New violence erupts in Iran

Show time was only hours away. The "sprucing up" was in high gear. Most of the youngsters who favor cattle for their 4-H and Future Farmers of America projects were industriously grooming their generally well-fatted stock.

The baaing lambs already had been sheared, and the snorting and slumbering barrows and gilts were just waiting for their final fluffing with talcum powder, sprays and polish before going onto the dirt stage.

The big calves were getting the most attention from the 4-H and FFA youngsters, their dads, friends, brothers, sisters, and ag advisers.

Darrell Curry was grooming Red Baron, his Limousin-Angus steer, which was to do better in the show than his calf did last year.

"I got sixth or seven place," the 15-year old 4-H'er recalled, "but at Houston, I blew out." Red Baron, as it turned out, came in first in the medium weight exotic steer class this year.

Doug McDonald, 17, an FFA friend of Curry's, had no beef to show.

"I lost four calves this year," he said. "I had one of them die, and three lost their (baby) teeth," which made the steers ineligible for showing. They were no longer considered show calves. Most drop their first set of teeth at 18 to 24 months.

"When they lose their teeth," noted Curry, "you might as well find the butcher or somebody who needs a calf."

Just standing around and watching the goings on in his dark pin-stripe suit was rancher oilman George W. Glass, who's at home in the barn, on the ranch, in the air or hunting in brush country.

He recalled Midland County's first livestock show in 1935. A fair went with the cattle show and took in rodeos, parimutuel horse racing, midway rides "and things like that."

"In 1935, I had the grand champion feeder load (40 head) of steers," recalled Glass. "They had 4H but feeder (cattle) was the main thing."

Glass came to Midland in 1922 from Hill County, where his dad was a cotton buyer.

"I worked in Midland Hardware," recalled Glass. "I was just a button then."

At first, he couldn't get a paying job, so he "worked for nothing" in the hardware store for George D. McCormick, the manager.

"He finally paid me $10 a month after I had worked a month or two," said Glass, who's now "going on 79."

He got into ranching 1929 and raised Herefords.

Few of that breed were in the exhibit building. Most were other English breeds or Angus or Brangus or something exotic such as Charolais, Limousin, Main Anjou or Simmental.

While the FFA and 4-H boys and girls were still grooming their stock.

TEHRAN, IRAN (AP) - Frenzied pro-shah troops clashed with thousands of anti-shah demonstrators in Ahwaz in the heart of Iran's southern oilfields today and heavy casualties were reported on the day following the monarch's departure from the strife-torn country.

The first rift also appeared in the opposition ranks.

Iranian quake death toll may be 1000

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) - The death toll in the Iranian earthquake rose to 199 today, rescue officials said, and the Tehran newspaper Ettelaat said the total may eventually top 1,000.

A spokesman for the Red Lion and Sun, Iran's Red Cross, said 199 bodies had been recovered from the rubble in the remote eastern villages of Bazanabad, Khorramabad and Ebrahimabad.

He said about 1,000 homes and other buildings were destroyed, that the villages had a combined population of 1,800, and that troops expected to dig out more bodies.

The spokesman said emergency supplies of food, clothing and tents had been sent from Mashhad to the village of Quae'n, in the center of the quake area about 500 miles southeast of Tehran and 100 miles west of the border with Afghanistan.

Three C-130 transport planes were to fly from Tehran to Quae'n with 300 tents, 1,000 blankets, 300 lamps and 300 heaters, the spokesman continued, and three doctors and five nurses were sent from a military garrison.

The quake struck at 1:51 p.m. Tuesday as Tehran and the country's other cities celebrated the departure of Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi. As millions cheered and chanted in the streets, little attention was paid to the new quake disaster, and the first casualty report was not announced until this morning.

Jury deliberating fate of millionaire Davis

HOUSTON (AP) - A jury began its first full day of deliberations today in the case of millionaire Cullen Davis, who is accused of trying to arrange the murder of a judge.

The Fort Worth industrialist is accused of plotting the death of Judge Joe Eidson, who had presided over Davis' divorce case. The slaying did not take place.

The seven-man, five-woman panel, which heard 11 weeks of testimony and final arguments, deliberated a half hour Tuesday night before recessing. The panel elected Mary Ann Carter, 47, a medical secretary now between jobs, as foreman before recessing.

Deliberations resumed at 8 a.m. this morning.

The jury came out twice this morning seeking clarification on certain testimony. It wanted to know when key state witness David McCrory was fired from his job at a Davis-owned company.

Davis, 45, waited another jury just 13 months ago in Amarillo, where he was acquitted of capital murder in

The Tehran newspaper Ettelaat said the army opened fire in Ahwaz after tens of thousands of demonstrators gathered in front of a mosque. The newspaper's initial information was that there were hundreds of casualties.

An army spokesman in Tehran said after morning prayers at the Ahwaz garrison that groups of frenzied officers and soldiers ran through the city of 500,000 calling for demonstrations in support of the absent shah.

One serious clash, he said, developed when armed soldiers came upon a group of demonstrators trying to topple a statue of the shah in an Ahwaz square.

One Ahwaz resident, reached by telephone from Tehran, said, "There's so much shooting outside that I don't dare go near the windows."

In Arak, a city 270 miles southwest of Tehran, an army officer threw himself under a moving tank after making an impassioned speech in which he said he couldn't go on living without the shah. There was no independent confirmation of the reported suicide.

Prime Minister Shahpour Bakhtiar, head of a shah-appointed civilian government, called an emergency national security meeting to discuss the clash in Ahwaz. Gen. Abbas Gharabaghi, chief of staff of Iran's 430,000-man armed forces, was among those attending.

The blowup confronted the Bakhtiar government with its first serious test of its ability to maintain law and order in the absence of Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, who was spending his first full day abroad at Aswan, Egypt.

But the opposition also had problems.

A spokesman in Paris for Ayatullah Khomeini, the exiled Shiite Moslem religious leader who has been the spearhead of the opposition to the shah, said the provisional Islamic government or revolutionary council which Khomeini plans to form for Iran would not include leaders of the National Front.

The liberal progressive National Front, headed by Dr. Karim Sanjari, headed the political side of the anti-shah movement, and spokesmen for it claimed the ayatullah's spokesman had been misunderstood by Western reporters in Paris. But there was no

Newspaper says Jordan has incurable disease

WASHINGTON (AP) - Former Rep. Barbara Jordan, whose oratory during the House Judiciary Committee consideration of impeachment against former President Richard Nixon stirred the nation, is reported suffering from an incurable disease, the Dallas Morning News said in a copyright story Wednesday.

The newspaper quoted sources in Washington and Austin, Texas, as saying Ms. Jordan is battling a bone disease, multiple myeloma.

Ms. Jordan, the first black woman elected to the Texas Senate since 1882, represented a Houston district in the House.

She announced last December that she would retire, but said illness was not the reason for her departure. She the death of his 12-year-old stepdaughter.

State District Judge Wallace Moore told the jury it could convict Davis on one of two counts - solicitation of capital murder or conspiracy to commit murder.

In final arguments, defense attorney Richard "Racehorse" Haynes branded chief prosecution witness David McCrory a "liar" and a "con man," asking the jury to reject his testimony.

McCrory testified Davis hired him to arrange Eidson's death. Davis claimed he was framed by his estranged wife, McCrory and others.

Prosecutor Jack Strickland told the jury audio and video tapes of a meeting between McCrory and Davis let each juror "sit in the back seat of the car. It is like watching through a one-way window. That's the defendant's voice. You don't have to guess. You don't have to rely on David McCrory."

"And Cullen Davis acted out of a sense that I am Cullen Davis. I can do what I want, when I want and to whomever I want."

Jubilant crowd helps inaugurate Bill Clements

By LINDA HILL, R-T Staff Writer

AUSTIN - It was billed as "A Day for All Texans."

And a wide assortment of the state's citizenry flocked to the state capital Tuesday to watch a Republican governor take the oath of office for the first time since Reconstruction days.

Fake fur and mink mingled in the crowd, which included large numbers of school children.

Ethnic minorities were represented, though not in large numbers. The band played "New San Antonio Rose" and "The Yellow Rose of Texas," and the cannons fired a 19-gun salute.

The first unannounced blast of the cannons took the crowd by surprise, as an almost universal startled cry rose from the group.

The gubernatorial party strode from the Capitol to the platform under the crossed sabers of the Texas A&M University Ross Volunteers.

Smoke from the cannonfire still shrouded the platform as William P. Clements Jr. promised to protect and defend the constitution and laws of the U.S. and Texas.

The jubilant Clements chuckled as Supreme Court Chief Justice Joe R. Greenhill congratulated him after the swearing in.

Some in the audience noted the time of the historic moment - 12:15 p.m.

The new governor reiterated his campaign promises of a billion dollars in tax relief, reduction of the state bureaucracy and improved education.

Clements warned the crowd there may be resistance to his plans. However, said Clements, "I will persist and I will prevail."

Lt. Governor Bill Hobby, a Democrat who has been in office since 1973, also was sworn in for a new term. Hobby, who took the oath with his left hand, struck a chord similar to Clements' in his remarks, calling for less government intrusion in the lives of citizens.

The crowd seemed in good spirits as onlookers strained to find a view from the lawn, which sloped downward from the platform. The comment, "You could see it better on TV," was not uncommon.

The request to "Please rise" for the invocation elicited laughter from hundreds of persons already standing.

The sun, which had been hidden behind clouds at the beginning of the ceremony, had come out by the time it was over, a fact Clements purported to see as a good omen.

As the Longhorn band played "Texas Our Texas," the official state song, the crowd drifted away to the barbecue tables, or home.

Many went to the dozens of chartered buses which lined the streets around the Capitol.

A barbecue on the Capitol lawn followed the ceremony. Also included in the day's festivities was the traditional inaugural parade, which included Midland's Lee High School Band among the participants. Tuesday night, Hobby and Clements attended five inaugural parties, including three $50-a-ticket formal galas.

During remarks at the ball for West Texans, including Midlanders, Clements and Hobby both joked about the Democratic loss of the governorship.

Said Hobby, "It was a year of ups and downs. The (Houston) Oilers went to the (NFL) finals. The Italians lost the pope. We lost the governorship."

Commenting on the ball's location - the Special Events Center, which is the site of University of Texas basketball games - Clements challenged the Democrats to a basketball contest.

In keeping with the theme for the day, there had been an inaugural party for everyone. Those who couldn't afford the formal galas could choose from a $10-a-ticket event and a free one.

When Mrs. Clements said in her remarks the ball in the Special Events Center was the fifth party that evening, Clements interrupted to say it seemed like the dozzenth.

Midlanders' gas rates may go up next month

By SUSAN TOTH, R-T Staff Writer

Midlanders will be paying an extra $3.79 per month for their gas in February if the Midland City Council accepts the recommendation of an advisory committee.

The 11-member committee, made up of representatives from 10 of the 63 cities involved in the four-month rate increase process, reached an agreement with Pioneer Natural Gas Co. Tuesday afternoon to recommend an average 14.88 percent increase in rates for users.

Committee members met with a panel of rate consultants Friday in Lubbock before making the final suggestion.

Pioneer had asked for a 26.3 percent increase in the rates. The new rates will provide the gas company with an extra $11.5 million in revenue in lieu of the $19.8 million they had been seeking.

The rate will go into effect for gas used after Feb. 15, according to Fred Poe, Midland assistant city manager and a member of the committee.

Residential users will bear the largest share of the increase, with costs going up about 19 percent for them. Gas air conditioner users in large buildings will have a 12 percent increase, and small industrial users will get an 8.5 percent hike.

The small industrial users have had two other rate hikes since residential rates were raised, Poe said, which gave them a smaller increase.

"We tried to have each class of user paying a pro-rata share of their cost of delivering the gas," Poe noted.

The average residential bill should go up about $3.79 per month, based on 9 mcf of gas used. That bill now is about $20.70 per month, Poe said.

The rate increase was first requested by Pioneer in early September.

Bob Mills, director of public relations for Pioneer, today said the company was gratified the committee had made a recommendation "the cities can live with and we can live with. We're ready to get back into the gas business."

These rate cases are extremely ex-

More cancer found in Wayne

LOS ANGELES (AP) - More cancer has been found in actor John Wayne, who had his cancerous stomach removed last week, his doctors said today.

The final pathological report, taken on body tissues tested after the 9½-hour operation on the 71-year-old actor was completed last Friday, showed evidence of cancer in the gastric lymph nodes, said Bernard Strohm, administrator of the UCLA Medical Center.

Asked what the report meant, Strohm said "more cancer cells were found" in the stomach area.

"There is concern, naturally," Strohm said.

But he added the finding will not alter the post-operative treatment and said no decision has been made on whether more surgery is necessary.

Strohm made the announcement prior to a news conference held by two of Wayne's sons, Michael and Patrick.

Wayne was told about the new finding Tuesday night and he took the news in stride, said Michael. "He's been down this road before," Michael added.

"We're hopeful."

"Doctors had prepared us for this eventuality," said Patrick. "It didn't come as a total shock."

In 1964, Wayne had part of his left lung removed after doctors found it to be cancerous.

liberal or leftist politicians had been expected once the cementing focus of their joint campaign — the shah — left the country.

The ayatollah was opposed to the shah because the ruler's campaign to Westernize and industrialize Iran undermined Muslim traditions, including the authority of religious leaders, the church's hold on vast tracts of land and the subjugation of women.

The National Front leaders opposed the shah because he pulled back from promised democratic political reforms and gave the secret police and the army a free hand against his opponents, and because of the alleged corruption of government officials and the royal family.

The only thing the two forces had in common was their opposition to the shah and those who supported him.

Widespread strikes continued despite the shah's departure. Few trains ran. International telex and some other telecommunications services were still disrupted.

The shah, who arrived Tuesday in Aswan, Egypt, for talks with President Anwar Sadat, is widely believed to be en route to a location in the western part of the United States, but American officials were silent on his future travel plans.

Administration sources said only that federal security agents are protecting members of the shah's family in Palm Springs, Calif., Lubbock, Texas, and New York and are preparing to protect the shah himself.

Meanwhile, President Carter appeared to discount reports that the Soviet Union has had a role in fomenting the turmoil in Iran when he told NBC News he believes Moscow is interested in a stable Iran.

He expressed hope that U.S.-Iranian friendship can be preserved once peace and order are restored in Iran.

In another development, a Pentagon spokesman said Tuesday that Defense Department intelligence gathering equipment is still in position in Iran despite the year-long upheavals.

Wise critically eyed and felt the sheep, while they were lined up in columns and rows to show their conformations at several angles.

"He takes his time to talk to the kids and tells 'em what's wrong," observed Jimmy Hipp, father of 4-H'er Debbie Hipp.

Those lambs are bred and raised for their meat.

Off the show floor, 10-year-old Laurie Smith was sprucing up her heifer Hereford, 400-pound Molly.

"Well, we usually keep her in the backyard, so far," Laurie said.

"This is a nice little calf, cow," said Coby Easterwood, who's from Greenville and has two years on Laurie. He was just wandering around the place.

In the back of the building were the swine. And like the calves and lambs, many of the young pigs were named by their young raisers.

Scott Morris, father of a 15-year-old, old 4-H'er, Richard, said naming the animals isn't such of a good idea, especially when it turns cool and slaughtering and butchering time is at hand.

"We named him," Morris recalled of pet pig the family raised. "and that was a mistake."

"How can you kill and eat a family pet?" "Yeah," Morris said, "we sold 'Henry,' or whatever his name was."

were still disrupted. The central bank was paralyzed, with 10,000 government pay checks and remittances to contractors held up.

Oil industry sources said a representative of Khomani approved the export of 13 1/2 million barrels of heavy oil, or about 2 1/2 days' normal export, but this did not mean a general resumption of oil exports.

The heavy oil is used primarily for tanker fuel and steam generating plants, the sources said. They said it would be shipped to refineries in Italy, the United Arab Emirates, Singapore and the Netherlands.

Jubilant public celebrations of the shah's departure continued Tuesday night in Tehran despite the new political storm clouds and an earthquake in eastern Iran in which at least 199 persons were killed.

Although most leaders of the armed forces opposed the shah's departure and remained loyal to him, only scattered brief clashes were reported as millions marched cheering and chanting through the streets.

Khomani called for a peaceful march Friday, the 40th day after the anniversary of the assassination of Imam Hussein, the founder of the Shiite sect.

Because of public resentment at Washington's support of the shah and anti-foreign pronouncements from the ayatollah, the U.S. Embassy urged Americans to stay at home, and other embassies were considering issuing similar warnings.

Khomani continued to spurn the new Bakhtiari government and through a spokesman reiterated that his supporters would make Iran an Islamic republic for which he would name a new government.

Because of the ayatollah's popularity and the apparent strength of his influence, officials in Washington expressed doubt that Bakhtiari's government could survive or that the shah would ever return to Iran.

"Our first step is to reconstruct the country, which has been destroyed by the shah and the foreigners," said the ayatollah in a victory statement Tuesday after the shah and Empress Farah flew to Egypt.

He claimed that the United States was either destroying or dismantling its military installations in Iran, but a Pentagon spokesman in Washington said the facilities, used for gathering intelligence about the neighboring Soviet Union, were in place.

Wilkinson would say in his evaluation of cattle. "He's what I call a well-balanced steer."

Or, he'd call a steer that didn't exactly suit his taste as "a little old fashioned... (but) actually not a bad calf in its class."

Meanwhile, 12-year-old Rachelle Patterson was cuddling a puppy someone at the livestock show had given her and she in turn gave it to somebody else.

Rachelle still holding Frix in the grandstands, turned around to look up at a woman a step above her.

"You can hold her if you want," Rachelle said endearingly. Then, she turned to Frix. "Say, 'I love people to hold me.'"

Even dogs have their day amid the livestock.

The livestock show is over for another year, but there's still work undone, though much for the good of youngsters and their parents has been accomplished.

And while laurels are being tossed about, some should be cast toward vocational agricultural teachers Dewey Baucum, Terry Denton and Milton Kirby at Midland's Robert E. Lee High School and Joe Cuffman, Gerald Oakes and Rob Piper at Midland High and former voc-agg teacher Harold Skiles for their roles in the show.

Thanks.

Six hijackers release hostages

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Six Moslem hijackers released their 45 remaining hostages and a Lebanese airliner early today after being allowed to publicize their charge that the Libyan government is holding a missing Moslem religious leader.

The leader of the six told a hastily organized airport news conference that Col. Moammar Khadafy's government arrested Imam Mousa al-Sadr, the spiritual leader of Lebanon's Shiite Moslems, three months ago "in defiance of all international law." He said it was "a crime that will not go unpunished."

The hijackers then freed the remaining 36 passengers and nine crew members from the Lebanese Boeing 707 they commandeered seven hours earlier, left the plane and surrendered to Lebanese authorities.

The men said they were members of an organization called Amal — Hope — founded by al-Sadr during the 1975-76 civil war between Lebanon's Christians and Moslems.

The imam has been missing since he went to Libya last October to attend anniversary celebrations of Khadafy's 1969 coup. He was rumored to have quarreled with Khadafy during the visit, but Libyan officials denied this and said he left there after a week's stay. But other Lebanese Shiite leaders believe the Libyans are holding him.

Airport officials said the Middle East Airlines jetliner was hijacked

Tuesday afternoon 50 minutes after it left Beirut for Amman, Jordan, with 72 passengers and nine crew members.

The hijackers first told the airport control tower they were Palestinians and wanted to go to Cyprus or Turkey. The plane circled over Cyprus for an hour but was not allowed to land and flew back to Beirut.

The hijackers then said they wanted to fly to Libya to demand "the release of our beloved imam."

Marvin's ex-girlfriend testing unmarried cohabitants law

By LINDA DEUTSCH

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Michelle Triola Marvin says she became Lee Marvin's live-in lover only after she believed he would support her for life, promising "Michelle, don't worry. You will be taken care of."

"I took that to mean if we were no longer together and I was an old bag, he would take care of me," Miss Marvin testified Tuesday in the landmark property rights trial.

She was to resume testifying today.

Miss Marvin told Superior Court Judge Arthur Marshall in the non-jury trial how her romance with Marvin began as a passionate affair during filming of a movie, then deepened to involve joint living quarters, bank accounts and foreign journeys.

"I thought he wanted to spend the rest of his life with me," she testified in a voice barely above a whisper.

The 46-year-old Miss Marvin, who lived with the Oscar-winning actor for six years, is suing for $1 million plus a share of his income during their liaison, contending she gave up her show business career to concentrate on his.

Marvin contends the couple did not sign a formal agreement on property rights and since they did not marry, she is not entitled to a portion of his income.

The trial is the first to test a 1976 California Supreme Court ruling that unmarried partners could sue for property settlement. The ruling came in an appeal by Miss Marvin's attorney, Marvin Mitchelson.

The trial is expected to set a precedent for payment of "alimony" in cases of unmarried cohabitants.

At Tuesday's session, Miss Marvin told her version of the Hollywood-style romance which began under the klieg lights and ended on the beach at Malibu.

She sat in the witness box with her hands folded and occasionally glanced across the courtroom where the 54-year-old Marvin sat with his lawyers. His current wife, Pamela, shifted nervously in her front-row seat.

Miss Marvin recalled meeting the actor in 1964 when both appeared in the movie, "Ship of Fools."

"Did you become intimate with Mr. Marvin?" asked Mitchelson.

"Yes," she said softly.

"When?" the lawyer asked.

"I'd say about two weeks after we met," Miss Marvin said.

The actor was in the midst of a dissolving marriage, and Miss Marvin was recently divorced.

For a time, when the movie ended, she said they went their separate ways. But Marvin returned to woo her, and soon he was living with her part-time.

"I said to him we were not living together," she said of the then-intermittent relationship.

"He said, 'What does it mean when your blouse and my suit come back from the cleaners together? Does it mean that I live here?' And I said, 'I guess it does.'"

But Marvin never wanted marriage, she conceded. "He said when two people loved each other there was no need for a piece of paper," she recalled.

They took a romantic vacation together to San Blas, Mexico where Marvin convinced her to move in with him, she said.

Under Mitchelson's questioning, Miss Marvin stressed that the actor introduced her as "Mrs. Marvin" to his friends. She had her name legally changed from Triola to Marvin shortly before they broke up.

The judge admitted as exhibits nine love letters Marvin wrote to Miss Marvin and numerous pictures of the apparently loving couple hugging and smiling in Hawaii, Palau, Japan and Malibu.

"Were those happy or unhappy times?" Mitchelson asked as he showed the pictures to Miss Marvin.

"They were happy times," she said softly.

White faces controversial closed court hearing in San Francisco today

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Former Supervisor Dan White faced a closed-door hearing today to determine if he should be bound over for trial in the deaths of Mayor George Moscone and Supervisor Harvey Milk.

White, 32, was to appear at the preliminary hearing before Municipal Judge R.J. Reynolds. He faces two counts of first-degree murder in the Nov. 27 shootings at City Hall.

The unusual closed-door session was ordered at the request of White's attorney, Douglas Schmidt, who said he wished to protect his client from prejudicial pretrial publicity. News organizations contend the public would be better served by an open hearing.

Schmidt reportedly has subpoenaed many city officials. Some of those summoned, including one judge, said they don't know White and don't understand the subpoenas.

"I have heard anywhere from 40 to 65 subpoenas were issued," said Thomas F. Norman, an assistant district attorney who will present the state's case. He said it was unusual for a defendant to subpoena witnesses at a preliminary hearing.

White has been in jail since the slayings of Moscone and Milk. He could face death in the gas chamber if convicted.

At White's arraignment, Schmidt entered an innocent plea for his client but left open the possibility of a later plea of innocent by reason of insanity.

Three Texas A&M grads regents

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Three graduates of Texas A&M University were approved Tuesday as school regents, with the Senate Subcommittee on Nominations voting 6-0 to recommend their confirmation.

Sen. Peyton McKnight, D-Tyler, chairman of the subcommittee, said he would ask the full Senate to vote Thursday on the nominees — Clyde Wells of Hood County, Norman Moser of Bowie County and Royce Wisenbaker of Smith County.

Wells, a rancher and businessman, has been an A&M regent since 1961 and currently is chairman.

Moser, a banker-rancher, resigned as chairman of the Texas Animal Health Commission to accept the regent appointment from outgoing Gov. Dolph Briscoe. He said his father and son had also graduated from A&M.

He said a friend told him he "chokes up" when he thinks about A&M, and

Moser added, "I feel the same way."

"The best is yet to come," Moser said of the school.

McKnight said Wisenbaker has been a business associate in the independent oil business. McKnight also said Wisenbaker is a past president of the A&M students' association and the Aggie Club.

Wisenbaker said his wife teases him — "Why don't you get an apartment there (at College Station)? You never got out of A&M."

"I live, work and breathe A&M," he said.

Yoko Ono, John Lennon

Names in the news

BRIDGEWATER, Va. (AP) — Former Beatle John Lennon and his wife, Yoko Ono, have purchased 103 dairy cows, but the man who sold the livestock says he can't reveal where the cows are being shipped. Bridgewater dairy farmer Nelson Gardner said Tuesday the terms of the sales contract also prohibit disclosing the purchase price or any details of the transaction. Lennon and wife insisted on the terms in order to guard their privacy, the farmer said. "Can you imagine what it would be like if people thought they had been here?" said Gardner, adding that the sale occurred Jan. 2.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor John Wayne has been moved from an intensive care unit into one of the private rooms of the UCLA Medical Center, says a hospital spokesman. The switch occurred because of Wayne's rapid recovery from cancer surgery. "He spent another good night but with some discomfort due to postoperative gas pains," hospital administrator Bernard Strohm said Tuesday. The 71-year-old movie king's cancerous stomach was removed Saturday in a nine-hour operation. The actor's long list of well-wishers most recently included President Carter, who sent a telegram, and former president Richard Nixon, who telephoned, hospital officials said.

NEW YORK (AP) — Dr. Robert Atkins, who wrote the popular book "Dr. Atkins' Diet Revolution," cannot be held liable for an elderly woman's heart disease, a jury has ruled. The Manhattan jury ruled Tuesday in a $2.5 million malpractice suit filed by Dorothy Goldstein, 73. The suit was dismissed on a 5-1 vote. When she first went to see Atkins in 1972, Mrs. Goldstein weighed 214 pounds. She then started the high-salt, high-fat, high-cholesterol and low-carbohydrate regimen which Atkins popularized in his book. In the next three months, she was hospitalized four times for coronary insufficiency and a pacemaker was implanted in her chest. Atkins maintained that Mrs. Goldstein was "well on her way to a serious heart condition" before she came to him. But Dr. Seymour Halpern, a witness for Mrs. Goldstein, said Atkins' diet was "the worst possible diet he could have given her."

COVINGTON, Ky. (AP) — The great-grandson of legendary football coach Knute Rockne has weighed in at 8 pounds, 4 ounces, and the baby's father says they'll probably name him after the Notre Dame star. "We still aren't real sure, but we think we'll name him Knute Kenneth Rockne IV," said John Rockne, a high school football coach. His son was born Tuesday at the St. Elizabeth Medical Center. John, 29, is offensive coordinator for the Campbell County High School football team and coach of the school's baseball team. "It's our first baby and we're both very excited," said his 25-year-old wife, Sally. "He (John) wanted a boy so bad." John's famous grandfather was killed in an airplane crash in Kansas in 1931, a few months after his team, an unranked underdog, beat a powerful Southern California team, 27-0, in the last game of the 1930 season.

NEW YORK (AP) — English punk rock star Sid Vicious, who reportedly assaulted a man in a Manhattan nightclub while out on bail on a murder charge, has been released on bail for a second time. Manhattan Supreme Court Justice James Leff freed Vicious Tuesday and restored his original $50,000 bail, while adding another $10,000 for the assault charge. Vicious, whose real name is John Simon Ritchie, once was guitarist with the now-defunct Sex Pistols rock group. Vicious has been charged with fatally stabbing his girlfriend, Nancy Spungen of Philadelphia, on Oct. 12 in their room at the Chelsea Hotel. Vicious was free on $50,000 bail in that case when he allegedly hit Todd Smith, brother of rock singer Patti Smith, in the head with a beer mug at a Manhattan nightclub. Vicious' attorney, James Merberg, said it would be several days before Vicious could be released, since it would take that long to get bail money from England.

Oklahoma tractorcade reaches Oklahoma City

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — About 200 tractors and other vehicles were scheduled to travel through Oklahoma City Wednesday morning as farmers from Oklahoma and Texas worked their way to Washington to press for full parity for their crops. The tractorcade of farmers and supporters carried signs and slogans ranging from "Dump Carter" to "Not a vacation, just desperation." The farmers spent Monday night in Sayre, passed through Elk City Tuesday morning and held a rally and dinner in El Reno Tuesday night, where they spent the night. Six Oklahoma Highway Patrol units were scheduled to watch the farmers as they went through Oklahoma City on Interstate 40. The tractorcade began Monday in Amarillo, Texas, as part of a re-

U.S. may adjust pullout of troops in Korea

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's security adviser says the U.S. assessments of increased North Korean strength "will be adjusted" if North Korea upsets its military balance with the south. But Zbigniew Brzezinski made clear in a letter released Tuesday by Rep. Samuel Stratton, D-N.Y., that Carter is not reconsidering his troop pullout yet in response to new U.S. assessments of increased North Korean strength. "Should circumstances affecting the balance change significantly, we will assess those changes in close consultation with the Congress, (South Korea) and our other Asian allies," Brzezinski told Stratton. "Our plans will be adjusted if developments so warrant," he said. A White House source who asked not to be identified said that means the new North Korean strength estimates are being studied but "there clearly is no reaction now to these new estimates." The new estimates reportedly are that North Korea has 600,000 troops — 40,000 more than had been thought — and that, even more significantly, they have been reorganized into additional combat divisions. Brzezinski confirmed in his letter that new estimates were made by the Central Intelligence Agency and the Defense Intelligence Agency. Brzezinski made the statement in replying to a call by Stratton and Rep. Robin Beard, R-Tenn., for Carter to halt the troop pullout pending a study of the new estimates. Stratton, who has been briefed on the new estimates, said they show an "ominous increase in North Korean strength."

Weather deaths now at 65

CHICAGO (AP) — Emergency blood supplies from the West Coast were airlifted to Chicago as travel remained snarled by snow in the Midwest. Light snow fell briefly over Chicago early today, but the temperature later rose above freezing for the first time this year.

The death toll from the weekend storm and bitter cold rose to 65.

Only a sprinkling of new snow fell over an area including northern Illinois and Milwaukee. The snow had stopped by dawn, but some freezing drizzle was reported in Madison, Wis., moving eastward.

The temperatures in Chicago, especially hard hit by the weekend blizzard, reached 33 degrees between 5 a.m. and 6 a.m., the first time since New Year's Eve that the temperature was higher than 30.

Checker Taxi Cab Co. offered $25 to anyone willing to dig out one of more than 100 abandoned cabs in Chicago, and National Guard troops planned to use hoists today in Milwaukee to free snowbound autos.

In Iowa, National Guard troops and farmers used helicopters and snowmobiles to take hay to starving cattle. Some animals were reported stuck in snow up to their necks.

Gov. Joseph P. Teasdale turned down a plea for National Guard troops to feed cattle in Missouri because "the state isn't equipped to handle" the job, a spokesman said.

The governors of Wisconsin, Missouri and Indiana added portions of their states to the list of states — Illinois, Iowa and Kansas — seeking or getting federal disaster relief.

There have been 22 reported deaths in Illinois, 19 in Wisconsin, nine in Kansas, six in Missouri, four in Iowa, three in Michigan; and one each in Ohio and Nebraska.

A 74-year-old man burned to death when his car burst into flame as he tried to free it from snow in Auxvasse, Mo., Callaway County authorities reported.

The temperature hit 23 degrees early today in Milwaukee, where there is 29 inches of snow on the ground and it has not gotten above freezing since Jan. 1. Natural gas and fuel oil demand was reported about 30 percent above normal.

In Sioux Falls, S.D., where temperatures have averaged 4 this month — 18 degrees below normal — it was expected to be in the low 30s.

Students in chill-bound Kansas, Okla., have been on an extended Christmas holiday since Jan. 2 due to ice and cold, but today's forecast called for temperatures in the upper 50s.

Jack Mostetler, vice president of Oklahoma Natural Gas, said the warm weather would provide welcome relief. The utility has cut out-of-state emergency sales to cope with record demand.

The Red Cross said 1,200 pints of blood were shipped to Chicago from Los Angeles — 10 times more than in any emergency response since the agency initiated a blood transportation program four years ago.

"It will save us, but only temporarily," said Red Cross spokesman Dr. Thiru Vaithianathan.

Most Chicago hospitals canceled elective surgery, and some were taking emergency surgical patients only if blood was available. O-positive blood, the most common type, was in short supply.

Some blood — 300 pints — was delivered to Milwaukee airport because only two runways were open at O'Hare International Airport.

Relations necessary, Young says

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Ambassador Andrew Young has been quoted in an interview as saying the United States should seek some type of relations with the Palestinians.

He also reportedly said Israel was the reason America has avoided relations with the Palestine Liberation Organization.

"I think we should have some way of relating to the Palestinian people," Young was quoted as saying in the transcript of an interview with Interdependent, a publication of the U.N. Association of the U.S.A.

Interdependent said the interview was held Jan. 9. It has not been published, but a transcript was made available to U.N. correspondents Tuesday.

Young, who was returning to New York from Atlanta, could not be reached for comment.

"How we (start relations) I think, is a matter for discussion. And we really haven't reached a conclusion on that," Young was quoted as saying. "But I would say that overwhelmingly the reason for our not having relations with the PLO is probably because of Israel."

"I don't necessarily quarrel with that, because I think that Israel is going to have to make the decisions about how it's going to relate to the Palestinian people."

Young also was reported to have said he thought "the frustration of the Camp David accords is essentially being accomplished by Palestinians who feel as though it does not give them the kind of representation and guarantees they need to assure their future or any concept of self-determination. And I think that's what we're working on."

He was said to have described PLO observers at U.N. headquarters as "very skilled politicians and very intelligent, decent human beings" who "hopefully... would win out in a battle for the leadership of the Palestinian cause." He also said there are PLO elements that favor sustained terrorism "leading to the destruction of Israel."

Hotline connects stumped writers with Arkansas U

By JOE WHEELAN

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Are you suffering from a dangling participle? Tripping over five-syllable words? Don't know where to put your comma?

In an age when many people would rather pick up the telephone than a book, Daniel Littlefield's English Department at the University of Arkansas at Little Rock may have the answer: 501-569-3162, a writers' hotline.

The 25 English teachers at UALR seem to welcome the queries they receive daily from stumped writers, lawyers and businessmen nationwide.

"It's like creating Frankenstein. But we always have the perfect way out of this. We could always have our telephone taken out," Littlefield says. As far as he knows, UALR is the only college in the nation operating a writers' hotline.

Thoughts of disconnecting the phone are in jest. He and his colleagues are pleased that about 30 callers consult them each week about the finer points of punctuation, spelling and grammar.

The writers' hotline became a fixture at the English Department in February at the suggestion of Stuart Peterfreund, then an assistant-English professor. Peterfreund now teaches English at Northeastern University in Boston.

Before February, the English Department had received a smattering of queries about grammar and punctuation from local writers. Peterfreund thought an orderly way was needed to handle the questions, and the hotline was born.

It began as a service to Little Rock area residents, and soon attracted national attention.

Nowadays, you can call the English Department between 9 a.m. and noon on weekdays and get answers to questions about tenses, attribution and apostrophes. The calls are fielded by a secretary and transferred to a department faculty member.

"It's amazing. We get calls from New Jersey, New York and we had one last week from Bellingham, Wash. We had another one from Itell Corp. in San Francisco," Littlefield said.

He said most of the queries involve the use of commas and apostrophes, but sometimes a caller will stump a faculty member with a question.

"I remember one we got from a math department in a school in California. Someone was asking a question about the repetition of a word in a sentence and whether that meant anything," Littlefield said. "It was a difficult question to answer because it was out of context."

The hotline has its regulars. They include a school system in Texas, a Miami lawyer and the staff of a newsletter at a Sandusky, Ohio, ball-bearing plant.

"They ask questions about punctuation, usage, plural and possessive forms. They always seem pleased when we give them the information, and we really appreciate that," he said.

No. 1 steer tops last year's price

By ED TODD
R-T Staff Writer

The 1,290-pound grand-champion steer at the Midland County Livestock Show was auctioned off Tuesday night at $1.50 a pound to The First National Bank of Midland, high bidder on the Simmental-Hereford calf shown by 18-year-old Gave Holland of Midland.

Last year's grand champion steer, also an exotic breed, brought a penny less — $1.49 — at the 1978 auction.

The reserve champion calf, an 1,195-pound black Main-Anjou cross exhibited by 10-year-old Mark Graham of the Greenwood community, brought 85 cents a pound on the auction block. Top bidder was Murray Fasken of Midland.

The livestock show's grand champion hog, exhibited by Robby McBryde, 9, of Midland, was sold to the high bidder, The Midland National Bank, for $2.40 a pound. The pig weighed in at 193 pounds.

The reserve champion hog, shown by Mike Pruitt, went for $2 a pound. High bidder on the 215-pound hog was Geo Search Corp.

The show's champion fine-wool lamb, exhibited by Angie Casbeer, was auctioned off at $2.65 per pound to Commercial Bank & Trust Co. The lamb weighed 114.

The champion crossbred lamb, which weighed in at 122, was auctioned to Gibson's Discount Center at $2.35. Johnnie Casbeer exhibited the animal.

Darrell Hopkins exhibited the champion medium wool lamb, which, at 145 pounds, was auctioned to Mid-West Electric Co. at $2 a pound.

Auctioneer Tommy Marricle of Snyder auctioned 117 head of steers, lambs and hogs at sales, which was attended by an estimated 400 people.

Livestock not placing high the show were sold in lots to Southwestern Livestock Auction here at 55 cents per pound for calves, 70 cents for lambs and 50 for hogs.

Prior to the auction, Jim Crowder presented awards to the 4-H Club and Future Farmers of America members in the show.

Winning the Leslie E. Floyd Memorial Showmanship Awards for boys were Jeff Barnett, horse show; John Jones, calf show; Mike Smith, swine show, and Andy Carter, lamb show.

Girls winning showmanships trophies were Angie Casbeer, lamb show; Tammy Simpson, swine show; Michelle Patterson, calf show, and Dana Milner, horse show.

Midland auction brings in $44,275 for young farmers

The 117 Midland County livestock auction brought the 4-H and FFA boys and girls $1,275.40. Last year's last grossed $13,698.

Twenty calves were auctioned off for $18,148.76 for an average of 89 1/2 cents a pound. Fifty-nine lambs went for $14,399.06 for $2.44 a pound, and 39 hogs were sold for $11,727.58 for $1.54 per pound.

Stanton grass judging team takes top honors in contest

Stanton High School's Future Farmers of America range-grass judging team No. 2 scored first to beat out perennial rival Snyder FFA in the senior grass contest at the Midland County Livestock Show Tuesday.

On that winning team, coached Stanton vocational agriculture teacher Nolan Parker, were John Smith, Richard Parker, Bobby Matthews and Jimmy Rich.

Thirty-eight boys and girls from Midland, Garden City, Snyder and Stanton were entered in the contest, annually sponsored by the Midland Soil and Water Conservation District. Ten teams competed. The contest was for 4-H and FFA members.

Placing second in the event was Stanton's No. 1 team, made up of Bobby Mims, Meg Vann, John Parker and Randy Turner.

Placing third was Snyder's FFA No. 1 team of Lonnie Blackard, Jimmy James, Eddie Cumble and Rodney Glass. That team was coached by voc-ag teacher Billy Bob McMullan.

High individual scorers in the senior division were John Parker, first, Jimmy Rich, second, and John Smith, third, all of Stanton, and Lonnie Blackard of Snyder.

Winning the junior division was the Snyder FFA No. 1 team of John Bloom, Danny Proctor, Jay Cox and Roy Thompson. High individuals were Cox and Proctor.

In the contest, the FFA members were submitted 40 mounts of grasses to identify and to characterize the grazing quality of the grasses for livestock and wildlife.

Trophies and plaques were presented Alvey Bryant and John Braun, directors of the conservation district.

Working with conservationists Dick Hagelstein and Mike Baker of the Midland Soil and Water Conservation District in the show was Harry Campbell, a 4-H youth specialist in the Texas Agricultural Extension Service in Fort Stockton.

The senior division is for youth 14 to 19. The junior division is for youth 14 and under.

Carter holds to pledge to cut deficit spending

By R. GREGORY NOKES

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is holding to his pledge to slash deficit spending to below $30 billion in the new budget, while still finding money for increased defense outlays.

Although the federal budget will be in the red for the 19th time in the last 20 years, the cover will be green, possibly reflecting the president's optimism that he can balance the budget in the next year or two.

The budget for fiscal 1980, which begins next Oct. 1, was going to press at the Government Printing Office today and will be presented to Congress, along with an accompanying presidential message, Monday.

The president told congressional leaders Tuesday it will be "a tight, spare budget." He has repeatedly said the budget is small enough to help restrain inflation, but large enough to discourage a recession.

Administration sources confirmed Tuesday that Carter will propose total spending of about $532 billion for 1980, up about $40 billion from this year. Virtually all of the increase is the result of inflation, however.

With revenues estimated at about $503 billion, the administration will project a 1980 deficit of $29 billion. That would be the smallest federal deficit since 1973, when it was $14.8 billion.

The deficit in the current 1979 fiscal year is projected at about $40 billion.

Defense spending would be increased in the new budget. But there would be cutbacks in other areas, including some trimming of jobs, welfare and education programs, administration officials have said.

Carter has decided to ask Congress to approve an increase of about 3 percent in defense outlays — over and above inflation — to a total of $122.8 billion in 1980, sources said. Defense spending this year is projected at $112 billion.

The increase for defense results from the president's pledge to the nation's North Atlantic Treaty Organization partners last year to raise U.S. defense outlays by 3 percent in 1980, with other NATO powers promising to do the same.

Most of the increase would be used for across-the-board modernization of conventional forces and weaponry.

But an additional $1 billion in spending, both from the budget and a supplemental request for 1979, will be proposed to pay for full-scale development of the new mobile missile.

The budget also is likely to include about $1.6 billion for construction of a conventionally-powered aircraft carrier.

Carter has already been criticized by groups representing cities, minorities and disadvantaged people for planned cutbacks in programs that affect them.

The president defended his budget in a television interview Monday. "It is not a punitive budget," he said. "It is a good, sound budget that will sustain a strong economy and set a good example for the control of inflation."

"We will have a substantial increase ... in the total budget expenditures for the poor people of our country," he said.

Carter and his advisers have said recently the budget cutbacks on social programs won't be as bad as many people had feared. About $2 billion of the amount that was to have been trimmed was restored in the final budget.

About $1 billion of the restored money was for government-financed public service jobs under the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act, with the remainder for various health, education and urban programs.

Secretary of Labor Ray Marshall told reporters Tuesday, "There will be no less of jobs" under CETA. By that, he said he meant that including both jobs and training positions, the amount will be about the same.

It is expected the funding for CETA jobs will be sufficient to employ 475,000 people at the end of 1980, down from 625,000 at the end of this year and 725,000 at the end of last year.

Marshall said the jobs and training positions will mean "the mix is better" between what the government and the private sector are doing to help disadvantaged people find work.

Although Carter is projecting a budget deficit for 1980 of $29 billion, administration officials acknowledge that much depends on the performance of the economy in the next year on whether that target can actually be achieved.

Congressmen seeking swift action on Diggs

WASHINGTON (AP) — A small group of first-term Republicans is trying to engineer a swift showdown in the House over Rep. Charles Diggs, the Michigan Democrat convicted of taking kickbacks from his congressional employees.

Seven newly-elected GOP congressmen met Tuesday and recommended that House Republicans ask Diggs to refrain from voting on the floor while his court appeal is pending, sources said.

If Diggs declined, the group would favor a move to expel him from the House, according to one source.

The seven, elected leaders of the GOP first-termers, also decided to ask the party leadership to convene a GOP House caucus to discuss the Diggs case. All 35 GOP freshmen were scheduled to meet late today to discuss Diggs and other matters.

House Republican Leader John Rhodes of Arizona has announced he is prepared to request an ethics committee investigation into the Diggs case.

But the GOP leader, noting that the Michigan Democrat is appealing his conviction and three-year sentence, asked party members on Monday not to take any "precipitous action" that could result in a swift vote on a motion to expel the 14-term veteran.

The sources, who requested anonymity, said the group that met Tuesday will try to get the party caucus to go on record as wanting Diggs to follow a precedent set by Rep. John Langley, of Kentucky over 50 years ago.

Langley, convicted of conspiracy, refrained from voting while his appeal was pending, and resigned as a member of Congress when his appeal was rejected by the courts.

At least one GOP freshman, Newt Gingrich of Georgia, already has told the party leadership he will "be compelled" to initiate a move to expel Diggs if he votes on any "substantive matter" while his appeal is pending.

Any member of the House may file a motion to expel another member at any time. A two-thirds vote is required to expel anyone from the House.

Several of the Republican freshmen say they are pursuing the matter because they believe they can score political points, as well as improve Congress' image among the voters.

"I think the freshmen members ... are very sincere and concerned about the perception of the public toward Congress as an institution," said Rep. William Dannemeyer, elected to his first term last fall from California.

"We're not naive enough to think that one act will turn this thing around," he said. But Dannemeyer said he believes "certain guidelines" are needed.

Another first-term GOP House member, Rep. Charles Dougherty of Pennsylvania, questioned Rhodes closely about the Diggs case Monday at a caucus, finally asking the GOP leader to move aggressively.

"Some of us are here because" of situations like the Diggs case, he said.

Dougherty won his seat by defeating veteran Rep. Joshua Eilberg, who was indicted last year on federal conflict-of-interest charges.

Eilberg has pleaded innocent to taking money in exchange for arranging a multi-million dollar federal grant for a hospital.

Human Relations Council moves to new location

The mailing address is the same and the telephone number is the same. But the location for Human Relations Council has changed.

Over the New Year's holidays, the council moved to the corner of West Front Avenue and E Street into what once was part of the old Girl Scout building in Elkin Park.

The roof leaks, the council discovered during that first week of below-freezing temperatures and ice storm. And getting the thermostat just right is taking a while.

But Susan Edwards, director of HRC, is optimistic.

"I think it's going to be great here," she said over the sounds of late afternoon traffic on Front Avenue coming through the windows.

Much work has been done by council members and others on the building, which is being leased from the city. And much remains to be done.

The problem has been the recent spell of cold, wet weather which hit the Permian Basin recently, limiting any type of remodeling.

Wall paneling has been installed in the offices and the walls have been painted. Plans call for drapes, shelving and carpeting to complete the major inside work.

Outside, the "Girl Scout green" will be covered and a sign will be installed. "We're going to make this building look like an office," the director added.

"We hope to have more drop-in people after we get settled," Ms. Edwards said. "To make sure someone is in the office now, they should call first," she advised. The number is 684-5866.

"We want to make it so more people will come by and utilize the facility."

Office hours are from 8:30 a.m. to 3 p.m.

The council promotes "community awareness through improved communications. There are resources in the community to whom we take projects and from whom we get impact on different happenings," Ms. Edwards said of the council's purpose.

It is composed of 40 members from the community. The board consists of 12 persons from the council.

Working with Ms. Edwards in the office are two fieldworkers, Emma Montez and Carolyn Wallace.

Tennis is now a year-round sport and it is being practiced and sometimes malpracticed by more than 30 million Americans, an article in Medical Tribune reports.

Almost all cases of "tennis elbow" can be prevented or ameliorated non-surgically, advised the author, Willibald Nagler, MD, of New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center. He suggests consultation with a good tennis coach or manual-to-learn-proper tennis strokes, and conditioning the racquet arm through proper exercise. Dr. Nagel explains that clumsy moves put intolerable strains on affected muscles and tendons and infrequent but frantic tennis weekends overtax flabby arms...

...YOU CAN DRINK yourself to death—with water—according to the Journal of the American Medical Association.

"Psychogenic polydipsia" is the urge to drink enormous quantities of water, and the medical journal article describes two cases in which water intoxication developed and contributed to deaths. One of the reports involved a woman on a water fast who abstained from all food.

"Compulsive water drinking should be viewed as potentially life-threatening behavior," the author of the article advises, further suggesting that it is imperative to deal with the patient's underlying thought disorder that causes the drinking.

New disease kills babies

By EDWARD MAGRI
Associated Press Writer

NAPLES, Italy (AP) — This city teeming with life and with misery is battling a new affliction, a mystery disease that has taken the lives of 38 babies, puzzled medical authorities and spread panic among many parents.

Authorities report more and more children are being kept out of nursery and elementary schools and even prevented from going outside in hopes that staying indoors will keep away "il male oscuro" — the obscure evil, as Neapolitans call it.

A total of 38 children under the age of three have died in the past year from a disease that attacks babies' lungs in a day or two despite massive doses of antibiotics.

Experts from the Health Ministry in Rome have been groping in the dark for several months. They first found hospital doctors at Naples had quickly diagnosed a number of the deaths as caused by brain troubles, but autopsies showed the brains had not been affected.

Then, they checked thousands of needles used to inoculate a combined tetanus-diphtheria vaccine, but concluded there was nothing wrong with them even if many babies came down with the illness a day or so after being vaccinated.

Finally this month, after a session of the government's Higher Health Council, the experts concluded the disease must be caused by some kind of virus — the smallest of infective living beings, which can be detected only with electronic microscopes.

But they still have been unable to identify the virus, a crucial step to fighting it with adequate treatment.

Whatever scientific name the virus will get, however, doctors have quickly labelled it as "the poor people's virus."

"It is a virus thriving in slums and on malnutrition," said Dr. Antonio Cali, head of the city's health department. "Poverty is its trademark. All victims belong to residents of the city's notorious downtown slum area or to impoverished families from nearby towns."

The Health Ministry planned to ask medical authorities in Hungary, Britain and the United States for detailed information about the outbreak of some mysterious diseases there in recent years.

According to Prof. Carlo Sirtori, head of the Carlo Erba Medical Foundation in Milan, the disease in Naples shows symptoms recalling the "Legionnaires disease," first discovered after an outbreak at an American Legion convention in Philadelphia three years ago.

Dr. William Baine, an epidemiologist at the U.S. Center for Disease Control in Atlanta, Ga., and a specialist in the disease, said he has discussed the Naples outbreak informally with Italian doctors studying the disease but has received no formal request for help.

But Baine said Legionnaires disease was an unlikely candidate. In the United States, 99 per cent of the victims have been over the age of 16 and the disease is extremely rare in young children.

Naples has often had trouble with diseases linked to sanitation and hunger. This city of 2.8 million inhabitants drew a label as "Europe's Calcutta" in 1973 when an outbreak of cholera, an intestinal disease, struck close to 1,000 persons, killing 25 of them.

A judge pinned part of the responsibility on the neglect of medical authorities and on mussels grown in polluted sea waters.

Mrs. Jack H. Hitt and Mrs. Kent Carlisle were introduced as new members. Also attending as guests were Mrs. Forest Newma and Mrs. Abdiel Garduno.

Plans were announced for a luncheon which will be Mar. 9 at the Ranchland Hills Country Club.

Second high winner was Eleanor Gist. Taking third place was Peggy Barry.

Guests at the meeting were Cathy Chander and Doris McClure.

Persons interested in the organization can contact Lea Clifton at 694-9704.

The following year, half a dozen newborn babies were killed by salmonellosis, an intestinal disease, in hospitals and maternity wards. They were closed down temporarily after the discovery that faulty disinfection was the cause.

An average of 1,500 children are hospitalized annually in the emergency ward of Naples' Santobono Hospital and 300 of them die for reasons ranging from hepatitis to burns, according to officials.

Many of Naples' woes are rooted in the chronic economic crisis of a city with Europe's densest population and a massive shortage of jobs. The unemployed number some 180,000 and the number of jobs has been shrinking, in part because the city is a victim of a vicious circle.

Modern industry has never really set roots in Naples because of the almost total lack of skilled workers and good vocational schools. Without industry, there is no market for schools or skilled workers.

The city's biggest industry is tobacco and cigarette smuggling. An estimated 40,000 persons make a living from loads of cigarettes reaching the edge of territorial waters aboard Greek or Yugoslav ships and then transferred aboard fast motorboats.

The Communists took over the city government in 1975 promising their best to improve Naples' fate. But whatever change they may have brought it has not diminished depression and disillusion.

"We found out that government is more difficult than opposition," commented Mayor Maurizio Valenzi, once labelled as the "holy face of Italian Communism" for his honesty and openness.

Minuet Club Debs presented

By PATSY GORDON
R-T Lifestyle Writer

Twelve Minuet Debs and their escorts were recently presented during a dance at Midland Country Club. This was the 23rd presentation by the Minuet Club of Midland.

The 1978 debutantes are Michele Denise Black, Brenda Joyce Ewan, Margaret Alice Faudree, Dikka Alys Fitting, Ann Fullinwider, Amy Grimes, Elaine Allison Karcher, Mary Burchenal McGrath, Helene Suzanne Pomeroy, Elizabeth Bryan Riggs, Elizabeth Ann Ruwwe and Shirley Lynn Swanson.

Miss Black, escorted by John Bigby Northington, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. Northington of Tyler, wore a designer gown of white silk-faced satin and heavily embroidered Venise lace.

The fitted halter bodice was encrusted with rose appliques of matching lace, each centered with a soft bud of silk satin. The same lace appliques encircled the neck in a Victorian mode.

The A-line over skirt of silk satin was boarded with bud-centered florets and cut into an ascending pattern at center front, exposing the pannellier-of-silk-satin-edged-in-lace florets.

Miss Ewan, escorted by Richard Schmidt, chose for her presentation a carpet-length gown of white silk organza and alencon lace, designed by Bianchi. The bodice of Alencon lace over English net was re-embroidered with patterns of seed pearls and featured tiny double-rolled straps over the shoulder.

The full skirt of silk organza fell from an Empire waistline and was enhanced with a deep border of Alencon lace and seed pearls, ending in scallops of lace at the hemline.

For her presentation, Miss Faudree chose a gown of white satin, English net and Alencon lace.

The fitted bodice of the gown had a banded satin neckline and a sheer yolk of English net. Sprays of the floral lace pattern covered the bodice and fell slightly below the waistline.

The graceful skirt of English net over silk organza had tiny gathers in the back and was detailed at the hemline by a deep satin band.

The escort of Miss Faudree was Charles Randall Bailey of Salt Lake City, Utah, who is an honor graduate from The University of Texas at Austin, with a degree in petroleum engineering. He is employed with Northwest Pipeline Co. as petroleum engineer.

An antebellum design of crystal pleated silk organza and full Venise lace florets centered with buds of silk organza was Miss Fitting's choice of debutante gowns.

The slender molded bodice was completely re-appliqued in Venise flowers and delicate organza buds. Her wide portrait neckline was accented by a crystal-line ruffle and lace florets that dipped low in the back.

Yards of tiny crystal pleated organza ruffles cascaded to a full bell skirt.

The escort of Miss Fitting was Foy Boyd III.

Miss Fullinwider chose a gown designed by the House of Bianchi. The bodice had a sweetheart neckline which made a collar at the back and fastened at the neck. The back of the gown was cut out, creating a halter effect. The entire bodice of Alencon lace was scattered with tiny seed pearls and jewels.

From the slim waistline, yards of bias chiffon fell to slipper floor-length.

Mark Vasicek escorted Miss Fullinwider.

Miss Grimes, escorted by Frank Agar, Jr., chose to wear a gown of white silk peau de soie. The sleeveless bodice had a square neckline in front and a low scoop in the back. Rows of tiny silk violets covered the top of the bodice at the neckline and each violet was centered with a seed pearl backed by an iridescent sequin that sparkled in the light.

The pure silk skirt fell from an A-line at the empire waist to carpet-length, while it swept to a gathered fullness at the natural waistline in the back. Silk violets were clustered at the waist in back with loops and streamers of silk cord extending down the skirt. Scattered violets also accented the cord streamers.

Miss Karcher wore a pristine gown of winter white, organza, English net and silk Venise lace. The high-necked, covered bodice was applique with floral sprays of matching lace patterned in an arabesque design. Fleur-de-lis scallops encircled the tiny cap sleeves, banded neckline and high-raised bodice.

A large medallion of re-appliqued Venise lace centered the skirt front and graduated around the hem into a sweep. Miniature clusters of daisies were scattered over the entire bodice and full organza skirt.

Miss Karcher was escorted by Charles Fraser Jr.

Miss McGrath was attired in a white ball gown of embroidered English net. The fitted bodice had a low neckline and halter-type narrow straps embroidered with sequins and crystal beads. The waistline also was marked with a belt of the same embroidered design.

Her escort was James Mullendory Johnson.

Classic silk faced satin was used in the sophisticated gown selected by Miss Pomeroy, who was escorted by Ben Barnett of Santa Fe, N.M.

A tulip petal motif played in a counterface design on the bodice and skirt. Soft satin was drawn across the Empire bodice and gently pleated onto one shoulder, then folding into a modified bow. The other shoulder was bare.

The simple A-line skirt was over-draped in front by a petal of silk faced satin and swept to a duster hem.

For her presentation, Miss Riggs chose a carpet-length gown of white peau de soie and Venise lace designed by Eva Haynel. The princess line formed a molded bodice, featuring appliques of matching lace re-embroidered with seed pearls, extending to the neckline. Slender straps of rows of seed pearls enhanced the shoulder line and extended to a scoop neckline in the back.

A wide panel of silk organza re-embroidered in patterns with silk thread, Venise lace and seed pearls accented the front of the gown. A soft bow of peau de soie marked the waistline in the back.

Her escort was Dane Phillips.

A traditional gown of silk organza, English net and Alencon lace was worn by Miss Ruwwe.

Her escort was Hal Rasmussen, son of Mr. and Mrs. James W. Rasmussen of 2006 Country Club Drive.

Miss Swanson's debutante gown was an airy monage of chiffon and Venise lace. The camisole bodice was applique with Venise lace daisies and buttercup florets. Each flower was then re-appliqued with smaller lace flowers to give a three dimensional effect. Slender double spaghetti straps were the shoulder feature.

The circular chiffon skirt floated from a natural waistline and ended in a sweep.

Her escort was Paul Stribling of Albany.

Individual Retirement Accounts at First Savings are the sure way to build for a secure retirement, and get a tax break at the same time.

If you're working for a company that does not have a retirement plan and you feel unprotected, then an Individual Retirement Account (IRA) at First Savings is the thing for you.

With an IRA, you save for the future at the impressive current interest rate of 8% (effective annual yield 8.33%). Deduct whatever you save - up to $1500 - from your gross income, and defer every penny in taxes on your IRA until you withdraw it, normally after retiring. Then, you'll probably have less income and possibly be in a lower tax bracket.

(NOTE: There are severe penalties for withdrawals before age 59½.)

Here's an example of what an IRA can do for you. If you start an IRA at age 30, and deposit the maximum of $1500 per year until age 65, at the current interest rate, your IRA will be worth over $300,000. That's a tidy sum to start retirement, if you want to retire that young. By the way, your IRA is in addition to standard Social Security benefits. But remember, the deadline for starting or adding to your IRA is the date your taxes are due.

So stop by either First Savings office . . . downtown at 500 West Wall or San Miguel Square . . . and let the "FISCAL FITNESS PEOPLE" show you the sure way to save for retirement. It's getting later than you think . . .

DEAR ABBY

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Can you help me find a job as live-in housekeeper in a motherless home? It must be a modern house in the most desirable section of the city. (No country or farm locations, please.) The father must be between 38 and 50, no older. He must be at least 6 feet tall, since I am a well-proportioned 5 feet 7 and do not feel comfortable with shorter men around me.

I dress well, am attractive and well-groomed. I enjoy music, disco dancing and outdoor sports. I am 36, in excellent health, and can furnish references.—LOOKING IN WORCESTER, MASS.

DEAR LOOKING: You sound as though you are looking for a man, not a job. If it's a position you're after, register with an employment agency or place an ad in the classified section of this newspaper. If it's a man you're after, your approach is clever, but much too obvious.

DEAR ABBY: OFF MY CHEST IN DENVER wrote that her daughter in college sent all her bills home regularly, but never enclosed a personal note. ("It would mean so much if she just wrote 'love' and signed her name.")

May I respond to that letter? First of all, a girl old enough to go away to college should be trusted with her own checking account and learn how to be responsible for her own bills. Perhaps the daughter is expressing (or not expressing) her resentment at so much parental control.

Second, children learn from us—their parents. If we don't tell them how we feel, then they won't tell us how they feel. If we want love and openness, we must communicate our needs to others.

I would suggest, OFF MY CHEST, that you tell your daughter you need a point of contact with her, since you love her, and her absence after 18 years leaves a hole in your life.

Children who grow up and leave home need both roots and freedom.—I. M.: LA JOLLA, CALIF. DEAR I. M.: U.R. an excellent psychologist. Thank you for a fine letter.

DEAR ABBY: KNOTTED KNUCKLES, suffering from arthritis, asked you if it is socially acceptable to type personal letters because holding a pen is sometimes too painful.

I'm glad you said yes. For those with crippling arthritis in the hands, here's a suggestion: Stick a pen (or pencil) through a large raw potato which can be easily and painlessly grasped by an arthritic hand.

Billy Rose won a shorthand contest using this method when he was unable to hold a pencil because his index finger was in a splint.

Pass this on to your readers if you think it's worth space in your column.—BRUCE L. IN MCLEAN, VA.

DEAR BRUCE: Considering the number of readers out there suffering from arthritis, if your suggestion relieves the pain of just

Misbehaving kids: Give them the chair

By LEW SCARR
Copley News Service

Do not spank your children, an expert in child behavior advises; send them to the chair. Spanking is not effective teaching, says Dr. Eard R. Christophersen. It is much better to have your child sit on a kitchen chair, or on the living room sofa for three or four minutes.

Christophersen, an associate professor of pediatrics at the University of Kansas

Medical Center, said children should be considered as little people who are eventually going to be adults.

"Big people don't get spanked every time they make a mistake, why should little people?" Christophersen asked. In an interview and in a book called "Little People," he outlines what he considers the most effective methods of disciplining children.

He said the only time a child should be spanked is for getting up from his chair of discipline before his time is up.

"If he gets up, spank him once, and only once," he said. "The first spank is for the child (teaching) and all the rest are for you (revenge)."

Christophersen said children should never be forced to sit in the chair for more than five minutes because they will forget why they are there.

"But don't be reluctant to have your son or daughter sit on a chair 10 times in a single day if he deserves it."

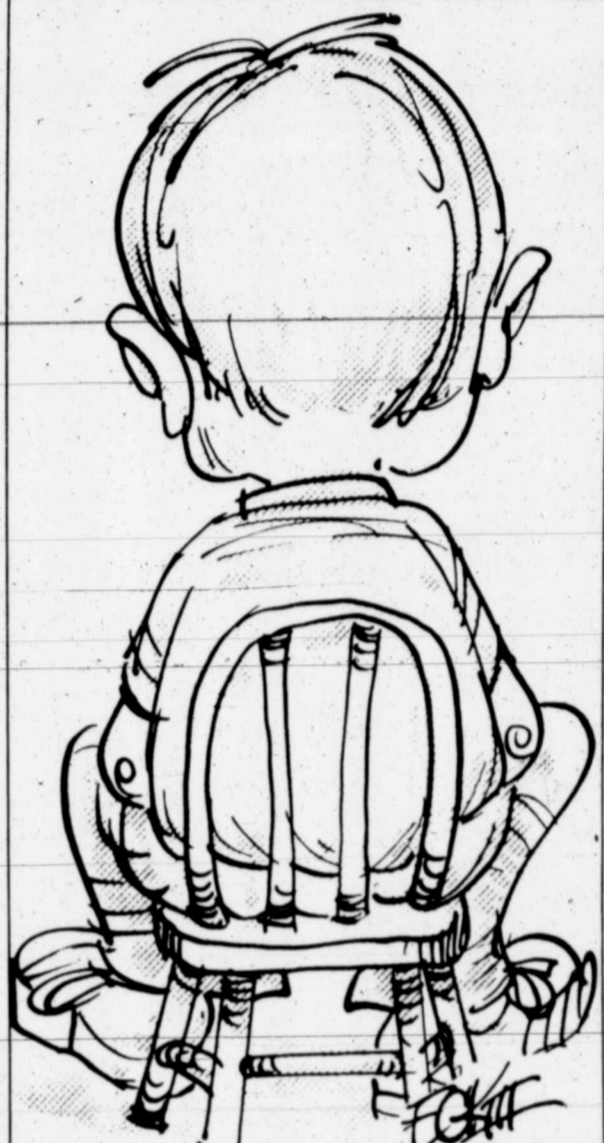

"It is much better to spend days teaching him not to do something than to get angry. And remember, getting angry does little if any good—it just teaches him how to upset you."

Christophersen said he likes using the chair for discipline because it is easier on parents' nerves.

"Most parents can't spank a child without getting somewhat upset themselves. The nice thing about the chair is that it gives both parent and child a chance to cool off for a few minutes before they interact again."

Christophersen said he has used the chair successfully with children up to age 12. Sometimes older children can be disciplined effectively by being sent to their room provided there are no stereos or television or telephones to lessen the impact.

Lecturing as a means of discipline is a failure, he said. Sometimes parents think they are reasoning with their children, but it still is a form of lecture.

Teaching, he said, comes best through the apprentice system in which, children, in this case, observe the experts—the parents—perform their work and then join them in it and finally let the parents observe them doing their job.

Aliens: Stop them or sanction them, researcher says

By THOM MEAD
Copley News Service

LOS ANGELES — If the United States cannot control the illegal entry into this country by Mexican citizens, then the federal government should sanction such entries.

So says Walter Fogel of the University of California at Los Angeles graduate school of management, who has done extensive research into the illegal alien problem.

Critical of recent congressional rejections of a special immigration relationship with Mexico, the UCLA professor of industrial relations says his research leads him to believe that a special relationship with this nation's southern neighbor is not only possible but highly desirable in terms of U.S. immigration policy.

"A special immigration relationship with Mexico is needed because, over the next 20 years, there will be tremendous increases in the number of individuals who want to emigrate to the United States and the United States should consciously decide what number it will admit," he added during an interview.

"If we don't want to try to control illegal entry, then we should sanction it — make it lawful so that we don't develop a group of second-class residents," stresses Fogel, who also is a consultant to the federal government's Interagency Task Force on Immigration.

"More likely," he says, "if we really look at the population-immigration phenomenon, now and to the end of the century, we will want to limit the number rather than permit great population increases in the United States through immigration." To control unsanctioned immigration, Fogel favors a tough employer penalty law which would remove the incentive for entry of illegals.

He also supports use of a work card to enforce the law and to ensure that Hispanic-Americans will not be discriminated against.

He emphasizes, however, that fear that the work card would be used as a nationwide identifier probably will prevent its establishment in the near future.

Fogel, who published his research findings in a recent monograph entitled, "Mexican Illegal Alien Workers in the United States," issued by UCLA's Institute of Industrial Relations, cites three primary reasons to justify a special immigration relationship with Mexico.

"Historically, the Southwest was Mexican territory at one time," he notes. "Even following its seizure by the United States, until the 1920s Mexican citizens had free passage into the former Mexican territories."

"Secondly, Mexico is our immediate neighbor. We in the United States share a nearly 2,000-mile border with her, a country that has a large and very rapidly growing population. Enormous differences in standards of living exist between the two countries — especially with respect to low and semi-skilled workers."

"Finally, the fact of unsanctioned immigration calls for special treatment. We are being thrust into a special immigration relationship with Mexico."

Fogel suggests that the authorized level of Mexican immigration "be substantially increased and that it vary with the level of unemployment in the United States."

Kehoe gets posthumous pardon for 100-year-old murder

ALLENTOWN, Pa. (AP) — John "Jack" Kehoe, alleged leader of the Molly Maguires, reportedly has been pardoned posthumously in the murder of a mine official 100 years ago.

Joseph Wayne, Kehoe's great-grandson and the driving force behind a pardon movement, told the Allentown Call Monday that Gov. Milton Shapp had signed a pardon, which the State Board of Pardons had approved.

The pardon ended a one-year campaign by Wayne, members of his family and the Pennsylvania Labor History Society to exonerate Kehoe, who is now portrayed as a labor martyr.

"Jack Kehoe has finally gained his niche in history," Wayne told the newspaper in a telephone call from a hotel celebration in Girardville.

Kehoe was one of the organizers of the Workmen's Benevolent Association, a forerunner of many of U.S. labor unions.

Kehoe was hanged Dec. 18, 1878 at the Schuylkill County prison after serving more than two years in solitary confinement. He had been convicted of killing mine official F.W.S. Langdon.

But Kehoe's supporters have argued through the years that he was framed by mine owners seeking to stifle a growing union movement in the coal industry and violence in the Pennsylvania anthracite activity attributed to the Molly Maguires, a secret Irish society.

Good business idea, and it's just the beginning

WASHINGTON — The telephone company has the image of being staid and old-fashioned. But Ma Bell can no longer be accused of sitting back and waiting for someone to deposit 20 cents into the phone box.

They're after business and, by gosh, they're getting it.

Here is a good example of how a giant company is creating new markets never dreamed of before.

Out in Seattle, Wash., the Pacific Northwest Bell Co. ran ads in both Seattle papers a few weeks before Christmas telling children they could speak to Santa Claus by dialing the number in the ad. It was a great idea and one that would warm the heart of any parent. The only trouble was the area code to be dialed was 212, which is New York City.

Many parents in the Seattle area thought this was dirty pool and that if the Pacific Northwest Bell really cared about Christmas they would have listed a local number where Santa could be reached.

But Jim Moznette, a PNB spokesman, said the telephone company was trying to encourage long-distance calls and that if Santa Claus could be reached in Seattle by Seattle children it would not be worth the phone company's time.

He was quoted as saying, "We're a commercial enterprise and one of our main sources of revenue is long-distance calls. The ad was run to see if people would make calls and to generate enough long-distance revenues to make some profit to boot."

According to reports, 15,000 to 20,000 children made the calls and heard a one-minute recording from Santa. But there was such a flap about it from Seattle parents that the FTC regional director suggested PNB refund the cost of the calls. The phone company thought this was a stupid idea, and said they were willing to discuss refunds with parents but only on a "case by case" basis.

As a stockholder in the telephone company I am delighted that it is finally putting some imagination into increasing the use of its equipment. The idea of having kids call Santa Claus long distance is just the beginning.

I can see the day when Boston children will be urged to telephone the Easter Bunny in Hawaii, and Atlanta tykes will be induced to dial Anchorage, Alaska, to hear a message from the tooth fairy.

Further possibilities are long-distance calls to The Daily Planet, Area Code 416 (Toronto, Canada), which would give a child in New Orleans a chance to chat with Superman, and Salt Lake City children could phone London, England, to listen to a recorded message from the Queen.

The beauty of encouraging children to call long-distance is that, while the cost of the minute may be relatively cheap, most kids tend to hang on much longer in the hopes that Santa Claus or whoever is on the other end will have more to say. I've seen six- and seven-year-olds hold the phone to their ear for 10 minutes utterly fascinated by whatever is being said at the other end of the line. While the idea of dialing New York from Seattle may not be a big deal for an adult it's still a thrill for a little kid, and it means money in the bank for the phone company.

No one knows who the genius was at Pacific Northwest Bell who thought up the idea of getting kids to call Santa long-distance, but I sincerely hope that the person involved gets the recognition he or she so richly deserves.

Alexander Graham Bell invented the telephone but he never appreciated the commercial potentiality of his device. It took someone from the cold reaches of the Northwest to plant Santa Claus in New York City, and then urge youngsters to get on the blower and call him from Seattle. If the phone people can get pre-school children into the habit of dialing long-distance, they will generate a fantastic new market that has never been tapped before.

says

A congressional committee announced that as many as one-third of U.S. Army soldiers stationed in Europe are addicted to heroin. They haven't been in such top fighting form since 1936.

The only way to get the other two-thirds is to bring back the draft.

The latest recruiting slogan could be, "Hang loose in Army green."

The report said that as much as 70 percent of the Army stationed in Germany smokes marijuana and hashish and sniffs cocaine on a daily basis. So, hash marks take on a new meaning.

Someday, in a new chapter of the Army's proud tradition, the women may march off to war while the men stay behind and keep the home fires burning.

Ceiling is too low

The Texas Legislature is challenged by many pressing problems in its 1979 session now under way, but one of the most pressing is the credit crunch for potential homeowners of the Lone Star State.

This isn't something happening off somewhere else — it is right here in Midland, as well as in other Texas cities.

And unless the legislature takes steps to remedy the problem, residential construction very well could come to a standstill across the state. Talk about a progress "stopper," this would be it.

The whole business hinges on the availability of home mortgage money. The credit crunch is brought about by the state's usury law, which arbitrarily limits to 10 percent the maximum interest which savings and loan associations and other lenders can charge individuals for home loans.

homes average 10 3/4 percent. The rate in Texas is said to be 9 3/4, plus one "point" which amortizes at 10 percent over the life of the loan.

But the problem for the savings and loan firms is that they are having to pay more for their money than the rate they can charge for loaning it out. Now, most anyone will tell you that a company can't operate very long under such conditions. All they can do is cease their lending operations. In addition to this, some of the nation's largest mortgage bankers have announced that they have quit making loans in Texas because of the low interest rate. They are placing their money in states which permit higher interest rates.

All this, of course affects more than just home buyers. Builders, lenders and realtors already are feeling the brunt of a tight mortgage money supply. Persons wishing to sell homes also will feel the crunch.

A comprehensive report made and issued by a reliable management study firm for the Texas Savings and Loan League warns that: "It appears that for the first time in recent history the Texas usury ceiling may be responsible for a decline in construction activity."

The report goes on to predict that a reduction of between 15 and 30 percent in money available for mortgages could (1) Result in the loss of 75,000 to 100,000 jobs in the real estate industry statewide; (2) lead to a decline of $300 million to $600 million in the value of building permits for home construction, and (3) result in a decline of $2.5 billion and $5 billion in value to the gross national product for the country's real estate industry.

Can anyone say that this isn't a problem demanding of top priority attention?

In view of all this, the Texas Savings and Loan League is asking the legislature for a flat increase to 12 percent in interest rate limits.

Historically, Texas has had strong laws to protect homeowners and prevent usury. Two-thirds of the states have ceilings above 10 percent. California has no ceiling.

Since 1963 the Texas Constitution has permitted the legislature to define loans and lenders and set interest ceilings. Thus the legislature now is being asked to establish a ceiling of 12 percent on loans for housing from one to four families.

If the ceiling is raised, it by no means would indicate that mortgage interest would rise to the new limit immediately. Such would be highly unlikely. The 10 percent limit has been in effect for more than 70 years, but it is only recently that the limit has been reached by inflationary pressure. And competition and other factors still hold in this regard.

It also should be pointed out that the consumer finance ceiling (automobiles, appliances and the like) is 18 percent. Corporations may be charged up to 18 percent on any loan, including residential housing. The main matter involved here is home ownership. The continued availability of mortgage funds for home ownership somehow must be maintained.

The need for the increase further is stressed because of and until the government is successful in curbing inflation, higher interest rates are inevitable.

And if interest rates go down, we yet believe that rates will be set by supply and demand.

It also is noted that the proposed legislation will not affect other loan interest rates.

This is a delicate matter, certainly, but the proposal appears just and fair, and we believe it merits approval by the legislature.

Excellent opportunity muffed

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — Still smarting from our disastrous intervention in Vietnam, as well as other botched attempts by the CIA to engineer the overthrow of foreign rulers, the United States has become understandably leery of meddling in the internal affairs of other countries.

This hands-off policy, though a preferable way of conducting foreign affairs in most cases, can also lead to missed opportunities when followed too strictly. For example, the striped pants set backed off a recent, risk-free opportunity to rid the world of President Idi Amin, the bloody-handed dictator of Uganda.

U.S. officials were approached by Ugandan dissidents who wanted help to overthrow Amin. The State Department refused, and the story was buried in Foggy Bottom's secret files until now. Here are the facts:

Last Nov. 3, Israel Mayengo of the Uganda Nationalists Organization approached U.S. embassy officials in Nairobi, Kenya, with information about a promising anti-Amin plot and two modest requests for U.S. help.

At that time, Amin was undertaking an invasion of neighboring Tanzania, and had transferred most of his military force from the capital city of Kampala to the Tanzanian border. To the Ugandan dissidents, it looked like a golden opportunity to strike down the hated dictator.

The uprising was to start with the seizure of whatever arms were left in Kampala and the capture of Entebbe, the airport outside the capital. The rebels' expectation was that they could hold out until weapons and other supplies could be flown in to solidify their coup. The rebels figured they would have enough ammunition to hold Entebbe for only four to six hours without reinforcements.

Mayengo asked that the United States provide arms and supplies, but no manpower, in the event the rebels succeeded in seizing Entebbe.

If Washington would not supply arms, Mayengo wanted the United States at least to help influence the Kenyan government not to interfere with the rebels' receiving aid from another country. Israel reportedly had agreed to help the anti-Amin forces. Kenya's acquiescence was needed because the supplies would have to be flown in through Kenyan airspace.

Embassy officials in Nairobi immediately sent off a secret cable to Washington detailing Mayengo's alternative requests. A few days later, they informed the exiled leader that he had been turned down.

Inside sources told our associate Gary Cohn, however, that the U.S. embassy did in fact notify the Kenyans of Mayengo's approach but did not seek to exercise any influence on their decision. This was actually a disservice, as it tipped off the Kenyan government to the rebels' plans and provided a pretext for further harassment of Ugandan exiles in Kenya.

State Department sources told us the rebels' requests were rejected because "the United States will not involve itself in the removal of Idi Amin by force." But one source who was unhappy with the decision commented: "one only wonders how many Ugandans have died in the past few weeks while the U.S. acquiesced in Amin's hold on power."

The U.S. refusal to become involved in such a risk-free situation is puzzling in light of President Carter's decision on Nov. 21, 1977 to take a tougher stand against Idi Amin. According to secret Cabinet minutes, Housing and Urban Development Secretary Patricia Harris raised the subject, expressing hope the U.S. "will do everything in its power to isolate the Ugandan government."

She noted the astronomical number of blacks who have been murdered by Amin (estimates run from 150,000 to 300,000).

The Administration, spurred by Congress, has cracked down by cutting off all trade with Uganda. But when the crunch came, the timorous policy-makers in the State Department muffed a chance to get rid of the Butcher of Uganda at no cost to the United States.

WASHINGTON WHIRL: Associates are worried that President Carter is working too hard. Before his consultations in the sun with allied leaders at Guadeloupe, he seemed perpetually tired, aides say. The president still can't bring himself to delegate enough detail work to subordinates. He is not content to shape policy; he also insists on tinkering with the nuts and bolts of government. "It must be his engineering background," one associate suggested ruefully.

Those smoke-filled rooms at the Treasury Department are thick with the aroma of Jamaican Temple Hall cigars. That's the brand Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal smokes. He purchases them in New York City from Alfred Dunhill of London ($28.75 to $31.25 per box). But the cigar pollution in the secretary's backrooms is beginning to lift. Aides say he has been smoking less lately.

Federal Trade Commissioner Elizabeth Dole, wife of Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., became absorbed recently in studying the proposed rules to curb advertising aimed at children. The briefing papers had so many references to chocolates, caramels and sugar-coated cereal that it made her mouth water. Finally, she could stand it no longer. Aides say she rushed to a nearby vending machine and wolfed down three candy bars.

NICK THIMMESCH

California mood: Serenading whales, other matters

LOS ANGELES — The Republic of California seems to be settling into a mood of self-assurance these days. It might be that this rambunctious youngster is learning what its limitations are and what reason is.

Though Gov. Jerry Brown's utterances on behalf of frugality caused one Democratic colleague to liken him to Herbert Hoover, the state's economy is not really pinched. Family income set a record in 1978, is substantially ahead of the rest of the nation, and promises to be even better in 1979. The aerospace industry is recovering, and California's rich forests and farmlands are in full production for a seller's market.

California has always been a boomer. It struck gold, land, good weather, war and aerospace — prospering from all — and then turned around to build homes, schools, highways and all the rest needed for the millions of other Americans who came out to benefit from the boom.

It became a marvelous but maddening cycle. Ironically, the political figure who espoused and presided over much of it — former Gov. Pat Brown — is father to the political figure who now strives to contain or even shrink it, the other-worldly Jerry Brown. How interesting that the apostles of overbuild and underbuild are father and son.

The present Gov. Brown lashes out and is lashed at on the question of government spending and economic growth. He cuffs his own state legislature by calling for a stringent budget with only half the increases his own party leadership wants. And he also challenges President Jimmy Carter to make the California tax revolt national by pushing for a U.S. constitutional amendment requiring a balanced federal budget.

Jerry Brown's rhetoric could leave his predecessor, Ronald Reagan, with not much to say on these matters anymore. But Brown seeks containment and cutback because he believes in moderation in all things, a turning away from the false god, Mammon. Reagan just wants to stop welfare cheaters, do-gooder spending and government programs — all of which, in his view, weaken the nation and its citizens.

Californians have bought a lot of both doctrines since Gov. Pat Brown's time. They really don't want any more freeways, plasticized urban development, and half-a-million people a year deciding to locate in their wonderland. The mobile home parks still sprout, but more out of absolute necessity than from consensus approval.

Similarly, Californians launched America into the age of Proposition 13, much as the Soviets put the world into space with Sputnik a generation ago. Whatever happens to all the Proposition 13s in the Republic, government and legislators won't be the same on spending issues for a long time to come. The government boom is over in California.

And while the state's economy grows to provide jobs and prosperity, it is accompanied with an admirable appreciation that growth in itself is not an end. There is much nostalgia for what California once had before it was trampled — small towns surrounded by strawberry fields, orange and lemon groves, dairy herds and cattle ranches. Urbanization cut through much of this, leaving a patchwork of concrete and mother earth expanses, billowing smoke stacks uncomfortably close to citrus groves already uncomfortably close to speedway freeways. Environmentalism has certainly arrived in California.

And yet automobiles increase and multiply as ever. Smog rises, plastic often predominates, and super-fast food emporiums and neons have not disappeared. Mass transit is a joke, and gasoline stations see no depression coming. The lay-back-and-enjoy mentality has always bordered on hedonism in California. Some disappointed fans of the Los Angeles Rams, for example, blame their crushing defeat by the Dallas Cowboys in the recent playoff, as due to the layback attitude carried onto the field of football battle. Oh, well.

California has always been a haven, indeed, a germinating place for cults and cultism, and some recent chapters of this story have been tragic. And while cults might be looked at with more reservation now, the beauty and rootlessness of Californians will probably always give rise to a need for some spiritual nourishment.

The governor, interestingly enough, evidently appreciates this, even to the point of risking political loss. Last week, after disturbing the state legislature with his budget message, he followed up with a call for a whopping increase in the California State Arts Council budget, explaining that "the spirit has to be nourished along with the body."

Naturally, liberals fretting over the plight of the hungry, blind, disabled and forlorn, made invidious comparisons between arts spending and welfare needs. One easy target was the $1,000 granted by the Arts Council last year to a recipient whose spiritual nourishment need was to build musical instruments so he could sit under water and play songs for whales.

Serenading whales might be all right, one Democrat said, but what about the nourishment of welfare recipients?

Youthful Florida culprits deserve kicking for kicks

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

RIDGEFIELD, Conn. (AP) — Kids down in Florida have come up with a gruesome new game that makes you wonder if there really is civilized life on this planet.

"I'm going to let a 73-year-old reader, who moved to California because of this killer sport, tell you about it in her own words:

"Talk about torturing prisoners and harmless lab animals, down in Florida they have a new sport for kicks. Young boys, 12 to 17, drive their cars and bicycles in parking lots at shopping centers, Burger King, McDonalds, etc., and deliberately try to frighten or kill older men and women: senior citizens.

"I was a victim twice — once by a speeding car and again by two bicycle riders. In each case, they were either smiling or laughing as they came at me. If I hadn't run or jumped out of their way, I would have been dead.

"The first time was in front of the West Palm Beach Auditorium. In a panic to escape the speeding car, I fell on the sidewalk, hit my head and wound up unconscious with a fractured skull, broken nose, hearing gone for three months, ditto equilibrium.

"I WAS SHOCKED by the whole terrible experience and decided to move up to the town of Stuart, 40 miles north. It happened again in front of the Stuart Shopping Center. I heard loud laughing after parking my car and as I began walking toward the store.

"I turned around and saw two boys about 16 coming at me on bicycles. This time I was so frightened I couldn't move and they barely missed me. As I stood still and shook with fright, they pulled up a short distance in front of me, turned around and laughed at the agony they had put me in.

"Believe me when I tell you my experiences are not uncommon. Many people in condominiums are frightened to drive or cross the street on foot to get groceries.

"If the decent citizens of this country want to protect their families from this new sport of terrorism for kicks, they had better start doing something right now."

Not knowing quite what to do, the lady loaded all her belongings into a rental trailer and moved to California. "I felt I was losing my mind and had to get out of the state." She signed her name and gave her new address on the West Coast, but I'm going to withhold both until I can figure out some sort of answer to her letter.

I've read that letter at least six times now — seven, including just retyping it — and I can't get it out of my mind. When I went out for the mail that brought it, a half dozen squashed, discarded beer cans were scattered along the roadside. Later in the day I will go out and pick them up, but others probably will be there again tomorrow morning. They were there yesterday and the day before.

TOSSING BEER CANS out of a car window isn't in the horror class with terrorizing harmless old people in a parking lot but somehow the discarded cans seemed to belong with that letter. They were tossed there for kicks too, for the pleasure of someone who sees nothing ugly in being ugly to his fellow creatures so long as there's a laugh or a thrill in it.

For kicks, I decided to show the lady's letter to the first five people I met today and ask what they would like to see happen to that kid in the speeding car or the two on bicycles if they were caught.

"Take them out behind the shopping center and blink their lamps out," said the helper on a moving van delivering the furniture for the new family up the road. "If it happened to my mother, I'd like to do the job myself."

"Bust up the spokes of their bikes right there and then with a sledge hammer," steamed the lady in the bakery over a tray of hot rolls. "If it was my kid, I'd bust his head while I was at it, too." I was surprised at the vehemence of her response. She always seemed so gentle.

Two teen-agers playing hockey down on the lake with chicken wire for a goal considered the crime and its punishment.

"MAKE THEM WHEEL sick people in wheelchairs up at the hospital for two hours after school every day for a month ... no, make it six months," said the goalie, who upon removal of a face mask and long stocking cap turned out to be a girl.

"Tear up the driver's license, that's what my father would do," advised the other, a boy. "And he'd give the bikes to the charity shop downtown. I guess if they hurt my grandmother, I'd want them to go to jail and pay all those doctor bills."

An old man catching a few frail rays of the winter sun on a bench in front of the bus stop had a novel legal solution to what undoubtedly is the root of the problem.

"What this country needs is a malpractice law against parents and maybe teachers and judges, too," he said, handing back the letter with shaking hands. "Kids who would do something like that never have been denied anything or taught anything about how to live except accepting every pleasure that comes along. It's their permissive mothers and fathers who ought to get the hell scared out of them in a parking lot, but maybe a good fat lawsuit for keeping a mad dog instead of a child would do the trick. Logic won't work with that kind. Hit 'em where it hurts: in the old wallet. Goodness isn't taught anymore at home, at church or in school. So the only way out is to make badness so expensive, the adults won't tolerate it."

He was onto something there, I thought. Maybe in this age of no-fault kids, malpractice suits against the profession of raising them might turn the game around, the just-for-kicks game. Your opinions are solicited. I'll send the best on to the poor lady in California, but remember, most states ban capital punishment these days.

Billie Sol wants plea withdrawn

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Paroled West Texas swindler Billie Sol Estes has asked a Fort Worth federal judge to withdraw the guilty plea he entered as part of a plea bargain agreement last October.

Estes' attorney filed documents with U.S. District Judge Eldon Mahon Tuesday saying the U.S. Attorney's office had been guilty of "impermissible prosecutorial misconduct." As a result, the documents contend, the former promoter could not get a fair trial.

Estes' attorney, G. Brackett Irwin of Longview, asked Mahon to rule that his client cannot be prosecuted on charges sought by the government three months ago.

Estes pleaded guilty to conspiracy to conceal assets from the Internal Revenue Service and concocting a scheme to bilk investors while on parole.

Wearing a polar bear suit, Morry Katz makes his way across a snow-covered street in Milwaukee. Snow has fallen on the city almost daily for a week, and Katz said, "What else would you wear on a night like this?" He wore the suit to a basketball game while the snow kept many away. (AP Laserphoto)

Favorites announced at Crane Coronation

CRANE — Anne Adams and Sam Stroder were named Miss and Mr. CHS in Crane High School's 28th annual Coronation of Favorites Saturday in the high school auditorium.

Twenty-eight other students were named all-school and class favorites, and 12 special awards were given in the "Ave de Oro" presentation.

Patterned after the Oscar and Emmy awards presentations, the program featured a slide show which pictured the nominees for each honor before the announcement of the winners.

Emcees were Kim Kirby and Kurt White, Miss and Mr. CHS 1978; Cheryl Cunningham, Miss CHS 1977; Bobby Hogan, Mr. CHS 1975, and Jonna Atkinson, Miss CHS 1974.

As each envelope containing the winners' names was opened and read, the honorees came from the audience. Each received a cast metal "Ave de Oro" or "Bird of Gold" with his name and honor inscribed on the base.

Helen Howell and Gerald Gummelt were named girl and boy Most Likely to Succeed. Both are seniors and honor students.

Petite Lee and Rodney Roussarie were Most Beautiful and Most Handsome, and Terry White and Greg Cunningham were presented as Most Congenial.

Elizabeth Cook and Miguel Gonzalez were the Most Dependable Girl and Boy; Leslie Ford and Albert Ureta; Neatest; Kara Kirby and Mark Pahl; Cutest; Robin Hess and Kirkey Gregg; Most Musical; and Lisa Grounds and Rocky Rives, Most Athletic.

Dee-Dee Smart and C.T. Brazear were the Most Spirited Girl and Boy, and Kathi Matlock and Cedric Drones, Wittiest.

Class favorites included Katie Lewter and Jimmy Simmons, seniors; Kathy Overstreet and Jimmy Fox, juniors; Gloria Gonzalez, Josie Windham and Brian Cunningham, sophomores, and Lisa McMeans and Danny Kea, freshmen.

Thirteen adults in the Crane school system were honored with "Ave de Oro" awards before the announcement of favorites.

Sam Stroder, student council president, presented the awards of appreciation to Anna Mayes, Bill Mayes and Douglas Chrane, teachers who will retire this year. Chrane, who was filming the program, had to turn his job over to Darrell Warren for a few minutes while he was photographed himself.

"Ave de Oro" awards also were given to Superintendent Murry Ford, high school Principal Dan Andereg, Student Council sponsor David Griffin and seven school board members, Jack Damron, Johnny Griffin, Tommy Griffin, Bill Harkins, Jay Hughes, Dick McNeil and Bennie Joe Morrison.

The Coronation of Favorites is an annual project of the CHS Student Council.

Texas to use part of island

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Dolph Briscoe said Tuesday, shortly before he left office, that the federal government has agreed to let Texas use a part of the northern part of Matagorda Island for wildlife management and recreation.

Briscoe said a telegram from Secretary of Interior Cecil Andrus said the General Services Administration and the Department of Interior had agreed to disposition of U.S.-owned lands on Matagorda Island.

Bus driver airs thoughts on life

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Jack Jones has the suave bearing of an airline captain, the sense of humor of a guard in an asylum and a trucker's view of the open road. He drives a Greyhound bus.

And he loves it.

"Ladies and gentlemen, to be perfectly honest with you, I'm lost."

"You sure are, buddy!" cried a man at the back of the bus some years ago after rookie driver Jones had left a dull office in pursuit of armchair adventure.

Jones, at 44, has logged tens of thousands of miles since he had to ask the paying customers the embarrassing question: How do you get to San Francisco?

"To me, Greyhound has always been part of America. The charters are particularly great. Everyone becomes like a family on the road. People sing, and laugh, and have a great time," said Jones.

"But on the scheduled trips you have to work a lot harder. Customers may come aboard upset over something that went wrong in the terminal — like the time one of my riders complained about a guy who pulled a sword out of a grocery bag and scared everyone with a whirling dervish number on the platform."

"You've really got to work hard to calm irate ticket holders down. And then when you're trying to concentrate on the freeways, all sorts of problems force you to be alert."

"Drivers have to keep an eye out for drinkers, sniff for marijuana, and listen to complaints about couples indulging in sex while we try to keep momentum going up a grade behind a VW bug making 20 m.p.h."

Once Jones heard a thumping noise, and pulled off the road to determine its origin. It turned out to be a barefoot woman clobbering an amorous fellow passenger with her shoes.

"Travelers are defensive about taking the bus," said R. E. LaDuke, Greyhound's western regional sales manager. "They're always making some excuse, like, 'My car broke down so I took Greyhound.'"

"That's pretty depressing when you realize that driving your own car is approximately 113 times more dangerous, uses 10 times as much fuel per passenger mile and costs six times as much as riding a bus," he said, pointing out that his firm moved 60 million passengers last year.

The tournament formerly was named the Tall City Invitational Tournament. More than 700 students will be attending the meet this year, organizers said.

Bulldogs' amazing rally helps clinch first half cage crown

ABILENE--You had to see it to believe it. Trailing by 11 points with a little over two minutes left, Coach Don Humphrey's amazing Midland Bulldogs pulled out a heart-stopping 70-69 basketball victory over the Abilene Cooper Cougars here Tuesday night after trailing all the way until the winning basket.

The hero for the Bulldogs was 6-foot-6 inch junior Tim Spirling, who hit the game winner with 14 seconds left in the wild contest. Spirling only had six points, but his last two were the biggest of the season for the Purple Pack which clinched the first half crown of the 5-4A race with the victory.

Both MHS and Cooper went into the game with perfect 5-0 loop records and it looked like the Cougars were going to nail down the first half crown, thanks to a 37-point performance by 6-4 junior Kyle Stuard. Stuard, who is usually known for his extra points, field goals and punting chores on the Cooper football team, poured in 12 field goals and 13 of the 15 free throws that the Cougars sank.

COOPER HELD on to leads of 11 points in the first and second half, but the Purple Pack would not be denied as five players were in the double figures with Roy Lee Jefferson paving the way with 14.

Herbert Johnson, 6-8 sophomore and Walter Bryson, Midland's fine floor general at a guard slot, added 12 each while Charles Johnson and Milton Sanders chipped in with 11 each. Charles fouled out of the game early in the third period.

Midland, now 18-8 on the year and 6-0 in league play, can win the first half outright with a victory Friday night against Midland Lee in the beautiful Chaparral Center on the Midland College campus. A loss to Lee and Cooper victory would see both Midland and the Cougars share the first half title with 6-1 marks.

THE COUGARS took a big 18-12 first period lead on the Bulldogs and led at halftime, 32-26. It was 49-40 going into the final period and that is when Midland exploded for 30 points to the Cougars' 20 to take the thriller.

Besides Stuard's 37-point performance, Terry Orr added 13 more to be the only other Cougar in the double figures.

With the loss, Cooper is now 12-11 going into its game with cross-town rival Abilene High Friday night and all that the Cougars can hope for now is for Lee to upset Midland and to beat the Eagles for a share of the first half crown.

Coach Eddie Shirley's Midland Bulldogs chalked up their 19th win in 20 outings by posting a 61-51 victory over the Cooper JV in the preliminary game. Midland will meet Lee for the first half JV title since both Tall City teams are 6-0 in league play going into Friday's action. Dexter Peterson netted 19 points for the Bullpups.

Permian, Big Spring post wins

While Midland High was clinching at least a tie for the first half District 5-4A championship with a 70-69 victory over Abilene Cooper, the rest of the league seemed to be going through the motions while waiting for the second half to start.

In addition to Midland Lee's loss to Abilene High, Odessa Permian evened its loop mark at 3-3 by defeating San Angelo (1-5), 54-45; and Big Spring got its second loop win of the year with a 52-50 victory over winless Odessa High.

Brad Kerley led Permian with 18 points while Rene DeLeon scored 12 points for San Angelo.

Mark Poss paced the Big Spring Steers with 23 points, 13 coming at the charity line. Danny Wright scored 25 in the losing cause for Odessa High. OHS tied the game at 48 with over a minute left, but a basket by James Magers and free throws by Poss gave Big Spring the win.

Winder resigns OHS post

ODESSA — Dick Winder has resigned as head football coach at Odessa High School. Winder has taken a job with the University of New Mexico and will be the new backfield coach for the Lobos this fall.

"It was a real tough decision," said Winder who compiled a 37-23 record in six seasons with the Bronchos. "I've enjoyed it here. These are my kind of kids. I really think these have been the best years of my life, but

Cowboy veteran end feels like rookie again

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla.—(AP) — Jackie Smith, a 15-year National Football League veteran, attended his first Super Bowl picture day Tuesday.

Symbolically, he was in the Dallas Cowboy "rookie" photo.

"I feel like a rookie and they are treating me like it," said Smith, nervously shifting his feet. "I had to have my picture taken with those knothole rookies."

Smith, of course, was coaxed out of retirement by the Cowboys after No. 2 tight end Jay Saldi was injured early in the season.

For years, Smith had bedeviled the Cowboys as a member of the St. Louis Cardinals. He came to Dallas under unusual circumstances.

"I had resolved myself to retiring and I was as happy as I could be," said Smith, who will be 39 next month. "St. Louis lost two of their tight ends and Coach Bud Wilkinson and (assistant) Larry Wilson asked me to come back."

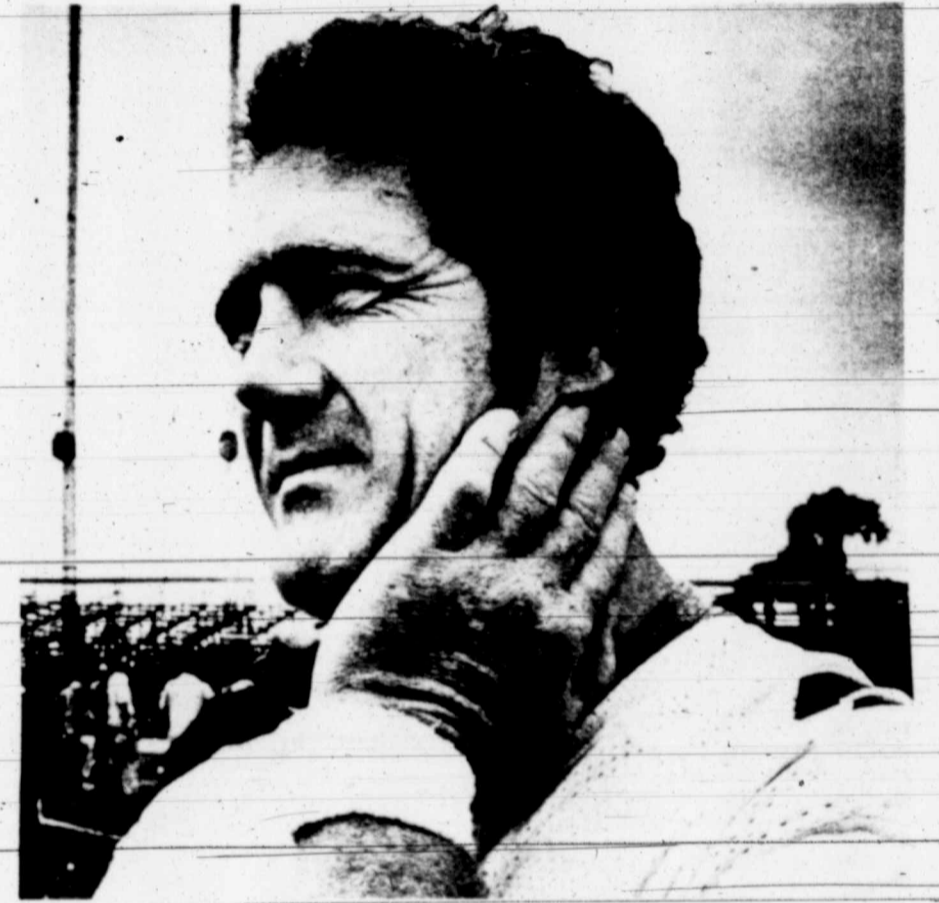

"I took a physical with some 15 X-rays. The Cardinals said I didn't pass the physical. Dallas called. I passed their physical and signed."

Smith said the Cardinal front office later denied it ever talked with him.

"Why did they deny they talked to me?" said Smith. "If they wanted to say I was over the hill or something like that, OK. But it made me sound like I was lying."

He added he would like to come back to Dallas next year "if they want me."

Smith got off the team bus Tuesday and said, "I was wondering where they hid the dancing bears. It was like a circus. I can see how it's hard for a team to concentrate on the game — particularly a new team."

Dallas tight end Jackie Smith.

His emotions flowed over.

"I wish I was here with some of my old teammates like Larry Wilson and Charley Johnson. They wanted to be part of a Super Bowl as much as I did. This is the highlight of my career no matter what happens."

"Man, I got a second chance. I feel young again. It's an odd feeling to realize a dream like this."

Smith said he was hearing from people he hadn't talked to in 15 years.

"Most of 'em want to know, 'Hey, Jackie, you got me a ticket?'"

Smith looked around at the media crush in Yankee Stadium and said,

"Man, this is a thrill. It's like the twilight zone."

He looked at the bright green grass and squinted under the mid-morning haze on a balmy springlike day: "This isn't real hard to take."

Abilene topples Rebels by 64-37

By BOB DILLON
R-T Sports Writer

It was all like some sort of bad dream. Midland Lee only managed to score 12 points in the second half Tuesday night as the Abilene Eagles shot down the Rebels, 64-37, in a District 5-4A basketball game in the Lee Gymnasium.

The Rebels scored six points each in the final two periods while the Eagles were scoring 36 points with a big 26-point outburst in the final eight minutes to win going away.

The first half was nip-and-tuck with the two teams tied at 12-12 at the end of the first period and it looked like another typical Lee-Abilene battle. And it still looked that way with the Warbirds on top at intermission, 28-25, but all that could go wrong went wrong for Lee in the second half. The cold-shooting Rebels never could get back into it after trailing 38-31 at the end of three periods.

Lee only had one player in the double figures and that was Ernest Merritt who wound up with 14 markers with 12 of those coming in the first half.

Mike McGaha was the next best scorer for Lee with seven points while Mitch Gassaway, a 6-foot-4 inch scorer, poured in 18 points and Derrick Caballero 15 more for the well-declined Eagle team which is now 4-2 in the 5-4A race with a game with Abilene Cooper on Friday to wrap up the first half of the race.

Abilene didn't hit but six free throws while Lee connected on 11 charity tosses as the Rebels never could get untracked in the frigid second half.

With the loss, Lee is now 3-3 going into Friday's game with Midland in the Chaparral Center in the Midland College campus.

Lee sports a season record of 12-12 while Abilene has a 13-11 record on the year.

Gassaway led a 16-point surge by the Eagles in the second period and neither team was very accurate in the third period when the Key City team outscored the Tall City five, 10-6.

While the varsity game was a disappointment for the Lee fans, Coach Greg Wright's Lee junior varsity won a thrilling 60-59 victory when James Peterson hit a driving layup at the buzzer after the Eagles missed on a free throw with seven seconds left.

The win gives Lee a 6-0 5-4A JV mark to set up a big showdown with Midland High which is also 6-0.

Peterson scored 16 points for the Rebel JV while teammates Norris Lane, Tim Walker, Brent Sanders and Gary Woods, all netted eight points each.

Texas, SMU post wins

By The Associated Press

The Texas Longhorns — pre-season favorites to win the Southwest Conference basketball championship — are beginning to play like the team Coach Abe Lemons had expected.

"There's just not any phase of our game that I was not pleased with tonight," said Lemons after the Longhorns popped the Rice Owls, 94-81, in Houston Tuesday night to improve the SWC record to 4-1.

Rice, now 2-3 in the SWC and 5-10 for the season, was led by Elbert Darden who hit 30 points.

In other SWC action Tuesday night, Baylor beat Houston 85-77 and Southern Methodist defeated Texas Tech 69-65.

A crowd of 5,400 fans — many of them dressed in clown costumes — filled the Rice gym. The clown outfits were the result of a comment Lemons made last year when he said Rice seemed to be playing like clowns.

SMU used a balanced scoring attack — led by Brad Branson and Reggie Franklin with 14 points each — to improve its SWC record to 2-1 with the victory over Texas Tech, which fell to 3-2.

"With a break or two, we could have come out on top," said Tech Coach Gerald Myers, who saw his team drop its second straight game after upsetting Texas to start its SWC schedule.

"We've worked hard and now we're ready to really do something," said SMU Coach Sonny Allen. "We're going to shock a lot of people before this is over. It's taken a while to learn to play together. Now we have it together. What we want to do is put that ring (SWC championship) on our fingers."

In Waco, where Baylor handed Houston its fourth loss in five SWC starts, most of the talk after the game was about officiating.

Houston Coach Guy Lewis restated his distaste for the three-official rule. It results in too many fouls and disruption of the game flow, he complained.

Houston had 32 fouls and Baylor had 22 more.

"Both teams had to change their game plan when officials started calling the game so close," said Baylor Coach Jim Haller who saw two of his starters pick up four early fouls each.

Vinnie Johnson hit 30 points to lead Baylor and freshman Terry Teagle added 19 — including seven as the Bears outscored Houston 10-2 in a two-minute period near the end of the game.

Ken Williams led Houston with a game-high 33 points.

While Baylor evened its record at 2-2, Houston fell to 1-4 in SWC play.

But don't count the Cougars out of the race yet.

Lemons pleased with Longhorns after triumph

By The Associated Press
The fans in Houston came out to cheer their Rice Owls and jeer Abe Lemons.
But it didn't bother the Texas basketball coach — especially after his Longhorns beat their Southwest Conference rivals with consummate ease, 94-81, Tuesday night.
“They didn't have too much to holler about, did they?” said the droll Lemons.
Many in the raucous Rice crowd wore clown outfits in a mocking gesture of the Texas coach, who last year said that the Owls “seemed to be playing like clowns.” The gaudily dressed students greeted Lemons as he came on the court Tuesday night.
“That didn't disturb me,” said Lemons, “not at all.”

After the game, he could happily contemplate the explosive Texas shooting — 59 percent from the floor. The Longhorns haven't looked that good since their NIT victory last season.

“There's just not any phase of our game that I was not pleased with tonight,” Lemons said. “I have no idea why we didn't play better before.”
In action involving the nation's ranked teams, No. 1 Notre Dame defeated Lafayette 91-66; No. 7 Louisville nipped Dayton 77-76 and No. 13 Marquette routed Long Beach State 99-80.

Jim Krivacs, the high-scoring hero of Texas' victory over North Carolina State in the NIT finals last March, scored 30 points against Rice and Tyrone Brnayan added 24. The Longhorns, apparently righted after a slow start this season, won their fourth SWC game in the last five and improved their overall record to 10-4.

Notre Dame went on a 14-point scoring binge late in the first half, led by Bill Hanzlik, Kelly Tripucka and Orlando Woolridge, to beat Lafayette. The Irish never trailed after Tripucka, Hanzlik and Woolridge scored four points apiece during the late first-half drive, giving them a 44-29 advantage with 1:26 remaining before intermission.

Darrell Griffith scored 25 points to lead Louisville over Dayton. The Cardinals rallied from an 11-point halftime deficit.

“Our pressure defense and zone press in the second half helped us to get back into the game,” said Louisville Coach Denny Crum. “This was the first time all year that we've been down like that in the second half and came back to win.”

Bernard Toone scored 26 points and reserve Jim Dudley sparked a Marquette surge late in the first half, leading the Warriors over Long Beach State.

Elsewhere, a shot at the buzzer by Vic Smith gave Navy a 75-73 victory over Yale; Nick Galis scored 38 points as Seton Hall defeated Manhattan 89-79; Reggie Carter's 17 points led St. John's past Villanova 74-54; Penn edged St. Joseph's (Pa.) 43-42 behind Tim Smith's 16 points and Seattle whipped Portland State 75-69 as Jawann Oldham scored 27.

Swann's injury could hamper passing attack

MIAMI (AP) — Lynn Swann's foot may wind up rivaling Paul Warfield's hamstring or Fran Tarkenton's arm before this day is over.

Nothing was broken, X-rays showed, and the Steelers said Swann would resume practicing today. But the foot, bound in tape, was bruised and Swann was limping.

And that was enough to cause a ripple of excitement in the rumor-ripe atmosphere that pervades every Super Bowl, where a snuffle quickly becomes double pneumonia and a sprain turns into a compound fracture.

It was back before Super Bowl VIII in Houston that Warfield, the Miami Dolphins' premier wide receiver, supposedly had a damaging hamstring injury. It was the talk of the town for several days, but it was just so much hot air. Warfield made his quota of artistic catches and the Dolphins blew away Minnesota 24-7.

The next year the Vikings were back in the Super Bowl. And all of a sudden the word was out that Fran Tarkenton, Minnesota's quarterback, could barely lift his arm. He could do a lot more than that, of course — and did. His passing didn't suffer noticeably. Only the Vikings suffered again, beaten 16-6 by Pittsburgh.

Now it was Swann's turn to become the center of attention.

“It's pain, but I've been able to take pain,” he said in a telephone interview when asked about the injury. “I'll be able to go out there and play with a broken foot. It's going to hurt a whole lot and I might not be able to practice until Sunday morning. But I'll be tough. A broken foot isn't going to stop me.”

And then Swann burst out laughing. He'd been kidding all the time. He wasn't really hurt that bad.

“It'll be all right,” he said, serious now. “I should be able to practice tomorrow.”

The injury occurred when Swann and Johnson, the Steelers' left cornerback, “were running side by side. I thought I had room to move to the inside and I was wrong. He just stepped down — right on my foot.”

Swann will no doubt be the center of the Cowboys' attention on Sunday, just as he was in Super Bowl X. Dallas, of course, is hoping its efforts this time around will be more successful.

“As far as I know, the last time somebody said they were going to intimidate me in the Super Bowl, I ended up the MVP,” said Swann, on the end of a touchdown pass play that covered 64 yards and gave the Steelers their 21-17 victory over the Cowboys.

“Intimidation” has become the byword of this Super Bowl. Can the Steelers intimidate Tony Dorsett of Dallas? Can Hollywood Henderson of the Cowboys intimidate Pittsburgh? Does all the talk mean anything?

Apparently not. Virtually every player who has anything to say on the matter shrugs off this intimidation business, especially in a game with teams of this calibre.

“If a player can be intimidated, everyone finds out about it in a hurry and he isn't around very long — and he certainly doesn't get to the Super Bowl,” says Swann.

“We don't talk about intimidation. People tell us that we are the intimidators. We just go out and play football. We've been coached that you win games by tackling and by moving the ball and scoring points.”

Trojan coach will leave cage post

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Coach Bob Boyd, whose University of Southern California basketball teams couldn't shake the shadow of UCLA, said Tuesday that he is stepping aside at the end of the season.

The announcement by Boyd, 48, came three days after the Trojans suffered their 18th consecutive loss to UCLA.

Boyd, in his 13th season, has been under fire in recent years after finishing last in the Pac-8 in 1975-76 and 1976-77.

“This season and throughout the full term of my contract which ends on July 1, 1979, I plan to diligently work toward the successful completion of this basketball season,” said Boyd, 48, at a news conference at Heritage Hall.

His Trojans lost to UCLA 89-86 last Saturday night and have not defeated the Bruins since 1970.

Nevertheless, USC is currently tied for the Pac-10 lead at 4-1 and holds a 9-4 season record.

A player at USC from 1948-1952, he entered the current season — his 13th with the Trojans — with a 196-122 record. USC was last in 1976-77 and 1977-78. The Trojans' highest finish under Boyd came in 1971-72 when they went 12-2 and 24-2. A year later they selected to participate in the National Invitational Tournament.

“The reasons for the announcements at this time are: 1, the university will have ample time to select a new coach 2 the elimination of any speculation for future recruiting and putting the present recruitment of student athletes in proper perspective; and 3, the elimination of any second-guessing by those who might feel the university put pressure on me to make this decision.”

Boyd's team this week starts a three-game road trip including conference games at Arizona and Arizona State, plus a nationally televised game against Texas.

“This could be our most important road trip,” said Boyd.

He added, “The number of talented players on this team insures a successful and bright future.”

“I find it more appropriate to make this announcement under these circumstances as opposed to two years ago,” he said. During the 1976-77 season, the Trojans were 2-12 in the conference and 6-20 overall.

The previous season they 0-14 and 11-16. Last year, finishing in a third place conference tie, the Trojans were 14-13 for the entire campaign.

Boyd refused to answer questions, saying “I will not make any further comments regarding this issue. I plan to devote all of my time and energy for a successful completion of this season. At that time, I will gladly comment or answer any questions you might have as to the reasons for my decision.”

Iowa State may name coach

AMES, Iowa (AP) — Iowa State officials say they may name a new football coach today, only five days after Earle Bruce departed the head coaching job at Ohio State.

Athletic Director Lou McCullough told the Sports of Sorts Club in Waterloo, Iowa, Tuesday night that he expected the search committee to make a recommendation today to the Iowa State Athletic Council, which will select the coach.

McCullough said the interview process has been completed and said the number of persons interviewed was “greater than five.” Two candidates were interviewed here Tuesday. They were John Cooper, head coach at the University of Tulsa, and Donnie Duncan, an assistant coach at Oklahoma.

Others known to have been interviewed are Dayton Coach Rick Carter, Iowa State assistant Jim Williams and Jim Sweeney, who is on the staff of the Oakland Raiders.

Cooper, a former Iowa State player and a friend of McCullough, guided Tulsa to a 9-2 record last season, his second year in the position. He was a tailback and defensive back at Iowa State in 1959-61 and McCullough was an ISU assistant during that time.

Others who have been mentioned as possible successors to Bruce are Tom Lichtenberg, a former ISU assistant who was named head coach at Morehead State late last year, and Bo Rein, head coach at North Carolina State.

Williams, who coached the offensive line under Bruce, said he remains “very interested” in the head coaching job.

“I'm sure in due time, I'll find out where I stand,” said Williams, who added he has been concentrating on recruiting.

“Dave Triplett (another ISU assistant) and I are the only ones here now and we're involved in trying to get a good recruiting weekend set up,” he said. “We have a number of kids coming in this weekend and we want to show Iowa State in the best way possible.”

Bruce took four assistants with him to Ohio State — Wayne Stanley, Steve Szabo, Bob Tucker and Pete Carroll. Williams also was asked to go, but he chose to stay at Iowa State so he could apply for the head coaching job.

Lichtenberg, who was Iowa State's offensive coordinator, said he had not applied for the Iowa State job and had not been contacted by ISU officials. Because he just took the Morehead job, Lichtenberg said he did not feel he could go after the Iowa State position unless ISU officials contacted him first.

“I would love that job,” he said. “It would be a good job, but I can't do anything to jeopardize my job here. And this is a good job.”

Blues topple Bruins in NHL to halt streak

By The Associated Press

What, me worry? Not Boston Coach Don Cherry. Not with an 18-point lead over runnerup Toronto in the National Hockey League's Adams Division.

"We're in a slump, there's no doubt about it," Cherry conceded after the Bruins dropped their third game in a row Tuesday night, bowing 5-2 to the St. Louis Blues, who halted a six-game winless skid of their own.

"There have been entirely too many two-on-ones against us. We're just going to have to tighten up. We're down, but we're not worried. We still have a 19-point lead."

Sorry, Don, but it's down to 18, thanks to Toronto's 3-2 triumph over the Colorado Rockies. Elsewhere, the New York Islanders trounced the Washington Capitals 6-2, the Atlanta Flames blanked the Philadelphia Flyers 5-0, the Pittsburgh Penguins zipped the Minnesota North Stars 5-0 and the Montreal Canadiens and Vancouver Canucks skated to a 2-2 tie.

Garry Unger scored two goals and his rookie linemate Tony Currie added three assists to pace St. Louis over Boston, which has lost only nine games all season and has a 28-9-7 record to the Blues' 9-30-7. It also was the first time St. Louis had beaten Boston in 10 games since Oct. 19, 1976.

Unger broke a 2-2 deadlock early in the second period when he beat Boston goalie Jim Pettie — previously undefeated in seven games this season — after a perfect centering pass by Currie. Goals by Bernie Federko and Unger completed the scoring.

The Blues took a 2-0 lead in the first eight minutes on goals by Harvey Bennett and Brian Sutter. Boston's Al Secord tied the game when he scored on a pair of rebound shots.

"I didn't work as hard tonight as I have in other games," said Unger. "But in those games we didn't get anything accomplished as a team. I'm excited we won the game, but to really get me excited we would have to play consistently over, let's say, 15 or 20 games."

Coach Barclay Plager was really excited, though.

"All wins are nice wins, especially when you have only nine for a season," he said.

Maple Leafs 3, Rockies 2

Lanny McDonald snapped a tie with 13:11 remaining by scoring the Leafs' second power-play goal of the game. Dan Maloney drove Colorado's Barry Brek away from in front of the Rockies' net and McDonald was left free to convert passes by Walt McKechnie and Borje Salming.

Colorado Coach Aldo Gaudolin bemoaned the fact that Toronto's scheduled game in Chicago Sunday night was postponed because of a snowstorm.

"Sure, it could have helped," he said. "Maybe they wouldn't have been so fresh. But both teams gave it a good effort. It was just a question of who got the old goal."

Islanders 6, Capitals 2

Defenseman Denis Potvin scored three goals and Bryan Trottier had three assists, keeping the Islanders unbeaten in 19 career meetings with Washington. Mike Bossy had a goal and two assists and Clark Gillies had a goal and an assist as New York remained the NHL's only team unbeaten at home this season. The triumph was New York's 18th, with four ties, in 22 home games and the 16th, with three ties, against Washington since the Caps entered the league.

Flames 5, Flyers 0

Atlanta goalie Dan Bouchard earned his third shutout of the season although the Flyers outshot the Flames 36-27. Guy Chouinard scored his 27th and 28th goals, both on breakaways launched by passes from Eric Vail at the Philadelphia blue line. Harold Philtippoff and Bobby Lalonde gave Atlanta a 2-0 lead in the opening period.

"There are some teams that we play better against," said Bouchard. "Tonight we did play perhaps a closer checking game than with some other teams."

Penguins 5, North Stars 0

Rookie goalie Greg Millen stopped 25 Minnesota shots for his second shutout and Pittsburgh's fourth consecutive victory. It came one night after Minnesota swamped the New York Rangers 8-1. Ron Schutt, Blair Chapman, Orest Kindrachuk, Greg Malone and Rick Kehoe got the Pittsburgh goals.

"We played a solid game," said Millen. "Any time you hold another team to 25 shots, it's a team shutout. It's almost unbelievable."

Canadiens 2, Canucks 2

Montreal's Serge Savard spoiled a brilliant goal-tending exhibition by Vancouver's Glen Hanlon by scoring the tying goal with 28 seconds left after the Canadiens pulled goalkeeper Ken Dryden for an extra attacker. The Canucks, who have never beaten Montreal in Vancouver during their nine seasons in the NHL, got goals from Jere Gillis early in the first period and Bob Manno early in the second as they climbed to within one point of first-place Chicago in the Smythe Division.

Mario Tremblay scored Montreal's first goal at 2:34 of the second period, just 73 seconds after Manno's tally. Vancouver ended the consecutive-game scoring streak of Montreal's Guy Lafleur at 23, five-short of his own NHL record.

Celtics to trade Knight to Indiana

BOSTON (AP) — Disgruntled by his stay in Boston, usually high-scoring veteran Billy Knight prepared to return home to Indiana today after the Boston Celtics shuffled him to Indianapolis where he started his professional basketball career.

In return, the Pacers sent the Celtics rookie Rick Robey, a 6-foot-11, 230-pound center-forward, the third player selected in last year's college draft. Robey captained the University of Kentucky team that won the 1978 NCAA championship.

Knight, 6-6, who has averaged more than 20 points a game in five pro seasons, was signed by the then-ABA Pacers in 1974. He went to Buffalo in 1977 and came to the Celtics this season.

"I'm glad about being traded," said Knight, 26, who has been averaging less than 10 points a game in limited action this season. "I'm overjoyed."

"At Indianapolis, I didn't have anything but good experiences. I'll be allowed to play there and fit in."

"The system in Boston didn't fit me. I'm not going to say more. I've learned that if you don't have anything good to say, don't say anything."

"I didn't fit in and I wasn't allowed to play my game in Boston, to have the freedom and flexibility I need. I just didn't fit in with the system."

Knight said he wasn't sure he could make the Pacers' next game tonight, but expected to be with the team for its weekend games. He said he was awaiting a call about his plans from the Pacers' management.

STIRLING, Scotland (AP) — At the Leckie estate a distinguished figure makes the newspaper rounds on Sunday mornings.

He is Viscount Younger of Leckie, 72-year-old Lord Lieutenant of Stirling and Falkirk. His son, George Younger, 47, Tory MP for Ayr, says: "We take turns on Sunday to go two miles to pick up the newspapers and deliver them around the estate, as we can't get anyone to do it locally."

Lies, larceny, loneliness—it's gambling

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Gerry Fulcher has been a police officer, a university teacher of criminal law and a consultant to the New York state attorney general's office during the last 15 years. In that time, he has gambled away more than a quarter of a million dollars.

Today, he's a member of Gamblers Anonymous and he preaches the gospel of reform when he gets a forum, like the fourth annual Conference on Gambling here recently.

"I would like to dispel some myths," he said. "We don't love to gamble. Every day I'd get up to go to the race track, but I hated it. We don't think money is important at all—look at the way we can win annual salaries and throw them away."

While some people gamble merely as recreation, Fulcher said others become compulsive about it because they are obsessed with the idea they will soon win. That obsession distorts their judgment.

"I would teach a class in law and order and then go out and cash up to $1,000 in bad checks. I was never in my own mind doing anything wrong. I was just suffering a temporary financial setback. Compulsive gamblers are gamblers who steal—not thieves who gamble," he said. "Their lives are full of lies, larceny and loneliness."

Before he was caught, Fulcher had lost $280,000. He said he never believed during those 15 years he had a mental disorder or that he was doing anything wrong.

"I had to be led into a jail cell and be searched by one of my own criminal justice students before I began to think I had a problem," he said. He said he believes a compulsive gambler, like an alcoholic, must hit rock bottom before he can recover.

The similarities between compulsive gambling and compulsive drinking are reflected in a resolution in the American Psychiatric Association guidelines which proposes that compulsive gambling be defined as a treatable illness, much as alcoholism was re-defined in the 1950s.

"If a person is ill, it is unreasonable to submit them to intimidation and harassment in collecting gambling debts," community psychologist Valerie Lorenz told the gathering here.

Miss Lorenz, from the Institute for the Study of Human Development at Pennsylvania State University, has worked with the Pennsylvania Legislature to provide treatment and protection for chronic gamblers.

She said Maryland has enacted such laws and New Jersey is preparing similar ones. They would protect the gambler's home and other property from liens to collect bad debts, and would shield families from collection agencies.

Another psychologist called on states which permit gambling to allocate 1 percent of their gross gambling revenue toward research and treatment of the compulsive gambler.

"Evidence shows there is a direct link between availability of gambling and the incidence of compulsive gamblers," Igor Kusyszyn told the convention.

Kusyszyn, a professor of psychology at York University in Toronto, said now is the time to do something because, he said, the country is on the verge of a gambling boom "as politicians look for revenue anywhere they can get it."

Treatment of the compulsive gambler usually involves psychological counseling and alignment with a group like Gamblers Anonymous. As a reformed gambler, Fulcher said he approves of this approach. "They won't be rehabilitated in prison," he said.

"Any one of you could be conned by a compulsive gambler," he told the audience. "But Gamblers Anonymous members cannot be conned."

Brokaw to appear at UTPB event

ODESSA — Tom Brokaw, host for NBC-TV's "Today" show, will be on "The University of Texas at the Permian Basin campus Jan. 26 for a lecture program co-sponsored by the university and a Midland television station.

Scheduled at 7:30 p.m. in the UTPB gymnasium, the Brokaw program will deal with what makes current events newsworthy.

Before starting with the "Today" show in 1976, Brokaw served for three years at NBC News' White House correspondent. His reports were broadcast on week-day editions of "NBC Nightly News" and on "Today."

In addition, he was anchorman on "NBC Saturday Night News" and was one of NBC News' four floor reporters for the 1976 national political conventions.

As White House correspondent, Brokaw covered three of the most dramatic years in the life of the American presidency, including the resignation of Richard Nixon and Gerald Ford's succession to the presidency.

He also covered Ford's visit to Japan and his trip to the People's Republic of China.

Tickets to the Brokaw lecture are $5 each and are available at the UTPB bookstore. UTPB students will be admitted free with a current ID.

Declarer ruffed the third diamond, drew trumps and ducked a spade. South ruffed the diamond return, led a spade to the ace and ruffed a spade. When the spades broke, unequally South fell back on the club finesse, but neither black suit came through. Down one.

PLAY SPADE AT ONCE
South should give up a spade after ruffing the third diamond. If the spades break horribly the defenders may get a ruff, and South may never get the chance to try the club finesse. Still, the chance that the spades will break either 3-3 or 4-2 is better than the combination of the 3-3 spade break and the club finesse. You will seldom play a hand in which anything else offers a better chance than such a combination.

In today's hand South gets a trump return if he ducks a spade at once. He wins, leads a spade to the ace and ruffs a spade high. Back with a trump to the ten and another spade ruff. Now South draws the last missing trump and gets to dummy with a club to discard on dummy's last spade.

DAILY QUESTION
Partner opens with one club, and the next player passes. You hold: SKJ103; H85; DAQ76; C1076. What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid one diamond. With two four-card suits, respond first in the cheaper suit. If partner opened with one heart you would bid one spade.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON
Exercise program needs doctor's OK

Dear Dr. Solomon: I used to be a pretty good high school athlete and I played lacrosse in college. During the past 10 years, however, most of my activity has been with a knife and fork. At 40 years of age I've developed a paunch, and I'd like to start jogging. Is it safe to start on such a program at my age?—Bob

Dear Bob: Exercise is beneficial for people of all ages, but of course must be suited to the individual. For starters, a fast walk to your doctor's office for a physical examination would be a good idea—in embarking on an exercise program of any kind, the condition of your heart and arteries is a determining factor.

In addition to the routine checkup, your doctor may recommend that you take a stress test before you begin jogging. This test would be a good investment for all runners, but particularly for men over 35 years of age. It determines how much physical exertion you can stand, and can reveal undetected heart disease, myocarditis (an inflammation involving the heart), and atherosclerosis (hardening of the arteries).

Part of the stress test involves having the patient run on a treadmill for five to 10 minutes while an electrocardiogram (ECG) is recorded. The ECG is then compared with one obtained with the patient at rest. The physician is then able to evaluate the condition of the heart and the amount of exertion it can tolerate.

Your desire to become involved in a program of regular exercise is all to the good. Fat and 40 is not a winning combination.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Our pediatrician recommends that our son be inoculated against polio. I haven't heard of a single case of polio in years. What's all the fuss?—Mrs. G. T.

Dear Mrs. T: The fuss is that some 20 years after the Salk vaccine was introduced, 20 cases of polio were reported in the United States last year. Do you want to play Russian roulette with polio when only a very small investment in time and money is necessary to protect your child? If your son is one of the unfortunate ones to contract the disease, how are you going to tell him you're sorry?

I recall the horror of polio epidemics in the years before a vaccine was available, and the jubilation with which its development was greeted. With that in mind, I find it intolerable that almost 19 million children 14 years of age and younger—36 percent of all children in this age group—have not been immunized against polio. Call it ignorance; call it complacency. I think the odds are stacked against you when you gamble a lifetime of heartaches against an investment of a few dollars and a few minutes of your time.

Be thankful you have a pediatrician conscientious enough to keep track of your child's immunization needs—and follow his advice.

(If you have a medical problem, see your doctor. If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

Governor's Bible follows tradition

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — When Gov. Bill Clements took over his Capitol office Tuesday he found a special verse marked by outgoing Gov. Dolph Briscoe in the Bible, a tradition followed by Texas governors.

The verse, from Micah 6:8, read: "He hath shewed thee, O man, what is good; and what doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God."

When Briscoe took office six years ago, then-Gov. Preston Smith left this verse, from Proverbs 12:19: "The lip of truth shall be established forever; but a lying tongue is but for a moment."

Trade with China sees rapid, diverse growth

By JAY MATHEWS
The Washington Post

PEKING — Trade between the United States and China may triple in 1979 as American bankers, oilmen and hotel chain executives scramble to do business with the awakening giant of international commerce, businessmen and China trade experts in the Orient say.

The decision to open full diplomatic relations with Peking is expected eventually to win billions of dollars in contracts for U.S. companies to drill for oil in the South China Sea, Peking's demand for new mines, tourist services, airplanes, trucks and steel mills could swell trade figures even more.

But even if two-way Sino-American trade does grow to about $3 billion this year, from about $1 billion in 1978, it will still approach only one-tenth of total American trade with little Taiwan. Oriental trade experts think China's trade with the United States could climb much higher, but as one said, "There are just so many impediments."

CONGRESS, FOR INSTANCE, now in an unhappy mood over Carter's failure to consult in advance about normalizing relations with Peking, has to cooperate if Washington is to extend most favored nation status to Peking. China will continue to buy U.S. goods even without getting this lower-tariff arrangement for its own exports, but analysts say the gesture in favor of Chinese goods would create good feelings, which would help American traders in situations where they compete closely with Japan or Germany for the Chinese market.

The often politically volatile Chinese must also stick with their extraordinary decision to shelve the economic self-reliance policy of the late Chairman Mao Tse-tung in favor of an unabashed effort to borrow billions of dollars from capitalist banks in Japan and the West. Peking earns $2 billion to $3 billion a year in foreign exchange by selling goods to and receiving overseas Chinese remittances from Hong Kong. Its exports to the rest of the world, particularly Japan, are increasing, but these are mostly low-grade consumer goods like fireworks, feathers and pig bristles that cannot hope to raise the capital needed for the post-Mao leadership's ambitious modernization program.

WANG YAO-TING, chairman of the official China Council for the Promotion of International Trade, has laid out in the clearest fashion to date China's willingness to go deep into debt. Wang said Peking was considering adopting methods suggested by foreign customers such as "use credit from foreign trade organizations or foreign banks." The previous Chinese method of "delayed payments over five to seven years for purchases like the Pullman Kellogg fertilizer plants" could not meet the needs of our rapidly growing foreign trade," Wang said in an interview in the January issue of the official magazine China Reconstructs.

Petroleum could become one Chinese export that draws considerable foreign currency, but China needs to extract oil from offshore wells in quantities enough to feed both its growing industries and its foreign customers, and for that it first needs considerable investment in new drilling equipment and technical expertise.

The oil companies from the United States and other nations that eventually win the right to construct the new oil fields are expected to take payment in the form of oil from those fields. China will probably use this method of payment in many other manufacturing plant deals.

Louis E. Saubouille, the Bank of America vice president in Hong Kong who specializes in China trade, said he thought Peking's new commitment to foreign commerce was "firmly based." Recent increases in trade with the United States, however, have resulted largely from "increased sales of agricultural commodities to China, particularly wheat," he told businessmen in San Francisco.

FIVE AMERICAN BANKS have now opened full correspondent relationships with the official Bank of China. Many more are moving to offer the full resources of American investment capital to Peking. The five banks are First National Bank of Chicago, which got a jump on competitors a year ago by severing banking ties with Taiwan; Citibank; Chase Manhattan, Bank of America and American Security Bank.

U.S. banks must still use foreign intermediaries in some transactions until the 28-year-old problem of blocked claims and frozen assets is solved. Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal and Commerce Secretary Juanita Kreps are scheduled to visit Peking later this year. They may work out ways to pay off about $196 million in claims on formerly American-owned property in China with about $78 million in Chinese funds held frozen in U.S. banks since 1950.

When asked about the claims and assets issue in a press conference with U.S. journalists Jan. 5, Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping said he thought it was "not a big problem."

In recent weeks the Chinese have signed capital development agreements of enormous size that will affect trade figures with the United States for years to come.

THE LARGEST AMERICAN DEAL to date was signed here Jan. 5. U.S. Steel agreed to build a huge iron-ore processing plant worth about $1 billion in an area of Northeast China. The plant, scheduled to be completed in four years, will allow a 25 percent increase in Chinese steel production.

The Flour Corp. signed a $10 million agreement to plan a copper mine that is expected to lead to a construction contract totaling $800 million over the next several years, the largest U.S.-China trade deal to date. The hotel subsidiary of Pan American Airways won a contract to build hotels in China worth $500 million, and manage them for several years. Other American-backed hotel chains have left Peking recently reporting similar arrangements.

Peking, which already owns several Boeing 707s, bought three Boeing 747s and took options on two more in December for a total $250 million deal. Coca-Cola signed an agreement to sell and later bottle its product on the Chinese mainland for the first time in 30 years. This brought cheers from teetotaling foreign travelers who have had to make do with China's own medicine-tasting orange soda pop.

Some bankers in the Orient have begun to express vague worries about China's ability to pay for the size and speed of development it seeks. The National Council for U.S.-China trade, the principal American commercial liaison group, estimates Peking will purchase $40 billion in foreign technology between now and 1985. "By present international standards, they've got enough credit-worthiness to absorb that," said one banker. He cautioned, however, that such figures remain for now just estimates.

THE CHINESE MAY FIND they do not have enough trained personnel, English-speaking guides and living facilities to absorb quickly so many projects directed by foreign experts. Some major foreign technology projects, like the massive steel mill outside Wuhan built with German and Japanese help, have experienced serious delays in the past, although these have been blamed on political disruption, which the government now says is over for good.

Continued bad grain harvests could also cut into Peking's ability to pay for new technology. The 1978 harvest of 295 metric tons failed to meet the leadership's expectations. It forced the purchase of more than $500 million in American grain, a drain on foreign exchange that brings no lasting benefits to the nation's industrial base. Chinese officials have suggested that such large grain purchases will continue for years to come.

Sometimes, more than stamp stuck

By DIANE CLARK
Copley News Service

Karen Green sent $5.60 to Mother Jones, a consumer advocacy magazine, for a green "Mother Jones" T-shirt. The $5.60 included mailing costs.

It wasn't until after five months and six telephone calls, totaling more than $9, to the magazine's San Francisco headquarters that she finally got the T-shirt.

It was blue. And the total cost of getting that T-shirt amounted to almost $15.

Mrs. Rick Gonzalez sent an order for three sporting good items to a Wisconsin firm in April. The first item came in June. The second item came in late July — only after a nasty letter. And the third item never came. A refund was finally granted in November after it had been twice requested.

Green and Gonzalez are only two of the many who have become disenchanted with mail-order businesses. And with this type of business growing at a phenomenal rate and expected to account for $100 billion in sales in 1980, more and more people are going to demand to know their mail-order "bill of rights."

Because of the growth, the Federal Trade Commission (FTC) in 1976 enacted its first controls on the mail-order business. (Complaints about mail-order delays and refund problems now rank as the No. 2 consumer complaint in the nation.)

The FTC regulations provide: — A mail-order firm must mail your order within the time period specified within its ad, or if none is specified, within 30 days of the firm's receipt of your order.

— If the order is not filled within 30 days, the firm must notify you of the reason for the delay and offer you a "free" means of reply (a postage-paid postcard) to ascertain whether you wish to cancel the order or wait for it to be filled.

— If you don't return the card, the seller can assume you agree to the shipping delay. But if the merchandise still doesn't come within the time the shipper specified for the delay, or within 30 days if the shipper specified no delay time, the seller must return your money immediately.

— If you elected to cancel your order you have a right to get ALL your money back. The seller must mail your refund within seven working days after you cancel. In the case of a credit sale, the seller has one billing-cycle to adjust your account. And the return of all money includes any sales taxes and handling charges you may have paid.

— There are certain mail-order services to which these refund rules do not apply, according to FTC spokesmen. These include photo-finishing, magazine subscriptions, mail-order seeds and growing plants and COD (collect on delivery) orders.

— While you may not receive "ordered" merchandise, you may receive "unordered" merchandise. And there are rules regarding this, too.

— Keep it! — And don't pay for it. Only "free samples" and merchandise mailed by a charitable organization asking for contributions can be legally mailed unsolicited. It is illegal for a firm sending you unsolicited merchandise to pressure you into returning it or to send you a bill.

— If companies violate the regulations, complaints can be lodged with the FTC by writing to the director of the Bureau of Consumer Protection, FTC, Washington, D.C. 20580.

— Another complaint can be lodged with the Mail Order Action Line, Direct Mail Marketing Association Inc., 6 E. 43rd St., New York, N.Y. 10017. This association represents nearly 1,600 businesses that sell by mail and mediates complaints involving its own members. It even offers to intercede on your behalf with non-members.

— According to Forrest Mosten of the FTC, there is no reliable way of checking out a mail-order firm beforehand. Contacting the Better Business Bureau for a complaint history on the firm seems to be the most promising way of ascertaining its reputation.

— Mosten explained that it is common for mail-order firms to delay sending the merchandise or refund so they can "live off" the cash you sent them.

— They often won't send you the letter informing you of the delay until about the 29th day after they received your order (just under the 30-day legal requirement), Mosten explained.

He said he believes that when a mail-order house unfairly retains your money for a long period it should have to pay you interest but, currently, there are no provisions for that in federal law.

What's more, Mosten said, some companies refuse to grant refunds unless they have a copy of the order itself.

He strongly urged buyers to make copies of their order before sending it in. Then NEVER send the company originals of any correspondence or canceled checks in a subsequent dispute over the order. What's more, complain early. Mosten said. Don't let a lot of time go by before you write.

But Mosten's first recommendation is to avoid using mail orders unless you absolutely have to.

Jimmy Dean enjoying life of country music, sausage, great wealth

By TOM DeCOLA

DALLAS (AP) — The Head Sausage Peddler just kept turning over rocks, and sure enough, he came up with a big ol' bait worm. That's really the way Jimmy Dean talks, whether he's working as board chairman of Jimmy Dean Sausage, country entertainer, music producer or jacket maker. Dean has parlayed his poor, small town (Plainview, Texas) background and soft drawl into millions. Some of the cash comes from entertaining and other ventures, but most of it comes from hogs. The hogs are made into Jimmy Dean's Pure Pork Sausage, and their skins are turned into wearing apparel. The proceeds from these processes provided the sausage company around $40 million last year, and Dean expects to gross around $100 million this year. The man who gave us "Big Bad John," a recording about the fictional hero of a mine disaster, presides over these enterprises from different locales. There's a condominium along Dallas' plush Turtle Creek Boulevard, a home in New Jersey, a 53-foot yacht that's home for a couple months a year, and land in Charlestown, S. C., where Dean vows he will build a home some day.

IF DEAN'S FOLKSY MANNER and casual style of dress are part of the man, so is the elegance of the Dallas office, on the 11th floor of a high-rise north of downtown. The furnishings are tasteful, but there are some hints. The walls in the corridor leading to the office of the Head Sausage Peddler (his own term) are decorated with grade-school sketches made for a class project at a school in Iowa, where Dean has a meat packing plant. Beneath a chair in the office lay two golf balls, often used for impromptu putting matches where a dollar or two may change hands. The putting is done on the carpet, sometimes across a sculpted corporate symbol—two cowboy boots arranged to somehow make you know they stand for "JD." Visitors probably should not putt against the peddler—he knows the breaks in the carpet. His smile is easy, his laugh spontaneous. But there is still a slight bitterness, a bitterness once greatly magnified in a falling out with his younger brother Don, who was his partner in the sausage-making business.

MANY BROTHERS FIGHT, but the Deans feud. Jimmy at one point obtained a temporary restraining order to keep Don away from the family home at Plainview after he said Don nearly ruined the business. Jimmy bought Don out, and Don, who lives in nearby Irving, has a pending slander suit against Jimmy. "It was really for the best," Dean said in a rare somber moment.

Dean believes in telling it like it is...he likes doing his own ads, too. "It's not Myrtle Bluckumfutch talking about Myrtle Bluckumfutch's chicken and she don't own none of it. Hell, I go into the plants. I know what's going on."

during an interview. "I was bitter for a long, long time. I think now it's more pity." He said the two were never close growing up, calling Don the "fair-haired one" while referring to himself as "the black sheep, the wanderer." Nor did Don take part in Jimmy's rise in the entertainment ranks. Is Don jealous of Jimmy's celebrity? "You know...I really feel like that probably may be the thing," Jimmy Dean said. "There was a certain paranoia there." Dean is anxious to reopen a pork plant in Plainview. He shut the plant down a year ago, claiming it was costing him $27,000 a week to keep it open. He feels that some in his hometown are bitter about the lost jobs, but he hopes to make amends.

THE REBIRTH OF THE PLAINVIEW facility is a key to his money projections. He won't say what will be produced there, but it won't be sausage. "It's a totally new thing," he said. "I'll tell you what. I'm not an evasive person, but I'm not at liberty to say. But we will use about 8,000 hogs a week there, possibly more." He points out that the plant will mean around 110 new jobs, with additional benefits to farmers in the area. "This is not like it was when we built the plant originally," Dean said. "We built it and said I hope we can sell some sausage. Everything that we will produce there (this time) is already sold." Dean takes his sausage seriously. He said he got into the business because he believed there was a market for a quality product ... and because he's liked sausage ever since he was a kid. There is no claim that Jimmy Dean's sausage is perfect. "I don't say we don't make a mistake," he said. "You'll find a bone chip. You get a guy working real close with a boning knife and it'll get in there."

DEAN BELIEVES IN TELLING it like it is, and said he runs his business the same way. "We're all partners, really," he said. "There's no boss. I don't want our people cuss-fighting when we can talk about any problem."

He likes doing his own ads, too. "It's not Myrtle Bluckumfutch talking about Myrtle Bluckumfutch's chicken and she don't own none of it. Hell, I go into the plants. I know what's going on." Dean cackles when he tells about a new product problem. He wanted to change the flavor of the sausage to attract a new market segment. He wanted to call the new product Jimmy Dean's Southern Style Sausage. The federal government told him that was a no-no, because it was made in Iowa. Dean bristled, and said he called a government official. "I told him, you know I'm gonna put out southern style anyway. He told me, 'I tell you what I'm gonna do ... I'm gonna fine you $10,000 and put you in jail for 10 years.' I said 'I'd like to reconsider.'" The product is marketed as Jimmy Dean's Special Recipe. He said it's accounted for a big rise in profits.

The climb from boyhood poverty started with music, and it still has a part in the sausage-maker's life. He said he'll make a new recording soon in Nashville and is working on putting together a unit to play some dates in Nevada. The boyish-looking 50-year-old said he saved his money from the music and invested "a little here and a little there. If you ever saw my act, you'd know I had to diversify." Dean dresses modishly, with fresh-styled hair, fancy jeans and a sport shirt. He wears a gold-and-diamond watch, bracelet and two rings. His glasses are tinted, but he comes off more of a country boy than a celebrity.

HIS COMMENTS ARE DIRECT and open. A female employee in the room is told, "You got a thing (thread) on your butt, there." She laughs and removes the thread.

A lot of the musician is still alive. He can recall and recite lyrics without pausing. Dean made his way through the music world with only one encounter with drugs. He said he was playing Las Vegas, two shows daily, seven days a week for four weeks. "I was tired," he said. "I called this doctor ... and he sent over some pills. I can't remember what they were called, but they were tiny yellow ones. He said take one about a half hour before each show. I took one, and boing! I could have hunted ducks with a rake."

He said he later noticed that he was sweating and his heart was pounding. "I took what was left of them pills and put them in the commode ... flushed 'em, man. The lids blew off of the city sewers."

NOR WERE ALL THE performances successful. He once had a horse fall on him prior to a performance in the Astrodome in Houston. "I noticed during the set, I could hear the blood squishing in my boot. They had to cut off the boot."

Dean clearly enjoys his life and probably has all the money he'll ever need. Will he retire?

"No, 'cause I'd die. I saw 'em take my granddaddy off the farm and kinda put him out to pasture ... and the old man just kinda withered up and died."

With an 11th-grade education (he hesitates to say it, fearing that children will use him for an example), Dean has managed to claw his way to prosperity. Any secret? "I've always tried to be aware of where I was dumb ... and then endeavored to hire the smartest son-of-a-gun I could find."

Native Texan Jimmy Dean, entertainer and business man, takes a few golf strokes in his Dallas office recently. Dean oversees his projects from three sites—a Dallas condominium, a home in New Jersey and a 53-foot yacht that's home for the family for several months a year. (AP Laserphoto)

Final rites administered to ABM defense complex

NEKOMA, N.D. (AP) — Without ceremony, salvage workers have administered final rites with a welding torch to what briefly was the nation's only anti-ballistic missile defense site.

Left at the partly gutted $5.5 billion complex, which ran less than a year, is a pyramid-shaped radar control building, empty missile silos and the intake and exhaust columns from an underground power plant.

They stand conspicuously against the surrounding wheatland of northeastern North Dakota as a poignant reminder for Maj. Fred Wegner of what "was the most sophisticated defense complex in the world."

Wegner supervised work on a 15-month, $367,000 salvage contract for the Army, through its completion earlier this month.

He is the only military man who saw, day by day, the controversial base from its peak of activity in the mid-1970s through the last two years, as it has been dismantled piece by piece.

"A couple hundred years from now, a farmer will be plowing and think he hit an Egyptian pyramid," said Wegner, who now runs a Young Adult Conservation Corps program in remaining administrative buildings at the site.

"It's a landmark now, really," Wegner said. "It should be an embarrassment to the government—a reminder of government waste."

After witnessing over a two-year period the removal of 100 missiles nestled in launchers across the surrounding countryside, to the salvaging of tiny copper tubing, Wegner took a nostalgic walk through the main radar building last week. "I took a last walk through the building to make sure nobody was in there before they sealed the door shut," he said. "It was almost unbelievable, like there had been an explosion."

"In what once was a plush, sophisticated building, there were burn marks from cutting torches, loose wires and pipe and a huge gaping hole where there had been an elevator."

Though the last chapter of Safeguard, as the ABM program was called, may have been written when a welder sealed the steel doors of the radar building, the complex was officially declared dead Feb. 10, 1976.

That's when the plug was pulled on a computer system that monitored the site's operations and controlled the radar responsible for firing the system's defense missiles—guardians of nearby Minuteman missiles and bombers at the Grand Forks (N.D.) Air Force Base.

The complex, which cost about $5.5 billion to build, had been in operation less than a year when Congress voted in late 1975 to deactivate it.

In fact, the ABM base became fully operational only the day before the House voted to mothball it as obsolete in the face of new weapons developed by the Soviet Union.

The Senate followed suit several months later.

It was the first and last of what was originally planned as a system of 12 Safeguard sites around the nation. "I'm still not, and nobody else is really sure why they shut it down," said Wegner, 45, who first came to the base in 1974 as a missile officer and has since settled on a small nearby farm.

Jacksboro's cake lady has sweet reputation

By JAMES R. KING

JACKSBORO, Texas (AP) — When 63-year-old Ida Mae Stark begins her baking, the house fills with the sweet smell of icing and dough — a lot of icing and up to $7,100 in dough.

She may look like a sweet little old lady who'd reach out and pinch your cheek with a smile and a "hello there, Sonny." But this little old lady sells her cakes, fills orders from El Paso to New Orleans — and doesn't have time to pinch cheeks, Sonny.

"We deliver most of them by vans or station wagons, but we have used our airplane to make some deliveries," says Mrs. Stark, the grande dame of wedding cakes in this town 60 miles northwest of Fort Worth.

Actually, though, most of her business comes from out-of-town customers. Her cakes have been served in the governor's mansion for weddings of the daughters of Preston Smith and Dolph Briscoe, she does a lot of business in Dallas and Fort Worth, and occasionally she sends cakes to customers in El Paso, Midland, Galveston, and McAllen, Texas, as well as to points in Oklahoma, Arkansas and Louisiana.

ONE CUSTOMER DROVE in from Tennessee to pick up his cake. "The price depends on two things — the looks of the cake and how many people you want it to serve," said Mrs. Stark, who sells only four to 12 cakes a week. Her least expensive wedding cake is a "two-story" cake for $95. It will serve 75 persons. Prices for cakes with five levels, big enough to serve 1,050 guests, start at $2,000. Delivery is extra.

The one that sold for $7,100 was used in a Dallas wedding in 1974. It stood 14 feet tall and included electric lights.

"They were those tiny low-voltage lights, and we covered each one with icing so they glowed through," Mrs. Stark said. She said the electric wires were strung so that no one would slice into them.

"Only the back two-thirds of the cake is served at the wedding anyway," she said. "The front of the cake is for decoration only. It is never eaten (until later)."

Mrs. Stark, operating out of a converted house which serves as her bakery and office, said she started decorating cakes as a hobby more than 20 years ago.

"IT WAS JUST FOR fun. I had studied cake decorating in Oklahoma City. At first I didn't do any baking — customers would bring their own cakes to me to decorate in my home."

But her reputation grew, and her business was launched. "I'm a prime example of what you can do when you're middle-aged," said Mrs. Stark, who was in her early 40s when she turned professional. But she admitted the growth of her business has been gradual and the venture has been anything but a piece of cake.

"Twice I've made cakes for weddings that were called off at the last minute," she said. On one occasion "500 guests had already arrived and another 500 were at the gates about to come in when this little girl just decided she wasn't going to get married that day. And she didn't."

"I had worked my heart out on it and then I had to dismantle it. I could have cried. I left it with the family. I imagine they ate it later — I don't know," said the silver-haired lady as she squeezed a "leaf" from a tube containing green-colored icing onto the side of a cake as big as a No. 2 washtub.

OTHER WORKERS BUSTLED from room to room in the brightly lighted, steamy house, making sugar-dough flowers, answering the phones, spreading white icing on huge wheels of cake and grinding pecans.

"This is no one-woman operation," said Mrs. Stark. "We employ eight people."

Two of them, Jerry Hadderton, 38, and his wife Wanda, 34, are being groomed to take over the business from Mrs. Stark later this year, but Mrs. Stark said she is not retiring.

"I'll be working for them then," she said. "I just want to get away from the responsibility of running the business."

For one thing, it would leave her more time to invent gadgets used in her kitchen, to work on recipes, which are guarded secrets, and to spend more time with her husband, who owns the Jacksboro National Bank.

SHE HAS PATENTED her method of holding the levels of a big wedding cake together by using three metal pillars later decorated with sugar-dough to look like Grecian columns.

And the frosting on her cakes is mixed so that it does not acquire a crusty surface overnight.

"Feel that icing," she said. "See? Soft. It'll stay that way up to four days. How we do it is a secret — I wouldn't dare divulge it. But it has fresh fruit in it."

Doesn't a bakery of this size ever resort to a commercial cake mix? "Oh no! Heavens no!" Mrs. Stark said. "No, indeed, no, young man." She said her basic white cake recipe has evolved over several years of improvising and experimenting with different ingredients and even different brands of ingredients. As in her icing, the cake itself also includes fresh fruit.

Another subject Mrs. Stark has strong opinions on is the use of small statues of the bride and groom atop wedding cakes.

"They're tacky," she said. Instead, her cakes are capped by realistic bouquets made of sugar-dough flowers that can be eaten — "I don't like to put anything on my cakes that is not edible," Mrs. Stark said. With the possible exception of those electric lights.

Texas farmers fret over foreign buyers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although foreign investors bought 93,000 acres of Texas farmland last year — including "some of the best soil in the state" — an Agriculture Department report concludes that the purchases were "insignificant."

But a congressman in whose Northeast Texas district most of the land acquisitions occurred said Tuesday the foreign buyers have sparked "quite a bit of discussion among our farmers and ranchers."

"They are quite concerned over the increased land prices," continued Rep. Sam Hall, D-Texas. "They are in a state of apprehension because most of the property is being sold to foreigners."

The Texas Agriculture Extension Service compiled the state figures included in a nation-wide report requested by Sen. Herman Talmadge, D-Georgia, chairman of the Agriculture, Nutrition and Forestry Committee.

The extension service noted that the "concentrated" purchases of cropland in Texas included "some of the best soil in the state." But the report also noted that the purchases represent "an insignificant portion of total agricultural acreage in the state."

If foreign purchasers continued buying land at last year's rate, it would take 25 years before one percent of Texas' 157.9 million farm, ranch and forest acres would be under foreign control.

The Prince of Liechtenstein was identified by the extension service report as the largest single foreign buyer last year, purchasing more than 40,000 acres.

By comparison, Prince Francis Joseph II's country covers only 39,040 acres. The prince's purchases last year included 17,000 acres in Hopkins County, 2,000 acres in Lamar County and a contract to buy 1,400 acres in Denton County.

Prior to the survey period, Joseph had bought 20,000 acres in Red River County.

Other significant foreign buys included:

— West German investor Adolph Scherer, 8,884 acres in Red River, Delta and Lamar counties plus a "reported" interest in 2,500 acres in Bowie County;

— Scandinavian investor Ulrike Schwerdtfeger, 5,120 acres in Presidio County; — and a group of Mennonites from Mexico, 6,400 acres in Gaines County.

The Texas Agriculture Extension Service said that foreigners were involved in 42 transactions in 26 Texas counties from Jan. 1, 1977 through June 30, 1978. The average purchase involved 2,219 acres.

The largest single group of foreign investors "would appear to be the West Germans," said the report that added "there is little or no indication that petrodollars are the source of current purchases."

The largest concentration of foreign buying centered from "Dallas, north-east to the Red River."

Other conclusions reported by the Texas Agriculture Extension Service were:

— no indication that foreign buying accelerated during the survey period;

— most purchases involved financing by U.S. institutions;

— more rumors of foreign activity were identified than were actually verified;

Private plane accidents increase; Pilots urged to be more careful

WASHINGTON (AP) — Citing an increase in the number of small plane accidents and deaths during 1978, the chairman of the National Transportation Safety Board is urging private pilots to be more careful, especially in bad weather.

"I'd like to get this message across: If you fly a pleasure craft, know your capacity to handle it. Please check the weather, and if it's not good, avoid it," said James B. King, board chairman.

White King expressed concern about the increase in small aircraft accidents, he noted Tuesday that the safety record of the nation's major air carriers improved in 1978.

King said that in 1978 there were 4,609 general aviation accidents including 795 fatal accidents resulting in 1,690 deaths, compared with 1977 figures of 4,286 accidents, 702 fatal accidents and 1,436 deaths.

General aviation includes private planes, air taxis, commuters and corporate planes.

"About 28 percent of our general aviation aircraft come under the class of pleasure, and these craft are involved in accidents that produce 62 percent of the general aviation fatalities," King said.

The 1978 death total includes 144 persons who died in the collision of a jetliner and a small Cessna over San Diego on Sept. 25. It was included in the category because a small plane was involved.

"Even if you don't count the San Diego fatalities, there would still be an increase of 110 deaths in general aviation over 1977, and that's too high," King told reporters.

He added that a majority of the pleasure craft accidents occur in bad weather.

"Often, a pilot is not intimately familiar with the performance of his aircraft in bad weather situations," King said.

King said major carriers had 25 total accidents in 1978, six of them fatal resulting in 163 deaths. The total includes the San Diego accident. In 1977, there were 26 accidents, five of them fatal, with 655 deaths. That total included 574 persons killed in the Canary Island runway collision of a Pan American World Airways Boeing 747 with a KLM Royal Dutch Airlines jet.

Refugees fail in bid to force boat into Hong Kong waters

HONG KONG (AP) — Three hundred young refugees tried to force the skipper of their packed freighter to sail into Hong Kong waters today by storming the engine room and rocking the ship from side to side for three hours.

They failed, and the Hong Kong government demanded that the ship sail its 3,000 passengers to Taiwan immediately.

The ship, the 2,290-ton Huey Fong, has been anchored in international waters off Hong Kong for more than three weeks. The government of the crowded British colony refuses to let the refugees land, and the captain refuses to sail because the Nationalist Chinese government on Taiwan won't accept them either.

A spokesman for the refugees, Chu Hsien-ming, said in a radiotelephone interview: "The long wait here and chilly weather had caused these youths to become desperate and they tried to force themselves into the engine room. But we, the older ones, finally prevented them from doing so."

Chu said the youths also tried to rock the 2,290-ton Huey Fong "by running from one side to the other" while other refugees tried to keep it on an even keel. "This lasted for three hours and finally we calmed them down," he said.

Chu said the Huey Fong's captain, Shu Wen-shin, got a letter from the Hong Kong government a few hours after the incident saying if the ship did not leave for Taiwan immediately, no more provisions would be provided for the refugees, most of whom are ethnic Chinese fleeing Vietnam.

Chu said the Hong Kong Marine Department also told the refugees that letters to their friends and relatives would be handed over to the representative of the U.N. High Commission for Refugees for forwarding only after the ship's departure.

The Huey Fong rescued the refugees from nine sinking fishing junks on Dec. 17 while it was on its way from Bangkok to Taiwan.

The freighter was denied permission to enter Hong Kong on Dec. 23 and anchored about a mile and a half out in international waters.

Baltimore money boosts economy

By KEN RINGLE The Washington Post NEWPORT, R.I. — When his daughter first saw an offshore oil rig squatting off the coast here like some thing out of "Star Wars," Mike Dawson of nearby Jamestown remembers, "she turned to me and said, 'Well, they've finally landed.'"

The year-old invasion of these New England waters, however, has been more a cultural and an economic phenomenon than anything else as the cowboy-booted high rollers of the oil world have come ashore into the land of the bean and the cod.

Working from a beachhead in the 4,600-acre former naval base at Quonset Point and Davisville, just northwest of here, more than 50 oil companies, rig renters, pipe fitters, mud dealers, and associated industries have been injecting thousands of dollars into a Rhode Island economy that has been stagnant or depressed for years.

Down home Rhode Islanders, for whom the American Midwest is a distant journey, are confronting sheepskin-jacketed roughnecks who reminisce in casual draws about bygone days in Singapore and Riyadh.

So far, even after a year of drilling in the Baltimore Canyon area 100 miles offshore to the south, few people in the area appear to have any conception of the economic scope of the oil industry or what it could mean to their state.

Many don't even know the oilmen are here. "I don't know who the hell they are," said Mavis Purden, a waitress at a restaurant on U.S. 1 near Davisville. "They come in here winking at the girls and leaving big tips and talking about 'logging' and 'mud.' I thought they were in the timber business."

So far, most of the $97.1 million invested by the oil companies in the Baltimore Canyon exploration effort has gone elsewhere into the U.S. treasury for lease fees or southwest to Houston and Tulsa and Lafayette, La., major industry supply points for men and machines.

But a major find in the Baltimore Canyon could change much of that, generating thousands of jobs in the creation and operation of production facilities to bring oil from the ocean floor.

And as the staging operation for the Baltimore Canyon exploration grows here, the oil business already is making itself felt in the area's economy. Pat Butterworth, a local resident hired as a secretary by Tenecco, says people in Providence "have no idea of their own economic stake in what's going on out here."

"Over the holidays I was calling around trying to get some carpeting for the theffices and I couldn't get anyone to return my calls. They figured maybe I wanted a rug or something."

"Finally I got someone to do the job and after New Year's the other started calling back and asking what I wanted. I told them we had already gotten the job done. Then they'd ask how big the order was and when I told them 30 offices there would be this long pained silence at the other end of the phone."

"They just hadn't known there was that kind of business available."

The same thing happened, she said, with a $3,000 order for office chairs. But as Butterworth and others remark, there are more than economic differences at work here: there are different mentalities. In New England, the land originally populated by Puritans, the beef and bourbon accents and million-dollar gamble of the oilmen from the Southwest are looked upon with some puzzlement.

One recent evening, as two oilmen sat in a Newport bar, quietly talking about the Middle East, the bartender and two patrons could be heard in the background discussing the issuance of earplugs to protect patrons sitting nearby from the Texas twang.

"These people here aren't accustomed to hope and confidence," said Don Brown of Tenecco. "They don't understand that in Houston dreams have a way of coming true."

Tenecco, which this week will begin drilling the 16th well in the Baltimore Canyon, has placed it under the direction of Hugh Horton, 52, a burly soft-spoken native of Quitman, Texas, and Ralph Miller, 40, a drawing, Alvin, Texas, native who now lives in Lafayette, La.

Horton, the project manager, and Miller, the drilling supervisor, last worked together three years ago on a well in the Red Sea.

"Hugh was working out of Peru and I was working out of Thailand and they had some problems with this well in Saudi Arabia and told us to get over and fix it, so we did," Miller said.

"It was kind of interesting over there in the Middle East, though I don't know what the hell's going to happen with this Iran business. Most of those Arabs are all right, if you ask me, especially Sadat. I've got a lot of respect for him. But now that Qaddafi, down in Libya, he's one crazy fellow."

Miller has a lot of pride in Tenecco's frontier division where he and Horton work and where, he says, "they don't just send any idiot out to Hdrill a well."

Both Horton, who keeps pictures of flaming rigs and sunken drill platforms in his office to remind people what can go wrong, and Miller are former roughnecks who worked their way to management spots in "Oil Patch University," the world of the oil fields where the Horatio Alger dream remains very much alive.

Despite the ever-increasing complexity of the energy business, it is still one place, oilmen say, where hard work and initiative can mean as much as a college degree.

"If a kid comes in here with a high school education, shows some ability and is willing to work — and that 'willing to work' is the most important part — he can work up to rig manager (making $30,000 to $40,000) in three to five years," said Robert C. Parks of Zapata Inc., manager of the offshore rig leased by Tenecco, and an Oil Patch U. graduate himself.

"Of course, he's got to be with a good company, and that company might be different for different people. But it happens all the time."

Zapata, he said, eventually will hire about 40 percent of its 100-man drill crew from the Rhode Island area "but we'll have to start them at the bottom and train them." The bottom, he said, is a salary of about $18,000 a year for work shifts of 21 days on and 21 days off the Baltimore Canyon rigs.

Offshore drilling, of course, is hard, dirty and dangerous work. Parks said no one has yet been killed while drilling on the Zapata Uglad, the huge, self-powered offshore platform leased by Tenecco for its first Baltimore Canyon well.

Contracts favored by union

DENVER (AP) — Contract offers from eight more oil companies have won tentative approval from the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers International Union, the union says.

More than half of the nation's 60,000 union refinery workers are covered by contracts with 17 companies that union leaders have approved, spokesman Jerry Archuleta said Tuesday.

Offers approved Tuesday were made by Shell, Rock Island, Cities Service, Charter Oil, Ashland, Amdel, Total Petroleum Inc. and Union Oil of California. OCAW President A.F. Grosprion said they followed the pattern set by Gulf Oil Corp. last Thursday.

OCAW's tentative agreement with Gulf calls for a wage increase of 73 cents an hour the first year of a two-year contract, and a 5 percent pay boost the second year, with a wage reopener clause the second year.

The 73-cent increase amounts to about an 8 percent boost for Gulf workers. Oil workers currently earn an average of $8.82 an hour.

The Gulf settlement tentatively has been approved by the Carter administration, which seeks a voluntary 7 percent annual limit on wage and fringe-benefit increases over the life of a contract.

Archuleta said the union still hasn't received acceptable offers from such major oil companies as Mobil, Phillips, Exxon and Chevron (Standard Oil of California).

Ratification votes were scheduled at the local level on the approved contracts, but in some cases voting has been delayed pending resolution of local issues.

The national OCAW contract expired Jan. 7.

Carter asks business leaders to conserve

By TOM RAUM WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration is asking some 1,500 state and local officials and U.S. business leaders to take immediate steps to conserve energy in response to the cutoff of oil from Iran.

If the voluntary program doesn't work and if Iranian production is not restored soon, more stringent steps may be needed to curb the nation's appetite for imported oil, say Energy Department officials.

Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger was going before the Senate Energy Committee today to outline steps the administration is taking to deal with the Iranian situation.

The current unrest in Iran has resulted in a complete halt in oil exports from that nation — exports that had been running at around 6 million barrels a day. Of that, the United States had been getting about 900,000 barrels a day, or about 5 percent of its total consumption.

Schlesinger aide Jim Bishop said letters from Schlesinger are being mailed to "more than 1,500 governors, business leaders, mayors and county officials."

"The letters urge them to use their leadership to encourage further voluntary energy conservation in response to the cutoff of oil exports from Iran."

Governors are being asked to more strictly enforce the 55 mph speed limit and urged to turn the heat down in state-owned buildings, Bishop said.

"If these things are done, the Iranian cutoff need not require more stringent methods later," the Schlesinger aide said.

"In the business and industrial sectors, the request is that leaders take additional steps to encourage their employees to conserve energy," he added.

"If these things are done, the Iranian cutoff need not require more stringent methods later," the Schlesinger aide said.

The administration has prepared a backup gasoline rationing plan for use in times of severe petroleum shortages, but officials stress that this would be tried only as a last resort.

However, energy officials say that if Iranian production is not restored by this spring, it could mean serious gasoline shortages during the summer driving season and depletion of fuel stockpiles.

Meanwhile, the so-called "phase two" of President Carter's multifaceted energy plan is to be sent to Congress later this year. It will include a range of proposed government incentives — including tax breaks, grants and loan guarantees — to encourage increased domestic energy production, especially from unconventional sources of power such as solar and geothermal energy.

On a related matter, administration officials say the recent 14.5 percent price increase voted by oil-exporting nations and the Iranian unrest has prompted them to hold up plans to urge Congress to lift price controls from gasoline and domestically produced crude oil.

WHY BUY A CONDOMINIUM?

Condominiums afford quality living in prime locations. They allow the owner all the financial and tax advantages of owning a home without the headaches.
