. Kennedy wants immediate enactment. The compromise resolution calls for enactment of the total package in the next Congress, but it permits gradual phasing in of its provisions.

The convention's other actions included resolutions endorsing Carter's policies for rescuing the slumping dollar, seeking peace in the Middle East and influencing other nations to improve human rights.

Delegates also endorsed ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment and the constitutional amendment that would give the District of Columbia full voting rights in Congress.

Kansas City trying to woo Republicans

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Kansas City steaks, long-stemmed roses and local Republican luminaries are part of an effort to get the GOP to hold its 1980 convention here, despite loss of a Republican governorship in Kansas and Missouri's failure to ratify the Equal Rights Amendment.

Seven Republican National Committee members and 14 representatives of the three major television networks arrived in Kansas City Sunday afternoon to look at convention and hotel facilities and sample local hospitality.

Kansas City is one of seven cities vying for the party's 1980 convention business. The committee already has toured Minneapolis, New Orleans, Detroit, Miami Beach and Dallas, and is expected to consider a late bid from New York City.

The Republicans left behind $37 million after their 1976 national convention in Kansas City, and officials here have spent about $25,000 on a "Many Happy Returns" campaign designed to woo the party back for another visit. Steaks and free drinks were served on the flight from Dallas to Kansas City, and women committee members were given roses at the airport. Kansas Sen.-elect Nancy Landon Kassebaum and former Missouri Gov. Christopher S. Bond greeted the search committee at a reception at a private home Sunday night.

SS disabilities soar

The number of Americans drawing disability benefits under Social Security has doubled since 1970 - to 2.9 million and rising. What in the world is going on here?

There is no sign of an epidemic of disabling accidents or illnesses. What is happening is that another federal program has drifted out of control. And don't they all at one time or another?

Adding disability insurance to Social Security looked innocent enough when that bridge was crossed in the late 1950s. If Social Security could provide some economic security to workers after retirement, adding a bit to the payroll tax could also provide protection against loss of income from a disabling accident before retirement. After all, only a small percentage of the work force ever becomes disabled.

Yet the number of people drawing disability benefits has leaped far ahead of projections and the cost is going off the charts - from $3.1 billion in 1970 to an estimate of $14 billion this year.

At the heart of this financial disaster is a set of miscalculations about government programs and human beings.

"Accepting public benefits no longer bears the stigma it once did," according to Joseph Califano, secretary of Health, Education and Welfare. It's more than that, however. Congress ignored another facet of human behavior. The more liberal the definition of disability, and the more generous the benefits provided, the more people will consider themselves disabled and the longer their disability will last.

Social Security benefits were increased sharply early in this decade. It now develops that some workers receive more in disability benefits than they could earn if they were working.

Can such a person be blamed for lack of motivation in overcoming a disability to get back to work, or in seeking retraining for a different kind of job?

There were other miscalculations. Congress did not anticipate how much subjective judgment by doctors and lawyers would go into interpreting definitions of disability. Nor did it foresee court decisions which have broadened eligibility for benefits.

All this, of course, poses an unpleasant task for the next Congress. It must tighten definitions of disability in the Social Security law, overhaul a cumbersome and expensive administrative structure, and either trim back benefits or otherwise encourage more beneficiaries to return to work.

It always is politically difficult for Congress to trim back a social program which is overshooting its target. The task will be easier in 1978, however.

Reform of disability insurance can help forestall the ballooning cost of Social Security which is becoming a political liability for both Congress and the administration.

A dog's life, indeed

Years ago, records and sound-reproduction equipment and advertising thereof bore the image of an alert fox terrier with one ear cocked to a funnel-shaped loudspeaker and "His Master's Voice."

The dog became the trademark for RCA Corporation.

The symbol was dropped by RCA in more recent years — on the reasonable assumption, perhaps, that the sounds coming from record players were unrecognizable even to the sensitive canine ear. The company also may have been wary of suggesting that the animal was being exposed to today's jarring recorded rhythms and risking cruelty to animal charges.

But now Nipper, as he is known to nostalgia buffs, is being revived in a new RCA advertising program.

Sound equipment has come a long way since Nipper was born in the 1890s. Thomas A. Edison would be astounded at what has happened to his invention.

Nipper has seen it all in his unusually long dog's life.

INSIDE REPORT:

Columnist describes eventful 'Five Days of Peking'

By ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

PEKING — Five days of impassioned speeches and demonstrations in the streets of Peking have been replaced by mere wall posters, but left behind is toleration of democratic impulses that could profoundly change Communist China.

Although these may not have been five days that shook China, the effects are indelible. The unexpected demonstrations, unwittingly contributed to by this column, were muted by the regime's quiet go-slow signal. But at no time was overt disapproval sounded by the party apparatus.

The ambitious modernization program of Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping depends on those very students and workers who demonstrated for democracy to challenge the dead hand of the vast bureaucracy. For their part, the demonstrators don't want to provoke a comeback by the hard-liners being purged by Teng. Thus, that the demonstrators and Teng need each other is the best hope for cautious liberalization in China. Teng's desire to solidify control over the bureaucracy unintentionally triggered the drama here. Wall posters began appearing Nov. 19, denouncing Teng's enemies and the harsh repression of the April 5, 1976, Tien An Men square demonstration (repression including the purge of Teng himself). But by Nov. 22, the posters had vaulted beyond Teng's original purpose, demanding democratic elections and criticizing Mao Tse-tung.

The five days of Peking really began Saturday, Nov. 25, the day after we arrived in this wintry capital. Western journalists and diplo-passed up for us to relay to Teng. One asked for a re-evaluation of Mao's Cultural Revolution, another requested a televised trial of the radical "Gang of Four" headed by Mao's widow.

Evans

We repeated a few such comments near the end of our interview with Teng the next day, and Fraser relayed the replies to the Hsi Tan crowd that night. They went into an uproar when they heard Teng had defended the wall posters (though disagreeing with anti-Mao criticism). Close to 10,000 then marched two long blocks to Tien An Men square for a rally lasting into the night.

The front page story on our interview in the People's Daily the next day stressed Teng's support of Mao and call for stability, but that did not prevent two more exuberant nights of demonstrating and speeches in the huge square where one speaker (not 200 yards from an idealized color poster of Josef Stalin) declared China had adopted "Stalinist fascism." Similar rallies spread to Shanghai and Nanking. After five days, the regime put out the word by internal radio: cool it; stop the rallies and be careful about saying things you can't prove — especially criticism of Chairman Mao; instead, discuss these things in your factory and school units.

Although one new poster defended the demonstrations, the orders were followed. Thousands still gathered daily at Hsi Tan, but the high excitement was gone. However, there is no evidence of any order to end contacts with foreigners. In answer to our repeated questions, well-placed Chinese officials refused to criticize either the demonstrations or the part in them by Western newsmen; instead, they praised political involvement as conducive to China's "four modernizations."

The demonstrators so praised are young, mostly students but many workers. While better informed than most Chinese (several discussed Voice of America broadcasts), they are unlike the Russian dissidents — within the national mainstream. Contrary to disinformation dispensed by Soviet correspondents here, the demonstrators are not anti-regime; Teng is their man.

The regime's call for election of workshop leaders and other cadres to shape up the bureaucracy built demand for democracy on-top. While now selecting plant superintendents, said one poster put up during the demonstrations, "we have no say about the people who run the country." For that sentiment to surface in China after a generation of developing Socialist Man under the world's tightest thought-control system is nothing less than a tribute to the human spirit.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Is U.S. human rights violator?

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — One of Jimmy Carter's most publicized issues has been his championing of human rights. To the intense irritation of the countries that have been the targets of the president's darts, he has attacked regimes that lock up dissidents to silence their disruptive voices.

This pious attitude strikes many of our international neighbors as a breach of the old stricture against stone-throwing by people who live in glass houses. Their resentment will now receive a formal airing.

Today, on the 30th anniversary of the United Nations Declaration of Human Rights, the United States will be cited as a violator. A 900-page brief has been filed with the U.N., detailing the case histories of 50 individuals in the United States who allegedly have been imprisoned for their political beliefs.

What makes the document particularly embarrassing is that it will be filed today, not by vengeful regimes accused of repression by Carter, but by three respected organizations in this country: the Commission for Racial Justice of the United Church of Christ, the National Conference of Black Lawyers and the National Alliance Against Racism and Political Repression.

They will urge President Carter to "take a look at home" before condemning other nations for jailing political dissidents. As Charles Cobb, president of the Commission for Racial Justice, put it in a painfully odious comparison: "We're not as honest as the Russians; we incarcerate our prisoners under the guise of criminal activity."

Last summer, our outspoken U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young was severely criticized for speaking the unspeakable — admitting that there are, indeed, political prisoners in the United States. We were among the few who defended Young, citing the notorious case of Rev. Ben Chavis, one of the so-called Wilmington 10.

These were civil rights activists charged with the fire bombing of a Wilmington, N.C., grocery store during a time of racial disorder. Convicted in a state court largely on inflammatory and irrelevant testimony by non-witnesses and subsequently recanted testimony by one eyewitness, the Wilmington 10 were given Draconian sentences ranging from seven to 34 years.

Last month the Justice Department filed an 89-page brief asking a federal judge to overturn the convictions of the Wilmington 10. It was an unprecedented action.

The North Carolina prosecutor, Jay Stroud, offered a cynical explanation for the department's intervention. Noting that it was begun in 1976 and was pushed by the incoming Carter administration, Stroud told us: "Attorney General Griffin Bell's segregated past had just come out at the Senate confirmation hearings, and he needed some positive press on his racial views."

That comment could have been expected from Stroud, one of the new

CHARLEY REESE: Mideast has gotten more attention than it merits

AMMAN, Jordan — The man in a professional. He leaned back in his leather chair and said of the Middle East in general, "You know, two percent of us live very well, but when I think of the other 98 percent, I am afraid."

This is the mid-point in my trip over here and I promised not to become an instant expert. Still, you cannot stop your mind from forming conclusions.

Stated plainly, my conclusion now is that the Middle East has received vastly more attention than it merits. It has a lot of oil, and because of the cartel, it now has a large cash flow; but neither the oil nor the cartel will last forever. New oil reserves will be discovered elsewhere and gradually some other form of energy will replace oil as king.

When the big cash flow stops, the region will have to rely on its intrinsic merits and, sadly, they are few.

At the turn of the century, the Middle East was important because of its location: a bridge between Africa and Europe. The age of the jet has greatly minimized that value.

Another Arab acquaintance remarked, "God made it a desert and there is nothing man can do about it." Lack of arable land is another weakness. In many areas there simply isn't enough water and the more the population grows, the more this will become a problem.

But there are some social weaknesses, too. My professional friend mentioned one of them: Despite the great flow of cash into parts of the Middle East most of it is flowing into a few pockets. There is no broad-based distribution of wealth and no existing economic structure to handle a broader distribution.

One reason so many petro dollars are invested in Europe and America is that in a desert there is not a heck of a lot you can do with money.

Another weakness is in the government. Leaders in the Middle East either inherit power or gain it by coup. The Jordanians were lucky when they drew King Hussein, who is both benevolent and very smart, but history has shown that a womb is not a reliable provider of leaders. The best of the Roman emperors, Marcus Aurelius, was succeeded by one of the worst, his son Commodus.

Palace coups and army barracks are not good training grounds either. The man who gets power by coup is always fearful of later coups, and so tends to surround himself with weak people, which makes for poor government. That seems evident in Egypt.

Finally, the Middle East is the last region in the world where church and state are still married. Consequently it suffers the same problems medieval Europe did when church and state were constantly quarreling over their respective jurisdictions.

Iran is a good example of where the quarrel has come close to toppling the government. Even in Jordan, the judicial system is hampered by the power of the religious courts.

These are the factors that make me skeptical when I hear the dream of a resurgence of the Arab world verbalized by every leader and at every private gathering of the Arab intelligentsia.

I hope, for the sake of the Arab people, the region makes it, but the Middle East is a good illustration of the basic rule of economics. Wealth is not money, but goods and services. The Arab world at present has plenty of money, but few goods and services, and few resources with which to create them.

To illustrate this point, there is not a single Arab nation that has an army or even a village police force armed with Arab-made weapons.

Mark Russell says

Another Russian musician has gone over the wall. At this rate, the day is approaching when concert-goers in Moscow will file into an auditorium and listen to tapes.

I may be just as guilty as the Russian authorities when it comes to artistic freedom in music. I'm all for it — until I turn on the radio.

I'm for complete creative license — the total freedom which allows me to cut Mick Jagger's guitar chord.

Only in this cherished democracy can an unfitted citizen enjoy the liberty to smash a Debby Boone record to bits.

Or better yet — the ultimate artistic freedom — going to a rock concert and pulling the power switches.

Begin, Sadat renew commitments to peace

By RICHARD BLYSTONE

OSLO, Norway (AP) — Menachem Begin and Anwar Sadat renewed their commitments to seek an Arab-Israeli peace and praised President Carter's help at a gala Nobel Peace Prize presentation as 5,000 Norwegians protested the award to them.

The Israeli prime minister and the Egyptian president shared the peace prize and its $165,000 stipend, but only Begin was present at Sunday's ceremony behind the thick stone walls of Oslo's Akershus Castle. The heavily-guarded 14th-century fortress was used for the first time because of security concerns.

Sadat, pleading the pressure of diplomatic efforts to revive the stalled peace negotiations, sent an emissary, Sayed Ahmed Marei, to read his message and receive his prize.

Nine other winners of Nobel prizes for the sciences and literature, including six Americans, received their gold medals and checks from Sweden's King Carl Gustaf at a ceremony in Stockholm.

Begin, renewing the pledge he made when Sadat visited Jerusalem in November 1977 to sow the seeds of peace, promised, "No more wars, no more bloodshed. We shall negotiate and reach agreement."

Sadat's message referred to the current deadlock and said: "We will spare no effort, we will not tire or despair, we will not lose faith, and we are confident that in the end our aim will be achieved."

Both men praised President Carter, who met with them at Camp David last September to draft agreements laying the groundwork for peace.

Sadat said Carter's "single efforts to overcome obstacles in the way to peace deserves our keenest appreciation." Begin said the U.S. president at the Camp David summit "unforgettably invested unsparring effort, untiring energy and great devotion in the peacemaking process."

While the prize was being awarded in Oslo, Sadat was meeting in Cairo with Secretary of State Cyrus Vance, who was sent to the Middle East by Carter to try to break the Israeli-Egyptian deadlock. Egyptian officials said Sadat did not go to Oslo because he blames the deadlock on Israeli "stubbornness."

Egypt is demanding a timetable for Palestinian self-rule on the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River and in the Gaza Strip, while the Israelis fear if they accept a timetable and it is not met, Egypt might abrogate the entire treaty.

The Egyptians also object to a proposed treaty provision barring their participation in any future wars between Israel and other Arab states.

The crowd of demonstrators was made up mainly of supporters of the Palestine Liberation Organization. They marched through downtown Oslo in near-zero temperatures chanting anti-Begin slogans and calling for support for the PLO.

"We are against the award to Begin because he is a terrorist," said one protester, "and also against Sadat, but not so much."

The Egyptian president's peace overtures to Israel have incurred the enmity of much of the Arab world, including the Palestinians, who fear he will not get them the separate state they want.

Norwegian officials said it was the biggest protest against a peace prize selection in the award's 77-year history. But John Sannes, a member of the prize committee, said: "Despite having seen both street and mass media protests against this award, the committee would not for one moment regret the decision." He spoke at a banquet for the recipients held after the awards ceremony.

At the ceremony in Stockholm, Americans were honored for work in physics, economics, literature and medicine.

The physics prize was shared by Arno A. Penzias and Robert W. Wilson, both of Bell Laboratories in New Jersey, and Pyotr I. Kapitsa of the Soviet Union. In medicine, the prize went to Daniel Nathans and Hamilton C. Smith of Johns Hopkins University, and Werner Arber of Switzerland. The economics prize went to Herbert A. Simon of Carnegie-Mellon University, and Isaac Bashevis Singer of New York City got the literature award. Peter Mitchell of Britain was cited for his work in chemistry.

The annual awards are a legacy of Alfred Nobel of Sweden, the inventor of dynamite, who provided for them in his will.

Sources deny report that Vietnam moved troops to Cambodian border

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Reliable sources have discounted a week-end report that Vietnam moved its Laotian-based troops to the Laotian-Cambodian border in a possible prelude to invading Cambodia from the north.

On Sunday, the English-language Bangkok Post quoted a senior Thai military officer as saying Vietnam had moved most of its 40,000-man contingent in Laos to the border.

But sources said today there have been no unusual movements recently of Vietnamese troops. The sources, who asked not to be identified, said a sizable Vietnamese force has been stationed near the southern end of the Laotian panhandle for several months, but not in Laos.

Vietnam, an ally of Laos, is engaged in border fighting with Cambodia.

Sniper kills two in Irving; Police investigate TV plot

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Was the sniper who shot two persons to death with a deer rifle Saturday night in Irving acting out a TV network drama that was aired earlier in the day?

The possibility was one of the skippy leads Irving police pursued today as they investigated the shooting deaths of a 43-year-old Arlington man and a 12-year-old Plano boy.

The victims were shot in a five-minute span in vehicles that were going west on U.S. 183 about two miles east of Dallas-Fort Worth Airport.

In Saturday's showing of the television program, "CHIPS" — which stands for California Highway Patrol — a youth caused a major freeway accident by firing a pellet gun at passing motorists from an overpass.

"It could be connected or could not be. We just don't know," said Sgt. W.H. Maulden of the Irving Police Department.

Steven Thomas Gauden, 12, of Plano was shot in the head shortly before 11 p.m. Saturday as he sat in the rear seat of his family's station wagon. The Gauden family had just watched Plano's Wildcats move into Texas' Class 4A semifinals with a victory in Texas Stadium over Dallas Carter.

Raymond Douglas Andrews, 43, of Arlington was shot between the eyes as he drove his station wagon toward his home after he and his wife had attended a square dance. His wife managed to get the vehicle safely to the side of the road.

Police said the Gauden boy was struck by a shot apparently fired from the westbound freeway service road near the Esters Road exit.

Authorities theorizing the sharpshooter then apparently drove to the Valley View Road overpass, where he chose Andrews as his next victim.

The unseen killer apparently left only a spent rifle cartridge behind.

Mrs. Andrews told police she saw the Gauden family waving frantically for help. As her husband slowed down, a second deadly shot rang out, killing Andrews instantly.

Fiedler hoping to return for New Year's Eve

BOSTON (AP) — Arthur Fiedler, conductor of the renowned Boston Pops Orchestra, hopes to be back on the podium for the nationally televised New Year's Eve "Pops" concert, an orchestra spokesman says.

Fiedler was reported in satisfactory condition early today at Tufts New England Medical Center Hospital where he was readmitted Saturday with undisclosed ailments.

Fiedler, who will be 81 Dec. 17, re-entered the hospital for therapy and will not be conducting for at least three weeks. He was hospitalized from Nov. 29 to Dec. 1.

More anti-shah marches expected

Hundreds of Shiite Moslem religious leaders join a rally held Sunday in Tehran. Their raised hands signify support for Ayatollah Khomeini, currently in exile. (AP Laserphoto)

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Thousands massed in the center of Tehran today for religious processions that were expected to turn into more demonstrations of opposition to Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi.

Opposition leaders were jubilant over a peaceful protest march by hundreds of thousands in Tehran Sunday. They called it a "referendum in the streets," and one of them, Karim Sanjaby, said the turnout demonstrated that the people want "to put an end to the dictatorial, authoritarian and corrupt regime."

As they did Sunday, police and troops stayed away from the swelling crowd but waited on the alert in side streets.

Peaceful anti-shah marches were reported Sunday in other cities throughout the country, but in Hamadan, 250 miles southwest of Tehran, the city's civilian governor was wounded seriously and his bodyguard killed by a gunman outside the governor's house.

Police killed the assassin. Informed sources said it was believed he belonged to an underground religious group sworn to overthrow the shah because of his Westernization campaign. It was the first attack on a leading official since October, when a soldier killed the military governor and chief of police in Jahrum, southern Iran.

Today is Ashura, the climax of Moharram, a holy month of mourning for the martyred founder of Iran's dominant Shiite Moslem sect. After morning prayers in the mosques, Ashura marchers usually flagellate themselves, and the military government at first banned the processions. But the ban was lifted after religious leaders reportedly assured the government the processions would be peaceful.

Estimates of the turnout Sunday ranged from the government's estimate of 400,000 to 2 million claimed by organizers of the march. They paraded for 5 1/2 miles through the city, marching for six hours with banners and placards attacking the shah.

"No blood was spilled," an official of Sanjaby's National Front said. "The message we sent to the palace today cannot be ignored. He has to listen or risk a bloodbath."

An estimated 1,000-2,000 Iranians have died this year in anti-shah protests, including about 60 demonstrators this month. The march Sunday was led by the chief Shiite religious leader in Tehran, 70-year-old Ayatollah Telegahni, and Sanjaby, 71. Moslem priests called mullahs led chanting with bullhorns, and women sprinkled Sanjaby with perfume as a sign of respect.

University students told American reporters: "Tell Jimmy Carter we want democracy and not a royal tyrant." Religious and political leaders have united in calling for the resignation of the shah. Religious opponents of the 59-year-old monarch say Moslem values have been perverted by his rush to westernize Iranian life, while his political opponents attack the regime's use of the secret police to stifle dissent and the corruption that is widespread in official circles.

Carter has stressed his support for the shah but has said the United States will not intervene. Western support for the shah, a major buyer of American arms and supplier of oil to Europe, Japan, Israel and South Africa, has bred hostility to Americans and Europeans working in Iran.

Alternatives to shah bleak, official reveals

By GEORGE GEDDA

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration has given full backing to the Shah of Iran without explaining why his survival is so important to U.S. national security.

The reason, one official said, is simple: Some of the alternatives to the shah are so bleak that public discussion of them could alarm the American people. One official said a "major crisis" could be at hand if the shah is forced from office. Both officials asked not to be identified.

The principal concern is that the entire Persian Gulf could be up for grabs if Iran, the most populous and militarily powerful country in the area, falls into unfriendly hands.

One possibility in a post-shah era is the emergence of a staunchly Moslem regime closely identified with radical Arab states such as Libya. Those states have made the shah's oyster part of their struggle against Israel, which now receives a substantial portion of its oil imports from Iran.

Most of the opposition to the shah is being directed by Ayatollah Khomeini, an Islamic militant with headquarters in Paris.

Orthodox Moslems oppose what they see as an erosion of traditional Islamic values resulting from the shah's modernization campaign. Leftists, students and a rising middle class oppose the shah's absolute rule.

A more alarming scenario was outlined by a former senior government official with long experience in Iranian affairs:

The shah abdicates and is replaced by an Army-run government that is unable to cope with the continuing turmoil and eventually resigns. In the ensuing chaos, a new regime with pro-Soviet tendencies takes power.

Alarm spreads throughout the area, particularly in Saudi Arabia, which has always looked to Iran as a buffer against Moscow.

The Saudis, finding themselves almost encircled by pro-Soviet regimes — Ethiopia and South Yemen to the southwest, Iraq to the north and Iran to the northeast — move to accommodate themselves to the new political alignment by making overtures to Moscow. The other Persian Gulf states — Kuwait, Bahrain, Qatar and Oman — quickly follow suit.

Continuing with his scenario, the former official who asked to remain anonymous said the Persian Gulf states provide forceful assurances to the West that oil shipments will continue, pointing out that the oil producers need foreign exchange as much as the importing nations need oil.

But the United States, Japan and Western European countries are nervous, so the scenario goes. What happens during a major East-West confrontation? Could not the Soviets force the West to retreat by persuading their new allies in the Persian Gulf to impose an embargo on oil shipments?

The former official, along with current officials, do not believe the shah's resignation will necessarily touch off such a chain of events. Several officials described that scenario as "pure fantasy" or "totally unrealistic."

Another official said it is doubtful that a pro-Soviet regime will take power in Tehran because of what he characterized as a "total absence" of pro-communist leaders in Iran with broad support.

A key source of concern is Soviet intentions. By its past actions, Moscow has shown strong interest in gaining control over the warm water ports and the petroleum resources in the Persian Gulf. Recent U.S. estimates have indicated that the Soviets, in the next decade, may suffer an oil shortage.

Officials recall that the Soviets occupied a section of northern Iran a full year after World War II ended despite promises they would withdraw immediately upon the conclusion of the war.

Recent events in Afghanistan, Iran's eastern neighbor, have not been reassuring to the West. A regime sympathetic to Moscow took power in April, and last week the two countries signed a 20-year treaty of friendship and cooperation.

The number of Soviet military advisers present in Afghanistan has increased greatly since April. The current figure is thought to be 3,000 to 4,000.

But the administration has not yet given up on the shah. Officials believe the worst may be over if he can last past this week when religious demonstrations are expected to pose the greatest threat to the monarchy to date.

HOROSCOPE

By CARROLL RIGHTER

(Tues., Dec. 12)

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Look into whatever your basic interests are and see how you can get them in proper order for putting them into effect during the next good day. Your mind is logically suited to making decisions you can carry through with later.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Get whatever information you need for a project you have in mind before putting it into operation. Contact friends for whom you have had little time lately.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Do whatever will help you to make your money go farther. Set up a better budget for the future that you can really follow.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Improve your health and appearance where necessary. Don't neglect pressing business matters. Enjoy company of good friends.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Take care of pesky chores you have been putting aside and have more order about you. Confer with an expert in a matter that is important to your welfare.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Concentrate on what you can do for good friends and vice versa today. You can gain a personal aim if you apply yourself more seriously.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You have to study more if you are to gain a fine goal you have in mind. Talking your position over with one who is influential can be most helpful.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Try a new tack where a project you are working on has you stymied. Go after the data you need. Make right contacts and get good results.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Think about any agreements you have made and carry through with them without delay. Do little favors for loved ones and have more harmony.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Be more willing to do those small favors for associates that will please them and improve the relationship. Do whatever will give you added prestige in the community.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Get your work done even though there may be some delay, but take them in your stride. Listening to what co-workers have to say is wise. Adopt a more cooperative spirit.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You want to go out socially but have to plan early for best results. Be thoughtful of loved ones and gain favors. Avoid one who likes to put you in a bad light with others.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Take care you do not annoy those at home. Improve home surroundings where you can. Not a good day for entertaining.

EDITOR'S NOTE—Ever go to a Christmas party and feel glum? Well, a lot of those people celebrating around you feel glum, too. They're just conditioned to look jolly.

By TERRY KIRKPATRICK
AP Newsfeatures Writer

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — 'Tis the season to be jolly, but for many people all the fa la la la is fake. For them, Christmas is a time of disappointment, anxiety or even depression.

They think everyone else finds warmth and love in the season; or their efforts to make dreams come true fizzle, or they are thrust back into unhappy family settings.

A successful businessman makes the rounds at Christmas parties and is repeatedly praised for his attainment. But he is miserable because he considers himself a failure. The holiday festivities bring that long festering belief into the open.

A woman drags her family into the snow to hunt for a Christmas tree, the outing to be topped by carols and chestnuts around the fire. It takes too long and it's cold. Her husband resents missing the football game. The kids whine the whole way and hate the chestnuts. My family ruined my Christmas, she tells her psychologist.

A young man knows that if he spends Christmas with his widowed mother, as she wants, she will criticize him endlessly and they will argue all day. If he stays alone, he will spend Christmas alone and feel guilty. A few days before Christmas he tries to take his life.

In most cases, the holidays only amplify existing problems, psychologists say. Well-adjusted people manage the season okay.

At the University of Rochester Medical Center, Dr. Rita Underberg, associate professor of psychiatry, says 80 percent of her patients — parents already having trouble with their children — find their situations worse at Christmas.

Among her acquaintances outside of work, "I hear more about disappointments than I hear about pleasure at Christmas." And the season brings a big increase in the number of students coming in anxious, angry, needing to talk about going home.

"It's a fairly common phenomenon for people with serious emotional problems — those requiring treatment — which is 10 to 20 percent of the population," says Dr. Werner Mendel, a professor of psychiatry at the University of Southern California.

"Christmas is merchandized as a holiday of love and togetherness of the family. These people feel more alienated. They think everybody is at home, warm and loving, around the Christmas tree, and they are out in the cold with their nose pressed against the window pane."

For others there is disappointment that began in childhood. It results from the discrepancy between their picture postcard vision of Christmas and what actually happens.

"There's a certain depression built into the holidays," Dr. Mendel says. "We've had to give up infantile fantasies about Santa Claus. If you want a present, you have to go out and buy it."

The trouble can begin as early as Thanksgiving when commercial hype sets in, and lasts until New Year's Day. Dr. Charles Rotman, a psychologist at Babson College in Wellesley, Mass., notes New Year's is for review and resolution and is tough for an unhappy person.

"It's like the Scrooge story. He has to take into account what he's done over the year to his employees and to himself."

Christmas "brings together people who have for some reason avoided being together," Dr. Underberg says. "It brings back past problems and generates new ones."

Some problems are serious enough to require professional help.

Be wary of the advice of friends if you're depressed, Dr. Rotman says. "It's helpful up to a point, but sometimes do-gooders can magnify a problem by saying it will get better. It increases the frustration." Better to see a professional, he says.

And stay active. Avoid long periods with nothing to do but think. Some people work or travel during the holidays.

Don't overschedule yourself, Dr. Underberg says. Too much buying, baking and entertaining brings on fatigue.

Play down material things. Children fall prey to greed, induced by advertising. Replace some toys with gifts of time. "That's a lot more grabby than a train set." And try to give them a sense of order during the time when their routines are shattered.

DEAR ABBY

Tired of being a Yule turkey

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: A few years ago you ran an article about a woman who never cooked her own Thanksgiving or Christmas dinner. Instead, she went to her mother's or her mother-in-law's. She wrote to say that she wishes now that she had done her own holiday dinners.

That letter was terrific. If you could publish it again, it would be a great help to a lot of people.

I am a grandmother who wishes my married children would cook their own holiday dinners and invite me as a guest.—PAID MY DUES

DEAR ABBY: It wasn't hard to find, and here it is:

DEAR ABBY: I've been reading your column for years, and around holiday time someone always asks, "Should we go to his mother's or to my mother's for Thanksgiving and Christmas dinner?" Your answer has always been: "Why not alternate?"

Abby, my husband and I struggled with that problem for years. We resolved it according to your suggestion. Both sets of parents lived nearby and it seemed the only fair thing to do. So for 22 years, we spent Thanksgiving and Christmas in their homes instead of our own.

It never dawned on us until this year—now that our children are ready to strike out on their own—that we never developed our own holiday traditions. We always went to Grandma's for the holidays. She insisted on doing all the cooking herself, then complained for months about how much work it was and how tired she got. When we, her daughters and daughter-in-law, asked if we could bring something for the dinner, she wouldn't hear of it. When we brought food without asking her, she refused to serve it, so we finally gave up.

I realize now what a high price I've paid over the years for peace in the family. I wish I hadn't.

Abby, please urge young marrieds to dare to have their own holiday celebrations in their own homes. Suggest that they invite their parents and grandparents, who might even be relieved to be finally free of the burden of entertaining three generations.—DOING MY OWN THING

DEAR DOING: Thank you for an excellent letter. Perhaps it will inspire others to do their own thing too. It makes a lot of sense.

Keep expectations realistic. "I think people can have a good time if they don't become overdedicated to the notion that you must have a good time, and if you don't you better tell everybody that you did."

Don't impose your dreams on others. "You may be able to drag the family out into the snow but they will be grumpy. It's not the tree business; it's respect for another's ideas. A family should decide together what they would enjoy doing."

But a family is not a democracy, she says. Children don't have equal weight. Parents should make major decisions together and present these as non-negotiables around which children have a say in smaller plans. Going to Aunt Martha's to find a Christmas tree, for instance.

The nub of Dr. Underberg's work with parents is teaching how to be productive parents. One way is to have a clear, specific goal, stated concisely and firmly.

BRADY — Services for Mrs. Frank (Nell E.) Morgan, 84, aunt of Bill Moonen of Midland, were to be at 10 a.m. today in Sacred Heart Cathedral here with the Rev. Benedict Zientek officiating. Burial was to be in Calvary Cemetery.

Rosary was said Sunday in Johnson's Funeral Home.

Mrs. Morgan died Friday in a Brady nursing home.

She had been a Brady resident since 1977 and had lived in San Angelo before moving here. Mrs. Morgan was born June 16, 1894, in Rocky Ford, Colo. She was married to Frank Morgan in 1920 in San Angelo. Her husband preceded her in death in 1946. She was a member of the Sacred Heart Church, the Alter Society and the Third Order of St. Francis.

Survivors include a niece and three other nephews.

Thane Akins, representing the City Council; Grant Billingsley and Fred Tyler, representing the Midland Chamber of Commerce; Joe Dominy of Midland National Bank; Douglas Henson of First National Bank; Rocky Ford; Jack Hilliard of Texas Electric Service Co., and Joe Kloesel of Drilco.

The Midland chamber is host for this year's tour. Also sending delegates are Odessa, Abilene, Amarillo, Big Spring, Lamesa, Lubbock, Mineral Wells and San Angelo.

Air Force grounds 245 C-130s after five airmen perish in crash

HOPKINSVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Moments after radioing it was having engine problems, an Air Force C-130 Hercules crashed into a farm three miles short of the Fort Campbell field, killing all five airmen aboard.

The Air Force then ordered the grounding of 245 of the giant turbo-prop cargo planes, pending immediate inspection.

The restriction applies to C-130 Hercules aircraft built prior to 1973, said Ed Belz, information officer for the Military Air Command division at Scott Air Force Base in Belleville, Ill.

The order was issued on the basis of a radio report from crewmen prior to the crash that they were having engine control problems, Belz said.

Lt. Col. A.T. Brainerd, public information officer at the base, said the crash followed a training exercise at 7:15 a.m. Sunday.

Brainerd said the plane had performed a "touch and go" practice landing, in which the landing gear touch the ground and the plane then pulls back up.

"They had done a touch and go but were a little early on their approach, so they pulled back up and circled west over the base," Brainerd said. "They were coming in line on the final approach when the pilot radioed they were having throttle problems."

Asked whether the pilot specified the nature of the problems, Brainerd replied: "That's all the recorder said. They were having throttle problems."

It was the seventh fatal crash of a C-130 from the Little Rock, Ark., base since the planes were deployed there in 1970. Ten persons died in 1971 in the crash of a plane shortly after take-off.

The plane crashed 200 yards from the farmhouse of Mr. and Mrs. J.M. Pendleton.

"There was an explosion that shook my house," said Mrs. Pendleton. "I figured it was a plane. I thought it had hit my house. My husband heard the engines rev before the crash. We ran to the window and it was all in flames."

Korean voters to elect new Assembly

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Voters go to the polls Tuesday to elect 154 members of the National Assembly after one of the most peaceful campaigns since Korea's independence in 1945.

Most experts expect President Park Chung-hee's Democratic Republican Party to win only 75 seats. Although two members are elected from each of the 77 districts, Park's party is running only one candidate in each, and two of them are expected to lose.

But Park will retain a majority of nearly 2-to-1 since under the 1972 constitution he appoints 77 assembly members.

Election officials predicted about 70 percent of the 19.4 million registered voters would cast ballots.

Lonely pilot carries out plan to commit suicide by allowing private plane to crash

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — The pilot's voice over the radio said he was lonely. It said he planned to allow his plane to run out of fuel and crash, say Portland air controllers.

About two hours later, crew members of a Navy plane and a Coast Guard helicopter patrolling the Pacific saw a Cessna 150 drop straight into the clouds 50 miles west of Astoria, Ore., said Lt. Phillip Johnson of the Coast Guard office at Seattle.

The helicopter crew searched for an hour but found no sign of either the plane or the pilot, Lesley Reynolds. The search was suspended.

Hal Lindsay, regional Federal Aviation Administration duty officer in Seattle, said the plane evidently nose-dived into the ocean from an altitude of 1,000 feet early Sunday. Reynolds, a 28-year-old Salem, Ore., bus driver, presumably died, he said.

Reynolds' parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lesley Reynolds Sr. of Grand Ronde, Ore., said Sunday that they knew of no reason their son would commit suicide.

Dorothy Ling, whose husband, Warren, is a partner in the tour bus company for which Reynolds worked, said, "He was a jewel of a person, and he got along with everybody."

The FAA said Reynolds radioed the control tower at Portland International Airport shortly before midnight Saturday. After saying that he wanted to talk to someone, Reynolds informed controllers of his suicide plan, officials said. The controllers tried to talk him out of it.

Lindsay said the pilot of a Continental Airlines jet in the vicinity joined in trying to convince Reynolds to change his plan.

The FAA reported that the plane, which was registered to Reynolds, left the Salem airport about 45 minutes before the radio conversation.

The helicopter crew said the plane's engine quit at 9,000 feet, the

Fortune favors bold in tournament play

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Fortune favors the bold bridge player, as we see in today's hand, played recently in Barbados during the Central American and Caribbean Championships.

Opening lead — ♠K

Venezuelan expert Freddy Ecker led the king of diamonds. What would you do next in his place? Most of the contestants shifted to the queen of spades, but this got them nowhere. With no losers in spades, South could concentrate on finding the winning play in trumps.

There are only two reasonable ways of playing the trumps. One is to take two finesses through West; the other, to lead a heart to the ace and then another heart from dummy.

Playing the ace works better if East happens to have the doubleton K-Q. Taking two finesses works better if West has K-Q-5, K-Q-2 or K-Q-5-2. You don't need the exact figures to see that taking two finesses is a better line of play.

OWN DEVICES

Left to their own devices, most declarers took two finesses. Not surprising in an international championship.

Freddy Ecker gave declarer something to think about by leading the deuce of hearts at the second trick. South thought that West couldn't possibly be leading from K-Q-2 or from K-Q-5-2; so he stepped up with dummy's ace of hearts.

Down one.

DAILY QUESTION

With both sides vulnerable the opponent at your right deals and bids one heart. You hold: S-QJ96; H-KQ2; D-AK6; C-932. What do you say?

ANSWER: Pass. Avoid over-calling on completely balanced distribution unless you have about 17 points in high cards.

Christmas catalogs jammed with calories

By HUGH MULLIGAN AP Special Correspondent

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — For the man or woman who has everything, 'tis the season to buy folly: order something outrageous from those gorgeous catalogs sent out by the posh department stores.

You know, an ermine collar and a diamond studded leash for his or her cheetta; return tickets on the Concorde and lunch for two at Tour d'Argent in Paris; a raccoon coat; 50-year seats at the Sugar bowl and a flask full of 25-year-old Napoleon brandy; his and hers matching Lear jets with leather seats by Gucci, wall fabrics by Pucci and jump suits by Cucchi — that sort of madcap gift which numbers you among the new generation.

Now that Walter Cronkite isn't coming to dinner and is going to court instead, the Neiman-Marcus burgers. That way an opponent testily waiting for the next move could munch on a pawn or a knight already removed from the board or simply dig in and call for a draw.

—TV sports, if played with digestible paraphernalia, could find a whole new range of product sponsors. The Reggie candy bar could be replaced by the succulent Reggie bat, suitable for swallowing instead of tossing into the dugout after every strike-out.

Golfers instead of chucking the ball over the clubhouse roof after a missed putt on the 18th green could simply insert it into their also edible scorecard and chew up their frustrations like a meatball sandwich.

A quarterback instructed to eat up the clock would immediately dine on the handoff.

Horseplayers, if the sport became more digestible, would no longer have to eat their hearts out when the favorite ran out of the money. In claiming races, the offending quadruped could be delivered to the track kitchen and served up as a succulent thorough-burger.

The day may not be too far off, if this eating what you're playing craze ever catches on, when Craig Claiborne will be replacing Howard Cosell as the Monday night mouthful.

Christmas catalog wins by a rather delicious default over its Houston rival in offering the season's most absurdly extravagant gift.

Sakowitz, the Houston emporium, invited customers to "blow the socks off the bridge club" by staging the most prodigious dinner party ever with the likes of Cronkite, Neil Armstrong, George Allen, Uri Geller, Buckminster Fuller and similar celebrities arrayed around the groaning board for a mere $94,125.

But that was before Walter wanted out and to the admen's tongue in cheek inserted thumb in nostril and hollered for his lawyers.

Meanwhile, over in Dallas, apparently without this particular dinner party in mind, the catalog copy writers at Neiman-Marcus came up with "the greatest finale to a dinner party ever conceived."

And what, alas and alack, a Santa's ho-ho-ho-ho and a fa, la, la, la, do you think that could be? Why — what else — but an entirely edible Monopoly game.

Get this: "From board to dice (reading from page one of the catalog) each and every familiar part is made of delectable and completely edible candy."

The board is made of milk chocolate, with the electric company, the boardwalk, Vermont Avenue, In Jail, question mark and other stop offs etched in confectioners sugar. The markers, like the houses and the factories, are done in dark chocolate, and the play money is butter cream, etc.

"Pass go and you'll collect 200 calories," trumpet the catalog carolers.

You'll also drop 600 bucks, which is the price of this tasteful Christmas present. But, as the admen add, "this confectioner's coup may last only one game but your creativity as a host will linger deliciously."

Come to think of it, though, edible games and toys might be a welcome addition in many a household this Christmas. No picking up after the children when their attention spans have wilted and their little tempers are frayed. No lost pieces to be replaced. No fighting over who plays next. No cardboard game cartons to be crammed into already crammed closets. Why not risk a tummy ache or two from glutting down Park Place and the Oriental Avenue in exchange for such peace of mind and room of closet?

And, with the games craze still sweeping suburbia, the gourmet possibilities are endless: —Edible Scrabble for those who need to eat their words.

—Otello, the popular new Japanese game, done up as such, the delicious raw fish, and played on low legged tables of Kobi beef propped up on pegs of tempura shrimp with all moves made only by chopsticks.

—Backgammon with an authentic Arab flair on a board of pita bread sectioned off in alternate rows of humous and tehina, using goats' eyes for the dice and cubes of lamb shish-kabob for markers.

—A Bobby Fischer-Boris Spassky chess set: the board checkered with squares of black Russian caviar and Mom's American apple pie, the white pieces made of pastry forms filled with chicken Kiev, and the black molded from charbroiled ham-

Krystyna Janda typifies Poland

By DAVID MINTHORN

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — She gained instant fame in her first film as co-star of Poland's daring political drama, "The Man of Marble."

Now actress Krystyna Janda is a symbol of Poland's restless young generation at a time of taboo-shattering changes in screen productions from the state-owned film industry.

"The men of the Polish film industry have opened their desk drawers and discovered contemporary scripts waiting years for production," the blonde actress said in an interview.

"The Man of Marble" was considered too controversial a script and stayed in the drawer for 11 years before director Andrzej Wajda brought it to the screen, winning the critics' award at the 1978 Cannes Film Festival.

"We set a precedent for other directors to follow," Miss Janda said, gesturing with a cigarette.

In the film, the 26-year-old actress plays a novice television reporter who uncovers the story of a Polish bricklayer whose life is ruined in the Communist Party purges of the 1950s.

On trumped-up charges, the one-time worker hero is expelled from the party, fired from his job, harassed by secret police and betrayed by his wife. The incidents are shown in flashbacks as the young woman reporter probes his past.

The film caused a sensation in Poland and abroad because it dealt for the first time with class injustice in the Polish system.

"The most important thing is that we now have the freedom to talk about it as any normal problem," Miss Janda said. "The Polish Republic won't collapse as a result of this."

She was fresh out of acting school when Wajda, Poland's most renowned director, chose her for the part.

"I did not know what type of film we were making. Wajda showed me the rushes but I never saw the complete version until the premiere in Warsaw," Miss Janda said.

"The audience started debating the film at once, and my reaction was the same. Sure it was controversial, but the theme was true to life," she said.

Miss Janda and her actor-husband, Andrzej Seweryn, own their high-rise apartment on the outskirts of Warsaw. They have a 4-year-old daughter, Elzbieta, and a cocker spaniel puppy.

The apartment is luxurious by Polish standards, with a penthouse-style living room connected to the kitchen, bedrooms and study below by a winding staircase.

A contract player at one of Warsaw's 22 state theaters, Miss Janda appears 12 times a month in stage productions. Three nights a week she sings throaty ballads in a Warsaw cabaret.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON Safety regulations for toys necessary

Dear Dr. Solomon: I heard on a news broadcast that the federal government is planning to issue regulations concerning children's toys. It seems that some of the bureaucrats are worried that items like buttons from toy animals may come off and be taken into the child's mouth. Is this really such an important issue that the government has to become involved? It seems to me like a case of overkill. —Tim

Toy-play broadcasters often refer to the hazards of playing on an artificial surface, claiming it causes many injuries. Is this a fact or just their opinion? —Jerry

Dear Jerry: There is reason to believe that artificial turf does, in fact, pose a threat of injury to athletes. The National Football League Player Association has charged that the artificial covering results in knee, ankle and foot injuries and causes burns and cartilage and ligament tears.

The Players Assn.'s claim has been supported by a study conducted by the Standard Research Institute. The study showed that the five professional football fields with the highest major injury rates had artificial turf; the four with the lowest injury rates had natural grass. These findings were bolstered still further by a study conducted by the Pennsylvania State University Sports Research Institute. It, too, found that foot, knee and ankle injuries among college athletes occur more often on artificial surfaces than on grass.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I'm going to have cataract surgery. Do you think my eyesight will be improved and if so, by how much? —Mrs. V.M.

Dear Mrs. M.V.: Your eye doctor will probably be able to tell you approximately how much improvement you can expect from cataract surgery. Just remember, no operation will make aged eyes young again. But with the combination of surgery and proper corrective lenses, visual improvement is almost a certainty in the vast majority of cases. Good luck.

Dear Tim: You may be surprised to learn that the most common cause of accidental death of children in the home is the aspiration of foreign objects into the lungs. In the United States alone, about 2,000 children a year die in this fashion.

Of course not every instance of a child taking something into his or her mouth ends so drastically; usually the child simply spits out the object. But at other times, the object enters the larynx, the trachea or bronchi—and the result can be tragic.

Paradoxically, holiday time may be one of the more hazardous periods for children. Edibles like peanuts, candies, and raisins may be inhaled. And buttons, beads, or knobs can come loose from toys and stuffed animals.

I think that when the lives of children are at stake, the government does have a responsibility to prohibit the manufacture of unsafe toys. Of course, this does not eliminate the need for continued vigilance on the part of parents to prevent their children from swallowing nonedible objects.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Football play-

Bassett's Bassets known as championship hounds

By BOB INGLE

WOODINVILLE, Wash. (AP)—Bassett's Bassets is not an item from the Department of Redundancy Department.

It's a kennel from which some of the nation's champion basset hounds have come — those sad-eyed, floppy-eared, long-bodied, short-legged canines used in ads selling everything from shoes to dog food.

Long before others discovered their appeal, Richard Bassett was fascinated by them, at first because of the name. "I found it in an encyclopedia when I was a boy," he says.

After marriage, Bassett says, he and his wife "thought it would be fun to have a dog with that name. It wasn't so easy.

There were only six breeders in the nation — all on the East Coast."

They were asking $200 a pup, too much for new-layeds, but finally they located two on this side of the continent.

In 1952 they entered their favorite, Johnny, in nine shows and got one ribbon. "Even the judges hadn't heard of them. One said, 'What's that?'" recalls Mrs. Bassett.

But they persisted, finally importing a dog from England — Rossington Barrister, who made the 36-hour flight when he was 3 months old. He sired 23 champions.

The basset hound originated in a Normandy monastery, but the English have done the most to develop the breed, Bassett says.

Since each pup usually carries the name of the kennel in its registered name — not to be confused with what he's called around the house — Bassett's bassets were becoming world famous.

"Some people thought we invented them," Mrs. Bassett laughs.

Other breeders didn't think it was humorous, saying the kennel name gave the Woodville establishment an unfair advantage. The American Kennel Club refused to register any more with Bassett names.

Body of Golda Meir lies in state; Rites Tuesday

By ARTHUR MAX

JERUSALEM (AP) — The body of former Prime Minister Golda Meir lay in state today beneath a leaden sky outside the Israeli parliament building as lines of mourners filed past.

Mrs. Meir, the last of the pioneer founders who presided at the birth of the Jewish state in 1948, died Friday at the age of 80. Her doctors said she succumbed to lymphoma, a disease of the lymph glands she had battled in secret for 15 years, including the time from 1968 to 1974 when she was prime minister.

Prime Minister Menachem Begin, Mrs. Meir's toughest political opponent during her years as head of government, paid homage to his old foe as "a great leader and prime minister who strove with all her heart to achieve peace between Israel and her neighbors."

Begin spoke at a ceremony in Oslo, Norway, in which he accepted the Nobel Peace Prize he won jointly with Egyptian President Anwar Sadat.

Hundreds of mourners, some dabbing at tear-filled eyes, walked past the flag-draped coffin atop a black catafalque near the eternal flame for Israel's unknown soldier. The crowd included schoolchildren, soldiers who brought wreaths from their units and stooped figures of Mrs. Meir's pioneer generation.

Police and soldiers with rifles lined the streets and kept watch on the crowds from the roof of the parliament building.

A cortege of military vehicles escorted Mrs. Meir's body from Hadassah Hospital, on the outskirts of Jerusalem, where she died, to the parliament building on a grassy slope.

The body was to lie in state through the night. The funeral will be held Tuesday, and burial will be with full military honors in a section of the national cemetery on Jerusalem's Mount Herzl called The Plot of the Nation's Great.

A 42-member U.S. delegation headed by Lillian Carter, President Carter's mother, was en route from Washington. Secretary of State Cyrus Vance was to fly from Cairo tonight to join the delegation.

'Unexpected results' of Venus probe may lead to alterations in theory

MOUNTAIN VIEW, Calif. (AP) — Unexpected results from the Venus probe, like ill-fitting pieces in a cosmic puzzle, are defying scientists' efforts to place them into existing theories about how the solar system was created.

Because the pieces don't fit, the puzzle may have to be changed, say scientists for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

The surprise information from the Earth's most ambitious encounter with Venus was disclosed Sunday as scores of scientists at the Ames Research Center here reported on initial data transmitted from five probes that descended Saturday through the planet's hostile atmosphere.

Four of the instrument-laden vehicles reached the torrid venusian surface, while the fifth burned up in the atmosphere.

"It certainly means we have to rethink the whole formation theories of the planets of the inner solar system," said Dr. John Hoffman, a physicist at The University of Texas-Dallas.

The scientists found that the proportion of argon-36 — an inert gas — in the venusian atmosphere appears to be 100 times greater than that on Earth or Mars.

The findings are important because that form of argon cannot be created after a planet's formation, and if Venus was formed the way Earth and Mars were, it probably would have about the same amount.

This means, the scientists say, either that Venus was formed from different substances than the rest of the solar system or that the formation process itself was different.

"It's a totally unexpected result that we've come up with," Dr. Michael McElroy, a Harvard University physicist who was among experts reporting the findings, said at a NASA briefing. "It appears that Venus formed of different stuff than Earth."

The argon readings are not the only evidence that the formation of Venus billions of years ago may have been different from other planets. Measurements of ultraviolet radiation from more than 100 miles above the planet's surface bolster the theory that Venus, unlike Earth, may have lost water it once had through some sort of cataclysmic reaction, said another scientist.

"(The measurements mean) either that there was never any water on Venus," said University of Colorado physicist Charles Barth, "or it was lost by something dramatically different from anything observed on other planets."

The five probes and a sixth spacecraft orbiting the planet for the next seven months are part of NASA's $225 million Pioneer Venus mission, which is this nation's first comprehensive attempt to chart the topography and atmospheric conditions of Earth's nearest planetary neighbor.

Four probes made the hour-long descent within minutes of each other, while a fifth, the cylindrical "bus" that carried the probes from Earth, plunged into the venusian atmosphere an hour later. It burned up within two minutes after sending back its share of data.

Church says aid changes in order

WASHINGTON (AP) — The incoming chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee says U.S. aid to other nations faces significant cutbacks because "the old practice of simply doling out foreign aid on a global platter has got to end."

Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, who next month will become the committee's 45th chairman, said in an interview that foreign aid will not be exempt from attempts to trim the federal budget.

"I think most of the people correctly or incorrectly have come to believe that the remedy for inflation is an end to deficit financing," Church said.

"And foreign aid cannot be exempt," he said. "It will have to be cut back. I have never regarded foreign aid as sacrosanct nor do I believe it has a higher priority than domestic spending."

Minutes before LOFT's (Loss of Fuel Test) crucial switch is thrown, EG&G reactor systems branch manager Ed Anderson, left, and physicist Francis Tsang consult with other engineers in the control room of LOFT's reactor in Idaho Falls, Idaho. The dials, switches and lights recorded hundreds of temperatures and pressures inside the reactor while a break in cooling system pipes is simulated with an actual nuclear core. (AP Laser-photo)

Bang, whoosh mark 'accident'

IDAHO FALLS, Idaho (AP) — Witnesses heard a loud bang and a whoosh. Engineers were cutting off cooling water to a nuclear reactor in the eastern Idaho desert, simulating one of the most dreaded accidents possible at an atomic power plant. Some 300 project officials, reporters and representatives from six foreign countries were present as a backup system automatically flooded the nuclear core with water, signaling success in the experiment to test nuclear safety equipment. As the two-minute test ended Saturday night, the control room at the Department of Energy's Idaho National Engineering Laboratory erupted in jubilant shouts and cheers. Preliminary data exceeded computer predictions for the first test on an operating nuclear core, said DOE spokesman Dick Blackledge. Thomas Murley of Washington, representing the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, for which the test was made, called the experiment a "resounding success." The test involved interrupting the flow of water in the primary cooling system for the reactor's core — simulating the coolant pipe breaking. But the backup system flooded the core, and kept temperatures well below the melting point for the cladding (metal casing) of the reactor's uranium oxide fuel rods. The cladding temperature reached about 900 degrees Fahrenheit, compared with the 1,370 degrees predicted, said Larry Leach, experimental program director for the Loss of Fluid Test (LOFT) project. The zirconium cladding would begin to fail at about 2,500 degrees and the fuel would melt at 5,000 degrees.

Donald McPherson, LOFT program manager, said computers had predicted the water would take 90 seconds to cool the rods. Instead, he said, it took only 17 seconds to bring them to normal. Nuclear power critics have said a loss-of-cooling accident could lead to a reactor core melt-down and release of radioactive material. Nick Kaufman, LOFT project director, said, "It went exactly the way we hoped. Everything came on in exactly the right sequence and exactly the right timing and it looks very good." "The quenching occurred very rapidly," he said. "Our best calculations were very conservative." Scientists have said a break in the pipe carrying the water is one of the worst accidents imaginable. The INEL said no such accident has occurred and the probability of such an occurrence is extremely small.

Unleaded gas supply plentiful for future

NEW YORK (AP) — Enough regular unleaded gasoline is available to meet drivers' demands into the distant future, the chairman of Standard Oil of Indiana said Sunday. The shortage only affects drivers who use premium-grade unleaded, in short supply due to unanticipated demand this fall, he said. John E. Swearingin also said he thought the price of gasoline may be going up about a nickel a gallon next year, although that, too, was subject to a number of factors over which oil companies have no direct control. Swearingin, on the CBS Television program "Face the Nation," said that even though consumption unexpectedly was up 10 percent this fall compared to a year ago, "there's plenty of the regular unleaded gasoline all over the country." He said his own company could meet its dealers' demands, but could not also cover the shortage experienced by Shell, the refiner that has had to ration its dealers. Shell fell victim not only to unexpected high demand, but also had some of its refining facilities out of action and at the same time was required by the Department of Energy to cut its prices, which Swearingin called a wrong decision by the government. "When demand goes up, you should let the price rise and drop out the marginal people who want to buy. Most auto drivers do not require a high-octane unleaded," he said. He said one factor that will determine availability both of auto and home-heating fuel is whether there is a strike — and how long it lasts — if refinery workers try to break the White House voluntary guidelines in negotiations on a new contract in January. Union wage demands put forward now exceed the guidelines, he said.

Dingle asks for speed up

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. John D. Dingell, D-Mich., is calling on Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger Jr. and Attorney General Griffin Bell to step up efforts on an investigation of oil executives alleged to have fraudulently overcharged consumers $2 billion over the last four years. Dingell said in letters sent last week to the two men that both their agencies had lagged in investigating the so-called oil reseller fraud cases. The cases involve a number of companies that allegedly resold "old oil," the price of which is controlled, for an uncontrolled price that was about $8.25 a barrel higher. Dingell's letters were released by his staff.

Import fee removed

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter signed a proclamation Friday that removes an import fee on residual oil, a step that could save consumers millions of dollars a year. The White House said Carter's action in lifting the fee of 63 cents a barrel headed off a likely East Coast hike of 30 to 40 cents a barrel at the consumer level. The proclamation chiefly benefits the New England area, which relies heavily on imported residual oil used for power generation, heating of some large apartments and manufacturing. Presidential aide Stuart Eizenstat said last weekend that New Englanders stand to save as much as $32 million a year through removal of the fee.

Platform to be built

HOUSTON — A wholly-owned subsidiary of Raymond International Inc. has been awarded a contract for about $6 million to design and construct marine facilities for a crude oil loading platform at Puerto Armuelles, Panama, said Henry F. Lemieux, chairman of the board and chief executive officer. The client is Petro Terminal de Panama, S.A. Construction will begin in 1979 and be completed during the year. The turnkey facility will be designed by Raymond Technical Facilities and the steel components for the berth will be fabricated by Raymond Fabricators, Inc., both members of the Raymond International family of companies. The berth will consist of a structural steel loading platform supported by steel pipe piles; two breasting dolphins and four mooring dolphins; and two 36-inch diameter submarine pipe lines. The berth will accommodate vessels with a capacity of up to 52,000 dead weight tons. The berth facility at Puerto Armuelles will be similar to an oil loading facility constructed by Raymond at Bonaire, Netherlands Antilles, in 1977. The Bonaire facility was completed ahead of schedule and in only 120 working days. Steel components for that project were also fabricated by Raymond Fabricators in Amelia, La.

Coal industry limping in West Virginia fields

By MARTHA BRYSON HODEL CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — In the heart of West Virginia's coal fields, it was the year that wasn't. The year that wasn't supposed to happen; the year that defied everyone's predictions of riches. The industry was supposed to increase its production until it could provide most of the nation's energy needs by 1985. But beginning in June 1977, a year-long series of misfortunes left the industry limping in West Virginia, the nation's second-largest producer of coal. Strikes — legal and illegal — by the United Mine Workers union idled most Appalachian miners for more than six months of the year. Poor market conditions for the region's premium metallurgical coal and a strike against the Norfolk and Western Railway, a major coal hauler, caused temporary layoffs and shortened work weeks for many miners. Mines producing metallurgical coal, used in the manufacture of steel, began closing. Consolidation Coal Co., the state's largest producer, closed three mines before the 111-day coal contract strike ended in March, and closings by other companies soon followed.

A spokesman for the West Virginia Coal Association said more than 3,500 coal mining jobs have been eliminated in the state since the conclusion of the contract strike. "And that's just in the larger companies," said Dan Fields. "I'm sure there are many smaller ones that have gone by the way." In addition to the elimination of existing jobs, many companies have cut back on plans for expansion, thus doing away with more employment opportunities. Eastern Association Coal Corp., the state's second-largest producer, axed a plan to add additional miners last summer. Instead, citing poor productivity and weak market conditions, the company reduced its workforce by one-sixth. "We realized that drastic measures were called for," said Art Sander, an Eastern spokesman in Beckley. "So we realigned our whole operation, and instead of hiring 2,000 new miners, we laid off 1,200." Statistics compiled by the West Virginia Chamber of Commerce add an official tone to the problem: through September 1977, coal industry employment in West Virginia stood at 64,689. During the same period this year, 48,644 were employed in the state's coal fields — a decline of 16,045 jobs. The situation may grow worse. To the present, layoffs have been confined primarily to the southern part of the state, where metallurgical coal is produced. Markets for the utility coal produced in the state's northern coal fields have remained fairly constant. But a spokesman for Consolidation, Len Gross, said the unemployment may soon spread northward. Gross said his company faces a loss of contracts in the next year for half of its 6 million tons of annual production in eastern Ohio, because utilities are going elsewhere for lower-sulfur coal. Such coal, often called compliance coal, is needed to meet Federal air quality standards. And the coal that is produced in northern West Virginia is virtually identical to that produced in eastern Ohio. Coal production statistics are another indicator of the industry's problems. West Virginia production through the first seven months of 1978 — the latest figures available — stood at 38.9 million tons — one-third less than the total through July 1977 of 58.2 million tons. At that, 1977 was hardly a good year. According to the coal association, production was one-quarter less than it could have been if there had been no outside interference — such as wildcat work stoppages, bad weather or rail car shortages. A worldwide steel recession, coupled with high production costs that make West Virginia's coal less competitive with that produced in other countries, has been the major culprit in the declining sales. What's more, industry economists don't hold out much hope for any immediate improvement in the situation. "Nationally, new mines are coming on stream, expansions to existing facilities are being planned, more jobs are being created. In West Virginia, mines have closed, thousands of jobs have been eliminated — and more are threatened," James R. Thomas II, president of Carbon Industries, told a Charleston civic club recently. "Many of us in the industry are scared."

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys huffed and puffed their way to a third straight National Football League East title, and they showed a second wind Sunday that should make playoff opponents worry about being blown away.

harder and making things happen." THAT'S EXACTLY what the Cowboys did to the Eagles. The game was only six minutes old and Dallas led 14-0, because the Cowboys made things happen. First they recovered a fumble, and three plays later, Scott Laidlaw shot one yard for the first touchdown.

Five teams still have chance to gain wildcard playoff slots

The Patriots won the American Football Conference East championship — their first divisional title since 1963 — edging the Buffalo Bills 26-24 Sunday on David Posey's 21-yard field goal with eight seconds remaining.

Earl Campbell, who has gained 1,369 yards rushing this season, made a 5-yard sprint in reverse, saving Houston's victory over New Orleans. He scooped up an Oilers' fumble in the end zone and raced off the field, taking a two-point safety instead of putting New Orleans in position for a touchdown.

San Diego tops Bucks, 107-106

By The Associated Press
Lloyd Free continues to pay dividends on San Diego's future investment.

The explosive guard, who came to the Clippers from Philadelphia just before the start of the season in exchange for a 1984 first-round draft choice, scored 28 points Sunday night, including two free throws with nine seconds to play that gave San Diego a 107-106 National Basketball Association victory over the Milwaukee Bucks.

Free said he welcomed the pressure as he stepped to the foul line with his team down by one.

"You've got to have pride in yourself," said Free, whose self-proclaimed nickname is All-World. "No matter how much time is left, you have to feel you can win the game."

In other NBA games Sunday night, the Los Angeles Lakers edged the Atlanta Hawks 88-86 and the Seattle SuperSonics beat the San Antonio Spurs 112-99.

Clippers Coach Gene Shue calls Free "one of the most talented players in the league. It's crazy we even had a chance to get him for what we gave up."

Free, a reserve at Philadelphia, has blossomed into the league's No. 2 scorer with a 27-point average since being given a chance to start at San Diego — and he doesn't cost the Clippers a thing for almost six years.

Milwaukee, which led by seven points midway through the final period, trailed 105-102 before the Clippers got tagged with their second zone technical. Brian Winters sank both free throws with 1:16 to go and hit a jumper with 13 seconds left to put the Bucks ahead.

After a timeout, Free was fouled by Norm Van Lier and calmly sank both free throws to give San Diego a one-point lead. Milwaukee had two chances to pull it out but Ernie Grunfeld and Winters missed jumpers in the closing seconds.

Winters, who topped the Bucks with 28 points, noted it was his team's third loss in three nights in three different cities. "That's the NBA," he said. "That's what you have to live with. You can't say you're tired — you have to play."

Lakers 88, Hawks 86

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar hit a 10-foot baseline jumper with 2:16 to go to snap an 84-84 tie and Kenny Carr added a slam dunk with 1:17 remaining to put Los Angeles ahead by four. Atlanta, which had earlier erased a 13-point deficit, cut the gap in half on Dan Roundfield's jumper, but missed a chance to tie when John Drew and Tom McMillen missed shots in the closing seconds.

"I'm going to die of a heart attack if we keep playing games like this," said Laker Coach Jerry West. "The more I watch this game, the more I don't know anything about it."

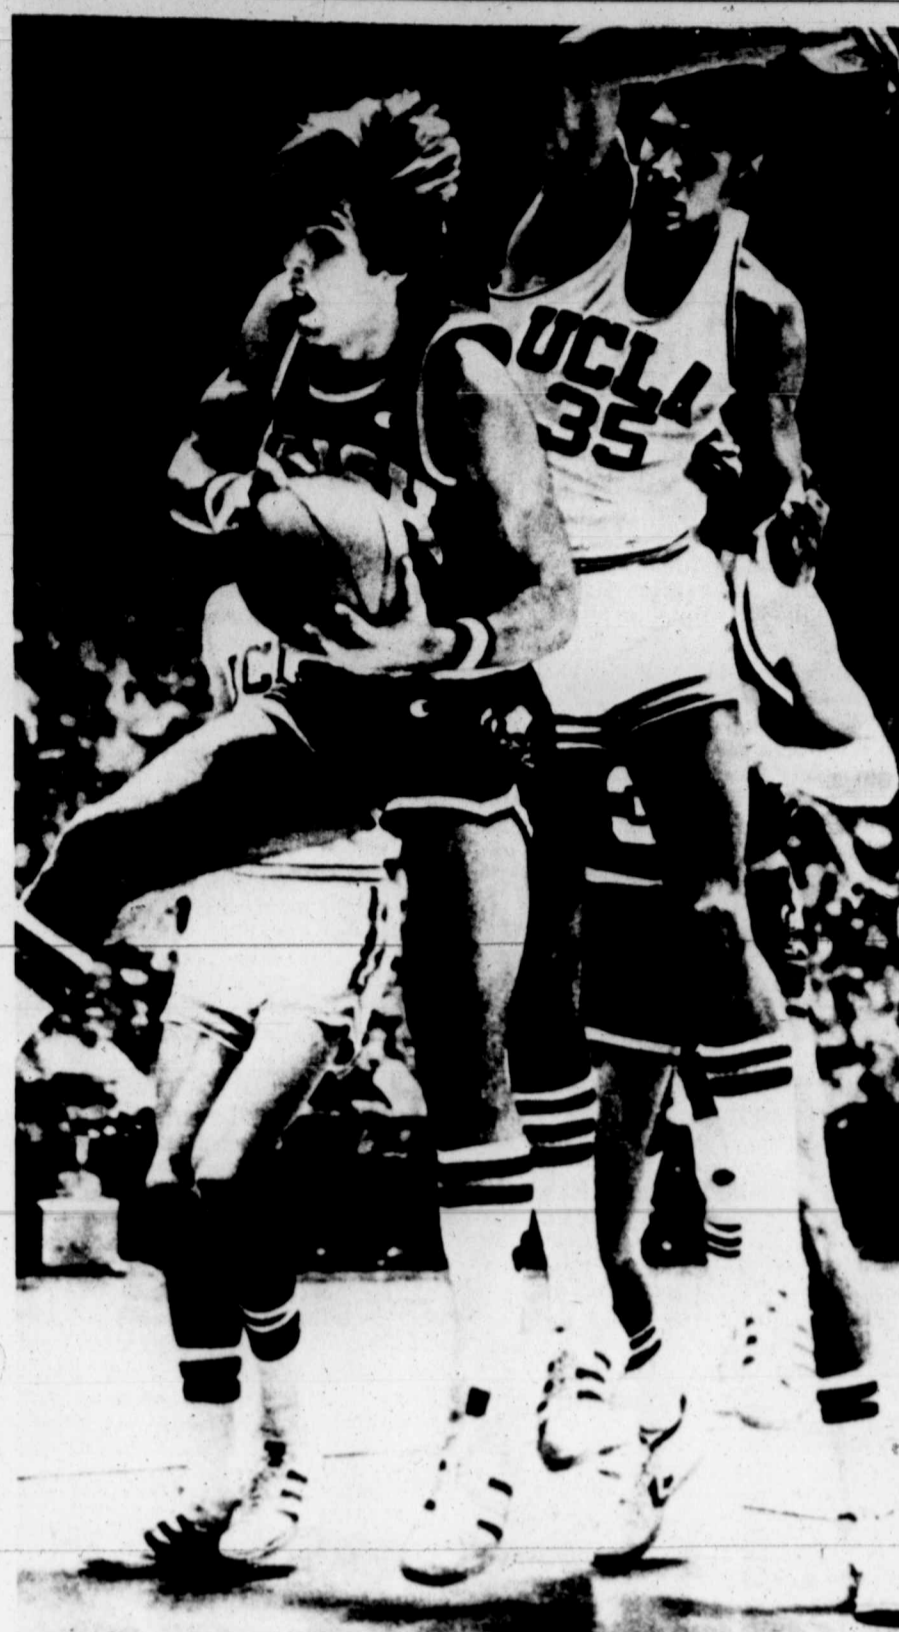

Abdul-Jabbar had 20 points, 11 rebounds and five blocked shots while Norm Nixon handed out 16 assists. Dan Roundfield led Atlanta, which has lost four in a row, with 23 points on 10-for-12 shooting.

Sonics 112, Spurs 99

Jack Sikma hit his first seven shots from the field and finished with 23 points and 19 rebounds. The Sonics broke the game open with 16 straight points in the third period, pulling away from a 67-67 tie.

Irish dump UCLA in Los Angeles; Kentucky rallies

By The Associated Press
Whenever Notre Dame's basketball players see Pauley Pavilion, they seem to get their Irish up.

The UCLA Bruins are usually odds-on favorites in their intimidating arena in Los Angeles, but when Notre Dame comes to town, you can throw out all the odds.

THE FIGHTING IRISH continued to ignore UCLA's homecourt advantage Saturday night when they beat the second-ranked Bruins 81-78 for the third straight year at Pauley and the fifth time in the last six meetings between these college basketball superpowers.

"This is the mecca, this is Yankee Stadium," said a jubilant Digger Phelps, coach of the third-ranked Irish. "Nobody's ever won three games here."

And just how did Notre Dame do that?
"We wore down UCLA physically," said Phelps. "But you saw two great basketball teams tonight. UCLA will be in the NCAA's final four at playoff time, you can be sure."

NOTRE DAME'S accomplishment is certainly noteworthy, considering the fact that the Bruins have only lost four other games in 14 years at Pauley Pavilion. Their record in that time is 204-7.

"It's a big thrill," said Phelps, "especially for the kids."
In another game involving Top Ten teams, No. 10 Kentucky edged No. 5 Kansas 67-66 in an overtime thriller.

Elsewhere, No. 4 Michigan State edged Cal State-Fullerton 92-89; No. 6 Michigan tripped Dayton 66-61; No. 7 Louisville routed Idaho 101-54; No. 8 North Carolina State beat Campbell College 108-83 and No. 9 Syracuse nipped Rhode Island 70-68.

ALSO, 12th-ranked LSU whipped Tulane 98-88; No. 13 Texas walloped Oklahoma State 85-70; No. 14 North Carolina posted an 85-56 victory over Jacksonville; No. 16 Marquette beat Missouri 74-57; No. 17 San Francisco hammered Sacramento State 78-59; Villanova shocked No. 18 Rutgers 86-67; No. 19 Maryland smashed Biscayne 86-60 and No. 20 Georgetown took a 77-71 decision over St. John's.

Kentucky staged a miracle finish, scoring seven points in the last 21 seconds to beat Kansas. The winning point was virtually handed to the Wildcats by Kansas Coach Ted Owens when he was called for a technical foul for exceeding his allotted timeouts at the end. Kyle Macy converted the technical with three seconds left.

Owens blamed not only himself but the officials for the stunning loss.

"If they had continued to call the game the way they had earlier," snapped Owens, "we would have won."

Owens was generally happy with the officiating at Lexington but said the officials were particularly negligent in the final minute when he said they failed to call one charging foul and another infraction for hanging on the rim against Kentucky.

SAID KENTUCKY Coach Joe Hall: "There are a lot of games won that way and breaks fall that way. They had fallen bad for us most of the game and in the end, they all fell for us."

Greg Kelson's 27 points paced Michigan State over Cal State-Fullerton. Mike McGhee and Phil Hubbard, Michigan's Big Two, teamed for 44 points as the Wolverines beat Dayton.

"Our offense went to nothing," said Dayton Coach Don Donohue, talking about the first half when Michigan took command. "When your offense is like that, it tends to ignite the other team."

Louisville outclassed Idaho behind a 29-point performance by Darrell Griffith. The Cardinals held Idaho to 19 points in the first half.

"I think our defense has been good all year," said Louisville Coach Denny Crum. "We've only been giving up 60 points a game."

North Carolina State defeated Campbell as Hawkeye Whitney scored 27 points. Roosevelt Boule and Hal Cohen each sank foul shots in the final 31 seconds to clinch Syracuse's victory over Rhode Island.

AL GREEN and Lionel Green combined for 56 points to lead LSU over Tulane. Tyrone Branan's 28 points and 13 rebounds paced Texas over Oklahoma State. North Carolina whipped Jacksonville as Mike O'Koren scored 18 points.

Temple defeats Boston College

By The Associated Press
It wasn't quite the Super Bowl, but that didn't bother the students of Eastern Illinois University.

About 200 students rallied on Main Street in Charleston, Ill., and forced police to close off a four-block area for about 45 minutes Saturday following Eastern Illinois' 10-9 victory over Delaware in the NCAA Division II football championship in Longview, Texas.

The Panthers' triumph capped an amazing turnaround under first-year Coach Darrell Mudra, who brought the school its first winning season in 17 years. Eastern Illinois was 1-10 a year ago but finished the 1978 season with a 12-2 mark.

Delaware led 9-3 at the half following an exchange of field goals and an 8-yard scoring pass from Jeff Komlo to Mike Mills. But the extra point attempt following the Blue Hens' touchdown failed.

The Panthers' big break came in the third period when safety Kevin Jones recovered a fumble at the Delaware 19. Quarterback Steve Terk was sacked for a 7-yard loss on the first play from scrimmage but made up for that with a 25-yard completion to Scott McGhee. Poke Cobb ran it in from the 1 and Dan DiMartino kicked what proved to be the winning extra point.

Delaware threatened twice in the final period. Jones intercepted a Komlo pass to kill one drive and a 45-yard field goal attempt by Brandt Kennedy with time running out sailed wide to end the other.

"The defense really stiffened in the second half," said Mudra. "We applied a lot of pressure. Without a doubt, turnovers were an important factor. We were intercepted only one time while we forced Delaware to give it up five times (four fumbles and Jones' interception). All were critical for us, either leading to a score or stopping a drive."

In other games, Massachusetts and Florida A&M advanced to the NCAA Division IAA final. Massachusetts beat Nevada-Reno 44-21 as Dennis Dent ran a kickoff back 96 yards for a touchdown and Kevin Sullivan intercepted three passes. Florida A&M trimmed Jackson State 15-10 behind touchdown runs of 1 and 4 yards by Mike Solomon.

In the NAIA Division I semifinals, Bobby Hedrick scored on a 2-yard run and Mitch Rippey kicked two field goals as Elon defeated Grand Valley State, Mich., 13-7. Arthur Gutierrez ran for 111 yards and Wylie Turner picked off three passes to lead Angelo State to a 35-3 romp over Western State, Colo.

United States nabs Davis Cup victory

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (AP) — John McEnroe, after leading the United States to its first Davis Cup victory since 1972, could afford to be modest when speculating about the No. 1 male tennis player in the world.

"After all, the 19-year-old New Yorker had just devastated the best singles players in Great Britain and provided two of the victories that went into the 4-1 romp by the U.S. in the championship round that ended Sunday at Mission Hills Country Club.

Thus, the inevitable question: Can John Patrick McEnroe beat Jimmy Connors?

"Connors is No. 1 right now. He's the best player in the world," opined McEnroe, who has come out on the short end in all four matches between the two southpaws. "I don't know if I'll ever beat Connors, but I'll follow him to the ends of the earth."

The question of who's No. 1 was reopened dramatically last month when McEnroe defeated Bjorn Borg in straight sets in a tournament in Sweden.

For his part, the coach of Britain's team — victims of McEnroe's fullcourt game of sizzling services, precision volleys, varied ground strokes and dazzling speed — was certain he had just seen a new No. 1.

Paul Hutchins, the coach, called McEnroe "the world's No. 1 player" at the moment. Buster Mottram, who lost to McEnroe Sunday, thought McEnroe was No. 2 and pronounced Connors the best player. Connors has shunned Davis Cup play.

The rating game was being played briskly after McEnroe clinched the Cup in the fourth match, demolishing Mottram 6-2, 6-2, 6-1. Brian Gottfried then polished off John Lloyd 6-1, 6-2, 6-4 in the final match.

McEnroe's 6-1, 6-2, 6-2 whipping of Lloyd in the first match Friday set the theme of American domination of the British team.

Hayden Fry hopes to get Hawks winning

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) — He's a charmer, this tall Texan who's taken on the tall task of reversing Iowa's football fortunes.

But whether Coach Hayden Fry will fare any better than four ill-fated predecessors is anybody's bet.

Fry, 49, who leaves a four-year 33-11 record at North Texas State, has a reputation for taking ailing football programs and turning them into winners.

When he arrived at Southern Methodist in 1962, the Mustangs had won just two games in two years. When he left 10 years later he had a Southwest Conference title and three bowl appearances to his credit.

At North Texas State he took over a team that had won seven games in four years, but his 1977 squad produced a 10-1 mark and this year's a 9-2 record.

"I've always been associated with a program that didn't have too good a won-loss record or didn't have a won record at all," said Fry, who made his first appearance before reporters Saturday sporting a gold and black Iowa tie.

"I want the opportunity to take a place that's not recognized as the best football factory in the world, but knowing that the opportunity exists to make it that way.

"A lot of people like to climb mountains. I like to take football teams that haven't been too successful and turn them into winners," Fry said.

"I've been extremely impressed with the people wanting to have a winning team here. I've done my homework to find out if Iowa is going to be committed to do whatever is necessary ... to be comparable with the winners in the Big Ten," said Fry.

"I have been assured this will take place. I've been very tough in my negotiating to make sure that we would have a chance to win. If I did not believe Iowa could win in the near future, I wouldn't leave a ballclub that's 10-1 and 9-2."

Fry said he has not seen the facilities at Iowa, which fired Coach Bob Comings said were so inadequate he lost several valuable recruits.

"The facilities were secondary in taking the job," Fry said. "I looked at the attendance. A ball club that can win two ballgames and lose nine and average 54,000 people is far more important to me than facilities."

Shula has praise for Gordon play

By The Associated Press

What they were saying over the weekend around the National Football League:

"Larry Gordon had the greatest game I've ever seen a linebacker play. How can a linebacker play better than he played today?" — Miami Coach Don Shula after Gordon had become the first Dolphins' linebacker to intercept three passes in a game, during a 23-6 victory over Oakland.

"We had to renegotiate his salary on the sidelines." — Cleveland Coach Sam Rutigliano after inducing star running back Greg Pruitt to return a kickoff in the closing minutes of regulation time in the Browns' 37-34 victory over the New York Jets.

"The safety wasn't the smartest call I've ever seen. I thought it might have been a challenge to me." — New England's David Posey after kicking a 21-yard field goal that gave the Patriots a 26-24 victory over Buffalo — after the Bills had elected to take a safety rather than punt in the closing minutes.

"I'm probably the luckiest guy in pro football." — Atlanta's Tim Mazzetti, a Philadelphia bartender at the start of the season, after missing a 37-yard field goal with two seconds remaining, then getting another chance because of a penalty and booting a 32-yarder that gave the Falcons a 20-17 triumph over the Washington Redskins.

"It was a dream come true to quarterback and win the game." — Randy Dean after throwing his first National Football League touchdown pass and directing the New York Giants to a 17-0 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

"You know what I was thinking about when I was looking at the ball rolling down there? I was thinking of that Oakland game where they batted the ball in for a touchdown." — Houston running back Earl Campbell after scooping up an Oilers' fumble in the end zone and running off the field for a safety instead of putting New Orleans in position for a touchdown, preserving a 17-12 decision over the Saints.

"There's just one word for it — fantastic!" — Detroit Coach Monte Clark after the Lions had stunned the favored Minnesota Vikings 45-14.

"Being from the South, I found out real quick that when you get a little bit of that slippery stuff under the defense's feet, you can have some fun throwing the ball." — Pittsburgh quarterback Terry Bradshaw after firing three touchdown passes as the Steelers beat the Baltimore Colts 35-13 on a snow-covered field.

"The weather didn't beat us ... it isn't the game plan that's at fault. It's not the system. It's not whether or not we blitzed. It's having people hurt. We're playing short-handed — and we're hurting." — Baltimore Coach Ted Marchibroda after the Colts' 35-13 loss to Pittsburgh.

Has Carew decided to give Griffith chance?

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Is Rod Carew giving Calvin Griffith one last chance? And if so, will Griffith take advantage of it?

The Minnesota Twins first baseman, who vetoed a trade to San Francisco Friday, and Griffith have been at odds for a year over various incidents.

Carew, a seven-time winner of the American League batting title, signed a three-year pact in 1976 paying him about $200,000 per season.

In 1977 he hit .388 and was named AL Most Valuable Player. Griffith rewarded him with a $100,000 bonus and Carew was thankful, but he wanted to negotiate an extension of his contract which would allow him to finish his career in Minnesota.

Carew was annoyed at the way Griffith kept putting him off, however, and when the two did talk, the Twins' offers were not even close.

Then there were Griffith's famous "Waseca remarks," in which the Twins' owner allegedly made derogatory remarks about blacks at a Waseca, Minn., Lions Club meeting and called Carew "a fool" for signing such a puny contract.

Carew vowed never to sign another contract with the Twins, saying he wouldn't be "another nigger on his (Griffith's) plantation." Recently, though, he softened, saying he couldn't forget but he could forgive.

"I've spent 14 years in this organization and I love this area," he said. "It's tough just to pick up and leave. It's hard on a family and it would hurt me to leave."

But Carew is a proud man and doesn't wish to be stepped on. He's willing to accept less to play for Minnesota, but he does want a reasonable offer.

What is reasonable? Therein lies the rub.

A 38-year-old Pete Rose signed a four-year contract with Philadelphia for $3.2 million, or $800,000 a year.

Carew, five years younger and considered by some, including his manager, Gene Mauch, to be the best player in the game, asked Griffith for $3.5 million over five years, or $700,000 a year.

The Twins, never big spenders, offered $2 million for the same time span and Carew just laughed.

Now the line is drawn. Carew, by playing out his option in 1979, will make about half a million dollars less than he could have made with the Giants. That takes guts.

He may go for more on the free agent market next year, or he could go for less. He could win his eighth batting title and increase his value or he could break a leg.

Minnesota, with the addition of Jerry Kosman, Ron Jackson and Danny Goodwin via trades, could become a decent team. With a happy Carew, it would be even better. And Carew has longed to play in the World Series.

His decision not to go to San Francisco — "After 12 years in one place, you can't make up your mind to go to another team in 12 hours," he told one writer — opens the door for Griffith.

Mexico sweeps top spots in Caribbean Classic

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — Mexico swept the first two places Sunday in the 12th running of the $155,000 Caribbean International Classic for 3-year-old horses.

Ruben Hernandez, a Panamanian, piloted Ezgarta to victory.

Staying back in the field of 11, Hernandez took Ezgarta into the lead on the final turn to race home with a time of 1:51 and the winning purse of $93,000.

Right behind Ezgarta was jockey Aureliano Noguez, who rode the other Mexican horse, Gran Zar.

Steve Cauthen was atop the favorite, Cat Lady of Panama, but failed to finish in the top five.

Jorge Velazquez, also one of the top-money winners on the United States circuit, brought in his horse, El Gran Capo, a poor fifth. A Panamanian, Velazquez came to Puerto Rico to ride horses owned by Carlos Eleta, a former Panamanian foreign relations minister.

Some 25,000 fans watched the race, the high point of the racing season here, under a partly cloudy sky at the new El Comandante track at Canovanas, just east of San Juan.

Horses from Jamaica, Mexico, Panama, Puerto Rico, Trinidad and Venezuela ran in the classic that was first held in Puerto Rico in 1966.

Colombia and the Dominican Republic did not enter this year because "they felt they didn't have good enough horses," said Irwin Tress, general manager and vice president of the track.

A Puerto Rican horse, Negruzca, broke out the starting gate in front and maintained the lead for about half of the race. He was followed by M'Lord of Jamaica and the two entries from Venezuela, Auroreno and Torrejon.

Graham wins golf title

MEXICO CITY (AP) — "The 10th hole may have been turning point." Australia's David Graham said after winning the $210,000 Mexico Cup golf tournament. "I made an excellent save at 10 with a chip shot within four feet, and the 11 went on to birdie 11."

Graham carded a blistering 5-under-par 67 Sunday for a 72-hole score of 273 and a one-stroke victory over 49-year-old veteran Don January. Graham picked up $40,000 for his first victory since the 1977 Australian Open, and January received $20,000.

January had started the day with a three-stroke lead over the 32-year-old Australian. But Graham started his final round with two birdies and then shot into the lead on the seventh hole after he birdied and January bogied.

January's bogey on the 18th hole after hitting into a sandtrap ended the neck-and-neck battle he had waged with Graham. The score was tied seven times before January faltered on the final green, missing a 5-foot putt to save par after a brilliant shot out of the trap.

"I played nearly as well as I can today," Graham said. "I have so much respect for Don January. I knew when I went out today, the only way to win was to shoot 5 or 6 under par.

"I think, outside this year's Masters, this is without a doubt the best I have played all year," Graham said.

January said he had played a conservative round and "did not try to take too many chances."

But the tour veteran said his last iron shot that fell in the sandtrap had been aimed at the flag "all the way."

"I knew David had made par. I thought about waiting to get him in overtime, but I would sooner do it on a shot I like," January said.

He said the pin placement on the 18th green had given him one of his best approach shots, so he decided to "draw it right at the hole. It was just 10 feet too far to the left."

Bobby Wadkins turned in a strong 4-under-par 68 for a 276, 12 under par, and good for third place prize money of $10,000.

"I played as well as I could," Wadkins said, "but just had too many close calls — all day long in fact."

Tsuneyuki Nakajima, 24, of Japan, carded a 3-under-par 69 and wound up the tournament in fourth with a 10-under 278. He won $8,500 for his efforts.

Leonard Thompson also shot 3-under-par 69 to take fifth place at 279 and a $7,000 prize.
