Nothing short of a shambles

IF IT PROVES anything, the record of the 95th Congress surely demonstrates the wisdom of the old adage that legislation, like sausage, is best viewed in its finished form.

The output of this particular Congress was nothing to write home about, especially if one regards the hash made of President Carter's energy program.

Targeted economic stimulus programs only knocked two points off the unemployment rate, while fiscal restraint pared a relatively modest $20 billion from the federal deficit.

The Social Security system was rescued at untold cost from its immediate crisis and the bite of higher payroll taxes wasn't softened much by corresponding reductions in income taxes.

CONGRESS APPROVED a precedent-shattering Middle East arms sale, for better or worse, lifted the arms embargo against Turkey and ratified the Panama Canal treaties, against the wishes of most everyone except a majority of Congressmen.

The same, unfortunately, can be said of the process used to address the nation's most pressing problems. In the Senate especially, that was nothing short of a shambles.

Time and again over the past two years, the "world's greatest deliberative body" tied itself into parliamentary knots that cut off forward progress for weeks on end.

"No one likes to speak ill of the dead," said nationally syndicated columnist Martha Angle and Robert Walters in assessing the damage done, "but the truth is that much of the procedural chaos was a direct legacy of the late Sen. James B. Allen, D-Ala., who mastered the arcane and intricate Senate rules better than anyone in recent history."

Allen, up to his death earlier this year, used previously overlooked procedural gimmicks to hogtie the Senate in parliamentary rope even after the traditional delaying tactic of the filibuster had theoretically been halted through cloture votes by 60 senators.

"WORSE STILL," opined Angle and Walters, "other senators with their own special axes to grind quickly emulated Allen's methods."

From Sen. James Abourezk, D-S.D., on the left, to Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, on the right, members with strong personal feelings about everything from natural gas deregulation to labor law reform tried and sometimes succeeded in keeping a majority of their colleagues from voting on legislation.

To a lesser degree, obstructionists in the House likewise wasted countless hours by repeated quorum calls, demands for roll call votes where none was really needed, and various other dilatory maneuvers. House leaders eventually prevailed, but the wheel-spinning was time-consuming.

Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd actually introduced a series of proposed rules changes back in February 1977, but made no serious attempt to press them once Allen and other senators who like the existing set-up threatened a major floor fight.

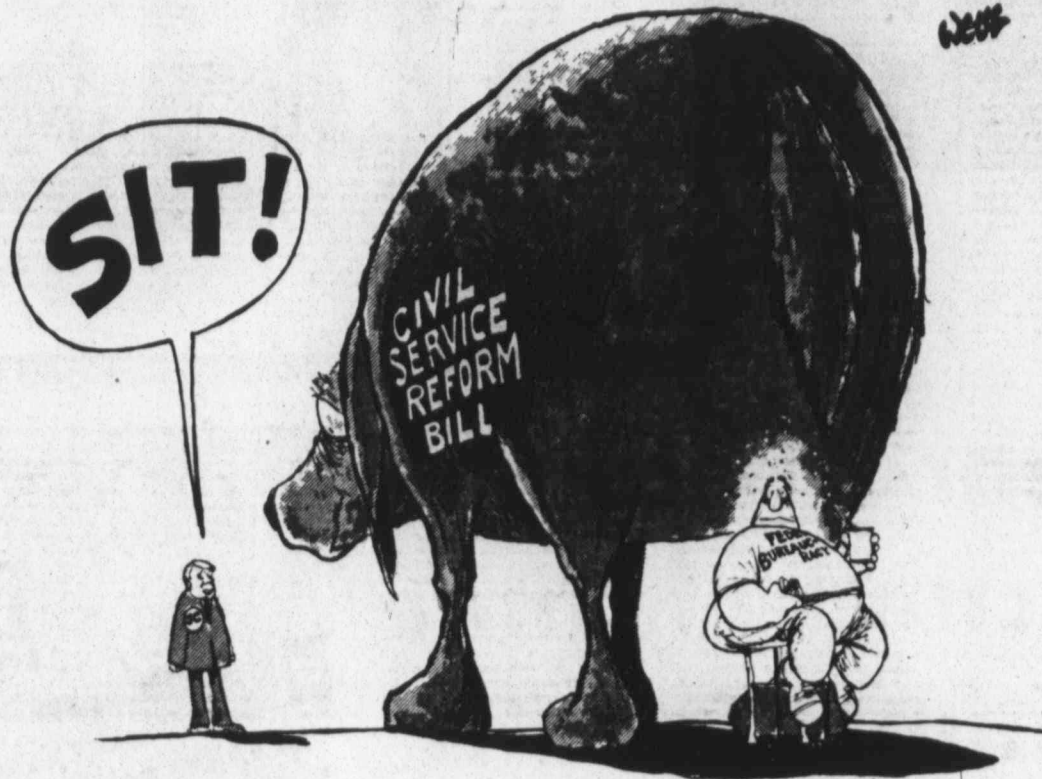

WELL, TO USE the sports expression, "wait until next year." Byrd has promised a full-scale assault on the tactics which plagued the Senate so often and delayed legislation of the most vital nature until the final hours.

House Speaker Tip O'Neill may offer his own, more limited, of course, rules reforms in the House.

Having taken note of the shambles in this session, it should also be noted that on occasion use of the filibuster and delaying tactics indeed do serve a purpose—including blocking, delaying or killing bad legislation.

Certainly it is no worse to employ these maneuvers to prevent ill-advised laws than to attempt to ease such laws through through slick parliamentary maneuvers such as those used to get the Equal Rights Amendment up for a vote, for instance.

Truly, the problem of legislating is no easy one. But, this Congress proved it can be improved upon.

Furniture refinishing tips given

By Tom Griess
Update Staff Writer

If the cool autumn air has inspired you with thoughts of refinishing that battered furniture around the house, the word from the experts is to go ahead, but proceed with caution. This endeavor is more than a job; it is an art requiring patience, sweat and attention to detail.

What makes the task especially demanding is first having to undo the past. Before thinking of new stains and finishes, one must strip the surfaces of old coloring and polish.

THERE ARE several schools of thought on how best to strip a piece of furniture, but three Lubbock furniture shop owners consulted agreed in stressing the importance of removing all the old finish.

M. Richardson, owner of the C&R Furniture Shop, recommended using a commercial paint remover on any type finish other than a water-based finish. Water-based finishes are usually only found with home antique kits, he said.

Maxine Martin, owner of the M&M Furniture Refinishing and Touch-Up Co., also advocated a commercial paint remover. Once the remover is applied to the surface "the key is to keep the surface wet," she said. This prevents the remover from hardening into the old finish, and in a few minutes the finish should begin to soften.

IF THE OLD finish is thick, Richardson suggested taking a broad knife or putty knife to remove most of it as it softens. When most of the finish has been stripped, then take a soft cloth or steel wool and wipe off the remainder, he added.

Avoid using steel brushes, which can scrape the surface, Richardson advised. G.L. Lamb, owner of G.L. Lamb Painting & Furniture Refinishing, prefers that the homeowner or amateur use a semi-paste paint remover for stripping. Liquid removers evaporate much more quickly than the semi-paste, and being flammable, can be dangerous in a poorly ventilated area, he said. Good ventilation also is important to avoid breathing excessive amounts of the fumes, Lamb noted.

WITH THE stripping process completed, another essential and often overlooked step — neutralization — must be taken. Neutralization of the remaining portion of paint remover in the surface is necessary to prevent a chemical reaction when the new stain and finish is applied.

The type of neutralizer to use depends upon the nature of the stripping agent. More specific advice can be obtained from professionals in the furniture business.

A WORD OF advice from Lamb: avoid water cleaners if possible because in neutralizing the wood they tend to raise the grain and leave spots.

Once the neutralizer has completely dried — follow the directions provided as a guide — the "elbow bending" begins.

Gouges and deep scratches on the surface of the furniture require wood filler, and the trick here, according to Mrs. Martin, is to "be sure and press the fill-lubbock consumer update

er down firmly into the wood because it has a tendency to shrink."

THE PIECE OF furniture is now ready for sanding. A choice of methods is available, hand or electric, but for those seeking a quality product the hand method is clearly superior.

Always sand with the grain regardless of the method used. Also sand in a straight-line direction, said Richardson, because a circular motion is apt to leave "fish-eyes," or small circular scratches, on the surface.

The electric belt sander is too powerful for furniture refinishing, both Richardson and Mrs. Martin agreed, and is more suited for commercial purposes.

Use of the vibrating sander should be restricted to hard woods to avoid the machine leaving marks on the surface, said Mrs. Martin. Richardson suggested using a sander with no less than 4,000 rpm. He suggested sandpaper coarser than 280 grit; coarser paper will leave markings on the surface.

BEFORE STAINING, the surface should be cleaned of any dirt. A fine cloth will not suffice to remove debris from fine cracks on the surface. Mrs. Martin recommended taking either a vacuum cleaner or a dry paint brush and carefully covering the surface.

There are various types of stains to choose from, among them, oil base, lacquer base, alcohol base and dye stains. The three furniture shop owners recommended the amateur use an oil base stain.

BOTH LAMB AND Richardson cited the petroleum-base wiping stain. Lamb explained it is slower to dry than many other types of stain and thus gives the person more of an opportunity to wipe away mistakes.

A particular color can be obtained by mixing two or more stains together, Richardson said. Once the mixing is completed, the stain need be applied to the surface only once or twice, he continued.

LACQUER BASE AND alcohol base stains dry very quickly. He cautioned against alcohol base stains for another reason: "If you make a mistake it is permanent because it penetrates so deep there is nothing that can pull it out."

Dye stains should be avoided, said Lamb, because they dry very quickly and are exceedingly difficult to remove from the surface.

WHICHEVER TYPE of stain is finally selected, remember that it must be compatible with the type of finish to be used. Lamb warned. For example, lacquer stains and varnish finishes are not compatible due their very different chemical compositions.

The staining done, now allow the surface to dry for the recommended time in a warm (room temperature) and dry room.

Choosing a finish is similar to choosing a stain. There are various types available, and the person must decide which one is best suited to the surface of his furniture.

Bear in mind that the finish must be compatible with the stain.

ASSUMING THE OIL wiping stain has been used, Lamb and Richardson recommended using a varnish finish.

Unlike a lacquer finish, which requires sophisticated equipment to spray the finish on the surface, varnish is easily brushed on, explained Richardson.

Two to three coats of varnish will usually suffice, he said. Lightly sand the surface with 400 grit sandpaper between coats. Note that the varnish coats should be given about eight hours to dry before sanding.

After the last coating of varnish has dried, Richardson recommended taking a piece of 400 grit sandpaper and wetting it and lightly sanding the surface to leave it smooth and dust-free. If dust is a particular problem during the application of the varnish, Mrs. Martin suggested using a tack cloth to remove the fine particles.

Mrs. Ann Spikes, a cook and nutritionist, has enough cookbooks to keep her busy in the kitchen. Currently, she is writing her own cookbook, based on recipes for the diet conscious.

Cook cuts calories, puts back eating fun

By Janice Jarvis
Update Staff Writer

Mrs. Ann Spikes is hooked on all kinds of cooking from Italian pasta to Japanese stir fry. But she's found a way to take some of the calories out and put some of the fun of eating back in.

Her secret to enjoying dishes of all countries is really a matter of limiting her favorite foods to small servings. Instead of making a meal of spaghetti, she has a small serving of pasta and a large salad. "The truth is there really is no such thing as a fattening food," she said. It's all a matter of how much of any food people eat.

MRS. SPIKES, WHO currently is writing a book on low calorie cooking, suggested that fattening ingredients can be cut from recipes while still retaining the flavor. "So many recipes use so much oil and sugar which could be cut from as much as 1/2 cup to one tablespoon," she noted. When dieting it's important to eat three meals a day, according to Mrs. Spikes. But breakfast can be something as simple as skim milk and a banana tossed in the blender.

LUNCH DOES NOT have to be cottage cheese to be considered a nutritional diet meal. A small sandwich can beat cottage cheese or a salad any day," she said. But to cut calories, the bun should be brushed with bouillon, rather than butter or mayonnaise.

Mrs. Spikes warned dieters that a chef salad is not always the dieter's delight. A chef salad loaded with meats and cheeses can add up to 800 calories without salad dressing, bread or crackers.

When eating at restaurants most people can make good diet choices. A hamburger without the french fries is a good choice. A well made stew in a small bowl with only half a roll can be much more satisfying than a head of lettuce, she noted.

After counting calories all day, dinner is the time to enjoy whatever calories are left. When eating out, Mrs. Spikes orders just the appetizer and forgets about the rest of the meal. "I love escargot and would rather have a small serving of that than an entire meal," she explained.

WHEN EATING at home, meals can become more tempting when attractively served. Spices can make all the difference between a dull meal and an exciting dish, as long as flavors are blended subtly.

Mrs. Spikes preserves a variety of foods to keep on hand for creating delicious meals. This year she canned 400 jars ranging from peach honey to pickles.

She enjoys making jams and jellies to use with meat dishes rather than breads. White wine and the rind of an orange are good with poultry; mint and basil spice up lamb dishes; and green tomato marmalade is good with poultry and pork.

She also makes an easy tomato sauce for pasta dishes by peeling, seeding and dicing a tomato. Then she packs it with tomato puree. "When you're ready to use it just boil down the tomatoes, add a few spices and you have a low calorie tomato sauce," she explained. The canned tomatoes can also be added to soups and gazpacho for easy, low-calorie meals.

When cooking for her husband, Richard, an accountant, and four-year-old daughter, Kimberly, Mrs. Spikes tries to keep meals nutritious without adding unnecessary calories. To curb appetites, she often serves a broth or bouillon before the family sits down to dinner.

With help from Kimberly, who often makes the salad, Mrs. Spikes can have a complete dinner on the table in no time.

Healthy eating doesn't have to mean cutting out favorites like French fries. Instead of frying potatoes, and adding extra calories, Mrs. Spikes peels the potatoes, brushes them with enough butter to prevent sticking, and bakes them in a 350 degree oven for 20 minutes. A few spices are added to create a tasty substitute for traditional French fries.

SINCE HER family enjoys a variety of soups, Mrs. Spikes always cooks a soup a day ahead of time. The reason is simple — fat can easily be skimmed off the top the second day.

To make sure no one is tempted to have seconds, Mrs. Spikes always cooks in limited proportions. Although she makes soup by the gallon, she freezes most of it and serves only one serving at a time.

Mrs. Spikes noted that anyone can make sensible food choices while still enjoying delicious meals. Since everyone has their favorite, high-calorie desserts, Mrs. Spikes suggested limiting rich desserts to special occasions. "Kimberly's birthday is the only time I serve an especially rich ice cream dessert," she noted. "Once a year it can't hurt to indulge," she said.

To prove anyone can watch calories and still enjoy delicious meals, Mrs. Spikes suggested trying an authentic Indian recipe.

MOSELLE'S INDIA CURRY
2 tablespoons oil
1/4 cup butter or margarine
2 large onions, grated
4-5 cloves garlic, grated, minced
1 medium apple, peeled and grated
3 tbsps. curry powder
1 1/2 cup water
2 chicken bouillon cubes
1 1/2 pounds cooked shrimp, turkey, ham, chicken, lamb or beef
Melt butter with oil in heavy skillet. Add onion, garlic, apple, curry powder. Cook until tender. Add water and bouillon cubes. Simmer several hours. Cool, store in refrigerator overnight or freeze. When ready to serve add meat, fish or poultry and heat thoroughly.
Serve on rice with choice of chopped salted nuts, flaked coconut, raisins, green onion or banana.

Five Popular Breeds!

A Mini Guide to Horses

Thoroughbred
Thoroughbreds race in the Kentucky Derby. These are the swiftest horses over a distance. When they race, they usually carry about 110 pounds. They can run as fast as 50 miles per hour. Many other breeds are being bred with Thoroughbreds. They are very athletic and are used in many sporting events. Triple Crown winner "Affirmed" is a Thoroughbred.

Quarter Horse
The Quarter Horse is the most popular breed of horse. It can be used for many purposes. It can work on the range or perform in the show ring. It is known for great speed over a distance of less than 440 yards. This breed is used in ranch work and rodeos because of its balance and quickness.

Appaloosa
The Appaloosa is a color breed. That means you can identify one by looking at the special color of its coat. No two Appaloosa patterns are alike. These horses often change color patterns while they are young. This horse is shown especially in Western-style events. The Appaloosa was popular with the Indians. They race on tracks and also compete in trail riding.

Standardbred
The Standardbred is a harness racer. It races at a trot or pace while pulling a small, lightweight vehicle called a "sulky." The Standardbred can pull the sulky at speeds up to 35 miles per hour. These horses have muscular bodies and straight necks.

Arabian
The Arabian has a long, arched neck, a very intelligent expression and small ears. This horse has fine features and is admired for his beauty. It can endure long rides. It is popular for trail competition. The Arabian comes in many colors. It often has white on its legs and face.

Science Mystery?

Mystery: Is there air in the soil?

What to do:

Fill a jar or glass about 1/2 full of soil or sand. Pour water in, completely covering the soil.

Observe carefully.

Do you see small bubbles coming up from the soil? If so, where do you think they are coming from? Do you think the bubbles are air?

HORSES TRY 'N FIND

Kinds of horses are hidden in the block below. See if you can find: hackney, saddle, quarter, Arabian, Morgan, palomino, Tennessee Walker, Thoroughbred, ranch, Standardbred, pinto, albino, trotter, race, work, show, polo, jumping, Lipizzan, harness.

Popular ponies . . . Hackney, Welsh and Shetland

Hackney Pony and Horse
At one time, the Hackney was one of the most popular horses in our country. They were coach and driving horses. Unlike the Standardbred, they do not race. Today, they are used mostly for show.

Welsh Pony
Welsh ponies are dependable. They are used for hunting, showing, jumping and other purposes. These beautiful ponies have a graceful way of moving. This pony is very popular with people who show and hunt.

Shetland Pony
The Shetland is a pet as well as a riding pony for kids. Many years ago, they hauled coal out of the mines. They also pulled carts for children.

Western, Draft and Show Horses You Should Know!

Pinto and Paint
The Pinto and Paint are color breeds known for their special coloring. They were prized by the Indians because of their beautiful coats. These are popular Western horses. They can be used in many ways.

Tennessee Walking Horse
This horse is known for its exciting and swift running walk. At a running walk, it can go about 15 miles per hour. The plantations of Tennessee used walkers because of their ability to walk swiftly without getting tired.

Clydesdale
You have probably seen the Clydesdales pulling wagons in a TV advertisement. The Clydesdale is a type of draft horse. These horses are the strongest and the biggest. Because of machines and cars, the draft breeds almost disappeared. They are becoming more popular today.

Mini Jokes

Match these Punch Lines

Meet Bill Bixby . . . and his friend, The Incredible Hulk

Bill Bixby as David Banner and Lou Ferrigno as "The Hulk". "Once Upon a Classic" fans know Bill Bixby well. He is the host of this series on PBS.

He plays a different role on CBS. He plays the meek scientist, David Banner, in "The Incredible Hulk." Bixby has been in several TV series, including "My Favorite Martian," "The Magician" and "The Courtship of Eddie's Father." He has a lot of energy and is a very hard worker. He is a director as well as an actor. He will direct three "Hulk" shows. Bixby is married and has a 3-year-old son. His wife, Brenda Benet, is an actress. His hobbies include Chinese cooking, bridge, music and gardening. In "The Incredible Hulk" series, Bixby "hulks out." That means he turns into a monster when he gets really angry. The monster part is played by Lou Ferrigno, age 26, a 275-pound muscle man. It takes two hours for him to get made up. At one time, he held the "Mr. Universe" title. Although he has a hearing problem, he can read lips well. "The Hulk" is based on a comic book hero created by Stan Lee, the man who also created "Spider Man" and "The Human Torch."

American Saddle Horse
This "stylish" breed is a show horse, but can be used for pleasure and for jumping. These show horses are trained for two classes. The three-gaited class includes the walk, trot and canter. The five-gaited class includes the walk, trot, canter, slow gait and rack.

Palomino
This is a special color breed. The only color this horse can be is gold with white mane and tail. White markings are also found on the legs and head. They often march in parades. Roy Rogers' "Trigger" was a Palomino.

Morgan
The Morgan was more useful than any other horse during the early history of our country. He was durable and willing and had a kind disposition. Morgans were used to pull carriages, coaches, plows, wagons and even tree stumps. Today the Morgan is prized as a show horse. He is used for police work, too.

- Teaching suggestions:
1. Hang the poster in a prominent place for further discussion and study.

  3. Get another copy of this Mini Page and place the two copies next to each other. Have the children draw a line to the matching horses.
  4. Go over this issue with your children. Then cut it apart, separating each horse from the descriptive text. Ask the children to match the pictures and text.
  5. Make a puzzle for younger children. Cut your Mini Page apart. Using your other copy of this issue, have them match the picture with the descriptive text and paste it over the identical picture and copy.

Remember: The secrets to working with your children are patience, understanding and interest.

Reunion ends 'endurance test'

By Tom Griess Update Staff Writer

A family endureth many things, if Amy Davidson and Frederick and May Crozier serve as any example. Mrs. Davidson was prompted by the death of her husband 25 years ago to leave her home in Cadishead, England, and move to West Texas to live with her daughter and son-in-law, Betty and Curt Langham. Langham, a native of Key, met his wife while he was serving in the U.S. Army during World War II, and they were married in 1945 in Cadishead. Following the war they settled in Lubbock and two years ago moved to Carlisle. Crozier and his wife, meanwhile, settled in Warrington, England, a city of about 85,000 people located between Manchester and Liverpool, and raised two sons. For 25 years Mrs. Davidson and her brother Frederick had not seen each other, but recently were reunited in Lubbock International Airport. The reunion will continue for the next five weeks.

"She's still the same Amy, but she's gone Yankee," Crozier said.

"Fred used to be very quiet, and now we can't shut him up," Mrs. Davidson retorted, laughing.

The affectionate sparring finished, both agreed that time and Texas had been beneficial.

"I am more confident," Mrs. Davidson said. "I wasn't when I first came, but I believe now that no one is better than me."

The Croziers said, if not for their two sons, they would like to move to Texas and join Mrs. Davidson.

With Mrs. Davidson, her daughter, her son, Neville Davidson of Lubbock and the Croziers, is there any more of the family left to convince?

Yes! Mrs. Davidson has not seen her youngest brother, Alan, who lives in St. Helens, England, for 25 years either.

views and opinions

By Janice Jarvis
Update Staff Writer

Last year members of the American Agriculture Movement put their tractors to work on city streets rather than in the fields.

Since December 1977, members of the organization have used tractorcades to protest low farm prices. On the South Plains, their struggle with low crop prices was dramatized when they blockaded area businesses.

In January members of the organization plan to make their voice heard nationwide by traveling to Washington D.C. Lubbock is scheduled to be one of eight starting points for the tractorcade. Several miles of tractors are expected to stretch across U.S. freeways as farmers take their problems to the Capitol.

Lubbock residents were asked how they viewed the American Agriculture Movement's use of tractorcades in emphasizing their problems. Lubbockites were also asked their opinions on the success of the protest so far.

Ersa Egnew noted the movement does not seem to be accomplishing anything so far. "I think they should change their tactics and go through the right channels of legislature instead of trying to force things," she said.

"The tractorcade sounds like a good idea to me but I think it's questionable whether it will work," said Jamie Barnes. He added that protesting should not be the only way to be heard but many farmers may view the tractorcade as the only method they can use at the moment.

"I think they have a valid gripe but I wish it weren't necessary to take it to Washington," said Sam Dunlap. He added that he thought the tractorcade would not hurt the farmers' protest but he did not think it would help it either.

Mary Beth Gilton explained she thought the farmers are right to protest. "I don't think the protest will hurt their cause as long as they don't get violent," she said.

"I think maybe they could get more action by other means than demonstration," explained Connie Belcher. She added that she thought demonstrations alienate more people than they influence.

"It seems like a waste of diesel," said Mike Trask. He noted that if farmers have the tractors to drive to Washington they did not have anything to complain about.

"I don't think the tractorcade will hurt or help their problem, but I think it's a silly way of going about it," said Carolyn McFarling. "I think they should write their congressman, at least that would be more sensible," she added.

Donneva Sikes said she believed the tractorcade might publicize the farmers' problems, but she believed there was a better way to complain. "I imagine it's kind of expensive to go all the way to Washington," she said.

"I think the farmers have the right to protest but they don't have the right to inconvenience everyone," said Tarey Bochenko. She added, "if farmers inconvenience others they're likely to get everyone against them."

Randal Cooke said he believes farmers are having a rough time and they're just trying to do something about it. "I don't think protesting will hurt their cause at all," he said.

William Bankston said that he was in favor of the protest movement because farmers are not getting the prices they deserve. "They just have to keep on trying different ways to get their point across, until someone really does notice what's going on and then does something about it," he said.

Traffic Update: Road repairs under way

(Editor's note: The following article is presented by the Lubbock Citizens Traffic Commission in cooperation with Update to help keep local motorists better informed on traffic-related matters.)

RADAR REPORT: Motorists in the 2600 block of Avenue L and the 2700 block of Indiana Avenue should be aware that those two spots are under surveillance by the Lubbock Police Department's radar units this week. Radar units also will be posted at school zones and other selected locations.

THE STATE highway department has announced that First Place immediately west of Avenue H will be closed for a few more days to permit installation of a storm sewer. The work is being done in conjunction with construction of an underpass near Fifth Street between Avenue H and Texas Avenue. Traffic is being detoured around the construction area.

The reconstruction of Slide Road has been completed and the city engineering department just finished marking the new surface, to provide for three lanes of traffic in each direction, from the Brownfield Highway to 50th Street. In addition, there is a continuous two-way left turn lane, and a recessed right turn lane on the east side of Slide Road at 34th Street.

Re-striping of 34th Street from Avenue A to Slide Road should be completed this week. This leaves 50th Street and a small portion of University Avenue between 50th Street and 66th Street to be striped.

Drivers are urged to drive with extra care while the streets are unmarked.
