The price is not right...

HOW DOES 75 cents for one orange sound? Peaches at $1 per? Melons at $8 and up? Steaks at $10 a pound and up? If this sounds like the nightmarish shape of things to come in the American inflationary spiral, hopefully it's not.

It is, however, the existing price structure in Japanese supermarkets.

It represents a problem in personal finances only incidentally for Americans (with their deflated dollars). In yen equivalents, these prices also must be paid by Japanese homemakers who, although the national economy may be bloated with wealth, are generally no more flush individually than their counterparts in other industrial democracies.

There is at least a partial solution at hand to Japan's super-inflated food prices, i.e., increase imports of American agricultural products.

THE JAPANESE are not buying, however, at least in the quantities desired by U.S. trade negotiators.

They continue politely but firmly to reject arguments for the lowering of long-standing barriers against agricultural imports which would have a moderating effect on both domestic food prices and the U.S. trade deficit.

The reason, in a word, is protectionism. If Japan's export-obsessed industries are zealously shielded from foreign competition in the home market—and they most definitely are—its agriculture is even more so. It is a situation which would appear to contradict the geographic and economic facts of the country.

Japanese numbering half the U.S. population are crowded into an area smaller than the state of Montana. Only 16 percent of their land is arable, which works out to about one-tenth of a productive area per Japanese. Homegrown foodstuffs are thus a precious and high-priced commodity.

LOGIC WOULD appear to dictate that Japan be a major food importer, paying the bill with proceeds from its massive industrial exports.

But farming in Japan, as in other industrial nations, still makes for potent politics.

Successive governments during the post-war decades in which Japan built itself into an industrial powerhouse have found it prudent to shelter domestic food producers, high-cost and less efficient though they may be.

It's also possible that giving the public a taste of foreign comestibles at decent prices could unleash a demand difficult to control.

There is no doubt as to the popularity of U.S. products in the Japanese market. Recent shipments of Pacific Northwest cherries, for example, sold out at prices which would have shocked American shoppers, and the Japanese would have taken much more if entry had been allowed.

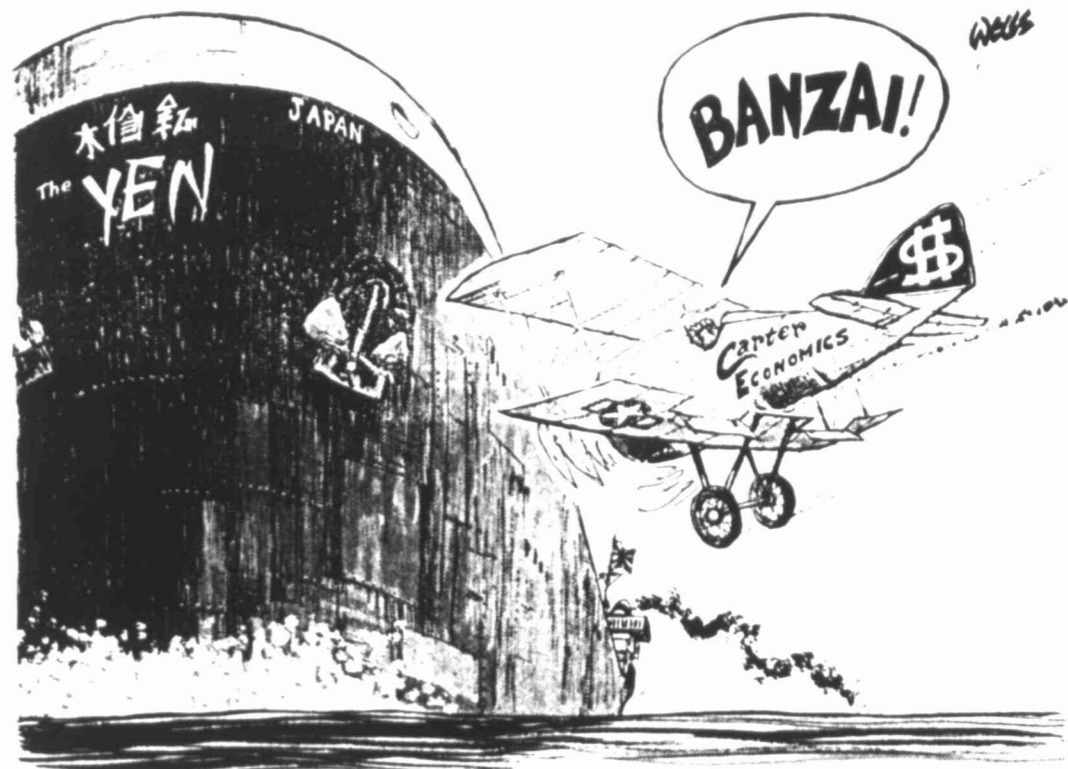

Which it was not.

TOKYO LIMITS food imports by an elaborate combination of quotas, distribution formalities involving a succession of middlemen and price markups.

A bushel of U.S. wheat more than doubles in price as soon as it is unloaded in Japan.

Despite the barriers, Japan has long been a leading market for U.S. agriculture. Sales in 1977 came to $3.8 billion and should hit $4 billion this year.

It could be much more. The consuming Japanese public is willing, but official Japan still is not buying.

Catalog gives consumers advice

lubbock consumer update

For those of you who need advice in financial matters, the federal government's General Services Administration recently came out with its quarterly edition of The Consumer Information Catalog.

The catalog lists more than 200 federal publications giving financial tips on automobiles, consumer protection, child care, health, food and nutrition, gardening, housing, energy conservation and employment.

Persons wanting to acquire the catalog and order the publications recommended by it should contact Consumer Information Center, Pueblo, Colo. 81009.

THE FOLLOWING are some of the publications referred to in the catalog.

In the area of automobiles, there is the four-page, free booklet entitled Automotive Rust—Its Causes and Prevention. The Backyard Mechanic, costing $1.25, illustrates instructions on how to inspect your car for repairs, change the oil, tune up, lubricate, and maintain the transmission, disc brakes, radiator, emission control devices, battery and automatic choke.

The free, three-page booklet entitled Battery Hazards gives tips on proper jump starting. Common Sense in Buying a New Car, also free, tells how to compare prices, dealer service and warranties, inspect and test drive before you buy, avoid new car problems and deal with problems that may arise.

For those who want to cut their gas consumption, there is the free Gas Mileage Guide, which excludes most California-certified vehicles. However, there also is the Gas Mileage Guide for 1978 California Cars, also free.

For 60 cents, there is the Self-Service Gas Up and Go, which has eight pages on how to pump gas, check the oil, water, and other fluids.

FOR PARENTS of young children, there is Beautiful Junk, 40 cents, which gives ideas for creating free and inexpensive play equipment and suggestions for locating material.

Young Children and Accidents in the Home costs 65 cents and tells how to prevent your child from falls, animal bites, suffocation, poisoning, bites, etc., and includes detachable first aid chart.

In the area of consumer protection, there is the pamphlet entitled Can You Really Strike it Rich in the Government and Gas Lottery. The publication is free and discusses the government lottery to award leases on federally owned land that may hold oil or gas.

The free, four-page booklet, Consumer Guide for Older People, gives guidance on how to protect against common frauds and swindles.

For a yearly subscription fee of $6, a newsletter entitled Consumer News will come to you twice a month, reporting on federal consumer actions, programs and new publications. Consumer Register, a regular supplement, lists proposed government rulings and tells consumers how to comment on these proposals.

CONSUMERS Together: A Guide to Consumer Action, free, is a comprehensive guide to build consumer competence, including sections on solving consumer problems, organizing groups and training for careers in the consumer field.

The free copy of the Equal Credit Op- portunity Act will tell you what your rights to credit are and what to do if you've been denied credit on the basis of sex, marital status, race, color, religion, national origin or age.

The free copy of the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act tells what debt collectors can and cannot do under the 1978 law.

Ten dollars will buy you an annual, 10-issue subscription of FDA Consumer. It gives recent developments in the regulation of foods, drugs and cosmetics by the Food and Drug Administration.

Federal Consumer Services is a free publication on what federal offices to contact for help with various consumer problems, including federal toll-free telephone numbers.

INVESTIGATE Before You Invest is a free list of precautions to take before buying stocks or other securities.

Other self-descriptive titles for free publications are Investigating in Oil, Gas and Coal, Shopping by Mail, You're Protected, Truth in Leasing, Warranties and Your Neighborhood Consumer Resource—The Public Library.

Traffic Update: new markings

(Editor's note: The following article is presented by the Lubbock Citizens Traffic Commission in cooperation with Update to help keep local motorists better informed on traffic-related matters.)

RADAR REPORT Drive within posted speed limits and you may avoid an accident. You also will avoid being spotted by the Lubbock Police Department Radar Units at the 2100 block of 71st Street and the 4200 block of Avenue H. School zones and other selected locations also will be under radar surveillance.

Traffic should move more efficiently at the intersection of 19th Street and the Brownfield Highway, now that construction is completed. The new lane markings have been confusing to some, however. The Texas Department of Highways and Public Transportation is in the process of erecting large overhead signs 1,000 feet in advance of the intersection to direct eastbound traffic into the proper lane.

Motorists eastbound in the outside lane of either 19th Street or the Brownfield Highway must continue east on 19th Street. The center lanes on both thoroughfares are optional. Drivers either may continue east on 19th, or they may enter the Tech Freeway.

The lanes are already marked and there are signs near the intersections directing motorists.

Drivers are urged to plan ahead so they will be in the proper lane when they reach the intersection.

Thirteen Lubbock high school and junior high students have been named Teens of the Month for September by principals of their respective schools.

James Berry, representing Alderson Junior High, is the 13-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Berry of 513 E. Kent Ave. An eighth grader, James is an active member of the Skyline 4-H Club, honor society and an avid tennis player.

Randy Crimmins, 14-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Walt Crimmins of 5423 16th St., is active in football, basketball and track. He is a ninth grader at Mackenzie Junior High.

Atkins Junior High ninth grader Gay Davis has been on the school's honor roll for the past three years. A member of the Future Homemakers of America, she is active in volleyball, basketball and track. Gay is the 14-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bill C. Davis of 2702 58th St.

Cathy Gaschen, Monterey High School head cheerleader, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John E. Gaschen of 6606 Norwood. The 17-year-old senior is a member of the Catholic Youth Organization, Fellowship of Christian Athletes, Morning Watch, Future Homemakers of America and the Monterey Student Council.

Representing Estacado High School is senior Winston Gipson, 17-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Gipson of 2412 E. 9th St. President of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes, he is also a member of the varsity football squad.

Daryl Dewayne Greene, 17-year-old son of Mrs. Autry Greene of 1709 E. 29th St., represents Dunbar-Struggs High School. As a senior, he was named to Who's Who among American High School Students, a high school American Athlete and is annual photography editor and a member of the Dunbar football team.

Thirteen-year-old Shaun Hoffman is a ninth grader at O.L. Slaton Junior High. A cheerleader, she is also active on the tennis team, a member of the honor roll and vice president of the Future Homemakers of America. Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. Bill Hoffman.

Ernest Martinez, 14-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Martinez of 3305 88th St., is president of Matthews Junior High's student council. The ninth grader also plays center for the school's football team.

Frankie Martinez, 14, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. Martinez of 4821 38th St., represents Wilson Junior High as Teen of the Month.

The ninth grader won honors last year as best basketball player and was also one of last year's teens of the month.

Ninth grader Chuck Rodgers, 14-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert S. Rodgers of 3618 47th St., is president of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes at J.T. Hutchinson Junior High. He is a member of the tennis and basketball teams.

Becky Smith, 16-year-old Coronado High School junior, is vice president of the Spanish Club, treasurer of the student council, a member of the pep club and of Filos Tri-Hi-Y. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joe T. Smith of 4606 11th St.

Sixteen-year-old Becky Teague, a junior at Lubbock High, is treasurer of the student body, volleyball team manager and a member of the National Honor Society. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Odom of 3614 29th St.

Representing Evans Junior High is Jan Tussy, 14-year-old daughter of Mrs. Glenda Tussy of 4409 60th St. A ninth grader, she is head cheerleader, a member of the National Junior Honor Society, Future Homemakers of America and the Fellowship of Christian Athletes.

Don Conner: memorialist

By Kim Cobb
Update Staff Writer

takes pictures of those he's proudest of.

Everything Don Conner does is associated with the far end of life.

When people ask what he does for a living, he euphemistically calls himself a memorialist.

"When you say 'memorialist' people say 'What's that?' and you have to explain that you make tombstones," he said sheepishly.

His profession sometimes makes people uncomfortable, he said, echoing a claim often made by morticians.

"Once in a while you'll get depressed," Conner admitted. "The people used to get to me. They'd come in and they'd cry."

But they say you can get used to anything, if you have to. And Conner genuinely likes his work.

"If you've ever worked with your hands you'd like this," according to Conner. "The hard part is digging a hole in the cemetery and pouring cement for the base."

SLATON MONUMENT WORK is a typical family business. Conner does most of the heavy work, including lifting and sandblasting while his wife, Linda, does lettering and decorative work.

Though it seems an odd trade to wander into, Conner bought the business in 1973 on a hunch.

"I had worked for the Santa Fe Railroad for 14 years and was about to get bumped," he said. "I saw this little bitty add in the A-J for a business."

"This farmer called and said, 'Now don't laugh, but, how would you like to own a monument business?'" Conner said.

"When I bought the place I'd never made one," he said, gesturing to the monuments and markers cluttering his spacious workshop. "And a lot of people think they are poured, they don't realize the stone is dug out of the ground."

Tombstones and markers are seldom carved by hand anymore. Conner uses a machine for lettering and an automatic sandblaster. The old image of a man bent over a heavy stone with a chisel is no longer accurate, he said.

He gets some unusual requests for markers, he said, and

HIS FAVORITE is a marker he made for a young man who loved his creature comforts. The monument has two cans of beer, a package of cigarettes and a Saint Mary on each side.

"Who's to say you have to have flowers on a monument? They (the family) put cigarettes and poured beer on that grave until the monument was set."

Most craftsmen have their dream projects and Conner is no exception. He admires the markers dotting the Oklahoma countryside, particularly one which reaches a height of eight feet.

"We don't have anything close to it here," Conner said. He and his wife keep their eyes open for interesting markers when they travel.

"Farmers look at cotton crops and wherever we go, we look at cemeteries," he said. He shook his head in agreement at the mention of the standing tombs in New Orleans. It seems he and his wife have wanted to see them for years.

IT'S A LUCRATIVE business. An average tombstone will cost around $700, Conner said, others costing as much as $4,000. Size and quarry problems for types of stone determine the price, he said.

"God's been good enough to let some of us know we need to get some things done," he said of people who come in to order their own markers when they approach death. He spoke with admiration of a man who came with his wife when nearing his own death and pulled Conner aside for a business conference.

"Now let's talk business. How much is this going to cost me?" the man said, according to Conner.

Conner doesn't worry about the decline of upright markers. Though perpetual care cemeteries have been in vogue for several years, calling for small flat markers, Conner thinks Texans prefer upright memorials.

"In this part of the country there will always be upright monument," he said. And the cemetery visible from the front door of his business only seems to support his opinion.

views and opinions

By Lynn Hohertz
Update Staff Writer

Mid-air collisions appear to be on the upswing and the nation is becoming increasingly aware of these tragedies. The most recent tragedy involved the death of 150 persons when a small plane and airliner collided and crashed into a residential area in San Diego, Calif.

In view of this tragedy, Update asked Lubbock shoppers if their attitudes toward flying had changed.

Sharlene Borland said, "I don't fly often but I think I would take precautions as to where I flew. I would prefer to fly into a small airport, depending on the number of private planes flying in and out. There are so many private planes that aren't equipped with radar that are flying into larger airports."

"I think it's a good way to travel — it's faster," said Vista Autry, an employee of Texas Instruments. "I think the bigger airplanes are more dangerous. I have never flown but the rest of my family has. I would probably have some reservations."

U.O. Hobgood of Abernathy said, "I fly pretty often and it never bothers me. I feel like they (the airlines, pilots) know what they're doing."

Mrs. Neysa Lively said, "Well, the recent crash was so terrible, I have to admit it was frightening to listen to. It was so tragic and I felt for all the ones who lost someone. But, when you think about it, we get in a car every day and I think we take more chances on the highway than in the air. I've flown many times and I just love it."

Jane Arbuthnot, a Texas Tech University student from San Antonio, said, "The recent crash hasn't changed my attitude about flying. I usually fly when I go home."

"I don't fly at all," said Lionel Casallero, an employee of Furr's grocery store. Casallero said he didn't fly because of the money, no where to go and that he didn't feel safe. "I would rather travel by car," he said.

A Place in Space

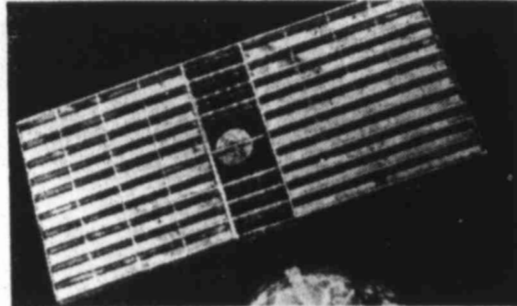

The Dream of a Space Station

by Dr. Lynn Bondurant

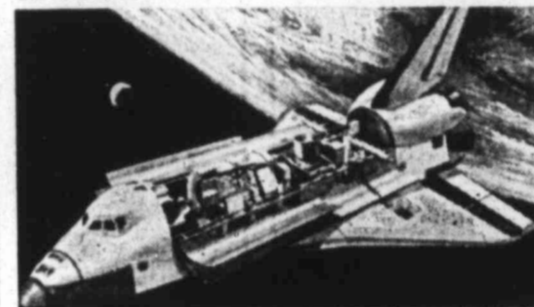

An artist's drawing of a 21st-century space colony. The cylinders are where people will work and live. The dish-like cups in the two circles are where the food will be grown. Mirror wings will control sunlight. Power stations are at the top of each cylinder.

Someday millions of people might be living in space stations orbiting the earth. Before this can happen, several things must be done.

Solar satellite power station

1. Power satellites will have to be built that can change sunlight into electricity. At first this energy will be used in the construction of the space station. Later, lunar bases will be powered by these satellites.

It will be the 1980s before space shuttles are in use.

2. Improvements in space transportation must be made. The Space Shuttle is the first step.

Living quarters for a mining town on the moon.

3. Bases on the moon will have to be built. From here, lunar soil will be mined and launched into space to be taken to the space station. It is out of the lunar soil that many of the things necessary for the construction of the space station will be made.

Raising Goldfish in a Space Station

by Dr. Lynn Bondurant

Near the center of a space station, things will feel weightless. Raising goldfish in this weightless place will be fun. You will not have to keep your fish in water.

On Earth when you take a fish out of water, its gills (the lungs of a fish) collapse due to gravity. Because of this, the fish cannot breathe in the air and it dies. But in the weightless world, the gills will not collapse. You can keep your fish in a tank or room that has a lot of moisture in its air.

Your goldfish will have to learn to swim in this weightless world. At first your goldfish will have to get used to weightlessness. Then it can swim like its cousins, other goldfish on Earth.

Below is a make-believe letter from a boy who might be living in a space station.

Space Station Neil Armstrong
July 22, 2027

Hello Friends on Earth.

I am on board the space station "Neil Armstrong." I am living in here with my mom, dad, and sister. We had to leave Lucky, our German Shepherd, on Earth. We couldn't train him to live in space.

The space station rotates very slowly. This turning motion makes us feel like we have weight. If the space station did not rotate, we would feel weightless and we would float around in here.

All our food is grown here. The vegetables grow really well, especially the corn. We cook our food in a microwave oven.

Our apartment is very comfortable. But, since it is smaller than our home on Earth, we go to the recreation center to exercise and play games.

We will be coming back to Earth in six months for a short visit. The doctors will check our health. If we pass the physical, we can return to space.

Your far-out friend,
Kenny

Dr. Lynn Bondurant is former education officer for the National Air and Space Museum, Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D.C. He is a member of The Mini Page Advisory Board. He is now curriculum coordinator for the Coldwater Community Schools in Coldwater, Michigan.

The Shuttle . . . A Step to Space Stations?

The Orbiter will carry a crew of seven and the "payload" of whatever is to be taken into orbit. The missions can last from 7 to 30 days.

Next year, the U.S. will test the Space Shuttle. The Shuttle will make routine space trips by 1985. Unlike other space flights, the Shuttle can blast off, land and then be used again. Highly trained astronauts do not have to go. After a little training, almost anyone can make the trip. The purposes of the Space Shuttle program are:

How the Shuttle Works:

1. It takes off vertically.
2. The booster rockets separate.
3. Parachutes drop them into the ocean.
4. The Orbiter keeps flying.
5. The external tank separates and falls into the ocean.
6. The Orbiter carries out its mission.
7. The Orbiter begins to land.
8. It lands on a runway just like a plane.

Parents lay the groundwork for kids' success in school

- 11. Know exactly what and how your children are doing in school. Don't wait to be contacted by the school. Find out from the teacher how you can help your children at home.
- 12. Make family mealtimes meaningful. Dinner is a good time for talking together, sharing events and discussing problems. Such discussions develop your children's self-confidence and encourage them to speak up in class.
- 13. Make television your servant, not your master. Help children choose appropriate programs, watch TV together and discuss what you've seen.
- 14. Take your children places. Visits to museums, airports, farms, supermarkets, pet shops and the like broaden their experiences. Such activities are vital in getting children ready for reading.

- 15. Don't just read to your children, but with your children. Don't get irritated if they interrupt while you are reading aloud. Children's comments mean they are making a connection between new material and something they already know — the essence of the learning process.
- 16. Help your children read. If they are beginning readers, tell them the words they can't yet read so that they can move along and maintain interest. Later you can assist them in figuring out the harder words for themselves.
- 17. Have your children read to you. Encourage them to read a story to themselves before they read it to you. This practice will help give them confidence and a greater understanding of what they have read.
- 18. Listen as your children tell you what they have read. It's extremely important to show you are interested.

- 19. Provide a wide variety of reading materials in your home. Children learn by example, so let them see that reading is a source of information and pleasure. It's much more effective for your children to see you reading often than it is for you to tell them to read.
- 20. Give your children books as birthday or holiday gifts. Children who have books they can call their very own are motivated toward reading.
- 21. Tempt your children with paperbacks. For many children, paperbacks are much more attractive than hardcover books. And they are inexpensive.
- 22. Intrigue your children with their own magazine subscriptions. Few youngsters can resist the appeal of the arrival in the mail of their own magazine. Even reluctant readers find themselves hooked on reading — eagerly awaiting the next issue of their magazine.

dropping at all. Airborne Freight Corporation and Rollins each were expected to rise by 29 percent and drop by about 12 percent. Leaseway Transportation had both downside risks of under 10 percent while rising by 25 percent. All of the remaining stocks and in fact all service industry stocks were expected to rise by more than they would fall. This is in contrast with the last three industries we have surveyed. In summary, analysts said that many of the companies surveyed had low downside risk. American District Telegraph had no downside risk. Flexi Van and National Service Industries had a downside risk of only 5 percent each, and U.S. Leasing International a downside risk of only 7 percent.

Start onions from seed

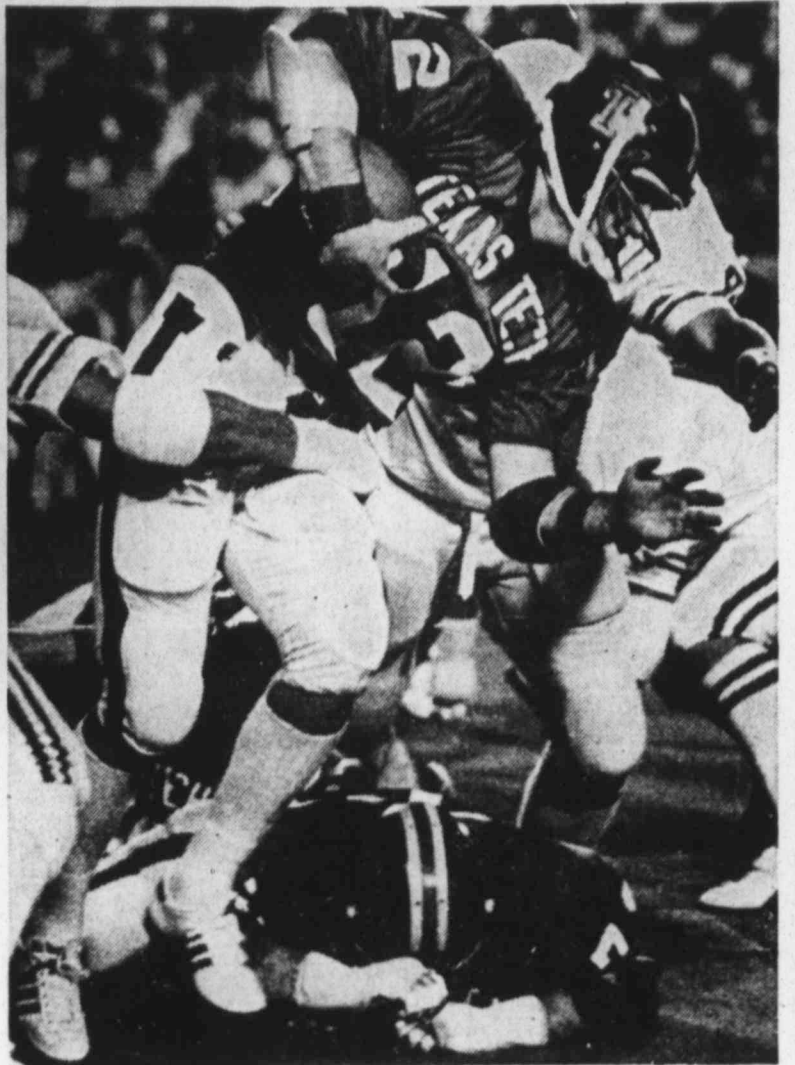

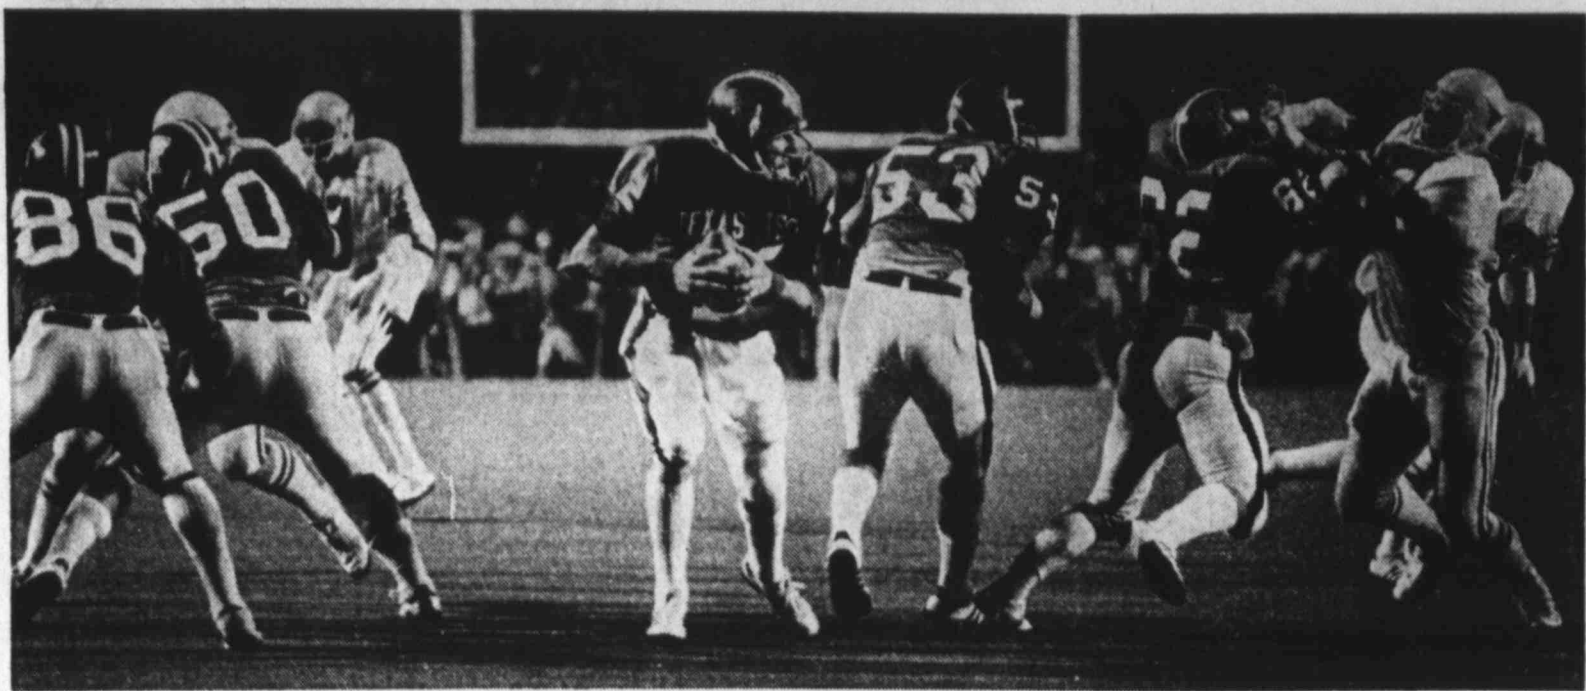

Onions are a major crop in the South, but many home gardeners don't raise them successfully. Often, it is because they select the wrong varieties, especially with the bulbing type onions. To successfully grow bulbing onions in the South it's necessary to plant short-day varieties. Onions respond both to the length of day and to temperature. Some bulbing onion varieties that respond to short days are Bermuda, "Early Grano," "Texas Grano 301," "Excel," "Granex," "White Granex," and "Eclipse." Short-day onions that produce red bulbs include "Tropicana," and "Burgundy." Because plants or sets of these bulbing types are not readily available during the January planting season, it's best to start these plants from seed in September, October or November. Seed can be sown rather thickly on a prepared bed, and the onions will grow quite well while young even though crowded. Be sure not to plant the seed deeply. Sprinkle seed over the surface of the soil and lightly rake it in. As the plants reach pencil thickness in January they can then be thinned out and transplanted to other areas in rows 12-14 inches apart, with plants 2-3 inches apart in the row. Leesa Nickels Miss Nickels joins coronation party

TYLER (Special) — Leesa Renee Nickels of Lubbock will participate as a royal representative in the coronation of Texas Rose Festival Queen Ginger Fair in Tyler, Oct. 11-15. Miss Nickels, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald W. Nickels of Lubbock, is a member of Pi Beta Phi sorority and a finance major at Texas Tech University. The four days of festivities feature a Rose Show in which thousands of blooms are displayed, a parade, tours of a selected group of rose fields, Queen's Tea, art shows, dances and many other festivities.

Aggies next target for Raiders

By Don Henry

Update Executive Sports Editor

Down around College Station, everything from street signs to storefronts are painted maroon. It is the unofficial official color of Bryan-College Station.

And the way the Aggies have been smearing maroon paint on their opponents, the area of color emphasis is spreading.

Texas Tech heads southeastward Saturday, well stocked with paint-remover, as it takes on the Aggies in another Southwest Conference contest.

Gametime is 1:30 p.m. and a sellout crowd is expected to be on hand.

The Aggies are unbeaten, having crushed Kansas, Memphis State and Boston College in preparing for the SWC opener. And the Aggies have been awesome in their domination of the three nonconference foes.

Last week, halfback Curtis Dickey streaked 65 yards on the first play from scrimmage as the Aggies rolled over Memphis State 58-0 last Saturday afternoon.

THE AGGIES ARE RANKED seventh in the nation, just one notch behind the Texas Longhorns, the team which dropped the Raiders 24-7 Saturday night to open the SWC season in Lubbock.

Tech, with that loss to the Longhorns, is 1-2 for the year, having beaten Arizona after an opening loss to Southern California.

But, despite the higher ranking, some observers feel the Aggies are playing the best football in the league at this time. And the national and SWC statistics point in that direction.

The Aggies lead the SWC in rushing offense, total offense and all three defensive categories, rushing, passing and total.

And, nationally, their total of 385.7 yards per game on the ground is second in the country, to Oklahoma.

In total offense, the sum of 474.3 is third best in the country, behind Oklahoma and Bowling Green.

THE RUSHING LEADER, individually, in the SWC is the Aggies' halfback Dickey, who has picked up 144.3 yards per contest. He does it on speed and power, as he has been clocked in the 100-yard dash in 9.2 and won the SWC sprint championship two years ago. He won the 60-yard indoor title and was second in the NCAA championships last summer.

But, his 205-pound frame adds the power factor, as he rushed for 978 yards last season. He had 231 more steps as a pass receiver and returned kickoffs for 302 yards.

The Raiders are coming off a 24-7 loss to Texas, when their own mistakes were as deadly as the Texas offense. "We need to cut down on our turnovers and other mistakes," commented Tech coach Rex Dockery.

"Texas A&M has a great team, and they are playing well as a team right now. It will take a great effort with no mistakes for us to win the game."

"CURTIS (DICKEY) AND Mike Mosley (the Aggie quarterback) are two of the conference's best offensive players and the Aggie defense has great team speed."

"They have a lot of explosiveness offensively and a very aggressive defense. There is an attacking defense."

The Raiders will be going with an offense built around freshman quarterback Ron Reeves. Despite throwing a pair of interceptions, Reeves threw a touchdown pass to wide receiver Godfrey Turner for the only Raider score.

On another occasion, Turner worked loose and was in the clear, only to see Reeves' pass sail too long.

The Raiders were plagued by fumbles (four lost), interceptions (two) and a series of penalties which came at very inopportune times for them.

THE RAIDERS WILL START with James Hadnot, the 230-pound converted tight end, at fullback, with the tailback spot to be rotated among a series of backs. Freshman Phil Weatherall started against Arizona and Texas, but Don Earl, a sophomore from Stamford, and Kenneth James, the freshman from Dunbar, have been playing.

The game could come down to a kicking affair, with the Aggies boasting Tony Franklin, one of the nation's greatest field-goal-kickers. And Tech will counter with Bill Adams, who has booted five of five goals this year.

TECH WILL HAVE MAURY Buford punting. The freshman had a 50-yard punting average against Texas, and had one punt sail 65 yards. He is now the SWC leader for the season, with a 45.7-yard average.

After Saturday's game, the Raiders will head for Albuquerque, N.M., on Oct. 14 to play the University of New Mexico. On Oct. 21, Tech will play at Rice, and with an open date thrown in, will not play at home again until Nov. 4 (Baylor).

college notes

Lubbock high school seniors Mary Mills, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Mills of 4510 13th St., and Joe Gregg, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joe N. Gregg of 4803 12th St., have been chosen as President's Scholars at Texas A&M University. The honor is bestowed annually to approximately 40 Texas high school seniors with outstanding scholastic, civic and leadership abilities. It includes a $6,000 four-year scholarship upon enrollment at Texas A&M.

Dennis R. Askins of Lubbock was among summer degree candidates at North Texas State University in Denton. Askins received a bachelor of arts degree in biology. He graduated summa cum laude.

Gary W. Norris of Lubbock is enrolled as a student at York College, York, Neb. The son of Mrs. Ola Mae Norris of 505 Hub Homes is a physical education major transfer from Lubbock Christian College.

A funny thing happened on the way to the cellar

By Bob Bojackson
Update Sports Writer

It's amazing how one victory can change a coach's football outlook.

Just one week ago, the Lubbock High Westerners had an 0-3 record, and Coach Rusty Talbot wasn't having any fun watching his team's mistakes on film.

But then a funny thing happened to the Westerners on the way to the cellar among the city schools — the Dunbar Panthers.

Last week, the Westerners edged the Panthers 7-6 and Talbot had a laugh or two while watching the action on the screen.

"It's a tremendous psychological lift for not only our coaches, but players as well," said an excited Talbot. "I wouldn't say that we were completely down. But if we didn't post a victory before the start of the district race, it would have been awfully hard for our kids to keep their confidence."

AND THOUGH TALBOT is all smiles this week, he still is concerned about his team's mental mistakes.

"We had some other opportunities to score," Talbot said.

"But penalties killed us. We've been trying to correct the problem this week by having our offensive linemen concentrate more."

The Westerners will try and keep their winning string going this week when they host Odessa Ector tonight at Lowrey Field. Kickoff is slated for 7:30 p.m.

IN OTHER GAMES INVOLVING city schools, Coronado will visit Amarillo Palo Duro, Monterey will travel to Hobbs, N.M., Christ the King will be at Klondike and Lubbock Christian will host Loraine.

For the first time since the season got under way, Lubbock High School will go into a contest without any new injuries.

"I don't know if a team will get less injuries if it plays harder football or not," said Talbot. "But I do know one thing. The bruises heal a lot faster when you win."

Talbot expressed praise for his defense during the Panther tilt.

"What I was impressed with is the way our players didn't lose the momentum after their long touchdown march," Talbot said.

OFFENSIVELY, THERE WAS the improved play of quarterback Ricky Moreno and fullback David Rush.

"That was one of Ricky's best efforts," said Talbot. "I think the pressure of losing his job by the strong challenge Larry Walker was making, really made Ricky go out and perform well."

And in regard to fullback Rush, Talbot said, "David ran harder Friday than he has in the past. But I think his improvement stems from getting used to the position." The Panther game was only the second time Rush has played fullback for Lubbock High.

Odessa Ector is expected to bring to town the kind of team the Westerners have been facing all year — speed and quickness.

"We've been facing that all season," said Talbot. "So I guess you can say we know what's coming. And what's coming, still scares us to death."

Getting support

Lubbock High running back Rudy Barrera gives a teammate some support during a non-district football game against the Dunbar Panthers in Lowrey Field Friday night. The Westerners nipped the Panthers 7-6 to record the first victory of the season.

junior editor's quiz

Ted Williams

BASEBALL STAR TED WILLIAMS WAS ONE OF THE FINEST HITTERS THE GAME HAS KNOWN. HE WAS ELECTED TO BASEBALL'S HALL OF FAME IN 1966.

QUESTION: Who is Ted Williams?
ANSWER: Ted Williams, a baseball star, was one of the finest hitters the game has ever known. Today, he is considered an expert fisherman and has won many fishing championships.
 A native Californian, Theodore Samuel Williams was born in San Diego in 1918. Williams' first two seasons, 1936 and 1937, in minor league baseball were not distinguished. However, his outstanding hitting ability emerged soon afterward and caught the attention of the Boston Red Sox, who brought him to the major leagues in 1939. It did not take long for Williams to achieve recognition as one of baseball's best hitters. He batted over .300 during his first two seasons and a remarkable .406 his third.
 Williams' excellent hitting ability did not come by accident. He was a keen student of the technique of hitting a baseball, and worked hard to perfect his skill.
 He spent his active major league career entirely with the Boston Red Sox. Before his retirement in 1960, Williams had put his name in baseball's record books many, many times. He is one of a handful to have hit over 500 home runs, and some observers believe that Williams might have been the first player to break Babe Ruth's lifetime home run record if he had not missed five seasons to serve in the Armed Forces.
 As a crowning touch to a superb career, Williams was elected to baseball's Hall of Fame in 1966.

Parakeets will make good pets

If you're thinking of buying a big, brilliantly colored parrot or an exotic cockatoo, like Fred on the "Baretta" TV show, forget it, says the current issue of Ranger Rick's Nature Magazine.

Most large parrots and cockatoos are not bred in this country but are captured in the wild. The National Wildlife Federation children's monthly reports. Many come from countries without adequate laws to protect endangered species and others are illegally smuggled into this country.

"Many wild parrots are in trouble," says Ranger Rick, because many tropical forests are being leveled, and "for every bird that makes it to a pet store, many others have died."

Instead of the large, imported birds, Ranger Rick suggests parakeets or lovebirds — which are members of the parrot family but are bred in the United States.

Most pet parakeets are budgies — short for budgerigar — a breed that came originally from Australia. Although they exist in this country mostly in zoos or as pets, parakeets live in the wild on every continent except Europe and Antarctica.

Lovebirds, on the other hand, live in the wild only in Africa and parts of Asia. They got their amorous sounding name, Ranger Rick explains, by habitually sitting together, gently preening each other, and appearing to enjoy each other's company.

Although both birds have feathers in shades of green, blue, yellow or white, it's easy to tell the difference between parakeets and lovebirds, according to the nature magazine.

Parakeets have slender bodies with long pointed tails, while lovebirds are stocky with short, rounded tails. Both have thick, hooked beaks and strong grasping feet with two toes in front and two behind. Their beaks are used as a "third foot" for climbing.

Eventually, pet parakeets may learn to copy human sounds or other noises, such as creaking doors, but they don't know the meaning of what they're saying.

washington update

By U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen

In 1971, in New York City, Joseph Holloway robbed at knife-point a 71-year-old banker and his wife. After he was arrested and jailed he confessed to another crime, a rape burglary.

On August 8, 1972, he was sent to prison for these crimes.

In 1975 Holloway was enrolled in a work-release program and in 1976 he was released from prison on parole. Within three months he committed four more armed robberies — two of them involving sexual abuse of his victims. Authorities also learned that during his time in the work-release program he had committed two other robberies.

TODAY, JOSEPH Holloway is back in jail but he'll be on the streets again in 1981.

This case describes the phrase "revolving door justice" far more vividly than any dictionary definition.

Unfortunately, it isn't unique. The advent of the computer has revealed our criminal justice system to be a severely flawed mechanism that merely recycles thousands of Holloways each month, from the streets to the jails then back again, with little effect on them or the crime rate.

But the computer has not only revealed the flaw, it may also have shown the way to help cope with this problem.

Prosecutors across the country have computerized record-keeping systems in recent years and studies of these records confirm what many law enforcement officials have long suspected: a large percentage of the crime in this country is committed by a relatively small percentage of criminals. One study indicates, in fact, that 25 percent of all series crimes are committed by only seven percent of the criminals.

SIGNIFICANTLY, the computer studies also have helped prosecutors identify precisely who these repeat offenders are, and to do it shortly after they are arrested.

Using the evidence they now have prosecutors are devoting more of their resources to efforts to convict this small group of repeat offenders, and lock them away from society.

Career Criminal Programs, supported by the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration, are now opening across the country. To date the programs have a 94 percent conviction rate, with an average sentence of 15.4 years.

District Attorneys in Texas have been at the fore of this movement. Career Criminal Programs are operating with substantial success in Houston, Dallas, San Antonio, Fort Worth, Austin, El Paso and other Texas cities.

During a recent 13-month period in Houston 499 dependents with over 1,600 prior convictions were sent to jail under the program. Over an 11-month period in Dallas 333 defendants with more than 1,900 prior convictions were jailed.

SINCE THE establishment of a Career Criminal Program in San Antonio a year ago the burglary rate has fallen by 19 percent and during the first seven months of this year the robbery rate was down by 17 percent.

I have been working in the Senate to foster the growth of these programs. In 1976 Congress approved my legislation to encourage prosecutors to establish them.

Earlier this year I proposed additional legislation, providing $100 million over a five year period to pay half the cost of establishing Career Criminal Programs. State or local governments would provide the other half of the cost.
