Khameini Seeks Iran Showdown

Government Of Bakhtiar Denounced

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, the voice from afar that rocked Iran, came home triumphantly from exile Thursday, threw down a challenge to a shaky government, and warned Americans and others he will "cut the hands" of foreign influence over this nation.

Pandemonium welcomed the frail, white-bearded hero of the anti-shah revolution back to his homeland. More than a million ecstatic Iranians, chanting "Allah Akbar!" ("God is great"), cheered the 78-year-old Moslem patriarch as he rode into Tehran after flying in from France, ending an exile of more than 14 years and climaxing a year-long campaign of mass protest that drove Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi out of the country.

No Political Bloodshed
It was an unusual day for Iran in another respect — there were no reports of political bloodshed. Khomeini immediately set the stage for a showdown with the government of Prime Minister Shahpour Bakhtiar, and possibly with the army. "I am going to establish a government with the backing of this nation," he told hundreds of thousands of supporters at a rally in the main Tehran cemetery, burial place of many "martyrs" of the bloody anti-shah upheaval. He again denounced the monarchy, the shah-endorsed Bakhtiar government and the national Parliament as illegal. He accused the shah of "despotism" and vowed the monarchy and his associates will never come back to Iran. Government "Illegal" "There cannot be a country with two governments so the illegal (Bakhtiar) government has to get out," he declared. Khomeini wants to establish a religiously oriented but vaguely defined Islamic republic.

In a radio address Wednesday night, Bakhtiar again defied Khomeini's claims to leadership, declaring, "The government will not permit the reins of the country to be held by anyone except the central government." Khomeini damned Iran's foreign military advisers, many of whom are American. "Our victory can be achieved only when the hands of these foreigners are shortened," he said in an airport arrival speech. "I thank you all and beg the Almighty to cut the hands of foreigners."

Accuses Foreigners
The Moslem holy man, who named no specific nationalities, repeatedly has accused foreigners of robbing the country's wealth, and pro-Khomeini demonstrations here in recent months have had anti-Western overtones. Reversing Iran's westernization has been a key goal of the orthodox Moslems' anti-shah campaign. Bakhtiar's 27-day-old government, which has Washington's endorsement, See KHAMEINI Page 14

HAPPY TO BE HOME—This panel of pictures illustrates the joy of Patricia Hearst at being home and free for the first time in five years after being kidnapped, becoming a fugitive, convicted of bank robbery and serving time in prison. In the left panel, Patty, wearing a

Patty Hearst Free After Five Years Of Turmoil

HILLSBOROUGH, Calif. (AP) — Saying she is stronger, more confident and still proud to be Patricia Hearst, the young heiress-turned-bank robber bounced out of federal prison Thursday to a joyful homecoming and the start of a new life. "There it is — the commutation!" she said, grinning outside the prison and waving the gold-sealed document signed Monday by President Carter to cut short her seven-year bank robbery sentence.

She is a free woman for the first time in five years, after being a kidnap victim, an armed bank robber, a fugitive, and finally a prisoner. In her first moment of freedom, she rushed to her fiancé, Bernard Shaw, and gave him a quick kiss on the cheek as he stood near the gate of the Federal Correctional Institution at Pleasanton. As the sun rose, she told about 150 reporters that she planned to take a vacation and perhaps do some writing. Then she hopped into a station wagon with Shaw, her attorney and two bodyguards for the hour-long drive to her mother's home in Hillsborough, a posh San Francisco suburb. There she was met by a large group of friends and family members who burst into loud applause as the car pulled into the driveway. Her German shepherd, Arrow, whimpered. She doffed the blue parka she had worn to ward off the morning frost and showed off a green T-shirt which said: "PARDON ME."

She also wore a medallion with green rhinestones spelling out "SURVIVOR" and 2-4-74, the date of her kidnapping by members of the self-styled terrorist Symbionese Liberation Army. The necklace was a gift from her fiancé, and she said she would add to the jewelry the date of her release from prison. "I didn't wear a bullet-proof vest but I dressed for the occasion," she joked. There had been reports that Shaw, a San Francisco policeman and her former bodyguard, would ask her to don a vest before leaving the prison. Later she told television crews and photographers allowed in a living room of the house that she felt the trials of the past five years had matured her. "I think I've gotten a lot stronger, a lot more self-confident. I take a lot of things in stride that make other people fall apart," she said. She said she planned to take a vacation, but grinned and refused to See PATTY HEARST Page 14

Vehicle Ordinance Issue Revived

By PAULA TILKER
Avalanche-Journal Staff
SURVEY RESULTS and a favorable legal opinion combined to convince the Planning and Zoning Commission Thursday to reopen the contentious question of whether the city should regulate placement of recreational and commercial vehicles. City council members hurriedly backed away from a similar attempt several years ago when a flood of protesting vehicle owners hotly argued against such an ordinance during a public hearing. Planning Director Jim Bertram warned the commission Thursday the same thing may happen at the next public hearing into the matter, which may be at the group's March meeting. Survey Shows Mandate But, he said, results from a survey last summer show "a good mandate" from citizens who want some type of regulation. After reviewing the survey results and the legal opinion from a staff lawyer, the eight commissioners voted unanimously to authorize the draft of an ordinance that takes into account the "legal parameters" and citizen opinions. Bertram, who owns two recreational vehicles himself, told commissioners that preliminary legal research indicates the city's police powers would allow vehicle regulation if it is based on and can be linked to citizens' health, safety and welfare.

Pair Listed Missing In Explosions

SIoux CITY, Iowa (AP) — Two people were missing after a fire and a series of explosions ripped through a four-story apartment building and an annex Thursday, and the fire chief said the search for bodies would begin today. The 70-unit Carroll Apartments complex, which housed 100 people, many of them elderly, was still burning late Thursday, eight hours after it started at noon. Fire Chief Robert Arnold said firefighters would be battling the blaze all night. Authorities said at least eight persons were injured. Two elderly building residents, aged 79 and 88, were listed in critical condition at Marian Health Center. Names were being withheld. Three Sioux City high school students returning to a vocational education center next door managed to race through the 65-year-old brick building and warn residents before the explosions occurred. Police Chief Patrick Ahlstrom and one of his officers, during a news conference, credited the youths with helping to prevent a serious loss of life. "It was through the help of those kids that we averted what could have been a much, much worse disaster," said officer Don Lillie, who was one of the first patrolmen on the scene. Only flames and sky could be seen through the frost-lined windows of the front wall of the building Thursday night because the back wall of the main structure had collapsed.

Dr. Thomas Coriden, Sioux City medical examiner, said earlier that firemen told him seven persons were trapped inside the building and presumed dead. He said a temporary morgue had been set up at the Central High School annex across an alley from the burning building, but that it could be Friday morning before authorities would be able to look for victims. Apartment manager Minor Lewis, a Sioux City real estate agent, said half the residents of the brick building were "elderly or pensioners." He said there were 37 apartments with 41 known tenants.

vehicles and commercial vehicles." But, he added, "Also there's a good mandate they shouldn't be banned from residential areas." Council Must Approve Any commission decision on a regulatory ordinance also must be approved by the city council. In other business, the commission: —Approved Robert Dandenenu's and William Stadley's request for two-family (R-2), high density apartment (A-2) and local retail (C-2) zoning on a single-family residential (R-1) tract south of 68th Street and east of Albany Avenue; —Denied John Riley's requests for apartment-medical (AM) and AM specific use on an R-1 tract south of 33rd Street and west of Avenue Q; —Passed a request by Furr's, Inc., for a setback variance and fencing condition deletion on retail property north of 74th Street and west of Quaker Avenue; and —Denied on a 5 to 2 vote a request by C.C. Knott and Morgan Portable Building Corp. for Industrial Park specific use zoning on an industrial park area west of Loop 289 and about 1,050 feet north of Spur 327.

Tractorcade Rolls Into Destination

By JOHNNY HOLMES
Avalanche-Journal Staff
WITH MORALE "as high as ever," more than 1,000 tractors pushed into suburban Washington, D.C. Thursday, ending a three-week, 1,900-mile pilgrimage by members of the American Agriculture Movement to protest low prices for agricultural products. To the relief and elation of some 3,000 persons making the tedious cross-country trek, the "National Tractorcade 1979," which originated at points across the Farm Belt from Montana to Texas to Georgia, arrived at its final campsite during the day. The southern caravans, including about 200 persons and 100 tractors from West Texas, established their final camps near Arlington, Va., about 20 miles from the White House. "Trip Went Great" "The trip went great," said AAM National Wagonmaster Gerald McCallern of Hereford in a telephone interview Thursday afternoon. "Except for a few minor breakdowns, we had no trouble at all." The plucky travelers will spend the weekend resting, finalizing plans for the week of activities ahead, and anticipating the arrival of "hopefully, 20,000 people who couldn't drive tractors but are coming just for the events," said McCallern. Among those flying in is McCallern's son, Mike, who has been coordinating AAM affairs from Hereford. McCallern said he already had spoken with several government officials, and that they seemed "like they're much more willing to listen to us than they were last year." The coming week will be filled with meetings, rallies and demonstrations, all designed to attract Congress's attention. McCallern anticipated meeting with representatives of several government branches, among them the House of Representatives' Democratic Freshman delegation. That meeting is being arranged by U.S. See TRACTORCADE Page 14

Teng Inspects Plant; Renews Soviet Blast

ATLANTA (AP) — Teng Hsiao-ping came to the frigid South on Thursday to see first hand the American technology he covets for China's catch-up race with the modern world and he said again that it is important for the United States and China to oppose Russian expansionist policies. His remarks came at about the time the official Soviet news agency Tass issued a dispatch urging the Carter administration to clarify its position on anti-Soviet statements made by Teng during his visit. The Chinese vice premier told an audience of 1,400 businessmen in Atlanta that, "The American people do not wish their lives and peace disrupted by war and the Chinese people also desire peace in which to build up their country." But Teng warned that "all realistic people admit the road is not tranquil. The danger of world war remains." As he has before, Teng used the word "hegemony" which means domination over others and which the Chinese have repeatedly used to describe what they see as Soviet expansionism. Without mentioning the Soviets by name, Teng talked of "strategic plans of the warmongers" and said both the United States and China are opposed to any country's efforts to gain domination over others. On his arrival from Washington, Teng had his first close contact with ordinary Americans when he walked toward a small airport welcoming crowd and shook hands. Later he also talked with workers on a tour of a Ford Motor Co. plant and was surrounded by a group of black children during a visit to the grave of Martin Luther King Jr. There were small protests against Teng's visit all day and he had his closest brush with demonstrators on the trip Thursday night as he entered the Georgia governor's mansion to dine with 18 state governors. An estimated 400 demonstrators lined the sidewalks around the gate where Teng entered. They carried Republic of China flags, pro-Taiwan placards, and shouted slogans. There was no violence and Teng showed no displeasure at the demonstrators, many of them Chinese. Overhead, a single-engine plane circled with an electronic sign mounted under its wings that said: "We Support Free China." Teng told the governors the American South had been considered a relatively backward area but it now has become a pacesetter. "We in China are faced with the task of See TENG Page 14

City To Act On Gas Rate Hike

By KIM PALMER
Avalanche-Journal Staff
RESIDENTS of area towns served by Pioneer Natural Gas Company apparently are not enthusiastic about the gas company's proposed $11.5 million rate increase, but city officials expect no strong opposition to the compromise rate hike. In a settlement with consultants representing the 63 cities involved, Pioneer officials agreed to accept the $11.5 million figure instead of their original request for a $23.6 million rate increase. "A lot of people are opposed to any type of rate increase but most of them understand that some increases are necessary," said Brownfield City Manager Jack Geron. "The increase is a lot less than Pioneer originally asked for so maybe there will not be much opposition to it." Although most of the cities in Pioneer's West Texas Distribution system still are reviewing the gas company's proposal, the Lubbock City Council will conduct a special meeting at 10 a.m. today at City Hall to initiate final proceedings on the rate increase case. During the city council's Jan. 19 meeting, Lubbock city officials became the first to take the compromise gas rate settlement under advisement. According to a city spokesman, the decision to accept or deny Pioneer's proposal probably will be made during today's meeting and the action formally approved or disapproved during the council's regularly scheduled Feb. 8 meeting. Each individual city government has the choice of accepting Pioneer's proposal or denying the company's request and developing the city's own proposal. But some action must be taken before the Feb. 15 deadline or Pioneer's requested increase will automatically go into effect.

This stipulation is in accordance with the Texas Public Utilities Commission regulation allowing a city government 150 days to decide on a rate increase case. "We don't like the increase but we are rather helpless," said Tahoka mayor Melton Leslie. Littlefield officials have received some opposition to the rate hike from elderly citizens living on limited incomes, but it may not be strong enough to prevent the hike from receiving city approval, officials said. The proposal submitted by the Amarillo See ACTION NEAR Page 14

Storms Regroup For Strike At Southern Californians

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Storm clouds were regrouping for another slap at Southern California Thursday while dozens of sun-seekers fled the first snow to blanket the desert resort of Palm Springs in 30 years.

"The clouds are coming through the pass, and a whole bunch of people are checking out," said a desk clerk at the Palm Springs Tropics Hotel.

Many tourists had checked out Wednesday, only to be thwarted by blocked roads in the surrounding area and the temporary closing of Palm Springs Airport.

One Palm Springs visitor who had planned to attend the Colgate Triple Crown women's golf tournament left Thursday for Oakland without his tickets, hotel clerk Jamie Engelleiter said.

"He wanted to get away and just left his tournament tickets with me," Miss Engelleiter said. "I'm trying to give them away."

Visitors from London and Canada were especially frustrated by Palm Springs' snow, which was 2 feet deep on the surrounding mountain roads.

Heavy snows and rains, which first started moving into Southern California late Monday, had left 2 inches of snow on the ground in Palm Springs by Wednesday, the first snow to cover the ground there since 1949.

"Some people from London who didn't like the weather left today after staying only two nights," said Miss Engelleiter. "They were supposed to stay 14 nights."

The Canadians, she added, complained that "if they wanted weather like this, they would have stayed home."

Elsewhere in Southern California, others also were digging out from under the snow.

Melvin Blake, 21, retrieved his car from a snowbank along Interstate 5's mountainous Grapevine, but was unable to drive it home to Hollywood.

"The towing company won't let me have it until I pay them cash, and all I have is a checkbook," said Blake, who spent the night at a Red Cross emergency shelter set up in a high school cafeteria.

The city of Lancaster in north Los Angeles County was reported back in business Thursday as the courthouses, stores and schools reopened after a day off because of snow.

About 100 mobile home residents in the San Diego County town of Chula Vista returned to their neighborhood to assess the damage left by Wednesday's waist-deep floods.

Government Acts To Cut Flash Flood Death Toll

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government is launching an intensive program to cut the toll in flash floods, the nation's biggest weather-related killer.

Flash floods take an average of 200 lives a year in the United States, ranking them as both the biggest weather-related killer and destroyer of property.

Annual damage figures are estimated at more than $1 billion, and officials estimate that this could double in the next five years.

The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration and the Appalachian Regional Commission are trying to reduce this loss both through forecast and warning systems and flood prevention, according to NOAA officials.

Because flash floods are local incidents and differ according to the area where they occur, the NOAA has proposed a system of regional programs in high-risk areas.

The local operations would monitor small-scale weather developments and alert field offices of the National Weather Service of potential flash floods.

A prototype operation is being set up in a high-risk 12-county area covering parts of Kentucky, Virginia and West Virginia.

Much of the existing flash-flood warning system in the area is being upgraded with automatic rain and river-level alarms and self-reporting measuring devices, officials explained.

A small computer will develop the actual flood forecasts from the information collected plus information from the weather service.

The government weather radio system is expected to be used to issue warnings. Flood coordinators are being trained for each county to help organize the communities to react in the event of a flood potential.

The system is expected to be in operation this spring in the test area.

Residents Of Chama Shovel Snow For Outdoor Winter Recreation

CHAMA, N.M. (UPI) — Kenneth Lively hasn't seen the 40-inch fence in his front yard for weeks, and chances are good he won't see it again until sometime in the late spring or early summer.

"People are starting to wonder if all this snow is ever going to quit," said Lively, who owns Lively's Conoco in downtown Chama. "It seems like all we do is shovel snow two-thirds of the day."

Through January, 117 inches of snow had fallen at Chama, a northern New Mexico mountain community of 1,000 near the Colorado border which normally receives 100 inches of snow all winter. The National Weather Service said 64 inches of snow were on the ground Thursday and it still was snowing.

Above average snowfall has been common in all of New Mexico this winter, bringing cheers from skiers. But for residents of Chama, 75 miles away from the nearest ski area, most of their outdoor winter recreation has been devoted to shoveling snow.

"Behind my house, there are banks of snow 8 and 9 feet high," he said, adding its the most snow he's seen since the winter of 1939. "We can't see out the back windows."

The deep snows are beginning to cause problems everywhere in Chama, particularly on city streets.

"We've been able to keep main street open, but once you get on to the side streets, it's like driving in a tunnel," said Mayor Candy Martinez. "Our main concern at this time is trying to keep the roads open."

The city last week loaned an additional Caterpillar to help move snow scraped off the streets. Mrs. Martinez said efforts are under way now to find a place outside of town where the excess snow can be dumped.

"They just don't know where to put the snow in town any more," said Red Sisneros, owner of Red and Mids food market. "In some places, they can't push the snow any higher so the streets are getting narrow. There are a lot of places where only one car can get through at a time."

Another problem is the snow scraped off the streets is blocking entrances to many residents' driveways. And it's also become somewhat dangerous to drive on city streets because drivers can't see around corners because of the snowbanks.

"I think what we need is for everyone to put a 10-foot flagpole on their cars so that someone can see that a car is coming out of an intersection," said Lively.

Residents also have been forced to shovel snow off the roofs of their homes to keep them from collapsing. And they're concerned about what will happen when the snow finally melts, which Sisneros says may not come until "late in June."

"We're going to have a short summer unless there's a lot of sunshine," he said. Residents of Chama also are having to cope with depression caused by the continued snowfall.

"The people are really tired of it," said Sisneros. "Pushing all this snow around constantly gets them down."

Like any small town, recreation is limited. Church bingo on Monday nights was one of the few recreational functions for the residents of the town.

But last Monday, the bingo games were canceled because of snow.

However, there appears to be at least one benefit from all the snow.

"Sales of boots, gloves and face masks have been pretty hot," said Lively.

A bird thought to have been extinct for 100 years — the white-winged guanaco — was spotted last year in Peru.

New Cold Front To Hit Tonight

Temperatures should climb into the upper 40s this afternoon under cloudy skies before a cold front from Colorado pushes into the Lubbock area tonight and threatens the region with a 20 percent chance for precipitation.

The mercury could drop into the upper teens before dawn Saturday after the low pressure system arrives in the Lubbock area, but should rise to near 40 in the afternoon.

Although a slight chance for rain, or mixed rain and snow remains in the forecast through Tuesday, a slight warming trend should begin Sunday and temperatures are expected to reach near 50 by midweek.

Overnight lows Sunday through Tuesday should be near 20.

Thursday, southwesterly to southerly winds brought mild temperatures to West Texas. Lubbock's high was 50 about 4:30 p.m. and the morning low was 15, according to records at the National Weather Service.

Intermittent drizzle observed over much of South Texas Thursday was expected to continue spreading over most of that region through today.

Fog in the Corpus Christi and Alice areas Thursday reduced visibility to a mile or less.

Across the nation Thursday, snow ranged from the Great Lakes across the upper Ohio Valley into New England and the Appalachians.

Tattooers See Body As 'Empty Canvas'

HOUSTON (AP) — It was a moving picture show of a most unusual kind. The medium in this exhibit wasn't film but skin. And the pictures were tattoos, covering arms, backs, shoulders, stomachs and legs, moving with their owners, who displayed them proudly as a peacock might show his plumage.

Variogated bodies covered with dragons, eagles, flowers and intricate designs caused more than one double-take in the lobby of the hotel hosting the North American Tattoo Club's Fourth World Tattoo Convention.

Some 275 illustrated men and women from throughout the country, as well as Belgium, France, New Zealand, England, Japan and Canada, were here to display their talents and themselves while swapping ideas with one another.

The tattoo artists, as they prefer to be called, were also here in an effort to dispel the negative image they say has been hung unfairly on tattooing.

They say they view the body as an empty canvas to be covered by their works, while society tends to classify the skin paintings with graffiti on bathroom walls.

"Society has attached a stigma to tattoos, saying they are the domain of drunken sailors and loose women," said Robert Hardt of Seattle, who wears a rendition of J.R.R. Tolkien's "Lord of the Rings" across his shoulders, arms and back the way another might wear a cape.

"But we are all trapped in a prison of flesh, so don't think me wrong if I draw on the walls," the 32-year-old said with a grin.

He was always fascinated by tattoos, and got his first when he was 19 years old.

"It's a form of self-expression — it makes you unique," Hardt said as he tried to explain the whys of tattooing to a blank canvas who found it hard to understand. "It makes your fantasies live."

The president of the 650-member club, Dave Yurkew of Minneapolis, says tattooing is gaining more respect as an art form throughout the world.

"You still get a negative reaction from people who haven't really seen tattooing," he said. "And when they do see them, there seems to be less shock than there used to be."

"A question I used to hear all the time — 'Why in the hell did you do that?' — is getting asked less and less," he said.

Yurkew said he refrains from counseling potential customers when they come into his shop.

"The thing I hate most is when a customer asks which design they should get," he said. "I don't want to put any pressure on them to get a tattoo. It has to be their decision."

"But many people tell me they've been thinking about getting one a long time," he continued. "Sometimes they've been thinking about it as long as two or three years."

He said there are a lot of reasons why people get tattooed, and many of them are the wrong reasons.

"A lot of times it's emulation of a relative, like an uncle or a brother, while others do it because of peer group pressure," he said. "Someone will get a tattoo to get back at someone else or because they're angry."

"But many do it for the art," he added.

Houston To Host Premier Teng

HOUSTON (AP) — Chinese Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping will arrive in Texas' largest city Friday with an honor guard, a band, the mayor, the governor, and demonstrators all on hand.

But there will be no keys to the city, and no motorcades with the top executives of the state and city where capitalism is a banner of honor and oil and banking are the economic arteries.

Teng will stay in Houston, known as a conservative political stronghold, for 29 hours. He will dine on the barbecued beef of the beef-growing state, watch a rodeo, inspect the Lyndon B. Johnson Space Center, tour an oil drilling tool manufacturing plant; and meet with news media executives and leading businessmen.

Gov. Bill Clements, the first Republican chief executive of Texas in 100 years, will welcome the vice premier to Texas, at Ellington Air Force Base near Houston. Then the governor will leave.

Houston Mayor Jim McConn will be at the airport some 20 miles south of Houston and then, he, too, will leave. A spokesman for the mayor said McConn "has to get back to City Hall and go to work."

McConn said earlier he was "personally concerned" about Houston being designated as one of two Chinese consulate offices allotted for the United States.

The mayor said, "We have been the sister city of Taipei (capital of Taiwan) and we have a Chinese community of some numbers here, most of whom are related to Taiwan."

Houston Taiwanese said they would stage a peaceful demonstration in downtown Houston between 1 p.m. and 3 p.m. The Taiwanese will march from a convention center to a hotel where Teng will stay during his visit.

Members of the Revolutionary Communist Party also have promised a demonstration to insure "that Teng will be met in a fitting manner when he sticks his snout into...Houston." The group supports the philosophy of the late Chinese ruler Mao Tse-tung.

Police Chief Harry Caldwell said security will be heavy during the Teng visit. He said there would be full mobilization of the police department, at a cost estimated as high as $25,000.

The chief asked federal officials to help pay for the extra security costs. He has received no reply.

As a matter of policy, Caldwell does not release the exact number of officers scheduled to work overtime, but one police officer were on hand, but there was no trouble.

The demonstrators identified themselves as members of the John Birch Society, the American Party and individual church groups.

Among them was the Rev. Mel Perry, pastor of Grace Bible Presbyterian Church in Nashville, who carried a sign reading, "Communism is of The Devil."

U.S. Rep. Larry McDonald, a conservative Democrat, addressed the crowd and denounced Teng's visit as profit-motivated and anti-Christian. He accused President Carter of "selling Taiwan down the river in favor of a gang of murderers."

Southern Hospitality Mixed Bag

ATLANTA (AP) — Southern hospitality proved to be a blend of friendly flags, hostile signs and cold weather for Chinese Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping on Thursday.

Teng was greeted by a small crowd, composed mostly of Air Force families, waving Chinese flags when he arrived at Dobbins Air Force Base outside Atlanta in 23-degree temperatures and a stiff wind. Bare-headed, Teng responded to the welcome by brushing past his security men to shake hands.

On the drive to his hotel in downtown Atlanta, Teng passed the international headquarters of the Coca-Cola Co., with which China has signed a trade agreement. About an hour earlier, a small group of demonstrators led by former New Hampshire Gov. Meldrim Thomson Jr., national chairman of The Conservative Caucus, stood outside the building, denounced the agreement and called for a boycott of Coca-Cola products.

About 60 demonstrators, chanting "Go Home Teng" and waving banners, stood across the street from the hotel as the vice premier arrived. Among the signs were placards reading: "Does Coke Add Life to 600,000 Dead Chinese?" and "Keep Taiwan, Dump Jimmy." Some 40

Second Abuse Victim Dies In Dallas

DALLAS (AP) — The second of two children who were beaten and mutilated in an attack at their home died early Thursday, a spokesman for the Dallas County Medical Examiner's office said. Their mother has been charged in the case.

Kathleen Gradi, 32, their mother, is being held in lieu of $200,000 bond.

Aimee Gray, 8, had been hospitalized in critical condition from multiple injuries, including a skull fracture and punctured lungs. Authorities said an autopsy will be held.

Clifford Cecil Gradi, 11, her brother, died Monday of injuries he suffered in the Jan. 12 beatings. Police said a screwdriver had been driven into his skull through an eye.

Sino-Soviet Feud Flares During Teng's Visit

WASHINGTON (AP) — A White House official said Thursday the United States seeks a "balanced relationship" with China and the Soviet Union and is "certainly not interested in prolonging or exacerbating the areas of tension" between Peking and Moscow.

The official, who declined to be quoted by name, met with a group of reporters after the official Soviet news agency Tass urged the Carter administration to clarify the U.S. attitude toward anti-Soviet statements made here by visiting Chinese Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping.

At the State Department, officials reaffirmed its intention not to tilt toward either side in the Sino-Soviet dispute.

"The United States does not regard what we have undertaken (concerning China) as being opposed to any nation," said spokesman Hodding Carter.

Ostensibly, there was no connection between the White House official's remarks and the Tass report, which said Teng's stay in Washington was marked by "a whole series of speeches and statements containing slander against the Soviet Union and its policy."

However, the official said he saw no reason why Washington's rapprochement with Peking should undermine U.S.-Soviet relations or delay agreement on a new strategic arms limitation treaty (SALT II).

The official was asked if President Carter had been surprised at Teng's jabs at the Soviet Union, uttered at private functions and gatherings.

"No," he replied, "that's been their style all along."

The American official argued that, if anything, Teng's remarks here about the Soviet Union were milder than others he has made elsewhere in the past.

While reiterating President Carter's position that the United States seeks a balanced relationship with the two communist nations, the White House official acknowledged that at present there is "less in the way of direct competition" between the United States and China than between the United States and the Soviet Union.

On the other hand, the official said, there are broader areas of cooperation or attempted cooperation between Washington and Moscow, notably in the joint effort to control strategic nuclear arms.

The official cited as an example of Washington's desire to be even-handed the wording of a "joint press communique" issued earlier Thursday at the conclusion of Teng's stay here.

The document stated the opposition of both China and the United States to any country or group of countries attempting to "establish hegemony or domination over others."

The official related that the Chinese had wanted to use only the term "hegemony," which is a Chinese code phrase used to describe its vision of an aggressive and expansionist Soviet Union. The official said the United States wanted to use the term "domination" to make it clear its concern was not directed exclusively at the Soviet Union.

"They got hegemony and we got domination and everybody was happy," he said.

The Tass dispatch from Washington said that "many words were said from the American side" about Teng's stay, "but these words do not indicate the attitude of the U.S. administration to the incidental statements by the Chinese guest of the White House."

Tass concluded, "All this calls for clarification."

Khomeini Snoozes En Route To Homeland

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Many aboard Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's flight home from exile Thursday feared they might never make it safely onto Iranian soil. The least flustered appeared to be the 78-year-old Moslem holy man himself, sleeping soundly most of the way on the floor of the jetliner.

The anxiety inside the Air France Boeing 747 did not ease until the jumbo jet touched down here to joyous shouts of "Allah Akbar!" ("God is great") from the passengers.

Early in the five-hour journey, one of Khomeini's top aides told Western reporters he believed there was a chance anti-Khomeini elements might try to shoot the plane out of the sky. He said Khomeini earlier told his followers he saw "great danger" in the flight.

When the chartered jetliner arrived over Tehran, it was ordered to circle Mehrabad International Airport for 15 minutes, apparently for security reasons. When this dragged on to almost a half-hour, there were growing fears among the passengers that landing permission would be denied and the plane would have to return to Paris.

Air France cabin staff said that shortly after Khomeini boarded he climbed to the upstairs lounge, above the first-class section, said his prayers and lay down to sleep in front of the bar on two brown blankets provided by the airline.

The ascetic Iranian divine, leader of the anti-shah movement, always sleeps this way, his aides say, and he had no intention of altering the habit of a lifetime because he was making a flight homeward after his 14-year exile in Turkey, Iraq and France.

So that he could enjoy a good night's rest before arriving, the stairway to the lounge was guarded and his aides remained below. The only people allowed up the stairs were crewmembers who had to pass through the area to get to the cockpit. But they went out of their way to tread softly.

"When I walked past he was sleeping soundly," said a stewardess. "When I returned several minutes later he continued to sleep undisturbed."

On arriving in Tehran, Khomeini again declared what he has said before — that he intends to replace the shah-appointed government of Prime Minister Shahpour Bakhtiar with an Islamic republic.

His followers on the plane said they believe there is little doubt Khomeini will triumph in the end.

Among them were several celebrating their own homecomings.

Masoud Manian began his voluntary exile more than two years ago when he left for Los Angeles to study biology. Four months ago, he said, he became "so disturbed" by events in Iran that he left to join Khomeini in Paris.

Since then, he said, he has helped spread Khomeini's message to the people of Iran, urging them to rise up and rebel. For Iranian woman journalist Nushabek Amiri, who was among reporters on the plane, there was no doubt about Khomeini's significance.

"Khomeini is the symbol of our revolution," she said. "There is no doubt the people love him."

But she expressed reservations about an Islamic republic, saying: "My view is that we are not as religious as the Arabs, so I do not know if we want an Islamic state."

Senator Proposes Mental Facility

AUSTIN — State Sen. Tom Creighton of Mineral Wells has introduced a bill calling for the establishment of a genetic research service center in Texas.

Creighton's bill, SB 377, authorizes the Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation to establish a Texas Human Genetic Center to provide comprehensive genetic services in the areas of mental illness.

The center would assume all the powers, duties, functions and obligations of the genetic counseling and screening program currently run at the Denton State School.

In another bill, SB 377, Creighton proposes requiring that handling and processing fees in motor vehicles purchased be included in calculating principal balances on retail installment credit contracts.

Two Plead Guilty To Tax Fraud Charge

A 42-year-old Wichita Falls man, one of 26 persons indicted recently in a federal tax fraud case, was sentenced to five years in the penitentiary Thursday after pleading guilty before U.S. District Judge Halbert O. Woodward.

Robert Sims, formerly of Big Spring, pleaded guilty to two counts of conspiracy and two counts of filing false claims against the government for tax years 1975 and 1977.

A federal grand jury in Lubbock returned the sealed indictments Jan. 16.

Twenty-one other persons arraigned with Sims on Jan. 24, when he pleaded guilty to the charges, pleaded not guilty and were scheduled for trial March 26.

Maximum punishment for conspiracy with respect to false claims is 10 years in prison for each count and for filing a false, fictitious or fraudulent claim is five years' imprisonment on each count.

Internal Revenue Service agents in Lubbock and Amarillo headed the investigation beginning about 2 1/2 years ago, government spokesmen said.

$600 Million Seen For Handicapped Education Costs

AUSTIN — Educating Texas' 300,000 handicapped children may cost the state about $600 million over the next two years, Midland Sen. Pete Snelson predicted Thursday.

But the massive expenditure won't handicap other education programs he said.

Snelson, who chaired an interim legislative committee on special education, released the panel's 39-point plan for improving services to handicapped children in public schools. And although that spending estimate took a $106-million jump from 1978-79 figures, he says budget plans are in line with other preliminary spending figures.

"Our recommendations are already in the framework of the budget allocations of the Legislative Budget Board (The state agency responsible for writing budget proposals for review of the Legislature)," Snelson said.

And, he added, the committee is in "excellent shape to obtain legislative and administrative approval of most of the suggestions and recommendations" in the report.

Local school districts will have to take on an increasingly costly burden through state and federal requirements that handicapped children be educated in the "least restrictive environment," Snelson said, but, he added, that doesn't mean Texas schools are automatically required to "mainstream" all handicapped children, placing them in regular classrooms rather than in special education settings.

The report also recommends more coordination of services provided by 14 state agencies to handicapped children, more efficient use of the Texas Education Agency's 20 regional education service centers and providing special allocations to school districts with special needs.

Broadcasters Hit FCC Investigation

WASHINGTON (AP) — A broadcast industry group is accusing the Federal Communications Commission of engaging in a "fishing expedition" in its new inquiry into the amount of time that radio and television stations set aside for community service programs.

The regulatory agency initiated the inquiry at the behest of the United States Catholic Conference, which requested that it create a separate category for community service programs when it reviews the performance of broadcast stations seeking renewal of their licenses.

In comments filed with the FCC, however, the National Association of Broadcasters noted that the Supreme Court has denied governmental attempts to control station programming. And it rejected any notion of a "right of access" by community service groups demanding air time for more "cultural" programs.

Oil Equipment Facility Plans Altered

CAPE CHARLES, Va. (AP) — The unexpected announcement by Brown Root Inc. of an indefinite suspension of planning for a huge facility to build offshore oil equipment has left consternation, and some pleasure, on the Eastern Shore.

"We have also suspended all our planning and will evaluate our alternatives," J.T. Holland, chairman of the Northampton County Board of Supervisors, said Thursday.

George J. Savage, an opponent of the plan for the five years it has been proposed, chuckled when asked for his reaction, then said with obvious satisfaction that he had no comment.

Opinion of shore residents has been divided since the plan's inception in January 1974, but the proposal survived a court challenge by opponents.

Holland said he thinks there is a gleam of hope for the project should there be a major oil find in the Baltimore Canyon off the East Coast.

"There has been no such find to date, and this was a major factor in the suspension," said David Cooney, director of public relations for Brown Root.

Cooney, speaking from the engineering construction firm's Houston office, denied published reports that Brown Root has pulled out of the Eastern Shore project.

"Brown Root is in a period of reassessment of the eventual use of this property," he said.

He said the company could resume its planning at a later date, or sell the 2,000 acres it owns around Cape Charles to another industrial firm for possible development.

A Brown Root official had said in December that the firm hoped to get all the necessary permits and begin construction in 1979.

"I would be less than candid to say that the announcement of the suspension didn't come as a great disappointment to me," said Cape Charles Mayor George E. Ward.

"I feel it closes an era that could have meant economic benefit to our communities and our people."

The Brown Root complex would have provided an estimated 1,500 to 3,000 jobs in the rural area over the first two years of development.

Holland said unemployment is high on the Eastern Shore. "There is nothing for your people to do," he said.

Opponents, including Savage, have said that the magnitude of the project scared them. An impact study said many expressed fear that the project "would obliterate a genteel way of life."

The plans of Brown Root were the mafor campaign issue in the board of supervisors election in Northampton County in

Union Members Walk Off Jobs At Port Neches

PORT NECHES (AP) — Operations at the Texas-U.S. Chemical plant in Port Neches were crippled Thursday after members of the Oil Chemical and Atomic Workers local and six craft unions walked off their jobs.

The 375 workers struck Wednesday night after negotiations broke off.

K.B. Johnson, industrial relations manager for the plant, said an orderly shutdown was carried out and supervisory personnel were called in.

Texas-U.S. Chemical and Neches Butane are the only two industries in this petrochemical complex that have not agreed on the two-year national contract OCAW accepted three weeks ago.

Assassin Murders

Turkish Newsman

ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP) — A gunman pumped five bullets into a liberal newspaper editor as he stopped his car at a traffic light on a crowded street here Thursday night, killing him instantly.

Police said two of the bullets pierced the heart of Abdi Ipekci, 50, Premier Bulent Ecevit ordered an all-out search for the killer by Istanbul's martial law authorities.

Ecevit personally called Milliyet and expressed his "most profound sorrows" at the chief editor's death.

Roadblocks were set up in downtown Istanbul and troops carrying submachine guns began combing strategic areas minutes after the premier ordered an intensified manhunt.

A spokesman for the city's martial law command said their search was concentrated around a park in the fashionable Macka district, where Ipekci lived.

Officials said the assailant appeared in front of the victim's car when he was stopped at the light and then fled in a waiting car parked a few yards away.

Ipekci's wife, who heard the gunshots, ran from their home and took him to Sisli Hospital, where he was pronounced dead on arrival.

Ipekci, a former vice president of the International Press Institute, in the last decade built Milliyet into a major newspaper with a circulation of 400,000.

He wrote political commentary in a front-page daily column titled "The Situation" and has been accused in the right-wing press of actively supporting the policies of the left-leaning government.

"This premeditated murder of Ipekci, a journalist respected both at home and abroad, is aimed at destroying Turkey's credibility and democracy," Ecevit said in a statement.

The assassination also drew protests from journalistic associations and professional bodies, which demanded effective government measures to stem politically motivated terrorism in Turkey.

It was the most serious challenge to the government since it proclaimed martial law in 13 of Turkey's 67 provinces last month.

Authorities trace Turkey's violence to the late 1960s when demands by radical students for academic reforms led to creation of Marxist-Leninist guerrilla groups opposed to the government.

Their terrorist acts led to the proclamation of martial law in 1971 and a subsequent crackdown on the Turkish left that sent 4,000 persons to jail. The bulk of the political prisoners later were released.

In the years following the martial law administration, extreme rightists also organized and were pitted against their leftist rivals. Hundreds of persons have been killed in the fighting.

The illegal organizations of the left and right attract about 1,500 persons, who come from rural and poor backgrounds, officials say.

Ecevit's year-old Social Democrat government was met with an unprecedented outburst of political and sectarian terrorism and violence, spreading to the remotest parts of the country and to teenagers.

Political extremists successfully exploited long dormant religious differences between the majority Sunni Moslems and minority Alevis, a Turkish name for the Shiite sect. Late last year 107 persons were killed in clashes between the two groups in southeastern Turkey.

Jury Begins Deliberation In Flood's Bribery Trial

WASHINGTON (AP) — The case of Rep. Daniel J. Flood, charged with bribery, conspiracy and perjury, went to a jury of eight men and four women late Thursday afternoon, but initial deliberation failed to produce a verdict.

After two hours the panel retired to a hotel for the night.

In closing arguments, the government's prosecutor said the time had come for "Mr. Flood to pay the piper." Mark Tuohy, assistant U.S. attorney, said the case shows "not only a scheme of enrichment but a scheme of deniability, and it almost worked."

Axel Kleiboemer, Flood's attorney, said his client is an old man in bad health who has been accused of wrongdoing by "people who are the dogs."

U.S. District Judge Oliver Gasch, in his instructions to the jurors, told them they should consider separately each count of the 11-count indictment against Flood and that in order to find him guilty of the conspiracy charge must conclude that he entered into a formal agreement with his former aide, Stephen Elko, to take payoffs.

Kleiboemer said witnesses against Flood either were convicted of crimes, had a deal with the government or had a motive for testifying against the congressman.

Tuohy asked the jury to remember testimony about six payments laid to Flood and added that one common denominator connects them all, "and that is the man at the top, and that is Daniel Flood."

Flood, a Pennsylvania Democrat serving his 16th term in the House, sat impassively at the table beside his attorneys during the closing arguments, usually with his hands folded in his lap.

Flood is charged with accepting at least $50,000 in bribes in a conspiracy scheme with his former administrative assistant between 1970 and 1976. The three perjury counts stem from Flood's denial under oath that he ever received illegal payments from anyone.

Elko, the government's key witness and now serving two years in prison for perjury and bribery, testified he delivered about $50,000 to Flood.

It's tough to beat Tuf'n Ready for the tough jobs. Because it's the only paper towel with 3 soft, working layers. Which makes it triple tough and incredibly absorbent.

And which makes this a tough offer to beat.

Staff Photos by Ted Simon

By TED J. SIMON
A-J Outdoor Editor

The Y.O. Ranch may be the world's most interesting ranch. It's a working ranch stocking cattle, goats, sheep, and horses. The 550,000 acres of cedar, live oak and rolling hills covered with tall grass produce top quality beef and the ranch also is an important producer of mohair and wool.

Now all of that may not interest the average Texan, but the Y.O. spread also caters to the public in very special ways. Visitors to the Y.O. Ranch, in the Hill Country close to Kerrville, will discover exotic animals from around the world roaming free in a natural habitat. Plus, the Y.O. is home for the world's largest quality herd of registered Texas longhorns.

Remember the July 1976 trail drive for the dedication of the Ranching Heritage Center at Texas Tech? Those longhorns carried the Y.O. brand.

Charles Schreiner obtained the brand in 1880 after serving as a captain in the Civil War and coming to Texas with only $5 in his pocket. During his lifetime, Schreiner became a Texas Ranger, merchant and banker and drove 300,000 head of longhorns from Texas to Dodge City.

Grit and hard work have kept the Y.O. in the Schreiner family through drought and flood for close to a century. Today's ramrod of the ranch is Charles Schreiner III and the foreman is Charles Schreiner IV.

"We're getting more and more people wanting to photograph the exotic animals and the longhorns," Schreiner IV told this writer. "Up till January 1977, we've never been open to the general public. Sightseeing has increased ten-fold since those first few months of being open for photographic safaris."

Hollywood has been visiting the ranch for quite some time. Driving past buffalo, longhorn after longhorn and cowboys that are real cowboys, it's easy to understand why the Y.O. is favored for "on location" filming. Most recently Wolf Brand Chill used the ranch as a setting; Denver Pyle of "Grizzly Adams" felt right at home in the Old Feed Pen area as he stirred a steaming pot of chili.

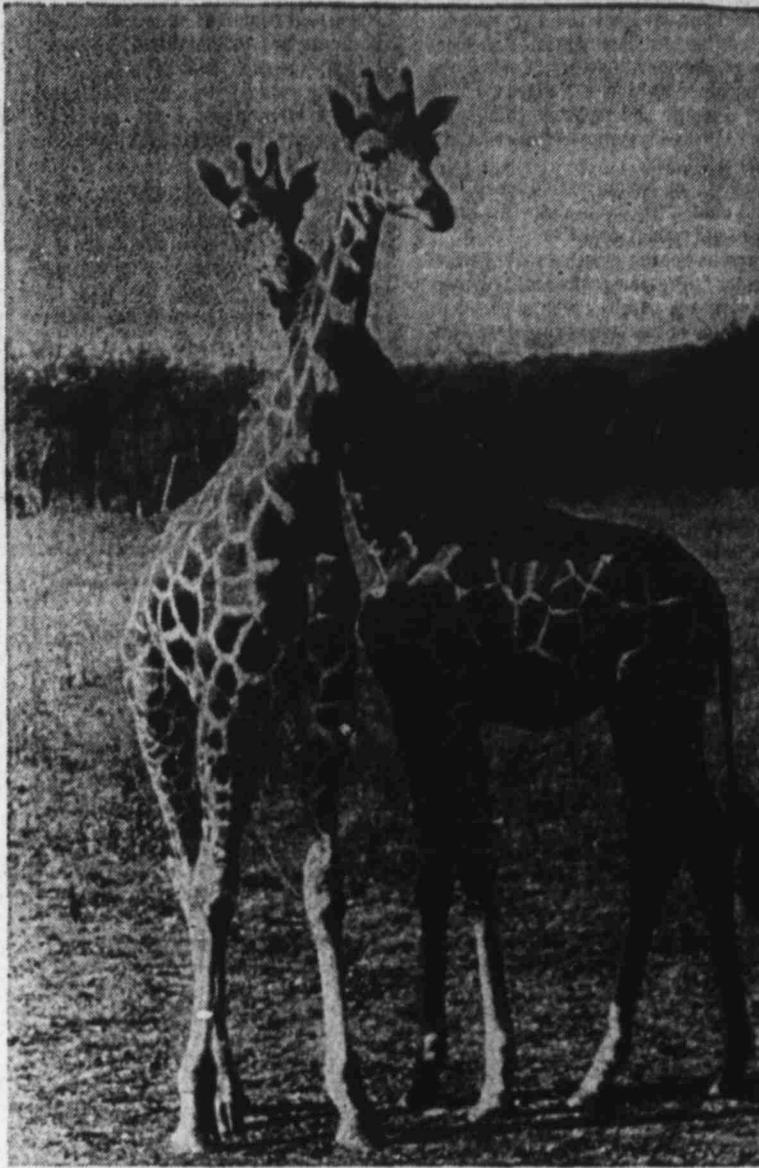

Visiting the ranch can also be like a safari to a foreign land. There are giraffe, ostrich, emu, zebra and other species to represent wildlife from Africa, Europe, India, Japan and Manchuria. Some of the animals are in danger of becoming extinct in their native countries. Consequently, zoos are turning to the Y.O. to acquire exotics where the animals are healthy and thriving because of responsible game management.

Guests wanting to stay overnight at the ranch will find unique lodging in honest-to-goodness Old West structures. There's the Sam Houston Cabin (circa 1852) that was once a school house, the Crockett Cabin (circa 1868) that was originally built near Fredericksburg, the Boone Cabin (circa 1870) was a way station for stage coach travelers, and the Wells Fargo Cabin (circa 1880) is a beautiful example of construction with hand-hewn timbers. Lodging ($65 per person) includes stick-to-the-ribs home cooked meals in the ranch's chuck wagon dining room.

Because the Y.O. is first and foremost a working ranch, accommodations and public tours have to be by advance reservation. More information is available from: Y.O. Ranch, Dept. A-J, Box 300, Mountain Home, Tex. 78058. Telephone (512) 640-3222; the number is toll free from Kerrville.

The entrance to the ranch is 15 miles west of Mountain Home on State Highway 41; ranch headquarters is eight miles north of the entrance.

So take a good slice of ranch life and add a large portion of safari life—the result is a great time for young and old at the Y.O. Ranch.

NECK AND NECK — A pair of giraffes at the Y.O. Ranch near Kerrville take a good look at some camera-clicking sightseers. A special barn with a 27-foot-high roof was designed for the giraffes.

Camp For Youngsters Featured At Hill Country Ranch Facility

The Y.O. has gained fame for its herd of Texas longhorns and exotic game hunting. Now the ranch has added a unique service for young people — an outdoor training center.

Boys and girls at least 11 years of age can now experience the adventure of African-style safari life. Imagine falling asleep in a bush camp with the sound of wild animals in the distance.

In the morning it's up at dawn for a hearty breakfast within sight of an ostrich or zebra or giraffe. Outdoor activities keep the day busy for every youngster. It may be a session in map reading, canoeing, animal behavior or insect identification.

For the Western oriented there's horseback riding instruction, firearm safety or lasso lessons. During the afternoons there's time for swimming, soccer, and baseball. Some of the camp participants use the time to look for arrowheads or study the multitude of birds.

Evenings are usually spent around a campfire discussing conservation, game management and hunting or just looking at the stars and enjoying some small talk.

"The counselor-instructors are full-time employees of our ranch," says foreman Charles Schreiner IV, "and all have college educations."

The Outdoor Awareness Program was so successful during its first summer last year (there were youngsters from many states and several foreign countries) that plans are to have 14 and 21-day camps available this year from February through October. The camps are limited to 80 youngsters and reservations are already being booked.

Leaders of the Outdoor Awareness Programs are Mr. and Mrs. Richard Salmon, formerly of South Africa, where they directed similar outdoor education programs. Needless to say, Richard and Dot Salmon with their two teenage boys feel right at home in the tented African-style safari camp.

Schreiner noted, "This is by far the most unique youth camp I've ever seen. It's really well done." At the Y.O. Ranch that isn't bragging — that is fact.

On the ranch you can hunt blackback antelope native to India, rams native to Corsica and deer native to Europe or Japan.

If this sounds like a "walk up to a corral and shoot 'em" situation you're wrong, very wrong. While there are animals in special pastures for photographic purposes, the game animals for hunting are roaming free and they're easily spooked.

WHITTILING TIME — Button Forehand, in charge of hunter reservations at the Y.O. Ranch, says "We get a lot of repeat business from satisfied hunters. Sometimes reservations are made a year in advance."

LONGHORN COUNTRY — A visitor from Canada prepares to take her first picture of an honest-to-goodness Texas longhorn. The Y.O. Ranch has America's first registered Texas longhorn herd. The ranch runs approximately 400 head of the early-day cattle.

Nixon, Mitchell Renew Interrupted Friendship

WASHINGTON (AP) — Richard M. Nixon had a lengthy, unannounced reunion this week with John N. Mitchell, who served a 19-month prison term for his part in the Watergate cover-up. "They're still good friends," said a mutual friend. It was the first time the former president had seen his former attorney general, law partner and campaign manager since Mitchell was released Jan. 19 from a federal prison camp in Alabama.

They met Wednesday at a private estate near Middleburg, Va., where Nixon stayed during Chinese Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping's visit to Washington. Nixon met Teng twice during the three-day official visit, the last time for nearly an hour at Teng's guest quarters across Pennsylvania Avenue from the White House. The friend of Nixon and Mitchell, who asked that he not be named, told a reporter Thursday that the two met for lunch at the Middleburg estate and spent two to three hours together. Mitchell was accompanied by Mary Gore Dean, a Maryland socialite and frequent companion whom Mitchell is rumored to be interested in marrying. Speaking of Nixon and Mitchell, the friend said: "The world doesn't know they're still good friends."

Nixon had once suggested that Mitchell shoulder full responsibility for the Watergate cover-up, which drove the president from office in the face of threatened impeachment. But Mitchell has never uttered a harsh word about Nixon and refused to permit his defense lawyers to do so.

"He was very loyal to the president, and the president was not very loyal to him," former Sen. Sam J. Ervin, D-N.C., chairman of the Senate Watergate committee, said recently of Mitchell.

Nixon was named as an unindicted co-conspirator by a federal grand jury investigating Watergate. Soon after Nixon resigned the presidency in August 1974, his successor, Gerald R. Ford, pardoned Nixon for any crimes he might have committed while in office.

The 65-year-old Mitchell was the oldest and last of the 25 Watergate defendants to go to prison. He served 19 months of a 2½-to-8-year prison sentence for conspiracy, obstruction of justice and lying under oath in connection with the Watergate cover-up.

Of the 19 months, five were spent on medical furlough for two operations — for replacing a section of abdominal artery and receiving a plastic hip socket. Besides suffering ill health, Mitchell is not only disabled and unable to practice law but is said to be nearly broke.

The mutual friend said Mitchell visited

Nixon at San Clemente, Calif., at least twice before going to prison. He said the two men recently had been in frequent contact by telephone.

Girl Wants Abandoned Baby

BARTOW, Fla. (AP) — A 16-year-old Georgia girl walked into the Polk County sheriff's office Thursday claiming to be the mother of a 2-month-old baby abandoned at a truck stop near Tampa, deputies said.

The teen-ager, who lives in Macon, was accompanied by her parents, authorities said. She brought a birth certificate and sought to regain custody of a healthy dark-haired infant who is in a shelter home temporarily as a ward of the state.

A truck driver, who requested anonymity, told police he picked up a young hitchhiker with a baby in her arms in Daytona Beach Monday. He said the woman, who called herself Lisa and said the baby was named Matthew, tried to get rid of the baby by "advertising" over a citizens band radio in his truck.

Later, telling the driver she was going to a rest room at a truck stop, she rode off in another truck, leaving the baby behind, the trucker told officers.

Police declined to release the girl's name because of her age. Authorities said they had requested footprints from a hospital in Georgia to make sure the baby was hers.

The girl's mother said her daughter has had mental problems and that her husband left her before the child was born. She said the girl left Georgia Sunday.

The woman said her daughter called her from Atlanta after abandoning the baby and that with the aid of her pastor she persuaded the girl to return with her to Florida to get the baby back.

MINI CASINO — Slot machines such as these in Old Orchard Beach, Maine are proliferating in bars and hotels across the state. Maine's five-year-old gambling law permits small stakes gambling when the proceeds go to charity and churches. (AP Laserphoto)

Maine's Penny-Ante Gambling Law Turns Into Runaway

AUGUSTA, Maine (AP) — Maine's nickel-and-dime gambling law was passed to benefit cub scouts, churches and other charities. Six years later, it has opened the door to a multi-million dollar operation with salesmen for Nevada companies pushing slot-machines in bars, hotels and bowling alleys.

Today, more than 700 "non-profit organizations" are licensed to run one-armed bandits, wheels of fortune, poker games, beano, craps.

And of about 400 licensed slot machines, about 150 are set up in bars and hotels — even though they are sponsored by "charities."

Slot-machine proliferation has been especially heavy in the last six months, helping gambling to become a $17 million business in Maine last year, according to State Police records.

Of that total, slot-machine distributors from as far away as Nevada took $4.2 million out of the state, according to State Sen. Richard H. Pierce, who wants the one-armed bandits restricted.

Maine's new Commissioner of Public Safety, Arthur Stulphen, says he has no evidence that organized crime is behind the expansion, although he concedes that gambling "may have burgeoned beyond what the legislature thought it ought to become."

Stulphen jokes about it: "It may be that we have to put gambling in this state back into the country fairs and churches where it has always been."

But to Pierce, it is no joke. He thinks organized crime is involved, and he wants a law passed to sharply restrict the one-armed bandits.

"It stinks," says the Waterville Republican.

But even Pierce is pessimistic about the chances for his bill.

"How are you going to fight the Elks, the American Legion..." he says. "It's politically impossible to wipe the thing out."

The law says gambling is permissible only to benefit charity. It restricts bets to a quarter and the return on a bet to $150.

It also was written to bar slot machines — "any machine which operates by inserting a coin, token or similar object." But machine distributors got around that with "remote control gambling devices" — with the whirling symbols of slot machines but no slot for coins.

These, the bartender triggers electronically, after a customer pays at the bar for "credits" equivalent to nickels and dimes.

No change pours out when a gambler wins — those, too, are toted up as "credits" — but lights flash, bells ring, and customers wait to the thrill. A gambler may drop $5 or $10 a night before ambling back to his seat at the bar for another drink.

"I might play it for a dollar, or for five," says Steven Sargent, exalted ruler of the Elks Lodge in Augusta. "Last night a fellow played $1 and won $150. It was a little moment of joy."

At first, these "slots" sprouted up in Elks clubs, American Legion Halls and recreational clubs with names like the Montagnard Snowshoe Club and the Kitty Cat Club in Lewiston.

It soon became clear that a private lodge could average $150 a night from each slot machine. Many clubs have two.

Then, six months ago, mini-casinos began popping up in hotels and taverns in virtually every large city.

Now salesmen for distributors actively recruit "charities" to sponsor the slot machines, says State Police Corporal Robert McLaughlin, who licenses games of chance for the state. He adds that charities are being "founded overnight and applying for gambling licenses the next day."

Many of the charities are legitimate. The Band Boosters in the coastal resort of Old Orchard Beach, for example, say they earned $17,000 last year from their casino and bought new band uniforms.

But McLaughlin says he gets five to 10 applications a week from organizations he terms "pretty shaky."

And a non-profit sponsor generally earns only 25 percent of the take from slots placed in bars, after prize money is subtracted. The bar gets 25 percent, the distributor 50 percent.

Hazel Green's, an Augusta restaurant near the Capitol which attracts many lawmakers, put two Bally slot machines, made in Nevada, into its lounge last October to benefit the Augusta Youth Hockey League.

Records filed with the State Police show that in one month, one of the slots took in more than $2,000, and the hockey players got $292.

Panel Recommends Aid For Training Hospitals

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff
Lubbock County Hospital District officials Thursday were elated that a Senate Committee has recommended state aid to hospitals serving as the primary training ground for Texas' eight medical schools.

Among the beneficiaries would be the district's fledgling Health Sciences Center Hospital, the primary teaching facility of the Texas Tech University School of Medicine.

"This bill means our survival," Jack Strong, chairman of the hospital district's board of managers, said of legislation endorsed by the Senate Human Resources Committee.

"We're doing the best we can locally — we've got to have some help from the state level. After all, the doctors who are trained at our hospital will serve people throughout Texas, not just in Lubbock County."

The human resources panel Wednesday gave a favorable recommendation to a bill sponsored by Sen. Chet Brooks, D-Pasadena, that would allow the state to assume part of the costs at teaching hospitals.

The measure goes next to the full Senate for its consideration.

Brooks said his bill would authorize the state to compensate teaching hospitals for resident physicians — medical school graduates who are taking advanced training. The amount would be decided by the appropriations bill, but it could be as much as $15,000 per resident, Brooks said.

"Our residents are running us about $1.5 million a year," Strong said. "If the state would pick up this cost, it would help us out tremendously."

The current $1.5 million annual cost involves about 94 residents. But by 1982, the Tech-affiliated hospital is expected to have about 145 residents — at a cost of about $3.6 million a year, said Gerald Bosworth, executive director of the hospital district and teaching hospital.

The hospital district's annual tax revenues amount to only about $3.5 million, and about $400,000 of that is needed for Emergency Medical Services (EMS) operations.

"This is one of the great reasons why we need passage of legislation providing for funding of residents in teaching hospitals," Bosworth said.

This week, Bosworth and Strong represented the Lubbock hospital district in Austin to promote the teaching hospitals' cause.

"All of the teaching hospitals are in the same boat," Strong said. "The problem is that each of us is limited to using local funds in providing a service that has statewide benefits."

Warren G. Harding, executive director of the Bexar County Hospital District, served as spokesman for the teaching hospitals. He told the Senate committee the medical schools' teaching hospitals merit state aid because the graduates of their programs serve all of Texas.

Bosworth and Strong both said the outlook for passage of the legislation seems promising.

A companion bill to Brooks' proposal is being co-sponsored in the House by state Rep. Froy Salinas of Lubbock.

During the 1977 legislative session, such a bill got through the House but was stalled in the closing hours in the Senate.

Harding said a 1976-77 study showed operating costs at teaching hospitals were 22 percent higher than at other hospitals. "These costs result from a much higher input of manpower, supplies, services and equipment along with higher output requirements," he said.

Critics of Brooks' bill said it includes only the hospitals directly tied to medical schools and does not consider the many other hospitals that help train health professionals.

The probable cost of Brooks' bill, if the budget is set at the maximum $15,000 per resident, would be $27.5 million in 1980 and $30 million in 1981, according to Thomas M. Keel, director of the Legislative Budget Board.

Residents who are already paid by the state would not be included in the measure.

The primary teaching hospitals for the University of Texas System are the Dallas County Hospital District, the Bexar County Hospital District in San Antonio, Herman Hospital in Houston and the University of Texas Medical Branch at Galveston.

The North Texas School of Osteopathic Medicine uses the Fort Worth Osteopathic Hospital, and Baylor College of Medicine uses the Harris County Hospital District.

Besides Lubbock's Health Sciences Center Hospital, the Texas Tech medical school has affiliated hospitals in El Paso, Amarillo and Odessa.

The Texas A&M University medical school is linked with Scott and White Hospital in Temple.

Battle Of Breweries Foaming To A Head

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's two leading breweries got hopping mad at each other Thursday, with both Miller Brewing Co. and Anheuser-Busch Inc. firing off press releases attacking each other.

Miller, No. 2 brewery in the United States had filed a complaint with the Federal Trade Commission over use of the word "natural" in Anheuser-Busch's advertising. A press release summarizing the complaint was distributed to reporters.

Industry leader Anheuser-Busch responded with its own press release calling the Miller action "deliberately misleading regarding our brewing process."

The FTC already is concerned about alleged misuse of the word "natural" to describe foods. If the commissioners adopt the recommendation of their staff, use of such terms as "natural" and "organic" would be curbed and the words "health food" would be banned from food advertising.

Miller accused Anheuser-Busch of adding "a processed chemical additive, tannic acid" to its beers. Budweiser, Michelob, Busch and Natural Light. Miller also said its leading rival uses such chemicals as calcium sulfate and sulfuric acid to treat the water used in brewing.

Anheuser-Busch's "beechwood aging," according to Miller, actually consists of "dumping chemically treated lumber into a glass-lined or stainless steel beer storage tank."

The chemical treatment includes boiling for up to 25 hours, part of the time with the addition of large amounts of sodium bicarbonate, Miller said.

A public relations firm representing Anheuser-Busch quickly responded. "We are proud of the fact that we are able to use the word 'natural' in the marketing of our beers. Miller cannot use this term to describe its products and apparently has resorted to this type of play as a 'sour grapes' tactic."

The statement distributed by the Washington and New York firm of Marston and Rothenberg also said Anheuser-Busch has advocated full-ingredient labeling and its labels have been approved by the government.

It is considered unlikely the FTC would take up the Miller complaint against Anheuser-Busch, but more likely it would approve the staff-recommended regulation on advertising claims for all foods, not just for beer.

Agency Questions Heat Pump Ad Data

WASHINGTON (AP) — Associated Equipment Co. has discontinued some advertising for Westinghouse Hi-Re-Li Heat Pumps after questions were raised by the Better Business Bureaus.

Promotion literature for the pumps showed comparisons with other products.

The BBB asked for substantiation of the claims and, after studying data submitted by the firm, contended that the methods of assessing efficiency were not appropriate for all types of heat pumps.

At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK

A lot of mothers I know are downright meddling when it comes to their children's selection of a boyfriend or a girlfriend.

They want to know how old, how tall, what their father does, where they live, the scope of their education, what their plans are for the future, and how they feel about children.

I don't care about any of those things. All I want to know is, "Is he or she a local call or a toll?"

I don't remember names or faces of old flames. All I remember is their area code. One of my sons once dated an area code 513 for six months. It was marriage by Ma Bell. I figured we were spending $35 a month to share such insights as:

"What are you doing?"

"Nothing, what are you doing?"

"I don't want to interrupt you if you're doing something."

"I told you I wasn't doing anything."

"You sure?"

"I'm sure."

"So, what's new?"

Another one of my kids showed an interest in a lovely girl who lived just a few miles from us. It was great. I didn't have to worry about a deep involvement because they were never off the phone. He set his alarm to call her in the morning. At night I used to go in and remove the phone from his ear as he slept. It was like hanging up an umbilical cord.

As soon as they left one another at school in the afternoon they would shout, "I'll call you when I get home." I offered to feed him intravenously.

The suggestion by my husband to put a timer by the phone with sand running through was ridiculous. However, I did slip a calendar under his door and circle the month.

Panic didn't set in until one day when I was standing near and saw him dial 1.

"Who are you calling?" I asked.

"You know," he said, "The same person I've been talking with for the last month."

"But I thought she was a local call."

"Don't worry," he said. "It only costs about eight cents a minute. Besides, this isn't just some silly kid infatuation. This is a person I genuinely care for and want to spend the rest of my life with. She's important to me. She's special and there isn't anything I wouldn't do for her."

"I'm glad to hear you say that," I said.

"because according to the phone bill you owe us $36.86 in long distance charges."

I learned something that day. When toll charges enter the room, love goes right out the window.

Hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

Occasionally the engine in some late model automobiles will continue to run when the ignition is turned off. This does not always indicate serious trouble.

However, letting the engine run in this manner for a long period of time could cause some damage.

The problem is most apt to occur when the engine is heated more than normal, which may result from hot weather driving, or from the engine running at low speeds with accessories operating. It could also occur if a lower than specified grade of fuel is used.

When the engine continues to run this way, put the ignition to the "on" position, let the engine idle (do not depress the accelerator), apply the brakes, place the automatic transmission control in the "drive" position, then turn the ignition to "off."

The engine will stop. Finally, the transmission control should be placed in the "park" position.

This should do it! — John Dolan

Well, thank you, Mr. Dolan, I've always wondered why my car kept "chugging" after I was ready to quit. This tip should help a lot of motorists out there. I love you for sharing this with us all. Kisses! — Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

I don't like the "feel" of a new razor blade when I'm shaving my legs, so I bought a razor just like my husband's.

I have him save his old blades (he only uses them a couple of times each).

I still get a good shave and I never run out of blades either, because he is always giving me a new (or should I say slightly old) supply.

It's very economical. — V.E.W.

LETTER OF THOUGHT

DEAR HELOISE:

I enjoy your column very much and it is very surprising how often I see a "hint" that has become an automatic method.

Amazing how much we learn in a lifetime and how easy it is to take such knowledge for granted, isn't it? — Georgia Griffin

It sure is. — Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

My 13-year-old granddaughter filled our spring-type paper napkin holder, bent one corner of each napkin, and said, "Grandma, don't you think the napkins will be easier to pull out with the bent corners?"

They are, so just thought if no one had already tried this, it was worth suggesting. — Mrs. LaVerne Howard

THIS COLUMN is written for you, the homemaker. If you have a hint or a problem write to Heloise, 235 E. 45th St., New York, N.Y. 10017. Because of the tremendous volume of mail, Heloise is unable to answer individual letters. She will, however, answer your questions in her column whenever possible.

Exhibits Can Enhance Photographer's Reputation

By IRVING DESFOR
Associated Press Writer

Many competent photographers feel their work rates exhibition in a gallery. I turned to Chuck Kurta, director of Nikon House Gallery in New York City's Rockefeller Center, to discuss the subject as this week's guest columnist.

To show or not to show? That is the question that faces many photographers around the country whose skill with a camera creates images that they compare with those they see at exhibitions. However, a question that should be asked first is: Why do you want a show?

If it is to make money, be sure to approach galleries that sell pictures. Some galleries, such as Nikon House in New York, are only for exhibition purposes and can't sell pictures. Therefore, if you plan to sell prints, be prepared for the percentage that galleries get and price your pictures accordingly.

Many photographers want an exhibition to increase their photographic reputation and are not primarily motivated by selling their prints. This is a good approach for photographers who can invite their private and commercial clients to such an event and thereby enhance their prestige and possibly earn more through increased business.

Actually, most people seeking an exhibition turn out to be on an "ego trip" and often think their work is much better than it actually is. Photographers tend to be poor judges of their own work, and this often is revealed by the portfolios they show to gallery directors.

However, if determined to give it a try, start by contacting galleries as near to your home as possible and be prepared for rejections. Remember that most galleries have more material available to them than they have room to show. Most are booked a year in advance and some even longer.

Galleries look for specific things to exhibit. Those that sell prints look for pictures that they are sure will sell. They have to in order to stay in business and they are better judges than you are about your pictures. Galleries that are endorsed by a business or organization tend to select shows that fit into a yearly program.

For example, Nikon House shows are chosen to exemplify many different types of photography in a program year. The goal is not only to show excellent photography but also to show the public the many areas that exist in photography.

In a particular year, there probably would be only one travel show, one photojournalism show, one nude photography show, a show of photomicrography, an underwater show, a nature show, etc.

So a "No" received on your show may not have any reflection on the quality of your work; it just may not fit into a gallery's planned program.

Most gallery directors look for uniqueness in subject matter as well as excellent images. During the last year, for instance, portfolios submitted included a collection of lighthouses, circus life, portraits of women in bed (dressed, not nudes), sea farming, toys and masks. So with a wide variety of subjects to choose from, when putting a portfolio together, try to be unique.

Gallery directors are turned off by cliché material, subjects that have been overdone and local scenes that have worn out their welcome.

Assuming you are lucky and receive a "Yes" on a show, most galleries offer ample time to prepare for an exhibition. Determine at once what the gallery will provide and what you are responsible for.

Mounting your show is extremely important. Find out the gallery's preference in mounts and frames. What sizes should prints be? Do they like glass? Again speaking for Nikon House, we prefer flush mounts in box frames, or on foam core, with no glass since it creates reflection and lighting problems.

Use the best processing lab you can find and spend the most you can afford on the printing, unless you're an expert and can do it yourself. The costs involved may run from the hundreds of dollars up to several thousand if large dye-transfer color prints have to be made. Specifically, the expenses for prints ran to $800 for Ben Martin's exhibition on Marcel Marceau and cost $9,000 for Neil Leifer's display on Sports because of the large number of color prints. The expenses are borne by the photographer or a book publisher if one is involved. Many photographers assume the costs are picked up by the gallery. They are not.

Unless designing is another facet of your talent, leave the design and hanging how to the gallery. Their experience in this area should be given priority.

Prepare for the opening even if you have to do the press and public relations work yourself. Get the media interested and try to arrange for interviews on the local talk shows and with newspaper columnists.

The opening night calls for the most impressive invitation list you can muster. Include the press, influential friends, local politicians and celebrities as well as your clients and personal boosters.

After the show is over, evaluate it. Did it achieve what you expected? If not, why not? If it did, what's your next step? If it is still intact as an exhibition, can it be scheduled elsewhere? No matter what, the exhibition experience can be another stepping stone in your progress in photography.

Shaggy Sheepdog Easy To Make

Every child, whether five or fifteen, has visions of having a fluffy puppy to call his own. However, the very thought of this dearly-dreamed-of creature brings grimaces to many parents' faces.

The battle is age-old and many a tear has been shed over the subject. There may be a solution to suit all: a latch-hook-in-the-round, stuffed, shaggy sheep-dog. He is easily completed, cuddly, and he will bring smiles all round.

And even if you're not all that familiar with latch hook, don't hesitate. After a few punches of yarn through the canvas, you'll be latch hooking like a pro. As you complete this new-found friend, you'll see him spring to life as the fluffy puppy your child will treasure.

The sheepdog kit comes complete with printed design on 3.75 mesh canvas, polyester rug yarn, corduroy backing for the ears, needle and easily-followed instructions. You supply the stuffing of your choice. This playful pooch measures a huggable 9-inches x 14-inches.

Special Blades Made For Cutting Bottles

By ANDY LANG
Associated Press Writer

Q — I will soon have to cut some bottles for a project that I am working on. Can I use a hacksaw for making these cuts?

A — Yes, but you must use one of the various blades made for such purposes. A friend of mine got good results about a year ago with a hacksaw blade that had a cutting edge made of tungsten carbide. Almost any hardware store, lumber yard or seller of do-it-yourself materials carries special blades for cutting glass. Ask the dealer's advice regarding your particular project, especially about the kind of bottles you intend to cut.

kind of wood. Also, when burning cherry wood, you will find it gives up a scent that is pleasant to most people.

Q — I want how deep should the drainage tiles be?

A — While a dry well usually will work effectively if it is about 8 feet from the house, it is better to place it even farther than that — 16 to 20 feet if possible. The tiles, which are more like pieces of pipe, should be laid in a trench one to two feet deep, slanted slightly in the direction of the well. While the joints need not be watertight, they should be covered with building paper.

Leaky faucets, clogged drains, balky toilet tanks and noisy water pipes are among the subjects discussed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Simple Plumbing Repairs," which can be obtained by sending 35 cents AND a stamped, long, self-addressed envelope, to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, N.Y., 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column, but individual correspondence cannot be undertaken.

Soviets Release Eight Stamps To Mark Olympic Games Site

By SYD KRONISH
Associated Press Writer

With the Olympics a year away, the Soviet Union is continuing its stamp-issuing splurge with the release of eight new semi-postals. The commemoratives mark the participation of 16 "Golden Cities" as sites for the 1980 Olympic Games.

The series derives its name from the glittering golden domes and gates of the cities' ancient cathedrals. All the stamps are the same denomination — one ruble plus 50 kopecks.

The first two stamps in the set feature the city of Zagorsk, about 40 miles north of Moscow, focal point of religious pilgrimages for more than 500 years. One shows the coat of arms and the golden dome rising above the fortress wall. The other depicts the Yuri Gagarin Palace of Culture, re-named for the world's first man in space, plus the city coat-of-arms.

Another pair is for the city of Rostov-Veliky. The first shows the towers and walls of the Rostov Kremlin and the five-domed church of St. John. The second bears a view of the monastery.

A third-duo is dedicated to Peraslavl-Zalesky, about 85 miles northeast of Moscow. One stamp depicts a monument to Czar Peter the Great. The other illustrates the bust of Alexander Nevski, 13th-century co-ruler of the city, plus the monument to World War II soldiers.

The fourth set of two hails the city of Yaroslavl, some 160 miles north of Moscow. One pictures the corner watchtower and walls of the monastery plus the coat-of-arms. The other adhesive features scenes of the modern city and a war-memorial obelisk.

Collectors in this country can purchase these stamps and first day covers from their local dealers or directly from the "1980 Olympic Stamp Program, P.O. Box 1980, Dayton, Ohio, 45401."

Malta has plans for six stamp sets during the 1979 fiscal year. The first will feature Flemish tapestries and is the third set in the series. The second hails the "end of the military facilities agreement." In May there will be a set honoring "Europa." The International Year of the Child will be commemorated with a special stamp in June. A series dedicated to

"Marine Life" is scheduled for October. The final stamps in November will be Malta's annual Christmas set, always noted as one of the most beautiful of all Christmas issuances. Their 1978 Christmas set consisted of four stamps featuring Christmas street lights and decorations in Malta.

UFO Researcher Hynek Convinced They Exist

By RUTHANNE BROCKWAY
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Dr. J. Allen Hynek studied UFOs for more than 18 years before deciding that they indeed existed, and not just in people's imaginations.

The astronomer, who served as technical adviser to the film "Close Encounters of the Third Kind," said at a Thursday press conference, "As late as 1966 I was still a skeptic — I was the one who coined the phrase "swamp gas" for some UFO reports — and then I realized that not all those reports could be attributed to nuts."

Files at the Center for UFO Studies at Northwestern University in Evanston, Ill., of which Hynek is the director, contain 75,000 reports on unidentified flying objects seen in 133 countries.

But Hynek noted a distinction between believing in little green men and believing in UFOs.

"The public makes a big mistake in thinking that a UFO is synonymous with visitors from outer space," he said.

But he also pointed out that the creatures in the "Close Encounters" film were based on descriptions of creatures sometimes associated with UFOs. Those creatures, about four to five feet tall, had large heads and spindly bodies.

It was Dr. Hynek who originated the phrase "close encounter" while he was classifying UFO reports. His two general categories were encounters far away and those close, defined as any sighting closer than 500 feet.

Close encounters were further categorized into: those of the first kind, where the UFO is close but nothing tangible happens; encounters of the second kind, where the UFO "leaves its calling card" by such things as broken tree branches or stopping car engines; and the ultimate UFO experience — a close encounter of the third kind — is when a creature or being is present in connection with the craft.

Hynek admits he hasn't experienced a close encounter of the third kind — his two personal experiences in sighting UFOs have been of the distant variety.

Hoaxes are relatively rare, he said, although many people honestly mistake other objects for UFOs. The center studies all reports to cull the unidentifiable from the identifiable: weather balloons, satellites, planets, airplanes and other phenomena.

Explanations for UFOs could be a parallel reality, another dimension, a product of our own psychic energy or visitors from other planets, Dr. Hynek said. "But some form of intelligence is exhibited by UFOs, yes."

Whether you are a total skeptic or very gullible, Hynek says there are three undeniable facts: UFO reports not only exist, they persist over the years; reports come from all over the world; and many reports come from highly credible, often technically trained, sources.

"When I began studying UFO reports for the Air Force back in 1948, I would have laughed if you had told me there would still be UFO reports today," Dr. Hynek said. "I thought it was a fad, like the hula hoop or a case of postwar nerves."

Dr. Hynek arrived at Lubbock's airport wearing a straw cowboy hat and carrying his own luggage, looking totally unlike any preconceived vision of a UFO "freak."

But one of the most freakish topics he discussed was the possibility of a connection between UFOs and the mutilation of cattle, which has been reported in many areas of the country, Texas included.

He has examined photographs of mutilated cattle and said there is a pattern: the animals' sexual organs are usually removed and the incisions are very precise, almost like surgical cutting.

In many of the mutilation reports, nearby residents claim to have seen flashing lights or objects that look and sound like helicopters.

While Hynek didn't make any definite claims about such reports, he did question with a trace of irony in his voice, "Wouldn't you think if it were helicopters they could trace them?" And, of course, usually officials cannot find any evidence of helicopters flying in the area at the time of the cattle mutilations.

Hynek, who served as astronomical consultant to the U.S. Air Force in its Projects Sign and Blue Book, admitted the government sometimes withholds information on UFO reports.

"It's not a sinister sort of cover-up," he said. "You can cover up intelligence and you can cover up ignorance."

He said in some cases the government tried to keep reports hushed because they have no explanation for the sightings. "It's not so hot for the Air Force to admit they're helpless," he noted. "It's not good public relations."

Witnesses to UFOs in Lubbock and other areas have reported many shades of light: red, green, white, blue and combinations. But Hynek said color is the least reliable data on UFOs.

"Colors are subjective," he said, noting that what one person would call blue, another person might describe as greenish. But he did say most witnesses agree that there is a change in color when the craft takes off.

Sounds too are frequently reported in connection with UFO sightings and it is more reliable information, he said. Two of the most commonly reported noises are a whoosh and a high-pitched whine something similar to the sound of a dentist's drill.

Most reports received by the Center for UFO Studies are from police departments that receive calls from city residents. Hynek said this leads him to believe there are many more sightings than are actually reported.

"After all, if I had a close encounter in my backyard, would I report that to the police?" he asked. Most people would be afraid the police would send a paddy wagon, he said.

Jury Deadlocked In Shooting Case

A mistrial was declared Thursday in 137th District Court when a jury was unable to reach a verdict in an aggravated assault case against Sammie Beaty Jr., 31, of 4906 39th St.

The jurors announced that they were deadlocked about 4:30 p.m. after deliberating 3 1/2 hours.

Beaty was accused of shooting a bartender last May 1 at the All New Body Shop club at 1108 25th St.

The bartender, Arion Shipman, 33, who was shot in the left arm and shoulder, and others who were in the club during the 11:45 p.m. shooting identified Beaty as the gunman.

Beaty testified that he was not the one who came back into the club, shot Shipman and left after about 15 seconds.

Witnesses said Beaty had been ejected from the club about 45 minutes before the shooting. The defendant testified that he did not return.

Assistant Criminal District Attorney Hollis Browning prosecuted. Harley Huff represented Beaty.

Veterans' Queries Stress Compensation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here are some queries regularly received by the Veterans Administration and the answers:

—I receive VA disability compensation at the 40 percent rate. I recently married. Can I get any additional money for my wife?

Effective Oct. 1, 1978, veterans rated at 30 percent disability or more for service-connected causes can receive additional amounts for dependents.

—My 10-year eligibility period for education assistance will end before I complete my training. Is there any way I can get an extension?

Extension can be granted only when a veteran can show that a physical or mental disability, not wilfully incurred, prevented starting or completing a training program.

Duckling Ignores Story Line

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — In the fairy tale, the ugly duckling turns into a beautiful swan. But a duck residing in a pond at the state port in Wilmington apparently hasn't heard that story.

The duckling not only remains ugly, but chases burly longshoremen.

"He's a ferocious critter, too," said Jimmy Moore, boat captain for U.S. Customs at the port terminal and the man who put the duck in the pond.

Moore said he brought the duck to the pond after it outgrew its welcome at his home.

"My wife bought two little ducks for my little boy for Easter two years ago," he said. "At first, both ducklings would fit in a coffee cup."

Moore said his wife is probably the only person the duck will allow to approach it. "I go down there and he runs me all around the yard," he said.

Seal Finds Home In Tub

MYSTIC, Conn. (AP) — J. Lawrence Dunn has his bathtub back and an overnight guest has a new home.

Dunn, who lives in Charleston, R.I., is the veterinarian for Mystic Marineland Aquarium. He took a female harbor seal home for observation and kept it in his bathtub after it was found beached on Block Island, N.Y. The unnamed seal was transferred to the aquarium Wednesday.

"It seemed so lively this morning — it jumped out of the bathtub and ran around and stuff — that he decided to bring it here," aquarium spokeswoman Julie Ladwig said.

Miss Ladwig said Dunn determined the Atlantic harbor seal had pneumonia in its left lung and heartworms. He fed it intravenously and gave it medicine.

Miss Ladwig said the seal is probably about 9 months old. It may be transferred this spring to the aquarium's Seal Island exhibit, which counts nine harbor seals among its 43 residents.

Son Born To Poet

BOURNEMOUTH, England (AP) — Soviet poet Yevgeny Yevtushenko has a new son, the Royal Victoria Hospital said Thursday.

The 7-pound baby, named Alexander, and his 25-year-old British-born mother "are doing well," the hospital in this south coast resort said Thursday.

The birth in England means Alexander will have dual British and Soviet nationality. Yevtushenko, 45, met his wife, Jan, when she was studying Russian literature at Moscow State University and she became his translator and personal assistant. They married last April.

Inmate Earns Award

SEATTLE (AP) — Tim Scully's honor as the state Jaycees' Outstanding Young Man of the Year is a bit unusual — he's halfway through a 10-year prison sentence for a federal narcotics conviction.

Washington Jaycees cited Scully for developing a communication device for a cerebral-palsy victim. "He is the first prison inmate, as far as I know, ever to be selected as the outstanding man," said Jim Springer, Jaycee awards chairman.

Scully, 34, was nominated by the McNeil Island Federal Penitentiary's inmate Jaycee chapter, which plans to honor him with a dinner March 3.

Scully's device allows a cerebral-palsy victim, who he met before entering prison, to communicate by selecting words and making them appear on a television screen in sentences. She can control only the side movement of one knee, he said.

Judge Refuses To Sniff

DENVER (AP) — District Court Judge Susan Barnes says she won't sniff cocaine in the pursuit of judicial truth.

Miss Barnes was asked to try the substance by attorney Jonathan Olom, who represents a man charged with sale and possession of cocaine.

Olom, who argued that cocaine is improperly classified as a narcotic, suggested the judge "personally verify the testimony of experts" by trying cocaine.

However, Miss Barnes said Wednesday that such a move would involve her personally in the issue, which would be improper. She also said sniffing cocaine might cause public disrespect for the law and judiciary because she would be indulging in conduct that for an ordinary citizen would constitute a felony.

Employee Cans Himself

ROCKVILLE, Md. (AP) — A Montgomery County employee says his $23,000-a-year job is a luxury, so he's asked that it be abolished. The county says it will grant his request.

Wayne Norris said his job as a "development process coordinator" was an unnecessary post because he had accomplished some of the tasks assigned to him while other tasks had been reassigned to another office.

So, the 30-year-old engineer will be out of a job July 1, after being on the county payroll for more than six years. Norris said he's not worried about finding work.

Peppard Suing Hotel

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Actor George Peppard and his wife are suing the Hilton Hotels Corp. for negligence in the theft of $24,939 worth of jewelry during the Mardi Gras season last year.

Officials at the New Orleans Hilton refused to let him hire and pay security guards to protect the jewelry and are therefore to blame for the theft, Peppard said in a suit.

The theft occurred Jan. 26, 1978, while Peppard was in New Orleans to appear in a Mardi Gras parade and to promote a movie with his wife.

Vicious Out On Bail

NEW YORK (AP) — Punk rock star Sid Vicious walked out of jail Thursday after his $50,000 bail for a murder charge was posted and told newsmen, "I want a slice of pizza."

Vicious, 21, a member of the disbanded Sex Pistols punk rock group, said he had been writing songs while in jail on Rikers Island. Now that he is out, he said, he will "be working on my case, and I intend to prove my innocence."

Vicious, whose given name is John Simon Ritchie, is charged with murdering his 20-year-old mistress, Nancy Spungen, last Oct. 12 by plunging a knife into her abdomen.

He was free on $50,000 bail until his arrest on assault charges stemming from a fracas in a Manhattan night club on Dec. 6. His bail was revoked at that time, but was reinstated two weeks ago.

Bear To Predict Weather

OKLAHOMA CITY (UPI) — A grizzly bear will stroll from his den at the city zoo Friday, or sleep in if he prefers, and predict the weather for the next six weeks.

A grizzly bear? A grizzly bear. Elsewhere, Friday is Groundhog Day, and legend has it that if the groundhog emerges and sees his shadow, it means six more weeks of winter. If the groundhog — or the sun — does not come out, spring is near.

Zoo curator Timothy O'Connor said he has history on his side in using a bear instead of a groundhog.

O'Connor said research by the zoo staff indicates the legend began in Europe, with a bear as the original forecaster. He said the badger later became the symbol, and finally the groundhog.

The door to the grizzly bear's den will be opened at 9 a.m. Friday, O'Connor said.

The animal doing the honors has been dubbed Grizzly G.H. Bear.

"The G.H. stands for groundhog," O'Connor said.

Snake Owner Riled Over Executions

MARLBORO, Mass. (UPI) — The master of a 7 1/2-foot "watch snake" named Penny said Thursday he's angry with police for killing seven of his poisonous reptiles after a cobra bit him on the chest.

John Madden, 24, listed in good condition at Marlboro Hospital, said after the incident Wednesday police entered his home without a warrant, took all his poisonous snakes to a nearby dump and shot them.

Madden was treated for the snake bite with anti-venom serum flown in from the Bronx Zoo in New York.

"They didn't have to kill them. I could see them taking them away," Madden said. "They're only animals. They don't know better than that."

The snakes, worth about $1,000, were to be sold this week to a snake collector in Maine, Madden said. He indicated he'd seek legal action against the police.

Madden said he was bitten while handling his cape cobra, which he said had extremely potent venom. He said he immediately called an ambulance and applied pressure to the wound.

Five hours later he was given the anti-venom serum.

Madden said he'd kept his poisonous snakes — an 11-foot king cobra, a Siamese and a cape cobra, two copperheads, and a rattlesnake — behind a locked door in sturdy, secure cages.

"They broke the door down and did what they wanted to do," Madden said of police actions.

He said police reluctantly left behind Madden's seven nonpoisonous pets — "all nonbiters and pretty good snakes," including one named Penny, a 20-pound copper-colored boa constrictor.

"I think she's better than a dog. She's my watch snake," Madden said.

"We're asking the city solicitor to look into formulating an ordinance to prevent venomous reptiles from coming into the city," Dr. Raymond Cannon, chairman of the Board of Health, said following an emergency meeting of the board.

"If one of these animals escapes from its enclosure, it usually hides," Cannon said. "Someone could inadvertently step on a snake and be bitten instantly."

Madden indicated he wouldn't be opposed to the proposed ordinance. "I don't think they're really mistaken in doing it," he said.

New Warden Tours Big Spring Facility

A-J Correspondent
BIG SPRING—John Allman, new warden of the Federal Minimum Security facility at the Big Spring Industrial Park, visited the site for the first time Thursday.
 He and a small delegation of federal officials met with managers of all local utility firms to discuss installations at the future prison site.
 Following the meeting, he took his first tour of the facility, accompanied by city officials and airport manager Harry Spannaus.
 "This is one of the nicest facilities meeting the new concept of an open, community-involved setting that I have ever seen," he said.
 The warden described the future facility as a "minimum security unit with a camp setting." It will be community-oriented and involve a great deal of interplay with the surrounding area.
 When asked if inmates will be involved in different areas of the community, Allman replied:
 "At the very least, we hope to be involved with the local college, community churches and local religious and social groups."
 According to the warden, there will also be a united effort by prison and local welfare officials to see that inmates' families are kept intact while prisoners serve time.
 Initial operations should begin within 90 to 120 days, said Allman. By October, the complex should be in operation with 60 staff members and 200 to 250 inmates.
 "After October, the staff should be filled up to 96, with a maximum of 500 inmates," he added.
 Of the total staff, Allman estimates that half will be recruited locally.
 Allman is presently the warden of the Federal Correction Institution in Pleasanton, Calif. — the prison from which Patty Hearst was released Thursday.

Pioneer May Raise Big Spring Rates

A-J Correspondent
BIG SPRING—Pioneer Natural Gas Co. rates may rise by 11 percent locally, according to City Mgr. Harry Nagel.
 "Big Spring is already paying higher rates than Midland and Odessa, so our increase will be less than those two cities. These cities have already raised rates by 14 percent," said Nagel.
 The rate hike was first proposed here on Aug. 10. At that time, Big Spring City Council appointed a steering committee to review the proposal and report its findings to city officials.
 According to Nagel, the committee found the hike reasonable, and recommended that it be implemented by Feb. 15.
 "In order to do that, the council will have to meet in special session to consider the ordinance on first reading, and then consider the second reading at the next regular council meeting," said Nagel.
 Committee estimates show that the average monthly bill for a Midland or Odessa resident will rise to $45.48. Since Big Spring's increase is less, the average residential bill will rise to only about $35.65 a month.

Big Spring Council Candidate Files

BIG SPRING — Larry Miller, co-owner of a drive-in pharmacy, will seek a seat on the Big Spring City Council in April's election.
 Miller will vie for the Place 4 position occupied by Ralph Brooks. Brooks has not indicated whether he will announce for re-election.

Clovis Voters Okay New Sales Tax Hike

A-J Correspondent
CLOVIS—Voters here have okayed a one-quarter percent sales tax hike, which will provide funds for street repair in the city, but rejected another one-quarter percent sales tax increase, which would have funded the construction of a $4.8 million dollar civic center.
 The street question passed by 258 votes, with 1,688 in favor and 1,430 against while the civic center question failed by 318 votes, with 1,706 voting for the measure and 1,383 voting against it.
 One city official described the Tuesday turnout of 3,160 voters, as 'good.'
 City Manager Darrel Kreighbaum said the tax increase will generate $500,000 in income annually for the city's street maintenance program. The one-quarter percent tax will be added to the city's present four percent sales tax, which applies to many goods and services purchased within the city limits.
 The tax increase becomes effective July 1. However, Kreighbaum said that it probably will be September or October before the state would be distributing the money to the city.
 "If the street question had failed, the city would have been in a problem situation concerning street maintenance in about a year," the city manager said.
 He added that the timing was perfect for the election because "our streets are in the worst condition that I've seen since I've been here."
 City officials say severe winter weather caused much of the street damage.

College Sets Automobile Short Course

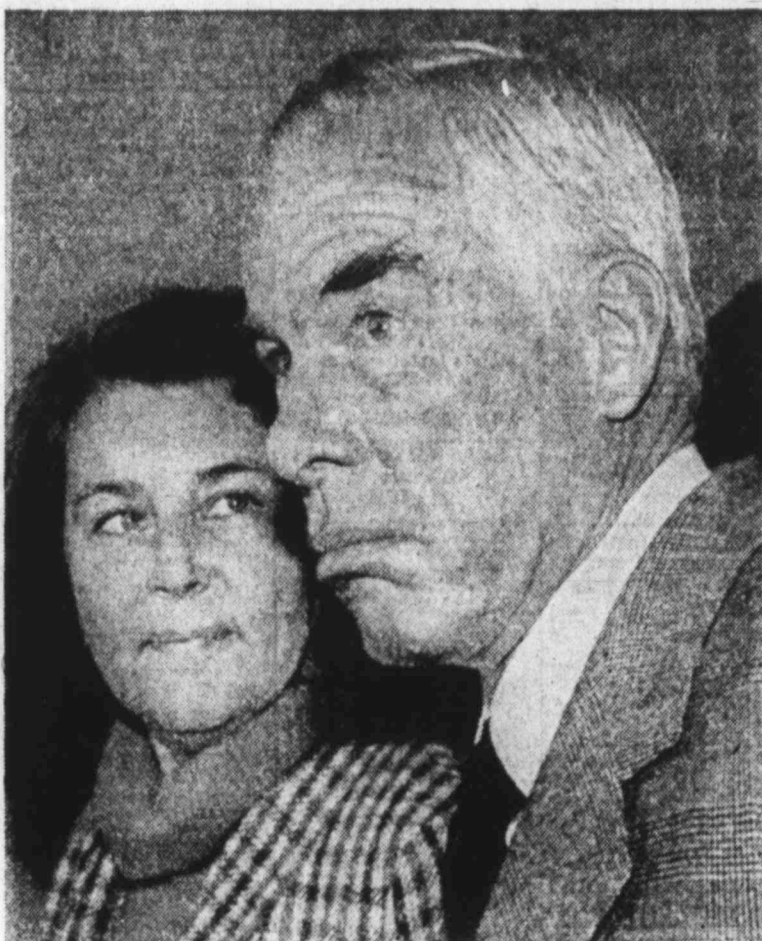

February short courses at South Plains College at Lubbock will begin Saturday morning with a course in Auto Maintenance, which will meet Saturday, Wednesday and February 17, from 9 a. m. to noon at Caprock AMC Motors.
 The course is open to men and women who wish to know more about workings of their automobiles and ways to prevent dangerous and expensive problems. The course also will cover simple repairs.
 Each participant should bring his or her own automobile to class in order that the peculiarities of each type of auto design may be explained.
 Persons interested in the course may register through Friday at South Plains College, 1302 Main Street. The fee for the course is $22.00.

Students Lobby For State Insect

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — There's a grass roots movement brewing in Iowa, with thousands of elementary students lobbying for the adoption of their "favorite bug" as state insect. Their candidate is the Hippodamia Convergens — the ladybug.
 It all began last fall when state Rep. Emil Husak spoke to a class about past attempts to have the ladybug adopted as state insect. Deciding to try themselves, 10 students wrote to every elementary school in the state.
 "As a class project, we are campaigning to promote the ladybug as the official state insect. We are sending letters to every elementary school in the state so that we can gain support and involve lots of kids in our project," they wrote.
 Their number has since grown to almost 6,000 and Rep. Husak will introduce a resolution into Iowa Legislature Wednesday to designate the ladybug as Iowa's state insect.
 Husak warned the students that legislative leaders might not be receptive to the idea. "Still, it's a challenge to them. We'll see if they can have some influence," Husak said.
 To support their cause the students organized a petition and, with the help of Dr. Donald Lewis, an entomologist at Iowa State University, a fact sheet on the ladybug.
 The sheet describes the ladybug and says, "Since Iowa is an agricultural state, choosing a state insect that is helpful to Iowa farmers is important."
 A rather shrewd argument since nearly one-third of Iowa's lawmakers are farmers.
 The resolution also asks that the lady beetle, not be needlessly injured or killed in the state.

Dating Ban Causes Dropouts

NEW LONDON, Conn. (AP) — Dating regulations are being blamed in part for the higher dropout rate of female cadets at the Coast Guard Academy.
 Capt. Robert T. Getman, academy admission director, said at least four female cadets quit the academy recently because of a ban on dating between members of different classes that prevented them from continuing relationships with senior cadets.
 The ban has since been dropped for the upper three classes, he said, as part of a program aimed at reducing attrition among female cadets.
 Getman said the higher dropout rate for women is also due to career uncertainty and misconceptions about the academy.
 "In the first couple of classes, many women didn't know what they were getting into," he said. "They had the image of the Coast Guard being a peacetime, humanitarian service. They didn't realize that the academy is like West Point — and maybe tougher."
 Several of the 38 women in the academy's first class resigned last year when they finished their second year and had to decide whether to stay and commit themselves to two years of service.
 Fourteen of those women — 37 percent of the class — remain. About 59 percent of the men in the class are still at the academy.
 "It's a cause for concern," Getman said. "But I think we're over the hill now. We're not as concerned as we were last year."
 In addition to changing the dating policy, the academy has hired a firm that specializes in enrollment and a public relations firm.
 "We're going out of our way to give people as true a picture of life here as possible so they won't be surprised," Getman said.

RETURNS TO COURT — Actor Lee Marvin with his wife, Pamela, returns to court in Los Angeles Wednesday where he was to take the stand again in his property settlement suit with singer Michelle Triola Marvin. Marvin testified he gave her $833 monthly allowance because "I thought it was the right thing to do." Marvin Lawyer Says 'Deal' Not Recorded

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Lee Marvin's show business attorney testified Thursday that he called Michelle Triola Marvin with promises of money when the actor ended their affair, but that he refused to put the deal in writing.
 "I didn't think there was any obligation by Lee Marvin to pay her anything," said Louis Goldman, Marvin's attorney. "I didn't want to create an obligation that I felt never existed."
 Miss Marvin, 46, is suing the 54-year-old actor for $1 million, claiming he promised to support her if their liaison ended. The case is expected to influence the outcome of other lawsuits of unmarried cohabitants.
 Goldman said Miss Marvin agreed in 1970 to an offer of $10,000 a year for five years although she protested that Marvin's ex-wife, Betty, was getting much more. The attorney said Betty then was receiving $6,000 a month plus $250 for each of their four children.
 "I replied: 'Betty was married to Lee. I don't feel Lee is obligated to you in any way whatsoever,'" Goldman said.
 He added: "She was perfectly satisfied. She acknowledged that she wasn't in the same position as Betty Marvin."
 Goldman said he and Marvin wanted to make sure that Miss Marvin "would not be destitute" when the actor left her after six years. He said he hoped she could "get on her feet" with a new career.
 But the attorney conceded to Miss Marvin's attorney, Marvin Mitchellson, that the former showgirl and singer was "insecure" about her future in show business.
 "I've been in the entertainment field long enough to know that you can't start an entertainment career at that age," he said.
 Asked what he suggested, the attorney said: "I believed we discussed that she had been a secretary. She told me that her skills were not that good. I suggested that perhaps she could get a job and go to night school."
 Mitchellson asked whether Miss Marvin appeared upset at the meeting.
 "She did not cry," Goldman said. "She did not protest. She thanked me."
 Goldman, who said he has handled the actor's entertainment contracts for more than 20 years, said he had negotiated with Miss Marvin in 1967 when the actor first sought to end the relationship.
 "The date stands out in my mind," Goldman said, "because it was close to the time Michelle went to the hospital for her suicide (attempt)."
 Marvin testified Thursday that he reconciled with Miss Marvin after she took an overdose of drugs in 1967 because he feared she would try again to kill herself.

Another Ex-Girlfriend Sues For 'Live-In-Time'

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (UPI) — The 30-year-old blonde former girlfriend of British rock star Peter Frampton has filed a "Marvin Case" suit seeking half of everything the multimillionaire singer owns, her lawyer disclosed Thursday.
 Frampton is seeking to have the suit brought by Penelope McCall dismissed on grounds New York State law does not grant unmarried partners the right to claim each other's possessions.
 The suit, filed in state Supreme Court in suburban Westchester County, is similar to one presently being tried in California against actor Lee Marvin. It contends Miss McCall is entitled to the money because she spent five years as Frampton's "live-in partner, aide, and inspiration."
 Frampton, who is said to have grossed $67 million in 1976 and who starred in the 1978 film "Sgt. Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band," would not comment.
 Describing the breakup of their relationship, Miss McCall said in a telephone interview, "It was after his (Frampton's) auto accident last summer. I came back from Nassau (the Bahamas) and he told me he wanted to live alone" at his 53 acre estate in Croton, N.Y.
 "I want people to understand, this is nothing personal between Peter and me, and I don't like doing it. It's just a business thing. I came back and found I had no car and no finances," she said.

Death Of Child Blamed On Mother

DALLAS (UPI) — An 8-year old girl, whose mother has been charged in connection with the slaying of her 11-year-old stepbrother, died Thursday of injuries she sustained in a Jan. 12 beating at her home.
 Amy Jean Gray was found lying in a pool of blood by classmates and neighbors who went to her home to investigate why she had not appeared in school that day. Doctors said she had multiple bone fractures, a fractured skull and a punctured lung.
 Her mother, Kathleen Gradi, 32, has been charged with two counts of attempted murder. But after the death of Clifford Gradi earlier this week, prosecutors said they planned to ask the grand jury, which meets later this month, to upgrade the charges to murder.
 The young Gradi had sustained a number of injuries from a beating and had a screwdriver jammed into his eye.
 The suit, filed in December by Miss McCall's attorney Richard Lefkowitz, seeks half of all the money and possessions Frampton has acquired since 1973 when, Miss McCall said, the couple began living together.
 Lefkowitz said Miss McCall contends she and Frampton had "an implied or expressed agreement to share" in Frampton's possessions.
 Lefkowitz said Miss McCall is seeking damages because she had to quit her job to live with Frampton, and that when he told her to leave, he disrupted "her way of life."
 Elliot Hoffman, Frampton's attorney, will argue for dismissal of the suit Feb. 9 in state Supreme Court in White Plains.
 "There is no basis for relief under New York State law," Hoffman said. "Even if everything she says is true, and we don't concede that any part of it is, New York law doesn't grant someone the right to claim any part of someone's estate in the absence of an actual agreement."
 He said there was no written agreement to share any of Frampton's possessions.
 Lefkowitz said he is seeking an accounting of the singer's net worth and wants a permanent trust set up to split Frampton's estate between both parties.
 Miss McCall, who is now living with friends in nearby Peekskill, wants the court to split up the value of the house, Frampton's cars and his income as a "joint partnership."
 She said the reason for their breakup "is a mystery to me. I don't know if the accident affected his mind or what. But I want people to know, and Peter to know, that I don't feel hostile toward him. Of course, I don't admire him very much for what he did."

Fire In Furniture Inspires Warning

WASHINGTON (AP) — The combination of cigarettes and upholstered furniture can be deadly, the U.S. Fire Administration warns.
 The administration estimates that 1,500 fire deaths, 6,500 injuries and $300 million in damage was caused in 1977 by fires that started in upholstered furniture.
 "And the leading ignition source is cigarettes carelessly dropped on furniture," said Philip S. Schaenman, associate administrator of the agency.

Actor Continues Trial Testimony

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Lee Marvin testified Wednesday that his former lover tried to commit suicide in 1967 by taking an overdose of drugs after they had fought and she had confronted him with a gun.
 The actor said he and Michelle Triola Marvin had argued "pretty constantly" that year, and one day "she appeared from the bedroom with this riot gun I had and two shells in her hand and she said, 'How do you load this thing?'"
 Marvin said, "I was frightened. I removed all the guns from the house the next day."
 After that, he said he rented an apartment for her and sent her away but she never went to the apartment because she wound up in the hospital.
 "What period are you talking about?" asked Miss Marvin's attorney.
 "The hospital," he said quietly, "when she took the overdose."
 "She spent two weeks at a friend's house," Marvin said. "Then when I came home she was there and I just did not know what to do."
 "I was still trying to get out of this situation but I felt stymied ... I was afraid she would go out and complete the job."
 "Kill herself?" asked the attorney.
 "Yes," said Marvin.
 Marvin also testified that he tried to keep Miss Marvin from joining him the night he won an Academy Award for "Cat Ballou."
 The white-haired actor, questioned by his attorney, A. David Kagon, said he returned to Hollywood for the 1966 ceremony from London, where he was shooting another movie.
 He said he found Miss Marvin prepared to attend the ceremony. Marvin had been nominated as best actor for the parody of a Western.
 "She said she'd had a dress made for the occasion and if I did not take her, she would arrive at the theater ... and make a scene I would never forget."
 Marvin said he took her.
 Under questioning by his lawyer, the actor also testified that he never asked Miss Marvin to have an abortion, never verified that she had one and never asked her to stop using contraceptives.
 Earlier Miss Marvin wept in the courtroom as she heard her former lover harshly describe her as a woman who would have told the world about her abortions and his drinking if he had thrown her out of the house.
 "No one should be treated the way I was," Miss Marvin told reporters outside the courtroom. "I never said a bad word about Lee."

NASA To Cut Back Close Skylab Watch

HOUSTON (UPI) — Flight controllers who have monitored the Skylab space station in anticipation of its re-entry into the atmosphere will curtail their 24-hour observation schedule beginning today.
 A spokesman for the Johnson Space Center said controllers will monitor the doomed $2.6 billion spacecraft for only 40 hours per week until it re-enters the atmosphere, probably sometime between June and August. The 84-ton station was launched May 1, 1973.
 Attempts to use the space shuttle to attach a rocket booster to push Skylab into a higher orbit or guide its re-entry into the atmosphere have been abandoned.

'BEING THERE' FILMED

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Shirley MacLaine will star with Peter Sellers in Lorimar's "Being There," directed by Hal Ashby from the novel by Jerzy Kosinski. Miss MacLaine plays the wife of a powerful financier who befriends a mysterious stranger, played by Sellers, whose unorthodox wisdom sets off a series of comic adventures in Washington's political labyrinth.

Youthful Runaway Goes Home After Five Years

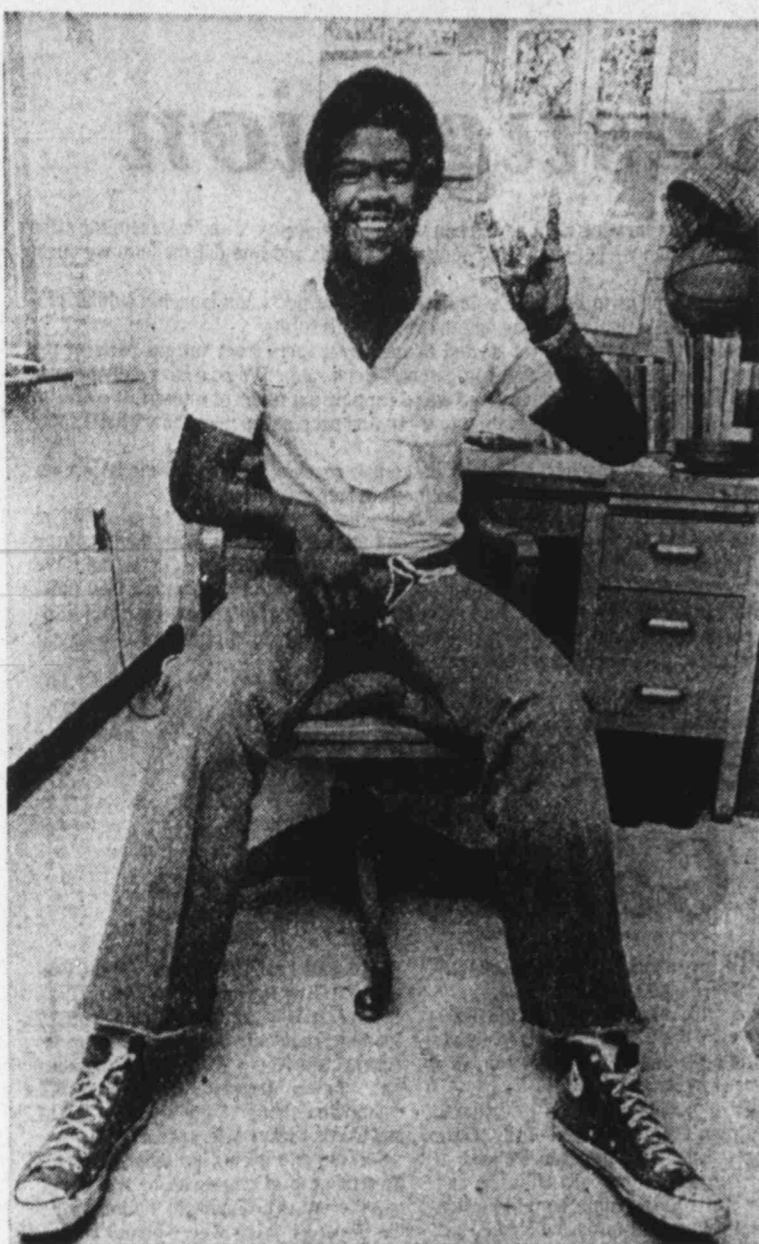

GETTYSBURG, Pa. (AP) — Five years ago Wendell E. Marthers, then an 11-year-old dreaming of adventure, ran away from home.
 But the dreams paled as he struggled for survival, and finally a kindly California family turned his path homeward.
 "It's kind of a shame when a person has to leave home for five years to learn that he appreciates his own family," Marthers said in a recent interview.
 He declines to name the West Coast family, fearing that they could get in trouble for harboring a runaway. But after a two-month stay with them, Marthers called his parents, Helen and Charles Marthers.
 "My mind went blank for a couple of seconds when he called," recalled his mother. "His voice was much deeper. I wouldn't believe it until I had my arms around him."
 Marthers described himself as a spoiled brat thinking of "movie stars, glamor and beach boys" when he ran away. Instead, the youth said he found a world that was "pretty close to hell."
 He borrowed air fare and came home Jan. 5 — a relative stranger who was 45 pounds heavier, seven inches taller and, in many ways, more than five years older. The Marthers celebrated his 17th birthday together Jan. 14.
 The youth disappeared Dec. 11, 1973, without any money or extra clothing, leaving a note telling his parents not to look for him.
 Marthers said he headed for Niagara Falls, N.Y., hoping to get into Canada, then decided to go to California when he was turned back at the border.
 His five-year journey took him across the northern United States to Seattle, down through Oregon and finally to California.
 On the road, Marthers said, he slept wherever there was shelter — parked cars, the homes of people who would take him in and at drug rehabilitation centers, although he said he was never on drugs.
 "When you're out there, you have to worry about where you're going to sleep, whether you're going to get beat up — it's not fun," he said.
 "There were a lot of times I'd be hungry," he said, and he sometimes ate leaves or grass as a last resort.

Red Raiders Snare Owls

By JIM FERGUSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff
HOUSTON—A message from Jeff Taylor to future Texas Tech basketball foes: Hey, baby, I've arrived. Yess, indeed, he has. The lanky freshman out of Hobbs, N.M. lived up to his billing by scoring 18 points, 16 from the floor, to lift the Red Raiders to a 78-56 Southwest Conference basketball win over Rice.

And he really made it look easy. "He is just beginning to come into his own," said coach Gerald Myers. "He is gaining experience and feeling comfortable in our offense. He was pressing a little bit earlier." Taylor agrees: "People have been waiting for me to break out of my slump. Now, I guess I have." Speaking of breaking out of slumps, so have the Raiders, especially against the likes of the Owls. In an earlier meeting against the Owls, the Raiders were upset on their own turf 62-56. So, in a way, this was a revenge game of sorts.

"We enjoyed beating them this time," said Myers. "I think the difference in this game and the one in Lubbock was that our defense was better and our shot selection was better. We controlled the tempo better, too. We shot 70 times in Lubbock and never got them in foul trouble because we were shooting so quickly."

In Autrey Gym Thursday night, the Raiders went to the air 65 times, hitting 23 field goals. And most of them came late in the game when Myers substituted freely. No need rubbing salt in the wound. "There was a world of difference in this game and the one in Lubbock," said Rice coach Mike Schuler. "We didn't play with any intensity. They just kicked us good."

Schuler said he was "extremely disappointed in our effort. I don't know why we didn't play well. We just made a lot of dumb mistakes."

The Owls were also playing without the services of starters Elbert Dardon, a 20-point scorer, and 6-11 center Brett Burkhalter. Dardon, who is suffering from the flu didn't even come to the game. Burkhalter is saddled with an ankle injury. After a close first half, the Raiders came out firing in the second portion of the game, outscoring the Owls 17-4 during the first six minutes. After that, it was all over.

Myers admitted some degree of the Raiders' poor play of the first half. "We substituted too early," he explained. "We didn't have any shooters in the game and they were in their zone. That was a poor decision to go with five new players. They cut our lead to four and we had to get some shooters in there." The win ups the Raiders' SWC record to 6-4, while Rice drops to 3-7. Tech will head to Waco from here to meet the Baylor Bears Saturday night. Despite hitting only 12-of-32 shots from the field in the first half, the Raiders still managed to build a 30-22 lead. But, folks, it didn't come easy. No sir-ee, boy. Although Tech never relinquished the lead after Huston hit a 16-foot jumper See TECH Page 4

Jay Haas Takes Crosby Lead

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Jay Haas, fearful of a protracted lull in the wake of a debacle at San Diego, birdied three of his first four holes, then coed his way to a 4-under-par 68 and a tie for the first-round lead Thursday in the $300,000 Bing Crosby National Pro-Am golf tournament.

Haas, who had rounds of 84-77 in defense of his title at San Diego last week, played well in mild, cloudy weather at Pebble Beach and shared the No. 1 position with Australian veteran Graham Marsh and Mike McCullough, both of whom were at Cypress Point.

"It may have been an advantage playing at Pebble today in relatively good conditions," said Haas. "It's like a sleeping giant. It can play 10 shots harder when the wind is blowing."

The pros play one round on each of three Monterey Peninsula courses before the final 18 holes at Pebble Beach on Sunday.

Dr. Gil Morgan, a non-practicing optometrist, veteran Bobby Nichols and Mac McLendon were a single shot out of the lead at 69. Morgan, the No. 2 money-winner last season, ruined what could have been a pace-setting effort with a double-bogey 7 from the water on No. 6 at Pebble Beach. Nichols played his last nine holes, at Cypress Point, in 30. McLendon also was at Cypress.

Tom Watson, who used Crosby titles as the springboard to Player of the Year honors the last two seasons, scored an eagle 3 at Cypress Point, but could do no better than par 72.

John Mahaffey, the current PGA and World Cup champion and winner of the Bob Hope Classic that opened the 1979 season, shot 70 at Cypress. Ben Crenshaw, a recent winner in Phoenix, had 71 at Cypress. Lee Trevino had a struggling 75 at Pebble Beach.

Arnold Palmer, who had former President Gerald Ford as his amateur partner, took a 74 at Cypress. Ford helped the pro-am team 2 shots to a 72, far back in the pack.

Haas, who won the San Diego Open in 1978 as a tour rookie, posted a solid second-place finish the week before he was to defend his title this season.

But his soaring score of 161 for two rounds wasn't even close to making the cut for the final two rounds and he came into this tournament concerned about the possible long-range effects.

"Maybe I'd expected too much after playing so well the week before," he said. "I was feeling a little pressure after that. I was trying not to let it effect my whole season. That sort of thing can, you know, I didn't want to let it ruin my whole year, set me back for three or four months."

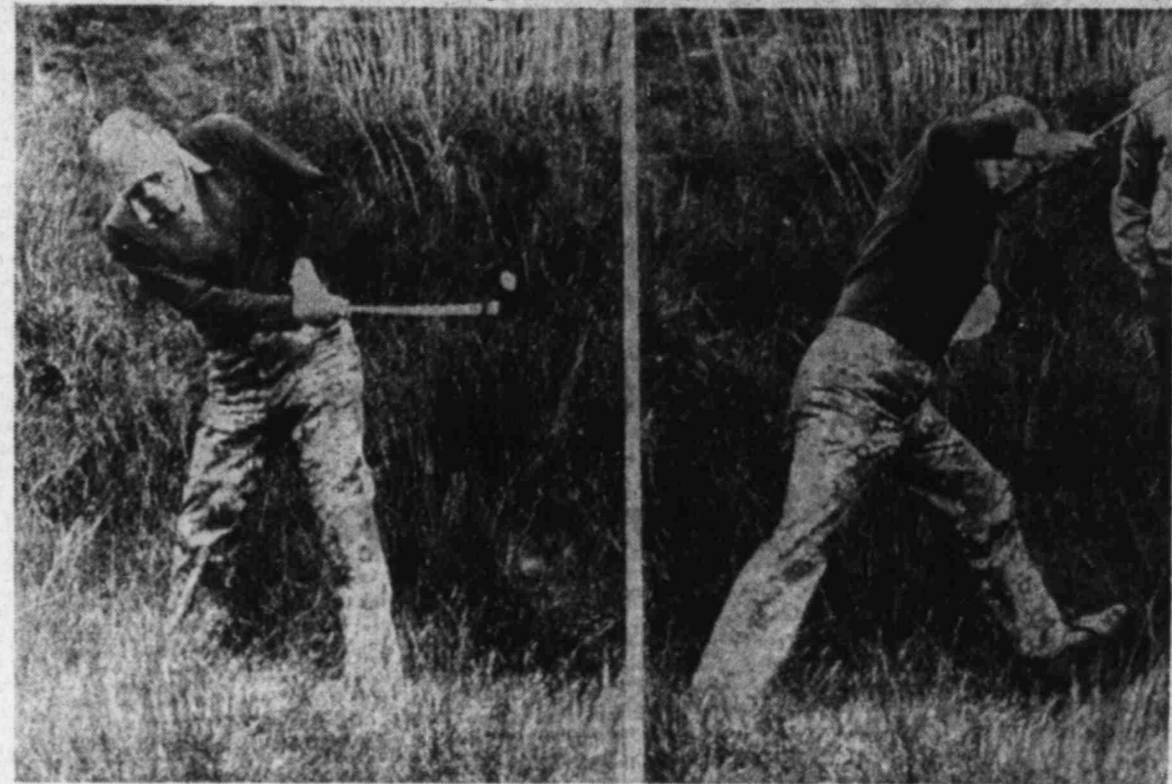

He quickly dispelled those worries, however. The nephew of former Masters champ Bob Goulby birdied three of his first four holes, two with iron shots that nestled within six feet of the flags and the other with an 18-footer on greens that were still wet from two days of cold, wet rain.

He also birdied his 12th from 40 feet, flipped a five-iron shot to four feet on his 14th to go 5-under for the day, but bogeyed the 17th after missing the green.

A 48-hour rain that hampered practice rounds finally lifted and a weak but welcome sun broke through the scattered clouds for the start of play. The storm that hit hardest in the desert areas still had its effects on the tournament, however.

Turner Opting For Longhorns

Four score or something like that during a city track meet, eighth grader Dewey Turner walked up to a photographer and asked when will pictures of him be taken.

Replied the photographer: "When you do something worthy of getting your picture taken."

Well, the strobes were beaming over high school senior Turner Thursday as the Avalanche-Journal has learned that the Estacado tight end has made a commitment to play college football at the University of Texas.

NCAA rules prohibit the University of Texas coaching staff comment on Turner's decision until the recruit has been signed. The Southwest Conference signing date is Feb. 14. National letters will be inked Feb. 21.

"I chose Texas because they didn't put any pressure on me," said Turner. "Another thing is I was recruited by the tight end coach. I really liked that because he's the kind of guy I can really relate to."

Though Turner couldn't recall how many schools contacted him, the 6-5 Estacado senior chose to only visit three schools. Besides Texas, Turner made stops at TCU and Texas A&M.

"Education also had a deciding factor on my choice," said Turner. "I'm a pre-law student. And I was impressed with the facilities."

However, education alone wasn't the deciding factor in Turner's choice in becoming a Longhorn.

"I feel that Texas will go to a bowl every year I'm there," said Turner. "My goal is to be a part of a national championship team. I think Texas has a great chance of accomplishing that."

Turner no doubt has the credentials that is necessary to build a national champion. The 225-pound Matador tight end's honors include everything from All-City to All-State to honorable All-American.

"My biggest thrill was winning the district this season," said Turner. "I really didn't think we could do it at first. My biggest disappointment was that we weren't able to go all the way to the state championship."

Turner only caught seven passes for 142 yards and scored two touchdowns during the season. The Estacado blue chipper is recognized for his blocking ability.

"I'm going to lift a lot of weights and run a lot during the summer," said Turner. "Oh, I'm also going to catch a lot of passes."

One reason for Turner's poor reception statistics is that opponents respected his catching ability. Most teams double and

NCAA Plans Recruiting Investigation

MISSION, Kan. (AP) — Focusing on six "hotbeds of football recruiting," the NCAA this week is launching a bold, nationwide crackdown on recruiting violations and early returns indicate the program may be a huge success.

"The information is already starting to filter in," David Berst, director of the NCAA enforcement department, said Thursday. "We're going to get after it."

In a complete departure from past procedures, the NCAA, in effect, is going to the scene of the crime. After carefully putting together a list of the top 100 football prospects, including junior college players, investigators were dispatched to every part of the country to talk to the recruits, their coaches and family members.

College recruiters, now heading into the final climactic weeks of the football recruiting season with the national signing date on Feb. 21, were given no warning that investigators would be in the field.

Berst admitted eight investigators may have difficulty checking into 100 players and said they may have to go to some hotbeds of football recruiting.

He declined to identify those areas but a source close to the program told The Associated Press they are Texas, New York, California, Florida, Pennsylvania and Ohio.

"It just started this week and it's already starting to bear fruit," said an NCAA insider who asked not to be identified. "We don't know yet what we've got, but it looks like this may be an idea whose time has come."

All pending investigations and cases have been put on the back burner while everyone concentrates on the new program, dubbed by some as "Project Intercept."

"I don't know if I would call it that," said Berst. "But it really is a dramatic change in procedures. We may be noticed by some schools out there. They may find themselves tripping over us on their way to violate a rule. The next knock on the door could be us."

Berst said the NCAA is "tired of just building cases. We want to go on the offense a little bit. We're just like another college coaching staff, figuring out who the great prospects are and going out to talk to them."

From the NCAA offices in suburban Mission, Kan., Berst and his administrative assistants, Ron Stratten and Hale McMenamin are coordinating the travels of the eight field men.

The investigators are talking to college and high school coaches and mothers, fathers and girlfriends of young men now being recruited.

"We're also talking to the kids," Berst said. "That's as important as anything we do. It may be educational for them as well as helpful to us."

"We want to do more than just react to old charges, react to things that filter in to us a year or two after the fact," Berst added.

"For instance, we're going to University X and talking to them about all the people they think are cheating right now. Then we go to University Y and ask them the same questions. Then we get an overlap on various schools and find out the ones we ought to be watching."

The NCAA plans to list the top 100 basketball prospects and launch a similar program when basketball recruiting season climaxes this spring.

"About three weeks ago we started taking newspapers from various parts of the country and assigning them to investigators," Berst said. "We now have daily newspapers from all over the country and we're clipping out items of interest. We plan to use these as background information to try to find people who may know what's going on out there."

Berst said many coaches, especially basketball coaches, have urged the NCAA for years to get out and talk to young men as they are being recruited.

"They've wanted us to go to things like high school all-star games," he said. "We're always looking for ways to do a better job and this seems logical. With the list of the top 100 football and basketball prospects, we'll canvass some coaches in the field. We pick out coaches to talk to to find out what's on their minds and where they think cheating is occurring right now. And we're going to give that information a high priority right now. By focusing in on people who are being recruited right now, we should have more impact and be more current."

Dickey Battles Jones In Times Games Race

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Greg Foster probably isn't used to competing these days without being able to glance over and see Renaldo Nehemiah. But the UCLA speedster won't see the University of Maryland sophomore in his next outing.

Foster and Nehemiah have had a number of outstanding duels this winter, but they won't on Friday night because the latter will not be competing in the 20th Times Indoor Games at the Forum.

Instead, Foster will be challenged by, among others, Dedy Cooper of San Jose State, the two-time defending Times Indoor Games champion in the 60-yard hurdles.

Foster set the American outdoor record in the 110-meter hurdles last summer with a clocking of 13.22 seconds in the NCAA championships. Earlier this winter, he and Nehemiah dead-heated in the 60-yard hurdles in an indoor world record 6.95 seconds. Nehemiah has since gone 6.88.

World record holders John Walker of New Zealand and Henry Rono of Kenya are among other performers who will take part in the Times Games and, perhaps, come up with some world-record performances.

Walker, the outdoor world-record holder at 3:49.4 in the mile, will face a field that includes American standout Steve Scott. Rono, the 1978 Associated Press Sportsman of the Year and the Track and Field News' Athlete of the Year, meets Nick Rose of England in the two mile.

Walker, coming off two leg operations and nearly a year's layoff, set an indoor record in the 1,500 meters at the Muhammed All Invitational in Long Beach, Calif., on Jan. 6 with a 3:37.4 clocking.

Rono set outdoor records in the 3,000-meter run, the 3,000-meter steeplechase and the 5,000 and 10,000-meter runs in a span of 11 weeks last year.

Other standouts scheduled to compete in the men events are Mike Tully, Dave Roberts, Earl Bell and Bob Pullard in the pole vault; Joao de Oliveira and James Butts in the triple jump; Houston McTear, Clancy Edwards and Eddie Hart in the 60-yard dash; Herman Frazier and Billy Mullins in the 500-yard dash; Arnie Robinson and Randy Williams in the long jump; and Franklin Jacobs, James Frazier and Greg Joy in the high jump.

A special 60-yard dash matching college football standouts also will be staged. Entries are Kevin Williams of Southern Cal, James Owens of UCLA, 1976 Olympian Johnny "Lam" Jones of Texas and Curtis Dickey of Texas A&M.

Six women's events are scheduled with present or past world-record holders in every event. The highlight figures to be the 60-yard hurdles where indoor record holder Deby LaPlante of San Diego State faces Patty Van Wolvelaere and Jane Frederick.

Pro Cagers Gearing Up For All-Star Contest

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — They'll be clear up to the edge of the air-inflated roof Sunday at the Pontiac Silverdome. Binoculars are essential at that altitude — and perhaps a handkerchief for possible nosebleeds.

But maybe those in the cheap seats would like it better if they couldn't see the court so well at the 29th annual National Basketball Association All-Star game. The Detroit Pistons were snubbed. For the first time ever, not a single member of the Pistons will even be on the bench for the game. Hometown team members were victims of insufficient votes by the fans for the starting lineup — and by a vote of coaches in the selection of reserves.

There will, however, be some local heroes to salve the some 30,000 spectators who bought tickets. Pontiac's own Campy Russell of the University of Michigan and the Cleveland Cavaliers is a reserve for the East team of Washington Coach Dick Motta.

Also on the East team are starters Rudy Tomjanovich of Houston and George Gervin of San Antonio. Tomjanovich was a star at Hamtramck High School and the University of Michigan, while Gervin was a prep star at Detroit King and college standout at Eastern Michigan.

"It's the showcase of the stars," Gervin said. "Anybody can ignite it. I'm not coming in to steal the show. I'm just coming to be one of the stars."

Tomjanovich said he's had better seasons and wasn't chosen.

"This year I thought I had no chance," he said.

Russell said: "It probably won't hit me until the day of the game as to what it all means."

The crowd will be some 12,000 more than the previous high for an NBA All-Star game, a turnout of 18,422 which watched the 1968 game in New York's Madison Square Garden.

A Detroit brewery bought a block of 4,000 tickets Wednesday, making the game a virtual sellout and prompting the local TV blackout to be lifted.

Other East starters are Julius "Dr. J" Erving of Philadelphia, Moses Malone of Boston and Pete Maravich of New Orleans.

The West of Seattle Coach Lenny Wilkens will counter with David Thompson and George McGinnis of Denver, Marques Johnson of Milwaukee, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar of Los Angeles and Paul Westphal of Phoenix.

Motta and Wilkens were selected because their teams had the best conference records two weeks before the game.

Last year's game, at Atlanta, was won by the East 133-125. Randy Smith of Buffalo was chosen most valuable player. He scored 27 points and hit on 11 of 14 floor shots.

The East leads the series 18 games to 10.

Ron Guidry Enjoys Business Success

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — The face of Ron Guidry isn't glaring from hundreds of products because the ace New York Yankee pitcher wants to keep his privacy, says his agent.

"One of the easiest aspects of marketing Ron Guidry is that Ron Guidry doesn't want to be marketed," said John Schneider, a Lafayette attorney.

"Ronnie lives within his standards and still benefits from his success, without selling his heart and soul," added Schneider.

Guidry and Schneider discussed "Marketing and Legal Aspects of Professional Athletes" at a Louisiana State University this week.

The Cy Young Award winner and Associated Press male athlete of the year has two simple guidelines when considering commercial ventures.

"Rule one is that he has to be a user of the product, and secondly, an exorbitant amount of money can't be made by others off of his name," Schneider said.

Guidry has turned down several lucrative offers in the last six months, Schneider said, adding the 5-foot-11 left-hander rejected between $150,000 and $200,000 in commercial ventures last month.

His agent-torrey told of an offer to endorse a soft drink.

"It was a one-time commercial and I told him that for $10,000 I'd buy him a case and pour it down his throat," Schneider said. "But one thing about Ronnie, he's a man of few words. He said, 'I don't drink that soft drink,' and that was that."

Another offer came after Guidry swallowed his tobacco while stretching for a bouncing ball during a game last season.

The company wanted a commercial with rodeo cowboy and former pro football player Walt Garrison showing Guidry how to chew tobacco properly.

"We turned it down because Ronnie said he chews as part of the profession and maybe the nicotine keeps him alert," Schneider said, "but he has no desire to teach other people to chew or to encourage kids to."

A car dealership endorsement was rejected because it wasn't his favorite model and Guidry turned down a poster deal which would have netted the firm $500,000 while he received $10,000, Schneider said.

"Really, Ronnie is more satisfied with my performance if I don't bring back too many deals," his long-time friend said. "He likes his privacy. He once told me some words I'd like engraved on a plaque: 'All the money in the world isn't worth it if Bonnie (his wife) and Laren't home to spend it.'"

"They are still the basic middle class family. No weekend trips to Acapulco. Nothing flashy. He's the Athlete of the Year, but more than that, he's the person of the century."

Coaches Split Over Jump Ball Rules

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Basketball coaches in the Atlantic Coast Conference are split over whether they want to retain the experimental rule in use this season that eliminates the jump ball after the opening tap.

Lefty Driesell of Maryland, Norm Sloan of North Carolina State and Carl Tacy of Wake Forest said Thursday they are in favor of scrapping the rule that awards the ball to teams on an alternating basis in jump-ball situations.

Coaches Dean Smith of North Carolina, Bill Foster of Clemson and Terry Holland of Virginia told The Associated Press they want to retain the rule. Bill Foster of Duke said he hasn't decided whether he likes the rule well enough to make it permanent.

"It just doesn't seem natural" said Sloan, who voted last May to use the rule on a trial basis. "We've just made a mistake. We've lost something in the game. I haven't found a fan yet who likes it."

Sloan said he doubts the rule will be retained after this season and that he hopes it will be abolished in time for the ACC tournament, which begins March 1.

He said he thought the rule, a variation of the one used by the Southwest Conference, would speed up the game. But he said it is demoralizing for the defense to force a jump ball and see the offensive team retain possession.

"You shouldn't have a situation like that," he said. Tacy agreed, calling it "a hindrance. We've experienced an emotional letdown after playing good defense and seeing the ball go to the other team."

The rule is designed to eliminate errors by the officials, who must toss the ball as nearly straight up as possible. In addition, an outsize player on the jump is tempted to pursue the ball a just before it reaches the apex to improve his chance of batting it toward one of his teammates.

Under the old rule, a jump ball was used each time possession of the ball was questionable. Holland, who supports the new rule, said violations during the jump went unnoticed under the old rule "60 or 70 percent" of the time.

Smith said the figure is probably closer to 90 percent.

"It comes up at some crazy times, but I like the way we're doing it," Holland said. "I don't think we should have jump balls at all. It's very difficult to correctly toss the ball. I'm 6-foot-8 and I have a hard time throwing it for kids at summer camp. I know it's difficult for a 5-8 referee."

The Southwest Conference, which eliminated the jump ball two years ago, uses a coin toss to decide the ball's first possession. Holland is open to nearly any suggestion that would completely do away with the jump ball in the ACC.

"They can drop it from the scoreboard or put it in the middle of the floor, that's okay. I don't think we should have jump balls," Holland said.

Added Clemson's Foster, "It eliminates the human error in the game. Now there's only one screwup a game, and that's at the beginning. They should throw out the jump ball totally."

Smith said he is urging retention of the rule, although he said he found that North Carolina benefited more under the old system.

"There were so many violations on jump balls," Smith said. "If a 5-10 guy jumped early to try to beat a 6-6 guy and got caught, what did he have to lose? I realize it's a change that people have to get used to, but it's a very fair method. I don't think it's particularly good for North Carolina, but it's good for basketball overall."

Duke's Foster, who would have cast the swing vote in the survey, said he views the issue "with mixed emotions. I'm still up in the air with it."

Pittsburgh's Bradshaw Enjoys Role Of Super Bowl XIII Hero

NEW YORK (AP) — Terry Bradshaw is feeling the effects from the blitz of attention that annually is attracted by a Super Bowl hero. It's the kind of blitz the Pittsburgh Steelers' quarterback welcomes.

"It's been a hectic week," said Bradshaw Thursday. "But I'd rather it be hectic than be down home right now as a loser of the Super Bowl thinking about what I had done wrong."

So, Bradshaw withstood another barrage of questions and posed for another batch of pictures as he received a car from Sport Magazine as the Most Valuable Player in the Super Bowl in which he passed for four touchdowns in the Steelers' 35-31 victory over Dallas 35-31.

Sitting quietly at one end of the dais Thursday, wearing an ice cream-white vest and pants suit with a bloody mary-red shirt was Jo Jo Starbuck, a pro figure skating star who is Mrs. Bradshaw.

She also welcomed media spotlight focused on her husband. "He's a better football player than I am a skater," said the former Olympian. "He's like an Olympic champion and I'm proud of it."

The just-completed National Football League season was great for Bradshaw, a nine-year veteran. The success was made sweeter by the memory of some seasons past when Bradshaw's ability often was overshadowed by inconsistency and a reputation he had gained a county bumpkin — a reputation "I've learned to live with but don't like."

"The low point in my career was being benched in 1975 (in favor of Joe Gilliam)," said Bradshaw. "I learned a lot ... humility was one thing. I learned how much I like to play ball."

Now, the possessor of three Super Bowl championship rings, Bradshaw is on top of his profession — a very precarious perch as he is well aware — but he doesn't think he has hit his peak as a player. It is a peak he hopes he never scales.

"I hope I never peak," said Bradshaw, who is under contract to the Steelers for three more years. "When I retire I hope I can say that if I had played one more year, I would have been better."

Dickerson Visits A&M

AUSTIN (AP) — Bluechip running back Eric Dickerson of Sealy will pay a "courtesy" visit to Texas this weekend — and possibly Texas A&M — but is expected to announce next week he will sign with Oklahoma, according to Lou Maysel of the Austin American-Statesman.

Maysel said several sources had indicated Dickerson, 6-foot-2½ inches and 205 pounds, would sign with the Sooners, who have great success recruiting star Texas schoolboy backs.

Dickerson ran for 2,642 yards during the past season in leading Sealy to the Class AA football championship.

He has made school-paid visitations to Oklahoma, Southern California and Texas Tech. This is the limit of paid visits if he wants to be eligible for high school track, in which he is the defending AA 100-yard and 200-meter dash champion.

Visits to Texas and A&M would be at Dickerson's expense.

Texas' Super Drum Streak Ends 68-58

WATCHING THE BALL—Texas A&M's Tyronne Laddson (10) eyes the basketball as SMU Mustang Joey Cervano passes off during their game Wednesday night. The Aggies won 92-56 to stay close to the Texas Longhorns in the Southwest Conference title chase. (AP Laserphoto)

AUSTIN, Texas (UPI)—A dazzling 23-point performance by Sidney Moncrief brought Arkansas an upset 68-58 victory over 11th-ranked Texas Thursday night in a heated battle punctuated by a shoving match between the teams' two coaches.

After 25 wins, it was the first loss ever for the Longhorns in their 2-year-old, 16,000-seat Special Events Center and showed Texas back into a tie for first place in the Southwest Conference with Texas A&M.

Arkansas, which had its home winning streak of 35 victories snapped last month by Texas, moved to within a game of the lead in the hot conference race.

Arkansas, taking advantage of Texas' cold first half shooting, took a 25-17 lead at intermission.

But as the buzzer sounded to end the first period, Texas' John Moore was run over by an Arkansas player who had failed to see the Longhorns' guard. Arkansas Coach Eddie Sutton took exception to Moore's attempt to draw a charging foul and said as much to Moore as the coach and player walked off the floor.

Texas Coach Abe Lemons became upset with Sutton and two of the most respected coaches in the country wound up in each other's face, yelling and shoving. Players from both teams and uniformed guards separated the two, who continued to scream at one another as they were ushered off the court.

Sutton was booed resoundingly by the crowd of 15,300 as he returned for the second half and three guards stood behind the Arkansas bench during the second half.

At game's end, however, Sutton and Lemons shook hands at midcourt and walked to the dressing rooms side by side as the guards and photographers surrounded them.

Arkansas had lost four of its last seven games, but Moncrief ignited the Hogs to their first half lead.

The Arkansas superstar picked up his fourth foul, however, with 15:13 to play in the game and the Razorbacks leading by 13. Less than five minutes later, with the Arkansas lead cut to six, Moncrief returned to make a stiff shot, steady his teammates and help them rebuild the lead.

Texas and Texas A&M now are 8-2 in SWC games and the Longhorns are 15-5 for the season. Arkansas moved to 6-3 in conference and 14-4 overall.

Chaps Fall 100-76

WICHITA FALLS (Special)—An amazing shooting performance by Midwestern State's Tony Forsh overshadowed the 27-point production of Lubbock Christian's Keith Gardner as MSU defeated the Chaparrals 100-76 here Thursday night.

Forsh scored 40 points, 32 in the second half, to lead Midwestern to its first home win in its last six outings. Forsh hit 17-20 from the floor and was a perfect 6 of 6 from the line to deflate the Chaps' hopes.

The game was tight throughout the first half as the lead changed hands five times and the score was tied on four occasions. But Forsh hit a jumper with 17:04 left in the second half to give MSU the lead for good and the rout was on.

Gardner had his highest point production of the year in a losing cause. Bruce Carver and Kevin Wharton had 18 and 14 points respectively to also score in double figures for LCC.

In addition to Forsh, Kyle Williams scored 17 and Mike Gibson had 19 for Midwestern, now 15-12 and 5-0 in Texas Conference play.

The Chaps fell to 8-13 and 0-2. They will next face Dallas Baptist in Lubbock on Feb. 9.

LCCHS Prevails

ABILENE (Special)—Shawn Bove stole a pass and scored on a layup with 30 seconds to play to preserve a 60-55 Eagle victory over Abilene Christian during first round action of the Christian Basketball Classic here Thursday night.

The win raised Lubbock Christian's record to 23-4 on the season, while the loss dropped Abilene Christian to 18-9.

Shawn Williams paced the Eagle scoring attack with 17 points.

Lubbock Christian will now meet Dallas Christian today at 1:30 p.m. Dallas Christian defeated Fort Worth Christian earlier in the day.

with 18:30 left in the period, the Owls continually pecked away and pulled within two points of Tech at the 4:48 mark.

After that surge, though, which saw the Owls outsourcing Tech 12-3-guard Hill canned a couple of eight footers and Huston sandwiched in a long ranger of his own between Hill's shots to put the Raiders back up by eight points, 28-20.

Tech's largest lead (10-points) came after Williams connected on a three-point play. Prior to that Taylor, Tech's leading scorer in the first half with 10 points, had connected on a 16-foot shot and a layup.

Rice took about a shot every minute (20), hitting eight of them. However, they were 4-of-5 from the line. Tech was just as impressive from the charity spot, culled 6-of-7 attempts.

Taylor paced Rice's scoring attack in the first half with six points.

Dewey Turner Picks Texas

tripled covered the Matador tight end. "Most of the patterns I run is across the middle," replied the Turner. "At first I was kind of scared to go across the middle. But not anymore."

What goal has Turner set for himself to accomplish this year?

"I'm just going to work hard both on my education and on the football field," said the 225-pound senior. "I'll let the rest of the things take care of themselves."

Does that include starting?

"I may not start," smiled Turner. "But I hope to get a little playing time."

When asked why he didn't consider staying at home and plugging for Texas Tech, Turner said, "I just want to experience something new. I guess you may say it's for the challenge. I think college will mature me."

Two Colts Players Exercising Options

BALTIMORE (AP) — Defensive end John Dutton and linebacker Stan White became free agents Thursday after playing out their options with the Baltimore Colts.

General Manager Dick Szymanski said the Colts have tendered qualifying offers to the two players, which insures compensation should they sign with another National Football League team. They have until April 15 to consider such offers.

A qualifying offer, the minimum a team can make to a potential free agent, is determined by the player's experience. Under NFL rules, the club losing a player is awarded draft choices geared to the amount of money he receives from the new team.

Dutton also played out his option last year, but returned to Baltimore after failing to agree to terms elsewhere. He played the 1978 season for about $110,000, after receiving an automatic 10 percent increase from the Colts.

One of White's major complaints was that another outside linebacker, Tom MacLeod, was offered more money than White was making to forego his planned retirement and rejoin the team. MacLeod played in about half of the games.

White said he wasn't too optimistic about his chances on the free agent market. "due to the lack of success among free agents last year."

The linebacker, who passed the state bar exam last fall and is now a practicing attorney, said he feels one reason only six of almost 100 free agents were signed by other clubs last year is the rigid compensation rule.

The Colts also disclosed that they did not give qualifying offers to three other players whose contracts expired Thursday. They include defensive tackle Dave Rowe, center Forrest Blue and punter David Lee.

Szymanski said the club would try to sign Lee, 35, and Rowe, 34. The status of the 33-year-old Blue, who injured his back last season, was more uncertain.

But coach Ted Marchibroda said, "Our philosophy is that we certainly hope they'll be Colts next year, and we'll take every step we can to keep it that way."

'Too Tall' Turns Free Agent

Cowboy Lineman Joins List Of 142 Players

NEW YORK (AP) — Too Tall Jones of the Dallas Cowboys, Roy Gerela of the Pittsburgh Steelers, Ahmad Rashad of the Minnesota Vikings and Garo Yepremian of the Miami Dolphins were among 142 players on the market Thursday as free agents, the National Football League announced.

OAKLAND RAIDERS—Willie Brown, DB; Larry Brown, WR; Hubert Ginn, RB; John Vavra, T.

PHILADELPHIA EAGLES—Bob Howard, DB; Tim Lukan, G; John Outflew, DB; Charley Smith, WR; Terry Taylor, LB; John Walton, QB.

PITTSBURGH STEELERS—Roy Gerela, K; St. Louis Cardinals—Tom Banks, C; Bob Bell, DE; Tom Brasheary, C; J.V. Cain, TE; Al Chandler, TE; Charley Davis, DT; Roger Finnin, T; Willard Harrel, RB; Steve Jones, RB; Ken Stone, DB.

SAN DIEGO CHARGERS—Mike Fuller, CB; Rick Middleton, LB.

SAN FRANCISCO 49ERS—Joe Harris, LB; Wilbur Jackson, RB.

SEATTLE SEAHAWKS—Dave Brown, DB; John Leybold, K; Doug Long, WR; Sam McCullum, WR; Charles McShane, LB; Herman Weaver, P.

TAMPA BAY BUCCANERS—Rickey Freelon, T; Paul Harris, LB; Jim Obradovich, TE; Kurt Schumacher, G.

WASHINGTON REDSKINS—Danny Buggs, WR; Ike Forte, RB; Bob Meine, DT; Ken Houston, DB; Ron McDole, DE; Bill Seibert, DE; Mike Thomas, RB.

All 28 NFL teams, except the New York Jets, had at least one player up for grabs. The Detroit Lions had the greatest number of players on the market, with 14. The Buffalo Bills and Minnesota Vikings each had 11 free agents.

Jones, a defensive end for Dallas, became a free agent with two other Cowboys, Gerela, who kicked four extra points in Pittsburgh's 35-31 Super Bowl victory over Dallas, was the only Steeler on the list.

The deadline for players to sign with their clubs passed at midnight Wednesday. It's likely, though, that many of the free agents will be with the same teams next year. This year's total compares with 126 last year.

Rashad, acquired by Minnesota from Seattle in 1976, was the Most Valuable Player in Monday night's Pro Bowl.

Yepremian, 34, signed with Miami as a free agent in 1970.

Also notable among the free agents were New York Giants running back Larry Csonka, Buffalo guard Reggie McKenzie, Chicago Bears quarterback Mike Phipps, Vikings defensive end Jim Marshall, St. Louis center Tom Banks, San Francisco running back Wilbur Jackson, Washington Redskins running back Mike Thomas and safety Ken Houston, and Green Bay defensive tackle Willie Buchanan.

Ron McDole, the 39-year-old defensive end who's spent 18 years in the NFL, the last eight in Washington, showed up on the list. The day before, he announced bitterly that the Washington club had told him he'd be better off retiring.

Passing of the deadline means that any team can start contract talk now with any of the 142 players. However, under the terms of an agreement between the NFL Management Council and the NFL Players Association, when a free agent signs with a new team, the old team has the right to match any offer and is entitled to compensation.

If a free agent signs a new contract worth between $50,000 to $65,000, his new team must give the team he left a third-round draft choice. A $65,000-$75,000 pact is worth a second-round pick; $75,000-$125,000, a first-rounder.

Csonka Signing Called Mistake

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Fullback Larry Csonka should never have been signed by the New York Giants, says Tim Mara, the National Football League team's vice president.

Csonka signed a three-year contract with an option year with the Giants prior to the 1976 season after playing seven years with the Miami Dolphins and one year in the World Football League.

The Giants decided Wednesday not to exercise the option year of the contract. Csonka, who rushed for over 1,000 yards in three consecutive years with the Dolphins and had two 100-plus yard performances in the Super Bowl, is now free to negotiate with any team.

Mara owns 50 percent of the Giants but only recently became involved in the day-to-day operations of the team. It was the decision of team president Wellington Mara and former director of operations Andy Rosbustelli to sign the fullback for an estimated $1 million.

"I think Larry is a terrific person, but how much did he help the Giants and how much would he be in the future," Tim Mara said. "I would never have taken Larry Csonka. I felt at that time we were in still another rebuilding year. We had a young team and Larry Csonka was not a good investment for the Giants."

Csonka rushed for 7,244 yards in his 10 NFL seasons. But he gained just 569 yards in his first season with the Giants before suffering a knee injury in the 12th game of the season. He recovered to gain 464 yards in 1977 and was used sparingly in 1978, rushing for 311 yards with a team-high six touchdowns.

"I think there was some question when he came to the Giants. How much value could he be to us? He probably had greater value to other teams. I wasn't in on the decision, but the feeling was we had to take a chance," Mara said.

If Csonka signs with another NFL team, the Giants will not receive any compensation. They voluntarily relinquished two third round draft picks to the Dolphins for Csonka.

Mara declined comment on whether he would have given the Dolphins the draft picks. "I don't want to speak on something I wouldn't have done anyhow," he said.

Mara said the Giants still owe Csonka money, according to the terms of his contract.

Carew Nears Making Decision

NEW YORK (AP) — Rod Carew said Thursday that he resents being tossed around like a grocery item by baseball clubs bartering for his life.

"It's nerve-racking — the wait, the frustration, it's terrible," insisted the perennial American League batting champion of the Minnesota Twins, speaking of stalled negotiations in his projected deal to the New York Yankees.

"I don't like the idea of being pushed around, cooling my heels while they go fishing and play golf. If they think they can wait until the last minute and tell me to start packing, they are out of their minds."

"I plan to exercise my rights. I want them to know nobody can buy me — I can't be bought. I'm going out of town and get lost. If they want me, they will have to track me down."

"This has been very painful for me. I have to go somewhere and get my head together."

Carew expressed his impatience and chagrin to The Associated Press after being reached by telephone at his home in Golden Valley, Minn.

The 33-year-old premier batter in the game, with one year to go on his contract, has been regarded as "trade bait" since the end of the last season when he expressed a desire not to continue at Minnesota.

A deal with the California Angels fell through. Then the Yankees moved into the market, offering first baseman Chris Chambliss, center fielder Juan Beniquez, two minor leaguers and close to $400,000 in cash.

Late this week George Steinbrenner, principal owner of the Yankees, personally got involved in the dealings, meeting with Calvin Griffith, president of the Twins, in Orlando, Fla. The talks seem to have stalled. One day Steinbrenner said he was taking off "to play golf."

Carew, seven times AL batting champion, said he was personally offended by the suggestion that "anything George wants, George gets."

"They can't sell me all that New York City stuff — you know what they say, 'Come to New York and you have all those opportunities to make money in commercial things.' I don't need that. I make my living playing baseball on the field."

The lean, mild-mannered Panamanian said while he New York would not be his first choice as a future home, he felt he could adjust to it.

Carew said he had felt good about possibly going to the California Angels.

"I went there expecting to spend a day haggling. They met my terms in 15 minutes," he said. "But Griffith upped the ante, and the deal fell through."

Carew said that he had set a personal deadline — Feb. 5.

"If they don't do something by then, they can forget it. I will play out my option and go on the free agent market next fall," he added.

The Minnesota infielder said he was at a loss to understand why the Yankees and Angels were battling over his services when they could wait a year and pick him up without compensation.

"Take the Yankees," he said. "They don't need me this year. They've got Chambliss. I think he is a heck of a ballplayer. Not only that, he is a nice guy, gets along with everybody."

"If I were in their place, I wouldn't let Mr. Griffith get away dictating a deal. I would just bide my time."

Estacado Faces Dunbar In Crucial Loop Game

By BOB BAJACKSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Early predictions reveal that a crowd about the size that welcomed Ayatullah Khomeini home to Iran is expected to attend tonight's Estacado-Dunbar game at the Matador gym.

Tipoff is slated for 7:30 p.m.

"You just can't fall behind by 14 points at their place like we did last time and expect to win," said Estacado coach J J Wood.

According to Wood, Dunbar won the first game at the free throw line. The Panthers put 19 points through the hoop compared to Estacado's nine points.

Wood doesn't believe that the Matadors will have an advantage because of the Panthers' defeat early in the week.

"Maybe in some other game, there might be a letdown," said Wood. "If anything, the Borger loss might help Dunbar."

Does Dunbar coach Joe McWilliams feel that the Panthers relaxed a little after winning the first half championship?

"No," said McWilliams. "We really haven't been playing well since the first game with Estacado. Estacado, on the other hand, has been playing great basketball. Their coming off a big win over Levelland."

One of the reasons Dunbar hasn't been playing good basketball lately is because the Panthers have plagued by injuries.

"It's going to be a tough game against Estacado," said the Dunbar mentor. "I hope we're able to get back on the right track."

McWilliams plans on starting Dewayne Williams and Michael Baldwin at the guard positions. The forwards will be Raphael Scott and Stanley Whitfield, with either Todd Knighten or Thomas Braxton at the post.

Meanwhile, the Lubbock Christian High boys and girls teams will compete in second round action of the Christian Basketball Tournament in Abilene.

Dunbar, winner of the first half of district play with a 4-1 record, took the first contest played earlier at the Panther gym. Dunbar defeated Estacado 81-75.

However, Borger stubbed the Panthers' toes in the first game of the second half of loop play. The Bulldogs edged Dunbar 60-56 Tuesday night.

Estacado, runnerup to the Panthers after first half district action concluded Friday night with a 3-2 record, will bring a second half 1-0 record into the contest. The Matadors defeated Levelland 93-83.

Angry Furlow Glad To Leave Cleveland

CLEVELAND (AP) — Outspoken Terry Furlow says he's happy to be leaving the Cleveland Cavaliers in a National Basketball Association trade with Atlanta that sent rookie Butch Lee on his way to Cleveland on Thursday.

Lee, too, said he was pleased with the swap of guards, and added he is looking forward to getting more playing time.

But Fitch said he would have gone ahead with the trade even if he was the best of friends with Furlow. In addition to the player-for-player swap, the Cavaliers will receive future, still-undisclosed considerations.

He said Furlow's parting shot Wednesday was a promise that he would score 50 points the first time he played against the Cavaliers. "I just wish the guy who's going to guard him that night a lot of luck," Fitch said as he smiled broadly.

The All-American at Marquette was named college player of the year by The Associated Press last season and was the Hawks' No. 1 draft choice.

The trade Wednesday capped a running feud between Furlow and Bill Fitch, the Cavaliers' coach and general manager, which erupted into an on-court shouting match in a game at New Jersey on Jan. 24.

"I've never changed as a human being on any level of basketball. I'm told I'll get playing time and I just want a chance to develop and prove myself."

"I was not getting paid for taking verbal abuse," said Furlow. "I have positive feelings and I hope the situation is right in Atlanta. It's a personal relationship here. He (Fitch) is running the show."

Furlow set a scoring record as a college star for Michigan State and is in his third year as a pro. The Cavaliers acquired him from Philadelphia in 1977 for No. 1 draft picks in 1981 and 1983.

Fitch is an outspoken advocate of a team-oriented operation which has no room for superstars. Furlow is noted for his one-on-one offensive style and has had numerous brushes with Fitch over his defensive ability.

"I'm very big on Butch Lee," Fitch said. "As for how Terry Furlow feels about me ... it doesn't matter because

Tennis Stars Angry Over New Rules

By The Associated Press

This year you decide to plan ahead. You arrange for a vacation in late June, early July. You make travel plans to London. You write away early enough and are among the lucky ones to get tickets for Wimbledon.

You're finally going to make it there for some great tennis and a taste of tradition. Well, enjoy the prospect of strawberries and cream. They'll still be there, but Jimmy Connors, Vitas Gerulaitis, Guillermo Vilas and John McEnroe might not.

A polite war is going on in tennis with the four top players standing virtually alone against the rest of the tennis establishment. A fifth, Bjorn Borg, doesn't like the rules, but says he'll abide by them.

Everyone with money in the game — sponsors, promoters — wants a chance to call the stars their own for a while. And so the Men's International Professional Tennis Council has made new rules for the Grand Prix tour to assure that all the 100 Grand Prix tournaments around the globe get a sprinkling of star dust.

International Tennis Federation members, tournament directors and the Association of Tennis Professionals (the player union) have reaffirmed their support for the rules, scheduled to go into effect March 5.

The tour regulations would require each player to be assigned to six tournaments a year — three worth $175,000 or more in total prize money, three worth $50,000-$75,000. The object: to assure each tournament, no matter the size or worth, a big name to bring in the customers.

The rules apply to all players, but were made with a small group in mind. Players could be penalized for failing to abide by the rules, and tournaments could be dropped from the Grand Prix tour if they admit players who had not signed to play by the tour rules.

In addition to the designated tournament requirement, players also would be limited in the number of exhibitions they could enter in weeks when regular tour events are scheduled.

It's not the number of required tournaments that irks the top players — each competed in at least 14 Grand Prix events last year. It's the principle, the effort by the game's administrators to dictate where they should play.

"Even if the rules were legal, which I don't believe, they are unprincipled," says John McEnroe Sr., a lawyer representing his son, the hottest young player in the world.

The crunch came in 1978. Critics said the game was in a state of anarchy and proclaimed the stars greedy, overpaid and unconcerned about the tour. Such big-money sponsors as American Airlines, Atlantic Richfield, John Player (an English cigarette company) and Rothman's (a Canadian tobacco company) dropped out of tennis.

"We lost several big corporate sponsors in the last year for some very good reasons," says Bob Briner, chairman of the council and executive director of the Association of Tennis Professionals. "These were billion-dollar companies with no way to know what their $175,000 investment was going to produce for them in the way of a field."

Who wants to invest a small fortune in the Grand Prix of Baltimore only to discover that the field is made up of unknown East Europeans? Further muddying the outlook for the tour, the major sponsor, Colgate-Palmolive, is rumored to be having some changes of heart about the way it spends money. It currently spends about $750,000 a year on the tour bonus pool and the Grand Prix Masters championship. Corporation officials would say only that their commitment to the Grand Prix was being re-evaluated.

But tennis has been through lots of organizational crises since it opened to professionals 10 years ago. Tennis lovers and others rushed to throw money into the game. The money helped form the character of pro tennis and the reputation of its players. Today about 200 men make their living on the $12 million tour.

It seems unreasonable, given all the people involved in shaping the game, to assume that a handful of players at the top are responsible for the health of tennis.

Jimmy Connors says he plays for titles these days, not the money. Whatever you may think of him, that seems credible. He made his millions a few years ago. Now his tennis is his pride and motivation. He wants to play in those tournaments that assure him a place in history.

The same is probably true for his closest rivals.

Those who want to bring the stars in tow say they're doing it for the good of all players, sponsors, tournament directors and fans. "It's going to involve a little sacrifice by the top 25 players," says Arthur Ashe, who helped draft the rules.

But the top players make the same claim — that by competing where they feel best playing, by not spreading themselves too thin, they are doing what's best for tennis in the long run. If they help themselves at the same time, so much the better, they say.

"My schedule is not like everybody else," says Connors, who likes to play two or three tournaments in a row, then take off a few weeks. "I can't play week after week, six matches each week ... I plan to play every tournament seven days. If I don't, the sponsor isn't getting what he wants and neither are the fans."

Anyone who doesn't enlist by the March 5 deadline will be excluded from all tour events, including Wimbledon, the U.S. Open and most of the other big championships. That, at least, is what the council intends. It is questionable whether the U.S. Tennis Association — sponsors of the U.S. Open — and Wimbledon officials would shut out their defending champions and most important contributors. Slew Hester, president of the USTA, said the Open might admit unsigned players but refuse to award them four points.

All parties say accommodation is possible. But neither side appears ready to give in.

Thus we have the prospect of four of the top five male players in the world sitting out the best tournaments. If that's the way tennis intends to cure its ills, the cure could be worse than the illness.

Judge Extends Orders Protecting Knoetze

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — A federal judge has extended to Feb. 9 his order that prevents the U.S. State Department from revoking the visa of South African boxer Kallie Knoetze, a court spokesman said Thursday.

In an order signed on Wednesday, U.S. District Judge Norman Roettger issued a preliminary injunction protecting the visa, which Knoetze needs to fight in the United States.

"The injunction maintains the status quo," said the spokesman, who asked not to be identified. He said Roettger was scheduled to rule in the case at a hearing Feb. 9.

A temporary restraining order issued by Roettger last month was due to expire Thursday. That could have opened the way for the State Department to revoke Knoetze's visa, the spokesman said.

"With the history and posture of the case there was a possibility that government officials could simply refuse to allow Mr. Knoetze into the country," he said.

The judge indicated last week that he might issue a temporary injunction before expiration of the restraining order, unless the State Department agreed to continue the boxer's visa.

The State Department attempted to lift Knoetze's visa and deny him a U.S. work permit prior to his Jan. 13 fight against Bill Sharkey in Miami Beach.

But Roettger blocked the government action, the fight went on and Knoetze, the second-ranked heavyweight, knocked Sharkey out.

Roettger heard arguments from lawyers for Knoetze and the government during two days of hearings last week. The judge continued the case to Feb. 12 and said he would rule soon after that date.

Knoetze's agents are negotiating for a bout with former heavyweight champion Leon Spinks and have pressed for an early ruling to help clear the way for that fight.

Knoetze, 26, was convicted of obstructing justice in South Africa in 1977. Though it's a misdemeanor there, the State Department contends the offense would be a felony in this country, thus making Knoetze ineligible for a visa as a man convicted of a crime of "moral turpitude."

But the boxer's attorney termed the action a political maneuver orchestrated by civil rights activist the Rev. Jesse Jackson, who calls Knoetze a symbol of South African apartheid.

Government lawyers said Jackson had no role in the decision to revoke Knoetze's visa.

Jackson publicized an incident where Knoetze shot a black youth while serving as a South African policeman. Knoetze was acquitted of wrongdoing in that shooting.

Sports Notes

Tourney Slated

The Texas Tech men's tennis team will enter its second tournament of the spring today when it competes in the Heart Open Doubles championship at the Lubbock Racquet Club. The tourney will run through Sunday.

Coach Mark Hamilton will enter five Tech teams in the open division of the tournament. Probable pairings for the Raiders will be Harrison Bowers and Doug Davis; Kevin Hopson and David Moore; Joe Blackshear and Gregg Davis; Chow Weng Wah and David C. Rissey; and Randy Clayton and Robert Davis.

In all more than 150 teams are expected to compete in all divisions with about 30 college teams slated to vie for the open championships.

"The field is the best it has ever been for this tournament," said Hamilton. "There are going to be several good doubles teams entered. It should give our players some good experience before we get into team competition."

Tracksters Compete

Texas Tech track coach Corky Oglesby leads his Raider tracksters into their second indoor meet of the season today when the squad travels to Canyon to compete with West Texas State and Wayland Baptist in a triangular meet.

Preliminaries begin at 6 p.m. tonight and the finals will start at 7 p.m. Saturday. The Raiders opened the season with the Lubbock Christian College meet last week but only came away with two wins in that affair.

"We were a little slowed down by some injuries and sickness last week," said Oglesby. "We are a little better physically this week and I expect our runners to give us a pretty good idea of what they can do in this meet."

Segrist Honored

Kal Segrist, had baseball coach at Texas Tech, has been honored by the NCAA for his contribution to intercollegiate athletics.

Walter Byers, executive director of the NCAA, has informed Segrist that in the near future an NCAA medallion on a swivel stand for his contributions to intercollegiate athletics through service on NCAA committees and in other activities.

Segrist will begin his 12th season at the helm at Tech on Feb. 16 when the Raiders open their baseball season at Hard n Simmons in Abilene.

Coaches Meet

The Texas High School Coaches Association Region I meeting will take place Saturday morning at West Texas State University.

A one-dollar registration fee will be charged with lunch provided. Registration will get underway at 8:30 a.m.

Guest speakers will include Bill Young, head coach West Texas State; Jackie Needham, Houston Stratford; and Larry Dippell, Amarillo High School.

Actress Asserts Famous Name Aids Career Very Little

NEW YORK (AP) — Ever wonder how far a famous name will carry an aspiring actress. Ask a young lady who should know.

"It might get you your first job," says Anne Lockhart, daughter, granddaughter, great-granddaughter of an acting family.

But if you can't make it happen on the screen or on stage... Well, words get around pretty fast.

It looks as if Anne Lockhart can, indeed, make it happen. At 25, she's had eight years in the business and, she says, "I'm pretty proud of the fact that for almost all of that time, I've been making a living at it."

She recently landed her first continuing role, that of Sheba in ABC's "Battlestar Galactica." Sheba is the daughter of Commander Cain, the greatest military leader in the history of the Colonial government.

A good part in a TV series is nothing new to the Lockhart family. Anne's mother, June Lockhart, was the mother in the third and perhaps best-known family in the long-running "Lassie" series.

June Lockhart appeared in 13 movies, including "Son of Lassie" in 1948, and her father, Gene Lockhart, was Anne's grandfather — was in 22 films, and his wife, Kathleen Lockhart, was in 21.

It goes back even further. "Grandfather's father, John Coates Lockhart, was an entertainer and singer who did shows in the U.S. and Canada," Miss Lockhart says. "I'm fourth generation, and I don't know of anyone else working today who is in school."

Anne Lockhart was in a short film, "T is for Tumbleweed," at the age of 4, but she says, "I worked very little as a child. It was looked on as sort of a treat to be in something. I did a couple of commercials, but not a lot of other work while I was in school."

"Mother always felt acting was an awful difficult life for a child."

Anne Lockhart appeared in her first school play as a senior in high school, at Verde Valley School in Arizona, where a number of actors' offspring were classmates.

"There were three leads, me, Chris Lemmon and David Matthau," she recalls. "Can you imagine parents' night, with the 'Odd Couple' and my mother in the audience?" Jack Lemmon, Chris' father, and Walter Matthau, David's dad, were in the movie based on Neil Simon's play.

In fact, Lemmon and Matthau helped Anne Lockhart get a start in professional acting. "I came how from school and got a call from the William Morris Agency," she says. The two actors had recommended her to the talent organization.

"I was 17, and I asked mother about it. She said, 'Are you kidding? Nobody gets it that good.'"

She had no professional training, but did TV guest spots and scores of commercials. "I think my training came from a great desire to act. I paid attention and sponged up all that I could."

"Mother had some good advice. She told me to follow my instincts. She said, 'There's a good director living inside you. Listen to her.'"

There's a twist to the "Battlestar Galactica" story — Miss Lockhart turned down a role in the space adventure series the first time it was offered.

"It was the hardest thing I'd ever done," she says, "but I felt the part I was offered first might be too confusing."

"I was looking for a character that had strength, human values, and I knew I wasn't going to be happy playing a Nurse Nancy type."

There's a good deal more to the story, but there's something else you ought to know about Anne Lockhart.

"It's my secret career. For over a year," she says, "I was a dubbing actress. I went in to speak for actresses who can't talk."

In one film alone, "Beyond and Back," she says she did the voices of four characters. "My mother went to see the film, and could only recognize two."

Litton Advertisements Charged Deceptive

WASHINGTON (AP) — Litton Industries, Inc., one of the nation's largest conglomerates, used deceptive advertising in touting its microwave ovens, the government charged Thursday.

The firm's advertising in such publications as Newsweek and the Wall Street Journal said a survey of microwave oven service technicians found an overwhelming majority favoring Litton over other brands.

Actually, those responding were drawn from a list of Litton-authorized microwave oven service agents, resulting in a bias in the results, the Federal Trade Commission charged.

Dick Parrish, spokesman for Litton's Microwave Cooking Products Division in Minneapolis, declined immediate comment. The parent firm has headquarters in Beverly Hills, Calif.

Litton said later that it surveyed only those service agents who repair at least one other brand and tabulated the responses only for the brands they serviced.

High School Senior Eyes Political Job

AJ AUSTIN BUREAU

AUSTIN — Monterey High School senior Ka'ya Ethridge wants to get into politics. She's off to a good start.

As Secretary of State for the YMCA's Texas State Youth and Government Program, Ethridge says participating in model governments here and in Lubbock has been a learning experience — one she can use in her plans to major in political science next year at North Texas State University.

Ethridge, a three-year veteran of the YMCA-sponsored program, says she'd like to wind up in Washington, working as an aide to U.S. Rep. Kent Hance. She worked in his latest successful State Senate campaign, and in last year's heated Congressional race.

Members of this year's youth program are in Austin through Sunday to study state government and meet with its leaders.

Litton feels the claims made in the ads, that up to 80 percent of the servicemen would recommend purchase of Litton microwave ovens, were accurately represented, and that the FTC's concerns are unfounded," the company statement said.

Litton advertisements published in major newspapers and magazines during 1976 and 1977 said, "76 percent of the independent microwave oven technicians surveyed recommend Litton."

The ad compared Litton to competitors General Electric, Amana, Sharp and Magic Chef. The survey results showed Litton far above the other brands in quality, dependability and ease of repair.

The FTC complaint said the surveys were conducted for Litton by Custom Research, Inc., but were not the independent surveys claimed in the ads.

"The surveys were designed and analyzed by Litton employees. The role of Custom Research was limited to placing the telephone calls, from a list of names supplied by Litton, and conducting the interviews, from a questionnaire supplied by Litton," the commission said.

The commission alleged that the ads failed to show that those who were surveyed had sufficient experience in repairing non-Litton brands of microwave ovens to be able to make brand comparisons.

"The deception of the advertising may 'mislead members of the consuming public into the purchase of substantial quantities of microwave ovens manufactured by Litton,'" the FTC said.

An FTC complaint means the commission has "reason to believe" that the law has been violated. The complaint means that hearings will be held before an administrative law judge on the charges. Litton has 30 days to submit a legal response.

The FTC's notice of contemplated relief said the commission may seek remedies, including a requirement that all future advertising claims for Litton microwave ovens and other consumer products be substantiated by reliable evidence.

Skating Star Says 'It's No Novelty'

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Illinois-born Lynn-Holly Johnson skates like a dream in her first movie, and you might suppose she would be headed for a career like Sonja Henie's.

"I don't think a run of skating pictures would go over today," says Miss Johnson, who just turned 20. "Ice skating is much more popular today than it was in Sonja Henie's time, and it's no longer a novelty to see it on the screen."

On the blades or off, critics have predicted a promising career for the girl whose only previous acting was in a neighborhood play. She has a captivating naturalness as well as blonde beauty that is near perfection. Also a mind of her own.

"When they first showed me the script of 'Ice Castles,' it was aimed for an R rating," she remarked. "I said I wasn't interested. Apparently they were in the process of changing the script, anyway, and it became a PG. Then I was interested."

Columbia Pictures is hoping that "Ice Castles" will be the first sleeper of 1979. The film was released in eight selected cities in December, with encouraging results. Receipts for the third week equaled the first, indicating that the film has staying power.

The movie is unabashedly sentimental. Lynn-Holly Johnson plays an ice skater who is being pushed toward Olympic competition by her widower father, Tom Skerritt. She is also influenced by her coach (Jennifer Warren) and a rink owner (Colleen Dewhurst) as well as a sportscaster (David Huffman). An accident leaves the girl almost blind, and help comes from a young hockey player, Robby Benson.

The saga of the athlete struck down in prime performance has become familiar on television. But "Ice Castles" is different, thanks in large part to the debut of Lynn-Holly Johnson.

She was born without the hyphen (her roommate on an "Icecapades" tour signed it that way, and Lynn adopted it) in Chicago and grew up in Glenview, Ill., daughter of a general contractor. A skating rink opened near the Johnson home, and Lynn watched her mother and older brother and sister skate, then joined them on ice at the age of four. By 11 she decided to train seriously, and in 1974 she placed second in the national novice free skating contest.

A broken leg ended her career as a competitor, and at 18 she joined "Icecapades" as a feature skater.

"Some people have suggested that I

Elvis' Father Gets Heart Pacemaker

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Doctors implanted a pacemaker Thursday in the late Elvis Presley's father Vernon, who is described as critically ill.

Baptist Hospital spokesman Maurice Elliott said, "Mr. Presley continued to have problems with an irregular heart-beat last night, complicated by a fall in his blood pressure. His condition is critical."

Presley, 62, was admitted Jan. 15 after suffering a heart attack and irregular heart rhythm. Elliott said there was some damage to his heart after the initial attack.

Another heart attack Jan. 24 complicated his recovery but his condition improved slightly afterward. Presley, a diabetic, suffered his first heart attack in 1975.

Heart attacks killed his son at age 42 in 1977 and his first wife, Gladys Smith Presley, in 1958.

wasted a lot of money and years training five to seven hours a day for all those years," Miss Johnson remarked. "I don't think so. The thrill of competition was enough to compensate me, even though I didn't continue."

"Naturally the Olympic games were in my mind, but I was realistic about it. There are a thousand skaters aiming for the Olympics, and maybe two or three get there. I realized there was more to figure skating than the Olympics."

She might still be doing her thing for "Icecapades" except that Columbia needed a young skater for the star-making role in "Ice Castles." Director Donald Wrye and studio scouts searched the rinks of America and inquired of the Ice Skating Institute of America. The name of Lynn-Holly Johnson was mentioned.

"I did an audition and a test," she recalled. "Then I was told I would be leaving three days later to begin the movie. I cried, because that meant leaving the 'Capades' tour. Some people think the tour must be a grind, but I enjoyed it. It was like being in a circus — a different town every week, with plenty of time off to see it."

"Ice Castles" was filmed mostly around Minneapolis-St. Paul, and Miss Johnson skated outdoors for the first time in her life. It is more difficult, she discovered, since the extreme cold makes the ice harder and tougher to skate.

"I was more scared of the skating than the acting in the movie," she said. "They expected a great deal of me as a skater. With the acting, I could only do my best. I think maybe that helped — not trying too hard."

Famed Jazzman Enters Ranks Of Disco

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The unsuspecting jazz buff who plops Herbie Hancock's new album on his turntable is in for a surprise.

Instead of the funky keyboard creations which Hancock's most recent recordings would lead a listener to expect, the hapless fan is going to be hearing — shades of Saturday Night Fever! — disco.

The album, "Feets Don't Fail Me Now," is due for release this month, but you can almost hear the screams of the purists.

After all, this is the same man who's dazzled jazz lovers — particularly those of the electronic persuasion — with nearly two dozen albums of his own since 1965. Hancock is also a sideman who's played in bands with such jazz artists as Donald Byrd, Freddie Hubbard and the legendary Miles Davis. The composer of "Watermelon Man" and "Maiden Voyage."

Well, it won't be the first time Hancock has changed his musical orientation to the wails of some unprepared fans — and to the delight of countless new ones.

His 1973 "Headhunters" album, in which he turned from his increasingly complex works of the '60s and early '70s to a more accessible jazz-rock sound, also prompted some complaints.

It also became the only one of his albums as lead artist to earn a gold record, and is credited with helping to establish jazz in the mass market.

"I originally established myself as a jazz musician, and unfortunately people are accustomed to pigeonholing," says Hancock, well-prepared for questions on his various fields of musical endeavor.

"I wasn't the one that stuck me with the label 'jazz musician.' Not that the label isn't applicable, but it may not always be applicable. I consider myself a musician, and that might express itself in many different ways."

There was also a rather refreshing element of perversity involved in Hancock's decision to go disco.

"I kept hearing from interviewers and reviewers things like, 'Well, you wouldn't get into doing that disco stuff, would you?' I even somebody say to me, 'We wouldn't want to see Picasso do cartoons.'"

"I sure would! That would be great. And he did! It really points up our disrespect for people's tastes. We feel like human beings in general don't have any taste, and only the elite, intelligent viewers or listeners have proper taste, and that's backwards."

Hancock also notes that in the past he's written music for television commercials of such major concerns as Standard Oil, General Motors and Pillsbury. He's also done scores for films — "Blow Up" and "Death Wish," for example — and television shows such as Bill Cosby's "Hey, Hey, Hey, It's Fat Albert."

"All of that wasn't jazz," he says. "Jazz isn't the only kind of music I like."

"I'm a human being first of all, even before being a musician, and I live in California in 1979, so I'm a product of the times too, like everybody else that goes out and buys records."

"That doesn't mean everybody is like a robot and everybody buys exactly the same records all the time, but there are different trends that seem to stick out at different times. And naturally I'm going to be influenced by those, and perhaps have an influence on those trends too as a musician."

"So if disco is happening now, I'm not going to walk around with blinders on. I went and saw 'Saturday Night Fever' and I loved it! I thought it was good. I got very excited about it although I can't dance worth a damn."

In fact, Hancock says, he had to hire someone to teach him a little body English for his live premiere as a disco artist. On stage, the slim, nattily dressed 38-year-old takes breaks from his keyboards and practices his new skill with a vengeance, hammering on a cowbell as though his life depended on it.

"I never used to do anything like that!" Hancock laughs. Before, he explains, "I was so you never saw the hop. The only thing everybody would see of me behind those keyboards were some shoulders moving."

"Feets Don't Fail Me Now" features vocals by Hancock, who never sang before his last album, "Sunlight," for the simple reason that he isn't much of a singer.

Prince's Schedule Does Not Include Time For Romance

LONDON (AP) — Prince Charles, 30 and still single, won't have much time for romance during the next six months if he keeps the schedule he has organized for himself.

According to the prince's program, announced by Buckingham Palace Thursday, he'll spend a day at 10 Downing St. with Prime Minister James Callaghan, another at the headquarters of the Engineering Workers' Union, one of Britain's largest unions, and a week in London's financial district to see how banking and insurance businesses work.

"The prince feels that the importance of industry is under-emphasized in the British economy," said a palace spokesman.

"He is worried about the image of industry and is not only trying to learn from it, but also trying to promote it."

In between, the Prince plans five visits to Scotland, five to Wales, and will tour Hong Kong, Singapore, Australia, Canada, France, West Germany, Denmark and Switzerland.

Former Japanese dictator Hideki Tojo and six of his collaborators were hanged in 1948 for war crimes.

Washington Host To New Play

WASHINGTON (AP) — A play with music based on the writings of Norwegian artist Edvard Munch opened at the new east building at the National Gallery of Art Thursday in connection with the Munch exhibition.

Based on Munch's diaries, notes and letters, the production titled "Painted Words" is being performed by a group from Norway called "The Ensemble." It is made up of four actors and actresses and a guitarist.

Accompanied by slides and classical guitar, the show runs for about 50 minutes. There will be two performances daily through Feb. 5. Admission to the auditorium is free.

The Munch exhibition, the largest ever seen outside Norway, was the showpiece of the new gallery which opened June 1.

The dramatic production is supported by grants from Mobil Exploration, the transportation company Linjegods A.S. and the Norwegian ministry of foreign affairs.

The embassy's cultural affairs officer, Lars Tangeras, and his wife, Anne Lis Tangeras, entertained for some members of the troupe, gallery officials, other diplomatic personnel and some media representatives at their home in suburban Maryland Wednesday night.

Members of the cast are Ineke Brinkman, born in Holland and with a varied career in Holland and Norway; Gry Enger, born in Oslo and a veteran with the National Theater there; Rolf Iversen, born in Tromso and an actor for the past four years; and Bjorg Vatle, born on the west coast of Norway and an actress with the Norske Theatret in Oslo for several years.

The guitarist is Magni Wentzel, who has studied in Oslo, Geneva, Madrid, Barcelona and London. She is well known as a jazz singer. She chose the music from the works of Rodrigo, de Falla and Prokofiev. The producer is Karen Randers Pehrson.
