Bakhtiar Struggles To Retain Power

No Ban Placed On 'Shadow' Regime

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Prime Minister Shahpour Bakhtiar said Sunday he would not oppose the creation of a "shadow" government by Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, but he warned he was prepared to "answer Molotov cocktail for Molotov cocktail" if his foes resort to force.

Opposition sources said they expect Khomeini, who returned to Iran Thursday after forcing Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi from the country, to designate the head of a "provisional government" within a week.

Khomeini followers marched in several small, peaceful demonstrations Sunday in various parts of Tehran. Some carried signs and shouted slogans warning of a "holy war" if the 78-year-old Muslim religious leader is not allowed to establish an Islamic republic.

UPI Offices Firebombed
The Tehran office of United Press International was the target Sunday night of two fire bombs that exploded in the yard outside the office, causing slight damage to the building but no injuries, a UPI spokesman said.

He reported a telephone caller warned of the firebombing before it happened and said a pro-Khomeini religious group, Mojahdeen, would be responsible.

The problems facing Bakhtiar, struggling to avoid a bloody showdown with Khomeini's forces, were dramatized by troubles within his own office. Some 400 civil servants who work for the prime minister went on strike to protest the army's slaying of more than 30 persons last week in violent Tehran protests.

A spokesman for the strikers said only Bakhtiar's chief of staff and personal secretary remained on the job.

In an interview with the Tehran daily newspaper Ettelaat, Bakhtiar likened a Khomeini-appointed government with a European "shadow Cabinet" named by opposition parties waiting in the wings to take power.

Arrest Threatened
"Many (opposition) political parties in progressive, democratic countries designate their own prime minister," Bakhtiar said. "But if this prime minister-designate starts creating disorders and riots and wants to interfere with the legal order of the country, I will arrest him."

The prime minister told The Associated Press in a telephone interview, "I will keep the door open for negotiations (with Khomeini) and a peaceful solution. But I will answer Molotov cocktail with Molotov cocktail."

In an interview with Tehran radio, Bakhtiar vowed again not to resign and promised he would not "permit a new type of dictatorship which will be worse than before."

He said he had doubts about Khomeini's vision of an Islamic republic, saying it was "incomprehensible to me," and ruled out the possibility of a military coup "under the present circumstances."

Referendum Endorsed
Bakhtiar endorsed the idea of holding a national referendum to decide the nation's future, as has Khomeini.

Intensive negotiations are under way between Bakhtiar's shah-appointed government and Khomeini in an effort to steer the country away from the brink of civil war.

Opposition sources described the contacts to some extent as a "tag of war" for the allegiance of the country's 430,000-man armed forces, the key factor in the political struggle.

"Bakhtiar is nothing now," one opposition member said. "It's the army, or the top command of the army, and if we can convince them to join the people, we will have a solution."

Bakhtiar said he was "pleased with the negotiations so far," but he did not elaborate.

The chief mediator is believed to be Mehdi Bazargan, 73, a retired oil engineer and human-rights activist who is a longtime friend of Bakhtiar. He also acted as Khomeini's personal envoy in negotiations with striking oil workers.

There is speculation Bazargan may be tapped by Khomeini as the prime minister of the provisional government, which if Bakhtiar steps aside would run the country until a referendum is held on the establishment of the Islamic republic.

Informed sources said Bazargan has met with Khomeini, Bakhtiar and at least two senior military leaders within the past few days.

One Iranian source said Bakhtiar, who insists publicly he has no plans to resign, would probably agree to step down if he were convinced that his departure would not trigger a military coup.

Some Western diplomats said they believe the military is showing signs of wavering in its support for the government. Enlisted-soldiers have been seen joining thousands of their countrymen in pilgrimages to Khomeini's headquarters and there have been reports of mutinies in some air force units.

Arms Purchases Voided By Iran

WASHINGTON (AP) — Iran has decided to cancel U.S. arms purchases worth billions of dollars and has asked the United States to reduce sharply its military advisory presence in the country, informed sources said Sunday.

The total figure of the reduction may reach $7 billion, a source said.

Under the Shah of Iran, the Tehran government bought or agreed to buy about $20 billion in U.S. military equipment, training or construction. About $8 billion worth already has been delivered.

A reduction of about $7 billion would wipe out much of the projected sales targeted for delivery over the next several years.

The cutbacks requested by the embattled civilian government left in charge after the shah's departure Jan. 16 reflect a changed political climate as well as questions about Iran's future military posture in the strategic Persian Gulf area.

Starts Immediately
The reductions are "to start immediately," a source said, adding they were worked out by Iranian officials and special Pentagon envoy Erich von Marbod in talks that ended Saturday. Gen. Robert Huyser, deputy chief of U.S. forces in Europe, also took part, sources said.

According to the sources, agreed-on U.S. reductions in foreign military sales to Iran include 160 F-16 fighter planes; seven radar-equipped Airborne Warning and Control System aircraft; two Spruance class destroyers; 16 RF-4E reconnaissance planes; a variety of missiles; and armored and other vehicles.

The sources said Iran asked that the American Military Advisory Group "be reduced to 250 people and also requested a major cutback in contract follow-on support."

Follow-on support refers to largely civilian personnel sent to Iran to help the Iranians train with purchased U.S. equipment.

Overall Presence Trimmed

Pre-reduction strength of the U.S. military advisers in Iran was believed to number about 960. At its peak, the overall U.S. presence in Iran has been placed as high as 45,000 people, including dependents. As of Jan. 25, the Pentagon has said, there were 888 U.S. military and Defense Department employees and 85 dependents in Iran.

Some estimates put the overall number of Americans in the country after evacuations ordered earlier for safety reasons at about 7,000.

Iran's economy, hurt by a loss of oil money, has taken a beating as the shah and the shah-appointed government of Prime Minister Shahpour Bakhtiar struggled to maintain power under attack by followers of religious leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini. He wants to establish a neutralist Islamic Republic.

Last Wednesday, informed government sources said in London Iran had asked Britain to suspend arms deals worth $2.6 billion, including orders for Chieftain tanks and Rapier anti-aircraft missiles.

The Washington Post said Sunday Iran wants out of $3 billion worth of European arms contracts, including small submarines built by West Germany.

It said Iran also has scrapped a $1 billion naval base already being built by a U.S. company at Chah Bahar on the Gulf of Oman.

The Post added that Pentagon officials have acknowledged Iran is having trouble meeting the payroll for its half million soldiers.

The United States, the sources said, hopes to sell some of the canceled items to other countries.

One Killed, 10 Hurt In Area Wreck

HALE CENTER — A 7-year-old Amarillo girl died and 10 others were injured, one critically, when a station wagon loaded with 10 persons and a pickup truck collided on a county dirt road four miles west and two miles north of Hale Center Sunday afternoon.

Luzmila Gonzalez was pronounced dead at 8:45 p.m. at Lubbock's Methodist Hospital from injuries she suffered in the 5:45 p.m. collision.

Bernardino Gonzalez Sr., 5, remained in critical condition late Sunday at Methodist with massive head injuries he suffered in the accident.

Five persons were hospitalized at Hi-Plains Hospital in Hale Center. They are Zelma Anna Gonzalez, 34, of Amarillo, serious; Lucenda Gonzalez, 16, good condition; Lokena Gonzalez, 10, and Cesar Sanchez, 6, both in fair condition; and Rosena Sanchez, 2, satisfactory.

Bernardino Gonzalez Sr., 36, Mary Ellen Sanchez, 24, and Leo Sanchez, 28, were treated at the Hale Center hospital Sunday and released.

The driver of the pickup truck, Gary Lynn Doshier, 18, of Hale Center also was treated at the hospital and released.

Department of Public Safety reports indicate the pickup truck was westbound on the county dirt road and the station wagon was northbound on the same road when the two vehicles collided in the intersection.

Service for Luzmila Gonzalez are pending with the Freeman Funeral Home in Hale Center.

Tech Loan Defaults Fall Below State, National Averages

By RUTHANNE BROCKWAY
Avalanche-Journal Staff

ABOUT ONE of every 10 Texas Tech students who have financed a college education with money from a controversial national loan program has failed to repay the loan, according to government figures.

Still, that is barely half the national and state default rate on the National Direct Student Loans.

Nationwide, the default rate has risen to 17.7 percent, while the Texas default rate is even higher, at 19.72 percent. Tech's rate of 11.2 percent falls below either of those averages, but still it is higher than fiscal experts in Washington think is appropriate.

Ronny Barnes, Tech financial aid director, acknowledges the past three presidential administrations have recommended that the federal government pull out of the 20-year-old NDSL program. But he doesn't believe the situation warrants such drastic measures.

Barnes said both the local and national figures are misleading and added, "The default rate is not as bad as people would lead you to think."

Congress Refuses Slash
Among the people Barnes refers to are those in the Carter administration who say that because of the continuously increasing default rate Congress should either slash the program's funds or eliminate the program entirely.

Congress has refused such administrative requests in the past. The latest threat to the program came last week when Joseph A. Califano Jr., Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, vowed that the federal government will try to cut off the federal share of college's loan funds if they fail to meet "government performance standards" for reducing their default rates.

Although such a policy is proposed to take effect in the 1980-81 academic year, Tech's financial aid director is not worried that it will affect the university next year.

"Those performance standards have not been set yet," Barnes said, adding that bureaucratic red tape will delay such a policy until after the 1980-81 year begins.

Califano cited a national default rate in the NDSL program of 17.7 percent at the end of June 1978, an increase over the previous year's figure of 16.9 percent.

Tech Defaults Increase
Tech's current default rate is 11.2 percent, up over the 1976-77 school year figure of 9.5 percent. Barnes said an alternate method of figuring the rate would lower Tech's figure to 5 percent.

But it's the HEW method of figuring defaults that counts with the government. That method is figured on this basis: if a borrower is behind in payments, the entire debt is due. By that standard Tech has $345,000 in defaulted direct student loans.

Barnes prefers to look at the figures another way. By calculating only the amount that borrowers are past due in paying — not their entire loan debt — Tech has 483 loans overdue, totaling $154,000. That figure amounts to 5 percent rate, rather than the HEW figure of 11.2 percent for Tech.

The loan program is set up on a nine-to-one matching system, with the federal government supplying 90 percent of the loan money and colleges and universities supplying 10 percent. It was designed to be a revolving fund, with the schools using loan payments from graduates or ex-students to finance new loans.

Since 1976, the Tech program has worked on the revolving plan because loan payments have been high enough to meet the demand for new loans.

Barnes said the make-up of Tech's student body is why the school fares better

MRS. CONNALLY COLLAPSES

A spokesman for the hospital said she apparently fainted and was kept overnight for observation.

Key West Policemen Get Tough

KEY WEST, Fla. (AP) — For years Key West has attracted thousands of visitors who have brought the city fame and fortune. But it has also drawn a fringe element that threatens its tranquility.

Last week the town's most celebrated resident, playwright Tennessee Williams, was attacked and now a special police squad is trying to clean up the troubled community.

Key West has been a haven for rum-runners and dope smugglers. When the Navy was the city's biggest business sail-or would brawl with fishermen in the streets and bars. For years the town's balmy climate and easy lifestyle has lured runaways and dropouts.

The town, standing on the southern tip of the Florida Keys, has also attracted tourists and writers. Ernest Hemingway, Truman Capote, James O'Hurley and a host of lesser known writers and artists have lived and worked here.

People Avoid Streets
The two communities have uneasily regarded each other. In recent years random attacks on tourists and winter residents grew to the point where some people were staying off the streets.

Williams was attacked by a gang of toughs as he strolled home from a discotheque with New York writer Dotson Rader.

"We were singing hymns," Rader said. "My father's a faith healer. We were singing 'I Come to the Garden Alone.'" When the two men met the gang, Williams said, "We're itinerant chorists, trying to make an honest living." Rader recounted. But the gang failed to appreciate the writer's wit and knocked them to the ground and kicked them.

Neither was seriously hurt and Williams shrugged it off. "Obviously they were New York drama critics," he said.

Special Squad Formed
The reaction at City Hall was very different. City Manager Ron Stack instructed Police Chief Winston James to form a special squad and lead a sweep of Duval Street — the main street where tourists and drifters jostle shoulders, amid clouds of marijuana smoke.

"It's the scumbags we're after," James said the other night as he and a detective sergeant prowled the street.

James and his men have enforced the letter of the law and Duval has grown much quieter. In one recent night the special squad made 21 arrests in the neighborhood.

Prince Rated 'Normal Person' By City Fifth, Sixth Graders

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

HIS FAVORITE television shows are "Gunsmoke" and "The Six Million Dollar Man." He sometimes wants to ditch his bodyguards and go buy a hamburger. He doesn't pray as much as he should. And he likes to fly but thinks his Air Force training jet is too slow.

Those are some of the things Rush Elementary School children learned firsthand about Lubbock's most famous resident, Crown Prince Reza Pahlavi.

Recently the son of Iran's troubled shah accepted an invitation to visit Juneau Hansard's class of fifth-graders and sixth-graders. The prince, a pilot trainee at Reese Air Force Base, spent an hour chatting with students and signing autographs.

School Newspaper Scores Scoop

The visit, conducted under strict security and secrecy, was chronicled on the front page of the school newspaper — which scored one of the all-time scoops on the nation's grown-up press.

"He's not big-headed or stuck-up, the way you might think a prince would be," said sixth-grader Leslie Dickinson, editor of The Rush Rambler.

"He's a normal person."

Indeed, children found they had much in common with the 18-year-old heir to the Iranian throne. They enjoy some of the same television programs, foods and sports, for example. And they both occasionally feel home — even a palace — can be too confining or boring.

"The prince told us that when he was growing up, his guards were pretty strict. Sometimes he wanted to run away," sixth-grader Jane Reynolds recalled. "The prince didn't mind talking about his personal life. He was very friendly to us. Three times he said, 'I am so glad I came.' When it was over, he didn't want to leave," Jane added.

Appearance "Something Of A Miracle"
That the prince even showed up was "something of a miracle," said Mary Elizabeth Shotwell, who last semester served as a student teacher in Mrs. Hansard's room.

In November, the two instructors were planning activities to go along with their sixth-graders' social-studies lesson on Iran.

"We were sitting at a table during a planning session," Mrs. Hansard remembers.

"Miss Shotwell looked up at me and said, 'Are you thinking what I'm thinking?' The prince! Let's ask the prince to speak to the class."

"I said, 'Impossible. He'll never come.' But she's not the kind who gives up."

Added Miss Shotwell, who now has graduated to a full-fledged teacher at Williams Elementary: "The prince is the neatest thing to hit Lubbock — I couldn't let the opportunity pass by. I knew the idea of inviting him as a guest speaker was far out. But it was so far out, I thought it just might work."

Miss Shotwell drafted a letter for delivery to the prince, who owns a $285,000 house (he uses it mainly on weekends, preferring to spend the rest of the time in an apartment on the Reese grounds) near Rush Elementary, 4709 15th St.

The letter began: "Dear Prince Reza Pahlavi, 'Let me first introduce myself and say that I hope you read and think serious-

Tractors Set For Capital Siege Today

WASHINGTON (AP) — Following a Sunday morning church service and late afternoon rally, thousands of farmers disgusted with Congress and the Carter Administration set the final stage for this morning's siege of the capital.

The American Agriculture Movement wants Carter to fully implement the current farm bill. Such a move would raise loan limits and prices paid to farmers.

More than 1,000 farmers attended a church service at the Commerce Department auditorium Sunday morning.

That night, rallies were held at the three parks outside Washington where approximately 1,000 tractors are parked. An equal number of support vehicles — trucks, cars and recreational vehicles — are to accompany the slow-moving tractors.

The Virginia and Maryland police have given the farmers permits to approach Washington from three directions, with all routes leading to Capitol Hill.

"We don't want to give the police any problems," said Hereford farmer Gerald McCathern, the AAM's national wagon-master. "We want to be sure and get into Washington ... that's where all the bad

Flood Regrets Mistrial; Maintains Innocence

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Daniel J. Flood has expressed regret that his bribery and perjury trial ended in a mistrial, apparently caused by one holdout among the jurors.

"I maintain my innocence of any wrongdoing in the charges that were considered against me," said the 75-year-old Pennsylvania Democrat said Saturday night after the deadlocked federal jury of eight men and four women was dismissed, ending nearly three days of deliberations.

Juror Johnnie Lyles said the panel was 11 to 1 for conviction on six of the seven bribery counts and that "it was just a contrary old man who held out on everything...he didn't want evidence...he wouldn't hear anything we had to say."

Assistant U.S. Attorney David Hinden of Los Angeles, one of the three government prosecutors, refused to speculate over whether the congressman would be tried again.

"That is up to the Justice Department," he said, adding that one factor would be how and why the jurors were split and what problems they found in the government's case.

Axel Kleiboemer, Flood's lawyer, also expressed disappointment. He said the congressman had spent more than $100,000 defending himself.

Flood was charged with one count of conspiracy in a scheme to collect payoffs for political favors, seven counts of bribery in receiving about $50,000 in a six-year period and three counts of lying under oath that he ever got any such illegal cash.

Mrs. Lyles said the panel never did get to vote on the charges of conspiracy and making false declaration because of the lone holdout for acquittal whom she declined to identify.

"It was very, very frustrating," she said. "It was an awful ordeal for all of us."

The Washington Post quoted sources as identifying the holdout juror as William Cash. He could not be reached for comment.

Mrs. Lyles quoted the holdout as saying: "I know he's guilty on some of the charges, but I'll never vote to send an old man to jail."

U.S. District Judge Oliver Gasch pressed the jury again and again, over defense objections, to try to return at least a partial verdict on one or more counts, one way or another.

"I hate to see it all go down the drain," he told the jurors.

They went back and tried, but kept reporting deadlocks, and then turned down the judge's suggestion for a long weekend recess and resume Monday when "there might be a different climate."

Foreman Daniel Robinson, after conferring privately with the other jurors, said a delay in deliberations wouldn't change the deadlocked situation.

Two pictures of Flood emerged at the trial, which had 21 prosecution witnesses and 37 for the defense.

The government painted him as a crooked politician who conspired with his former administrative assistant, Stephen B. Elko, to sell favors under the motto: "Get all you can get while you can get it."

The defense pictured a frail, tired old man framed by an ex-employee who pocketed the bribes he claimed to deliver to the congressman. It claimed he was a frugal man who purchased a $25 or $50 savings bond every month since 1944 and had total assets of only $120,000 to show for his 35 years in public life.

The trial already has cost Flood, who never testified in his own defense, a powerful post in the present 96th Congress — the chairmanship of the House Appropriations subcommittee on labor, health, education and welfare he has held for a decade. He will remain a member of it.

Flood surrendered the chairmanship in the middle of the trial.

Throughout the trial in the high-ceilinged, fluorescent-lit courtroom on the fourth floor of the U.S. Courthouse, Flood sat mostly statue-like, hands clasped, his usual flamboyant style trapped into rare silence.

Rape-Murder Hearing's Final Arguments Today

WICHITA FALLS (AP) — The prosecution and defense present their final arguments today to the jury that will decide the fate of John William McCrory, 27, accused of the rape-strangulation last June 2 of Jeana Melissa Walker, a 17-year-old Lewisville High School girl.

Miss Walker's mother said her daughter left the house the night of June 2 to pick up her boyfriend to go to a party together.

The defense succeeded Saturday in getting District Judge Stanley Kirk to strike the testimony of a Dallas psychiatrist who said McCrory told him of being in a minor accident with a girl, who then accepted sexual advances he made after they got out to inspect the damage.

Dr. John Holbrook had testified that McCrory told him in a mid-June interview that he killed the girl after she told him she planned to tell her boyfriend what he had done.

A defense witness, Denton attorney Robert Eames, testified Saturday that he heard Holbrook give similar testimony in a Gainesville rape trial last May 15.

Eames said Holbrook testified the Gainesville defendant told him the girl said her boyfriend would kill him and that he choked her and left when he thought he saw her boyfriend in a pickup.

Transsexual Cop Ready For Duty

WASHINGTON (AP) — The District of Columbia's first transsexual police officer has been certified as fit to return to duty as a policewoman. She used to be a policeman.

Bonnie Nora Davenport, 35, says she's delighted to learn that city doctors have issued a fitness certificate and that she can go back to work on the police force in the nation's capital.

Personnel officials with the district police department must now decide whether to reinstate her. Police officials familiar with the personnel procedures involved have said that her reinstatement is expected to be approved routinely. These officials pointed to an anti-discrimination order issued by former Mayor Walter E. Washington in 1975 covering employees who undergo sex change operations.

Holbrook gave almost identical testimony Thursday in relating what he said was the text of a June 12 interview with McCrory.

Holbrook denied he was confusing two cases, said he didn't recall his Gainesville testimony, and said he did not take notes or record his June 12 interview with McCrory but dictated his memory of the interview to his secretary after McCrory left.

Both sides later agreed to strike the testimony of both Holbrook and Eames from the record.

The defense called three women who live in the area near the Denton County field where Miss Walker's body was found. They testified they saw from three to four people at the scene and up to three cars.

One witness testified she saw McCrory, a girl and another man at the scene within minutes of Miss Walker's death.

Another said she saw four people — a girl, two teen-age boys, and a man, 28 to 35 years old. But she said the man definitely was not McCrory.

'Mild' Weather Expected Today

Mild February temperatures and more than five hours of sunshine today will offer Lubbock residents a short respite before an Arctic front invades the area next week.

The South Plains is surrounded by upper air disturbances in New Mexico and a high pressure system in Missouri, but the nearby fronts have not yet caused cooler temperatures and precipitation in the Lubbock area.

The afternoon high today should be near 50 degrees before the mercury drops tonight into the low 20s. Skies will be partly cloudy and winds will be east-southeasterly to 10 mph this morning, becoming southwesterly to 15 mph this afternoon.

Balmy temperatures should continue Tuesday through Thursday, and skies should remain partly cloudy. Highs will be in the 40s and lows in the 20s. A slight chance of scattered showers is predicted for Wednesday.

Texans in the northern part of the state can expect colder temperatures today and Thursday, with a slight warming trend Tuesday and Wednesday.

Rain or freezing rain is expected to spread over the area Tuesday night, lowering temperatures into the upper teens. South Texas residents can expect temperatures in the 60s or low 70s, with a chance of rain Tuesday and Wednesday.

The national weather outlook today includes rain in the Pacific northwest, lower Mississippi Valley, and south Atlantic coast states and snow from the northern Rockies to the Dakotas.

Very cold temperatures around the Great Lakes region, Ohio, and the upper Mississippi Valley are expected until the cold front leaves the area Wednesday.

National Weather Service meteorologists say winter weather in 1979 already has set records for snowfall, number of below-freezing days, and number of winter storms.

Emergency Telephone Systems Get Mixed Reactions In Cities

By DAVID LANGFORD
Associated Press Writer

Since the first 911 emergency telephone number was dialed in a small Indiana city 11 years ago, the system has spread to hundreds of other communities amid mixed reports of bungled calls and lives saved.

No matter how sophisticated the equipment, the system depends on people, like in the old days before dialing was invented and an operator would answer. "Number please."

That operator often knew who was at home and who was not and could save you the trouble of calling. If you wanted the sheriff, she would track him down.

The latter is the kind of service residents of about 900 communities today expect to get when they dial 911. But the efficiency of the system depends on the alertness of the operator at the other end of the line.

many of the 911 call and routing employees are Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA) personnel who get only two weeks training for the job.

In the suburbs of Birmingham, Ala., one frustrated fire chief has told his constituents to quit calling 911 altogether. Mountain Brook Fire Chief Charles Oakley said there have been too many mix-ups among the fire departments and rescue units from the neighboring communities. Sometimes two or more units from different towns have answered the same call.

"We sent out letters to citizens urging them to call our fire department in times of emergency, not 911," Oakley said.

But she used her own wits when she answered one call and heard only heavy breathing.

On the line was Emily Kimberly, 75, who was having respiratory difficulties and couldn't speak because of recent throat surgery.

"If you need help and can't talk, let me know by tapping once for 'yes' and twice for 'no,'" instructed Miss Cardina, 26. She heard one tap.

After about 25 minutes of questions answered by taps, Miss Cardina determined Miss Kimberly's address and two patrolmen were dispatched to take the woman to Buffalo General Hospital.

Not so alert was a Detroit 911-operator who got a call in May of 1976 from a frantic woman who said she wanted to report a break-in.

Accident Victim Remains Critical

Jeanne Wilbanks, 15, of Maljamer, N.M., remained in critical condition late Sunday in Methodist Hospital with head injuries she suffered when her small foreign-made car overturned about noon Saturday, five miles west of Lovington, N.M., on U.S. 82.

Danna Fort, 15, of Lovington, a passenger in Miss Wilbanks' car, was treated Saturday and released from Llano Estacado Medical Center in Hobbs.

Miss Wilbanks was transferred from the Hobbs hospital to Lubbock's Methodist Hospital shortly after 2 p.m. Saturday.

According to New Mexico state police reports, Miss Wilbanks' vehicle was east-bound on U.S. 82 when it ran off the road on the right side. Miss Wilbanks apparently attempted to get the vehicle back on the road but lost control of the car, which flipped over twice.

Both young women were thrown from the car, reports show.

It was 11 years next month that American Telephone & Telegraph Co. installed the first 911 emergency phone system in Huntington, Ind., a farming community of about 16,000 in the northeastern corner of the state. Four months later the system reached New York City and Clanton, Ala., population 1,625.

AT&T has been installing an average of 80 new systems a year, even though one Bell official described it as a "time-consuming and very expensive process."

No exact estimate of the cost, which varies from city to city, is available.

If the three-digit number intended as an easy-to-remember system for summoning either police, fire or ambulances is working well in some areas, there is growing dissatisfaction in others.

The operator said later she heard heavy pounding, but took it to be someone hammering. She handled the call on a non-emergency basis, thinking the woman was trying to report a break-in that had already happened.

But what the operator had heard, it turned out later, were two men battering down the door. The woman, 80, was beaten to death and her husband, 79, was badly hurt.

The operator was suspended for 30 days and the woman's husband collected $1 million for the city in settlement of a damage suit. He said he would use the money for recreation programs for city kids.

THE DISPUTE surfaced in late November with the murder of a New Jersey nurse, Bonnie Bush, 25, who was fatally assaulted in an abandoned building on Manhattan's upper West Side.

Witnesses who saw Miss Bush being dragged into the building called 911, but police tapes later revealed that the operator spent six minutes over a 16-minute period arguing with three different callers about the location.

At least four police cars responded, at different times, but they were too late. The operator and two policemen were temporarily suspended.

Cheap Meal Plan Extension Eyed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Army officials are describing as "a matter of fairness and uniformity" a decision to permit well-paid middle-grade and senior officers as well as enlisted men to take part in a new low-cost meal program at military mess halls.

The program, aimed at easing the effect of inflation on Army personnel, the Army soon will make available meals that will cost no more than $1.60 per person.

The original idea behind the European program was to provide cheap and nutritious meals for families of enlisted soldiers and junior officers.

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Could the United States, by taking a softer line toward Hanoi after the Indochina War, have helped Vietnam become the "Yugoslavia of Asia" and kept it from throwing in with the Soviet Union and invading Cambodia?

The question draws two contrasting viewpoints from Asian and Western officials and analysts. The debate centers on the thinking of one of the world's most remarkably durable leadership groups: Hanoi's Politburo.

A recent article in the respected journal Far Eastern Economic Review, entitled "Cartier's Neglect, Moscow's Victory," argued that "Washington's prolonged refusal to respond to Vietnam's overtures led to a gradual weakening of the moderates within the Hanoi leadership and a strengthening of the hard-liners who are now in effect running the country."

Other informed observers also claim post-war Vietnam wanted to chart an independent course among the big powers and open itself up to Western aid, trade and influence in order to modernize its society.

Proponents of this viewpoint note that Hanoi offered a liberal investment code for foreign businesses, dropped its heavy-handed propaganda attacks, backed down on earlier demands for post-war reparations from Washington and told Western visitors Vietnam had not gone through 30 years of fighting foreign invaders just to fall into the hands of the Soviet Union.

This liberal outlook, the argument goes, was the work of Hanoi's moderates, such as Premier Pham Van Dong, who wanted to build a strong but independent communist nation not unlike Yugoslavia. But Hanoi did not receive political or economic help from the United States or enough reconstruction aid from the West as a whole. When combined with the mounting border war with Cambodia and

Teng Displays Own Way With Words

SEATTLE (AP) — The sayings of Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping aren't ready yet to be bound in little red books to be memorized by the masses as were those of a better-known Marxist leader of China, Mao Tse-tung.

Few have the ring of Mao's warnings about "the imperialists and their running dogs," or "impatient thinking," but Teng last week showed he also has a way with words.

When he ends his U.S. visit today, the man who wants to "lift China out of poverty and backwardness" will leave behind an oft-stated message: "We will learn from you."

That's a far different thought than that expressed nearly two decades ago by then-Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev who warned: "We will bury you."

Here are some other examples of the Teng sayings:

- On reports of drought in China: "Our country being so vast, there are always parts of it suffering natural calamities. But as we say in China: 'If there is darkness in the East, there will be light in the West. If there is misfortune in the South, there will be good fortune in the North.'"
- On his policies of modernization surviving him: "Since our policies are correct, I can say for a matter of certainty our policies will continue."
- On the euphoria of normalization possibly giving way to disillusionment: "I see no danger. The honeymoon will continue."
- On the Soviet Union: "The Soviet Union is on the offensive and the United States is on the defensive. It has been our contention the only countries capable of launching a world war are the U.S. and the Soviet Union and the Soviet Union is the hotbed of war."
- On the new relationship between the two countries: "Some say that the normalization of Sino-U.S. relations is a victory for America. Others say it is a victory for China. I believe it should be called a joint victory for the Chinese and American peoples."
- On threats to peace: "There are not only threats to peace but the factors making for war are visibly growing... our two countries are duty-bound to work together."
- On the Vietnam-Cambodia conflict: "With the full backing of the Soviet Union, Vietnam is brazenly subjecting Democratic Kampuchea (Cambodia) to a massive arms aggression. Europe, too, is overshadowed by the threat of war. It is very evident that hegemonist expansion is the main source of turmoil in all parts of the world... the Chinese people stand unwaveringly by Kampuchea in its resistance against the Vietnamese aggressors."
- On his mission to the United States: "The Chinese people, working with a unity of purpose, are endeavoring to modernize our agriculture, industry, national defense and science and technology, so as

But little is known about the inner workings of the 14-member Politburo, which runs the Communist Party and thus the country.

At its core are aging men who forged Vietnam's communist revolution, fighting the Japanese in World War II, defeating the French and unifying the country after defeating South Vietnam and the United States.

They have been together and at the top since the 1930s, a rare thing in the political history of a communist or any other country.

One veteran diplomat based in Hanoi said Vietnam now is simply playing out the policies set in motion by the late North Vietnamese President Ho Chi Minh, who vowed to unify North and South Vietnam, make it a successful socialist society and bring all of Indochina, which also includes Laos and Cambodia, under Hanoi's aegis.

"We've just seen his last policy come to fruition" with the invasion of Cambodia, said this diplomat, who like others interviewed asked not to be identified. "Uncle Ho taught his followers to put unity of leadership above all. There could be differences of opinion but once a decision was made all had to stick to it."

Those who espouse this view say Vietnam may be uncomfortable with its heavy reliance on Moscow but that it is a carefully orchestrated move. It is believed the plans to invade Cambodia were not fully hammered out until after Vietnam signed its economic and military pact with the Soviets in November.

Some senior diplomats in Hanoi, as well as other knowledgeable diplomats in the region, believe Hanoi's leadership displays ideological zeal and a genuine respect for Soviet power, which it sees as on the rise worldwide.

The group appears bent on finishing off the military job in Cambodia and sticking with the Soviet Union for the foreseeable future.

One Asian diplomat speculated about a possible line of argument within the Politburo last year:

"What is the point about talking about relations with the Americans since they won't help us anyway. Washington wants to forge relations with China first and then allow a lapse before looking at us. By that time maybe the Cambodian invasion will have been forgotten."

Japan Loses Track Of Chinese Flood

TOKYO (AP) — Japan has been swamped by so many Chinese delegations since the two countries signed a friendship treaty last October that Japanese Foreign Ministry officials say they have lost track of them.

The officials say many delegations, seeking technology badly needed in China, come without formal Japanese sponsorship. China is on a crash program to become a modern industrial power by the year 2000.

Masaya Aoki, spokesman for the Japan-China Association on Trade and Economy, suggested the flood of Chinese delegations to Japan might be a sign of what is in store for the United States.

AN EDITORIAL:

State Aid A Logical Answer

A BILL AUTHORIZING the state to assume its fair share of financing its medical schools' teaching hospitals has cleared a first hurdle in the state Legislature.

Currently, teaching hospitals are supported by local taxes but except for "start-up" costs such as those experienced during this biennium by the Lubbock County Hospital District, the state has not appropriated funds for these facilities.

Action recommended by the Senate Human Resources Committee would correct this inequity.

UNDER THE BILL, which is a companion to one introduced in the House by Rep. Froy Salinas of Lubbock, teaching hospitals would get up to $15,000 annually per resident physician taking advanced medical training.

The exact amount would depend on biennial appropriations by the Legislature.

"Our residents are running up about $1.5 million a year," Jack Strong, chairman of the LCHD's Board of Managers, told the Senate panel. "If the state would pick up this cost, it would help us tremendously."

Spokesmen for other teaching hospitals in such cities as Fort Worth, Houston, Dallas and San Antonio concur that local financing of teaching costs is an unfair burden.

"After all, the doctors who are trained at our hospital will serve people throughout Texas, not just in Lubbock County," Strong emphasized.

Texas has another compelling reason for financing physician residencies: it will help keep more physicians in Texas.

This is because, surveys show, physicians tend to settle in areas where they take their residencies. It makes little sense for Texas to invest tens of thousands of dollars in sending a student through medical school only to lose him to Colorado or some other state for his residency.

Yet, that is precisely what is happening.

THE PROBABLE COST to the state, taxpayer if the bill sponsored by Sen. Chet Brooks of Houston is passed—and if the appropriations to implement it are approved—would be $27.5 million next year and $30 million in 1981, according to Tom Keel, director of the Legislative Budget Board.

Most of this cost, however, would be in relief of local taxes, a concept voters have endorsed and which is especially appropriate when the outlay serves a vital state function such as the training of physicians.

Moreover, if the LCHD's Health Sciences Center Hospital is to handle as many resident physicians as the medical school needs it to handle by the early 1980s, state funding is essential. Local taxpayers could not afford the escalating cost, nor should they.

Another Voice In The Land

THE NATION'S capital will be hearing voices other than those of the visiting farm delegation this week.

In some instances, the underlying message may sound similar—although there is no direct connection between the two.

The other group meeting in Washington, Feb. 8-10, will be the Conservative Political Action conference. The group's sixth annual confab is being held when conservatism appears to have eclipsed liberalism as the country's dominant political doctrine.

THE SHIFT TO conservatism may be more important than a lot of political pundits would have us believe, particularly among the young.

Young Americans for Freedom, which originated in 1960 as the first national Youth for Goldwater organization, now has about 55,000 members. The American Conservative Union, founded four years later, claims a membership of more than 300,000.

Ronald Reagan, perceived as the leading conservative spokesman, will be the main speaker at the upcoming meeting.

PUBLIC OPINION surveys confirm the shift toward a more conservative attitude among many in the U.S.

HENRY J. TAYLOR:

Bedouin's Character Shaped By The Desert

I HAVE LIVED for long periods deep in the Sahara deserts.

On Feb. 2, 1512, Portugal's Adm. Alfonso de Albuquerque, conqueror of India, discovered Arabia.

There he found the nomad bedouins—Badw in Arabic. Literally, bedouin means "inhabitants of the desert." And they are a race apart.

Bedouins constitute about one-tenth of the total Middle East population, but inhabit nine-tenths of the vast area. During the rainy season winter months they migrate into the deserts.

In the dry summer months they move back toward the cultivated lands. But they always know precisely where they are going.

To the Western eye the desert's billowing sands, stretching from horizon to horizon, look much the same. But the bedouin, with some inner sense—an inbred device—repeatedly goes back to the same spot.

CAMEL NOMADS are the first in prestige. They occupy immense territories in the Sahara, Syrian and Arabian deserts. Among both the Saharan and Arabian bedouins, slavery still exists.

And as long ago as 1512 Adm. de Albuquerque discovered that bedouins have a strictly organized tribal society with its own laws, customs, etc.

The family head is called shaykh (sheik) and is assisted by an informal council of male elders. Each tribe, holding the entire tribe responsible, polices its members in a communal responsibility.

A bedouin-controlled desert is one of the world's safest places. Murder, rape, etc., are practically unknown; a woman need not fear attack. Should a tribe member commit a serious crime, the punishment is death.

You find in the desert some rich shaykhs, the tent perhaps 50 yards long. Persian rugs cover it throughout and, for reclining, the tent is spotted with silk cushions. But the shaykhs do practice the ancient Law of the Tent.

YOU MUST extend the tent's hospitality to your enemy for three days. Then, if he is foolish enough to deliver himself into the shaykh's hands, anything can happen.

Should a bedouin invite you to dinner, you may or may not show up. It is all the same to the bedouin. The host does not worry.

Hospitality rules the tent and every bedouin's life. They will tell you: "Any man with honor must be hospitable." And the "assabayya" (permitting you to call another your brother) is sacred.

But, as Mideast hands know, substituting "all" (thousand) for "mit" makes the courtesy ironic and dangerous. Beware!

A headdress called an "agal"—a black, braided camel-hair rope—is worn over a white kaffiyeh. When Prince Faisal bin Musaed assassinated his uncle, Saudi Arabian King Faisal, the mourners draped the "agals" around their necks. This is the bedouin call for blood vengeance.

BEDOUINS SAY there are only three kinds of men: the brave, the hospitable, the wise. Their Arab forefathers, unarmed, defeated even the armored barbarians and did not retreat after centuries of contest with the Crusaders. Indian Musselmen hold the same faith, but do not die in battle for it.

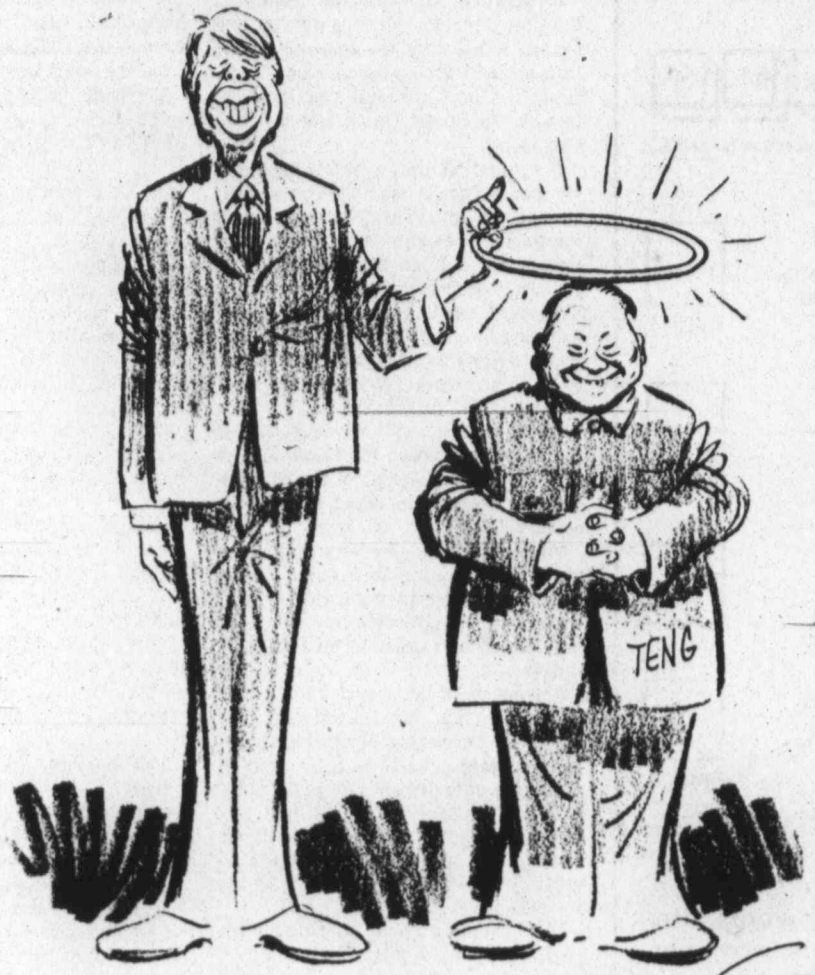

Bedouins stood at the gates of On and saw the magicians perform their feats, reclined below Constantinople's walls and saw the Byzantines pour out the atom bomb of the day—liquid fire—and went back to their herbless deserts. Today they live there as in the ages of which history tells us nothing.

The bedouin's character is profoundly shaped by the desert. It creates a feeling of loneliness that forces them to turn inward. It causes many to live in their daydreams: a Koran-like heaven where Allah is bountiful.

IN MY EXPERIENCE, the bedouins live in a popping fairyland, one pepper dragon after another going up in smoke. But they combine this with the bedouin ideal of courage and are, at the same time, totally fatalistic.

"In sha'allah"—Allah willing—is the Arab world's key word and philosophy. When Allah created the world he took a handful of dust, casting some grains to the right, others to the left.

The dust cast to the right would be happy people, but those cast to the left would not.

ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK:

Carter, Ike 'n JFK

WASHINGTON—The bland worldview of President Carter and his closest aides, critically important in shaping this nation's policies, produced private amusement inside the White House when they unearthed John F. Kennedy's first State of the Union speech.

Provoked by comparisons between Carter's prosaic homilies and Kennedy's call to greatness, the Carter aides had turned to the newly inaugurated JFK's message to Congress in 1961, and were rewarded with a few chuckles.

Kennedy's warnings of perilous times ahead, they felt, were absurdly inappropriate then and remain so today.

Carter's recent State of the Union speech was a product of the mindset that belittled Kennedy rhetoric, far more than of the President's oratorical abilities or his speechwriters' talents.

Jimmy Carter sees a relatively stable world, as it was perceived in Dwight D. Eisenhower's day, not the place of danger demanding heroism painted by John F. Kennedy.

This is reflected in not only the President's laudable restraint on social programs but also his questionable view of a world still safe for Americans.

Carter's State of the Union intentionally ignored rising Soviet military power, Soviet adventurism in Africa and the Middle East and the frightening implications for this country of the crisis in Iran.

These omissions were not overt coverup but, more alarmingly, a true picture of how the President looks at the world.

EARLY IN the tedious process of preparing the Jan. 23 address to Congress, Carter's aides engaged in prolonged study of past State of the Union messages—especially Kennedy's first, delivered Jan. 30, 1961, 10 days after his inauguration.

Since there is no constitutional requirement for a message from a newly inaugurated President, the Carter men wondered, why deliver it? Carter himself skipped the chance in 1977.

The Carter aides viewed with amused surprise Kennedy's 1961 opening: "I speak today in an hour of national peril and national opportunity. Before my term has ended, we shall have to test anew whether a nation organized and governed such as ours can endure. The outcome is by no means certain."

THE PERORATION of 18 years ago provided equal mirth at the White House. "Our problems are critical. The tide is unfavorable. The news will be worse before it is better."

To Carter's young men, attending grade school at the time, 1961 was a time of peace and prosperity after eight years of Eisenhower. Kennedy's call for heroic action, they now believe, was a political ploy to stir the public's adrenalin.

While in retrospect Kennedy's rhetoric may be interpreted today as an all too accurate prophecy, the White House shames it as pandering after votes.

"I suppose we could do that today," one Carter aide told us, "but it would be phony, and I don't even think it would be good politics." In short, the Carter White House recognizes no great peril facing this country; it assumes the American people perceive no such crisis.

IN PREPARING the State of the Union speech, Carter aides recognized three distinct audiences: the public, the Congress and media commentators. Considering no better than a mixed appraisal possible from the commentators and conceding congressional reaction was hopeless, they aimed at the public. They believe they hit the bullseye.

Calling for modest domestic goals and eschewing international alarms precisely fit today's public mood, the Carter men feel. As we reported last August, they see America trying to catch its breath—domestically and internationally—and that means Eisenhower, not Kennedy.

This overlying political strategy has been obscured in backstage Washington conversation by peculiarities of the Carter presidency. His demoralized speechwriting team, decimated by resignations, scarcely sees or knows Carter and has no policymaking function.

EVEN IF THE speechwriters were closer to the President, the speech delivered Jan. 23 and those that follow would not markedly change. Carter himself is allergic to all efforts at eloquence, much less the challenging, hortatory prose of Jack Kennedy.

"His crabbed little penmanship puts notes in the margin like 'abbreviate,' 'condense,' 'cut this down,'" one frustrated writer confided to us.

What is really at stake is not Carter's prose, which will always be pedestrian, but the President's view of the world. Perhaps his use of Ike instead of JFK as model does fit the public's healthy new skepticism about the omnipotence of government.

But it may not at all fit the public's growing alarm about the shift in the world power balance toward Moscow. Viewing the world through Eisenhower's rather than Kennedy's eye may prove calamitous not only for the President but for the nation.

NOVAK

A Use Of Power...

THE TRAUMATIC events in Iran may in the final analysis be more far-reaching and disastrous for the U.S. than was the nation's defeat in Vietnam.

The final chapter is yet to be written, but whatever the outcome, there is no question but that a new era is emerging in the Mideast and for the U.S.

Already, knowledgeable observers are saying that because America was unable to shape events in Iran, for others as well as our own self interest, this nation's policy of regional alliances may be at an end.

If so, evolving events in the Mideast, Africa and Asia could mean further erosion of U.S. influence in key areas of the world. Only a bold and dramatic change in U.S. thought and action can prevent that fact.

ALTHOUGH STILL the most powerful nation on earth, everything considered, the U.S. nevertheless today finds itself in the position of a giant at the mercy of the Lilliputians.

Only a brief 34 years ago, and later, we were in the position of "calling the shots" almost anywhere in the world. And to an extent we did.

We helped dictate the final peace pacts for Germany, Italy and much of Europe. We wrote the terms for an Imperial Japan. In almost every conceivable way, America ruled the roost. It may have been our high water mark.

It is true that in the years to come we were to institute the Marshall Plan to save Greece and Western Europe from Communism. We made the Berlin Airlift stick and work. We made more alliances and economic and military pacts than we could count.

We exported a "way of life" to any and all who would "buy" it, and some who wouldn't. We had, for the second time in recent history, made the world safe for Democracy. Or so we told ourselves.

ACTUALLY, AT that very moment, the last vestiges of an era in U.S. foreign policy was being challenged. Today, what is left is...

Recently, Irving Kristol, a Henry Luce Professor of Urban Values at NYU and a contributor to The Wall Street Journal, examined what has happened to U.S. foreign policy since the days of Woodrow Wilson. It is a most disturbing picture.

Kristol says: "It was Woodrow Wilson who first gave American foreign policy its distinctive character—a compound of evangelical idealism and strict legalism. The notion that, since we were now a world power, it was our destiny to convert the world to instant democracy was born then, as was the idea that the sovereignty of international law, under the aegis of a League of Nations, would establish a benign and enduring world order."

AFTER THE hectic Twenties, the Great Depression and World War II, we took a new look at things.

And with the onset of the Cold War, Kristol says, "our foreign policy was redefined as a kind of defensive Wilsonianism. We would no longer make the world safe for Democracy, but we would see to it that the world would not be made safe for totalitarianism, either..."

This thought, while noble, was a more or less negative one. It offered no real alternative. As with the Vietnam protesters, it was obvious what we were against, but what were we for?

Kristol argues that since Vietnam, U.S. foreign policy has collapsed into what he labels a decadent Wilsonianism, "retaining shreds and tatters of the traditional evangelical moralism and self-hypnotic legalism, but also displaying new features."

THOSE FEATURES are most revealing... "The first," the writer argues, "is a profound sense of guilt."

"To be a liberal American today is to be infused with instant guilt at all the disagreeable features of the universe—and more especially toward poor and distant nations to whom we have never done any harm..."

Thus when we become involved with such nations, even if they have done us wrong, the instinctive reaction of the State Department is not to defend our interests but to act as a benevolent mediator; it is claimed.

The second new feature, he says, is the prominence of what is called "the therapeutic ethic," the conviction that the only decent way to cope with people who cause trouble is through the exercise of compassion, patience and the provisions of social services.

"The assumption is that if they are behaving nastily and aggressively, it can only be because some form of 'deprivation' had made them unreasonably suspicious and resentful of their fellow creatures..."

SUCH A POLICY, it is argued, guides U.S. behavior toward the Third World, the United Nations, the Soviet Union itself.

All of which brings us back to Iran and the Mideast. Not all the trouble is so simply catalogued, of course. In Iran's case, the rise of Islamic religious fervor throughout the Arab world is playing a key role in the upheaval.

But the underlying cause and effect is there, plus the U.S. "benevolent" handling of the situation, even to over-worry about so-called "human rights." Many of those who pushed for overthrow of the Shah haven't the foggiest notion of what the words mean, or could care less.

The real problem is that the American people, and most certainly their leaders, have not come to grips with the use of the power we fought for and won, economically and militarily. Consequently, we have never really used it for the sake of power alone, even if "good" might be a by-product.

As a result, we have followed an illusion that power per se is "bad," which it is if abused. But, much to our chagrin, we also are learning that while power may corrupt, in today's world, failure to use it—wisely—can also corrupt and lead to chaos. That is the lesson in Iran.

L.M. BOYD:

...Pass It On

IN A SIZABLE survey of teenagers nationwide, pollsters asked what it would take to make the country better. Exactly 68 percent of the youngsters said, "Hard work." Another 12 percent just shrug. "Don't know."

And the remaining 20 percent said why bother, isn't worth working for, or words to that effect.

Q. "Do rats kill mice?"
A. They do, except when said rats have young. Then, they treat mice like offspring, picking them up and babying them.

Two Men Held In Lynn County For City Robbery

Two middle-aged men, reportedly from California, were being held in Lynn County Jail late Sunday in connection with a Sunday morning aggravated robbery in Lubbock.

Lynn County deputies arrested the two suspects at 2:30 p.m. Sunday about three miles south of Tahoka.

Angel Hernandez, 54, told Lubbock police that he and the two men had been in a pool hall at 13th Street and Avenue F about 10 a.m. Sunday. He said he later rode with them to the Buddy Holly Recreation Center and that while parked there, one of the men began choking him and his companion grabbed Hernandez' wallet.

After the men took the wallet, containing $30 in cash and a $172 check, Hernandez said they kicked him out of the car.

Eight hours earlier, a soft-spoken man made off with an undetermined amount of money from a convenience store at 2025 Clovis Road.

Store attendant Bruce Issett said the man walked behind the counter, grabbed him and asked, "Where is that money bag that you had?" Issett told police he opened the safe and handed over the money bag to the man. The robber reportedly ordered Issett to lie on the floor before fleeing.

Issett described the suspect as Mexican-American, 26 to 35, tall and heavy, wearing a plaid jacket and jeans.

In reported burglaries and thefts, Keith Maule, assistant pastor of the First Church of the Nazarene at 4510 Ave. Q, said thieves took $4,873 worth of music equipment from the church auditorium sometime between 6 p.m. Saturday and 8 a.m. Sunday.

George Craig Hughes of 2305 27th St. told police someone took $3,150 worth of jewelry, guns and ammunition from his home sometime late Saturday or early Sunday.

While Eva Martinez was at the movies Saturday night, burglars reportedly broke into her 2617 Colgate St. residence and carried off $2,750 worth of goods, including a stereo system and jewelry.

After kicking in a front door, thieves took $100 worth of drugs from a pharmacy at 6401 University Ave. sometime early Sunday, Sam Hollingsworth reported.

Tad Logoy, owner of a hamburger stand at 117 University Ave., said someone took $580 from the establishment sometime between 5:30 p.m. and 6 p.m. Saturday.

In a reported weekend assault, Joseph Franklin West, 22, told officers that three men beat him severely at a club at 713 Broadway early Sunday.

West said that he had received a call from a woman who had asked him to meet her at the club. When he arrived at the club, he said, he saw a woman talking to a group of men and pointing at him.

The three men approached West and ordered him outside. Reports show that when West refused to leave the club, the three men began beating him in the face and stomach.

West was later treated and released from Methodist Hospital.

British Society Plagued By Massive Union Strikes

LONDON (AP) — Britons pitched in to mop hospital floors and collect garbage in a burst of public reaction Sunday to the rash of strikes that have plagued municipal services in recent weeks.

Union leaders, battling the Labor government's anti-inflation policy of holding pay hikes to 5 percent, urged workers who have not been fully involved in the strikes to join the job actions Monday.

Callers jammed hospital switchboards across the country to offer their help, hospital spokesmen said. More than half of the nation's state-run hospitals have been struck by 15,000 workers who earn as little as $84 for a 40-hour week.

Many of the hundreds of hospitals struck turned down the offers of assistance. Administrators said they didn't want to offend the unions as long as they could cope with the chores themselves.

Strikes and walkouts have halted services in gravedigging, trash collection, water supplies, sewage processing and ambulance stations. Some municipal workers have been involved in limited work-to-rule tactics or bans on overtime. Union leaders now are pressing them to take stronger action.

In one London borough, residents hired a truck, collected stacks of plastic-bagged garbage from the sidewalks and dumped them over the wall of the local sanitation department headquarters.

Sewer workers in Leeds, central England, announced a walkout for midnight Sunday. The workers are responsible for keeping waste moving in 2,000 miles of sewage lines under the city.

Hundreds of thousands of schoolchildren faced another holiday Monday, with schools closed for lack of janitors.

Union leaders at British Leyland recommended a total strike by the car manufacturer's 100,000 manual workers starting next Friday to protest the company's refusal to grant pay increases up to $20 a week for some workers.

British Leyland, complaining of low output in the last three months because of strikes and internal disputes, argued it "cannot afford to make payments which have not been earned."

British Prime Minister James Callaghan addressed the demands for pay increases at a Labor Party meeting Saturday.

"I can say clearly now that we will finance our share...but we cannot go beyond single figures," he said. "What they (local councils) do about any further agreement is for them to decide. They are negotiating. We are not."

David Basnett, head of the General and Municipal Workers Union, said Callaghan's speech offered an opportunity "to start meaningful negotiations" because it could put pressure on local governments to come up with the money for pay hikes.

The national government has insisted that 5 percent is the largest increase the economy can afford without spurring inflation, but recent settlements have amounted to four times that level. Municipal workers are demanding raises over 40 percent.

Negotiations between Callaghan's ministers and union chiefs have failed so far to arrive at a general agreement for industrial peace.

Pope Requests Prayers For Latin Americans

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II asked a cheering crowd of 80,000 Sunday to pray for Latin Americans, saying his week-long visit "certainly will not solve the many problems of everyday life" that the people there must face.

Speaking from his studio window overlooking St. Peter's Square, the pope briefly reviewed his visit to the Dominican Republic and Mexico, the first foreign tour of his pontificate. He then gave the traditional Sunday blessing to the crowd gathered in the giant piazza.

The pope went to Mexico to open the Third Latin American Bishops Conference in the city of Puebla.

Addressing the crowd in Italian, the Polish-born pontiff said his meetings with Latin American clergy and Mexican workers and peasants were meetings "with the people of God" showing that the Roman Catholic Church is a "great community that believes and prays ... that it is a sole heart and a sole spirit."

"Can perhaps all this solve the many problems of everyday life of Mexico and Latin America, those problems to which the several passages of (my) speeches and on which the bishops conference in Puebla will work up to Feb. 12? No, certainly no."

"However," the pope added, "this great meeting with the people of God, its development and the climate it has created, allows, compels us to watch these problems in a well-defined context: the context of men, of the communities in which faith and hope live, which appreciate freedom, which are thirsty for justice and peace."

During his eight-day trip, the 58-year-old pope told the Latin American clergy to refrain from political activism, but to work at the same time for the improvement of both the social and spiritual conditions of the people.

The pope asked for prayers for Latin America, so the "church can achieve its mission and its service for all those men so they can show Christ's love is the program of their everyday family and social life."

I am now working under Social Security and plan to continue for the rest of my career. For that reason, I would like to know what the basis of Social Security is and what its purpose is supposed to be. From reading your column, I can tell from the amounts of monthly benefits retirees are now drawing that it could not have been designed as a total retirement program. Please enlighten me. — R.L.

The philosophy behind the Social Security system is basically very simple. During a person's working years, a self-employed person or a worker and his employer pay Social Security contributions which are put into special trust funds. Then, when a worker retires, dies or becomes disabled, these funds are used to pay the family a monthly cash benefit to help replace part of the earnings lost.

Social Security was not set up to provide total income to retirees, disabled workers or the survivors of workers. It was set up to supplement their incomes.

Part of these funds are also used to provide hospital insurance (Medicare) for the workers and his spouse when they are age 65 or to the worker if he becomes disabled earlier in life.

Ninety percent of people in the United States today are working under Social Security covered jobs and are thus building partial protection for their futures.

HEARTLINE: After 27 yrs of marriage, I had myself divorced. My ex-husband has already remarried. I am very concerned about my future financial picture for retirement, even though I am only 51 years old. My ex-husband has an exceptionally high paying job, and although I am also working, I am sure his Social Security benefits will be much higher than mine. I am no meddler and don't want to cause him and his new wife any problems, or make an enemy of them since we parted very calmly. But I do want to know whether I will be able to receive any benefits from his Social Security account, or if his new wife will get it. If I am eligible, at what age do I apply for benefits, what information do I take with me when I apply, and are there any requirements that I personally must meet? — R.Q.

Both you and your ex-husband's new wife can collect Social Security benefits from your ex-husband's account. You would be drawing benefits as a divorced wife. The fact that there will be two wives drawing benefits on the one account will not lower or affect in any way your benefit, your former husband's benefit or his new wife's benefits.

You will become eligible for benefits at age 62 but cannot apply for them until your ex-husband is also drawing his benefits. When you apply for benefits, you should apply for benefits on your own work record as well. You may find that your own benefit is larger than the divorced wife's benefits from his account, since at age 62 you would receive 80 percent of your own age 65 benefits but only 37.5 percent of his age 65 benefits drawing as a divorced wife. There is only one thing that can disqualify you for divorced wife's benefits on his account, and that is remarriage before the age of 60.

When you apply for divorced wife's benefits, you will need to take to the Social Security office the following: your Social Security number, your ex-husband's Social Security number, proof of your marriage, your divorce decree, and proof of your age.

Alleged Terrorist Hideouts Raided

ROME (AP) — Police arrested three men and a woman and seized arms, ammunition and Red Brigades' leaflets in a series of raids on suspected terrorist hideouts in Milan, authorities reported over the weekend.

The four, picked up Friday night, were accused of illegal possession of weapons and participating in armed bands. Police said they seized five pistols, false license plates and forged documents, as well as leaflets from Italy's most feared terrorist group.

Police said terrorists Friday night bombed police stations in suburbs of Milan and Rome and tossed firebombs at offices of the Christian Democrat Party in Milan and the Communist Party in Alassio, near Genoa. No one was reported injured in any of the bombings.

Attractions Of Disneyland Impress Chinese Premiere

LONG BEACH, Calif. (UPI) — Fang Yi, vice premier of China for science and technology, met Mickey Mouse Sunday, took a boat ride through a pirate's subterranean cave, and like many tourists left Disneyland with a shopping bag full of souvenirs.

Fang, his wife, Madame Yin Sen, and entourage on the second day of a week-end stay in California also visited an oil rig off Long Beach Harbor and toured the McDonnell-Douglas Aircraft Co. plant at Long Beach Airport.

Fang arrived at Disneyland in nearby Anaheim about 8 a.m. PST, amid tight security. He signed the guest book outside of Fantasyland's famous castle. The guestbook contains hundreds of names of heads of states.

Fang was somewhat startled as he signed the book when Minnie and Mickey Mouse appeared over his right shoulder, but after a few minutes the vice premier and Madame Yin became accustomed to the characters and began posing with them and clapping to the Disneyland band which was playing nearby.

He said he was most impressed by a 360-degree panoramic movie, entitled "America the Beautiful." The entire Chinese group watched the 22 minute film, which is a spectacular travelogue of the United States.

"You can get a good idea of the United States," said Fang, "even the places I have not been able to visit."

He said he was most impressed by the scenes of the Rocky Mountains.

As for Disneyland, he said, "It is a very nice place for recreation and also scientific education."

The entire party then traveled to Long Beach Harbor where they boarded a boat to visit an oil rig. Oil executives and Long Beach officials led the Chinese through a 30-minute tour of the facilities.

Madam Yin elected not to climb the three-story rig and stayed near the boat.

"It's a good place to see," she said about Disneyland. "I've heard so much about it." "She was also very impressed by the movie, produced by the Bell System."

"The movie," she said, "it's seems that we were in the picture."

Before departing Long Beach Airport to join Teng Hsiao-Ping in Seattle, the Chinese were led through a DC-10 at the McDonnell-Douglas plant and visited a weather station.

MAKES DISNEYLAND STOP — Chinese Vice Premier Fang Yi is greeted by Minnie and Mickey Mouse Sunday as he makes a brief tour of Disneyland during a two-day visit to Southern California. Fang Yi was also to inspect an offshore oil-drilling rig and tour an aircraft plant before departing the Los Angeles area. (AP Laserphoto)

Rhodesian Black Seeks Support

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (AP) — Bishop Abel Muzorewa, speaking to 120,000 blacks packed into a soccer stadium in sticky heat, damned both Washington and nationalist guerrillas Sunday as he launched a campaign to get out the black vote in Rhodesia's April elections.

The bishop, one of three black leaders in the current bi-racial government, drew thunderous applause when he praised Rhodesia's tiny white population for conceding black rule in a referendum last Tuesday.

Wearing a costume in his party's black, red, yellow and green colors, the diminutive Muzorewa denounced Western powers for refusing to recognize Rhodesia's "internal settlement" and black nationalist guerrillas for continuing their war for control of Rhodesia.

The guerrillas, loosely allied in the Patriotic Front, have threatened to blow up the polling booths during the April 20 balloting. Rhodesia's first universal-suffrage election.

Muzorewa complained bitterly that the United States and Britain have showed no signs of lifting economic sanctions imposed in 1965 when Prime Minister Ian Smith declared independence unilaterally from Britain in a bid to avoid black rule.

"Is there any more real moral or legal reason they should continue to punish this country with sanctions?" Muzorewa asked, insisting that Rhodesia is "already a new country."

After British and U.S. officials conferred in Washington last week, British Foreign Secretary David Owen said the Rhodesian situation was deteriorating and expressed a "sense of despair."

The Western powers have not recognized last week's white referendum and insist that the guerrillas should participate in a negotiated settlement on Rhodesia's political future. There are 220,000 whites in Rhodesia and 6.8 million blacks.

The constitution developed by the 11-month-old transitional government provides for a black-dominated government in which for another decade whites will have a powerful say disproportionate to their numbers. The administration fears blacks — either because of intimidation or through support for the guerrillas — will not vote.

As blacks streamed into the stadium, Muzorewa's election campaign director, Ayong Kara, said, "The point we are making here is that if we can get the people to come anything up to 300 miles they will walk 150 yards to a polling booth."

Trains and buses were provided by Muzorewa's United African National Council to bring supporters from all over the country. Many observers believe popular support for the black leaders — Muzorewa, the Rev. Ndabaningi Sithole and Chief Jeremiah Chirau — has waned with the administration's failure to gain peace or international recognition, and its postponement of the original election deadline, last Dec. 31.

Muzorewa and his chief rival, Sithole, are planning a series of campaign meetings across the country, arousing fears both of fighting between their supporters and of attacks by guerrillas pledged to thwart the election.

Capitalist Remark By Teng Approved

TOKYO (AP) — "A cat, black or white, that catches rats is a good cat."

That's what Chinese Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping said years ago in supporting China's modernization. It meant that any method that improves production is a good method.

The saying was taboo in China in the doctrinaire years before the death of Mao Tse-tung. But Japan's Kyodo news service reported Saturday that the official Workers' Daily newspaper now says "there was nothing wrong" with Teng's remarks. It said a socialist economy should learn from other systems, even capitalism, Kyodo reported.

Reagan, Taiwan Agents Reportedly Share Office

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Ronald Reagan, a likely contender in the 1980 Republican presidential race, shares a Los Angeles office and telephone number with longtime associates who represent Taiwan in the United States, The Bulletin reported Sunday.

The newspaper, in a copyright story, quotes an unidentified Justice Department lawyer as saying the firm could find itself in a "precarious position" if Reagan becomes an official candidate.

Reagan, who sought the 1976 Republican presidential nomination, was unavailable for comment Sunday. The firm, Deaver & Hannaford Inc., has been retained by the Taiwanese government since December 1977 to run a public relations campaign aimed at "enhancing favorable public opinion toward the maintenance of U.S. relations with the Republic of China," the Bulletin said. The firm's retainer from Taiwan is now $5,000 a month, up from the original $2,500 a month since last November, plus expenses of about $40,000 a year, according to the newspaper. Formal U.S. ties with Taiwan were severed when President Carter announced the normalization of U.S. relations with mainland China last December.

Reagan, a longtime champion of Taiwan, joined vocal opposition to the president's move and cabled the president of Taiwan, Chiang Ching-kuo, to express his views in the matter.

Deaver & Hannaford is owned by Michael K. Deaver and Peter D. Hannaford, who worked for Reagan when he was California's governor and have been closely associated with him since, the Bulletin reported.

For an undisclosed fee, they currently prepare Reagan's weekly newspaper column, work on his speaking tours and write scripts for his daily radio commentaries, which are broadcast on about 200 stations, the newspaper reported.

Hannaford, who was research director for Reagan's presidential primary campaign, says Reagan had nothing to do with the firm's winning the Taiwanese account, the Bulletin said.

Deaver & Hannaford is registered, as required under the Foreign Agents Registration Act, as an American firm representing a foreign power, the newspaper reported.

Solon Criticizes Army Tests

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Les Aspin said Sunday that military services have set their intelligence standards so high that "Sgt. York wouldn't be welcome in the Army anymore."

"The services ought to consider lowering, not raising, their intelligence standards for recruits," the Wisconsin Democrat said in a study.

Aspin said he strongly opposes renewing the draft. He said one way for the military to avoid conscription is effective use of people with lower intelligence.

His example was Alvin C. York, the soldier who single-handedly fought off an attacking German unit in the Battle of Argonne in 1918. The 132 German survivors finally surrendered to him.

But Aspin said York probably would be classified today as "Category IV" intelligence — in the lowest 10 to 30 percent of the population on intelligence tests. Aspin said York "was generally considered semi-literate and of limited intelligence."

Between 1974 and 1977, Aspin said, none of the services filled the quotas they allow themselves for Category IV people — and he said the quotas are unrealistically low.

The Army's quota allowed 18 percent of all recruits to be in the low mental category, Aspin said, but only 11 percent of the people actually recruited were in that category.

He said 18 percent is an unrealistic quota because, during the last 20 years of the draft, the number of low-intelligence Army enlisted men fell below 18 percent only in 1960 and in 1961.

"The services combined have accepted far fewer of those so-called 'dummies' than in any year under the draft," Aspin said. "These men are not 'dummies.' They are fully capable of performing many jobs in the military."

The Navy and Marine Corps quotas for the low intelligence people were 14 percent, but both services actually recruited only 4 percent from that category, Aspin said.

He said the Air Force quota was 5 percent, but lower-intelligence people actually recruited were less than one-half of 1 percent. As a result, Aspin said, "all four services must assign reasonably intelligent men and women to low-skill jobs."

"There is no surer way to lower morale and raise discontent," he said.

Psychic's Visions Used To Locate Body Of 78-Year-Old Man

SAN ANDREAS, Calif. (AP) — A psychic's tape-recorded visions were used Saturday to locate the body of an elderly man missing since he walked away from a family campsite five months ago, authorities said.

"She said some things on the tape that nobody would know, I mean nobody, except the victim," said Lt. Robert D. Bunning, a Calaveras County sheriff's deputy with nine years experience.

He said the psychic described an area where the body could be found "and we were out there to try and locate such an area."

Russell T. Drummond, 78, of Stockton, had been the subject of an air and land search following his disappearance Sept.

2 near New Hogan Dam on a reservoir about 25 miles northeast of Stockton.

When the week-long search failed, Bunning said, friends told the man's family to contact psychic M. Kathryn Rhea of Cupertino.

On the tape, the psychic declared that Drummond was dead, and that his body could be found due east of the campsite covered by vines without leaves, he said. She said Drummond would have walked south to get to that point, and would have passed over an open area to get to a dirt road, the deputy added.

Based on the tape, he said, the search was resumed Saturday by Sheriff Claud Ballard, Bunning and two other deputies.

Bunning said the body was found about three-quarters of a mile east of the campsite, about 250 yards from a gravel road. The man's legs were covered by brush, he said.

If he had walked the gravel road, Bunning said, Drummond would have had to go south at one point across an open area.

"It was remarkable how much of what she said was actually true," said Bunning. "There were enough things she did come up with that she had no way of knowing. I can't explain it."

Mrs. Rhea was not available for comment.

After about three hours, they found Drummond's body still clad in the white, sport shirt and trousers he was last seen wearing.

The body was turned over to Calaveras County deputy coroner Brian A. Hoke for autopsy. Hoke said death was from natural causes. "He wasn't alive very long" after his disappearance, he said.

"Whether or not the psychic was accurate, the one thing she did do is get us out there looking on a search that had been abandoned," said Bunning.

Frito-Lay, Corn Growers At Standoff On Contracts

A-J Correspondent

HEREFORD — The first stage of tense contract negotiations between area corn producers and Frito-Lay, Inc. of Dallas ended Wednesday with most growers still refusing to sign 1979 contracts with the company.

Frito-Lay acquired on Jan. 1 the facilities of Grain Handling Corp. in Hereford, Hart, Olton, Hart Camp, and Springlake and is re-negotiating area corn contracts.

The company offered a 1979 corn production contract of $5 per hundredweight for yellow corn and $6 per hundredweight for white corn, but representatives of the High Plains Farm Bargaining Association (HPFBA) indicated the Frito-Lay contract offers were not sufficient to meet production costs and provide farmers a profit.

HPFBA members want $8 per hundredweight for yellow corn and $7 per hundredweight for white corn to offset what they call spiraling production costs.

Average production costs for corn are $6.38 per hundredweight for yellow, $7.77 per hundredweight for white, and $5.68 per hundredweight for commercial. The average costs were computed by HPFBA members at mid-January meetings.

Frito-Lay now apparently will open contract negotiations with growers on a waiting list or open negotiations with growers in the Dalhart area, said Weldon Davis of Hart, president of the HPFBA.

"We are entering a stage where it becomes a serious war of nerves," Davis said. "We could possibly wait another month to find something out before final commitments on crops are made. We shot for a planting date around the first week of April, but we will need to get to work on land preparation just as soon as the ground thaws out."

"In the end, a lot of fellows may simply have to go with their own judgment on this issue," he continued. "Some of them may have to rely solely on commercial corn or switch to another crop if workable contracts aren't obtained. We still have a chance to negotiate a contract with Frito-Lay, however."

Pakistani Police Use 'Preventive' Arrest

RAWALPINDI, Pakistan (AP) — Police arrested about 200 supporters of deposed Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto Friday and Saturday in an apparent move to prevent disorders when the Supreme Court announces its decision on his death sentence appeal, informed sources said.

Bhutto, 51, was convicted of ordering the murder of a political opponent in 1974 and sentenced to hang by the Lahore High Court last March. The Supreme Court, following seven months of hearings, was expected to rule soon on an appeal of the conviction.

In December, Bhutto appeared before the court and professed his innocence. He made an impassioned plea for justice and asked for the reversal of his conviction.

The arrests of members of Bhutto's Peoples Party, under the law authorizing preventive arrest for maintaining public order, were confirmed by authoritative local sources in Karachi, Lahore, Peshawar, Rawalpindi and other cities.

Those arrested included several former legislators and a one-time cabinet member, former Information Minister Tahir Mohammed Khan, who was detained in Quetta.

The former prime minister, ousted in a military coup in July, 1977, has been in detention since September 1977. He also has been charged with other crimes, including corruption and abuse of office during his 5½-year administration.

Also charged in connection with the 1974 slaying are Miam Mohammed Abbas, former director of the Federal Security Force, and three security force inspectors. According to testimony delivered during the trial, Bhutto ordered the murder of Ahmed Raza Khan, a leading opposition member of the National Assembly.

As a result, Khan's father, Nawab Mohammad Ahmed Khan was shot and killed when the car he was riding in was ambushed.

Backyard Birdbath Does Everything

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio (AP) — There is no such thing as a dirty bird in Moody Garwood's neighborhood.

Moody has in his backyard a birdbath big enough to accommodate an entire flock at one time. Not only that, the birdbath cleans and refills itself.

The mechanism involves a three-inch piston, a cylinder and a metering tube that controls the rate of lift and return, and water pressure does the rest. "There is absolutely no electricity. Who needs to get electrocuted in a birdbath?" he asks.

Garwood, a high school graduate who worked for an aircraft company at one time, had the birdbath patented.

Oswald: "South reviews the bidding and notes that the odds are greatly in favor of West holding the king of diamonds and he can only afford to lose one diamond trick. He decides to postpone a diamond play as long as he can."

Alan: "He starts by drawing trumps with two leads; then cashes the last high club and leads a spade from dummy. East rises with the ace."

Oswald: "At this point the probability that West will hold the diamond king has risen from a high probability to a certainty. So when East leads back a diamond, South goes right up with his ace and leads a second spade. West wins and continues spades. South ruffs."

Alan: "Now South is home. It doesn't matter how he plays the second diamond because after West takes his king he has to give South a ruff and discard."

FOR YOUR CALL

At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK

Don't you love those commercials of a woman propped up in bed who looks up from the novel she is reading and says, "I'm cleaning my oven"? Or how about the one where it shows her snoozing away and a voice from somewhere says, "Joyce's toilet bowl is getting clean as she sleeps"?

Nothing works when I sleep. Whatever is there the night before I climb into bed is there when I wake up.

Not only that, I am forever being accosted by people who implore me to devote just a minute or so a day to a chore that will eventually make my life easier.

I kept a count of these offers for one day and came up with the following tally:

My dentist asked me to brush and floss for just three minutes a day.

My minister asked me to pray and meditate for only five minutes a day.

My hairdresser suggested I brush my hair 99 strokes for just six minutes a day.

My doctor advised me to exercise daily by walking for only 30 minutes.

My mother said it would take only four minutes daily to clean the splatters in my oven as soon as I made them.

My husband nagged me to death to put aside just two minutes a day to take an iron tablet.

A cosmetic salesman told me to take three minutes out of every day and rub moisturizer into my skin.

My best friend told me to kick off my shoes, elevate my feet and nap for 20 minutes a day and I'd feel wonderful.

Cleaning my contact lenses only takes five minutes a day.

Taking vitamins daily only takes a bite of 1 1/2 minutes out of my schedule.

Buffing the floor daily for eight minutes cuts down on the big job cleaner at the end of the week.

Pouring a little baking soda down my disposer daily takes only 2 1/2 minutes a day.

Spritzing a little air purifier in my kitchen each day keeps germs to a minimum and takes only three minutes.

Just a few drops of vitamins in my dog's bowl and he'll feel better and have a shiny coat. It only takes a minute a day.

I tallied up all my minutes one day and came up with only four hours and 10 minutes for eating and sleeping.

Make that four hours. It takes me 10 minutes a day to keep track of where my time goes.

A little courage can conquer the biggest fears.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann: Don't you think you were a little hard on the husband whose wife complained that he smelled like a goat and refused to shower? Are you sure Bill is "sick, sick, sick"?

A recent study on the history of personal hygiene cites that carelessness in body cleanliness frequently occurs during times of great inspiration. For example: Beethoven refused to bathe throughout the entire period of his composition of the Ninth Symphony. Likewise, Napoleon didn't wash his hair during the whole Russian campaign. And even more surprisingly, Michelangelo refused to wash during the four years he painted the Sistine Chapel.

Without further information, don't you think it's a little early to judge "Waiting's" husband? Who knows what Bill may be up to? — A Plea For Tolerance In Ponca

Dear Plea: Most geniuses have idiosyncrasies that, in the range of ordinary behavior, border on the nutty. The people referred to in your letter were all extraordinarily gifted.

If Bill's wife writes and says he composed a magnificent concerto, or became a commander-in-chief of an army, or painted some fabulous murals on the ceiling of one of the world's greatest chapels, I'll take 40 lashes with a wet wash cloth and eat a bar of soap.

Dear Ann Landers: I am a 17-year-old boy who reads your column every day. Hardly a day goes by that I don't see someone with a marriage problem. This doesn't make sense to me.

When I marry, I will be prepared to give up all habits, hobbies, etc., if they annoy my wife in any way. I will trust her completely. If she wants me home nights, I'll BE home nights, even if it means changing jobs. Of course, it would be nice if the girl I marry would do the same for me, but if she wasn't willing, it would be OK.

I might sound like a dumb kid shooting off his mouth with no experience to back him up, but it's really the way I feel. Ann, I'm going to do my best to make my wife the happiest person in the world. — Going To Give Her My Best

Dear Best: Keep this letter and read it again a week before you marry. If you still feel the same way, please tell the bride for me she's got herself a one-in-a-million guy. (P.S. Make that one in ten million.)

Dear Ann Landers: Speaking of family pictures, here's a goody for you:

When my brother was married, the bride's parents engaged a photographer to wander around and take random shots. After the brunch, the bride's family, sisters, nieces, nephews, aunts, uncles, all went into the side room with the photographer. My parents trailed along — only to have the bride's mother shut the door in their faces. She said, "Sorry, we're taking family pictures now."

My folks were crushed. Their only son, and they were not included in a single wedding photo! As if that wasn't enough, the bride's parents invited them over a few months later to "look at the wedding pictures."

Was it spite? Was it selfishness? Was it thoughtlessness? Could anything be done to spare my parents' feelings at the time? — Still Shocked

Dear Still: Such crude behavior is outrageous. The best move would have been to phone a photographer on an

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY DR. PAUL E. RUBLE

Dear Dr. Ruble: My doctor has advised me to have radioactive treatment for my goiter. I am 43. Do you consider this safe? The alternative is to take about 12 little pills daily for over a year. I was told that with the radioactive treatment I would still have to take some medicine for life anyway. It's my choice. Can you help me understand things a bit more? — D.M.

I'll try. Radioactive iodine (I-131) is accepted treatment and considered safe. Toxic goiter is an enlargement of the thyroid gland, which is located in the neck. The enlargement occurs because the gland is overactive. The goal, then, is to reduce this overactivity. The I-131 does this by attacking the overactive tissue in the gland. There are other ways to do this and I'll touch on them later on.

Whichever approach is taken you can't predict precisely how much of the thyroid hormone will still be produced afterward. The dose of radioactive iodine has to be estimated. If the hormone production is too low afterward, oral supplements (hormones) have to be used to take up the slack.

One alternative treatment is surgery to cut out the gland (thyroidectomy). The surgeon usually leaves enough gland tissue to produce near normal supplies of the hormone. But again, these matters cannot be predicted, so low activity may result and oral supplements needed.

The oral medicine treatment is effective, but, as you mention, it is a long and sometimes inconvenient way to accomplish what surgery or the radioactive iodine does in relatively short order. There is seldom universal agreement about which approach is best in treating gland conditions, so it's an individual matter. Some form of supplement will probably be needed for life. If you are in poor health or have heart or lung problems the iodine method would eliminate the risk of surgery. So, of course, would the longer, pill method. The radioactive iodine technique is not used with women of childbearing age or who are pregnant.

Dear Dr. Ruble: Does the medical profession know what causes itching of the skin? I am 65 and have been bothered with "jock itch" for a number of years. What is the best treatment? — P.W.S.

Hundreds of causes for itching are known because many organisms and other irritations can be involved. The skin is the body's first line of defense and itching is one way it has of telling us of something amiss. Jock itch is most often

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♦KQ963 ♥J75 ♦J65 ♦AQ

The bidding has proceeded: East South West North 1 ♦ 1 ♦ Pass 3 ♦ Pass ?

What do you bid now?
A.—Partner's jump response to our overall is highly encouraging, but not forcing. Since we have a very sound overall, the hand merits another bid. The most descriptive action we can take is to rebid three no trump to let partner know that we have solid values in the opponent's suit. Don't worry about your lack of a heart stopper. Partner may have length in that suit, which will prevent the defenders from taking too many heart tricks.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♦Q93 ♥J64 ♦KJ872 ♠Q5

The bidding has proceeded: North East South West 1 ♦ Pass 1 ♦ Pass 1 ♦ Pass 1 NT Pass 2 ♦ Pass ?

What action do you take?
A.—Partner's low-level, three-suited auction should show a reasonable hand with a 4-1-3-5 pattern—if he had a minimum balanced hand, he would have passed one no trump. You have quite a useful hand because your two queens have gained added weight. Therefore, we would make one mild move, showing our support for partner's second suit by bidding two spades.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦A87 ♥KJ1053 ♦J10 ♦KQ7

The bidding has proceeded: North East South West 1 ♦ Pass 1 ♥ Pass 1 ♦ Pass ?

What do you bid now?
A.—With an opening bid facing an opening bid, you want to be in game, and the way to advise partner of your strength is by making a jump rebid. You certainly don't want to jump rebid your weakish five-card heart suit; a jump in no trump without a stopper in the unbid suit is unthinkable; and jump raising partner's second suit on three-card support is inadvisable. By a process of elimination we arrive at three clubs.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦62 ♥J865 ♦AK854 ♠K10

The bidding has proceeded: West North East South 1 ♦ 2 ♥ Pass ?

What do you bid now?
A.—This one is easy. Partner has shown the equivalent of a full opening bid with his vulnerable overall, and your hand complements his magnificently. You have four-card trump support, ruffing values in the black suits and three possible tricks in the minors, so take the strain off partner by jumping to four hearts.

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦AKQ84 ♥73 ♦AJ7 ♠QJ5

The bidding has proceeded: South West North East 1 ♠ Pass 2 ♥ Pass ?

What do you bid now?
A.—You have an awkward problem. Two spades would be a drastic underbid, and partner might pass. Even two no trump doesn't do your hand full justice. We would make the temporizing high reverse of three clubs. At least, that describes the strength of your holding quite accurately. Our second choice would be three no trump.

Q.6—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦K62 ♥A10874 ♦953 ♠J6

The bidding has proceeded: South West North East 1 ♠ Pass 1 ♥ 1 ♦ ?

What do you bid now?
A.—Don't let that fifth heart goad you into rash action—your hand is too balanced for any jump raise in hearts. That action would be merited if you held a singleton somewhere. For the moment, content yourself with a raise to two hearts. Unless partner can make another bid, you are unlikely to have a game in the hand.

Q.7—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦A106 ♥AKQ8 ♦Q1065 ♠Q5

The bidding has proceeded: West North East South 1 NT Pass Pass Dbl. Pass 2 ♠ Pass ?

What action do you take?
A.—You have already shown your hand by doubling one no trump. If partner has enough for you to make game, he would have passed one no trump doubled for penalties. Therefore, pass and be delighted that partner took out into one of your better suits.

Q.8—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♦AKJ83 ♥K7 ♦84 ♠9642

The bidding has proceeded: West North East South 1 ♠ Pass 1 NT Pass Pass 2 ♠ Pass ?

What action do you take?
A.—Partner did not overcall at his first turn, so he cannot have much of a hand—he is simply not letting the opponents buy the hand at one no trump. Since he is already bidding your values, don't hang him for competing—pass.

Khomeini Adviser Urges Oil Cutback

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — An adviser to Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, providing clues to the possible future of this oil-rich nation's economy, said Sunday Iran should cut its oil production by as much as 60 percent and world petroleum prices should be higher.

Such moves by a Khomeini-guided government in Iran — now the world's No. 2 exporter of oil — could precipitate oil-supply problems among industrialized nations.

Dr. Fazulhan Bani-Sadr, a key economics adviser to Khomeini, spoke with a small group of reporters in his home.

He said he favors a new economic system for Iran that would be "neither capitalist nor Marxist, nor a combination of the two." He also said a new Iranian government would have the right to cancel foreign debts incurred by previous governments.

Khomeini has not yet indicated who would design the economic system of the "Islamic republic" he wants to create in Iran, and Bani-Sadr stressed that he is not sure he will get the job. But Bani-Sadr, son of a Moslem priest and holder of degrees in economics and sociology, is considered a close consultant to the 78-year-old religious leader on issues of economic policy.

Returns With Khomeini

A member of Khomeini's Paris entourage, he returned to Iran with the ayatollah last week.

"I favor decreasing oil production because part of it isn't really for people's consumption but just for building up reserves. Forty percent of present production would be enough for present needs," he said.

Before Iranian oil workers went on strike in support of Khomeini last October and cut off the nation's oil exports, Iran produced about 6 million barrels of crude oil per day. A 60 percent cut would slash daily output to 2.4 million barrels.

U.S. Big Purchaser

Iran uses an average of 750,000 barrels of its own oil daily for internal needs and the rest is exported. About 15 percent goes to the United States.

Bani-Sadr said world oil prices should be newly defined in terms of the cost of industrial goods that oil-producing countries buy from developed nations, an idea often advanced by OPEC oil officials but never put into effect systematically.

The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) voted last December to raise the standard world crude-oil price by 14.5 percent in the course of this year to $14.54 a barrel.

Bani-Sadr said that if oil prices were recalculated as he recommended, prices would "certainly" be higher than the latest OPEC levels.

He said Iran's oil industry "has always been separate from the Iranian economy and a part of the industrialized nations' economies."

The oil industry should be made "truly national" and re-integrated into Iran's economy, providing investment funds for a diversification of national industries, he said.

Tech Student Loan Defaults Below Average on loan payments than some other schools do.

"They're good about meeting financial obligations," he explained. "So we haven't experienced the problems a lot of schools have had with defaults."

Prior to October, 1976, when Tech began using an outside collection agency, the default rate was higher than it is now. George Sanderson, collections director at Tech, said the figure may have been as high as 15 percent at one time.

Agency Trims Losses

Tech turned over 609 defaulted loans totaling $432,000 to the collection agency two years ago. Since then the agency has collected $231,000 of that debt at no cost to Tech. The agency's fees are paid by the borrowers who defaulted.

Of Tech's total enrollment, 22 percent receives some type of financial aid, including loans, grants and scholarships. Of that figure, 13 percent receive aid under "financially needy" standards. That includes such programs as NDSL and the Basic Educational Opportunity Grant, which has strict application requirements.

Barnes said the BEOG program, instituted five years ago, is more widely used than the NDSL and that helps lower the NDSL default rate because many students who would have applied for such a loan now qualify for the BEOG, which is a grant and is not repaid.

The loan payment program for NDSL requires the first payment is due nine months after a student ceases to be enrolled for at least six semester hours. The interest rate is 3 percent, and borrowers have up to 10 years to repay the loan at a minimum payment of $30 per month.

Borrowers who spend five years or more teaching handicapped or disadvantaged students are eligible to cancel their entire debt.

Chinese Leader Nears End Of American Trip

SEATTLE (AP) — Chinese Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping, apparently tiring, slowed his pace Sunday as he neared the end of his American tour.

His morning activities included only a brief courtesy call paid by former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, in Seattle to help promote a soccer game in his capacity as the honorary chairman of the North American Soccer League, and a meeting with U.S. Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash.

Jackson said Teng had "indicated he would give public assurances" that China's emigration policies will conform to the requirements necessary for the country to attain the low tariffs and credits it wants to enable it to buy expensive modern equipment.

Jackson is the co-author of the Jackson-Vanik amendment to U.S. trade law which prohibits granting the favorable tariff rates and credits to communist countries which do not allow free emigration.

Praised For Anti-Soviet Line

The senator also welcomed Teng to a luncheon for area businessmen and praised him for the tough rhetoric he directed against the Soviets during the first few days of his visit. "We share your concern at the growth of Soviet military power and the danger that poses to countries whose independence is threatened," Jackson said in his prepared remarks. "We share your concern at the Soviet effort to expand its influence in Africa, the Mideast and Asia."

Teng's Seattle stay also includes a visit to nearby Everett, Wash., for an inspection tour of Boeing's 747 jetliner manufacturing plant, which the company says is the largest enclosed space in the world. China has placed an order for three of Boeing's 747SP model, which has fewer seats, bigger fuel tanks, and a longer range than the conventional 747 jet. It can fly non-stop across the Pacific from China to the United States.

Teng Husbands Strength

Teng, 74, was carefully husbanding his energy, said an aide who indicated that the Chinese leader was turning down nearly all of the many requests for interviews and appointments during his free time in Seattle.

His schedule last week in Washington, Atlanta and Houston had him on the go for as many as 18 hours a day. His U.S. tour will end Monday after a breakfast meeting with editors and publishers from the Pacific Northwest region.

Neither Teng nor his wife, Cho Lin, joined other members of the party for a tour of Puget Sound aboard a $10 million Boeing Co. jetfoil. The Chinese who did make the trip, including Foreign Minister Huang Hua, were accompanied by U.S. officials who pointed out that much of the corn shipped from the port every year goes to China.

Meanwhile, Yao Wei, a Chinese official traveling with the Teng party, confirmed that former President Richard M. Nixon, whose 1972 visit to China was the first step on the road that led to normalization of relations, has accepted an invitation to visit China again. Yao said no date has been set for the trip, which will be Nixon's third.

Teng did not make his customary airport arrival speech when he landed at Seattle's Boeing Flight Center Saturday evening. Instead, he walked down a receiving line, shaking hands with the state's congressional delegation, Gov. Dixy Lee Ray and Secretary of Transportation Brock Adams, waved briefly to a small crowd of well-wishers, got into his limousine and went to his hotel for an evening of rest.

Immigrant Loses House; Refused To Pay $12.40

DOYLESTOWN, Pa. (AP) — Salvatore Venezia thought the county tax bureau was bluffing. It wasn't, and his $70,000 house was sold for $435.60 because he owed $12.40 in real estate taxes.

"I said it's got to be a bluff because all my bills are paid," said Venezia, an Italian immigrant who came to this country in 1960.

Six years ago, Venezia, 37, who operates a pizzeria in Philadelphia bought the three-bedroom house on a one-acre lot in suburban Bensalem Township, Bucks County.

"My house is paid off in December 1977," he said in a telephone interview from his home, which he refuses to leave.

But at the moment it doesn't belong to him anymore, although local officials say he "has a good chance" of getting it back if he wants to pursue an expensive legal battle.

Venezia's troubles began in 1977 when he built a two-story garage, causing his county real estate tax to be increased by $12.40.

On July 9, 1977, the county tax office sent Venezia a bill for the additional tax by certified mail. After the $12.40 became overdue, a house sale was scheduled for Nov. 9, 1978, according to Katherine Quinby, deputy director of the tax office.

She said a notice of the tax sale was posted on Venezia's property last August and notices were sent to him in August and September.

A representative of the tax office contacted Venezia a week before the sale, she added.

Venezia, who said he never went beyond the fourth grade and can't read English, claims it's all news to him. He said the only notice he knew of was the 1977 billing, which his wife signed for and apparently misplaced. He said he didn't find out about that until after the house was sold.

"My mother's here; my wife is here; I come home every day. We never see any posting," Venezia said.

"Since I never received any other notice, I figured it was a bluff," Venezia said about the October warning. "But Nov. 9, someone from Area Homes (Inc.) calls me and tells me they sold my house."

Area Homes purchased the house for $435.60. The Philadelphia firm was the only bidder.

"I pay off my mortgage. Now I figure I got my house paid off, I can start making a better living, but before I know it, they try to get me out," Venezia said.

Venezia's lawyer filed an objection to the sale Friday in Bucks County court.

"He has a good chance of getting the property back," said County Commissioner John T. Welsh, a realtor for 35 years. "I've seen rare occasions where this has happened in the past and the court has upset the sale if he (Venezia) pays costs. That seems right, but there's some fault with the property owner for ignoring the notices."

"But it's out of our (the commissioners') hands," Welsh added.

"If he follows the normal routine he has a good chance to win. It will cost a little money, but that's his problem."

Gunshot Victim Treated

Brenda Yvonne Vester, 24, of 3604 Zenith Ave. was undergoing treatment late Sunday in Methodist Hospital for a gunshot wound to the abdomen she suffered at about 8:45 p.m. at her home.

Police answered a call to the Zenith residence at about 8:55 p.m. and found the woman lying on a couch in the living room. EMS also was dispatched to the scene and transported the woman to Methodist.

Police reports indicated that the woman and a 39-year-old man had been arguing in the front yard of the woman's home when the man pulled a .22 caliber pistol and shot the woman.

The man handed over the pistol to investigating officers and was later booked into county jail for aggravated assault and unlawfully carrying a weapon.

decisions have been made."

Although the permits specify Capitol Hill, AAM leaders said the White House and Agriculture Department will also be circled by tractors.

"They may be able to haul off a tractor or two, but they can't haul off a thousand of them," said Plainview farmer Marvin Meek.

"We don't plan on leaving until we get what we want," added McCathern.

Commuters have been warned throughout the weekend by newspapers, television and radio to leave early for work and to use mass transit systems or car pools.

The tractorcades were scheduled to leave for Washington around 4 a.m. Monday. The 15 mph line should still be creeping onto bridges spanning the Potomac River during the height of rush-hour traffic.

TV Likes Shared By Grade School Pupils, Prince

ly about this letter. I am a Lubbock resident and a student teacher at Rush Elementary School. I live about two blocks from you, around the corner as do many of the students in my room...

"Presently our room is studying about Iran and making current events folders concerning news about your country. On Dec. 6, we are planning a trip to the Texas Tech Museum to view the display of Iran. All of this is to say that we are absolutely intrigued with you, your family and your country."

"I want you to know that what I am about to ask you has been labeled as 'ridiculous, unheard-of and simply impossible' by some persons, but my students and I would always treasure a short visit with the prince that we have seen in numerous pictures and heard about over the news..."

The letter was typed up and signed by Miss Shotwell, Mrs. Hansard and Rush Principal Bill Bravenec.

Miss Shotwell attempted to deliver the letter in person to the prince, but the guards at his westside estate would not permit that. She then contacted officers at Reese Air Force Base.

Officials with Reese and the U.S. State Department went out to Rush to look the school over and talk with the two teachers and principal. If the prince should decide to come, the government officials stressed, there must be no publicity, no news media present. Nobody — not even the students — was to have any advance word.

Visit By Reese Officers Causes Stir

"When the Reese officers walked into the classroom, the children were inquisitive. They wanted to know who these men were. I told the children the officers were safety inspectors," Mrs. Hansard said.

"The Reese people left, saying they'd make sure the prince received our letter. A couple of days later, they got back in touch with us."

The prince agreed to visit the 10 fifth-graders and 10 sixth-graders at 1 p.m. on Dec. 13.

Students recalled returning from lunch that day to find the Reese and State Department officials combing the schoolhouse. "Are you in trouble with the safety inspectors again?" one of them asked Mrs. Hansard.

"That's when she told us the prince was coming," sixth-grader Susan Templeton said. "We all got really excited."

The prince was late (because, said some students, his sister had taken the car shopping). Here's how The Rush Rambler described the occasion:

"Dec. 13 was a very memorable day for Room 107. The time was 1:28 p.m. and into the room stepped the Crown Prince of Iran. During an informal discussion with Prince Reza Pahlavi, students found out about his boyhood, his religion, his leisure time and his general opinion of Lubbock. After moments of conversation, he kindly autographed current events folders which were constructed by sixth-graders."

"I was so nervous, I couldn't talk. I couldn't believe he was here," Miss Shotwell said. "The prince was so open, frank and charming — so down-to-earth. One little girl was crying, she was so excited."

According to the Rush pupils, the prince is enjoying his stay in Lubbock.

Thinks Lubbock Friendly, Girls Pretty

"He thinks the people of Lubbock are very friendly and the girls are pretty," Susan Templeton said.

Classmate Matt Strong learned that the prince's favorite sport is soccer, and his hobby is building model airplanes and rockets.

"We also asked about Islam, his religion. He said he is supposed to pray toward Mecca five times a day. But because he is so far away, he only prays once a day," said sixth-grader Amy Blackwood.

Jane Reynolds discovered that the prince speaks three languages — Persian, French and English. "He said English is the hardest."

Stewart Chisholm found out that "the prince's favorite television shows are 'The Six Million Dollar Man' and 'Gunsmoke.' He said they play reruns of those shows in Iran."

The prince started flying planes at age 12 because his family travels by air so often. Leslie Dickinson said. He enjoys his training at Reese but complains that "the plane he flies for the Air Force goes too slow," the sixth-grader added.

"The prince likes American food but also has his own personal cook. He gets tired of the guards hanging around all the time. Sometimes he wants to go out and buy a hamburger," Amy Blackwood said.

The prince was supposed to stay only until 2 p.m., when the students were scheduled to participate in their school's Christmas program. But the teenager they addressed as "Your Highness" stayed until 2:30 p.m.

Two Bodies Found In McKinney Well

MCKINNEY (AP) — Sheriff's officers, lured by a winch truck into a narrow 30-foot-deep abandoned water well, pulled out the skeletal remains of two persons late Saturday and early Sunday.

Lt. John Thompson of the Collin County sheriff's department said the bodies were believed those of a 75-year-old McKinney man missing since May 3, 1978, and a 51-year-old McKinney woman missing since June, 1977.

The body of the man, believed to be Jess Leroy Lovelady, was found about 10 p.m. Saturday. Several feet deeper, near the bottom of the well, officers found the woman's remains about 2 a.m. Sunday. A purse with the identification of a missing McKinney woman was nearby.

Officers said the well was about four miles east of McKinney.

Charges will be filed Monday in connection with the deaths, Thompson said.

"Right now, we believe the motive was robbery."

Officers found the body with help of a map supplied by Billy Battenfield, 25, of McKinney, now serving a 50-year prison term in New Mexico for murder, Thompson said.

Battenfield told officers several weeks ago he had "reliable information" Lovelady's body — and others — could be found in an abandoned water well in Collin County.

Officers flew Thursday to New Mexico to try to pinpoint the location of the well more precisely and returned Saturday.

Ideological Balance Unaltered In Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — Liberals and conservatives have battled to a near-stalemate in the shuffle to fill committee vacancies in the new Congress, with both sides chalking up gains and losses.

Although there are fewer southerners and more liberals who are chairmen of panels now than in the past Congress, few members dispute that the 96th Congress will be more tight-fisted and conservative.

In the just-completed realignment of House and Senate committees, conservatives were able to increase their number on many major panels, reflecting the outcome of the 1978 elections.

And with a few exceptions, the rebellious 96th Congress decided to leave the seniority system intact — awarding leadership posts to those with the longest service.

In the Senate, liberals can point to two key gains: the assumption of the chairmanships of the Judiciary Committee by Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., and of the Foreign Relations Committee by Frank Church, D-Idaho.

These were the only committees in the Senate to get new chairmen. Kennedy replaced former Sen. James Eastland, D-Miss., and Church took over from former Sen. John Sparkman, D-Ala., two southern conservatives who did not seek re-election.

Countering the liberal gains at the top were conservative gains within committee ranks.

A generally conservative freshman class of 20 senators and a lowered Democrat-Republican ratio meant an influx of conservative new members onto many Senate panels.

Eight of the 17 Senate committees were enlarged to reflect the new 59-41 breakdown of Democrats to Republicans in the Senate.

On the Foreign Relations Committee, four new conservative members were added — Republicans Jesse Helms of North Carolina, Richard Lugar of Indiana and and S.I. Hayakawa of California and Democrat Edward Zorinsky of Nebraska.

That appeared many conservatives unhappy with Church's ascendancy to the chairmanship.

House contests produced a mixed bag, with conservatives taking over some key spots and liberals winning others.

In the only contested race for the chairmanship of a full committee, the seniority system prevailed and conservative Rep. Jamie Whitten, D-Miss., overcame a challenge from liberals to become chairman of the House Appropriations Committee.

He succeeds Rep. George Mahon, D-Texas, who did not seek re-election. However, liberals scored a few upset victories in races for subcommittee chairmanships. Two liberal Democrats — Henry Waxman of California and Anthony Moffett of Connecticut — beat more senior and more conservative members to win the chairmanships of subcommittees on health and on energy.

Some other subcommittee changes had political overtones. When the Ways and Means Committee named liberal Rep. Charles B. Rangel, D-N.Y., as chairman of the subcommittee which will handle the administration's national hospital-cost containment plan, it was cheered by health-care advocates.

Rangel replaced Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., who had blocked such bills in the past.

But the same group of liberals voiced displeasure with the selection of Rep. William H. Natcher, D-Ky., whom they view as an ally of the tobacco industry, to chair the appropriations subcommittee on labor, health, education and welfare.

That panel was vacated by Rep. Daniel Flood, D-Pa., whose trial on bribery and perjury charges ended in a mistrial Saturday.

Rep. Richard Bolling, D-Mo., a political moderate and longtime activist for overhauling House procedures, succeeds retired Rep. James Delaney, D-N.Y., as chairman of the powerful House Rules Committee, a change liberals are claiming as a victory.

Poll Gives China Initiative High Marks

By LOUIS HARRIS

By 60-27 percent, Americans favor President Carter's action in officially recognizing the People's Republic of China.

On specific aspects of the recognition, however, there is a mixed reaction:

—By 72-21 percent, an overwhelming majority approves of the President's indication that the United States "would not sell military arms to the People's Republic."

—By a narrow 45-44 percent, a plurality goes along with the arrangement under which "we would withdraw official diplomatic recognition of the Nationalist government in Taiwan, but would continue to trade with them."

But on three other key provisions, the President meets with public disapproval, as shown by a recent ABC News-Harris Survey of 1,498 adults nationwide:

—By a close 47-43 percent, a plurality disapproves of the United States

Chamber Seeking More Tax Relief

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Chamber of Commerce, commenting Saturday on the latest unemployment report by the Labor Department, said tax relief aimed at encouraging business investment should be the No. 1 priority in Congress.

Jack Carlson, the chamber's vice president and chief economist, made the assertion following release of figures showing the unemployment rate declined 'continuing to sell military arms to the Nationalist government on Taiwan.' This negative reaction probably has less to do with Taiwan than with the public's growing concern about the United States serving as a major supplier of military hardware around the world. People worry that such arms support will inevitably lead to warfare, rather than serve as a deterrent to armed conflict.

—By 57-29 percent, a clear majority of Americans simply cannot go along with the administration's position that we will recognize "Taiwan as part of the mainland of China, which is controlled by the Communists." Even though this principle was first stated in the 1972 Shanghai Communiqué signed by former President Nixon, the public just cannot accept it.

—By 52-32 percent, a majority also disapproves of the Carter announcement that "by 1980, we will cancel our defensive alliance with the Nationalist government in Taiwan." Undoubtedly, this is the most controversial provision of the new recognition. It is being contested by Sen. Barry Goldwater in a court suit which, in effect, claims that the President cannot abrogate a defense treaty ratified by the U.S. Senate without going back to the Senate for approval. Despite their aversion to sending American arms to Taiwan, the public nonetheless feels duty-bound to keep a defensive alliance with that country.

Although a close 44-36 percent plurality feels that the President "gave away too much" in the negotiations with China, a clear-cut majority supports the decision to recognize the People's Republic. By 60-27 percent, Americans think Mr. Carter did the right thing. In the East, an even higher 65-24 percent supports recognition, as does an almost identical 63-25 percent in the Midwest and West. In the South, a lower 53-32 percent majority backs the President's action.

Significantly, a 57-30 percent majority of conservatives backs recognition, as does a higher 64-25 percent majority of middle-of-the-roaders and 68-24 percent majority of liberals.

Growth of lower-paying jobs occurred because of lower levels of investment required," Carlson said of the 450,000 new jobs created last month.

"The results are overall lower levels of productive growth," he said. "Stimulus of investment through tax relief targeted at productivity-increasing investment is badly needed to boost workers' pay and further job growth."

In addition, by 52-41 percent, a majority gives the President positive marks on his "handling of relations with China," a turnaround from the 44-31 percent plurality who gave him negative scores more than a year ago.

In the end, it is apparent that American public opinion will rally behind the President in his decision to give the People's Republic official diplomatic recognition. There is a recognition on the part of the majority that the Communists are in control on mainland China, that they are a growing force in the world, and that it is better that this country have close relations with them. There is genuine regret, nonetheless, that the price had to be a severance of diplomatic and defense relations with the government of Taiwan — but not enough regret to make people oppose President Carter's action.

U.S. May Move Against 'Accident-Prone' Railway

(EDITORS NOTE: Last June, Associated Press Writer Lee Mitgang reported that a confidential report to federal regulators had found that the Louisville Nashville Railroad had equipment and personnel problems that made it one of the most unsafe in the industry. In the following report, Mitgang takes a follow-up look at the L.N.)

By LEE MITGANG,
Associated Press Writer

Despite more than a year of tight surveillance by federal regulators, the Louisville Nashville Railroad remains one of the nation's most accident prone lines.

After a rash of serious derailments and equipment failures nearly a year ago that sent thousands fleeing from their homes, the LN had promised the Federal Railroad Administration in a confidential report that it would upgrade its track, locomotives and whatever else was necessary to cut one of the worst accident records in the industry.

But since then, as recently as last November and December in fact, LN mishaps involving dangerous cargo have continued to cause the evacuation of thousands of persons.

And FRA officials, accusing the railroad of rating the quality of some of its track too high, now say the agency may ban the shipment of hazardous materials on certain stretches of LN's rail system.

"They've gotten worse, if anything. And our gang of lawyers are working up a program to cut down on some of the accidents," FRA spokeswoman Joanne Sloan said in an interview.

Richard Spence, president of LN since September, insisted in an interview that his railroad was making "substantial progress" toward upgrading its track, locomotives and general maintenance.

"I don't think the LN is in rags and tatters when you look at other railroads," said Spence.

Nonetheless, from January to June of last year — the latest period for which aggregate figures are available — the LN's safety record was the nation's worst, with accidents resulting in 16 deaths, 48 injuries, and 3,950 persons evacuated.

All told, the 6,500-mile railroad, which serves 10 states, had 39 rail equipment accidents involving hazardous cargo, placing it third worst among 33 railroads carrying such cargo.

"Our feeling is they're not making any progress. I think they're overwhelmed by their problems," said FRA's chief counsel, Raymond K. James. "The only thing left to us is to impose restrictions on certain lines."

Spence said "any order that would prohibit carrying hazardous material is simply incredible. Practically every line in the system services hazardous material at one time or another."

Among the most accident prone stretches of rail that might be subject to such restrictions are in the LN's Corbin division which serves eastern Kentucky, according to James.

The LN's poor safety record first gained national attention last February, when 16 people were killed and 500 were evacuated after a train carrying hazardous cargo derailed near Waverly, Tenn.

In fact, intense federal scrutiny had already begun four months before, because the LN's safety record had been deteriorating.

Since the one at Waverly, the railroad has had these accidents involving the release of hazardous material:

- April 25: Five hundred persons were evacuated from Bowling Green, Ky., when a train carrying dangerous cargo broke a wheel.

- May 19: A derailment in a yard near Evansville, Indiana caused two cars to leak toxic material. About 2,500 persons were evacuated.
- May 29: A derailment caused by a broken rail near Mossy Head, Fla., sent 400 people fleeing from their homes.
- October 18: A train carrying sulfuric acid was derailed because of a track problem near Madisonville, Tenn. There were four injuries, and 3,550 persons were evacuated.
- November 27: Sulfuric acid was released in a derailment near Appalachian, Tenn. The noxious chemical seeped into a nearby river thought to contain snail darters, an endangered species of fish.
- In December, 75 persons were evacuated in High Cliff, Tenn., after a train carrying sulfuric acid derailed. And about 1,000 persons in Atala, Ala., had to leave their homes when a car carrying propane gas derailed.

Since intense federal scrutiny began more than a year ago, says James, "we found the LN frequently over-class their track." That means the railroad was claiming that certain stretches of its rail were in better condition than they really were, thus allowing it to carry hazardous cargo on those lines.

The FRA and LN's Spence disagree sharply over the progress the railroad is making.

The FRA says about 60 percent of the line's locomotives are not up to federal standards, about the same ratio as last May. Spence contends that only 150 of the LN's 1,100 locomotives are out of service. He says 130 new locomotives have been ordered and will begin arriving this month.

The FRA and LN agree that the railroad has succeeded in taking out of service 42,000 carbon-based wheels that federal regulators had judged last year to be unsafe.

But LN has one problem it didn't have a year ago. A profitable railroad in 1977, it reported a $29 million loss for the first nine months of 1978, the latest figures reported.

"That certainly hinders our chances of dealing with these programs," says Spence. But he ruled out the possibility that the railroad might pare some of its routes to save money.

Ship's Captain Charged

HONG KONG (AP) — The captain of a ship that brought more than 3,000 Vietnamese refugees to Hong Kong has been charged with violating local shipping laws by allegedly carrying too many passengers, authorities in this British colony announced Sunday.

It found guilty, Captain Hsu Wen-hien, 52, will be liable to four years' imprisonment, possible confiscation of the freighter, the Huey Fong, a $2,000 fine and an additional fine of about $1,000 for every excess passenger aboard. He was scheduled to appear in court Monday, a government statement said.

The Huey Fong's refugees were finally allowed to land in Hong Kong after a month at sea.

Observers here said the charge against Hsu was intended to deter other Vietnamese from coming to the British colony, where 5,000 refugees already are waiting to be resettled in other countries.

Thousands of persons, especially ethnic Chinese, have fled Vietnam to other Southeast Asian nations since the communist victory in 1975.

The United States will have admitted about 50,000 Vietnamese refugees by the end of the 12-month period ending April 30, and U.S. officials in Washington say the Carter administration plans to make a significant increase thereafter. The officials would not disclose the size of the increase.

Hong Kong's new merchant shipping laws, passed during the month the Huey Fong was stranded outside Hong Kong harbor, provide for the setting of the number of passengers allowed when a ship applies for registration. A government spokesman said he did not know how many passengers the Huey Fong was permitted.

The Huey Fong sailed into Hong Kong Jan. 19, despite a government warning that Hsu would be subject to the new laws. Refugees on board complained through radio-telephone calls that passengers were sick and there was a lack of food and water supplies.

The 3,318 Huey Fong refugees, finally admitted to Hong Kong on humanitarian grounds, are being kept isolated in a former Royal Air Force base while officials question them about persistent reports that an international syndicate is smuggling refugees from Vietnam.

A spokesman said the government was investigating the possibility that the refugees were picked up at a pre-arranged destination.

Hsu claims he rescued the refugees from nine sinking fishing junks on the high seas Dec. 17 while en route to the Taiwanese port of Kaohsiung from Bangkok, Thailand.

The Taiwanese-owned freighter was barred from entering Hong Kong because it was not the ship's first scheduled port of call, officials said.

In the continuing exodus of "boat people," a boat carrying 43 Vietnamese refugees landed Sunday at the Jambu Bangkok Beach in Dungun, 150 miles north-east of Kuala Lumpur.

CIA Adopts 'Try Harder' Tag

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Borrowing a slogan from a car rental firm, CIA Director Stansfield Turner said Sunday his intelligence forces "try harder," and now have good information on the situation in Iran.

But he said he is prepared to explain in detail to the Senate how the United States will be able to verify Soviet compliance with any new strategic arms limitation agreement.

Turner said the CIA's failure to foresee that Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi would be ousted was shared by other intelligence forces around the world, and he suggested even Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini did not know beforehand the power of his followers.

"Clearly we would like to have done better," Turner said in an interview on ABC's "Issues and Answers" program.

"Forecasting political upheavals and military coups and unexpected election results is probably the most difficult part of intelligence," he said. "I know of no other intelligence source that predicted the trouble in Iran ... I would suggest even Ayatollah Khomeini didn't realize how well his force was moving along."

Turner likened the widespread dissent in Iran to a "series of volcanoes bubbling," and said it had not appeared any one of them would get out of control.

He said what the CIA failed to foresee was that a 78-year-old religious leader exiled for 14 years would be the catalyst for an eruption.

As for the future, he said, "We're not Avis. We're not No. 2. But we're going to try harder."

He declined to predict what will happen in Iran, but he said, "I believe we have very good information today. We are able to keep our decision makers as well informed as possible."

Last November after it became apparent that the shah was in trouble, President Carter sent Turner a note saying he was not satisfied with the information he had received on Iran.

Turner said Sunday he was not at all upset by the note.

"I was pleased to have a suggestion from the president on how I could do my job better," he said.

Turner declined to say what effect the Iranian upheavals would have on America's intelligence monitoring stations there and on Washington's ability to monitor the Kremlin's military developments.

Women Make Plea For Refugees

NEW YORK (AP) — Recalling the experiences of Jews fleeing the Nazis, Hadassah, a Jewish women's organization, on Sunday urged President Carter to launch an international rescue program for refugees from Indochina.

Bernice S. Tannenbaum, president of Hadassah, appealed in a letter to Carter for a program to admit and settle refugees.

She said as Jews, Hadassah's 360,000 members have a "deep" and "special" understanding of the refugees' plight.

A statement drafted by Hadassah's national board called on all nations not to repeat the mistake made during the 1930s when Jews fleeing from the Nazis were denied entry into a number of countries.

The letter to Carter followed the Hadassah's mid-winter conference, where they also urged the West German government to extend the statute of limitations on Nazi war crimes. The present statute expires Dec. 31, 1979.

The Hadassah is the nation's largest Jewish organization.

Billboards Slated To Work For God

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — A Roman Catholic priest who learned Madison Avenue advertising techniques in New York reckons that if billboards can sell beer and booze they can also work for the Lord.

The Rev. Rev. Tom Comber plans to plaster this city with about 40 billboards, inviting motorists to "Follow the Leader" to the St. Lawrence Catholic Church.

Comber spent 16 years marketing books for Paulist Press in New York City before he came to St. Lawrence Church in September. The 40 billboard posters were a gift to the church from Richard Condon, owner of an advertising company, who attended classes at the church.

Doctor Says Radiation Defects May Be Inherited

KITTERY, Maine (AP) — A scientist investigating radiation-induced cancer deaths at Portsmouth Naval Shipyard said Sunday the government ignored the possibility of genetic damage to the workers' children for fear of opening a "Pandora's box."

"I was amazed that nowhere in the government's guidelines was a mention of a genetic study," said Dr. John Cobb, one of nine civilian scientists assigned by Congress to watchdog the investigation.

"Cancer is a danger to the individual," he added. "Genetic defects are a threat to the human race."

Cobb explained that when a cancer victim dies, the disease dies with him. If genetic defects are being caused by the radiation exposure, it will spread through the worker's offspring and multiply into future generations.

"It's a Pandora's box which no one in the government wants to open," Cobb said.

But Dr. Anthony Robbins, who is heading the investigation said Sunday his health investigators are well aware of the potential genetic harm which may stem from radiation exposure.

"We're not burying our heads in the sand and making believe the problem doesn't exist," Robbins said. "The consultants who are demanding the genetic study are complying with our request for their recommendations on how the Portsmouth investigation should be conducted."

The National Institute of Occupational Health and Safety was ordered by Congress to investigate the findings of Dr. Thomas Najarian, a Boston blood specialist who determined that nuclear workers at Portsmouth were contracting cancer at a much higher rate than non-nuclear workers.

Although NIOSH has been working on its study since early last year, the first public mention of possible genetic or hereditary dangers from radiation exposure came at a meeting of federal and civilian scientists in Boston last week, where the complex guidelines for the study were discussed.

Last month, some of the civilian scientists accused the government of a "cover-up" in its year-long investigation of the medical records of the 25,000 shipyard workers.

The charge was based on the government's alleged lack of speed in investigating a problem that some scientists believe could exist at all nine of the nation's nuclear shipyards. At least 250,000 workers potentially are involved.

Most scientists agree that carcinogenics, or cancer-causing agents, such as radiation also have the potential to cause mutations or genetic defects, Cobb said.

Dr. Irwin Bross, another consultant, known for his studies of radiation exposures from medical X-rays, agrees with Cobb on the importance of the genetic study.

"What may be happening at Portsmouth is the insertion of a continuing genetic defect into the gene pool of the shipyard population," Bross said.

The doses of radiation which have been proven to produce genetic harm to patients receiving diagnostic X-rays "are in the same range as the radiation doses we believe were received by the early Portsmouth nuclear workers," Bross said.

Bross, Cobb, and other radiation experts, including some within NIOSH, say the government has gone to great lengths to avoid investigating the genetic harm caused by radiation.

"The DOE would like to cheerfully wait and do nothing until the entire threat of genetic dangers goes away," Cobb said. "That's not going to happen."

Some members of the team of civilian scientists do not believe there is justification or need for a genetic study, saying that nothing will be found.

San Juan, Puerto Rico (AP) — More than 100 local fishermen and their Puerto Rican supporters withdrew Sunday from two U.S. Navy practice areas they occupied to protest military exercises on Vieques, an island off the southeastern coast of Puerto Rico.

A spokesman for the protesters, who call themselves the Pro-Vieques Rescue Crusade, said they left after spending a quiet night camped on Navy grounds on Vieques.

U.S. District Attorney Julio Morales Sanchez said no arrest warrants had been issued against the protesters.

The sit-in was the latest confrontation between Vieques fishermen and the Navy, which uses the island as a base for target practice and land-assault exercises.

The island, nine miles off the coast of Puerto Rico, has about 8,000 residents.

The fishermen contend the maneuvers destroy delicate offshore reefs and endanger their livelihood.

About 100 civilians occupied a beach Saturday on the south coast of Vieques, where the Navy stages amphibious assaults. A second group set up tents along the northern coast in an area used for bombardment exercises.

A DAILY MESSAGE FROM The Newspaper Bible.

Luke 9: 46-57, The Living Bible

46 Now came an argument among them as to which of them would be greatest (in the coming Kingdom)!

47 But Jesus knew their thoughts, so He stood a little child beside Him

48 And said to them, "Anyone who takes care of a little child like this is caring for Me! And whoever cares for Me is caring for God, who sent Me. Your care for others is the measure of your greatness."

49 His disciple John came to Him and said, "Master, we saw someone using Your name to cast out demons! And we told him not to. After all, he isn't in our group."

50 But Jesus said, "You shouldn't have done that! For anyone who is not against you is for you!"

51 As the time drew near for His return to heaven, He moved steadily onward towards Jerusalem with an iron will.

52 One day He sent messengers ahead to reserve rooms for them in a Samaritan village.

53 But they were turned away! The people of the village refused to have anything to do with them because they were headed for Jerusalem!

54 When the word came back of what had happened, James and John said to Jesus, "Master, shall we order fire down from heaven to burn them up?"

55 But Jesus turned and rebuked them.

56 And they went on to another village.

57 As they were walking along, someone said to Jesus, "I will always follow You, no matter where You go."

Lubbock Greeter Service Seen Aid To Resident, Firms Alike

"Did you realize just how very much the services of Lubbock Greeter Service can work for you, benefiting you as a newcomer, as a business, as a church, other organization, etc.?"
 Lubbock would seem most fortunate in having readily available the unique services of the home-owned and home-operated Lubbock Greeter Service, phone 797-2461.
 Lubbock Greeter Service helps in a most memorable way in introduction of merchant and newcomer, making it real fun and informative to be such a newcomer.
 "No one else provides the extensive family profile information that is a part of the function of the service. This profile can be secured on a subscription basis for weekly receipt. It is a great way to become acquainted, for utilization by individual, business or church, as example."
Newcomers Benefit
 Newcomers are invited to get in touch with Lubbock Greeter Service for a valuable gift package and other aids.
 "Baby Buggy" Popular, Factual
 One of the very popular phases of the service's function is publication of the "Baby Buggy," a factual profile bi-weekly publication that prides in elimination of errors often found in reports of names, locations, etc. Lubbock Greeter Service representatives visit in excess of 100 new-baby families each month to secure and coordinate information. The Baby Buggy is available on a subscription basis.

 Welcoming newcomers to Lubbock in a most effective, practical and "remembered" way, the Lubbock Greeter Service is not a franchised operation but is "distinctively different" and for the past five years has been owned by Peggy Moody.
 Long a Lubbock resident, Peggy Moody, nee Peggy Rutherford, attended Wheelock-Parsons, Evans Junior High, then graduated from Monterey High School and in 1969 graduated from W.T.S.C. in Canyon. She knows Lubbock and are-folks, situations and preferences. At the helm of Lubbock Greeter Service, she is performing quite a service as one will discover even upon brief review of the comprehensive programs available.
 Peggy points out some of the "economic facts of the business," citing that Lubbock Greeter Service "charges 60 per cent less than some national competitors and sees 75 per cent more people," assuring that the merchant gets more for his money and that the newcomer is properly welcomed and assisted.

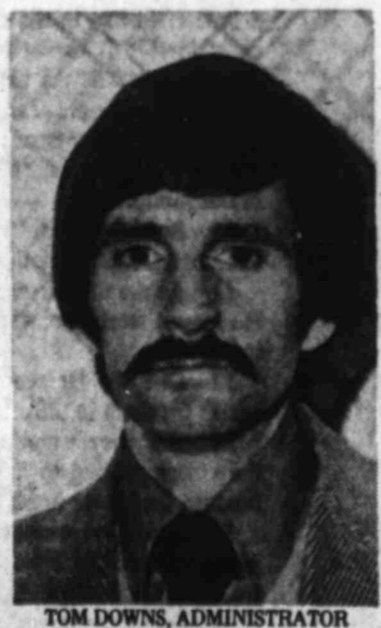

A full staff is devoted to the service concept of the program and is on the job to assure personal contact in every operation. (The Greeter Service guarantees seeing at least 70 newcomer families per month — folks from out-of-town, not just moving across the city.)
 Lubbock Greeter Service is proud to have an excellent "track record," charging the merchant only for extent of services, retaining no percentage, affording newcomers advantages of brochures representing over 100 merchants and organizations with these brochures containing coupon discounts, etc., effecting savings of some $250.
 Get full details now, Mr. Merchant, if you have not been fully informed or aware of this home-owned Lubbock Greeter Service, a one-of-its-kind operation.
 Lubbock Greeter Service is a member of the Better Business Bureau and the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce. It stands tall in informing, educating and selling the newcomer on one's business or service.
 "May we serve effectively for you, too? Call 797-2461 without delay for full information, letting us go to work for you immediately."

University Villa Now Associated With Texas Friendship Villa Organization

Recent improvements, including redecorating, are just some of the features making news at University Villa, 2400 Quaker Ave. in Lubbock.

For example, many have discovered the relatively new name . . . University Villa . . . rather than the former "University Convalescent Center."
 In-state ownership was announced last year for this prominent extended care facility, with the facility becoming associated with Friendship Villa, Inc. In fact, the same ownership holds true for Quaker Villa, also in Lubbock.
 Tom Downs is administrator at University Villa, seeing that the center is modern in every respect, with proper attention to the physical facilities and to the comfort of every resident.
 Private and semi-private rooms are provided.
 University Villa is a Type III facility, accepting both Medicaid and private pay plans.
 Accommodations are provided for 96 residents.
 Downs has gathered around him a most able staff.
 Ann Green is director of nursing, Gail Hanson is activity director, and she maintains a continuous program of interest to residents.
 Organized games and programs every day are appreciated and enjoyed, as are field trips in the Villa's own van.

Sunday church services are held within the center, with a visiting minister. Actually, church services are conducted five days every week.
 A house doctor is on call 24 hours a day.
 A pharmacy consultant, RN consultant and dietitians consultant also make their services available.
Menu Variety
 Three wholesome meals daily are provided, with variety as a "must" in the wide menu.
 Some residents have lived at University Villa for seven years and more.
 The facility traditionally has been very well accepted as a "better" unit of its type.
 In brief, everything seems to have been done to help the residents enjoy living at University Villa.
 Remember, too, that Quaker Villa, at 4403 74th St., is under the same ownership, with Sue Flanagan as the able administrator there.
 Physical facilities at each, and the qualified, interested personnel make residency at either University Villa or Quaker Villa a very pleasant experience, more than a few "who know" will verify.

Business & Industrial Review

MAKING NEWS IN FOOD SERVICES, CONVENIENCE — Southern Sea, for several years a Lubbock home-owned eating establishment of note, has opened its downtown 10th & Avenue Q facility while also continuing operation at its South Indiana site. Located near the Civic Center, on the east of Avenue Q, the new functionally-attractive building is shown at top, with owners-operators Robert and Priscilla Sims pictured (center) in a booth area. Shown at the order window, from left, is Danny Waller, catering manager; Beverly Ridener, manager trainee; and Paul Higley, store manager

Downtown Southern Sea Opens, Serving Daily In Added Home

The big, customer-oriented, thoughtfully-planned downtown Southern Sea is now serving!

That's right, the eagerly awaited opening of Southern Sea, at 10th & Q, is a reality, and it is full speed ahead for finest food, conveniences by the score, and genuine appreciation of your patronage.

The downtown Southern Sea is open from 11 a.m. until 9 p.m., seven days a week.

So many delightful innovations and services have been "built in" to the big eating establishment's operation that only a personal visit will correctly convey its consideration of "you as a valued customer."

There's seating for 220, as example, with extra-size booths for groups. And a serving concept that minimizes time in line, but with the customer welcomed to spend desired time at the booths. (Even during peak periods, it has been clocked that no one, even in a long line, need wait more than 11 minutes. What a benefit to the business community when lunch hour deadlines prevail.

And there is a distinct and most efficient carry-out department. One is invited to call ahead, to 744-1231, and the order will be ready upon the customer's arrival.

An Old Friend
 Actually, Southern Sea already has long proven its capabilities. Southern Sea was established in mid-1976 at its well-known and fully-appreciated South Loop 289-Indiana Avenue facility, still serving there but now augmented by the downtown unit for maximum convenience to all.

Comfort, Tax Advantage Among 'Insulating Windows' Benefits

"Did you realize that aluminum replacement windows, storm windows and storm doors can be custom made for your own comfort and beauty, made right here in Lubbock at Insulating Windows, Inc.?"

"And have you recognized how insulation-related installations can qualify for income tax credit?"

"Let Jim Haynes and his efficient staff at Insulating Windows, Inc., 1616 Ave. F, give full details about any aspect of their products and services... including the tax credit benefits especially appreciated at this time of year!"

Many have depended upon Haynes at Arcadia Stone, 1922 Ave. E. He now not only still provides the products and services of that business, but also operates the added Insulating Windows facility.

"For cleaner and more comfortable living," Haynes and his experienced crew can perform quite a service.

Simplifies the Job
Imagine, for example, rubber seals on the custom-made windows, with this self-sealing innovation making caulking unnecessary!

These products and services by Haynes are made possible with his purchase in mid-1978 of the window department of House Clinic.

Thoroughly Experienced
Haynes not only has the background and knowledge for superior window and door manufacture and installation, but he has constructed beautiful homes throughout the area, together with construction of fireplaces and other units with use of Arcadia Stone.

Insulating Windows, Inc., can open a whole new world in one's enjoyment of the home every day of the year... with the finest in storm windows and doors, beauty, comfort and hospitality of the home.

PRODUCT AND INSTALLATION TO SATISFY

Pigg Bros. Shamrock Jewellery Invites Selection for 'Right' Valentine Gift

"Looking for a Valentine Day gift that's really special?"

"A gift from Pigg Bros. Shamrock Jewellery, 2147 50th St., will make 'her' feel like a queen. She'll love one of our fashionable stickpins:

"Or how about a handsome gold bracelet or chain?"

"Gleaming silver, crystal and china for the home are other bright remembrance ideas.

"Don't you think you can assure this being a very special Valentine Day with a thoughtful gift from Pigg Bros. Shamrock Jewellery in Oakwood Center? We think so.

"You'll discover a gold mine of gift ideas for any 'valentine' at Pigg Bros."

The gift items there reflect the firm's traditional consideration for every age group.

For watches, rings, diamonds, pins, neck chains, bracelets and more... all in a sensible quality-price combination, one cannot go wrong at this well-known and long-respected jewelry firm.

Unusual, beautiful Gorham porcelain figurines (drummer boy, birds, etc.) with finest workmanship, are available at modest prices.

Crystal
And now there are beautiful crystal pieces, "the best" from West Germany and Bavaria.

A large selection of rings is maintained, including dinner rings, engagement rings, birthstone rings, diamond guard rings, mountings, etc.

The gift choices at Pigg Bros. Shamrock Jewellery are truly numerous... and delightful.

Diamond pendants are stocked, as are opal pendants, pearl necklaces, etc.

And musical jewel boxes in a variety of prices.

Digital Watches
There you'll find the so-popular quality digital watches, the prestigious Accutron, and more.

And remember this: gift items are not limited to adult appeal, or to timepieces for that matter, at Pigg Bros.

There is something in stock for every member of the family, for any possible recipient of an age.

There are scads of baby gifts, costume jewelry items, beautiful lockets, pens, pencils and lighters, Franciscan ware, and more!

"Have the gift engraved, if wished, and be assured your Valentine gift situation has been most satisfactorily solved."

This south Lubbock store has an established reputation for offering only quality merchandise, and highest quality workmanship in watchmaking and jewelry repair.

No gimmicks... no so-called cut-rate prices on inferior merchandise... Pigg Bros. Shamrock Jewellery simply wants your business the next time, too, and they go all out to make one completely satisfied "the very first time you come in to the store."

"Why wait... shop now at Pigg Bros. Shamrock Jewellery, in Oakwood Center.

Heavily-Stocked Rhea's Crafts Enables Pleasure, Achievement

Rhea's Crafts, at 2831 34th St., is fast becoming known as "Lubbock's macrame headquarters."

Under the new ownership and management of C.L. and Ruby Clingman, this craft shop has greatly expanded its sales floor and stock.

The macrame room features some of Lubbock's best prices on items such as the new brightly colored poly cords of various kinds and sizes, jute, rings of metal and wood and beautiful plastic, purse handles galore (of wood and plastic) and the latest in macrame "How To" books.

And beads of all sizes and shapes and colors in wood, marbella, plastic and the very elite ceramic macrame beads.

A new supply of jewelry beads and sequins has arrived, with more coming, thus the stock in this category is nearly to full stock status.

Expanded Plaster Stock
"Since last October, Rhea's has become known as the largest dealer of plaster on the South Plains. Our plaster supply is now greatly expanded, again featuring many imported items from California and South Texas.

Specials Cited
"We have a huge selection of large animals on display at a very good price, and this week's special includes a double special of the large fluffy owl, regular $15.98, now only $11.98 this week only; and the large free-standing giraffe, 43 inches tall, that sells for $52.50, on sale this week only at $39.98. These are just a few samples of our excellent prices on items throughout the store."

Rhea's continues to have a large selection of the best in cowboys, horses and western items of plaster in general. Come in and look over the new lines in this area.

Silk Flowers
"In the flower department, Rhea's features a good supply of those beautiful silk flowers from Flower Maker, Pretty Petals and So-Silk. We specialize in supplying silk flowers for all occasions including special decorations, and weddings in particular. Special orders for these items are available. Save half the cost on flowers by using silk flowers, and have a lasting memory, also!"

Layaway, Visa and Master Charge are available for one's shopping convenience.

Hours are 9 a.m. until 6 p.m., Monday through Saturdays.

Class Instruction
"For any classes in which you are interested, just come by and register, and as classes in that field are formed we will notify you of all details including time, price, supplies, instruction, etc.

"Tote painting and plaster painting classes will be starting soon, so come in, get acquainted and sign up for the classes you prefer."

"You will like the friendly, courteous service, prices and the proud feeling of 'I made it myself' achievement of the various craft lines Rhea's has to offer. And remember, the most appreciated gift is one you make yourself."

Rhea's Crafts has a free workshop always available.

Also remember Rhea's when you think of oils and related items and decoupage, as we have a large supply of plaques, boards and finishes.

Union Claims Phones Tapped

Sign Up For Independence

When young people sign up for newspaper route work, they are really signing up for independence. The kind of independence that goes with earning your own money, running your own business and dealing with people on a one-to-one basis.

Our carriers are young business men and women. They provide a vital service, handle their own finances and reap a handsome profit from their efforts. What better training to prepare them for the future?

If you are interested in stepping into the business world and declaring your own independence, contact our carrier manager right now. He'll give you all of the important facts about carrier work. Then, if you are still interested, he'll provide the pen and show you where to sign . . . even if your name is John Hancock.

NEWPORT NEWS, Va. (AP) — The Steelworkers Union, on strike against Newport News Shipbuilding, claimed Sunday that wiretaps have been placed on its telephones.

"We're positive our phones are tapped at strike headquarters, at our international offices here, at the homes of union leaders and on the phones used by union staff members," said union spokesman Bill Edwards.

Edwards said he thinks "some Navy or government official may have asked for legitimate wiretaps because of classified Navy work performed at the shipyard."

"The shipyard doesn't have to do it when they've got the Navy to do it for them," Edwards said.

Asked about Edwards' claim, an FBI spokesman, who asked not to be identified, said "he (Edwards) is entitled to his opinion."

During a telephone interview with The Associated Press, Edwards said "this conversation is being recorded if I'm correct."

He said the union began suspecting wiretaps when outgoing teletypewriter transmissions were wiped out.

Asked what other indications he had of a wiretap, Edwards said: "I don't want to reveal the methods we used to double-check" the alleged taps.

Shipyard spokesman Jim Griffith called the wiretap charge "absolutely ridiculous."

Edwards said he asked the FBI on Sunday to check the telephones but said the agency told him to get in touch with telephone company security people.

The FBI spokesman said "the telephone company will make their investigation and determine if it is tapped. If they do find a tap, they report it to us. Then we investigate it."

Edwards also said the shipyard has hired so many off-duty policemen as security guards that "you'd think the yard was expecting a foreign invasion." Griffith said the yard is taking security precautions it deems appropriate.

The strike entered its fifth day Sunday. The company says it is continuant to build ships, and that half its work force of about 22,000 is crossing picket lines.

The union claims it has 13,000 shipyard workers as members.

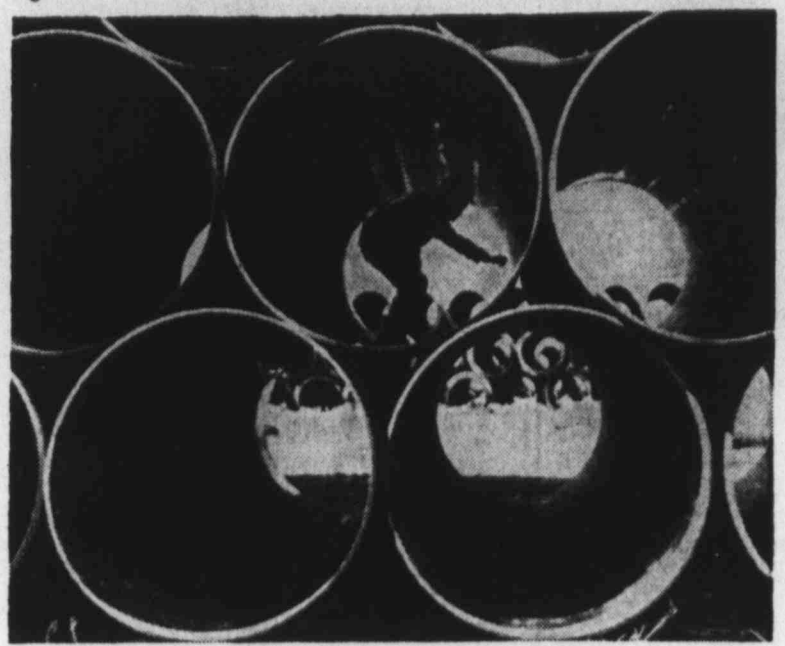

Edwards said about 5,000 office workers and supervisors who do not belong to a union are reporting for work. He said the company is saying these workers are production and maintenance workers represented by the Steelworkers.

But Griffith denied this, saying the company is not including office workers or supervisory personnel in its count.

The giant shipyard is a major Navy contractor with $2.3 billion in federal contracts or federally subsidized work pending.

It is the state's largest private employer.

PIPE PATTERNS — A workman inspects the inside of giant pipe at Belle Chasse, La., that will be used in the construction of Louisiana's Offshore Oil Port. The 56-inch diameter pipe from Japan, the largest ever delivered in the U.S., will be laid in the Gulf of Mexico this summer to carry oil from supertankers to a pumping platform. (AP Laserphoto)

Oil, Cattle Money Boost Area Bank Deposits

December bank deposits throughout the South Plains generally were up over the same period in 1977, a recent survey of 68 area banks shows.

Of the banks surveyed, 46 institutions showed gains in their Dec. 31, 1978, deposits when compared to the same period last year.

Of the 22 institutions who reported decreased deposits, the biggest drop was at the Farmers State Bank in Hart, where president Jim Werner said there was a "eight million dollar dip."

Werner explained that when Frito-Lay Inc. bought Grain Handling Co., the local food corn handling operation, the Dallas-based firm moved its money elsewhere.

He also attributed some of the decrease to the poor prices that area farmers have been receiving for corn. "Probably next year our farmers here will be planting more cotton than corn," Werner said. "It's the economics of the thing—it costs them $240 an acre to plant corn and it's about $100 an acre for cotton."

"We bought this bank five years ago, and I've seen farmers expenses go up 70 percent and prices go down by at least 30 percent. We go as the farmers go, and right now, we're on our knees," he added.

Bank presidents in Crosbyton, Brownfield, Lamesa and Abilene said they also experienced declines in deposits and blamed the weather.

"We had a late cotton crop because of the weather, and it wasn't near as good as the one we had last year," Joe Cargile, president of Crosbyton's Citizens National Bank, said. "But, in a farming area, you'll run into this; we can't control the weather."

Lloyd Cline, president of First National Bank of Lamesa, said that Dawson County normally averages about 250,000 bales of cotton in a good year but had only about 100,000 bales this year because of the dry weather.

But, on the bright side, bankers in Hereford, Plainview and Friona said deposits were up because of higher cattle prices while bankers in Midland, Leveland Big Spring reported increased deposits because of oil and gas activity.

"Although our crop prices have been poor and our crop yields have been below average, the increase in fat cattle prices has made the difference in our area," said Harlan VanderZee, president of Hereford State Bank.

Jim Sears, president of the First National Bank in Hereford, agreed that the "cattle business is in better shape."

"People are making money feeding cattle now where they were not a year ago, he added.

However, Sears pointed out that the local farm economy still has its problems. "The farm situation is not really any better than it was a year ago. At the rate things are going, we could see quite a few go under because just borrowing more money doesn't solve their problems," he said.

J. B. Wheeler, president of Hale County State Bank in Plainview, attributed his institution's increased deposits to good cattle, cotton and soybean prices. "The cattle business is better than it has been in six years," he said. "In Hale County, the only thing that hurt us was the poor price on corn and grain sorghum."

Robert Neelley, president of Friona State Bank, said the growth in their deposits is better than he had anticipated and attributed it to the higher cattle prices.

Wilbur Yeager, president of the First National Bank in Midland, reported a 64 million dollar jump in deposits, saying most of the hike was because of "a great deal of end of the year activity by my oil and gas customers."

Yeager said that the independent oil operators are getting higher prices for oil and gas and "there's also been more drilling activity." He added some of the rise is also because of a high level of construction activity in Midland.

Thad McDonnell, president of Leveland State Bank, also attributed some of the increase in his institution's deposits to construction activity in the city. However, he said increased oil activity in

Jimmy Taylor, president of the First National Bank in Big Spring, also said that the $5.5 million dollar rise in deposits at the bank was because of increased oil production and drilling in Howard County.

Egypt Builds 'Cultural' Ties With Israel

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Egypt is quietly building a "cultural bridge" with Israel despite the political impasse that has stalled peace talks between Cairo and Jerusalem.

Two Israeli artists are the latest to cross the bridge, having arrived here Friday for a one-week visit as guests of President Anwar Sadat.

Egypt began the program immediately after last September's Camp David summit, at which the Egyptians and Israelis drafted a framework for peace after 30 years of war.

Sadat, his wife, Jihan, and his aides have been inviting Israelis for a first-hand look at the Jewish state's longtime enemy. The guest list has included an archeologist, two physicians, journalists, a politician and the artists, Zamy Steynovitz and Isaac Tourel.

Officials hope the initiative will lead to a two-way cultural exchange, but so far Israel has not reciprocated.

"Art is an international language that brings people together," said Steynovitz. While here he will get Sadat's signature on a silver-and-gold silk screen painting he made in honor of last fall's Nobel Peace Prize awards to Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin.

"I hope the signatures on the piece of art will lead to signatures on a peace treaty," Steynovitz said in an interview.

Begin has already signed the work, and the artist hopes President Carter, who brought the two leaders together at Camp David, will add his signature. He plans to give each of them an original of the design.

The painting carries a verse from the Old Testament prophet Isaiah: "Nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more." It depicts an angel and a dove swooping in the sky embracing a clock without hands, its pendulum engraved with the faces of two lovers, a violin and an olive branch.

"Beauty, love and music is the composition of peace," Steynovitz explained. "When all three elements combine the guns are stilled."

The 27-year-old artist's Polish parents emigrated to Israel after spending five years in a Nazi concentration camp. He studied art in Tel Aviv and New York and has exhibited his work in galleries in New York, London, Geneva and Oslo.

While in Oslo last fall he approached a Sadat aide, who had come to pick up the Egyptian leader's share of the Nobel Prize, and asked for Sadat's signature on the painting. The invitation to Egypt followed.

He and Tourel, who owns a gallery in Israel, hope to arrange an exhibition in Cairo of Steynovitz's paintings and an exhibition of Egyptian paintings in Tel Aviv.

"It would crown our self-styled mission for peace," Tourel said. "It would set the stage for a cultural exchange between two peoples who have fought for so long and who, we feel, are now yearning for peace and understanding of each other."

More Indochinese Set For Admission To America

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thailand's prime minister, Kriangsak Chomanan, arrived Sunday for talks with President Carter amid disclosures by U.S. officials that the administration plans a significant increase in its Indochina refugee program.

The officials, speaking privately, refused to disclose the size of the projected increase. About 50,000 refugees are being allowed entry to the United States from Thailand and other countries in the area during the 12-month period ending April 30, and the officials said a substantial hike is planned thereafter.

Kriangsak was greeted by Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance as he arrived at Dulles airport on the first official visit by a Thai head of government in more than a decade.

Kriangsak and Vance then flew to Washington by helicopter.

Kriangsak, a 60-year-old retired general, is expected to discuss the refugee problem as well as the impact on Thailand of the recent Vietnamese-led conquest of Cambodia.

Both of Thailand's eastern neighbors, Laos and Cambodia, are allied with Thailand's historic enemy, Vietnam, raising fears in Bangkok about a possible increase in Hanoi's support for Thailand's communist rebel movement.

Officials said Kriangsak's view of the situation is essentially the same as that of Chinese Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-Ping, who met with Carter last week and who winds up his U.S. tour on Monday.

Kriangsak will meet with Carter on Tuesday and also plans meetings with Vance and Defense Secretary Harold Brown.

U.S. officials expect Kriangsak to ask for speedier deliveries of U.S. military equipment ordered by Thailand and to discuss the possible purchase of U.S. fighter planes and other weaponry.

Despite some opposition in the United States to acceptance of large numbers of Indochina refugees, administration officials feel they have no choice but to expand the existing program.

There are an estimated 210,000 refugees from Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos living in camps in Thailand, Malaysia, Hong Kong, and the Philippines. Many live in squalid conditions.

About two-thirds of the total number of refugees have crossed into Thailand by land from Laos and Cambodia. The United States, France, Canada and Australia have been accepting increasing numbers of refugees but officials say that for each departing refugee there are two to three new arrivals.

Six Die In Clash Of U.N. Troops, Palestinians

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Palestinian guerrillas fought a bloody battle with a unit of United Nations soldiers from Fiji because the Fijians "executed" one of their guerrilla comrades, a radical Palestinian group said Sunday.

Two Fijian soldiers were killed and four Norwegian soldiers died in a helicopter crash as they tried to rescue two other Fijians who were wounded in the southern Lebanon clash Saturday, U.N. officials reported.

The Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine said one of its fighters was killed and six others were wounded in the gun battle, which reportedly occurred near Qana, five miles southeast of Tyre. The six deaths represented the highest single casualty toll yet suffered by the 5,000-man U.N. Interim Force in Lebanon since it arrived last spring after an Israeli invasion aimed at wiping out Palestinian bases near the Israeli border.

A statement by the PFLP, a Marxist group, said one of its fighters was kidnapped by the Fijians, taken to their headquarters in Qana and "executed at the entrance of the Qana barracks."

The statement said PFLP men and Lebanese allies went to try to secure the guerrilla's release when the Fijians opened fire, "so we were forced to shoot back."

The helicopter, carrying two crewmen and two medical officers, was about to land at Qana to evacuate a Fijian wounded when it crashed, instantly killing all aboard, a Norwegian official here reported. He said an investigation into the crash has begun, but initial reports indicate the American-made Huey chopper either had a technical malfunction or hit a telephone line.

A U.N. official in Beirut said he had no information to verify the claim that Fijians executed a guerrilla. There was no confirmation of the Palestinians' account of the clash.

Carew Pleased With Trade

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — In 1967, Rod Carew reported to the Minnesota Twins as a skinny, scared kid from New York. Now, 12 years, seven batting titles and one trade later, the superstar first baseman recalls his up-and-down career with the Twins and his future with California.

"It'll be really hard to leave this area," says Carew, who was dealt to the Angels for four players and an estimated $200,000 in cash Saturday.

"I've spent 12 years here and my whole career in this organization. I love the Minnesota fans, but I'm convinced that he (Twins' owner Calvin Griffith) will never have a winning team here.

"I feel that California has the players to win the pennant. I've always liked the Anaheim ball park and have hit well there."

After Carew won his sixth American League batting championship — with a magnificent .388 average in 1977 — Griffith rewarded him with a $100,000 bonus.

But the two men could never get together on a contract extension and when the New York Yankees backed out of a nearly-completed trade, the Twins were forced to swap Carew to California or risk losing him in the free agent draft.

The opportunity for Carew to join a team with definite playoff potential is what excites the Panama-born slugger, not the chance to play in Golden California or busting Broadway.

"I'd sure like to play in a World Series before it's all over for me," said the 1977 American League's Most Valuable Player. "I'd like to get one of those World Series rings."

Carew, who keeps himself in superb physical shape, says he will play at least another five years.

"There's no reason I can't go another five years at top efficiency, maybe more," he said. "I take good care of myself."

Carew, with 2,085 hits, trails only Pete Rose, Lou Brock, Carl Yastrzemski and Rusty Staub among active players. Although he refuses to put extra pressure on himself with predictions, he is confident that his future in California includes the 3,000-hit milestone.

"I don't really set goals, but I think I can make the 3,000-hit club in another five years," he said. As for comparisons with Ty Cobb, who collected 4,191 hits, Carew can only speculate.

"Maybe if I had played in Cobb's day, or he had played in mine, I might have out-hit him. Conditions are different."

Only Cobb, with 12 batting championships, and Honus Wagner, with eight, have won more hitting titles than Carew, who remembers his first in 1969 well.

"The first one was tough in '69 because I was in the Marine reserves and I was missing a weekend a month," he recalled. "You lose your timing and it's a struggle to get it back. I always wanted to lead the league in hitting and that proved that I could hit .300 after just two years in the league."

After four straight titles from 1972-1975, Carew lost out by a single point to George Brett in 1976.

"In 1977 I told Brett it wouldn't be close," Carew said with a smile. "George said, 'We'll see about that.'"

Carew hit .388 in 1977; Brett, .312. Carew's future took a slight dip in 1970, however. With his batting average at a lofty .366, he was taken out on a double play attempt by Milwaukee's Mike Hegan and missed the rest of the year due to knee surgery.

He bounced back in 1971 to hit .307, but concedes that he was gunshy around the bag.

"I admit I was timid on the double play because I didn't want to get racked up again," he explained. "I was trying to protect my knee on every bang-bang play with the runner around second base."

This led to tiffs with then-manager Bill Rigney, who during one game railed at Carew after a messed-up double play.

"When I came to the dugout after botching a double play, Rigney hollered at me, 'If you can't make the double play, get out.' He showed me up in front of the whole ballclub. I never felt lower."

Rigney is now a member of the Angels front office staff.

Carew spent four more years as a pivot man, but then shifted to first base, a spot he's grown to love.

"Moving from second to first wasn't as difficult as I thought it might be," he said. "Craig Kusick helped me. I like first base now and still want to win a Gold Glove for fielding excellence at that position."

Peace of mind should help. After years of haggling with the tight-fisted Griffith, he has received financial security from California.

"I had to fight for every buck I got from the Twins," Carew said. "The Angels agreed to terms in 15 minutes."

Hinkle Wins Crosby, Needs Dramatic Playoff

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Lon Hinkle squandered a five-stroke lead, shot a discouraging 77 and then — with his only birdie of the day — won the Bing Crosby National Pro-Am Golf Tournament Sunday in a three-way sudden death playoff against Mark Hayes and Andy Bean.

Hinkle's birdie came on the third extra hole, the spectacularly beautiful 17th at Pebble Beach, a par-3 jutting into the swirling surf of Carmel Bay. He scored from about 10-12 feet and apparently was too exhausted, physically and mentally, to show any emotion.

Hinkle, perhaps the biggest hitter in the game, missed a chance to nail it down on the previous hole. He missed a putt for the winning birdie from about 4-5 feet.

But that was typical of the frustrations that plagued all three men who made it into the playoff — a playoff that was blacked out on television to half the country.

CBS went to regular programming in the Eastern and Central time zones while the playoff was in progress. Highlights were to be shown later in the evening.

Network officials were not available for comment.

Hinkle once fell three shots behind but regained a share of the lead without benefit of a birdie. Bean had a closing 69 — once making up four strokes on the leader in a 90-second span — and Hayes had a par-72 despite a horrendous triple-bogey seven on the 15th.

He hooked his second shot into a bunker, hit a creditable sand shot and then, incredibly, four-putted from six feet. His third putt was longer than his first.

That's the hole that cost him the tournament. He coaxed in a short birdie putt on the 18th hole to gain a tie with Hinkle and Bean at 284, four under par.

The victory, only his second as a pro, was worth $54,000 from the total purse of $300,000. Bean and Hayes each collected $26,400.

"I didn't miss any short putts until the 15th, and then it caught up with me in a grand way," Hayes said. "I guess I just lost my composure."

"I knew I was going to have trouble making that (first) putt. And I did."

Those four putts cost him sole control of the lead and dropped him back into a tie with Hinkle. Seconds later Bean, playing ahead of him, birdied the 17th from about 15-18 feet and it was a three-man tie. Bean had made up four strokes on Hayes in 90 seconds.

Admittedly shaken, Hayes three-putted for bogey on the next hole then regained a tie for the top with a shaky four-footer on the final hole, the ball catching the left lip of the cup and making one complete circuit before dropping in.

That set up the playoff. The first hole went to routine pars by all three men, though Bean had to make a tough second putt.

Bean bogeyed the next hole, from a bunker, and dropped out. Hayes two-putted from a great distance and they went to the third hole when Hinkle's short birdie attempt failed to drop. He won on the next with the 10-footer.

"That was hard work. I was sweating blood," he said.

Hinkle started the mild, sunny day with a five-stroke lead over Hayes with Bean eight shots back. Hinkle snatched his second shot out of bounds on the first hole, had to work hard for a bogey, then bogeyed three in a row beginning on the sixth.

"I wasn't trying to play it safe. It just kind of dribbled away," said Hinkle. Hayes had a share of the lead at the turn, birdied the next two and once, briefly, had a three-shot lead before blowing it on the 15th green.

Early Workouts Set For Tech Gridders

Texas Tech football players will begin one of the earliest spring training sessions in recent years when the Raiders start practice on March 9 and work through the annual Red-White game April 14.

"We felt it would be to our advantage to get an early start on spring training because we have so many young people," said Dockery. "The earlier we are able to start the more carry-over from the season we should have and that could help us as far as getting as much as possible accomplished."

The Raiders are scheduled to have seven practices prior to spring break (March 12-25) and then resume with 13 practices after the break.

Tech will return eight offensive and nine defensive starters from last fall's 7-4 team. The Raiders will open the 1979 season in Lubbock on Sept. 8 against Southern California.

LCCHS Continues To Win

By CHUCK McDONALD
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Way back before the season started Lubbock Christian High School coach Gary Bowe had an inkling that this year's team at LCCHS was going to be special.

He was right, the Eagles are coming off a Christian schools tournament victory over the weekend and, with a 25-4 record, he is awaiting an invitation to compete in the Texas Association Of Private Schools (TAPS) state tournament in Abilene. And Bowe knows exactly why his team continues to roll along.

"We are a team," he says. "That's the main reason we keep winning. We don't have any individual star."

In fact the Eagles may have at least three stars. At the Christian tourney held in Abilene Shawn Williams, Shawn Bowe and Tim Perrin were all named to the all-tournament team. LCCHS won the affair with a 60-55 win over Abilene Christian, a 74-54 romp past Dallas Christian and a gritty 58-53 decision against Fort Worth Christian.

And for other private schools in the state there is some bad news—all of the LCCHS starters are juniors. The other starters are Billy McConnell and either Steve Sikes or Tod Towns.

"All of our starters this year had played on the varsity when they were sophomores," said Bowe. "They didn't start but they were all pretty experienced, so I knew we would be able to compete."

But before the Eagles can get a chance to compete in the TAPS tourney, they've got a little affair with Christ The King—and the Trojans aren't to bad themselves.

Both CTK squads had big victories in their bi-district matches over the weekend and will play in the catholic schools state tournament next weekend. The LCCHS-CTK contests take place on Tuesday, Feb. 6, at the LCC gym. The girls game gets underway at 6:30 p.m. and the boys start at around eight.

The game may not mean much as far as advancing in the different tourneys but there is a lot on the line. You might say that the winner gets the bragging rights between Lubbock's private schools for a year.

"We've played them for about ten years," said Bowe. "It's quite a rivalry—we've got a traveling trophy that goes to the winners to keep for the year. It's always a good game."

MVP ACTION—David Thompson of the West team drives on Julius Erving of the East during action in the 29th NBA All-Star game in the Pontiac Silverdome. The west won the game 134-129 and Thompson was voted the most valuable player in the contest. (AP Laserphoto).

Thompson Keys All-Star Win

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Dazzling David Thompson of the Denver Nuggets scored 25 points as the West raced to a 23-point lead and held on to defeat the East 134-129 Sunday in the 29th annual National Basketball Association All-Star Game.

Thompson scored 14 of his points in the first half as the West built an 80-58 lead. Then, after the East had pulled within five points early in the final period, Thompson scored four baskets in the last five minutes, clinching the victory.

Thompson was voted the most valuable player of the game by sports writers and broadcasters.

Like most NBA All-Star Games, it was a frantic affair featuring spectacular dunks and free-wheeling offenses. And the record crowd of 31,745 — including about 3,000 no-shows — at the Silverdome loved it, roaring its approval as each player displayed his best playground moves.

The announced attendance far exceeded the All-Star record of 18,432 set in 1968 at New York's Madison Square Garden.

Paul Westphal of Phoenix, Thompson's backcourt mate, added 17 points, 13 of them in the first half.

fan balloting for All-Star berths, added 26.

The West did tie a pair of records, with 19 field goals in the second quarter and 35 in the first half. Both marks had been set in 1962, when the West outscored the East 150-130.

But suddenly, midway through the third quarter, the West shooters lost their touch and the East gunners found the range.

With the West leading 91-68 with 6:50 remaining, Erving and Rudy Tomjanovich hit eight points each as the East outscored the West 30-13 the rest of the period, cutting the deficit to 104-98 going into the final 12 minutes.

Erving had 14 points in the third quarter as the East outscored the West 40-24, making 16 of 27 shots to climb back into contention.

A tip-in by East center Moses Malone made it 105-100 48 seconds into the final period, but that was as close as the home team could get. A short jumper by Birdsong, a tip-in by Lucas, a basket by Walter Davis and a jumper by Jack Sikma stretched the lead to 113-100 with 8:20 left to play.

The East could come no closer than the final five-point margin after that as Thompson kept the West safely ahead in the closing minutes.

Despite the loss, the East still leads 18-11 in the All-Star series.

Local favorite Bob Lanier, the burly center of the Detroit Pistons who was a last-minute replacement for injured Doug Collins of Philadelphia, scored 10 points for the East.

George McGinnis of Denver and Artis Gilmore of Chicago also scored 17 points each for the West, which had eight players in double figures. Seattle's Dennis Johnson scored 12, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar of Los Angeles had 11, and Marques Johnson of Milwaukee and Maurice Lucas of Portland got 10 each.

Thompson and Westphal dominated the early going. Westphal getting seven points in the first five minutes and Thompson scoring five straight West points, giving their team a 22-15 lead after seven minutes of play.

Otis Birdsong, the second-year guard from the Kansas City Kings, stole the ball from Pete Maravich in the closing seconds of the opening period and drove in for a layup, giving the West a 36-27 lead at the end of the quarter.

SWC Action Getting Bitter

By MIKE RABUN
UPI Sports Writer

The past few days have not exactly been Love Thy Neighbor Week in the Southwest Conference.

But in between the pushing and shoving in Austin and the bickering among the players in Fort Worth, the league has come up with quite a race — one that has a chance to wind up in a three-way tie.

Texas, Texas A&M and Arkansas are battling for the top spot and there is a critical meeting set for Tuesday night in Fayetteville between the Razorbacks and Aggies.

It was the action taking place outside the prescribed 40 minutes of playing time, however, that made last week an out-of-the-ordinary one.

First, there was the near wrestling match between Texas coach Abe Lemons and Arkansas coach Eddie Sutton in Austin during the halftime of their game

Thursday night. Sutton sniped at Texas guard John Moore for trying to draw a charging foul. Lemons retaliated in kind and it took security people to separate them.

Then, two days after TCU had won its first league game of the year, several players were quoted in newspaper reports as saying they would leave the team next year because of the type of coaching job being done by Tim Somerville.

There were racial overtones to some of the statements — players saying one set of standards were set for blacks and another for whites.

"I feel we were unfairly singled out," said Somerville, in his second year as TCU coach. "You could go to any school in America and write the same thing."

Somerville met with the team Saturday afternoon and whether the unrest has been calmed is not yet clear. But what is obvious is that TCU — for years one of the league's weakest teams — played its best week of basketball this season.

Not only did the Horned Frogs stun Houston on Wednesday night, 77-71, but they played a good game Saturday night against 11th-ranked Texas, trailing by only five with four minutes to play before the Longhorns went on a late-game dash.

"This adversity is pulling our team together," said Somerville afterwards. "It can only work to our advantage. This is the best my team has played this year."

Lemons, who had been through some controversy himself earlier in the week, was just happy to get away from TCU's Daniel Meyer Coliseum with a 73-60 win.

"What more could a man do with a team?" Lemons asked, referring to Somerville. "We had five seniors in at one time and they had four freshmen and they played right with us."

"If that team is mad at the coach, I'd like mine to get mad at me."

Meanwhile, back on the basketball court, Texas and Texas A&M enter the week with 9-2 league records and Arkansas is at 7-3. Texas' sprint for the championship was at least slowed last week by Arkansas' 68-58 win over the Longhorns in the game that produced the ill feelings between Lemons and Sutton.

It was the first loss ever for the Longhorns in their 2-year-old arena.

The Razorbacks followed that up with a 60-50 conquest of Rice in Houston Saturday night.

The upcoming week will be a key one for Texas A&M. Not only must the Aggies visit Arkansas Tuesday night, but they have to go to Lubbock Saturday night to play the streaking Texas Tech Red Raiders, who have moved into fourth place with a 7-4 record and three straight wins.

And the showdown between Texas and Texas A&M looms a week from Monday in College Station.

If Arkansas should defeat A&M in Fayetteville, the Aggies knock off Texas in College Station and the three front runners win the rest of their games, the SWC race would finish in a three-way dead-lock.

Unlikely Combo Takes Daytona

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The unlikely combination of Danny Ongais, Hurley Haywood and Ted Field teamed to guide a hastily constructed 1979 twin turbo Porsche 935 to an overpowering victory Sunday in the 18th annual 24 Hours of Daytona endurance race.

Haywood, a steady, precise endurance racing veteran at 31, joined former teammate Peter Gregg as a four-time winner of the event.

The 26-year-old Field, a multimillionaire gentleman-racer connected with the Marshall Field empire, gave the honor of driving his jet black machine to the checkered flag to Ongais, who crossed the line at 4:25 p.m. EST after 2,626 miles of racing. Its average speed of 109.249 mph was an event record by .046 second.

The car's only problem came 12 minutes from the end when it smoked to a stop, just short of the start-finish line, but by then, its lead was unassailable. Ongais coaxed it the final 100 yards as the flag was waved.

Ongais said there was no major problem.

The victors had a whopping 192-mile edge over runners-up John Morton and Tony Adamowicz, who drove an aging but reliable 1973 model Ferrari Daytona. Officials estimated the car has completed in and completed at least nine 24-hour races.

In third, 35 miles behind the Ferrari was a 1978 model Porsche turbo co-driven by Bruce Canepa, Monte Shelton and Rick Mears, the 1978 Indianapolis 500 rookie of the year.

In the 23rd hour, the Porsche Turbo of Bill Whittington, Don Whittington and Juergen Barth roared back into fourth place after mechanical problems that forced them to change seven turbochargers during the race.

Two fragile-sounding Mazda RX-7s were a surprising fifth and sixth in their endurance racing debut.

Field, starting eighth in the 68-car grid, conservatively ran in the top 10 through the first hours of the competition, while most of the faster qualifiers burned themselves out. In the three years Field and Ongais, 36, have been together it has usually been the other way around; Ongais has set a blazing early pace only to break down early.

Canyon Making Noise In 1-AAA Cage Race

By BOB BAJACKSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Don't expect the starters on the Canyon boys basketball team to be very boisterous while setting up an offensive play. That's because the Eagle cagers are still having trouble remembering each other's names.

Canyon coach B.B. Kendrick suspended two players because "they broke a couple of rules," and a respiratory infection has kept a third regular out of the lineup.

But despite its problems, Canyon is making a loud noise in the second half of the 1-AAA basketball race.

After failing to record a victory during first half play, the Eagles haven't lost in two outings during second half action.

"Our kids have pulled together," replied Kendrick. "During the first half, we either were in or dominated most of the games for the three quarters. What would happen is that we would lose the games in the final couple of minutes or final seconds."

So, what has Canyon been doing in the second half that's been giving the Eagles the edge?

"Our rebounding and defense has been carrying us in the second half," said the Canyon coach.

Kendrick then used first opponent Dumas as an example.

"We beat Dumas on the boards 32-14," said the Eagle mentor. "And though I don't have the statistics in front of me now, we also won the rebounding battle with Berger Friday night."

Postman Russell Parker (6-7, Sr.) has been the dominating force on the boards. Parkers has been averaging 12 rebounds per contest.

The rest of the Eagles' revamped starting lineup includes Larry Whitson (5-11, Sr.) and Mike Sluder (5-9, Jr.) at the guard positions, with Bill Gruhikley (6-3, Jr.) and David Harbin (6-2, Soph.) at the forward spots. Harbin has been substituting for Gary Geil (6-5, Sr.), who has missed the last two games with a respiratory problem.

"On defense, we've mostly been relying on a 1-2-2 defense," said Kendrick. "We've used box and one some, but we've mostly relied on the 1-2-2."

The Eagles 1-2-2 zone has bothered Dumas and Berger.

Canyon held Dumas to 37 points and Berger to 48.

"One of our big problems is that we're not much of a scoring team since having to suspend our two best shooters," replied Kendrick. "Right now, Whitson is carrying our scoring load."

Against Dumas, Canyon was only able to put 42 points on the board, while the Eagles scored 56 points in the Berger tilt.

Kendrick said that the Eagles offense is determined by wh at the other team gives Canyon.

"Whitson shoots from 18-20 feet pretty well," replied Kendrick. "So, if that shot is open, we want him to take it. But if the 18-20-footer is open and Gruhikley has the ball, we don't want him to shoot. His range is 12-13 feet or closer."

Asked about the remainder of the district race, Kendrick said, "It definitely looks like there is going to be a play off in 1-AAA for the first time in the history of the district. Any team can beat anybody."

One factor that should hamper the Eagles down the stretch is a lack of depth.

"Oh, most definitely that is going to be a factor," said the Eagle mentor. "Right now, we have to be very careful of depth and injuries. We had eight people on our roster. But now, after suspending two, we are only carrying a six-man squad."

At least a six-man squad doesn't have to worry about remembering a lot of names.

Arnwine Pleased With Ponies

Basketball coaches claim that in order to win a cage championship, a team has to be able to win the close games. Well, this past week, the Coronado Mustangs were able to live up to the challenge.

This week, the Mustangs edged the Hereford Whitefaces 67-61 in double overtime to run their record to 2-0 in the 4-AAAA second half race.

"Actually, there was only one point in the game that we were really in trouble," said Coronado coach Barry Arnwine. "That was in the fourth quarter when Sam Law (senior guard) fouled out and we didn't have anybody to handle the ball."

Hereford was able to hit five free throws in the final quarter to send the contest into overtime.

However, in the second overtime, Coronado guard Scott Williams proved to be the ice man as he sank six of the Mustangs 10 points to seal the victory. Williams accumulated four points at the free throw line.

The victory raised Coronado's second half district mark to 3-0. Overall, the Mustangs are 16-9.

"When we played Hereford the first time we only won by two points," said Arnwine. "I really don't know why every body is so concerned about the point spread. We're playing reasonably well. It's winning or losing that counts."

Coronado has an open date Tuesday night. The Mustangs will return to action Friday against Plainview.

The first time the Mustangs faced the Bulldogs, Coronado won 58-44. This time the two teams will meet in Plainview.

Plainview used a 1-2-2 zone the first time the Mustangs played the Bulldogs. Arnwine feels that the Bulldogs zone didn't give his team too many problems.

If Coronado is able to defeat Plainview, then the Mustangs could be back in a showdown situation with Monterey for the second half crown.

"Right now, nothing is on our minds but Plainview," said Arnwine. "But we would like to be involved in a similar situation with Monterey that we were a when played the first time."

Bill Moyers Returns To TV With PBS News Program

NEW YORK (AP) — "So many ideas, so many people who ought to be heard," says Bill Moyers, a man convinced that television can support a good deal more news and public affairs than is now offered.

So isn't it frustrating that one man can do so little?

"It's crushing," says Moyers, editor-in-chief and host of "Bill Moyers' Journal," back on public television Monday night after a two-year hiatus.

"What I want to do is own a news network," Moyers says. "When I was at CBS, I told them, 'Give us half-an-hour a week to report on what's going on in America. I'm sure we'll have an audience, make a profit and develop a feel for what people are thinking.'"

Moyers' return after two years as editor and chief correspondent for "CBS Reports" is a high point of the current public TV season.

Press secretary to the late President Lyndon B. Johnson and later publisher of Newsday, a Long Island newspaper, Moyers produced and was host for "Billy Moyers' Journal" for five years before joining CBS News in 1976.

Early last year, he announced he would return to public television because, he said at the time, "I don't get either the satisfaction or impact I want from television through irregularly scheduled broadcasts, no matter how good each one may be."

The Public Broadcasting Service has scheduled "Bill Moyers' Journal" for a run of 26 weekly programs, the first edition, "Harvest," to be broadcast at 8 p.m. CST Monday on many stations. Air date and time for PBS programs vary, so check local listings.

BILL MOYERS

"Harvest" is the story of George and Hansine Fisher, former social workers from New York now struggling to make a living on a family farm in Kenmare, N.D.

Moyers says he first heard of the Fishers at a dinner party around Labor Day, and was intrigued by the image of this couple about to bring in their first harvest — and deliver their first child.

"I don't pretend for a moment that 'Harvest' is the whole story of farming or the Fishers," says Moyers. "It's my idea of farm life and their life."

If that comment says a great deal about Moyers and his approach, "Harvest" and editions of "Bill Moyers' Journal" to follow make an equally impressive statement on contemporary television.

"I believe television generally is ignoring what is fundamental in our society, what people are doing and how public policy affects what they are doing," says Moyers, cautious in his criticism of the medium.

"Television didn't cause this divorce of the individual from political life," he says, "but it certainly has massaged it, by offering an unrealistic image of what life really is, by its failure to respect that real life is not only more interesting but more commonly shared by the people."

"There are two great traditions on which television is built, or should be built," Moyers says. "One is vaudeville, that respects the need for each of us to laugh, cry, applaud, a tradition as old as the bard, the storyteller, the circus performer, the traveling minstrel.

"But there's another tradition, a literary tradition, a tradition of the mind and the spirit, the debate, the short story, the novel, all of those efforts of people to converse with life."

"That's what television has ignored," Moyers says. "It's a failure in not treating people as individuals, treating them as consumers rather than as citizens."

"Bill Moyers' Journal" is, to be sure, a step toward resolving that condition. The series continues Feb. 12 with "Carter and Country," Feb. 19 with "Man at Large: Poet Robert Bly," and Feb. 26, with "Going Under: Wallace LaBaw," on the Denver psychiatrist who teaches self-hypnosis to relieve pain.

Controversial Themes Spice Avant-Garde Polish Cinema

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — A daring frankness is winning new acclaim for the Polish cinema, already the most avant-garde film industry in the Soviet bloc.

Movies dealing with divorce, alcoholism, crime and political unrest in the Communist society are becoming staples of the state-owned industry, which produces about 30 feature-length films a year.

Nudity is so commonplace in Polish film that sometimes a quarter of the movie is snipped off by censors in versions shown in the more puritanical Soviet Union, sources in Warsaw report.

Some Western critics say the eye-opening realism heralds the Polish cinema's "second wave" after a spate in recent years of historical costume-dramas and World War II resistance epics.

"New wave" Polish films of the early 1960s succeeded in breaking away from the party line in such works as Roman Polanski's study of marital tensions, "The Knife in the Water."

Polanski, a Frenchman of Polish descent, is a graduate of the Polish film academy in Lodz, as are all the leaders of the latest trend toward provocative realism.

Andrzej Wajda, perhaps the country's most renowned director, caused a sensation at home and abroad with two recent films dealing with abuses of power and social problems in Poland.

"The Man of Marble" is a shocking account of a Polish bricklayer who becomes a worker-hero, only to have life ruined in the Communist Party purges of the 1950s. After playing to capacity crowds in Warsaw, the film was exported to Western Europe and won the critics' prize at the 1978 Cannes Film Festival.

Wajda's latest film, "Without Anesthesia," tells the story of a Polish television commentator who is overwhelmed by personal and professional disaster.

"I want to make films that show the reality of life in Poland... films about truth, about necessity, rather than illusions," Wajda explained at a news conference in Warsaw.

Wajda's latest films have yet to be shown in the United States, but Polish movies are widely shown in cinemas and on TV in Western Europe, and some have reached North America.

The Poles, who are big importers of films from the West, are eager to export their films to earn hard currency.

"It seems that some audiences expect us not to tell the truth — and not only in films made in Poland," the 53-year-old director told foreign journalists at a special showing of "Without Anesthesia."

The plot centers around Jerzy Michalowski, a famous TV commentator, who returns from a reporting trip abroad to find his wife of 15 years has deserted him.

He is dismayed to learn that his wife's young lover is one of his bitterest rivals at the state-run television network.

Michalowski enjoys wide public popularity for his outspoken comments about political affairs. But his rivals manage to sabotage his career by convincing the network bosses that his remarks are "nonconformist" and dangerous for the system.

Wajda said "Without Anesthesia" is concerned among other things with di-voice and the liberation of women in male-dominated Poland:

"Here we have a case of a woman leaving her husband, where traditionally it has been the other way around. In this case, a man is abandoned by the woman and transformed into a woman. His feelings become softer as he tries to win her back."

Wajda said he will make other provocative films when he finds good enough scripts. His production team includes some of the country's most brilliant young script writers and veteran actors who are free to improvise on the set.

"I agree we haven't touched too many fields of our life," he said. "For example, I would like to make a film about street cleaners to show they aren't as common as everybody thinks."

Firm Lends Orchestras' Scores

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — When conductors of 3,000 American orchestras and hundreds more abroad need music scores, they turn to what may be the world's largest lender of music — the Edwin A. Fleisher Collection.

And to make things simpler, a new directory of the 13,000-work collection — A Cumulative Catalog, 1929-1977 — has just been published. It includes the 5,000 works obtained since publication of the collection's second catalog in 1945.

The collection was established at the Free Library of Philadelphia in 1929 with Fleisher's contribution of 4,000 works, each with a score and complete set of parts.

The late Philadelphia philanthropist began collecting the music in 1909 for the Symphony Club, a local amateur orchestra that he founded and patronized. Fleisher also left a sizable trust for maintenance of the collection.

"By using the catalog, orchestras of any size, anywhere in the world, may select a score, and borrow it for a nominal handling fee," the collection's curator and catalog editor, Sam Dennison, said in a recent interview.

The fee is $10 plus postage, a bargain compared to rental fees. Dennison noted that rental of scores and parts for Gustav Mahler's Second Symphony would amount to about $99 for each performance.

"In that sense, Fleisher plays an active role in sustaining hundreds of orchestras in the United States and around the world," Dennison said.

The collection not only makes music available to orchestras plagued by limited budgets, it provides scores for some pieces available nowhere else.

"The Amy Beach Concerto, recently rediscovered, is to be found only in the Fleisher collection, as is the little-known Victor Herbert cello Concerto No. 1," Dennison said.

The new $75 catalog was compiled and edited over the last five years by researchers headed by Dennison. Work on the 1,000-page volume was funded in part with a Ford Foundation grant. It is published by G.K. Hall & Co. of Boston.

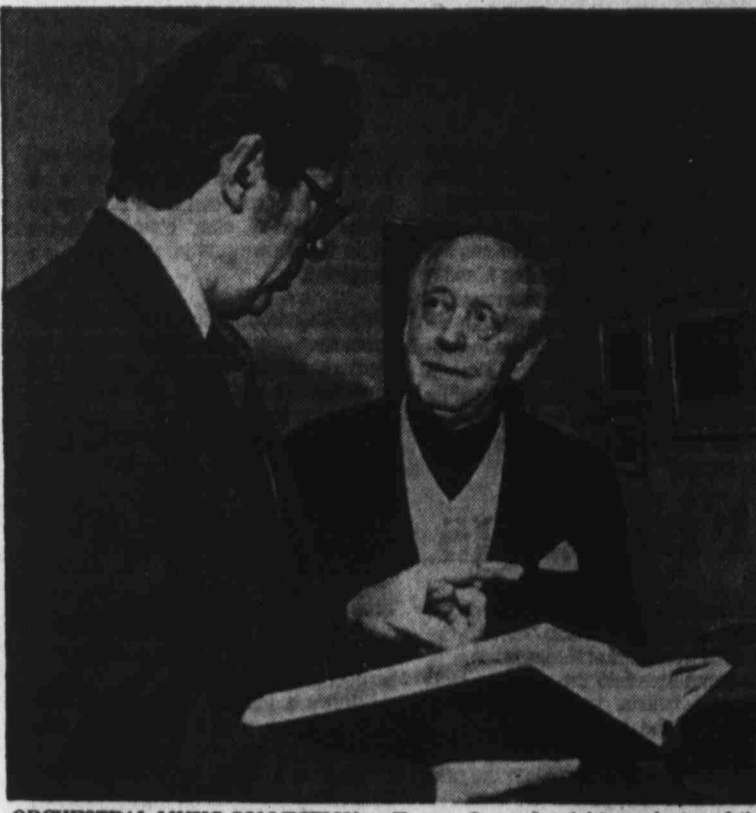

The catalog lists composers, titles in the original language and English, publishers, instruments covered in the scores, number of players required, approximate length of each piece, composition dates, and, in the case of concertos, solo instruments.

It also includes a subject index that classifies music by type and indicates the accompanying mediums for various solo instruments.

In addition to the more familiar classical European composers, the Fleisher Collection offers music from the United States' Colonial, Federal, Victorian and modern periods, composed by blacks and whites, as well as long-neglected pieces by the nation's women composers.

The collection has been culled by the Society for the Preservation of the American Musical Heritage for much of its recorded series, and its extensive South American section was utilized by the State Department in the 1930s for short-wave broadcasts to that continent.

The collection also has a file of tape and disc recordings.

Daughter Of Russian General Wants To Join Husband In U.S.

MOSCOW (UPI) — It's not often the daughter of a three-star Soviet general wants to emigrate to the United States.

Tatiana Lozansky — Tanya to her friends — freely admits that she has wanted for nothing, materially, throughout the 26 years of her life.

As a child she remembers her family using her father's military staff car, a rare privilege in the Soviet Union of the 1950s.

And now she has an apparently bright future in this country as a talented graduate research chemist.

She lives in a quiet residential district of the Soviet capital in a spacious two-room apartment, comfortably furnished, for which she pays a monthly rent of 15 rubles ($23).

She says she loves her country. But her husband, Edward Lozansky, father of her 7-year-old daughter, who is also called Tanya, emigrated just over two years ago and now lives in Brighton, N.Y. Lozansky, who is Jewish, teaches nuclear physics and does research at Rochester University.

"There were always plenty of professors and senior researchers who wanted Edward on their staff," says Tanya, who is Russian.

"But he found he could never penetrate the upper echelons because he is Jewish."

His ambitions frustrated, Edward bit the bullet and applied to emigrate to Israel to start a new life.

The couple decided that he should go first, make his way to the United States and set things up for his wife and daughter to join him.

That's when the first problem came up. "They told him that, since the Soviet Union has no diplomatic relations with Israel, he could not retain a legal wife in this country," Tanya said. "They said we had to get divorced."

"Since that seemed to be the only way out, we decided to do it. We could not believe that anyone could prevent a wife and child from joining their man."

And so the Lozanskys, agreeing that this was just a legal formality and would not affect their love for one another, were divorced in a Moscow court and Edward left on a train for Vienna with 100 rubles ($150) in his pocket in December 1976.

The reason the authorities won't let her emigrate now is not because she is not legally married to Lozansky, but, quite simply, that her parents won't agree to it.

Soviet law requires parental consent before you can emigrate.

And in Tanya's case, the parent involved is Gen. Ivan Dmitrievich Yershov, a former chief of staff in the Kiev Military District.

The general's present job and even his telephone number are classified information and Tanya won't discuss it.

"He is a strict party man and a convinced Communist," she says. "I don't think he'll ever agree to let me go."

But that doesn't mean that Tanya isn't fighting.

Since her application was first refused without explanation last October, seven months after she submitted it, she has written two letters to Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev (both unanswered) and one to U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus Vance.

Edward, 36, has been busy at his end, too, writing such personalities as Muhammad Ali, Dr. Benjamin Spock, Kurt Vonnegut, Joan Baez and Jane Fonda, as well as keeping after the State Department, the U.S. Congress and the Soviet embassy in Washington.

In the meantime, Tanya writes her husband regularly and Edward calls her once a week, paying $150 a week on telephone bills.

Although Tanya says she has virtually no relations with her parents now, her daughter spends most of the time with them because their house is next door to the school she attends and because Tanya gets home late from the research labs of the Zelinsky Institute of Organic Chemistry, where she is working on her doctorate.

"My parents tell her that she has no daddy, that her daddy has gone for good, that she'll never see him again," Tanya said. "Now little Tanya wants to know why the Americans haven't killed her daddy because she thinks only fascists live in the United States."

Tanya says the experiences of the past two years have been quite a revelation for a poor little rich girl.

"Now, to be honest, I believe that the highly placed people in this country don't give a damn about us," she said. "I didn't think that before. I used to think that life was beautiful."

NO TAX CUT THIS YEAR
WASHINGTON (AP) — A general tax cut is "out of the picture" for this year, the chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee said Sunday in an interview with U.S. News & World Report magazine. Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., added, however, that there may be a "restructuring" of the system, possibly including passage of a value-added tax, which is assessed on increases in the value of a product. Ullman said a value-added tax is not as regressive as some critics feel and that it would not be inflationary if it were used to offset other taxes, such as Social Security, payroll or corporate taxes.

Solons Question Legality Of Wage-Price Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two key elements of President Carter's anti-inflation program face a trying week in Congress as one House panel continues to ponder wage insurance and another questions the legality of the wage-and-price guidelines.

The House Ways and Means Committee ends six days of hearings Monday on the president's novel plan to use tax credits to give inflation insurance to workers who abide by his 7 percent wage guidelines.

"What support the administration has is soft and what opposition it has is soft," summed up one committee aide who asked not to be named. He said the week ahead would see hardening of positions on both sides, but no final decision.

Meanwhile, the House Government Operations Committee's subcommittee on commerce, consumer and monetary affairs opens hearings Monday on Carter's overall anti-inflation program.

Leadoff witnesses from the General Accounting Office are expected to challenge the legality of the president's plan to deny contracts to companies that violate his voluntary wage-and-price guidelines.

According to sources, the testimony of the congressional investigative agency will say the president needs specific authorization from Congress to deny contracts under the plan, which formally takes effect Feb. 15.

The White House contends the president does not need congressional approval to tie the awarding of contracts to compliance with the guidelines. Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd has agreed.

Administration economic experts also face another busy week as they continue to defend Carter's budget proposals before congressional committees. The focus of their testimony, however, will shift this week from the House money committees to the Senate Budget Committee.

The president is recommending a budget for fiscal 1980 that calls for $531.6 billion in spending and a $29 billion deficit.

In other economic-related action, the House Ways and Means Committee will turn its attention Wednesday to restoring the president's power to suspend so-called countervailing duties.

Countervailing duties are assessed on subsidized foreign goods imported into the United States. The duties are designed to eliminate the price advantage such subsidized products have over U.S.

goods. Under a law that lapsed last month, however, the president was permitted to waive the duties in certain circumstances. Expiration of that law has upset several European countries and is threatening the success of current trade negotiations in Geneva.

Elsewhere on Capitol Hill, Carter's new China policy will come under the scrutiny of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. Some committee members fear Taiwan is being left unprotected from potential military or economic threats from Peking.

The committee is also scheduled to conduct confirmation hearings on the nomination of former United Auto Workers President Leonard Woodcock to become ambassador to Peking.

On Wednesday, Rosalynn Carter will become the first first lady to testify before a congressional committee since Eleanor Roosevelt appeared on behalf of migrant workers in 1940.

Mrs. Carter is scheduled to testify before a Senate health subcommittee headed by Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass. She will urge expanded federal assistance for mental health programs.

Meanwhile, Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., has scheduled an unofficial hearing Monday into constitutional questions surrounding the proliferation of cults in America.

The hearing has been criticized by representatives of some established churches who fear it will "inflammate the public and obscure the delicate and complex issues that surround the activities of minority groups."

The Senate Energy Committee will hold a hearing Monday on the Carter administration's proposal for a standby gasoline rationing plan. Energy officials claim the plan would be used only as a last resort.

The American Agricultural Movement, promoting economic improvements for farmers, is also expected to make its presence felt on Capitol Hill. As part of its protest, the farm group has vowed to tie up Washington's streets with a giant tractorcade.

Assassinations Panel's Findings Argued

NEW YORK (AP) — A former counsel to the Warren Commission on Sunday rejected as "plain wrong" a congressional committee's conclusion that two assassins fired at President John F. Kennedy in Dallas in 1963.

"The House committee is plain wrong when a majority says that there was a second gunman firing at the president from the grassy knoll," said David W. Belin. He was referring to a report issued in December by the House assassinations committee. Belin also said he did not believe there was a conspiracy, as the House committee did. He added that he could not rule out conspiracy to the extent that other persons might have worked with Lee Harvey Oswald, but he did not personally believe it occurred.

The former Warren Commission counsel, who was involved in identifying Kennedy's killer, was interviewed on NBC's "Meet the Press."

The Warren Commission issued a report in 1964 that Oswald was the lone assassin, and that he fired three shots from above and behind Kennedy's car from the sixth floor of the Texas School Book Depository building.

The acoustical evidence to support a second gunman theory was presented by two scientists who tested a tape recording of transmissions from a Dallas police officer's motorcycle radio during the time shots were fired at Kennedy.

The committee said the evidence indicated four bullets, rather than three, were fired at the president, and that one came from a grassy knoll in Dealey Plaza at about the time a bullet from the rifle of Oswald struck the president's head.

Belin contended that the committee had failed to properly match the sounds on the tape with movie film of the president being shot by Oswald from the Texas School Book Depository building.

He said that based on the committee's own figures, the first shot would have to have been fired when Oswald's view of the car was obstructed by a tree.

Belin suggested that the tape may not be authentic or, if it were, that the sound taken to be a fourth shot actually was an echo or reverberation of the third. He also said the committee failed to put the supposed second gunman in a context of all the evidence.

"Here's a gunman that no one ever sees, although people did see one gunman firing from above," said Belin.

"He fires a bullet, but there's no cartridge case found. He misses not only the president but he misses the entire limousine, which is like shooting barely 100, 125 feet away. He's shooting downward. He fires only once."

"He then vanishes ... The committee relies upon a so-called puff of smoke to substantiate its conclusion ... This is apart from the fact that the tape ... doesn't have the noises of the motorcycles revving up as they speed off to Parkland Hospital. The tape doesn't have the sounds of police sirens, although those were turned on."

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By BILL DOYLE

Q. When our $7,000 savings certificate came due in September 1977, savings and loan associations in our area were offering only 7 1/2 percent on new savings certificates. We went to a broker who sold us seven $1,000 bonds, paying 7.55 percent interest. The broker said the bonds are guaranteed by the U.S. government and there would be no interest penalty if we wanted to withdraw our money.

A. Last week, we went to the brokerage house and said we wanted to turn in our bonds and get our $7,000. We found out that each $1,000 bond is worth only about $900. The penalty for withdrawing money from a savings certificate is peanuts compared to this. Where is the guarantee?

A. The guarantee is that you will receive interest at the rate of 7.55 percent a year and that each of those bonds will be paid off at its $1,000 par value when it reaches maturity. There is no guarantee that the market value of the bonds won't fall or rise between the time you buy and the bonds' maturity date.

You bought a "marketable" bond. The interest rate you have been receiving was the price the issuer had to pay to borrow money at that time. Since that time, as we are all well aware, interest rates have gone much higher.

When that happens, the prices of bonds already issued fall. After all, if you or anyone else buy newly-issued bonds at the present time, you'll want close to a 10 percent current yield — $100 a year interest on a $1,000 par value bond. You wouldn't pay $1,000 for a bond providing $79.50 a year interest. Neither will anyone else. So the market value of each of your bonds has dropped to about $900.

You should have known all this before you put your $7,000 on the line. You certainly could have found out all the details of the guarantee by reading the fine print on the bonds. You've had an expensive lesson on the cost of not investigating before investing.

You can get your $7,000 back when those bonds mature. If you sell before the bonds' maturity date, you get only the market price. In the future, if you want your money in a place where you can be sure of getting all your dollars back any time you want them, you had better stick with insured savings accounts and savings certificates and U.S. Savings Bonds.

Q. I have a $40,000 savings certificate at one savings and loan association and a $30,000 savings certificate at a different S & L. Does this mean that one or the other of my certificates is not safe? I read that the Federal Savings & Loan Insurance Corp. (FSLIC) cannot insure two accounts of the same person.

A. You misread something. The statement you make is dead wrong. FSLIC coverage is good up to $40,000 per account at each institution. You could have up to $40,000 in as many S&Ls as you like and not worry, as long as each S&L is a member of the FSLIC. And the $40,000 coverage can be multiplied by having different accounts in different individual and joint names as well as "in trust for," at the same institution.

The same rules apply for accounts at banks which are members of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp.

Q. What is a quick formula for figuring a mutual fund's performance from month to month?

A. The quick way is to figure the percentage difference in the asset value per share. But, to get "capital performance," you should adjust for capital gains distributions.

Let's say that XYZ Mutual fund starts the month with an asset value per share — the actual value behind each share — of $10 and finishes the month with asset value per share of $10.10. Its performance for the month was plus 1 percent.

If XYZ made a 10-cent-per-share capital gain distribution during the month and still ended the month with an asset value per share of $10.10, the 10 cents should be added to the month-end figure — making the month's performance plus 2 percent.

Forget about income dividends, when figuring capital performance.

Enter your own permanent numbers in the chart in the bottom right-hand corner. To figure your own permanent numbers, follow these three steps:

Step 1: From the year chart, find the numbers corresponding to your year of birth. For instance, if you were born in 1947, your number for Physical would be 21, Emotional 17, Intellectual 19. Note whether your numbers are preceded by an A or B; this will be used for Step 2.

Step 2: Now find the corresponding number for the month you were born. If your month is February, and your year numbers were preceded by a B, your month numbers would be 8 for Physical, 3 for Emotional and 31 for Intellectual. Enter your own numbers in the figure chart for Step 2.

Step 3: In the figure chart, enter your day of birth three times, one each for Physical (P), Emotional (E) and Intellectual (I). (If you were born on April 3, for instance, place a 3 in each column.)

Add the three columns to derive your permanent biorhythm numbers for your Physical, Emotional and Intellectual cycles. Now you can refer to today's rhythms.

These numbers are yours permanently. Check them each day for your biorhythm reading.

Convention Plan 'Scary'

WASHINGTON (AP) — A leading conservative in the Senate said Sunday he is frightened by the idea of calling a constitutional convention even though he favors an amendment requiring a balanced federal budget.

Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., said a budget-balancing amendment should be proposed by the Congress, not by convention, because a convention could "lose control" and upset basic protections in the Constitution.

Laxalt, who was former California Governor Ronald Reagan's campaign manager in Reagan's 1976 bid for the Republican presidential nomination, said he favors a balanced budget, and "if I could be satisfied ... the constitutional convention would consider only balancing the budget. I'd be all for it."

But he said legal experts with whom he has consulted feel it would be difficult to limit a convention agenda to one subject. "That would open itself to a Pandora's box of all sorts of kooky possibilities, and I think too much of the Constitution to take that kind of chance," Laxalt said. "... The idea of a constitutional convention going off on its own strikes me with a great deal of fear."

Apple pie is not American. It was brought to England from France in 1666 and from England to America about 1630 by the Pilgrims.

Laxalt was interviewed on the CBS television program "Face the Nation."

Republican office holders meeting in eastern Maryland endorsed a constitutional limit on federal spending Sunday but failed to agree on whether it should require a balanced budget.

The Republicans also expressed a strong consensus in favor of congressional action on any spending amendment as opposed to dealing with the issue through a convention.

Rep. Robert McClory, R-Ill., said 24 states have petitioned Congress to call a constitutional convention to address the budget-balancing issue. A total of 34 states is required to convene a convention.
