

IRS preparing to send 88 million calling cards

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service is mailing its 1979 calling card across the country, return reply requested.

An IRS spokesman said Tuesday 88 million tax booklets, already sent to post offices, probably will be delivered within the next week.

The return is due April 16, a day later than normal since April 15 falls on a Sunday this year.

A tax form can be filed anytime after Jan. 1, although employers have until the end of January to give workers the W2 forms that report income and the amount of tax withheld.

Officials say that, in general, the earlier a return is filed the faster a refund check gets mailed back to the taxpayer.

Taxpayers mailing their returns in January have about a 75 percent chance of receiving a refund check within four weeks.

The wait could be double that for refunds on returns filed in April, the IRS says.

As usual, the IRS is training thousands of people to answer questions from perplexed taxpayers and will offer advice at agency offices, at some special locations and on the telephone.

The IRS reports it got requests for help from 23 million people last year.

Both the main tax form, 1040, and the 1040A shortform being used this year are similar to the ones used last year and the tax tables also are the same, the IRS says.

"This time you can probably pull out last year's tax form and use it as a guide," said Wilson Fadedly, an IRS spokesman.

Most of changes that Congress voted this year won't take effect until 1980, even though beginning this year taxpayers will be able to take a new tax credit for home insulation and will pay a smaller tax on capital gains.

One squirt and you're down on your knees begging for relief.

You can ask for forgiveness later. "You start to cough. You get nauseous. You begin to drool," Ferrell Powell said convincingly. "I was coughing...horrible...and burning."

Phyllis Slough and Ferrell Powell were offering a free demonstration from a push-button capsule about the size of a throw-away cigarette lighter.

They can keep it. "But it doesn't leave any after-effects after it's over," Ms. Slough said with the assurance of a drummer selling riot-control spray.

They weren't packing pistols. Their holstered non-lethal "weapons" are far better — to them — than any firearms that could "rub" somebody out.

They were on the defensive. "This is the 'stuff' you need," said Ms. Slough. "You don't need Starsky & Hutch."

What the two are promoting are knock-down and repelling "weapons" designed to back up a woman's word when she tells a fellow "hands off."

Maybe it'll be replacing the "dainty" but dangerous snub-nose revolvers worldly city women were carrying in their black patent-leather purses in detective movies back in the 1930s, '40s and early '50s.

The merchandise comes in three sizes, depending on how many one-second squirts you might anticipate firing off.

"It's more potent than Mace," said Ms. Ferrell, who was sporting red-on-white button saying, "Don't Yield — Shield."

The product they're marketing at Tupperware-like parties and door-to-door is, of course, Shield. It's more succinct than saying, "Orthochlorobenzalmalononitrile," which is the name of multi-syllable chemical — power in the squirt — of the tear-gas-like product.

It's "supposed" to make women living alone feel relatively safe at home. It's your handy but unfriendly companion, without a lease or grrrrr, when you walk down the street or in the park or from here to there.

"It's supposed to make you burn, kneel, and get incapacitated," said Ms. Slough. "It's for anything that

FAA reveals safety scheme

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Aviation Administration today announced a "sweeping and comprehensive" air safety program intended to provide increased protection against in-flight collisions at airports that serve 97 percent of all scheduled airline travelers.

Presently only 67 percent of the travelers receive such protection.

The new program was prompted by an FAA investigation of the Sept. 25 collision between an airliner and a small private plane at San Diego that killed 144 persons, the worst accident in U.S. aviation history.

FAA Administrator Langhorne Bond told a news conference the program is expected to reduce by 80 percent the number of near collisions involving airliners operating above 10,000 feet.

The plans call for increasing radar services at 80 air carrier airports, establishing mandatory terminal control areas at 44 additional locations and putting most of the busiest air routes above 10,000 feet under direct air traffic control.

"Soon, most airline passengers will travel their entire trip under positive air traffic control," Bond said.

He said the FAA also will propose rules requiring wider use of altitude reporting transponders by all aircraft operators, and installation of collision-avoidance systems in most airliners as soon as the equipment becomes available.

Bond said his agency will expedite research and development efforts in the air traffic control field and push ahead with installation of additional safety facilities at airports.

He said the changes will require an additional 330 air traffic controllers at the nation's airports.

Personnel costs associated with the improved service are estimated at about $11 million for the first year. The equipment costs are estimated at $43 million.

Transportation Secretary Brock Adams told reporters the financing would be made available.

"We have the safest air system in the world, but it can always use improvements," Adams said.

Adams and Bond emphasized the primary purpose of the new program is to increase the level of safety for the millions of people who fly the nation's airlines. In 1978 a record 280 million persons have flown on scheduled airlines, and the figure is expected to increase to nearly 500 million passengers by 1980.

The initial step in the program will be establishment of terminal radar service areas (TRSA's) at 80 carrier airports. All pilots flying into these areas will be offered radar guidance to keep them safely separated from other air traffic.

Although pilot participation is voluntary, the FAA said experience at the 105 existing TRSA locations has shown that 90 percent of pilots operating under visual flight rules use this service.

The first new TRSA will be established within six months at San

Very good chance of resuming talks, says Anwar Sadat

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — President Anwar Sadat said today there is a "very good chance" of peace negotiations with Israel resuming soon but that Egypt had not yet received an invitation.

Sadat's statement to reporters followed a declaration today by Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin that he was prepared to hold "clarification talks" on two issues standing in the way of a treaty.

After a two-hour meeting with members of his ruling party, Sadat said "it appears, especially after what has been declared by U.S. President Carter, that there is a very good chance for a new round of negotiations, but until this moment Premier (Mustafa) Khalil didn't receive any invitation," Sadat said after a two-hour meeting with members of his ruling party.

Carter, who predicted on Christmas evening that a Middle East peace treaty eventually would be signed, has given support to Egyptian proposals for breaking the deadlocked treaty talks.

The Egyptian leader postponed a trip to the upper Egyptian city of Aswan, prompting speculation that arrangements were underway to resume a new round of talks in the coming weeks.

But Sadat said he cancelled the trip for domestic reasons and that it had nothing to do with the peace process. Sadat said he was remaining in Cairo to work out final details of a plan to decentralize the government on Jan. 1.

Asked if intensive, behind-the-scenes arrangements were being made for a new negotiation forum with the help of the United States, Sadat said "not yet" and that such speculation was premature.

Israel moving Jews from West Bank

NEBI SAMUEL, Occupied West Bank (AP) — Israeli troops began expelling Jewish nationalists who occupied two hills in the West Bank of the Jordan River early today to challenge the government's policy of freezing new settlement in the occupied zone.

Israel Radio reported that the soldiers encountered no resistance as they starting removing the estimated 65 families from the makeshift camps consisting of tents and corrugated iron huts surrounded by barbed wire.

Last weekend Gush Emunim — Hebrew for Bloc of the Faithful — sent a letter to Prime Minister Menachem Begin detailing plans for their unauthorized settlement activity. The group wants to force the government to build more settlements in the West Bank, which it considers land promised to the Jews by God.

In September the group made a number of attempts to set up West Bank outposts to protest the Camp David agreements, which included a three-month freeze on Jewish settlements in Israeli-occupied territories. The army evicted the group each time.

The Israeli-Egyptian peace talks have come to an impasse mainly over the issue of Palestinian autonomy in the West Bank and the occupied Gaza Strip, but there were indications Tuesday of a breakthrough.

Begin said Israel is ready to hold talks with Egypt to clarify snags blocking the treaty. A U.S. official in Washington said the United States may try to set up another meeting, but he denied reports that Israel and Egypt have agreed to renew negotiations.

Iran violence continues, threatens U.S. Embassy

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Troops fired automatic weapons in the air to rout mobs of anti-shah demonstrators marching toward the U.S. Embassy today but the protesters regrouped and went on rampages in other areas. At the same time, a crippling oil strike forced the government to impose fuel rationing.

Heavy bursts of gunfire shook the downtown area, and pedestrians fled for shelter in office buildings. On one street, some 500 protesters set fire to heaps of tires, blocking traffic and enveloping a yellow Fiat in flames.

Demonstrators said the car had been full of agents of SAVAK, Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi's dreaded secret police, who began shooting at the crowd. But the demonstrators said the agents escaped before the car was set ablaze.

The protesters first gathered at the headquarters of the National Iranian Oil Co., then moved toward the nearby American Embassy. Witnesses said the mob dispersed when the soldiers fired into the air, only to form again when the shooting stopped and storm on.

The protests swirled as anti-shah technical workers struck Iran Air, forcing the national carrier to cancel all 27 flights from Tehran. Anti-shah strikes also were drying up imports of consumer goods and sent Iran's oil production to such critical levels that the government ordered fuel rationing.

The rationing order was announced by Abdullah Entezam, chairman of the National Iranian Oil Co., who warned the move "might not be enough if the present general strike is continued." He appealed to Moslem leaders who urged the oil workers to walk off the job "to perform your duties and recommend that the strik-Teaching students to watch TV is this month's 'fleece'

WASHINGTON (AP) — A government agency was criticized today for spending $219,592 to develop a curriculum "to teach college students how to watch television."

Sen. William Proxmire gave his "Golden Fleece of the Month Award" to the Office of Education, which is paying Boston University's School of Public Communication to develop a college-level program of critical viewing skills.

The Wisconsin Democrat gives the award monthly for what he feels is the most wasteful example of government spending.

"While students may see an easy A in 'TV Viewing 101,' the Office of Education deserves a solid F for this contract," he said.

But Donis Dondis, acting dean of the communications school, said Proxmire was off the mark with his criticism.

"Universities teach English to freshmen to educate discriminating readers," Dondis said. "... It is no more absurd to teach a course that enables consumers to distinguish television exaggeration from reason, facts from assumptions and objective information from that which is biased, often deliberately."

He added, "Compared to the enormous sums spent on television programming, this is a modest project."

Proxmire said that "one can envision a proliferation of such grants. This one could be followed by federal funding to develop college curricula in the 'critical skills' needed to watch football, shop for Christmas gifts or to shovel snow."

Human rights increase in Iran, decline in eight nations, study shows

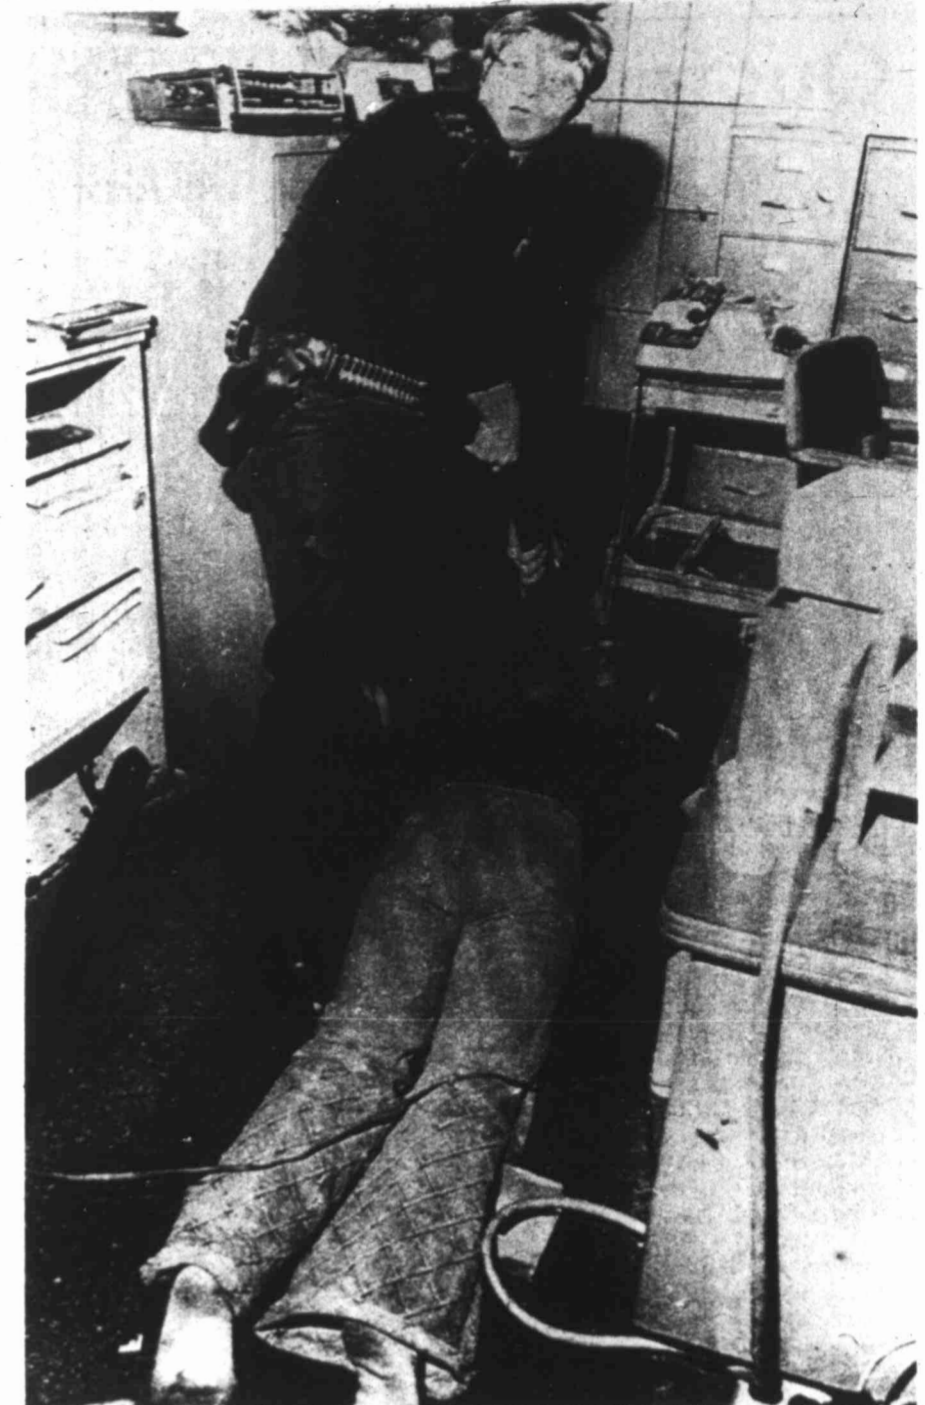

NEW YORK (AP) — Iran is one of the countries where human rights increased during 1978, according to a soon-to-be published Freedom House report which also said that 563 million people in 24 countries enjoyed greater freedom than in 1977.

Iran is "a classic example of the special jeopardy in which journalists find themselves in rapidly changing societies," according to a companion Freedom House report on press freedom in 1978, written by Leonard Sussman, the group's executive director.

In half the 24 countries where freedoms expanded, "journalists continued to be intimidated and their lives remained insecure," Sussman wrote. "This paradox is not unusual. Nations whose political systems are changing, for better or worse, are generally unstable. In conditions of instability, journalists are among the first to suffer attacks."

Fuel rationing imposed upon Iranians

Sources said Entezam had agreed to meet any salary demand the workers made, but the strikers said the stoppage would continue until the shah abdicates. Details of how the rationing plan would be administered were not included in Entezam's statement, but presumably customers at gasoline stations and other retail outlets would be limited in the amount of heating fuel and gasoline they could purchase.

Communist Cambodia reopens ancient temple to foreigners

ANGKOR, Cambodia (AP) — Communist Cambodia today reopened the temple of Angkor Wat to foreigners barred from viewing the ancient masterpiece by eight years of war and revolution. No major war damage to the ancient complex was apparent but neither was there any evidence of restoration and maintenance, which archaeologists say must be a continual process to fight off the ravages of heat, stagnant water, fungi and tree roots which attack and crumble the stones.

State Department hits snag in Nicaraguan peace talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department says its effort to end the turmoil in Nicaragua through a negotiated settlement has "hit a serious snag." In a statement issued Tuesday, the department criticized Nicaraguan President Anastasio Somoza for not accepting "a fair and workable plebiscite" backed by mediators. The statement noted the plan had been accepted by Somoza's opponents.

Quota system on spot

By OWEN ULLMANN

WASHINGTON (AP) — The case of Brian Weber has employers walking a tightrope over how to correct racial and sex imbalance on the job. So, a federal agency has thrown up a safety net in hopes of keeping affirmative action alive.

Weber is a white factory worker in Louisiana who sued his employer after being rejected from a craft training program that reserved half its places for minorities. A federal appeals court, ruling in Weber's favor, held that racial quotas or similar "affirmative actions" are illegal without proof or admission of past discrimination by a company.

The case, which is pending before the Supreme Court, creates in the mind of some employers a "damned if I do, damned I don't" situation.

If they initiate job preference plans to head off discrimination suits by minority workers, they may become vulnerable to "reverse discrimination" suits by white workers. But if they first admit past job bias to head off a Weber-type suit, they are inviting minorities to sue for damages.

Because of this dilemma, some employers may decide to do nothing until the Supreme Court issues a definitive ruling on the matter, which may be a long time away.

That's what worries the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, which fears that 15 years of progress in eliminating job discrimination may come to a halt because of the uncertainty.

Most large companies already have affirmative action programs, largely because they are required as a condition of doing business with the U.S. government. What concerns the commission are the millions of small businesses that may spurn affirmative action.

To counteract the "chilling effect" of cases like Weber's, the EEOC has issued guidelines designed to encourage employers to adopt voluntary affirmative action plans.

Essentially, the guidelines are an opinion by EEOC legal experts. They state that employers will not be violating the law if they analyze their employment practices, have "a reasonable basis" for concluding that affirmative action is appropriate and take "reasonable" corrective actions. These actions may include quotas and timetables for giving women and minorities increased job opportunities.

The guidelines provide a way for a company to recognize — and correct — imbalances on the job without having to admit to discriminatory practices.

The guidelines are based on the belief that, the Weber case notwithstanding, the Civil Rights Act of 1964 requires companies to initiate efforts to end discriminatory hiring and promotion practices. It's not enough to wait for an employee or the government to sue first.

But, retorts a company, what about the risk of costly damages it may have to pay if it loses a reverse discrimination suit to disgruntled white males passed up for promotion?

The EEOC acknowledges that its guidelines can't stop a company from being sued. Nor can it guarantee that affirmative action plans ultimately will survive Supreme Court review.

But the agency says its guidelines will shield companies from damage claims. To most companies, that's the kind of protection that counts.

Rising yen starts taking economic toll in Japan

By TERRY A. ANDERSON

TOKYO (AP) — The Japanese economy survived the continued upward run of the yen throughout 1978 with little damage, but some economists are beginning to make a few gloomy predictions about 1979.

The Japanese trade surplus continued to climb most of the year, bringing heavy pressure from the United States. The surplus was expected to reach $13 billion to $15 billion by the end of the year, twice last year's surplus. About half that was in trade with the United States.

But the drastic climb in the yen's value was beginning to have an effect on the trade balance, slowing exports in the July-September quarter, and it was hoped the surplus would begin to melt early in the new year.

Partly because of that slowdown in exports, non-government economists were almost unanimous in predicting that Japan would not reach its target of 7 percent gross national product growth in fiscal year 1978, ending Mar. 31, 1979. The government was still sticking to the 7 percent figure, but private research groups and even the powerful Keidanren, a federation of economic organizations made up of the heads of nearly all major Japanese companies and industries, say a much more realistic figure would be 5 to 5.5 percent.

The yen rose from about 240 to the dollar in early January to about 175 to the dollar in October before President Carter's dollar-defense program brought the dollar's slide to a halt and pushed the American currency back

It was expected that the higher yen, by making Japanese products more expensive and imports cheaper, would cut the trade surplus quickly. But most large Japanese companies kept price increases to a minimum by rationalizing production. American inflation also pushed up competing U.S. products, and raw materials became cheaper for the Japanese, who paid in dollars. The surplus kept growing, especially when expressed in dollars.

Finally, however, the higher yen began taking its toll. Exports dropped 4 percent in volume in the July-September quarter, and imports went up. Japan reported a trade deficit in first ten days of November for the first time since February.

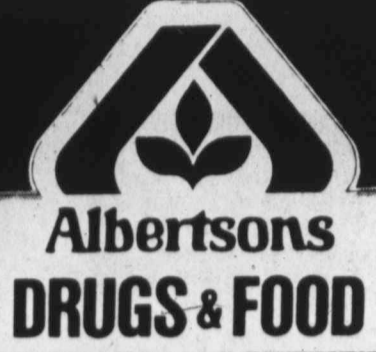

The domestic economy showed fairly slow but steady growth for the first half of the year, but slowed after that. Sales for major companies in the first half were down somewhat, but profits went up 18 percent because of lower interest rates and a shift in many company investment portfolios into securities and other short-term, high-profit investments.

Unfortunately, during the second half of the year, the drop in exports began causing industrial production cutbacks, slowing the domestic economy.

With inflation at a reasonable 4 percent, and employment almost negligible compared to other industrial countries, consumer spending continued to go up slowly.

South Africa's economy gaining despite unrest

By MAUREEN JOHNSON and SERGE SCHMEMMANN

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Despite threats of economic boycotts and continued signs of shaky business confidence in 1978, mineral rich South Africa achieved its best economic performance in years. The 3.5 percent estimated economic growth represents a modest rate, but in a country embroiled in change and racial turmoil, it was still its best performance since a 1973-74 boom.

But in Rhodesia, where a minority whites also control the government, the economy faltered again in 1978 under the strain of a guerrilla war. The spectacular rise in gold prices helped South Africa, whose mines produced 66 percent of the world's gold. And, with prices averaging $186.41 an ounce over the year, the state's share jumped almost 120 percent to $786 million.

But since South Africa's rand currency is linked to the dollar, the cost of servicing its foreign loans jumped as the dollar's value fell on world currency markets. And the effect of that wiped out much of the benefit of its rise in income from gold.

Despite a budget designed to encourage "growth with discipline" and lowered bank rates, investments remained low, reflecting continued lack of confidence among businessmen in a country increasingly threatened by economic boycotts of its official policies of racial segregation.

"The political clouds are obscuring the economic horizon," wrote one commentator for the Financial Mail. The instability continued to curtail foreign investment and immigration of skilled workers. Despite moderate growth about two million of South Africa's nearly 20 million blacks remained unemployed.

But one hopeful sign of business confidence in South Africa was the government's success in arranging its first foreign loan since the Soweto riots of 1976. The $250 million loan was raised in Europe to be used for black housing and education.

Among its major trading partners, the United States ranked second, behind Britain but ahead of Japan and West Germany.

A major uncertainty in South Africa's economic future is the fate of South West Africa or Namibia, a territory headed for black majority rule. The mineral-rich territory's exports account for about 10 percent of South Africa's annual foreign exchange earnings, but this source could be threatened by a hostile black majority government in Namibia.

In Rhodesia, the economy came under increasing strain during 1978 as the guerrilla war, now costing about more than $1 million a day, escalated. International trade embargoes continued to take their toll and a record exodus of whites delivered a new economic blow.

A record deficit budget of $134 billion — of which officials said $443 million would be raised by local and foreign loans — reflected the transition government's hope that the war would wind down and sanctions would be eased or lifted in 1979.

But there seemed little hope of recognition or an end to sanctions, and as the year drew to a close, the war escalated daily.

Gross domestic product fell about 3.5 percent in 1978 for the fourth successive annual decrease. But agricultural production, which accounts for nearly half the country's foreign exchange earnings, reached a record $720 million.

Skilled manpower was badly drained by record emigration of whites, expected to reach 12,000 in 1978 out of about 260,000 whites.

SWAPO swamped

While most of the world refused to recognize the results of the recent one-man, one-vote election in the South African territory of Namibia, the balloting did serve to puncture the United Nations' fatuous assertion that the Soviet-supported SWAPO guerrillas are the sole, legitimate representatives of the Namibian people.

The South West African People's Organization spurned invitations to participate in the voting. Instead, it urged its supporters to boycott the election as a protest against South Africa's sponsorship. The result had to be an embarrassment to SWAPO: 81 percent of Namibia's eligible voters cast ballots for nationalist candidates despite SWAPO's threat to use terrorism to disrupt the election.

The 50 elected members of Namibia's new constituent assembly are to begin work on a constitution to take effect once South Africa grants independence, presumably sometime next year.

In the meantime, Namibia faces the prospect of a second election, this one supervised by the United Nations. The case for a second, internationally supervised election is compelling.

Unlike the recent affair, run by the South African territorial administration, an election conducted under international auspices would command world recognition. It would yield Namibia's new government untainted diplomatic credentials.

But most importantly, it would compel SWAPO's president, Sam Nujoma, to choose between the electoral process or violence he no longer could conceal as anything other than an attempt to seize power against the wishes of the Namibian majority.

Recently, the South African government agreed in principle to cooperate in a U.N.-sponsored election tentatively scheduled for next July. It now is up to SWAPO to determine whether Namibia's transition to independence is peacefully achieved or simply a prelude to civil war.

Perfect pioneers

The perfect performance of the Pioneer space probes sampling the atmosphere of Venus is really no surprise. Ever since America's space engineers got into the business, flawless missions and uncanny precision have been the rule rather than the exception.

The surprises are all in the data coming back from Venus. Scientists may have to revise their theories about the history of the planets in our solar system. The presumption that Venus has a history similar to that of Earth and Mars is not being borne out in the early analysis of the Pioneer transmissions.

Our Venus probes, and two from the Soviet Union that will reach the planet later this month, are interesting enough from an academic standpoint, but the net result should be a better understanding of our own climate and weather patterns.

In particular, scientists are worried about the "greenhouse effect" which could change the Earth's climate as carbon dioxide builds up in the atmosphere from the burning of fossil fuels and traps heat underneath. Venus seems to represent a greenhouse run wild. Its atmosphere is almost pure carbon dioxide, and its surface temperature a torrid 900 degrees. How did it get that way?

Scientists will now know more of the answers — thanks to the engineers at the Ames Research Center who scored a technological bullseye on a planet 33.5 million miles from Earth. Nearly a decade after our space program saw the triumph of the first Apollo landing on the moon, it's good to know that our expertise in space is as sharp as ever.

Carter budget cuts to wound his constituencies

WASHINGTON — The cuts which President Carter is determined to make in the new budget — in order to slow the inflation monster — are already causing great yelping in precincts where the urge to do good simply won't be quelled.

Take, say, the estimable organization supporting the construction of a $37 million research and training building for the National Institute of Child Health and Human Development.

Led by a group of the most eminent medical educators in the land, plus prestigious activists like Eunice Kennedy Shriver, the Rev. Jesse Jackson, and former H.E.W. Secretary Wilbur Cohen, they are fighting Carter's decision to cut the building from the budget, even though Congress has already funded it.

"There's no justice in this," Eunice Shriver says. "Why should children carry the burden of budget cutting? We should be concentrating on the mental and physical health of children. This is a disgrace."

Now that's tough stuff from a Kennedy sister to the Carter Administration, and one might suspect politics if it weren't for the fact that Eunice Shriver has spent an enormous part of her adult life working to alleviate the suffering caused by birth defects.

Moreover, a disparate collection of pro-life and pro-choice groups (on the abortion question), the Ford and Rockefeller Foundations, the March of Dimes, a clutch of Nobel Prize winners and three national associations of pediatricians, are also calling on the Administration to rescind the cut.

They argue that science is on the verge of great breakthroughs in fetal and infant health, and that having one basic research facility for this purpose at the National Institute of Health would expedite progress. There is no such facility in the entire Western world, and its backers claim that once the U.S. builds one, the rest of the world is likely to follow its lead.

Infant illnesses rarely make the list of top "killer" diseases, yet they rank high among the cause of death. But in recent years, it was learned that injecting the drug, Rohogam, into the mother immediately after birth prevents severe risk to the next fetus in cases where parents carried different RH blood factors. Similarly, there has been great progress in dealing with Downs Syndrome.

Technology now exists to identify many such genetic problems before birth, though the consequent treatment is often abortion if Mongolism is

Slim vote crop for Carter (?)

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — Georgia's dirt farmers, angry at their neighbor in the White House, were in the vanguard of last year's farm strike. They have now been placated, at least temporarily, by slightly higher crop prices and a massive infusion of federal loans.

President Carter's home county, Sumter, was loaned a whopping $20.4 million from the U.S. Treasury. The money was distributed to 289 farmers — an average loan of $70,500 apiece. Overall, Georgia farmers got $385.5 million, almost 8 percent of the nationwide total.

The president's neighbors got some of the biggest payments in the nation, but they were also among the hardest hit. The root cause of their discontent remains, nevertheless, as does the bitterness they feel toward their fellow Georgian in the Oval Office.

Faced with skyrocketing costs of equipment, fuel and fertilizer and with crop prices controlled by others, the beleaguered farmers simply can't make ends meet.

Their frustration isn't helped any by the realization that everyone else in the food processing chain — suppliers, brokers, food processors, supermarkets — are making money from their labors.

If the bail-out money from Washington did not placate the farmers, neither will it please the consumers. For it's costing them tax dollars at a time when the president is calling upon them to tighten their belts.

Last winter, the farmers' frustration boiled over into a national farm strike. One of the spawning grounds of that movement was Bacon County, Ga.

In October 1977, tractors rumbled along the country's once quiet roads in one of the first spontaneous protest demonstrations of what eventually became the American Agricultural Movement. Before they were through, angry Bacon County farmers, armed with tanks of anhydrous ammonia, squared off against Georgia state troopers, armed with guns and tear gas.

We sent our reporter Hal Bernton to Bacon County at harvest time to see how things were one year after the Lexington-Concord of the American farm revolution. He found the county peaceful, at least on the surface. The local newspaper headlines, for example, revealed nothing more exciting than the doings of the high school homecoming queen.

A year ago, the militant farmers had issued a call to arms — let each farmer keep half of his land out of production, to force crop prices up. This tactic never materialized. When it came time to plant last spring, Bacon County farmers were convinced that many of their counterparts across the country were not going to join them, so they went ahead and plowed their fields from fence row to fence row.

The result of their labors was as discouraging as ever. Farmers with half a million dollars invested in land and equipment slaved all summer in their fields, only to find at harvest time that they hadn't made enough to pay off their suppliers and the bankers.

Only last-minute loans from the federal government — over $10 million to Bacon County farmers alone — prevented a wave of

ART BUCHWALD Garb of oil ministers helps them 'stand out'

WASHINGTON — Everyone is mad at the OPEC nations for raising the price of oil by 14 1/2 percent. They also seem to be madder at the Arab countries than the other members of OPEC. My theory on this is that every time the photographers take photos of the oil ministers, the Arab ones stand out because they are dressed in their burnouses, while the other OPEC representatives fade into the background in their English-tailored suits.

I, for one, think the OPEC people made a serious mistake in raising the price of their oil. The reason they gave was that the dollar had been so weakened by inflation that they were losing money. What they didn't say was one of the major reasons for the dollar sagging was the price they put on their oil in the first place.

Since the OPEC nations have accumulated most of the dollars in the world, it would have been in their interests to CUT the price of oil by 14 1/2 percent rather than raise it. This would have sent the value of the dollar to new heights, and wrecked the Japanese yen, the German mark, and the Sri Lankan rupee.

The new price raise just cooked up in Abu Dhabi will not solve the dollar problem, but exacerbate it, and in a year the OPEC countries will be complaining again how their dollars are being blown away by the winds of inflation.

I wish I could only blame OPEC and the Arabs in OPEC for all our problems. But I just talked to an economist who said the cost of fuel, while it starts with the OPEC countries, goes through many stages.

"When the cost of crude oil is raised," he told me, "everyone gets in the act. Let's say that the OPEC chaps add three cents to the price of a gallon in Abu Dhabi.

"The 'Seven Sister' oil companies at the Petroleum Club in Houston say to each other, 'Hey, since the OPEC ministers have raised the price three cents, this is a good chance for us to raise it two cents more. The consumer will blame the Arabs and we'll be let off scot-free.'

"So now we have five cents added to the gallon. But the people who transport oil in tankers, railroad cars and trucks accidentally run into each other in a diner outside of Chicago and say, 'Did you see what they did in Abu Dhabi? Upped the price of fuel three cents.' And someone else says, 'And the folks in Houston met their three cents and raised them two. I say we should add another cent on for transportation. If we don't do it now we may never get a chance until the next OPEC meeting.'

"So now we're talking about a six-cent raise," my economist friend continued. "The refiner adds another cent for unleaded, and the oil company sales departments add a cent for good luck.

"The advertising departments tell management they're going to need another two cents a gallon to sponsor more good shows on public television, so the people who have to pay an additional 10 cents a gallon will think nice things about oil companies."

"Then what you're saying is, the only thing we can hope to get out of the OPEC meeting in Abu Dhabi is another TV series like 'Upstairs, Downstairs?'"

"You got it."

"Is there any hope that the price of oil will ever go down?"

"Only if they discover a lot of it off the coast of New Jersey."

"That would be awful."

"Why do you say that?"

"Well, it's one thing to kiss the hem of an Arab's burnouse in Saudi Arabia — but it's another to kiss one worn by a person who comes from New Jersey."

Mark Russell says

No doubt about it — television treats adults like children. It not only convinces tiny tots that sugary cereals are good for them, but it has many grown-ups believing that Will Rogers ate Grape Nuts.

Maybe, as his son Will Jr. keeps telling us in the commercials, he really did eat Grape Nuts. Does that mean that the actor James Whitmore eats imitation Grape Nuts?

In the interests of fairness, if the Federal Trade Commission succeeds in taking children's cereal commercials off the air, shouldn't they force the makers of Grape Nuts to prove that their product will turn you into a beloved humorist?

Or if you purchase a certain perfume for your wife, she will start looking like Catherine Deneuve?

Or if you give a certain after-shave lotion to your husband, he will suddenly turn into a Larry Consonka?

For some Midlanders, the "letdown" after the Christmas holidays came rather quickly. Several Christmas trees Tuesday were seen discarded near trash bins around the Tall City. Trash crews have been busy emptying overflowing containers following the usual deluge of boxes and paper which previously held gifts. (Staff Photo)

Trees are post-holiday problem

Getting rid of the Christmas tree for most Midlanders means only trying to vacuum the pine needles out of the carpet. But for the city's sanitation department, the trees can be a real problem.

Sanitation workers will be picking up the evergreens for the next month to 45 days, according to Bill Duckworth, sanitation supervisor. He points out the trees should be cut into 3- to 4-foot lengths before being placed in dumpsters so they don't get caught up in the trash receptacles.

Waiting another three or four days before dumping the tree also will be a service to the sanitation workers, Duckworth said.

Since no trash pick-ups were made Monday, most dumpsters are already full of Christmas remains without the added burden of discarded Christmas trees.

"It will take us about three weeks to catch up on all the garbage," he noted, since the department will work another short week with the New Year's Day holiday coming up Monday.

"We have plenty of trucks and plenty of men," he said. "We're just running about 10 hours behind."

Cabbie spends cramped Christmas

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A Fort Worth cab driver, held up by two shotgun-toting bandits, spent most of his Christmas locked in the trunk of his cab.

James Lloyd Stine, 44, the object of a Christmas search by police, was found shortly after midnight Tuesday. Stine, a diabetic, was unharmed.

Two men brandishing a shotgun commandeered the cab about 9 p.m. Sunday, ordered Stine to hand over the money and then forced him into the trunk.

Stine said the men drove him around about 20 minutes, then parked the cab and apparently left in another car.

A hospital worker said her boyfriend overheard two men say in a bar that they had robbed a cab and left the driver in the trunk near a Fort Worth bakery. The couple found the cab and heard the driver banging in the trunk.

EPA to crack down on diesel autos

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Diesel powered cars emit unacceptably high levels of air pollution and must be changed to ward off a possible health hazard, a federal air quality expert says.

Charles Gray, director of the federal Environmental Protection Agency's emissions lab here, said the EPA will propose strict emissions limits next month for diesel cars.

Gray said tests of 10 foreign and domestic cars showed the vehicles emitted particulate matter — commonly known as soot — in amounts far exceeding the EPA standard for gasoline-powered cars.

"The diesels emitted up to 100 times the amount of particulates discharged by gasoline-powered cars," Gray said. "The worst of them sent out one gallon of particulates for every 1,000 miles traveled."

The proposed standards, Gray said, would allow 0.6 grams per mile for 1981 model cars, to be reduced to 0.2 grams per mile by the 1983 model year.

"Manufacturers will have to reduce these particulate emissions..." Gray said. "Health concerns dictate that they must meet these standards."

Gray said EPA is concerned because diesel emissions contain a suspected mutagen — an agent capable of causing cell changes and possibly cancer.

The world's largest automaker, General Motors, says it cannot meet the proposed standards. GM emissions director Thomas Fisher said the company is checking to see if diesel soot poses a health hazard.

If the emissions are hazardous, and if GM is unable to modify its engines, "we may have to go to other alternatives to meet the federal government's fuel-economy requirements — mainly smaller engines and smaller cars," Fisher said.

The federal government is requiring automakers to attain a fleet average of 27.5 miles per gallon for cars by the 1985 model year. GM has invested millions of dollars on diesel cars — which generally get more miles per gallon of fuel than do gasoline-powered cars — as a way of meeting that goal.

Other automakers say fear of a government crackdown kept them from developing diesel cars.

Don Gschwind, a Chrysler spokesman, said the government's position on emissions was anticipated by his firm. Chrysler said last week it was dropping plans to produce light trucks and vans equipped with diesel engines due to a lack of demand and problems with emissions.

The cars tested by the

EPA, and their emissions rates were:

VW Rabbit, 0.23 grams per mile; Peugeot 504, 0.29; VW Dasher, 0.32; Mercedes Benz 300SD, 0.45; International Scout, 0.47; Mercedes Benz 240D, 0.53; Dodge Pickup, 0.61; Mercedes Benz 300D, 0.83; Oldsmobile 260, 0.7 to 1.0; Oldsmobile 350, 0.9 to 1.0.

The Olds engines also are used in some Cadillacs and Buicks.

Under the new National Energy Act, recently signed by President Carter, consumers can save two different ways by insulating—on their income tax and through lower home heating costs.

One of the provisions in the energy package permits an income tax credit of up to $300 for expenditures on energy conserving products such as insulation. The amount of the credit equals 15 percent of the first $2,000 invested.

In addition to insulation, other items which qualify for the credit are caulking, weather-stripping, storm or thermal doors and windows, modified flue openings, automatic furnace ignition systems and clock thermostats.

The tax credit is available to owners of condominiums and cooperatives, as well as owners of single-family dwellings, as long as the unit is the principal place of residence. Vacation homes are excluded.

Also, the tax credit is not limited to purchases made during the 1978 tax year. It extends to qualifying items purchased and installed between April 20, 1977 and Dec. 31, 1985 in homes completed before the April 20 date. Dwellings constructed after April 20, 1977 are excluded from the credit; however, many new homes are already energy efficient due to improved new construction standards.

Party honors 11 residents

The December birthday party at Trinity Towers was held to honor all residents with December birthdays.

An old fashioned Christmas party was given to celebrate the birthdays of Mittie McCleskey, Ethel Mitchell, Virginia Westervelt, Esther Pool, Mary Belle Beaty, Allien Winn, Margaret Bone, Rudolph Ramsland, Louise Fullinwider, Velma Haag and John Bussey.

Santa payed a visit to the group, passing out candy canes. Flowers for the refreshment table centerpiece were furnished by Louise Haas, Revers Howard and Etta O'dell. A birthday cake was provided by the Circle L Sunday School class and Mr. and Mrs. Howard Redding.

Guests at the party included Coila and Shelli Morrow, Mrs. "Curly" McGraw, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Redding, Mrs. Florence Merket, Mrs. J.O. Hinken, Andy, Gladden and Diann Duff, Alma Heard, Sarah and Nell Fullinwider, Mrs. J.H. Beaty, Mrs. Ralph McCleskey, Mr. and Ms. Bob Haislip, Mr. and Mrs. Conn Thomas, Mr. and Mrs. Bill Larson, Mr. and Mrs. H.W. Davidson, Steve and Jan Davidson; Mrs. W.M. Brice, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Ramsland, Nelda Hampton, Mary Milam of Odessa, Mr. and Mrs. Max Mainord of Odessa, Mr. and Mrs. Kem Paschal of McCamey, Mr. and Mrs. James Thomas of Odessa, and Judy, Tracey and Jennifer Tripp of Houston.

Volunteers assisting with the party included chairman Evelyn Heard, Wilma Maley, Mildred Brown, Lucille Semple, Jo McGill, Esther Hodge, Esther Denton, Helen Luff, Helen Reid and Mary France Haden, who aided the volunteers in serving cake and punch.

Santa's hotline short circuits

NEW ORLEANS (AP)— Telephone lines here have been overloaded by the spirit of "Christmas presents."

Ensign 4th Class Bill Echols set up a special hot line to Santa Claus, patching a phone into an emergency ham radio station at Fort Polk, La., so area youngsters could transmit their gift wishes.

What started as a trickle of calls became a flood. At one point, 6,000 children called within 20 minutes, Echols said Monday, tying up phone lines into much of Louisiana and eventually overloading telephone company computers as far away as Atlanta.

"It kept getting worse and worse. You'd pick up on either of our two lines and get five or six kids yelling, 'Santa Claus, Santa Claus, we've been waiting an hour to talk to you.'"

"We eventually ended up having calls from the (telephone) supervisor in Atlanta, saying the lines were backed up so far that even the trunk lines—the main lines—were messed up."

At 10:30 p.m. Friday, the phones were taken off the hook and on Saturday, at the phone company's request, Santa's hotline was shut down.

EDINBURG (AP)— A Scots pint used to be equivalent to almost three imperial pints. Modest drinkers asked for a mutchkin—a quarter of a Scots pint.

Until imperial measure became compulsory in Scotland in 1826, pints were drunk from a tappit hen, a pewter tankard with a top on it. A pint and two mutchkins were served in a hen and chickens.

Artist's world of fantasy displayed

By C.G. McDANIEL
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP)— The strange, fascinating world of a schizophrenic confined to a Swiss mental hospital may be seen in an exhibition at the Museum of Contemporary Art in Chicago.

It consists of 126 black-and-white and colored drawings done by Adolf Wolfli, who was born into a disturbed family in Bern, Switzerland, in 1864 and spent the last 35 years of his life, until his death in 1930, in an asylum.

The exhibit was first seen at the Busch-Reisinger Museum in Cambridge, Mass., and will go to the Des Moines Art Center and the Grey Gallery in New York after closing in Chicago early in 1979.

After Wolfli's alcoholic father deserted the family and his mother died, the 8-year-old Wolfli was placed by the state as a child laborer on a Bern farm.

Wolfli lived on the fringes of society and worked at menial jobs until he was arrested for a third time for child molestation and was declared violently schizophrenic.

Although untrained as an artist, Wolfli began to draw when a guard gave him a pencil and some newspaper following one of his violent outbursts. At that time he had been in the institution for five years.

He then began to produce prodigious quantities of drawings of scenes he recalled or invented.

The pages were covered from edge to edge with intricately detailed pictures in which he used his private picture vocabulary, repeating various images over and over, along with nonsense words, tales of adventure, musical compositions and financial ledgers.

He continued to experience periods of violence alternating with more peaceful episodes, but drawing is said to have soothed him unfailingly throughout his incarceration.

1978 ends up to be year of high prices, consumer tax rebellion

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Food prices are up. The dollar is down. The president wants to cut inflation.

The headlines of 1978 were often familiar ones for consumers who watched the cost of just about everything rise through the year.

For many, the answer to frustration was rebellion — tax rebellion. California's passage of Proposition 13, cutting property taxes by an average of 57 percent, touched off what some dubbed the "Taxpayer Revolt of 1978." Proposals to cut taxes or limit government spending won strong support in the November elections.

CONGRESS KEPT its eye on the tax-cutting fever and passed a bill lowering income levies for millions, but many Americans will find the decrease more than offset by higher Social Security taxes in 1979.

When President Carter announced his anti-inflation program in October, inflation was running at an annual rate of about 10 percent a year, compared to the approximately 6.5 percent of 1977. And Carter's program of voluntary limits on wages and prices was expected to have little impact before the middle of 1979.

Most people didn't need government reports to tell them things were getting worse; a look at the family budget was enough. But just as the Christmas shopping season got under way, the government made it official: The Consumer Price Index topped 200. It cost twice as much for a selected list of goods and services as it did in 1967.

CONSUMER ACTIVISTS said they were disappointed in Congress. The Consumer Federation of America said consumers were "routinely betrayed by a majority" of the nation's senators and representatives. The group, which is the nation's largest consumer organization, said it was particularly upset by "the growing number of so-called moderates and liberals who have misread the mood of this country and chosen to passively knuckle under rather than aggressively take the offensive against corporate greed."

Several developments in the field of transportation involved consumers during 1978. Millions of consumers were affected by recalls, involving potentially dangerous automobiles and radial tires; in both cases, alleged safety defects led to costly lawsuits. Legislation to ease restrictions on airlines was passed by Congress and signed by Carter. The law is designed to lower prices by promoting increased competition, but one immediate impact was confusion for travelers faced with a rash of new promotional fares.

Here is a chronological look at some of 1978's events:

JANUARY: Bitter cold weather and blizzards brought misery to much of the country. Heating bills soared; prices for fresh fruits and vegetables temporarily increased to record levels.

FEBRUARY: The administration's proposal for an independent consumer protection agency was defeated by the House. Esther Peterson, special assistant to the president for consumer affairs, said: "This is not the end of the issue. The consumer voice must be heard..." Richard Leshner, president of the Chamber of Commerce, disagreed. "The House majority clearly heard the voices of the American people who are weary of too much government," he said.

MARCH: The Fair Debt Collection Practices Act, designed to end harassment by bill collectors, went into effect. The law bans such practices as middle-of-the-night phone calls and threats of violence.

APRIL: The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration announced it had begun an investigation of Firestone 500 steel-belted radial tires, looking into allegations of blowouts and other problems. The investigation ultimately led to a recall, announced in October, involving some 7.5 million tires.

MAY: Beef prices reached near-record levels. "Upward price movements will not end in 1978," the Department of Agriculture said. "Annual reductions in beef output are likely for the next two to three years."

JUNE: A recall of 1.5 million 1971-76 Ford Pinto and 30,000

Mercury Bobcat cars was announced. The automobiles were recalled because government tests indicated leaks from the fuel system posed a hazard of fire in rear-end collisions. In another area, a Federal Trade Commission staff study recommended stiff federal regulations for funeral home operators.

JULY: Good news for coffee lovers. The price of a pound of coffee was below $3 in most areas. An Associated Press survey showed the price had dropped 14 percent since the beginning of the year.

AUGUST: A no-fault automobile insurance bill was defeated by a House committee. Mrs. Peterson called the defeat "a real loss for consumers." Mrs. Peterson praised a bill, signed by the president on Aug. 20, establishing a bank to make loans to consumer cooperatives. She said the measure was "the most significant piece of consumer legislation to be enacted by the 95th Congress."

SEPTEMBER: Students heading for college found costs were up. A study by the College Scholarship Service of the College Board showed the average increase from the 1977-78 academic year to the 1978-79 year was 6 percent. The one-year cost for a resident student at a private, four-year college now averages $5,000.

OCTOBER: Carter announced his anti-inflation program, trying to limit annual increases in prices to 5.75 percent and increases in wages and benefits to 7 percent. The Consumer Price Index for the month stood at 200.9

NOVEMBER: A Federal Reserve Board regulation took effect allowing consumers to authorize banks to automatically transfer money from savings to checking accounts. In an effort to halt the decline in the value of the dollar overseas, the administration announced an increase in the federal discount rate — a move which set off boosts in other interest rates, including those on home mortgages.

DECEMBER: Shortages of certain types of gasoline in scattered areas led to new price increases. Also in short supply in some places: Christmas trees.

DEAR ABBY

If you lend for love, kiss your $$$ goodbye

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am in love with a man I've been dating for three years. Three months ago he asked to borrow $3,000 to complete a business deal. He said he'd pay me back in 30 days.

I gave him the $3,000 and didn't want to insult him by asking for an IOU.

Five weeks passed without a mention of the money, so I asked him how his deal was coming. He said it fell through, but that he had used the $3,000 to repay another debt. He said he would repay me as soon as he sold a piece of property he owned.

A month later I brought up the matter of the money again and he said the property didn't bring as much as he thought it would, but he'd try to give me half of what he owed me as soon as possible.

Abby, I mentioned the money again last evening and he said he didn't really need it in the first place; he was only testing me to see if I'd give it to him!

Now I'm confused, angry and disappointed. The $3,000 won't break me, but I'm not rich either. I'm not the type to take legal steps to get my money. What do you make of this whole episode?—MIXED EMOTIONS

DEAR MIXED: The gentleman appears to be a flake. Be prepared to write off the $3,000 as tuition in the school of experience. And never lend money without a proper IOU. (P.S. If you're still in love with him, I suggest you keep your heartstrings and your purse strings separate.)

DEAR ABBY: A friend of mine just got her nose re-done. Abby, there wasn't anything wrong with it, but she thought it was too big. That was last year. Now she wants to have her breasts enlarged!

What do you think of people who get themselves done over? I think it's phony, selfish and egotistical.—M. FROM KANSAS

DEAR M.: You are entitled to your opinion, and so is your friend. Anything people do about their appearance that will make them feel better about themselves is all right with me. Now, what's YOUR problem?

DEAR ABBY: You always tell girls they should confide in their mothers. Well, I used to, but no more.

First I made my mother promise that if I told her something in confidence she wouldn't tell anybody. She promised, and I told her. (It was something about a boy I liked.) Well, it got back to him because my mother told my aunt, and this aunt just happens to have the biggest mouth in Scarsdale, and she told the boy's mother!

So, please, Abby, tell mothers who can't keep secrets not to feel left out if their children don't tell them anything.—SORRY GIRL

DEAR SORRY: You're right, of course. So, to all you mothers out there: If you want to keep the lines of communication open between you and your children, never—but NEVER—betray a confidence.

Class of 1925 has 53rd reunion

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — The 50 members of Arlington High School's 1925 graduating class have been a close group.

They conducted their first class reunion in 1926, their second in 1927 — and met recently for the 53rd consecutive year.

Sixteen members of the class attended the reunion.

"After 53 years, lots of us are incapacitated or have already gone over the great divide and got their diploma," said Robert Fielder, who arranges the annual event. He said the reunions would continue until three class members were left.

"That year, the three will have a bottle of champagne, light candles and read the class roster," he said. "Then the champagne bottle will be put in the trophy case at the high school (in memory of the class.)"

Foster parents give new life to closet girl

REISTERSTOWN, Md. (AP) — Patty Saunders stands a little over 4-feet tall, weighs 67 pounds, enjoys music and "is always dancing and singing." She rarely talks about the past.

That's a drastic change from July 1976. Then, at age 8, Patty was taken from her home by police — weighing 23 pounds, standing 2-feet-10 inches. Her first words to officers were, "I'm hungry."

Police found her locked in a closet, starving and covered with filth. Her body bore the scars of burns and beatings.

She was placed in the custody of the Baltimore County social services agency, which arranged foster parents for her.

"Patty's with a family that loves her," said Elizabeth Parvis, a supervisor for the social services agency.

Her mother, Linda Faye Burchfield, 30, is serving a 32-year prison term for child abuse. The stepfather, Billy Floyd Burchfield, 38, is serving 40 years. Each was convicted in May 1977 — three months after Patty moved in with her foster parents.

At first, doctors at a local hospital were not sure Patty would recover. The child, however, is approaching normalcy in physical, social and mental growth.

"Those people (foster parents) deserve all the credit in the world," Mrs. Parvis said.

The foster parents, who asked not to be identified, said when Patty arrived at their home, she was 39 inches tall and weighed 42 pounds. She could not read or write and walked with a limp because of a broken leg which had never been set properly.

The leg has since been set and Patty now has a special staircase on which to exercise.

Since she started school, she has progressed to just under a third grade level, according to her foster mother.

"She's really done well in school. On her first day in her new school, she brought home a reading book and read me the first story in it. She knows how to print and write and also does math."

New Zealand laws protects pig, dogs

AUCKLAND, New Zealand (AP) — A New Zealand woman has been fined $51 for wanton neglect of a pig.

The court was told the woman had left the pig tied in a sack in her backyard.

The pig was intended to be the feature of a barbecue, but was rescued by an inspector from the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

AUCKLAND, New Zealand (AP) — It is an offense in New Zealand for a dog owner not to take his pet for a walk at least once every 24 hours.

Recently an Auckland man was fined $35 under the little-used law.

Life's tragic curtain: 'Let me die my own way'

By DARLA WELLES
Copley News Service

The man is sitting outside his doctor's office, waiting and smoking a cigarette.

He's been a heavy smoker for years and lately he hasn't been feeling well. He's been suffering from chest pains, coughing up blood.

Today he's waiting to hear his doctor's report of the results of his examinations.

The fear is already there, but he keeps pushing it to the back of his mind.

He exhales smoke with a sigh and begins to speak:

"Well, as soon as I get this thing over with, I'm going to head out to do some fishing. It's the perfect time of year."

"I wonder if my wife and the doctor are talking behind my back. She looks so worried every time I see her. I sometimes think maybe I'd ought to go back to church. Sort of get things straightened out with God."

"Sometimes I think I'm getting better. The pain in my chest doesn't seem so bad. I only coughed blood twice last night. I really think I am getting better. I can hardly wait to get out on that fishing trip. Joe and Tom and Mike and I! We really play cards all night. We don't really do much fishing.

"But this doctor's office is such a different world. Everyone here looks so serious. They all look like it's the end of the world. But it's not the end of the world. Even if I'm sick. I read yesterday in National Enquirer that 70 percent of all cancer patients can be cured. Even if I do have something in here. You know, it isn't going to happen to me."

"I've been lucky all my life. I got the nicest kids. Nicest wife."

"Yeah, I think I will go back to church. I think I'm going to give $500 to the youth club. Provided I don't have anything wrong in here. If there's nothing wrong, I'm going to do it."

But the church won't get the money. And there'll be no fishing trip. And the man, waiting impatiently for his appointment, won't see one of his nice kids graduate from college the next year.

Instead he'll be told that he has terminal cancer. That it's inoperable. That it won't respond to radiation or chemotherapy.

At first he won't believe these things. He'll cling to misinformation, expect his doctor to dole out a cure like so many pills from a bottle.

The strain of the situation will throw a spotlight on the frayed edges

"I've got a little while left and I'm going to live the way I want to live. I'm going to be the Johnny Unitas of my life. I'm going to be the quarterback. I want to live my own life and I want to die my own death with some degree of dignity."

and cracks in his relationship with his wife, which has been well worn by the years they've shared.

He'll suffer as much from fear and anger and feelings of isolation as from the pain of his disease. At least the physical pain can be alleviated with medication.

He'll experience a deathbed reunion and confrontation with his wealthy and successful brother, who's been too busy to see him for the last 10 years.

And finally he'll declare his autonomy and claim the right to dictate the terms of his own death without heroic medical intervention — despite the well-meaning pleas of his wife and brother that he be given every measure of life-support available.

The preceding is not the true story of a death.

Rather it is a composite of many deaths as they are experienced today in a society that has for years tried to put death out of its view.

It is a psychodrama performed by health professionals for health professionals in an effort to cast more attention on the human issues involved in treating the patient with cancer.

Their portrayals showcased the human strengths and foibles that mark the interplay between patient, physician and family when faced with imminent death.

It showed the reluctance of the doctor to break the bad news to the patient, his feelings of impotence at being unable to produce a cure from his black bag of medical tricks. And it showed, too, his very human feeling of annoyance at having the test results returned to him at an inconvenient time, during a hectic and frustrating week when he feels overburdened with appointments and office problems and depressed by the deaths of two of his patients.

It showed the feelings of the wife. Some resentment at being left with two teen-age children to get through college and at having to face the prospect of taking over the duties her husband had always handled. Guilt for feeling concern over her own future while her husband is dying. And fear of being left alone.

"I look at my neighbor lady down the street. She's been a widow for a few years. And for the first few months she had lots of friends helping her and asking her to do things and go places with them. And then all of a sudden there was nobody there. I guess what it really is — I'm so afraid to be alone."

And it showed the guilts of the brother who's been so successful that he hasn't had time to keep up family contact. And his frustration that his wealth and success can do nothing to extend his brother's life and give them the chance to make up for lost time.

It showed the patient's anger growing as his life slips away. As he watches his friends and children turn away from the sight of his death. As his wife and brother and physician work out their reactions to his death, sometimes seeming to forget his presence and the fact that he is still alive and feeling and struggling with his own fears and guilts and angers.

"Wait a minute. It's my life you're talking about. And, by God, I'm going to run my own life."

"I've got a little while left and I'm going to live the way I want to live. I'm going to be the Johnny Unitas of my life. I'm going to be the quarterback."

Pointing to the doctor, the brother and his wife, he shouts:

"I want to live my own life and I want to die my own death with some degree of dignity!"

The doctor intercedes, asking the wife if she can accept her husband's choice to die without further medical intervention.

"Why are you asking her?" the patient demands. "Don't ask her. It's my life. She's got a life and she's going to die her way. This is my life."

The scene ends with the patient in control of his own destiny. It ends with the hope that the lines of communication have been cleared for contact and real resolution of the matters that must be discussed to put the patient at peace with himself and those he's leaving behind.

Dimitri designs travel westward to San Diego

By Natalie Best
Copley News Service

SAN DIEGO, Calif. — Dimitri has gone "public."

After many years of producing personalized, high-fashion creations in menswear at the top price, the New York couture tailor has designed a spring-summer collection of ready-to-wear for Ratner, the West Coast's leading men's clothing manufacturer.

The partnership means that while women's high fashion clothes continue to be more expensive, men will be able to buy a couture line for less money next year.

Piero Dimitri, who learned his exacting art of tailoring in his native Italy, once said, "Most people don't know what quality really is."

By quality, Dimitri means custom details, the finest fabrics and hand-sewing now being done by machines even in some of the most expensive designer clothing available.

He insists it is constructing a suit by the same handmade standards he learned in Palermo before he came to the United States.

In 1979 Ratner's Dimitri-designed suits, coats and slacks will be available from $250 to $500, slightly more than the Ratner standard lines, but considerably less than Dimitri's customized creations which started well over the $500 figure.

"A couture line made to order," said Ira Idell, spokesman for Ratner.

The featured models will include the Dolce, a two-button, single-breasted coat with notch lapel and three patch pockets, pleated trousers and a vest with mini-patches.

The Domani suit coat will be double-breasted with a notch lapel, one or two buttons and pleated trousers.

Princely designer's 'style' is in his clothes

By LUCRETIA STEGIER
Copley News Service

It's a band-collar shirt and unconstructed jacket with pushed-up sleeves...the clothes are Egon von Furstenberg — and the man. The famed designer has this to say about style: "The first step toward style is to dress to make other people feel comfortable with you." (Copley News Service Photo)

HOLLYWOOD — Egon von Furstenberg pushes up the sleeves of his unlined tweed jacket, takes another drink from the bright-orange can of soda and thinks about the question for a moment.

The cafeteria, with its modern red tables and chrome and cane chairs, seems an unlikely background for an Austrian prince who is a jet-setter-turned-designer of men's clothes and an author.

But Furstenberg, 31, shrugs and reels off his answer: "Style. Style is when you go into a room and whatever you wear..." he pauses and backs up. "Good manners are the first thing. The first step toward style is to dress to make other people feel comfortable with you.

"You never have to shock people to have them think you're intelligent and smart. You have to look neat, tidy, clean, as though you're taking care of yourself.

"Everybody can acquire style. You analyze yourself, you make a cut-and-drawn picture of yourself. You list your defects and qualities. You say 'I lack' and 'I have more' and you teach yourself to capitalize on the good within you.

"Maybe you have beautiful eyes and an open personality, so you capitalize on that. If you're overweight, you dress in dark suits, no pleated pants. You hide your body.

"There are two definitions of power," he says, warming to the subject of his book, "The Power Look," published by Holt, Rhinehart and Winston. "One is as a word, a means to communicate to other people what you want to communicate to them. The more powerful man might get the job.

"Appearance has something to do with it. You need to be well dressed and feel comfortable for every occasion without clothes overpowering you. You need to feel good in your head about how you look. The power look — well, that also can be defined as a ticket to the winner's circle."

Men care more about their clothes today than they did a few years ago when women bought 85 percent of all men's clothing, Furstenberg said. Today, women are buying just 50 percent, and men "are getting their act together, caring more, wanting to be more comfortable."

In his book, Furstenberg draws on his own experiences of what to wear while traveling, where to buy the clothes for your own power look and makes up clothing lists for the four general categories of men. These include, along with his examples: Relaxed, (Jimmy Carter, Steve McQueen, John Wayne); Conservative, (Walter Cronkite, Edward Kennedy, George Plimpton); Elegant, (Fred Astaire, Bill Blass, Cary Grant), and Adventurous, (Burt Bacharach, Tony Curtis, George Hamilton).

Furstenberg also has a chapter on defining your own personal style — "it's the uniqueness of individuals that I feel makes life interesting" — and another on how the necktie is non-verbal advertising. He also lists what to wear in various cities and concludes the book with a glossary of fabrics used in menswear.

The son of Prince Tassilo von Furstenberg and Clara Agnelli, Furstenberg was educated in Lausanne, Switzerland, and spent time with the Peace Corps in Africa before attending the University of Geneva. He received a degree in economics from that university in 1966, and worked for several years as an investment banker. In 1968, he married Diane Helfin in Paris, and the young couple came to New York.

Now separated — "I don't think we'll ever divorce" — they are the parents of two children.

He lives in a co-op apartment on Park Avenue in New York, a city he loves, and spends three hours a week working out in a gym to keep fit. In his book, he lists a five-minute total body-toning series of exercises.

Furstenberg began producing men's sweaters in 1972, and now designs eight different lines of clothing for men in this country and an additional six European lines. He also designs eye-glasses, jewelry and furs.

HOROSCOPE

By CARROLL RICHTER

(Thurs. Dec. 28)

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A good day and evening to decide the philosophy of life under which you would like to live in the future. Think out the biggest and the most comprehensive course of action to which you can commit yourself. Be articulate in stating your views to others now.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Get the last-minute details handled with regard to a trip you have been planning. Show you are more than anxious to make new contacts.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Handle responsibilities you have not had time for before this and be sure to collect money due you. Know what is expected of you by loved ones and try to please.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Get into policy matters with associates and plan the future together more wisely. Situations arise that require immediate attention.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You have many unfinished tasks ahead of you so get busy on them early. Come to a better understanding with co-workers and they cooperate better.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Think over if you want to continue with certain pleasures you have enjoyed lately, or turn to new ones. Get into creative work that can bring fame and pleasure as well.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Think over early what is best to do at home and then act quickly with kin and all is fine. Listen to what their views are and respect them.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Stop deliberating so much where regular duties with allies are concerned. Do not permit others to color your thinking.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Study early what should be done financially and then get right to it. Also see if you need to make repairs to property. Get estimates.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) This is a fine time to gain the assistance of a friend if you need it. Handle work wisely, also. Evening is fine for being with friends.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Meet with trusted advisers and work out a plan for the future. Show loved one more affection and have greater harmony, more support.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You can be your gregarious self today and get excellent results in dealing with others. Make sure bills are paid, collections made.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Be sure to follow every rule and regulation that applies to you and keep out of trouble. Bigwigs will then give you more assistance. Don't overdo.

Recluse flies the coop, reluctantly joins society

VINELAND, N.J. (AP) — Ivan Rusin has spent 28 years with chickens and was known for his hen house odor, authorities say, but a shave and a bath have convinced him to look for a new coop.

Rusin, a 72-year-old immigrant bachelor who speaks little English, built a nest egg shoveling manure and gathering eggs on poultry farms in southern New Jersey.

He slept where ever he put his head — often with the chickens or in the town dump. No one complained to police about the Polish vagrant, officials said.

But a few weeks ago, a couple, worried by sores on Rusin's swollen right leg that were apparently caused by a bout with frostbite, called authorities for help, said Sgt. Albert Barnabei.

He was arrested on a trespassing complaint and taken to the Cumberland County Jail in Bridgeton, where he was treated for a leg ulcer and given his first bath and shave in years.

Rusin, who spent World War II tending cattle and horses in a Nazi work camp, refused to give authorities his name, however, until a translator was found.

"He was petrified and mortified," said Polish-born Alex Urban, a part-time public relations director for this agricultural community of 50,000 who stepped in to talk with the man.

Rusin was moved to Newcomb Hospital on Dec. 15, and "he's become the darling of the nurses," an official said.

"He's a free spirit," the official added. "But now that we've got him shaved and washed, he's taken a great liking to these things."

The man's doctor believes Rusin, described as grizzled and skinny but eating well, may be able to leave the hospital in a few days. When he does, he doesn't plan to return to the coops, Urban said.

Rusin hopes to buy a mobile home and place it on land owned by a Ukrainian couple, Urban explained.

"There's a widow there who comes from the same background as him. They speak the same language. They've been chummy for years," the translator said. "It's also not a bad idea for him to be close to someone who could watch over him."

It promises to be a major change for the immigrant, who subsisted on coffee, Russian black bread and Polish sausage for 28 years. But not a change beyond his means.

A few years ago Rusin paid $6,000 cash for a cataract operation. He won't say how much money he has, but a police officer described him as "loaded."

Authorities say balding, toothless Rusin has never cashed Social Security checks he's received for seven years. They're probably squirreled away — along with cash — in the chicken coops, officials said.

Cleveland police given layoff notices; Firemen next on list

CLEVELAND (AP) — Police have received their notices and firemen get them today — 1,325 layoff slips that could bring this city's money problems home to hundreds.

"Happy New Year, here's your layoff," said officer Edward Pischel, a 16-year police veteran who escaped discharge while 23 of the 40 men on his shift were let go.

the men have mortgages of up to $300 a month. They've got to have food, electricity, gas, car payments. ... It makes you sick at heart."

Cleveland is in default on $15.5 million of short-term notes owed to banks and its own treasury.

Safety Director James Barrett distributed notices late Tuesday to 875 of the city's 1,875-member police force. He said 450 firefighters on the 1,002-member force would get the message today.

"There is no morale right now," said officer Jerry Kraiger. "Some of Parent-psychologist course to be offered in Midland

The parent as psychologist will be the topic of a course offered this semester in Midland through The University of Texas at the Permian Basin.

Dr. Robert Rothstein, professor of pedagogical studies and chairman of communications, will teach the course, Psychology 489.02.

Class will meet from 7 to 9:45 p.m. each Monday throughout the spring semester.

A special Midland registration is scheduled from 8 to 8 p.m. Jan. 10 at Lee High School. Enrollment in Odesa will be from 9 a.m. to noon and from 2 to 7 p.m. Jan. 11 and 12 in the UTPB student lounge.

"Beginning with the premise that most behavior is learned and that the parent, therefore, is the teacher as well as the psychologist, this course will explore recent laboratory and field findings that hold promise for helping parents become more effective with children.

"The course will be valuable to teachers, parents or anyone who works with children," Rothstein said.

Rothstein noted the class is open to any person who has completed 60 semester hours of coursework at an accredited college or university. Students not working toward a degree may prefer to enroll in a no-grade, no-credit option available through UTPB's Encore program.

Encore students attend classes with other students, but are not required to complete homework or take exams. At the end of the course they receive a NG (no grade) on their permanent record which will not affect their grade point average.

Rothstein noted two other psychology courses will be taught in Midland this spring.

They are Behavioral Disorders in Childhood and Adolescence (Psychology 489.03), taught from 7 to 9:45 p.m. Tuesdays and Introduction to Biofeedback (Psychology 489.04), taught from 7 to 9:45 p.m. Mondays.

Several courses in Spanish, earth science and education also will be offered in Midland.

Miss Hazel's Willacoochee census adds 500 folks to town population

WILLACOOCHEE, Ga. (AP) — In fancy government words, it was a "population-census update." But all Mayor Lace Futch and former postmistress Hazel Shellhouse did "was just count up all the folks in Willacoochee."

The government's 1976 census said the population was 1,105. Futch said he knew it was wrong and came up with 1,605. The extra 500 folks meant a $25,000 difference in federal revenue sharing funds.

"The procedure was simple," Futch explained. "Miss Hazel pretty much knew everybody (from her 18 years as postmistress). We listed all she knew and then double-checked her list with the city water-users list, school records and voters lists to make sure we didn't miss any. ...

"When she got through, we had 1,605 people in Willacoochee, not a piddling 1,105 like the census boys had."

The difference means the southern Georgia town should begin receiving $45,000 a year in revenue sharing money by early 1979, instead of the $20,000 it is receiving now, the mayor said.

There's nothing phony about this cowboy artist

By SUSAN TOTH
R-T Staff Writer

When Frank Polk calls himself a cowboy artist, he's not just using a figure of speech.

The 70-year-old Arizona sculptor of western art has seen everything he sculpts — and done most of them.

Polk, who has been visiting in Midland, is one of 25 members of the Cowboy Artists of America, an association he said is designed to "set the pattern for good western art."

The strongest point of his work, he noted, is authenticity.

"I hate to see anything phony. There's a lot of phony work out now. Some of it's awful good, but it's still phony," he said.

The authenticity in his work comes from more than 20 years of rodeoing and cowboying.

"I was a cowboy for a long time before I was an artist," he noted.

Being a cowboy, he said, "takes more than a big hat and a pair of boots."

Although he no longer rides the broncs or wrangles cattle, "you're never an ex-cowboy," he noted.

"When you're a cowboy, you're a cowboy for life. You've always got it in your heart."

The heart in his work earned him a special award of affection from his fellow members of the Cowboy Artists of America recently.

"As far as I can tell, I got the award because I'm Frank Polk," he smiled.

Polk was a western artist long before western art enjoyed its current popularity.

He supported himself by carving some of the wooden slot machine figures in Nevada along with bar backs, department store mannequins and "just about anything to stay in the art business."

Some of his wooden slot machine figures now sell for $15,000 a piece, he said, because the owners claim they are antiques. "And I don't own an interest in them," he said.

When the market for western art began to improve about 15 years ago, he said, he started doing the bronze sculptures he is noted for now.

His works sell for $1,100 to $8,000 each, depending on the size of the piece and the number cast.

Although most of his sales come from showings around the country with the Cowboy Artists of America, he does have pieces in galleries in San Antonio, Fort Worth and San Diego, Calif.

Each piece of sculpture, he said, takes "about 40 years" to finish.

"It's not the work you put into it, it's learning what to put into it" that counts, he maintained.

The ideas for art pieces, he said, are endless. "But to get them executed properly, that's the problem."

"A thing has to have authenticity and look good too. I've made a lot of things that were true to form, but they didn't look good."

Polk has expanded his field with the publication of an autobiography, "FFF Frank Polk, An Uncommonly Frank Autobiography" this year.

The title is a reference to the fact that he stutters, a problem he said doesn't bother him at all.

Polk was here over the holidays to visit with his stepdaughters, Nona Orr and Joanne Priddy.

Cowboy artist Frank Polk looks over one of his bronze sculptures, "Long rope and a Telescope." Each of his pieces tells a story, the visiting Arizona artist said. This tale sells for about $5,500 and is one of 35 that will be cast eventually. Polk is the stepfather of Nona Orr and Joanne Priddy of Midland. (Staff Photo by Susan Toth)

Christmas mail tops '77

WASHINGTON (AP) — A last-minute surge boosted the total of Christmas mail ahead of 1977 by 17 million pieces, a Postal Service official said.

The service, which counts stamp cancellations on the assumption that the bulk will be Christmas mail, figures the total between Dec. 2 and Dec. 23 at 1.693 billion pieces of mail. That compares with 1.676 billion last year.

Ford to extend V-8 warranties

DETROIT (AP) — Ford Motor Co., criticized by the Federal Trade Commission for so-called "secret warranties," now plans to notify owners of 3.5 million cars and trucks that warranties on their V-8 engines are being extended.

A Ford statement attributed to C.V. Barion, general manager of the parts and service division, said the repairs were a "goodwill adjustment."

The FTC and some state consumer groups have attacked the "secret warranties" — notice to dealers to make certain repairs free after the normal warranty expires if a customer complained vigorously enough — because customers, not knowing of the existence of the extension, were likely to pay for work for which they should not have been charged.

Ford earlier had told owners of 1.8 million four- and six-cylinder engines certain problems would be fixed free after the normal warranty expired.

The latest fix involves 2.4 million cars and light trucks from the 1974-77 model years with 351 and 400 cubic inch engines and 1.1 million light trucks and motor homes of the 1974-76 model years with 360 and 390 cubic inch engines.

The blocks of about 2 percent of the 2.4 million engines may crack, causing loss of coolant, overheating and consequent damage, Ford said.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Terri Buford, an aide to the founder of the Peoples Temple religious cult, says she's had it with all organizations.

Ms. Buford, 26, a former aide to the Rev. Jim Jones, told the Philadelphia Inquirer that she has no idea of what she will do now. The paper said the interview came in a telephone conversation with Miss Buford from the Memphis, Tenn., home of Mark Lane, her attorney.

According to the story, Miss Buford, who has said she left the cult in October, said she put nearly $8 million in the Panama-based branches of Swiss banks at Jones' direction. However, she said she did not mastermind the idea for the accounts.

ATLANTA (AP) — Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., is to be the keynote speaker during a five-day celebration of the 50th birthday of the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr.

Coretta Scott King, wife of the civil rights leader who was assassinated in Memphis, Tenn., in 1968, said Tuesday the observance also will include a meeting here of the United Nations Special Committee Against Apartheid. That meeting is to be led by U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim.

The birthday observance will take place Jan. 11-16, with Kennedy scheduled to speak Jan. 12, Mrs. King said. The U.N. committee will meet Jan. 16.

CRESTED BUTTE, Colo. (AP) — Amy Carter begins a five-day skiing vacation today in this frigid western Colorado resort town.

President Carter's 11-year-old daughter bounded off a special Rocky Mountain Airways flight on Tuesday, raced to a snowbank and tossed snowballs at the rest of the crowd coming off the plane. Temperatures were around zero when Amy and eight of her friends arrived.

She was met by her host, Carlton Hicks, and his 8-year-old daughter Holly. The Carter and Hicks families are good friends.

MONTREAL (AP) — A French farce featuring Margaret Trudeau opened to a chorus of boos, but the producer of her first film — the as yet unreleased "Kings and Desperate Men" — says it's all for the best.

Alexis Kanner said he suggested Mrs. Trudeau take the role in "L'Ange Gardien (The Guardian Angel)." "And I don't feel guilty for recommending it," he said. "It seemed a kind of harmless farce which couldn't hurt her, and could help in giving her experience."

The estranged wife of Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau first filmed "Kings and Desperate Men," but the French film was released earlier.

Kanner said the earlier release of the French film was a plus for "Kings," which he said will debut in March. He said viewers and critics would take Mrs. Trudeau's role in "Kings" more seriously because it would not be her first screen appearance.

LEGAL NOTICES

NOTICE TO BIDDERS
Sealed proposals addressed to the Mayor and City Council of the City of Midland, Texas, for construction of a waste pond at the Water Purification Plant will be received at the office of the City Secretary, City Hall, Midland, Texas, until 9:30 a.m. on the 29th day of December, 1978, and publicly opened and read aloud at 10:30 a.m. on the same day.

Any bid received after closing time as stated above will be returned unopened.

Bid envelopes shall be plainly marked "Waste Pond."

Complete copies of plans, specifications and contract documents may be examined and/or obtained at the office of the City Engineer, City Hall, Midland, Texas.

A bid or proposal guaranty is to accompany the bid, thereby guaranteeing the good faith of the bidder and that the bidder will enter into the written contract. The guaranty is to amount to five percent (5%) of the total bid and must be in the form of cash or certified check, issued by a bank satisfactory to the City of Midland, or a bid bond. If in the form of cash or certified check, it is hereby expressly understood and agreed that the City of Midland is given the right to retain such as liquidated damages if such bidder withdraws its bid anytime after such bid is opened and before official rejection of such bid or, if successful in securing the award thereof, such bidder fails to enter into the contract and furnish satisfactory performance bond and payment bond. If a bid bond is submitted, it shall be executed on forms contained in these contract documents by a corporate surety authorized to do business in the State of Texas, and acceptable to the City of Midland.

The City of Midland, Texas, reserves the right to accept or reject any or all proposals or bids, to waive technicalities to make any investigation deemed necessary concerning the bidder's ability to perform the work covered by the plans and specifications, to award this bid by items, and to accept what in the judgment of the Mayor and City Council is the most advantageous bid.

Manila closes port to refugee freighter

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — A freighter carrying about 2,300 refugees from Communist Vietnam dropped anchor today in Manila Bay and was refused permission to land, the Foreign Ministry said. The same ship was turned away from the British protectorate of Brunei.

The Foreign Ministry said government agencies were providing "the most urgent requirements such as food, water and medical supplies" and hospital care for the refugees aboard the Tung An, but that the government was refusing entry because a suburban refugee center housing about 2,000 Indochinese "is already overcrowded."

Police in Brunei, an oil-rich British protectorate on northwestern Borneo, towed the Tung An into the South China Sea on Saturday.

The Philippine Foreign Ministry said the Tung An had been headed for Hong Kong before that British colony refused entry to another refugee ship, the Huey Fong and its 2,700 Vietnamese.

Items totaling $3,000 reported as missing

Items totaling a value of more than $3,000 were reported missing Tuesday to Midland Police Department, according to a spokesman.

Pam Messer reported a diamond ring valued at $1,500 had been taken from the residence at 4006 Graceland St.

Nelda Chaddick, an employee of Taco Plaza at 1008 S. Lamesa Road, reported $1,765 in cash and a check for $145 had been taken from the business. She told police the money and check were discovered missing shortly after 8 a.m. Tuesday.

Truck crash kills driver

GREENVILLE, Texas (AP) — A truck being used to move furniture swerved to miss a diesel spill from a preceding truck, went to the median strip and flipped end over end twice early today, killing the driver and critically injuring a passenger.

Investigating officers said Robert Lawrence Chadwick, 21, of Dallas was crushed by furniture, which shifted forward into the cab during the accident.

Taken to a Dallas hospital in critical condition was a woman identified as Sara Elizabeth Gould.

The accident happened on Interstate 30 in Hunt County.

The truck was the third in a convoy with five trucks and semi-tractors.

Missing plane search continues

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — A search for a missing plane with four persons aboard resumed today, one week after the aircraft disappeared, a Arizona Civil Air Patrol spokesman said.

The CAP said nine planes participated in Tuesday's search and seven were airborne today, scouring the White Mountains of eastern Arizona.

The plane, piloted by Roy Slabaugh, 24, of suburban Paradise Valley, left Dec. 20 on a flight to Newton, Kan.

According to the flight plan, Slabaugh was supposed to make radio contact with the airport in St. Johns, near the New Mexico border, but never did.

Authorities trying to retrace steps of girl

GLADEWATER, Texas (AP) — Authorities believe Cheryl Sims Miller, 18, who disappeared during an impromptu hike in the woods Dec. 10, was killed by a blow to the head. But officers admit they have no idea who killed her.

"We're going back now trying to retrace her steps," said Chief Deputy James Beasley of the Upshur County sheriff's office in nearby Gilmer, Texas.

Two hunters found the teen-ager's nude and decomposed body in a wooded area near this East Texas city Christmas Day.

Medical authorities in Dallas, where the body was sent for an autopsy, reported positive identification Tuesday from dental charts and said their preliminary report indicates she died of massive head injuries.

Upshur County authorities said they had questioned several persons but had no suspects in custody.

The teen-ager was last seen walking toward her home in Gladewater from a highway intersection about 20 miles away. Authorities say she started her walk at about 4 a.m. after the car she had been riding in ran out of gas.

"Her body was found in a wooded section just north of Gladewater near Union Grove," said Beasley. "We have no suspects in custody and no idea who did it."

Beasley said it was not known yet exactly when she died or whether she was sexually attacked, but he said the autopsy is still under way, and additional reports could provide more evidence.

Authorities in nearby Gregg County said the woman had recently separated from her husband and had been at a club south of Longview the night before her disappearance.

Women's groups vow to unseat judge

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Civil rights and women's groups vow to unseat a state judge because he rejected a jury's rape verdict in what he called an "invited rape" involving a woman who was "no virgin and no teen-ager."

Third District Judge Bryant Croft last week reversed a unanimous jury verdict convicting Eugene Myers, a 53-year-old black man, of raping a 22-year-old Salt Lake woman who is white.

"There is no such thing as an invited rape," said Eileen Hansen of Women United, a women's rights group. "Judge Croft's ruling is sexist and racist. ... This is an affront to every black person and every woman."

In rejecting the verdict, Croft said the woman was "no virgin and she's no teen-ager. ... She was sitting in a bar with a black man in a flimsy dress, taking his affection, eating his food, drinking his drinks — there's a whole lot to be said here about mutual consent."

Croft said Tuesday that he may have made an unfortunate choice of words in calling the case an invited rape.

But he said, "I'm not a racist; I'm not a sexist. In this particular case I did not think justice would prevail if this man was sentenced to prison for a crime I don't think he committed."

Ms. Hansen said Croft apparently thinks men have the right to rape women, and women want to be raped.

State judges are elected in Utah, but the state has no provision for recall of a judge. Croft's critics have not said how they plan to seek his removal from the bench.

Paper offers free funeral

BLACKSHEAR, Ga. (AP) — It's your funeral, and it's free.

So says The Black-shear Times, a weekly newspaper offering a free funeral to a drinking driver killed on New Year's Eve.

There's a catch: you have to admit in advance that you'll be drinking and driving on New Year's Eve.

The newspaper has a special form for the "contest."

Delegation to discuss China policy

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — A top-level U.S. delegation is expected to face sharp questioning from the Nationalist Chinese today when it arrives to discuss what will happen when the two governments sever diplomatic ties Jan. 1.

The U.S. group, headed by Warren Christopher, deputy secretary of state, was arriving by special military plane and leaves on Friday, two days before the United States recognizes Taiwan's old foe, the People's Republic of China.

1978 moving toward all-time traffic death toll

By The Associated Press

A record 57 persons died on Texas highways during the long Christmas weekend, and Department of Public Safety officials said 1978 may go down as the deadliest for motorists in state history.

DPS officers, meanwhile, braced for the next holiday weekend and predicted 35 more persons will die between Friday evening and mid-night New Year's Day.

"It appears virtually certain we will end 1978 with the all-time record death toll for Texas," said Col. Wilson E. Speir, DPS director. "It will be at or over 4,000 for the first time in Texas history."

Not since 1969, when 54 were killed on Texas roads and highways, have more than 50 persons perished on the highways over Christmas, DPS spokesman Jim Robinson said.

The DPS had predicted 44 persons would lose their lives in Texas traffic accidents during the 78-hour Christmas holiday death count, but the prediction fell far short.

"The Christmas deaths are following the trend established July 4 and Labor Day when they ran 40 to 45 percent higher than the same holidays in 1977," said Speir.

"Our final death count for Christmas 1977 was 34. Based on a preliminary count we are 68 percent higher than the total for Christmas 1977."

Robinson said a preliminary analysis indicates excessive speed and alcohol contributed to most of the fatal accidents.

Speir said he is extremely concerned with the widespread disregard of the speed limit and hopes motorists will see the strong correlation between the lower speed limit and significantly reduced traffic fatalities.

Six persons died, including three children, late Monday afternoon in the holiday's worst accident. A car left the road about 15 miles east of Waco and plunged into a stock tank.

Two teen-agers jumped into the icy water and rescued 4-year-old Kina Adkison from the sinking wreckage. She was listed in critical condition Tuesday at a Waco hospital.

The driver, 24-year-old Yarnell Kirven of Dallas, was in stable condition at a Waco hospital after escaping from the submerged vehicle, Robinson said.

Robinson said the dead were Carolyn Ferrell, 21, of Dallas; Tysher Ferrell, 3, of Dallas; Thomas Jefferson Jr., 3, of Waco; Pearl Adkison, 20, of Midland; Lillie Jefferson, 21, of Waco; and Anthony Adkison, 4, of Midland.

One other wreck during the holiday weekend claimed four lives, a two-car collision Saturday near Brenham.

Locally, Department of Public Safety officials said there were few such accidents during this past Christmas weekend.

But veteran DPS officers in the Midland-Odessa area are bracing for the New Year weekend traffic situation.

Operation Motorside is the name of the program initiated by DPS officers this year to inform citizens throughout Texas of road conditions, keep them up to date on traffic fatalities and give advice on safe driving.

In addition to obeying all safety laws, officer urge motorists to be extra cautious during holiday traveling on highways. Even those driving around town should be extra careful to do so defensively, said authorities.

A recent survey showed 14 percent of the citizenry drives without fastening seat belts, said Joan Claybrook, head of the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration in Washington, D.C.

Christmas trees, symbols of this holiday season, were responsible over the weekend, according to officials. Authorities warned that people should be extra careful with the lights of such decorative pieces.

Travel congestion still plaguing Permian Basin

By GUY SULLIVAN
R-T Staff Writer

Though Christmas is over, the holiday travel crunch in the Permian Basin shows no sign of letting up soon, said airport and bus service spokesmen.

In the Midland area, most people seem to prefer taking to the air and driving their own vehicles to leaving the driving to someone else. But on the latter point, local bus line spokesmen seem to be split.

Travel congestion has struck Midland Regional Airport not just this holiday season, but all year long, said Judy Aly, spokesman for the Midland Regional Airport office.

"You just can hardly walk through the lobby here," said Ms. Aly early Tuesday. "We've had more people flying this year than last year."

"I guess one reason is because of the low fares the airlines are offering," she said.

Ms. Aly said a total of 378,708 airline passengers passed through the lobby of Midland Regional Air Terminal during 1978, compared to 340,982 through November 1977.

"Maybe the low air fares caused more people to take planes," said Ms. Aly. "It started with Southwest Airlines. When they dropped their fares, some of the others went ahead and did so, too."

Although air passenger traffic seems to be busting this season locally, Greyhound Bus Lines has not experienced a jump in the number of passengers, said Bill Brinkley, agent-manager of the Midland office.

"Passenger traffic hasn't been that heavy this year, nor in the last few years," he said early Tuesday. "It's probably down. I think there are more people flying."

Brinkley said people send a lot of their packages by bus, especially around Christmas time.

But, he added, "People seem to fly or prefer driving when we get warm weather. A lot of people who normally take the bus, drive in good weather."

"Maybe if we had another fuel shortage, they'd leave the driving to us," he joked.

Trailways Bus Lines System's Matt Ellis, assistant manager of the Midland office, said, "They sure are traveling by bus this year. But everyone seems to be coming here from the east. Last year, they mostly came from the west."

"I guess low air fares have affected us a little, but not much. And people still send lots of packages by bus. I guess that's because it's cheaper and faster than the mail."

And because there is no actual passenger service on the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company's cars passing through Midland-Odessa, Russ Staats, Odessa-based business manager admitted only hobos travel the route.

"We've no passenger service here like they do down in Alpine. Most of our freight car passengers keep pretty well hidden."

"Once in a while the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service Border Patrol stops one of our trains and checks out the cars. They pick up a few (illegal aliens) too. I guess they get tips."

Greta Rideout tells jury of her 'rape' by husband

By MICHAEL SEILER
The Los Angeles Times

SALEM, Ore. — Greta Rideout, who has accused her husband of rape, testified in court here Tuesday that her enraged husband chased her around their apartment, caught up with her in an adjacent public park and threatened to beat and rape her there if she did not return home with him.

Mrs. Rideout, 23, spoke calmly in a 27-minute monologue, outlining the events of Oct. 10.

Later, testifying in his own defense, John Rideout, 21, just as calmly denied her charges. Instead, he said they merely had an argument and he slapped his wife once. Then they made love as a way of making up, Rideout said.

Mrs. Rideout contended that her husband woke up at 3 p.m. that day on the living-room floor where he had been sleeping, and almost instantly demanded sex.

She said no, and Rideout responded, "You bitch...I'm your husband and you should do what I want," Mrs. Rideout testified.

"He was very angry" when denied sex, Mrs. Rideout said, and she fled the apartment for a neighbor's home. But Rideout followed and the chase ensued, she testified.

"He grabbed my left arm and said, 'You've really done it now,' and began to lead me back to the apartment," she said.

"I was resisting him, and he said, 'Do you want me to beat and rape you right here in the park?'" she continued. "I had never seen him that angry."

Mrs. Rideout — testifying in what may be a precedent-setting trial — said her husband threw her against the wall of their apartment and "slugged me."

Mrs. Rideout said, "I started to cry. There was a lot of struggling...and I was resisting."

"I started screaming for help. I heard Jenny (the Rideout's 2-year-old daughter) screaming, crying, 'Mommy!' She was on the couch, trying to get to me."

"I couldn't breathe. I was trying to scream and at the same time get his hands off me...Then he yelled at Jenny, 'Get out of the room!'"

"I then asked John, 'Why are you hitting me?' He said 'Because I can't stand you.'"

"I said, 'Why don't you leave, just leave.'"

"He said, 'You don't understand, I love you, Greta.'"

At this point, Mrs. Rideout testified, her husband threatened to hit her again and she "decided to submit to what he wanted."

Mrs. Rideout said she went into the bedroom, partly disrobed and lay down on the bed.

"...I just laid there. He wanted me to respond and I wouldn't. He said, 'Kiss me, kiss me,' and I wouldn't."

"He then applied his hands to my throat, lifted his fist up and threatened to smash the other side of my face. So I kissed him."

Later, after it was over, she said, Rideout dragged her into the bathroom. She said he forced her to look at her bruised face in the mirror. "He said, 'This is what you get for not cooperating.'"

Mrs. Rideout also testified that over the course of her marriage her husband had "physically and mentally abused me five or six times while he was making love to me."

Mrs. Rideout testified for one hour and 42 minutes. Two minor witnesses took the stand and then it was her husband's turn.

Rideout said: "She hit me first. She slapped me and I grabbed a hold of her arms and then she slapped me again."

"She sneed me in the groin. Then I slapped her."

Rideout said this was the only time he had struck his wife.

"I stopped myself because I was really agitated. I had never hit my wife intentionally before."

Rideout said he and his wife agreed to make up by making love. He said they then did so, totally without force.

The trial continues Wednesday in the Marion County Courthouse here. The case, which has drawn national attention, is thought to be the first in which a wife has charged her husband with rape while they were still married and living together. Mrs. Rideout is now seeking a divorce.

Time 'perfect' for revolution

CONAKRY, Guinea (AP) — Veteran Black Power leader Stokely Carmichael answers the telephone in his seaside bungalow here with a clear and simple greeting: "Ready for revolution."

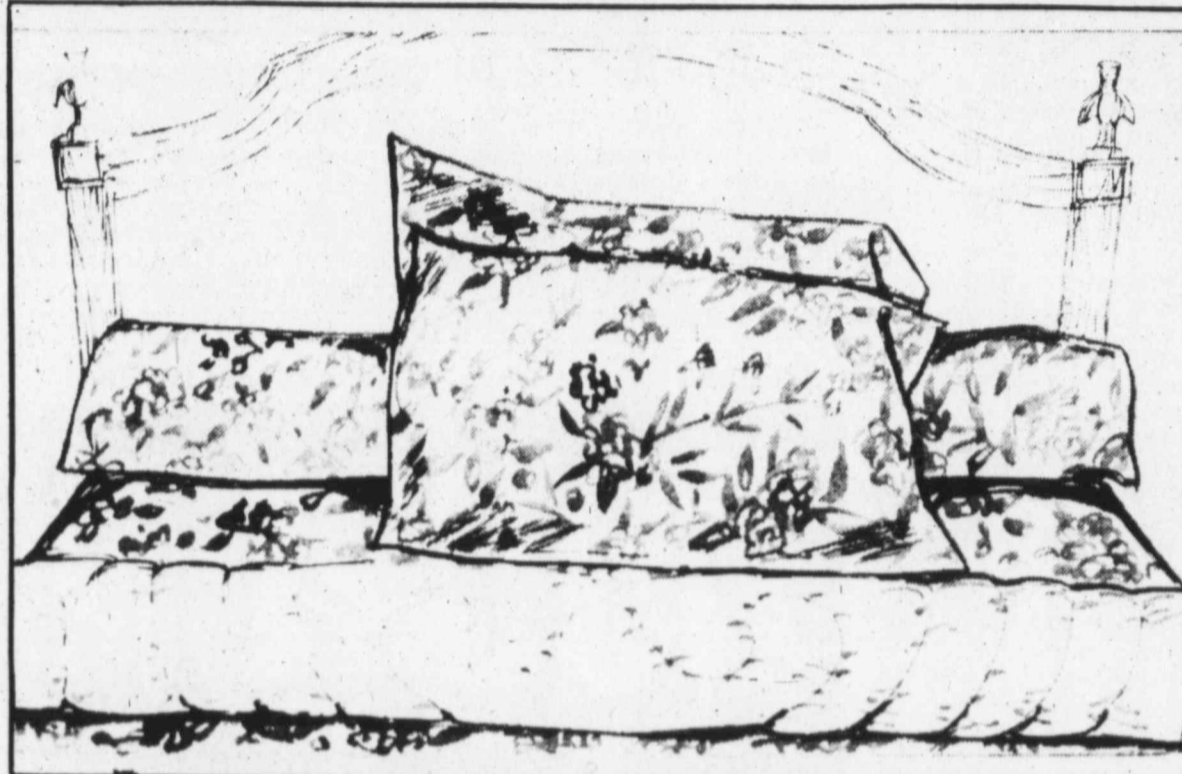

The 37-year-old American whose militancy was born of the '60s civil rights protests said his ideology has matured in nine years of exile in the tumbledown capital of this West African socialist state.

"It's all in here," said Carmichael, brandishing the "Handbook of Revolutionary Warfare" by the late Ghanaian independence leader Kwame Nkrumah. The book says blacks all over the world must be educated through the All-African Revolutionary Party to make violent revolutions.

Would Eagles have given Bean the game ball?

You couldn't blame the Philadelphia Eagles if they were thinking of giving Atlanta halfback Bubba Bean the game ball Sunday.

After all, he was the man mainly responsible for the Eagles maintaining a 13-0 lead going into the fourth quarter of the NFC Wild Card playoff game in Atlanta.

It had been one of those days for the ex-Texas Aggie great. No matter how many good things he did, it was those two mistakes everyone was going to remember, that first half fumble that erased the Falcons' most promising drive and then that dropped pass early in the fourth quarter, after he had beaten the defensive man down the sidelines and had nothing to do but run it in.

You could hear the Eagles sigh audibly in relief as they went into their prevent offense, the counterpart of the sometimes suspect prevent defense, the one where the leading team gives up the silverware in hopes the opposition doesn't find the jewels.

THE EAGLES, ignoring the Falcons' notorious penchant for snatching victories from defeat, went into an offensive shell, hoping to avoid the fumbles and interceptions that serve as engraved comeback invitations.

No matter, Atlanta quarterback Steve Bartkowski and Wallace Francis, maybe the most anonymous tight end in the NFL, didn't need invitations to do what has been coming naturally for the surprising Falcons this year, hooking up for TD passes and a 14-13 victory.

But before the Falcons could celebrate, they had to weather a late Eagles threat in which Mike Michel missed a field goal with 13 seconds to go. Philadelphia was forced to go for the three when lenient officials overlooked what might have been called pass interference another time and another place.

WHILE IT'S a pleasant relief to be playing a new opponent, the Dallas Cowboys Saturday will be robbed of their revenge motivation. While Dallas probably would be favored as heavily against Minnesota as they are against Atlanta, the fact remains that Dallas still has the memory of that Thursday night humiliation on national TV as a psychological factor against the Vikings, they bear no malice toward the Falcons, but in contrast may regard Atlanta with sympathy and admiration for what they have achieved this year. Which smacks of the same kind of thinking that got the Eagles beat.

Meanwhile, Houston advanced to the AFC semifinals with a 17-9 victory over Miami and, despite a strong finish, can thank the determination of Dolphins Coach Don Shula to sink or swim with Bob Griese, his quarterback with an ailing flipper, for keeping their hopes alive. It was obvious by the second period, that Griese was not the same passer he had been a week earlier in completing 12 of 13 against New England. But Shula resolutely stuck with his starter, rather than go to the bullpen for a healthy Don Strock.

The Oilers face New England Sunday in Foxboro, Mass., where it gets so cold this time of year that Coach Bum Phillips wants to escape to a more salubrious climate like Denver, or at least nearby Boulder. But playing on the road is one of the penalties a Wild Card entry must pay.

From a Dallas standpoint, the elimination of Miami expels from the jousting one of the type teams that seems to give the Cowboys trouble, but it was accomplished by the same type of team. Houston owns victories over Dallas in their last two meetings, both Texbitions.

Houston Oiler quarterback Dan Pastorini shows off his flak jacket to reporters following Houston's victory over Miami Sunday in the Wild Card playoff. The jacket was given to him by a fan to protect three broken ribs. (AP Laserphoto)

Pastorini's flak jacket to protect broken ribs

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston quarterback Dan Pastorini will be almost as well equipped as the Six Million Dollar Man, with the exception of bionic vision, Sunday when the Oilers play New England in an American Football Conference semifinal playoff game.

There will be an impact-softening flak jacket designed to protect broken ribs, a brace to guard a strained knee and a pad to soothe a chronically sore elbow.

The added armament will all fit into place with a throwing arm that long ago was judged a bionic weapon. Pastorini shredded Miami Sunday with an passing display that looked like trick photography, completing 20 of 29 passes for 306 yards as the Oilers beat the Dolphins 17-9 in a first-round game of the National Football League playoffs.

Now Pastorini must ignore his aches and pains again and get ready for Sunday's AFC semifinal game against the Patriots, AFC Eastern Division champions.

Oiler Coach Bum Phillips said Tuesday Pastorini did not receive any further injuries against the Dolphins and would again wear his protective devices against the Patriots. Phillips also remained Pastorini's No. 1 fan.

"I think Dan has proven over the years he can throw the ball as good as anybody and he damn sure can hand off as good as anybody," Phillips said. "But you have to have somebody to hand off to and a hole for him to run in."

"You don't judge people on one play or one game or even one year. He's great in pressure games. He's made drives in the final quarter week after week for us. He's proven himself."

One of Pastorini's rescue jobs came against the Patriots, who took a 23-0 lead over the Oilers in a regular season game but eventually lost 26-23.

The Patriots, reeling under the announcement that Coach Chuck Fairbanks would not return next season, will have a chance to get revenge for that comeback.

"Sometimes it's better to be playing someone you haven't played before, especially if you beat them the first time," Phillips said. "If a guy gets whipped in a fight, he tends to fight harder the second time."

The Oilers resumed workouts Tuesday, getting an extra day off following Sunday's game in Miami. Phillips said there were no new injuries from the Dolphin game.

Illinois Illini rise in college poll

By The Associated Press

The University of Illinois might have won only two games in the past week, but those two victories over other ranked teams propelled the Fighting Illini from 15th to sixth place in the weekly Associated Press college basketball poll.

Illinois, now 9-0, became only the second team other than Kentucky to win the Kentucky Invitational Tournament more than once. Illinois defeated Syracuse 64-61 in the opening game and then breezed past Texas A&M 71-57 for the title.

The tournament, which featured four ranked teams, was one of the major causes of shuffling in the poll of a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters.

Duke remained on top, receiving 46 of 50 first place votes, good for 996 points. Notre Dame held second place with 952 points, grabbing the other first place votes, and UCLA, an easy homecourt winner over Fordham and Boston College, held third with 878. Both Duke and Notre Dame were idle last week.

Michigan State, with 753 points, and North Carolina, with 744, both advanced one spot in the standings to fourth and fifth place, respectively. The two teams had more in common than just their poll improvement over the past week. Both teams played only one game during the week and they both defeated Cincinnati by the same three point margin.

Rounding out the top 10 were Illinois with 675 points; undefeated Louisiana State, 659; Michigan, 598; North Carolina State, 568, and Louisville with 510 points.

Indiana State was the leader of the second tier. The Sycamores, 8-0, received 365 points.

Following Indiana State were Texas A&M, Kentucky, Nevada-Las Vegas, Georgetown, Marquette, Long Beach St. Kansas, Syracuse and Arkansas.

Cowboys' Tom Landry loosens up

DALLAS (AP) — Tom Landry can laugh and joke now during the pressure-cooker of the National Football League playoffs.

Before the Cowboys captured their first NFL title in the early 1970s this was not always the case. But, the Dallas Cowboys coach says, experience relieves a lot of playoff tension.

For example, before his weekly press conference Tuesday, Landry said "I hope you had as nice and as busy a Christmas as I did. I'd like to take this opportunity to wish everyone a Happy New Year. Now, I'll open it up for questions."

One question zeroed on the Cowboys' playoff experience. Dallas has been in more NFL playoff games (22) than any team. Of course, Landry has been the coach for each one. His record 13-9.

"(Playoff) experience is important," said Landry. "Experience pays off in pressure circumstances. It helps you from getting carried away. It's to your advantage."

Someone asked Landry how he felt about playoff games.

"I'm a little more relaxed myself in playoff games," he answered with a smile.

This will be a busy week for Landry. Besides preparing for Saturday's National Conference semifinal playoff game against Atlanta, Landry will be inducted into the Texas Sports Hall of Fame Friday.

Landry was a former star at the University of Texas and for the New York Giants in the NFL.

"It's nice for something like this (the award) to happen to you while you're still young enough to enjoy it," said Landry.

Turning his attention back to the Falcons, Landry said something was amiss with the Cowboys being 14-point favorites.

"Something is wrong (with the odds) because anytime you play in the playoffs you will have a tight football game in most cases," said Landry. "It takes something unusual for the game to get out of hand."

Landry said possible overconfidence by the NFC Eastern Division champions "worries you."

He said Atlanta shows a "lot of enthusiasm. Their morale has to be high for them to win those close games like they have. They have shown they are capable of pulling out those tight games."

Landry was asked if he was glad he did not have to face Minnesota which travels to Los Angeles in the other NFC match-up. The Vikings would have traveled to Dallas if Atlanta had lost to Philadelphia.

"Not really," Landry said. "In the playoffs if you look for an easy touch you aren't going anywhere. You've got to play on a high level three times in a row to get to the Super Bowl."

Landry said "We have played very well the last six weeks but it's sudden death in the playoffs. Sometimes it's not a measurement of the strengths of teams. It's just the measurement of strengths that particular day. Sometimes you have to be fortunate."

Paterno wants team to be loose

NEW ORLEANS (P) — Penn State Coach Joe Paterno says the biggest problem in preparing his team for its New Year's Day national collegiate championship meeting against Alabama is to keep the game in its proper perspective.

"Just being in a game like this is fun," Paterno said at a news conference after Penn State's first practice session in New Orleans Tuesday. "I don't want everybody to be up tight. The problem is to be sure that they're not up tight."

"I wouldn't want a bunch of kids not to understand, and I feel very strongly about it. I want them to remember playing the game."

Paterno said he didn't want his players to be too nervous to remember the experience.

"I want them to enjoy all of the hoopla and all of the stuff going on. It's all something that should be unique to them," he said.

"IT'S NEVER going to happen to them again, no matter how good they are or whatever they do."

"You're never going to have 80,000 people cheer you for writing an insurance policy, even if it is for $50,000. You're never going to have 75 million people watch you do something (on television). I imagine a couple of kids will play pro football, but most of the kids won't."

Paterno admitted he was excited about the game. It could be the highlight of his coaching career. He always has Penn State should be No. 1 in everything, including football.

"I'm a ham. I'm excited about it," Paterno said as he talked about his philosophy of college football.

The coach insisted his approach in getting Penn State ready to defend its No. 1 ranking against Coach Bear Bryant's No. 2 Crimson Tide is no different than any of the other 10 bowl games Penn State has played in since he became head coach in 1966.

"There is absolutely nothing different. We've done the same things before. I don't try to play down the importance of the game, but I try not to get affected by it — not show them anything in my attitude," Paterno said.

THEN, TURNING to the game itself, Paterno said he wanted his team to set the tempo, to set the attitude, to show continual movement.

"You can't play a team as good as this one (Alabama) ... and sit on a seven-point lead. We've really ended up playing the toughest team that we could."

"Sure, they lost to Southern California. But they got some bad breaks. There was a pass deflected, and an S.C. kid catches it and makes a great run. They (Alabama) could have won them all."

Paterno said he has tried to impress his team that Alabama can get points with its kicking game, with its offense and with its defense.

"I've told them that we cannot control things with one facet of the game. They're too good. We have to do things on offense. We have to do things on defense. We have to do things with our kicking game, with all phases of our game," he said.

THE PENN State coach said when he plays a game in which he has the better athletes, all he has to do is end up with more points.

"But this is an equal game," he said. "Somehow, I felt from the beginning that this would happen. First, I thought we would play Oklahoma, then they lost to Nebraska. Then Nebraska, and Georgia loses, and we end up playing in a game that I don't think could be bigger."

Paterno said he wanted his players to enjoy coming to a place like New Orleans.

"I don't believe in locking them up. It's not my style, and I'm not going to do it," said Penn State coach.

"We'll have a brunch tomorrow

(Wednesday), and we'll set some rules. I've talked about a time (a curfew), and some of my players said it was too late.

"I think these guys realize the importance of both the game and having a good time. This isn't an overnight thing. We've talked about this for a couple of years. We had to win 19 games in a row to get this shot."

Paterno admitted he felt last spring that this Penn State team had a chance to win the national title. "I felt we had the right chemistry. I felt we were ready for it," he said.

Baltimore talks to possible buyer

BALTIMORE (AP) — The chairman of the board of the Baltimore Orioles and the man believed interested in buying the American League club talked sometime during the past few days. But there was no word on the possible sale of the Orioles.

Jerold Hoffberger, chairman of the board of the Orioles, says he did talk recently to William E. Simon, the former Secretary of the Treasury.

"I talked to Mr. Simon, and there's nothing new to report," Hoffberger said, declining to comment on whether the two would meet this week. "If anything happens, I'll let people know."

Earlier last week, Simon said the two were to meet shortly after Christmas. At that time, he said he hoped to have a contract following their meeting.

"We've talked long enough. Now, let's get down to nut-cracking time. We're going to get together after Christmas, and I expect to get this thing resolved ... It has reached the point where that (the meeting) will be it, one way or another," he said.

Hoffberger has controlled the club since 1965.

Steeler fans guard positions

PITTSBURGH (AP) — They looked half asleep standing amid ashes and broken wine bottles outside Three Rivers Stadium Tuesday morning. Some of the crowd of 3,000 had waited two days for Pittsburgh Steelers' playoff tickets.

But anyone who tried to cut the line was in for a rude surprise.

One guy tried.

"Somebody laid him out. They took him away in an ambulance," said J.C. Hrubovcak, 21, who had traveled 35 miles from Greensburg.

Pittsburgh police could not confirm the injury report, but they said one man was arrested for intoxication after scuffling with other prospective ticket purchasers in an attempt to get ahead.

"We've been having 'goon' platoons. People have been patrolling their own little areas and not letting anybody bust into line," said Rick Indovina, 24, of nearby Edgewood.

Uniformed security guards moved in several times to protect fans whose attempts to slip into line had been noticed.

"Every time someone tried to bust in front of us, we yelled, 'dee-fense, dee-fense,' and pushed them back," said Indovina, one of the latecomers, arriving about 9:30 p.m. Monday.

Hrubovcak had been there for two days when the ticket gates finally opened. But he wasn't first in line.

Three men from nearby Turtle Creek beat him by several hours.

The attraction was the 10 a.m. sale of tickets to Saturday's American Football Conference first-round playoff game between the Denver Broncos and the Steelers, and the subsequent AFC title game.

"We decided about three weeks ago to do this," said Dan Fairish, a 24-year-old bartender who arrived at 4 a.m. Sunday with two friends and set up camp.

As 10 a.m. approached, the crowd surged forward. Crushed beer cans and fruit arced toward the overhead speakers where a woman's voice announced, "Welcome to Three Rivers Stadium ..."

"I feel pretty good," said Leslie Buannic of nearby Brentwood, who stuffed a fistful of tickets into her pocket after climbing a railing to get out of the crush of people waiting to make their purchases.

Why would an 18-year-old hair-dressing student wait 16 hours in freezing temperature for the chance to pay $12.25 for each ticket to Saturday's first-round game and $15.25 for the AFC title game?

"I like the Steelers, I guess," Buannic said.

While a few fans reeled from the effects of all-night drinking, and others stood quietly, one Steelers' fan rocked his upper body back and forth in a wheelchair parked near the front of the crowd.

"I'm so cold I can hardly feel my toes," said Guy Buzzelli of nearby Bethel Park. The 16-year-old Buzzelli, dressed in blaze orange thermal coveralls, is a victim of multiple sclerosis.

But he didn't look at all uneasy despite the sometimes boisterous crowd and the scattered ashes from fires, abandoned sleeping bags, mattresses, broken bottles and other refuse.

"I like to come out and be with the fans," he said.

HEW says girls' rules can differ

WASHINGTON (AP)—The federal government has made its decision: states do not have to make their high school girls' basketball teams play under the same rules as the boys' teams.

Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. said Tuesday his department is rejecting complaints that schools discriminate against female students if the only basketball program they offer is the six-player, half-court variety.

"Whether a school has six-player, half-court basketball is entirely up to it, if its overall athletic program is non-discriminatory," the HEW chief said.

Six-player basketball has been a popular women's sport in several states since early in the century, and is still played in high schools in Tennessee, Iowa, Arkansas and Oklahoma. High schools in other states have shifted their program in recent years to the traditionally male, full-court version with five players.

Feminist groups and other have claimed that limiting high school athletes to six-player basketball is illegal since it violates the section of the 1972 Education Act that prohibits discrimination on the basis of sex in schools receiving federal aid.

But Califano said federal regulation "does not require that any particular sport be offered or that the same sports be offered to boys and girls. It does not require schools to offer identical versions of the same sport."

West Texas outdoors Texas stocking programs work

By JON CHASE

The year 1978 has been a remarkable one for the Parks and Wildlife's experimental stocking programs.

The most dramatic success stories have come from the stocking of the last few years of strippers and Florida bass in Texas lakes.

Florida bass, up to 10 pounds, were caught in Texas waters during 1978 and the striper record for our state has been broken no less than three times in the past 13 months.

The new state record for striper stands at 32 pounds and 12 ounces. This monster was caught a few weeks back out of Lake Texoma by David Cole of Denison. The old record was a 30-pound, 6-ounce fish taken from Toledo Bend.

There is every reason to believe that Texas will one day produce the world record for both bass and striper. Florida bass have been caught in California, which tipped the scales at 20 pounds-plus. Texas waters should be every bit as capable of producing fish in the 20-pound category.

As for striper, it wouldn't surprise me a bit to see the next world record come from Lake Amistad. The extreme depth and vastness of this lake make it an ideal impoundment for growing big striper.

The year of 1979 should also be interesting as we watch the striper and Florida bass records being broken. By this time next year, I expect the striper record to be close to 40 pounds, and the Florida bass record to be near 13 pounds.

As the deer season moves into its final stages, all of the big deer reports are coming in from the South Texas counties. Keith Carpenter recently killed a 166-pound Frio County buck, which had eight points and over 20 inches of antlers.

Keith Esse of Laredo downed a Webb County buck, which weighed 180 pounds with a 2 1/4-inch, 13-point

Knicks continue stumbling act

NEW YORK (AP)—The New York Knicks again are a team in trouble.

The initial flush of success following last month's coaching change from Willis Reed to Red Holzman has worn off. The team is stumbling, three games under .500, and there are few signs that the situation will improve.

The Knicks were 6-8 when Reed was fired. They are 10-11 under Holzman, with three tough games coming up beginning with the pesky New Jersey Nets at Piscataway, N.J. Wednesday night. Then come home games against Washington, the defending National Basketball Association champion, Thursday night and against Kansas City, the Midwest Division leader, Saturday.

"There's nothing wrong with us that a few wins won't cure," said Holzman, but chances of them posting those wins in the immediate future appear slim. In losing their last three games, the Knicks have looked disorganized, showing few signs of teamwork or tenacity on defense.

"The No. 1 factor is concentration, or the lack of it," said Butch Bear

Green takes long trip to LSU

Western, where he averaged 29 points.

Then came North Carolina State, a forgettable experience for Green. As his playing time went down, so did his scoring average. He averaged 13.1 points as a sophomore and 5.2 as a junior.

Green, now 24, sat out a year before transferring to LSU for his first—and last—season as a collegian there. His maturity is evident on the court, where he is extremely patient.

Last week, in a game against Army at Madison Square Garden in New York, Green took only 10 shots, and characteristically, made nine of them.

"I know I'll get my points, so I'll never take a wild shot, if I can help it," says Green, who does most of his scoring with his speed, a deadly jumper and spectacular leaping ability.

"I try to work myself around the basket for easy shots. Give me a 15-footer and I'll take it, too."

Green doesn't psyche out himself, either, with an obsessive concern about his lofty shooting average.

Swimming codes become tough

NEW YORK (AP) — The AAU Swimming Code, a conduct guide that makes military rules seem loose, is unique in amateur sports. If the 13 swimmers suspended breaking curfew earlier this month had been performers in any other sport, there probably would have been no punishment at all.

"The rules were only created for swimmers and staff members at AAU meets," said Al Schoenfield, vice chairman of the international swimming committee that heard the charges against the 13 swimmers. "The divers, for example, have no code. They could drink all night at one table, while the swimmers at the next table can't have anything."

Schoenfield says the reason for the strict code is that many of America's top swimmers are teen-agers. "The code may not be fair to our 20-year-old swimmers and the staff members, but we can't have any exceptions," he said. "You can't have two kinds of swimming codes. If the younger kids see their teammates drinking, the peer pressure would be too much for them."

"The rules say no drinking or smoking while on team trips. All staff, swimmers, chaperones and managers must sign the code. We know it isn't easy to turn down a toast at a meet banquet, but it has to be done."

The AAU's international swimming committee suspended 13 athletes for three months for staying out past curfew at a meet last April in Austin, Texas. The penalty, which begins

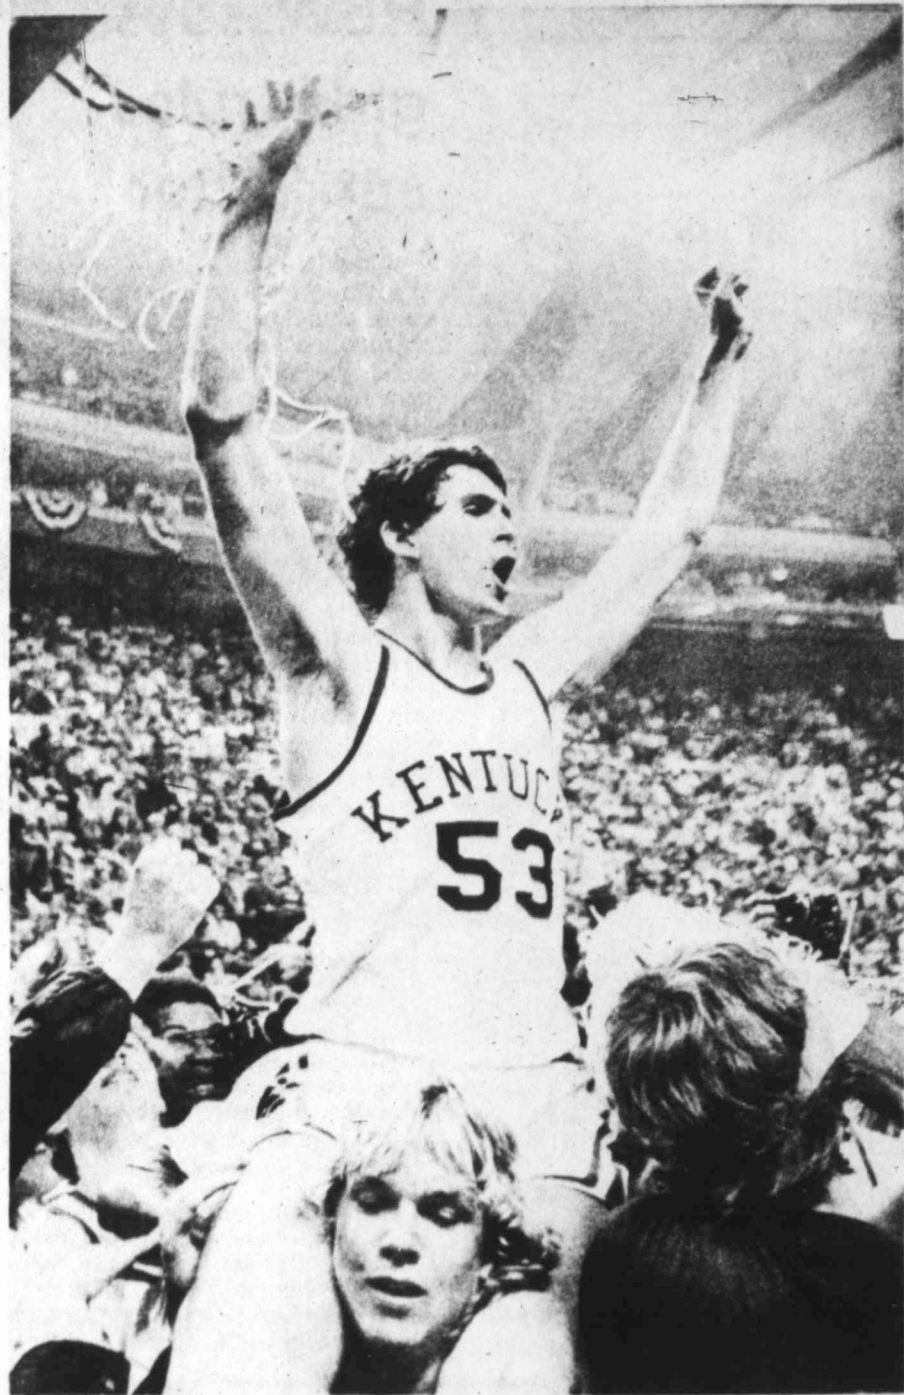

Jan. 1, was a mere slap on the wrist because there are only two major international meets in the next three months — a meet in Harvard and another one in the Netherlands.

"It sounded the alarm to the other athletes that the code would be enforced," said Schoenfield, speaking by phone from his home in Rancho Palos Verdes, Calif. "It was like a traffic ticket."

But Schoenfield, vice chairman of the international swimming committee, says the more serious problem for the 13 swimmers was that they became lumped together with five swimmers who were given 1-and 2-year suspensions for taking cocaine and marijuana. Those five swimmers were involved in a separate incident while training in Colorado Springs, Colo. for a U.S.-Canada meet last summer.

The two groups of swimmers were invited to a hearing of the swimming committee at the AAU's national convention in San Antonio, Texas in November. The committee then declared the punishment, but refused to reveal any of the names of the swimmers involved in order to protect the athletes.

Schoenfield, former publisher of Swimming World magazine, said he wanted to disclose the names and asked that the two different types of suspensions be announced separately. He said he had the support of Mike Troy, chairman of the international swimming committee, but was voted down by Bill Lipmann, chairman of the AAU's swimming committee.

Kentucky, Texas led college cagers

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Thoroughbreds from Kentucky and race horses from Texas ran away with the big prizes in 1978 in college basketball.

The Kentucky Wildcats, odds-on favorites and grimly carrying the weight of the No. 1 ranking most of the year, proved equal to the task, winning the NCAA championship.

The Texas Longhorns, who were picked no better than fifth in preseason assessments for the Southwest Conference race, proved far swifter than that and won the National Invitation Tournament in a breeze.

For the Wildcats, it was serious business all the way — a season of little celebration until the final gun in the NCAA championship game had certified their 94-88 conquest of Duke.

"We have been under a tremendous amount of pressure to win this year," Coach Joe Hall said on the eve of the NCAA final in St. Louis. "So much has been expected of this team from the start of the year. It has eliminated any possibility of success except for one accomplishment — winning the NCAA championship. We have a lot of stored-up celebrating to do if we win this thing."

Tradition aside, and Kentucky had plenty of it, the Wildcats were big favorites to win the national title with such fine players as Jack Givens, Rick Robey, Mike Phillips and super-sub James Lee. It was a senior-studded team of myriad accomplishments, including players who had been part of the NCAA finals and winners of the NIT.

But Wildcats' followers, long basking in the glory of the redoubtable Adolph Rupp and four previous NCAA titles, expected no less from Hall's group. Coming home from the game that gave the Wildcats the SEC championship, Hall was non-plussed to find little reaction from the jaded, blasé Kentucky fans.

"I would have given anything for someone to throw a firecracker or something," Hall joked in St. Louis in what seemed to be at least a half-truth.

The Kentucky fans, though, had to take notice when the Wildcats won the NCAA's tough Mideast Regional with a victory over Big Ten champion Michigan State.

With no similar reputation to live up to, Duke had it easier than Kentucky. Not even picked to finish first in the Atlantic Coast Conference, the Blue Devils won the league playoffs, then took the NCAA's Eastern Regional with some exasperating, close-call finishes. An outfit that preached brotherly love, hugged and slapped hands, Duke came into St. Louis "loose and having fun," according to Coach Bill Foster.

The Blue Devils then beat Midwest winner Notre Dame in the national semifinals, but their "fun" really was over for the season at that point. Two days later, they lost to Kentucky in the national championship game. The Wildcats, who earlier defeated West Regional champion Arkansas, beat Duke behind a 41-point performance by Givens.

It was Kentucky's fifth national championship, and Joe Hall could relax at last.

"We came very close to playing a total game," said Hall, smiling at last. "We came very close to playing the very best game we are capable of."

The same might have been said of Texas, a team with some of the straightest shooters in the country. The best of these was Jim Krivacs, who put on a brilliant shooting show at Madison Square Garden in the NIT final against North Carolina State.

Krivacs scored 33 points, many on long-range shots, pacing the Southwest Conference co-champions to a 101-93 triumph over the Wolfpack.

"I didn't have to coach that one," admitted Texas Coach Abe Lemons.

The victory in the final reflected the way the Longhorns played in the tournament, advancing with runaway victories over Temple, Nebraska and Rutgers.

Marquette, the defending NCAA champion, suffered a surprising first-round knockout by Miami of Ohio in the NCAA playoffs, but did have The Associated Press Player of the Year in guard Butch Lee. He was joined on The AP's All-America team by North Carolina's Phil Ford, Minnesota's Mychal Thompson, Indiana State's Larry Bird and UCLA's David Greenwood.

Cheyney State (Pa.) won the Division II championship, while North Park College won in Division III.

Glut of pro sports continues to climp up

WARREN, Mich. (AP) — A glut of pro sports?

Perhaps. But there are some who apparently believe the world needs another sport — teamball.

They have established the National Teamball League, with a season of weekend games from December to April. The teams are: the Detroit Hawks, the Chicago Chiefs, the Boston Comets, the New York Stags, the Philadelphia Warriors and the Pittsburgh Points.

"There are a lot of sports that don't score enough," said Jim Teckenbrock, manager of the Chicago team. "People want to see a lot of action and they see it in teamball."

Paul Roberts, manager of the Detroit team, said: "It's basically an American game based on team handball. We're just starting. It's a new baby and we have to work things out." Roberts said the sport was developed about five years ago. He refused to say who was bankrolling the league, but he admitted it was someone in the Detroit area — "a guy with a dream."

A UHF television station, WXON in Southfield, Mich., televised the league opener this month, a 48-26 triumph for the Hawks over Chicago. The station plans to televise other Detroit games, which are played at Macomb County Community College in this northern Detroit suburb.

Asked whether the TV station was providing the money for the team and the league, Roberts said, "I'm not at liberty to say."

About 900 persons turned up for the Detroit opener. At the same time, New York played at Boston.

Inglis returns to game

By The Associated Press

In a 16-year career, Bill Inglis played 980 games — 47 of them in the National Hockey League. He worked for 10 teams on the bus-and-hamburger circuit and for two — the Los Angeles Kings and Buffalo Sabres — in the majors.

His last NHL game was played for Buffalo nine seasons ago. After that, he went through a truckload of suitcases while playing in Salt Lake City; Cincinnati; Hershey, Pa.; Springfield, Mass.; Phoenix; Binghamton, N.Y.; and New Haven, Conn.

But Bill Inglis always went where they told him to go because he loved to play hockey. The spotlight always seemed to shine on someone else, but the smile never left his lips and the eyes always twinkled.

When the Sabres offered him a scouting job at the start of this season, he took it, just to stay involved. "I was fortunate because I still got on the ice to run practices once in a while," he said.

When the Sabres fired Marcel Pronovost and offered Inglis the coaching job, he took it because he couldn't believe his luck.

"There isn't a player or a sports fan or a sports writer that sometime hasn't said — while he's watching Monday Night Football or whatever — 'If I was coaching that team, I'd do this or do that.' Now I'm where all the armchair coaches want to be."

NOW HE has learned what armchair coaches can only imagine. "The pressure is unbelievable!"

Especially when you've never coached before. Especially when the team you're coaching is recovering from the first major shakeup of its eight-year history.

"I've tried to keep it as simple as possible," he said. "I didn't want to put on any more pressure than there was already. The players know how to play the game or they wouldn't be in the NHL, so I just told them to use the talents that got them here."

And because General Manager Punch Imlach wasn't around any more to tell them differently, the Sabres responded by winning five times and tying twice in the first seven games Inglis coached.

"A lot of the guys were confused," said defenseman Jerry Korab. "We'd do something Marcel would teach us in practice, and the next day — on a plane or at the rink — Punch would come up and say, 'No. This is what I want you to do.'"

"Billy just said, 'Do what you do best and help each other out.'"

A SIMPLE, direct approach from a simple, direct man. "Hockey is not a complex game," he says. "It's just hard work."

And Inglis will have hard work — in the same city, for a change — at least until the end of the season.

"I graduated from an hour-to-hour contract to a day-to-day contract to a contract for the rest of the season. What happens after that will take care of itself," he said.

"But regardless of how I come out of this," he says, "I'll still be Billy Inglis."

And he'll still have a smile.

Time's instant replay camera

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Nostalgia hath its joys, especially at holiday time, but coming face to face with your own past can be pretty unsettling.

I journeyed down to Baton Rouge to rediscover my earliest journalism past, little realizing that the state university had arrived independently at the same idea. My plan was to take the first time I lugged a typewriter up the couple of hundred steps of that stadium to the press box, which is now reachable by high speed elevators.

Being a Yankee fresh from Harvard Yard, where the football team lacks the box-office appeal of the glass flowers in the museum and the budget for the Widener library exceeds the laundry bill in the athletic department, I had to learn early and

She is a former Miss Virginia and a runner-up in the Miss USA pageant two years ago. Her job is to hand out the rushing averages and other statistics to the sports writers, some of whom also happen to be female persons, with equal access no doubt to the locker room. I didn't have the nerve to ask because back in my day, when Gen. Troy Middleton was president of LSU, he'd have burned the plant down before surrendering the towel-togged flower of Southern manhood to invasion of privacy by a prying unisex press.

The "old-timers," as the loud speaker kept calling the heroes of only two decades ago, were scheduled to play 10 minutes of touch football between the halves of the Wyoming-LSU game, which wasn't going too well for the Liberty Bowl-bound home team.

Halfback Johnny Robinson, an ordained minister now, kicked off the nostalgia fest with a short prayer in which he gave thanks to the Lord that the entire team was alive, in good health, doing pretty well and that no one was on a pass from the state penitentiary at Angola. Then one by one the players trotted out.

BATON ROUGE, La.: trotted out.

Or did as best they could under the circumstances.

Cannon trudged out as if he were smuggling a tackling dummy under his famous No. 20 jersey which LSU has since permanently retired. Quite a few of the others bulged with built-in yardage toward a first down, and when they doffed their purple and gold lacquered helmets, there was more gray matter evident than their old professors might have suspected.

Back in the shotgun, quarterback Warren Rabb could still throw those bullets but his receivers were more than down on the down and out patterns. Bo Strange, now a surgeon, was one of the few with a physique trim enough to belie the years. And, of course, coach Dietzel still glittered with boyish charm in sophomore double knits.

Billy Cannon tried to intercept a pass at one point in these creaky proceedings but was honest enough to admit later he was glad he hadn't, even though the field was wide open for one of his exclusive touchdown runs.

"I just don't think I wanted to run that far," he confessed. Cannon, the bruising runner, is an orthodontist now and when he looks for the defense to open up he usually has a pair of plectrums in his hands.

But the time machine provided its biggest surprise and perhaps its most meaningful message when the stadium announcer introduced Mrs. Gus Kinchen, Mrs. William Jeansonne, Mrs. Paul Barber and Mrs. Joe Pitts. These were, in order, the former Toni Whittington, Stephanie Campbell, Judy Rome and Bobbie Chachere — the cheer leaders of 20 years ago.

They immediately showed they were in a lot better shape than the returning national championship football team by doing cartwheels, backhand springs and other rah-rah routines up and down the field for the rest of the evening — with only two weeks notice to get back in shape, these glamorous gals still fitted into the four surviving cheerleaders' uniforms: sizes 5,7,8 and 9. Any pro coach in the land would surrender his first draft choice to learn their secret of how to stop the clock.

Only the sports writers, 20 years later, escaped notice. They were born old.

Mulligan's Stew

in the Louisiana State University-Wyoming football game under the lights on a Saturday and sit in the same press box where two decades ago as a raw AP recruit I had covered my first college football game.

Well, as it turned out, on the very night I picked, LSU was welcoming back to Tiger Stadium its 1958 national championship team, Saturday Night Fever raged as of old in Baton Rouge.

So here I was on a nostalgic collision course with Heisman Trophy winner Billy Cannon, coach (and back now-as athletic director) Paul Dietzel, quarterback Warren Rabb, tackle Bo Strange and the famous White Team, Go Team and Chinese Bandits who had electrified fans across the nation in those halcyon days before color TV and the instant replay camera.

I hadn't expected to run into them on my memory's sluggish replay camera, but the coincidence only hastened my journey into the past. I had almost forgotten how terrified I was the hard way that they take their sports seriously down South.

An AP man can survive on ordinary mistake or two, but getting the score wrong in an Ole Miss-LSU game or falling to file halfback Cannon's half time rushing statistics against the left side of an unbalanced line will elicit emotional encouragement toward a future in used car sales from the AP's career counseling section.

"You Can't Go Home Again," wrote Thomas Wolfe, a Southern novelist who spent most of his life going home.

"So little once it has changed changes back," lamented Truman Capote, another fine Southern stylist who never has shed the Spanish moss of his Deep South boyhood.

Well, they were both right. The past just isn't there anymore.

Why, the first thing I noticed, there were girls in the press box, gorgeous girls, only they weren't called girls.

"We're distribution people," explained blond, dazzling Lynn Herring.

Wealthy Nicaraguan student abandons law career to turn anti-Somoza guerrilla

By TOM FENTON

TRES RIOS, Costa Rica (AP) — He is the son of a wealthy Nicaraguan cotton grower and had planned a law career. Now he is a squad leader and training instructor in the Sandinista guerrilla army that seeks to oust Anastasio Somoza from power in Nicaragua.

In an interview with The Associated Press in this mountain village near Costa Rica's capital, San Jose, the young man, who said he is not a Marxist, explained why it was that he gave up law studies and became a guerrilla in an organization founded by Marxists.

"I can't tell you everything because that would compromise military security," said Carlos Lacayo, not his real name. He is 25 and stands six feet tall. He is of medium build, has a heavy black beard and wears metal-rimmed eyeglasses.

He looks more like an American college student than a guerrilla fighting Somoza. He might still be a student had his country taken a different political course.

One of four children whose family once had 700 acres of cotton, Lacayo was graduated from a private Roman Catholic high school in 1969 with an outstanding academic record.

"I don't recall exactly when I first heard of the Sandinistas, but you didn't hear much about them in those days," he said.

Lacayo said he decided to enter the Jesuit-run University of Central America in Managua and study law.

"There was a lot of student unrest there then and I later learned some of the student leaders had ties with the Sandinistas. I got involved in the student movement and in September 1970 we seized the cathedral in Managua to back our demands for more student participation and that the rector resign.

"We also asked for the release of several persons being held as political prisoners. Somoza freed five or six persons in response to our demands, but in January the university expelled 68 students who were involved in the affair."

Lacayo said he returned to his studies and did well academically. He joined a new group forming at the university called the Christian Movement.

"It was mainly students involved in community and social improvement projects. We were worried about the miserable conditions in Managua's slums. The movement grew and by 1973 there were 60 or 70 members."

"Then in 1974 Somoza had himself elected president and students began talking about the Sandinistas. They saw no hope for improvement under Somoza and many believed an armed struggle was the only solution."

Lacayo said some members of the Christian Movement joined the Sandinistas. The organization is named after Gen. Augusto Cesar Sandino who led a guerrilla operation against U.S. Marines occupying Nicaragua in the late 1920s. Although formed by Marxists, the Sandinista National Liberation Front now has members from all walks of life and various political colorations.

"Some dropped out of sight and went to live in safe houses. Others continued normal lives. But they knew what was coming and that their lives would be in danger," Lacayo continued.

"By 1975 I was preparing for graduation and the prospect of a job as a lawyer with some legal firm wasn't very appealing; so, I decided to leave the country and continue my studies."

Lacayo said that letters from friends at home told of atrocities being committed by national guardsmen, and of how peasants accused of aiding Sandinistas were being slain.

"I decided to join the front while I was abroad. I came back in December 1975, located some friends in the front and told them I was ready to join."

"They said my sincerity would be tested. I continued living with my family and was put to work on propaganda matters."

"I helped print handbills and that sort of thing but I had no connection then with military operations."

"The front then decided I would be useful to them as a lawyer, so I began taking cases involving poor people, workers, and helped out on community projects."

He said his family did not know of his activities then, but they do now and he is in frequent contact with them. He did not elaborate.

Lacayo said he respected his superiors in the front and had no difficulty following their orders. He described his own personal political convictions as being moderate, left of center, and stressed that he is a Roman Catholic.

"In 1977 the national guard became suspicious of me and had me followed. Some of my friends were arrested. Mostly, I suppose they became suspicious because of my work on behalf of the poor and the fact I did not seem to be involved with any political group."

Lacayo said he grew increasingly fearful of arrest and decided to leave Nicaragua in September 1977.

He said he continued working for the front while abroad in propaganda matters, but was sent back in February to help set up an attack on Penas Blancas in southern Nicaragua.

"That was the turning point. I had two years with the front by then and they felt I was ready to enter the military branch."

DR. NEIL SOLOMON Intestinal surgery not always answer

Dear Dr. Solomon: Would you recommend a weight loss bypass operation for a 28-year-old man, 5'8" tall, who can't seem to break 320 pounds? I don't relish the idea of surgery, but the thought of going through life as a blimp has me very depressed.—Stan.

Dear Stan: The procedure to which you refer is jejunoileal bypass surgery. Before you make a decision about submitting to an operation, I think you should understand that it is no panacea. In fact, in some patients the complications of surgery and uncertain long-range results may outweigh its benefits.

It seems clear that jejunoileal bypass surgery does bring about an initial weight reduction. The ultimate success of the operation, however, depends in large part on the patient's eating habits following surgery. Patients who continue to lose weight after ileal bypass are those who have achieved normal eating habits. Those who overeat begin to gain weight again, regardless of their weight loss immediately after the operation.

A variety of serious complications has been noted following ileal surgery, a common one being persistent diarrhea. It has also been found that patients who undergo the operation are at greater risk of developing tuberculosis, probably because of malnutrition and the resulting weight loss. Because of the many risks involved and the uncertainty of long-range results, I would strongly recommend that no patient consider a bypass operation until all non-surgical efforts at weight loss have been tried.

During my 17 years of seeing patients with weight problems I have only recommended jejunoileal bypass surgery to five patients, the rest of the thousands of overweight patients I've seen. I've been able to treat medically. Dear Dr. Solomon: My 17-year-old son is a high school jock. He's 6'4" tall, weighs 230 pounds, and plays baseball, football and lacrosse. That's fine with me. I'd rather he played ball than did a lot of other things he could be doing. The problem is that he insists he needs steak to keep up his strength. With prices the way they are, we're more a beef stew family. How important is it that he get steak?—Mrs. W.

Dear Mrs. W.: I hate to have someone as big and tough as your son angry with me; but from a nutritional standpoint, his demand for steak is completely out of line. The protein in beef stew is just as good as the protein in steak. Tell your son that both first-class and tourist passengers on an airplane arrive at their destination at exactly the same time.

Actress Mariette Hartley is a familiar face to millions of TV viewers, thanks to her appearance in a series of Polaroid commercials opposite James Garner. The commercials have caused many persons to refer to the actress as Mrs. James Garner. To combat the case of mistaken identity Mariette had T-shirts made for herself and daughter Justine answering the problem. (AP Laserphoto)

AAA puts highway litter on must list for action

HOUSTON (AP) — The American Automobile Association says highway litter caused by uncovered trucks is costing Texas taxpayers millions of dollars each year.

A tougher state statute requiring a tarpaulin or similar cover be placed over vehicle loads that can litter is the No. 1 item among 1979 legislative objectives adopted by the state's three AAA motor clubs in Houston, Dallas, and Amarillo.

Other top priority items call for mandatory liability insurance for all Texas motorists, mandatory 90-day driver's license suspension for any person convicted for driving while intoxicated, and re-enactment of a law requiring motorcycle operators and passengers to wear helmets.

The legislative program was developed after a survey of AAA members indicated 96 percent favor tarpaulin covers on truck loads, 89 percent favor the 90-day driver's license suspensions, 94 percent favor mandatory liability insurance, and 71 percent favor re-enactment of the motorcycle helmet law.

Because of a loophole in the current law, the AAA said, uncovered trucks with loads piled high operate routinely all over the state, "littering the highways and causing damage to other vehicles and occasional injuries to their occupants."

"Aside from the enormous highway safety problems caused by uncovered trucks, the cost of cleaning up litter which they spill is a real and growing problem," the AAA said.

"The Department of Highways and Public Transportation spent $2.85 million in picking up trash in the first half of the 1978 fiscal year, compared to $3.95 million in all of the 1977 fiscal year. The cities and counties of Texas spend millions more, yet our highways are blighted with litter."

The statute requiring motorcyclists 18 years of age and over to wear safety helmets was repealed by the state legislature in 1977.

Defective fireworks hurt more than 100

By The Associated Press

State police began contacting more than 100 victims of defective fireworks Tuesday, looking for clues to the source of the explosives that cost some Kentucky and West Virginia residents their fingers and hands over the holiday weekend.

"We're going around to all the hospitals in our area, telling the victims that we will assist them in any way to prosecute those who sold them these fireworks," said Kentucky Trooper Don Weedman.

Weedman said more than 100 persons were treated at eastern Kentucky hospitals and clinics for injuries they received Sunday and Monday, "and I expect that number will go well over 140 in Kentucky alone by the end of the day."

The bulk of the injuries were reported in a five-county area in eastern Kentucky, but West Virginia authorities estimate at least a dozen persons living along the state's border with Kentucky also were injured. Many were treated at Kentucky hospitals.

Most of the injuries have been to fingers, Weedman said, "but we also have many reports of ruptured eardrums and some people injured by flying debris. We know of one person who lost a hand and a 6-year-old boy who we believe will have to have his hand amputated."

Police would not release the names of victims.

The fireworks, composed of an explosive many times more powerful than a standard firecracker, apparently had defective fuses, because they exploded as soon as they were lit, police said.

Weedman said he has contacted more than 50 victims, but cooperation in tracing the source has not been encouraging.

East took the ace of diamonds and returned a diamond to please his partner. West ruffed and switched to spades.

Declarer took the ace of spades and led a trump. East stepped up with the ace of trumps and led a club, but South took the ace of clubs, drew trumps and then had more tricks than he needed.

East pleased nobody with this defense. His hostess was his partner, and the kibitzers jumped on him too.

BEST RETURN

Since the ruff will not defeat the contract, East should return a club at the second trick. If South finesses, West gets a club. East later takes the first trump and leads a diamond to give West a ruff as the setting trick.

Actually, the correct defense would produce a penalty of 200 points. South would take the ace of clubs and run three spades to discard a club from dummy. But East would ruff the third spade and lead a diamond for West to ruff. West would lead a fourth spade to let East ruff with the ace; and East would lead another diamond to give West a second ruff.

Cook County Sheriff's deputies remove some of the remains of five bodies unearthed from a crawl space beneath the home of John W. Gacy, Jr., in Des Plaines, Ill., Tuesday. A total of 13 bodies have been recovered so far, according to police. Gacy is being held in Chicago's Cook County Jail, charged with the murder of a missing youth. (AP Laserphoto)

Grisly nightmare coming true

DES PLAINES, Ill. (AP) — Four more bodies were found today beneath the home of a man suspected of killing 32 youths. Today's discovery brought to 13 the total number of bodies found at the home of John Wayne Gacy Jr.

One of the 13 found at the house was under Gacy's garage. A 14th body, found in a river, has also been linked to the investigation. An official described the muddy, foul-smelling crawl space beneath Gacy's house, where most of the bodies have been found, as "like a battle scene in there with all the trenches dug. You're working right in the graves."

Dr. Robert Stein, Cook County medical examiner, said Tuesday night that in his 20 years as a forensic pathologist he has never come upon a more horrifying case.

"Before this is all over with, this could be one of the most heinous crimes of the century," said Stein, who has been crawling on his stomach underneath the house.

Searchers resumed their digging this morning in the crawl space where the skeletal remains of four bodies and parts of a fifth were found Tuesday, bringing to eight the total found there since the search began Friday. A ninth body was found under a concrete garage floor last week.

John Wayne Gacy Jr., 36, a construction contractor who once served a prison term in Iowa for sodomy, reportedly told investigators he had sex with and then killed 32 boys and young men, burying 26 at his home and throwing six in the Des Plaines River.

He is being held without bond on a murder charge and is scheduled to appear in court Friday.

Gacy, who was twice divorced, had lived in the house for six years, the last two alone.

Stein said he is not close to identifying any of the victims and some may never be identified. "The teeth are excellent but we still have to have the dental reports to match them," he said.

Edmund Dobbs, chief of Cook County Sheriff's Police, said that "based on my information they're all young boys."

Lt. Joseph Kozenczak, who is heading the investigation for Des Plaines police, said Frank Landin, 19, of Chicago, whose body was found Nov.

12 in the Des Plaines River southwest of Joliet, may have been one of Gacy's victims.

Kozenczak said Landin's naked body was found with bikini underwear stuffed in his mouth. He added that bodies found at Gacy's home also had underwear or cloth in their mouth when found.

"Here's a straightforward case, isn't it, for capital punishment, the electric chair," said Stein. "I'm a physician, hence I'm against the taking of any life, but here is a classic example for the electric chair."

"He claims, what, 32 bodies? I bet you money you're going to find that many."

Dobbs said about 20 men worked inside Gacy's home Tuesday.

Subcommittee seeking competency standards

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress should consider legislation to develop minimum competency standards for physicians performing surgery, according to a congressional subcommittee that says it is "appalled at the amount of evidence of incompetent as well as unnecessary surgery."

The report released Tuesday by the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce's oversight and investigations subcommittee said state licensing agencies, medical societies and professional standard review organizations are all failing to take appropriate steps to curb unnecessary or incompetent surgery.

The subcommittee estimated that about 2 million unnecessary surgical procedures were performed in 1977, costing over $4 billion and resulting in the deaths of over 10,000 people.

A previous subcommittee report said 2.4 million unnecessary surgeries were performed in 1974 at a cost of almost $4 billion and leading to 11,900 deaths.

Unnecessary surgeries were defined by the panel as those performed without appropriate medical treatment having been tried first.

For example, the subcommittee said, the majority of tonsilectomies in 1977 need not have been done. It also questioned the advisability of hysterectomies being performed for reasons of birth control and cancer prevention.

"Unnecessary surgery remains a major national problem which requires urgent and accelerated attention" despite efforts over the past three years to curb it, the report said.

In Chicago, meanwhile, Dr. James

H. Sammons, executive vice president of the American Medical Association, said in a statement the subcommittee "has applied limited, early results from a few studies to the nation as a whole without justification."

Sammons also said it was "patently unfair" to criticize the medical profession's various review organizations "at this early stage of their history."

'Missing baby' couple now facing charges

MARION, Ind. (AP) — A couple who told police their son was kidnapped from a shopping cart face charges in his death, police said.

The body of the infant, Jason Mitchell, was found hidden in the ruins of an old house Tuesday shortly after his father's arrest, said Detective Sgt. Larry Musall. He said the baby's father, Richard Mitchell, 24, of Marion, told police where to find the body.

Mitchell was charged with murder in his son's death, and 22-year-old Linda Mitchell was charged with being an accessory to murder, Musall said. Both were held in the Grant County Jail.

Musall said "there were some bruises" on the child's body.

Coroner Lynn Hutchison said Jason died "of multiple injuries because of a non-accidental trauma." He said death occurred between midnight Saturday and 6 a.m. Sunday. The boy was born Nov. 2.

Police said the parents had reported Jason was taken from a shopping cart while the family was doing last-minute shopping in a discount department store. They said the infant disappeared while their backs were turned for about 15 seconds.

Musall said Mrs. Mitchell consented to a polygraph test Tuesday. During the interview, "she admitted what she knew," he said.

The couple's 3-year-old daughter is being cared for by Mrs. Mitchell's mother.

Museum officials hope Rembrandt thieves will return missing works

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Museum officials hope thieves who made off with a $1 million Rembrandt will repent and return the masterpiece.

And they've put their hopes on the wall of the M.H. de Young Memorial Museum. In place of the Rembrandt and three other stolen paintings are small signs reading: "Temporarily removed."

Museum director Ian White has denied a published report that an alarm that might have saved the uninsured Rembrandt was turned off when thieves struck this week.

A guard discovered the Rembrandt — "Portrait of The Rabbi" — and three little-known works worth another $62,000 were missing from the museum Christmas morning. The crooks got in through an unprotected skylight, authorities said.

Four months ago, guards tried to stop a man who had stuffed the same Rembrandt and two other paintings into a plastic bag. They shot at the man as he fled, dropping his cache.

The other stolen paintings were a night river scene by Aert Van der Neer valued at $2,000; a harbor scene by Willem Van der Velde worth $5,000; and an interior of a Rotterdam church by Anthonie Delorme valued at $55,000.

Tire blowout results in two deaths

FLOYDADA, Texas (AP) — A blown-out tire sent a pickup truck out of control on a farm road Tuesday night, fatally injuring both occupants, a man and his wife.

Roland W. Henry, 37, of Floydada was dead at the scene. His wife, Arleida Fay Henry, 29, died an hour later in a Floydada hospital.

The Texas Highway Patrol said the pickup veered off the road and rolled six times after a front tire blew out. The victims were thrown from the vehicle.

The accident occurred a few miles west of Floydada.

IRA and KEOGH Retirement Plans at First Savings are the sure way to build for a secure retirement, and get a tax break at the same time.

With an Individual Retirement Account (IRA) at First Savings you can save for the future at the impressive rate of 8% (effective annual yield 8.33%). Deduct whatever you save - up to $1500 - from your gross income. And defer every penny in taxes on your IRA until you withdraw it, normally after retiring. Then, you'll probably have less income and possibly be in a lower tax bracket (NOTE: There are severe penalties for early withdrawals.)

Here's an example of what an IRA can do for you. If you start an IRA at age 30, and deposit the maximum of $1500 per year until age 65, at the current interest rate, your IRA will be worth over $300,000. That's a dy's sum to start retirement, if you want to retire that young. By the way, your IRA is in addition to standard social security benefits. But remember, the deadline is the date your tax return is due in order to get your full tax deduction.

A Keogh Plan works much the same as an IRA except that it is designed for the self-employed individual, whereas the IRA is designed for the individual not covered by a pension or retirement plan. A Keogh Plan permits an annual deposit of up to $7500. With a Keogh Plan, you get the same tax advantages and interest rate as an IRA. However, the deadline for starting a Keogh is December the 31st, and you can make your final deposit on the day you file your taxes.

So stop by the First Savings offices downtown or San Miguel Square and let the "FISCAL FITNESS PEOPLE" show you the sure way to save for your retirement. It's getting later than you think . . .

Companies taking $12-million look at Atlantic seafloor geology

By MARK POTTS

ABOARD THE BEN OCEAN LANCER (AP) — Ninety-four miles at sea off Atlantic City, N.J. — as the gull flies — 10 oil companies are looking for the future.

They are drilling a well called a continental off-shore stratigraphic test — COST for short — that goes 16,000 feet into the ocean bottom beneath 2,640 feet of water.

They're not looking for oil, although the well is not far from the main exploration area of the offshore territory known as the Baltimore Canyon.

They are looking, at a cost of $100,000 a day, for clues about the geography of the sea floor. And they're getting a chance to try out techniques that will be valuable in future deep-water projects.

"We look at it as an exploratory tool, not a well," said Hank Hill, regional exploration manager for Continental Oil Co., one of the partners in the $12 million project.

The data collected by the COST well are combined with other information — such as seismic tests and evaluation of onshore drilling — to help determine the geology of the area. The companies want to know what's below the ocean because the government is getting ready to take bids on 109 sites adjacent to tracts already leased for drilling.

One of the first generation Baltimore Canyon wells has produced small amounts of natural gas. Five have been dry. The results of two still are unclear and three others still are being drilled.

The new sale is set for February and the COST well will help the companies involved know what they will be bidding on. Also, the government will have more accurate information in setting its minimum price for each tract.

The COST well is being drilled from the Ben Ocean Lancer, a 510-foot, 10,823-gross-ton drilling ship owned by Ocean Drilling and Exploration Co. and Ben Lines and contracted to Chevron USA Inc., which is serving as the well operator for the partnership.

Unlike other wells, firms drilling a COST well pay nothing to the government for the right to drill. They pay drilling costs and give what they learn to the federal government.

"You make a judgment as to how valuable the information is to you," said Hill. "(COST wells) are not a popular thing in the industry. Usually you have 200 companies interested in an area—here there are only 10 companies involved."

Energy-1978 dominated by long national fight

By STAN BENJAMIN

WASHINGTON (AP) — The fuzzy, fragmented U.S. energy policy finally began coming into focus in 1978 as Congress, after 18 months of wrangling, gave President Carter a half-a-loaf package of new laws.

As the year ended, the Carter administration was getting ready to go back to Congress for the other half.

The year had a rough beginning in the nation's longest coal strike, although the strike's economic impacts never approached those of the natural gas shortages of the previous winter.

As winter and the strike ended, energy hopes centered on the first exploratory oil drilling in the Atlantic Ocean off the East Coast and on the announcement of an encouraging step toward fusion power, possibly the nuclear energy of the future.

But Energy-1978 was clearly dominated by the long battle over the national energy plan that Carter first proposed in April 1977. In 1978 that battle centered on how to regulate natural gas prices.

THE HOUSE VOTED for Carter's proposal to continue regulation and even extend it to include the previously unregulated prices of natural gas sold within the producing states.

The Senate wanted just the opposite: to end federal regulation of natural gas nationwide, a move that Carter charged would yield huge windfall profits to gas producers.

A compromise between those extremes was worked out by a House-Senate conference committee in April 1978, but it was not until October that Congress adopted a final version, along with other, less controversial measures.

Congress rejected Carter's proposal of a tax on U.S.-produced crude oil, which the president wanted as a way of raising domestic oil prices now under federal control to the level of world prices without delivering excess profits to oil companies.

The administration will have to face that unsolved problem in 1979.

MEANWHILE, U.S. imports of costly foreign oil continued to rise, worsening the nation's trade deficit and weakening the value of the dollar.

In 1973 when Arab oil producers imposed their four-month oil embargo, the United States imported about 36 percent of its oil. In late 1978, imports stood at 46 percent.

The price of that oil was still determined by the foreign cartel known as OPEC, the Organization of Petroleum Importing Countries, and in the long run there seemed to be only one way the price could go up.

The Natural Gas Policy Act, signed into law by Carter on Nov. 9, extended federal price regulation for the first time into the gas-producing states and established a schedule of rate increases aimed at ending regulation of newly-discovered gas by 1985.

The Department of Energy estimated that resolution of the issue would make an additional one trillion cubic feet of gas available for sale annually by eliminating the price differences that had held it off the interstate market.

HURT BY GAS shortages in the past, many industries have turned to oil or electricity while householders have saved money by lowering thermostat settings.

As a result, with gas supplies still far below their 1973 peak, some pipelines and utility companies found themselves with such slack demand that they began seeking new customers.

Serious gas shortages were unlikely for the winter of 1978-1979, an optimism based partly on forecasts of generally mild weather.

But motorists, taking advantage of the mild weather extending into December, created a higher gasoline demand.

The sustained demand hit Shell Oil Co. at a bad time with two of its refineries out of operation, forcing Shell in November to announce a 25 percent curtailment of maximum supplies to dealers.

However, Shell later reduced the cutback to 15 percent and industry spokesmen predicted Shell's actual shortage would be temporary.

Still, Shell's problems raised new questions about the president's intention to remove federal price controls from gasoline. Originally planned for late 1978, the sending of a decontrol proposal to Congress was postponed at least until January.

THE NATION'S ONLY real fuel problem in 1978 was related to a United Mine Workers strike which cut off about half of the nation's coal production. The strike began Dec. 6, 1977, and lasted until a new contract was ratified March 24.

To stretch electrical utility coal stockpiles, some businesses in northeastern states reduced store hours and cut back on lighting and advertising displays. But increased non-union production of coal plus exchanges of electricity among utilities helped minimize electric shortages.

The largest number of non-coal workers idled because of the strike was estimated at about 25,500, far less than the number feared.

Apart from the coal strike and the new energy legislation, some of the less dramatic stories of 1978 could turn out to be the most significant for the future.

Drilling for oil and gas began for the first time in the Atlantic Ocean off New Jersey. The first probes found no new fuel resources, but a Texaco well encountered encouraging signs of petroleum.

THE ENERGY DEPARTMENT officially announced on Aug. 12 that scientists at Princeton University's Plasma Physics Laboratory managed to raise compressed hydrogen to a hotter-than-the-sun temperature of 60 million degrees Celsius.

That proved it is scientifically possible to build a reactor to generate power by the fusion of hydrogen atoms, the same process that lights up the sun and explodes a hydrogen bomb. But development of a practical power plant was a long way off.

The sun's own fusion power, transmitted to the earth every day as sunlight, may become a major energy source in the future. That idea was publicized on May 3, a Wednesday that was called Sun Day.

President Carter took the opportunity to announce a $100 million budget increase for solar energy development.

Operators stake tests

Wildcat operations have been announced in Stonewall and Fisher counties, and field locations and completions have been reported in other West Texas areas.

WES-TEX Drilling Co. of Abilene No. 1 Baptist Foundation of Texas will be dug as a 5,800-foot wildcat in Stonewall County, 12 miles northeast of Aspermont.

The prospector is 870 feet from north and 1,350 feet from west lines of section 3, Lee Dool survey, abstract 1698.

The site is two and one-fourth miles south of the Kiowa Peak (Caddo and Strawn) area.

FISHER WILDCAT

Coral Oil Co. of Abilene staked location for a 3,350-foot wildcat in Fisher County, five miles southeast of McCaulley.

It is No. 1 Martin, 1,000 feet from south and 330 feet from east lines of B. F. Lester survey and three miles southeast of the McCaulley (Flippen) field.

NOLAN WELL

Masten Oil Corp. of Midland No. 1-A Beall has been completed as the third well in the Hollins (Pennsylvanian) field of Nolan County, four miles north of Sweetwater.

The operator reported a 24-hour pumping potential of 137 barrels of 37-gravity oil, through perforations from 5,800 to 5,820 feet after 1,900 gallons of acid and 30,000 gallons of fracture solution.

Total depth is 5,880 feet and 4.5-inch casing is cemented on bottom.

Location is 1980 feet from south and 467 feet from east lines of section 30, block 22, T&P survey and one location southwest of other production.

The Noodle Creek was topped at 3,910 feet and the Canyon sand was entered at 5,800 feet. Ground elevation is 2,296 feet.

PECOS WELL

Mobil Oil Corp. No. 5 James O. Neal is a new well in the Cayanosa, North (Delaware) field of Pecos County, 21 miles northwest of Fort Stockton.

It finished for a daily flowing potential of 91 barrels of 34.8-gravity oil, plus 438 barrels of water, through a 48/64-inch choke and perforations from 4,746 to 4,872 feet after 30,000 gallons of fracture solution.

Total depth is 5,000 feet and 5.5-inch casing is set on bottom. Plugged back depth is 4,885 feet.

Well site is 1,980 feet from north and 660 feet from west lines of section 47, block OW, TTRR survey. It is a north offset to other production.

Miller says recession can be averted

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Federal Reserve Board Chairman G. William Miller says he is confident the U.S. economy can weather a 14.5 percent oil price increase without recession.

The price increase, announced by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, will harm the nation's balance of trade, Miller said Thursday. But improved economic planning should avert recession, he said.

"The economy is suddenly showing more strength," said Miller, who was in Philadelphia to attend a directors meeting at a Federal Reserve bank.

He said economic growth would continue "at least through the first half of 1979" and that he sees no sign of recession in the second half.

Poll finds broad gaps in knowledge of energy

By JOHN HILDEBRAND

Newsday

Young American adults know their country faces an energy shortage. But they lack some of the practical and theoretical knowledge needed to deal with that shortage, according to a survey of Americans, ages 26 to 35 by the federally financed National Assessment of Educational Progress.

In contrast with some polls, the survey of 1,300 young adults in the summer of 1977 found widespread understanding — and apprehension — concerning basic energy problems. For example:

—Ninety-two percent of those surveyed agreed that energy shortages posed a serious threat.

—Eighty-one percent agreed that, as world consumption increases, wars might be fought over energy resources.

—Ninety-six percent said they would like more information on saving energy, and only 6 percent indicated they didn't want to hear any more about the problem.

On the other hand, the survey found broad gaps in knowledge that a citizen might need to make informed decisions on energy matters.

In general, the survey found women gave fewer correct answers than men (43 percent correct answers for women vs. 57 percent for men), that those living in medium-size cities and rural areas gave slightly fewer correct answers than those living in big cities and their suburbs, and those earning less than $8,000 answered correctly less often than those earning $15,000 or more (41 percent correct vs. 56 percent). Here are examples of questions on which most respondents were ignorant:

—Only 14 percent knew that coal is the nation's primary fuel used to produce the largest portion of electrical energy, and only 16 percent knew that coal, as well as petroleum, can be converted to gasoline.

—Only 17 percent knew that nuclear power plants require about 10 years from start-up to production and only 14 percent knew that coal mines require five years to be put into production.

—Only 30 percent were aware the sulfur content of coal in the western United States is less than that of coal in the East. (Sulfur is a source of environmental pollution.)

Some educators would like to plug the apparent gap in knowledge by encouraging more teaching about energy problems within the schools.

"It is perhaps time for technical information once considered apropos only to professionals and specialists to filter into the lives of the general citizenry," said Isabelle Weber, a coordinator on energy issues for the League of Women Voters Education Fund. "For instance, the concepts embodied in the first and second laws of thermodynamics are not mere bits of esoteric information. These concepts have serious implications for the selection and development of alternative energy sources."

Donald Duggan, chief of academic programs for the U.S. Department of Energy who, like Weber, was asked to comment on survey results, said, "Practical knowledge would help people adopt conservation methods in their personal activities. Some technical knowledge appears desirable so that people can intelligently participate in certain levels of the decision-making process."

Others argue, however, that schools already are overburdened with requirements for study of practical subjects such as health, civics and ecology — which, while good in themselves, distract teachers from their main task of ensuring that all students are able to understand what they read, and to write in an intelligible style.

In any event, the national assessment's own survey indicates a great many young adults have gained knowledge of energy problems, without formal instruction, since the Arab oil boycott of 1973.

According to the survey, 35 percent of respondents said they had learned about alternative energy sources from television, 22 percent from journals or magazine, 20 percent from newspapers and 5 percent from books.

The national assessment is a $25.9 million federal project that attempts to monitor the knowledge, skills and attitudes of school-age children and young adults. Copies of its report on energy may be ordered at $3.75 per copy from National Assessment, Suite 700, 1860 Lincoln St., Denver, Colo. 80295.

C. E. Cardwell Jr.

Cardwell appointed

C. E. Cardwell Jr. of Midland has been named a vice president of ARCO Oil and Gas Co., a division of Atlantic Richfield Co., effective Jan. 2.

The announcement was made by James L. Wilson of Dallas, a senior vice president of the newly-designated ARCO Oil and Gas Co.

Cardwell will continue to be manager of the Permian District, with headquarters in Midland.

Cardwell's appointment is a part of the operational changes announced last September when Atlantic Richfield said it was reorganizing into eight operating companies. ARCO Oil and Gas's activities will be in exploration and production of oil and gas.

"The restructuring of the operating units of Atlantic Richfield Co. will mean greater authority and responsibility to individual operating units, such as the Permian District," Wilson said.

Cardwell has been manager of the Permian District in Midland since July 1976, following a five-year assignment as manager of Atlantic Richfield's Rocky Mountain District in Denver, Colo.

He was graduated from Auburn University with a B.S. degree in Mechanical Engineering and joined Atlantic Richfield in 1947 in Dallas.

Spraberry projects set

Parker & Parsley, Inc., of Midland announced locations for two projects in the Spraberry Trend Area field of Martin County, four miles west of Stanton.

No. 1 Stewart is 1,160 feet from south and 1,320 feet from east lines of section 1, block 37, T-1-S, T&P survey.

It is contracted to 9,100 feet.

The operator's No. 1-B Stroud, also scheduled to 9,100 feet, is 1,320 feet from north and 1,155 feet from west lines of section 7, block 36, T-1-S, T&P survey.

YOAKUM PROJECT

McCulloch Oil Co. of Texas, operating from Houston, will drill No. 1-436 Kleiner Estate as a 3/4-mile north-west stepout to the Ownby, West (San Andres) field of Yoakum County, 5.5 miles east of Plains.

It is 2,173 feet from south and west lines of section 436, block D, J. H. Gibson survey. It will drill to 5,500 feet.

PECOS PROJECT

D. A. Metts of Midland No. 2 Lawrence is a new 1,250-foot gas project in the Girvintex (Yates) field of Pecos County, nine miles west of Girvin.

The drillsite is 1/2 mile northeast of production and 1,980 feet from north and 467 feet from east lines of section 26, block 144, T&SL survey.

The pool has five Yates gas wells.

Devonian well finals

Cotton Petroleum Corp. of Midland announced potential test for an extender to the Emperor (Devonian) field of Winkler County, four miles south of Kermit.

It is one and one-eighth miles northeast of the closest Devonian gas well in the field.

The operator reported a 24-hour pumping potential of seven barrels of 29-gravity oil and 28 barrels of water, through perforations at 9,494 feet. The pay was acidized with 1,000 gallons.

Total depth is 9,497 feet and 4.5-inch casing is cemented on bottom. The plugged back depth is 9,495 feet.

Location is 660 feet from south and 1,980 feet from east lines of section 18, block B-5, psl survey.

Ground elevation is 2,839 feet.

The Railroad Commission production schedules does not list any Devonian oil production in the Emperor field.

Explorer site staked

Fisher-Webb, Inc., of Abilene No. 1 Dickson is a new 7,000-foot wildcat in Nolan County, six miles south of Sweetwater.

The drillsite is 2,145 feet from south and 1,980 feet from west lines of section 87, block 22, T&P survey and one location northeast of the depleted one-well Dickson (Strawn) field and 3/4 mile northwest of the Trammell, East (Ellenburger) field.

RRC names Poerner

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas railroad commissioners elected John Poerner their chairman Thursday. He will serve through 1980, the year he comes up for re-election.

The chairmanship is rotated among the three members, passing every two years to the commissioner whose term expires next.

Poerner was appointed last year by Gov. Dolph Briscoe to serve out the remainder of Jim Langdon's term when Langdon resigned. He was elected in November to complete the final two years of the term.

Chandelle is a Nice Place to Call Home...

WHY BUY A CONDOMINIUM?

Condominiums afford quality living in prime locations. They allow the owner all the financial and tax advantages of owning a home without the headaches.

Condominiums are designed for a more flexible lifestyle. Most important, you have greater control over your housing costs when compared to renting.

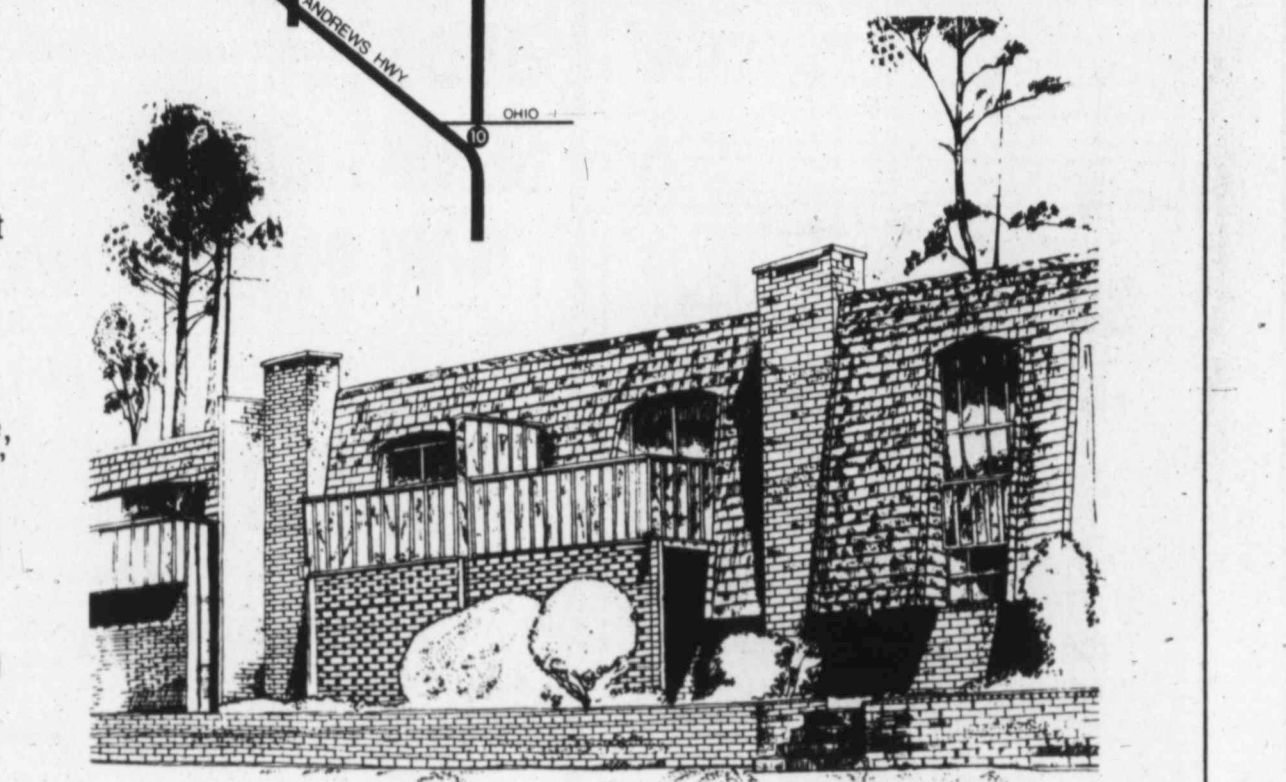

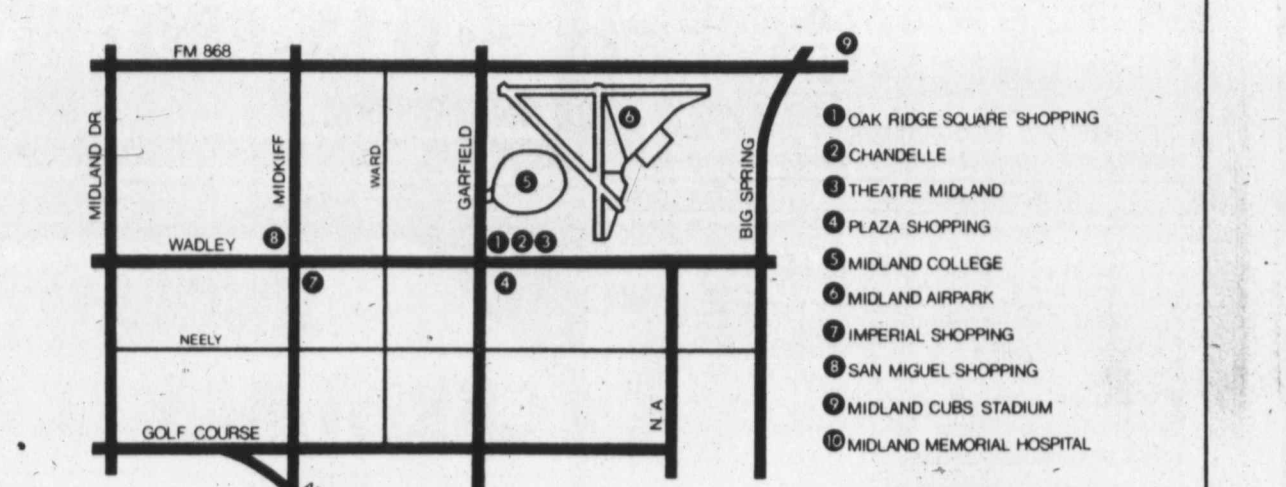

WHY BUY A "CHANDELLE" CONDOMINIUM? *

"CHANDELLE's" location at 2100 West Wadley is within minutes of downtown, theatres, recreational areas, shopping, restaurants, schools, churches, the college, and Airpark. At "CHANDELLE" you get an equity investment, the same tax breaks as a home owner, and greater control of your housing costs.

"CHANDELLE" is the only real alternative people have to get away from the maintenance problems - of home owning, and doing it with style.

Come out to 2100 West Wadley or call 684-7884 to find out why "CHANDELLE" is a nice place to call home. Models are open from 12:00 noon until 6:00 p.m. seven days a week.

* The 17 people who have decided to call "CHANDELLE" home will tell you why.
