Massive Snows Paralyze East

By The Associated Press

A SURPRISE snowstorm born in one of the bitterest winters on record dumped snow knee deep in many areas from Virginia to Connecticut on Monday, muffling the celebration of George Washington's birthday in the urban Northeast.

The paralyzing storm, packing gale-force winds, left high drifts and accumulations up to 2 feet through parts of New Jersey, Maryland and Washington, D.C., before it eased off in late afternoon.

The nation's capital was buried under its heaviest snowfall in more than half a century, with 23 inches on the ground at

Fred Vera Named New Dawson JP

A-J Correspondent

LAMESA — The first Mexican-American Justice of the Peace in 25 years to serve Dawson County was appointed Monday afternoon, ending an eight-month seesaw search to fill the position.

Fred Vera, 32, an ex-Lamesa police investigator, was appointed justice of the peace by county commissioners and sworn into office about 4:15 p.m. Monday. He begins his new duties today.

The search for a justice of the peace began last July after Richard Don Nelson was indicted for misapplication of public funds and suspended from the office.

After a five-way write-in campaign last November, the job went to John Parchman, with Vera the runner-up.

After 42 days in office, Parchman resigned and commissioners, meeting in closed executive session, appointed former elementary school principal K.D. Smith. But Smith withdrew 36 hours later, after commissioners were threatened with a suit for violating the public notice requirements of the Open Meetings Act because of the closed session.

Vera also criticized commissioners for not asking him or any of the other candidates who ran for the office if they were interested in the job.

Calling Smith's appointment a "hasty decision," Vera added, "I did not believe such an injustice could be done to any candidate in Dawson County."

County Judge Leslie Pratt told the Avalanche-Journal Feb. 13 that Vera was not contacted about the position because the judge understood from a conversation with Vera that Vera was happy with his present employment (at Texas-New Mexico Pipeline Company).

Commissioners interviewed four applicants for the job, including Jim Trulove, currently the county's juvenile officer; Dub Meador, operator of the ambulance service; R.F. Spraberry; and Vera, and heard several public comments before entering into closed session to decide the appointment.

Chad Leaders Agree To Halt Civil War

KHARTOUM, Sudan (AP) — Representatives of President Felix Malloum, president of Chad, and of his rival, Premier Hissen Habre, signed a cease-fire Monday formally ending a brief civil war that left hundreds dead in their Central African nation, the official Sudanese news agency reported.

In a dispatch from N'Djamena, capital of the former French colony of Chad, the agency said the two sides formed a six-man committee headed by the commander of the French troops in Chad, Gen. Louis Forest, to supervise the cease-fire.

Ship, Crew Assaulted By Pirates

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — About 300 Maldivian pirates attacked a U.S.-owned oceanographic survey ship in the Indian Ocean, looting the vessel and kidnapping at least one crew member, radio reports from the ship said Monday.

They reported the Alysse Maru, with seven of the 10-man crew aboard, was headed for the U.S. Navy facility on the island of Diego Garcia, 1,100 miles south of the southern tip of India, with a Navy plane flying escort.

There was no word on the fate of the kidnapped medical officer, Thomas Wiemken, and the captain and chief engineer who stayed behind to look for him. Radio reports said the crewmen still aboard the ship were six Americans and one Japanese and some were believed to be wounded.

The Alysse Maru is the sister ship of French oceanographer Jacques Cousteau's Calypso.

Distress calls from the vessel were picked up by amateur radio operators in Kenya, Australia, South Africa, Israel and Rhodesia, according to Bruce Johnson. He is assistant secretary of the Connecticut-based International Amateur Radio Union and is visiting Kenya.

Johnson gave this account based on radio reports: On Saturday, the Alysse Maru developed engine trouble off Male, 400 miles south-southeast of India and the capital of the chain of islands that extend south toward Diego Garcia.

The crew was removing a piston from the engine when a vessel from Male Atoll approached and offered help.

Once the U.S. vessel was towed to calmer waters, 300 islanders carrying axes and handguns swarmed aboard and after an exchange of gunfire locked the crew in the pilot house. The pirates remained aboard for about four hours, collecting sophisticated electronic equipment and other supplies worth an estimated $60,000 before they left with the loot and Wiemken as their hostage.

Captain, Engineer Begin Search After the crew broke out of the pilot house, they reassembled the engine while Capt. Kenneth Leonard and chief engineer Craig Williams left for the atoll in search of Wiemken.

Apparently Leonard and Williams became separated. Leonard, who carried a walkie-talkie, contacted the ship at midday Sunday and there were indications he was calling under duress. He was not

Bandits Face Khomeini's Wrath

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Unidentified "counter-revolutionary elements" set fire to the U.S. consulate Monday in the northwestern Iranian city of Tabriz, the city's state-run radio reported. The one American assigned to the post had left Tabriz on Sunday, U.S. officials said.

Amid other reports of disorder, the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini warned he would crush any "bandits" causing trouble and view their activities as an uprising against his new Islamic republic.

Tabriz Radio, now in the hands of supporters of the ayatollah, appealed to local citizens to put out the fire at the consulate.

U.S. officials were unable to confirm the report of the fire, but said that Michael Metrinko, the only American assigned to the consulate, had returned to Tehran on Sunday.

Heavy Fighting Reported Heavy fighting was reported last week in Tabriz, 330 miles northwest of Tehran. Up to 700 people were reported killed when army units joined pro-shah activists in battles against forces loyal to Khomeini.

Sino Ground Units Reported Stopped Vietnam Claims 3,500 Chinese Killed

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Western intelligence sources in Bangkok said China's invasion forces had stopped about six miles inside northern Vietnam Monday and some Chinese units may be pulling back. They noted China has said it wanted to "teach Vietnam a lesson," not occupy Vietnamese territory.

But in Washington, U.S. analysts said they were unaware of any Chinese withdrawal or a slackening of the assault. They said it did appear that the fighting was concentrated within six miles of the Chinese border.

Unconfirmed reports from Moscow said all Soviet military leaves had been canceled and troops put on alert. The Soviets warned China on Sunday to pull out of Vietnam immediately.

Vietnam said it inflicted heavy casualties on the Chinese, killing 3,500 troops and destroying more than 100 tanks since the invasion started Saturday.

The Voice of Vietnam, monitored in Bangkok, said the Vietnamese killed 1,000 Chinese troops and destroyed 30 tanks in the rugged mountain province of Hoang Lien Son and reported similar figures in Cao Bang province.

In Long Son province, Vietnam claimed 600 Chinese killed and 20 tanks destroyed and said the strategic "Friendship Gate" border area was littered with some 60 destroyed Chinese tanks. Fighting was reported in other northern provinces as well. The reports could not be independently verified.

The Vietnamese Embassy in Bangkok said the Chinese advanced no more than six miles into Vietnam.

Peking has said the attack was in retaliation for "armed incursions" by Vietnam over the past year.

A quick strike followed by withdrawal would be similar to China's 1962 action in northeast India, when China invaded to make its point in a border dispute, then pulled back.

China Reports Few Details The official Chinese news agency Hsinhua has carried little about the invasion and no detailed reports of the fighting. Japanese news reports from Peking said China banned all demonstrations concerning the war.

Bangkok sources discounted reports of continued Chinese air strikes deep into Vietnam. Thai intelligence said the only Chinese planes still involved were spotter planes directing Chinese artillery fire.

A dispute between China and Vietnam has simmered since the communists took over Vietnam in 1975. It has increased over the past year with China accusing Vietnam of mistreating ethnic Chinese, and with Vietnam's backing of the overthrow of the China-backed Cambodian government of Pol Pot.

U.N. Security Council consultations on the situation were by telephone Monday because of a winter snowstorm that swept New York overnight.

OPEC Meeting Set On Iranian Cutoff

KUWAIT (AP) — Kuwait's oil minister Sheikh Ali Khalifa al-Sabah said Monday there will be a special meeting of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries on March 26 to discuss oil price confusion resulting from the cutoff of Iranian supplies.

He made the announcement before leaving for talks with other Arab oil ministers. He did not say where the meeting would be, but other reports quoted current OPEC chairman Mana Saad Oteiba of the United Arab Emirates as saying it would be in Geneva.

Al-Sabah and Venezuelan oil minister Valentin Hernandez were believed headed for Abu Dhabi to meet Oteiba.

Council chairman for February, was consulting particularly with non-aligned nations.

Sunday, Moscow warned China to withdraw its troops "before it is too late" and said it would honor a peace and friendship treaty signed last November with Vietnam.

Moscow indicated it would not send troops, however, saying: "The heroic Vietnamese people...are capable of standing up for themselves this time again."

The report of Soviet military leaves being canceled was from Victor Louis of the London Evening News, a Soviet citizen with good official contacts. Louis said it was "understood" the forces had been put "combat readiness Number One" although this had not been officially stated by the Soviets. His reports often reflect Soviet thinking, frequently before it is made official.

The United States said Sunday it disapproved of the invasion and asked the Soviets to use restraint. Government spokesmen said there was no reason to believe American interests were directly threatened.

In Bangkok, a U.S. congressional delegation postponed its visit to Hanoi until Tuesday because of the fighting.

Rep. Elizabeth Holtzman, D-N.Y., said her delegation had planned to fly to Hanoi Monday to hold talks with Vietnam. See SINO Page 16

Mennonites Get Third Aid Offer

By JOHNNY HOLMES
 Avalanche-Journal Staff

NO FINANCIAL commitments have been cemented yet, but a third party willing to help the Mennonites of Seminole pay an overdue $225,000 land debt has stepped into the picture.

"I guess we're not dead yet," Mennonite leader Peter Bergen said Monday, revealing that he had spoken with a group of persons from Midland who had learned of the religious colony's financial plight and were interested in lending assistance.

The Mennonites Thursday defaulted on a payment of $225,037.50 toward the 70 Ranch, a ten-section spread southwest of Seminole the clan has occupied since it moved to West Texas nearly two years ago. Before the Midland connection, a Lubbock group and another unidentified party had contacted Bergen with offers of financial aid.

Meetings with the first two parties were held over the weekend, with no information being released other than the fact that plans still are being formulated. Bergen said he hoped to hear from the Midland party later this week, "after they've done some checking to see what they can do."

Deed Of Trust Filed Bergen also filed a deed of trust Monday in the Gaines County Clerk's office in Seminole in an effort to repay some debts and shore up the land's finances. The deed, filed on one of the ranch's 10 sections, names the Small Business Administration as trustee and lists the principal amount on the promissory note at $25,000, according to deputy chief clerk Patsy Wilford.

Bergen said he filed the deed after learning he was eligible for the loan after the government declared portions of West Texas, including the Mennonites' land, a drought area for the crop years 1977 and 1978.

The German-speaking colony of approximately 125 families immigrated to Seminole from Canada and Mexico in early 1977, seeking religious freedom, long growing seasons and the opportunity to buy enough land to build a home they hoped one day would boast up to 30,000 residents.

Nagged By Problems Dreams of that thriving, self-sufficient colony have been all but shattered by the nagging land problems and troubles with the Immigration and Naturalization Service, which threatened to deport them Feb. 1 unless all heads of households and single adults over 21 acquired jobs which could be certified by the U.S. Labor Department.

Farming, the basic livelihood for the group, cannot be certified, so many clan members have moved off the ranch to take jobs which will allow them to remain in this country.

Although disillusioned by the myriad of legal and financial problems, most Mennonites feel fortunate that they have been able to locate certifiable jobs in Seminole and nearby towns, and say they are willing to remain in the United States even if forced to give up the land.

But forfeiture of the ranch means losing the nearly $1.5 million they have invested in housing, farm equipment and the land payments. For many, that investment entailed their life savings, and losing the land means starting all over from scratch.

Hospital Requires Proof

By PAULA TILKER
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Effective immediately, patients entering Health Sciences Center Hospital on an elective basis either will have to prove on admission financial ability to pay costs or will have to provide a deposit, the hospital's board of managers decided Monday.

The board unanimously adopted the policy on the recommendation of executive director Gerald Bosworth.

In a memo to board members, Bosworth said, "We have now reached a point where admissions to the hospital of patients who do not pay are at a level that makes it imperative that we establish a more stringent admitting policy, since it is placing an inordinate financial burden on the hospital district."

Patients in the hospital for elective procedures will have to document that they have adequate insurance coverage or some other financial ability to pay their bills.

Failing that, patients will have to deposit enough money on admission to cover the total cost of their anticipated hospital stay, the policy says.

Bosworth said emergency cases still will be handled without prior consideration of the patients' ability to pay.

The board also asked the hospital administration staff to report at the next meeting on the feasibility of issuing identification cards to possible patients who are certified as good bill-paying risks.

The request was made following board member John Flygare's suggestion to Bosworth that some staffer who "knows the community" and who can use discretion be in charge of screening elective patients.

Flygare explained it could cause "embarrassment" to require a deposit or insurance documentation from "someone who (obviously) can pay."

The board members noted that both St. Mary's Hospital and Methodist Hospital use the card system and that it may be effective at HSCH.

In other action, the board endorsed the efforts of a local group to secure a federal grant for improvement of Emergency Medical Service in the 15-county region around Lubbock.

Post Mayor Giles McCrary, who is heading up the drive, told the board that support already has been approved by the South Plains Association of Governments and that the HSCH board's endorsement also would strengthen the federal grant application.

McCrary said the group is seeking $237,000 for a training and communication program.

The board also said it would be willing to enter into transfer agreements with other hospitals in the region.

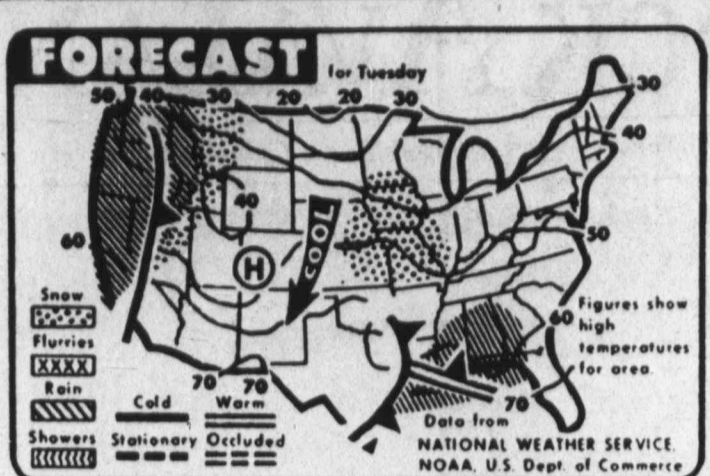

A charter establishing the Lubbock County Hospital District Foundation, which primarily will be interested in fund raising and promotion for the hospital, was signed by the board members.

The foundation, which also must receive state approval, will be a non-profit organization, with its board members appointed by the HSCH managers.

AG GRANTS TO STATES

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland has approved grants to Indiana and New Mexico to improve marketing of agricultural products.

Each state will match its federal grant with state funds. Indiana will use its $37,819 grant to help farmers and marketing firms develop export markets for their products, while New Mexico will use its $17,500 to give hay buyers easy access to information about hay supplies through a toll-free telephone line.

Russian pianist Youri Egorov has canceled his appearance with the Lubbock Symphony Orchestra tonight. Symphony officials told The Avalanche-Journal that Egorov is suffering from pneumonia.

Tickets are still available for today's 8:15 p.m. concert in the Lubbock Civic Center theater.

Trailer Blaze Heats Tempers

While firemen battled a trailer home fire south of the city Sunday night, the owner of the trailer was in a heated dispute of his own, resulting in a real fracas for all involved.

The 8:30 p.m. blaze, which destroyed an 80-foot trailer home estimated to be worth about $20,000, apparently added fuel to a family dispute and firefighters suddenly found themselves trying to cool down the altercation as well as put out the burning structure about eight miles south of the city limits.

The owner of the trailer reportedly suffered a broken ankle in the fray.

Four sheriff's deputies, two Department of Public Safety troopers and firemen from Slaton, Wolfforth and Woodrow were dispatched to the scene. No one was injured in the fire and authorities had not determined a cause for the blaze late Monday.

Joe Rosales, chief of Wolfforth's volunteer fire department, said it took about 30 minutes to contain the blaze and that firemen remained at the scene until 11 p.m.

Deputies were told the man who suffered the fire loss had been separated from his wife for three days and that the fight erupted when a friend of the wife's came up to watch the fire.

Rosales said the altercation first involved only the trailer owner and his wife's friend, but within seconds more than a dozen people were on the ground wrestling.

Gusty Winds To Kick Up Dust In Area Today

Warmer temperatures today will be marred by gusty winds and blowing dust, as South Plains residents get an early taste of the spring sandstorm season.

But the dusty conditions may be dampened Wednesday as a cold front, coming on the heels of the brisk winds, lowers temperatures and brings a slight chance of rain to the region.

The high today will be near 60 with the low tonight dropping to the mid-30s. A high pressure system in the eastern United States will cause the swirling dust as southwesterly winds gust from 15 to 25 mph.

Relative humidity will be 85 percent this morning, falling to 25 percent this afternoon as the last patches of snow melt. The sun will shine about seven hours today, making drying conditions excellent for area farmers.

Wednesday's temperatures again will be near 60 degrees, but a slight chance of showers also is forecast because of the approach of a Pacific cold front.

A high pressure system moving into

Texas from the northwest is expected to help the Pacific cold front bring cooler temperatures Wednesday night and Thursday.

Elsewhere in Texas, today's temperatures should vary from the 60s in West Texas to the 30s in the Dallas-Fort Worth area. Most areas are expecting partly cloudy skies and temperatures in the 40s or 50s.

Precipitation is forecast through Thursday for parts of North Texas and weathermen say the wet weather may spread south and west.

Solon Makes No Friends With Bills

By ANDY WELCH
A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — If a popularity contest were conducted in the Legislature, it's doubtful that Rep. Bob Simpson of Amarillo would finish in the running.

Simpson probably didn't make any friends among state legislators, particularly those with a few years in office, when he asked the House State Affairs Committee to consider his two bills (HB 288 & 289) which would disband the retirement benefits to legislators after 1980.

While Simpson was presenting his bills — a very brief presentation — his political opponent in several recent campaigns was literally looking over his shoulder, and joined in the testimony.

It was apparent to members of the committee that Jim Brandon, an Amarillo Republican, made a big issue of the "lush" legislative retirement program, and Simpson's prior support of it, in those races.

So, Simpson decided he would retort by agreeing to sponsor the bill to end that retirement program.

The bill has gone to a subcommittee, and if stares alone from members could kill, the legislation is definitely dead for this legislative session.

State legislators are currently paid $7,200 per year, but their retirement is based on the salary which the state pays to district judges, which is proposed at $42,000 a year in 1979-80 by legislative budget writers.

That means a legislator serving for eight years could draw over $6,000 a year in retirement benefits at age 55.

Citibus Operating Under Budget, Coordinator Says

By LISA PAIKOWSKI
Avalanche-Journal Staff
Operating costs for Lubbock's Citibus have run more than $5,000 under budget since the start of the fiscal year Oct. 1, the city transit coordinator told Transit Advisory Board members Monday.

Coordinator John Wilson continued the optimistic report on the city transit system with figures for January that showed a 7 percent increase in the number of Citibus passengers and a 2 percent increase in revenue.

He said that most of the passenger increase occurred after Jan. 15 when the cold and snow let up for a short period. He cited the nicer weather during the latter two weeks of January, the marketing presentation for Citibus and the changes in routes as possible reasons for the increase in passengers during that month.

The first two weeks of February also "looked encouraging," according to Wilson.

"Our revenue is up, ridership is picking up, our budget is under and with the marketing presentation we have, we just can't lose," he said.

Wilson also said that damages from a fire on one of the Citibus vehicles should amount to less than $2,000 in next month's budget, but that "we should still be under for the year."

Two Men Held In Airport Heist

NEW YORK (AP) — Two men were in custody Sunday in connection with a $5 million heist at a Lufthansa cargo terminal, and the FBI pressed its search for the loot and at least four other men.

The Dec. 11 robbery, the largest cash holdup in U.S. history, also netted thieves jewels worth an estimated $800,000.

Investigators believe one of the missing suspects, a former convict identified as Thomas DeSimone, has been murdered, the New York Times reported in its Monday editions.

DeSimone is thought to have masterminded the holdup with Angelo John Sepe, 37, of Queens, the newspaper said. Sepe was arrested Saturday on robbery charges. Authorities believe DeSimone and Sepe had organized crime ties, the Times said.

Peter Gruenawald, 39, of Levittown, also was taken into custody Saturday as a material witness, the FBI said.

Gruenawald, a cargo traffic division worker for Lufthansa, was in a position to know when valuable shipments came through the terminal, authorities said.

His connection with the case was not revealed, but officials said he was a friend of at least one of the suspected robbery participants.

About 150 Lufthansa employees were given polygraph tests following the theft. It was not known if Gruenawald was given the test.

Both men were to appear in federal court in Brooklyn on Monday. If convicted, Sepe could face 45 years in jail and fines of $35,000.

Police would not say what led to the arrests, but an intensive investigation followed the precision heist.

The robbers bypassed electrical alarm equipment, overpowered a guard and forced the night manager to open a safe. They were gone within an hour after loading their cargo of untraceable currency.

Police later found a van used in the robbery, and reported they had found a number of fingerprints in the vehicle.

Tech Regent Duo Named

AUSTIN — Appointment of B. Joe Pevehouse of Midland and Dr. Nathan C. Galloway Jr. of Odessa to the Texas Tech University Board of Regents was announced by Gov. Bill Clements today.

Pevehouse will succeed Andrew J. Kemp Jr. of Fort Worth and Galloway will succeed Judson F. Williams of El Paso on the board.

Pevehouse, 53, president of Adobe Oil and Gas Corp., and Galloway, 45, a physician, will serve six-year terms which are due to expire in Jan. 31, 1985.

The governor earlier had reappointed J. Fred Bucy of Dallas to another term on the board, although his appointment, like those submitted today, has not yet been approved.

Humorist To Speak At Chamber Fete

TULIA (Special) — Humorist Grady Nutt will be guest speaker at the annual Tulia Chamber of Commerce banquet in Ezra James Memorial Cafeteria at Tulia High School Feb. 26.

Tickets for the event, which will begin at 7:30 p.m., are on sale at the First National Bank, First State Bank, K-Bob's and the Chamber office.

The Citizen of the Year Award will be presented at the banquet.

Senate Approves Bill To Sell Tech House

AUSTIN—The Senate passed Monday and sent to the House legislation by Sen. E.L. Short, Tahoka, allowing the Texas Tech Board of Regents to sell a former home of the school president, with revenue to be used for major repair and renovation projects at the campus.

According to Short, the home was built in 1967.

The legislation requires that proceeds from the sale "be used only for the purpose of acquiring, constructing, and initially equipping buildings or other permanent improvements at the university."

AN EDITORIAL:

South Of The Border Politics

THE VISIT OF President Carter to Mexico, and the public sparring between the U.S. chief and Mexico's President Jose Lopez Portillo, left a lot of unanswered questions. It also left a lot to be desired in the field of diplomacy, if not good manners, on the part of both men.

The purpose of Mr. Carter's journey—to seek a rapprochement with our neighbors south of the border, to explore ways and means for purchase of Mexico's oil and gas and to take a look at the illegal alien problem—almost got lost in the rhetoric.

THE MEXICAN President's public tongue-lashing of his guest was uncalled-for and in bad taste.

Granted, there have been decades when Washington has more or less looked down its nose at Mexico and that nation's needs. And granted, Mexico is "in the driver's seat" with its huge oil and gas reserves.

But, all of the problems have not been caused by the U.S. alone. For decades, Mexico has had worries which all too often its leaders either could not or would not face, a burgeoning population being a major one.

IT'S NOT TOO much to suggest that now that President Lopez Portillo has satisfied himself and his constituents' desire to "reprimand" Uncle Sam, it is time to get down to business.

AN EDITORIAL:

Metric Rule Is Up To School

AMONG THE powers of Congress specifically enumerated in the Constitution is the authority to fix the standard of weights and measures. But because a mandatory shift to the metric system would be controversial, Congress repeatedly avoids its resolution.

As a result, the United States today is the only major industrialized nation on earth still relying upon the antiquated English custom- ary system, circa Colonial days.

Like so many endeavors of the federal government, the Metric Education Program presents the facade of a sensible undertak- ing, designed to advance the common good at a relatively reasonable cost.

BUT THE program typifies virtually every- thing that's wrong with government—including spineless decision-making by Congress, mindless administration by bureaucrats and shameless hustling for federal money by the citizenry.

Slightly more than $2 million has been distributed by HEW this year to 66 organiza- tions, most of them either public school sys- tems or universities using the money to train teachers in metric instruction.

But when HEW announced the grants, top billing went to the Joseph P. Kennedy Foundation, which will use almost $86,000 to convert to the metric system in its annual "Special Olympics" for the handicapped.

The Kennedy Foundation, a well-endowed

The fact is that Mexico has the wherewith- al with which to bring about an economic and sociological revolution for its peoples. It behooves it to do so in a context compatible with hemispheric understanding, something which can best be accomplished by working with its neighbors.

We can understand Mexico's desire not to "go too fast too soon" and risk the sort of trauma now racking Iran. We can under- stand its leaders desire to "get the best price possible" for its natural resources.

BUT, THE FACTS are that making the U.S. "pay through the nose" for past and present, real or imagined, "wrongs" isn't the way to accomplish any of those objec- tives.

As President Carter noted, the U.S. by and large has been a good neighbor. It has for all practical purposes kept one of the most open borders in the world with Mexico.

And it has assimilated to a great degree lit- erally millions of peoples of Mexican de- scent into its economy and life-style. Today those citizens for the most part are far bet- ter off than they could be in Mexico and they are not slaves as President Lopez Por- tillo implied. Even the illegal aliens have it better than they do at home or they would not be here.

Now that the recriminations are out of the way, it's time to get down to business, for the benefit of both nations.

philanthropic institution with assets of $22- million, hardly needs money.

Dr. Floyd Davis, director of HEW's Metric Education Program, defends that expendi- ture of public funds on grounds that federal regulations do not allow wealth to be con- sidered in evaluating grant applications.

YET DAVIS allowed school districts in California and Arkansas to evade the firm ceiling, contained in the same regulations, on the percentage of the federal grant that can be used to purchase equipment.

His explanation: "What the heck."
 There's a serious question of whether the federal government has any business being involved in metric training because educa- tion—metric or otherwise—traditionally is a function of state and local government.

Governors, legislators, education commis- sioners and state school boards have com- mitted virtually every state in the union to metric education. Yet hundreds of local school boards annually seek federal assist- ance rather than accept the responsibility of financing their own programs.

Metric education merits a close examina- tion—not because it's especially scandalous but because it represents the failings of thousands of other federal programs oper- ated by 2.4 million government minions at a current cost to the taxpayers of $493.4 billion a year.

HENRY J. TAYLOR:

Iran Control Puts Reds Alongside Saudi Arabia

SECRETARY OF STATE Cyrus Vance private- ly sees the Soviet Union pushing for Iran's oil. Russia needs oil. And the pattern is clear: Whoever controls the Middle East controls the oil.

Soviet planners know that other nations also need oil. This makes the commodity even more important. For the Kremlin is bidding for Eu- rope, the United States, Japan, etc., by threat- ening their fuel supply.

Also, Africa supplies oil in such places as Ni- geria, the third largest exporter of oil to the United States, next to Canada and Venezuela.

Nigeria's oil production is estimated at about two million barrels a day. The oil revenue runs about $1.3 billion yearly.

MORE THAN 900 Nigerian wells produce a low-sulphur crude known in the international oil trade as "sweet." And today the United States buys about 30 percent of Nigeria's oil.

Vance sees Angola and Mozambique already tainted by Communism. They offer excellent bases for Soviet attacks against the shipping that would be forced to go around Africa to reach the ports of free Europe and the United States.

And even South Africa itself—the area is very touchy because of the racial unrest—cannot be considered secure.

In addition, Vance finds critical the Middle East shipping lanes accord oil around Africa. Geographically, the Soviet is adjacent to Iran and on the threshold of the indispensable Middle East oil.

CONTROL OF Iran puts the Kremlin masters alongside Saudi Arabia. Thus a few key countries could control the Middle East oil shipments for the Kremlin.

But the chief Soviet target is, of course, Saudi Arabia. It is the world's largest oil producer.

This feudal nation, three times the size of Texas and a third the size of the United States, is ruled without a constitution or parliament as a heredi- tary monarchy.

But Saudi Arabia produces about 20 percent of the free world's oil output. Aramco alone pro- duces 8.25 million barrels daily and delivers to United States ports on the Atlantic seaboard and the Gulf of Mexico about 20 percent of the oil we import.

MOREOVER, PUTTING his finger on a map, Vance estimates that Saudi Arabia's known re- serves are a colossal 184 billion barrels. You find no such reserves anywhere in the world.

Saudi Arabia covers 873 square miles; 80 per- cent of the immense, billowy Arabian peninsula. Its deserts and high mountains (some up to 10,000 feet) stretch from the Red Sea to the Persian Gulf and from the Gulf of Aqaba to the Indian Ocean.

In the last five years Saudi Arabia has built a new $12 billion military complex at Tabag, 125 miles from Israel's southern port of Elath and 140 miles from the Straits of Tican's Sharm el-Sheikh.

And another project is a $10 billion arms center at Al Kharj, 60 miles southeast of Riyadh, the capital.

THE COUNTRY uses American and British technicians to make magnetic surveys, usually from helicopters—the oil being close to the surface.

Saudi Arabia is flooded with foreign laborers and technicians. They come mostly from Egypt, Jordan, the Philippines, South Korea and Yem- en. Foreign workers include at least 35,000 Amer- icans, plus British and Swedish, and exceed one million.

In addition, Vance looks at Israel. Although Is- rael has no prospect of going Communist, any new war would churn up Israel's population. This is another reason he finds that the Soviet opposes an Egypt-Israel peace treaty.

Full, Half-Full--Or Still Empty?

VIRGINIA PAYETTE:

Lawyers Ad It Up

I SEE BY the morning paper that F. Lee Bailey has made the front page again, but not be- cause he's defending anybody in court. This time he's drumming up business.

Mr. Bailey may, in fact, be the first well-known name to succumb to the Supreme Court ruling that lawyers have as much right to advertise as, say, used-car salesmen.

There he was, at the bottom of The New York Times' front page, touting his availability. His read: "practicing in the representation of wrong- ful death and personal injury cases arising out of aircraft disaster."

Not that Mr. Bailey's little classified was the only legal blurb on the front page. Siller and Gal- an want more clients, too. They are (and I quote) "experienced trial lawyers specializing in contest- ed divorce, custody, civil and criminal appeals and tax fraud."

BUT WHOEVER heard of Siller and Galan? Or Ira Kiosk, "collection specialist"? Or Glaser and Blitz, "practicing in medical malpractice"? And that's what it's all about, letting the world know they're out there in case you should sud- denly find yourselves so grievously wronged that only a multimillion-dollar judgment will ease your pain.

In Mr. Bailey's case, there might be another reason. A former "boy wonder" around the courts, he hasn't had such a hot press lately, what with Patty Hearst accusing him of messing up her defense and all.

Sull, his name is still a famous one. So famous that it's fairly safe to assume his classified ad raised an eyebrow or two in the legal establish- ment, where chasing 747s is somewhat akin to chasing ambulances.

AS FAR as his staid colleagues are concerned, legal advertising demeans the profession and threatens its reputation.

But it's happening. After a cautious start, law- yers are beginning to let the public know they're available and to pursue clients more vigorously.

In a few cases, that involves show-biz gimmicks that shake established professionals right down to their torts. There's one attorney, for instance, who hires a plane to fly over football games tow- ing a sign emblazoned with his name and tele- phone number.

Another pays for a TV commercial where a shirt-sleeved attorney rambles on in a folksy twang about how good legal advice doesn't have to cost an arm and a leg and "if you good folks just give us a call we'll be happy to help out." Cheap.

THEN THERE'S the lawyer who guarantees you'll win your divorce suit—or he'll give you "your partner back."

Without advertising, they say, there's no way they, can deliver services efficiently. There are too many new graduates coming out of law school every year, and they're all hungry.

Chief Justice Warren Burger said it himself, right out loud: "We may be on our way to a so- ciety overrun by hordes of lawyers, hungry as lo- custs."

Hungrier of all, in recent years, is that small, select group that specializes in disaster and grief, the airplane-crash gang.

They also specialize in speed. The minute a big plane goes down anywhere in the world, they're on their way to sign up the victims' families for fat lawsuits against the airlines. It pays off, too.

WHEN THEY win a big award (which is often, juries being what they are these days) they also get their names in the papers. That's the best ad- vertising of all: a lot of people see it and it's free.

Even the American Bar Association has faced up to the fact that advertising is here to stay, al- though the three percent of the lawyers who've tried it don't seem to be very good at it.

And so, believe it or not, the bar association is getting ready to bite the bullet and teach its members how to sell themselves.

The best time, says the ABA, is during the late- late movie, because folks with legal troubles don't sleep too well at night. And for openers, the lawyers could offer to help you sue the used- car salesman who unloaded that "cream puff" on you last month.

L.M. BOYD:

...Pass It On

A MECHANIC can hear things in an engine that a doctor can't hear. A doctor can hear things in a chest cavity that a mechanic can't hear. May- be that's too obvious.

Merely mention it to make the point that keen hearing is not merely the ability to detect faint sounds from afar. Rather, it's the ability to dis- tinguish certain sounds from other sounds and detect fine differences. Generally, women seem to be somewhat more gifted than men in this matter, particularly mothers of sleeping babies.

The Chinese for centuries customarily rubbed themselves down after a bath not with a dry but with a wet towel.

ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK:

The Ruse Of Sharon

EVANS

WASHINGTON—While Iran severs its intimate Western ties for a Moslem-style republic, one of Israel's more charismatic leaders is talking tough- er than ever about his country's long-range plans to bring the Palestinian West Bank under perma- nent Israeli control.

Gen. Ariel Sharon, who was put in charge of the torrid Jewish settlements issued by Prime Minister Menachem Begin, is publicly plotting a future for more than one million West Bank Palestinians—most of them Moslems—that could drastically lengthen the odds against success of President Carter's newest Jerusalem-Cairo me- diation effort.

That effort starts next week when Israeli and Egyptian foreign ministers meet in a renewal of Camp David, but under conditions alarmingly pessimistic compared to the outcome of Carter's Camp David summit last fall.

What disturbs top officials is that Sharon risks stirring up dormant religious passions on the West Bank and in East Jerusalem, one of Islam's holiest places, at a time when Moslem funda- mentalism showed sufficient strength to fire up the Iranian revolution and now threatens sectarian reactions elsewhere.

"The Israeli claim to legal rights in Samaria and Judea (the West Bank) is purely biblical," one American official told us.

"The Moslem claim to East or Old Jerusalem also has a religious derivation. Any fool can see the lethal potential in the aftermath of Iran."

Such caveats have not quieted Sharon.

STATE DEPARTMENT statisticians put Jeru- salem's total population today at 300,000, with Arab Palestinians outnumbering Jews two-to- one.

Sharon's call for a Jerusalem with one million Jewish inhabitants is not part of Begin's public plans, and probably not his secret plans either.

Indeed, Sharon's glowing aspirations for Is- rael's future holdings on the West Bank may be tinged with the same kind of fancy that has made Ambassador Andrew Young, the chief U.S. de- legate to the United Nations, the most controver- sial official in the Carter administration.

"Sharon is Begin's Andy Young," one extreme- ly well-placed authority told us. "He speaks with Young's conviction about the way things ought to be, but in his heart he must know they never will be that way."

THAT MAY BE wishful thinking. Sharon, a true hero in the October 1973 Israeli-Egyptian war, is a convinced territorialist at a time when Israeli hawks are on the increase.

What some critics term his territorial romanti- cism could become tomorrow's political realism, a fact that may have influenced Begin himself in giving Sharon so much freedom for public an- nouncement of future plans.

The plans Sharon announced in his Jan. 26 in- terview with Ma'ariv, one of Israel's foremost journals, are breathtaking in their scope and sweep.

Cast aside much of Begin's promise of self- rule or local autonomy to the Palestinians, Sha- ron said the process of Israel's control and absorp- tion of vast West Bank lands "will take many years."

But he wants the decision to do so to be made publicly right now, before any peace agreement is signed with Egypt.

SHARON ENVISIONS three belts of Jewish settlements on the Arab-populated West Bank, "and not just settlements," he said.

He promises "roads and highways to ensure territorial continuity between (new) cities and settlements. And not just roads but an extensive infrastructure with army camps, firing ranges, fire-areas for training."

The land for this Israeli takeover of large por- tions of the West Bank must be seized "without any delay."

Asked if such seizure of lands might not weak- en the chances of Egypt signing a peace agree- ment with Israel, and of Jordan and the Palestinians negotiating self-rule, Sharon said it would not.

"Seizure of lands does not increase friction with the Arab population," he told Ma'ariv. "It will prevent such friction in the future."

THAT VIEW OF Arab reactions to the loss of their historic lands reminded some authorities here of Andy Young's view of Fidel Castro's Cu- ban troops in Angola as a "stabilizing" force.

Neither view is in accord with political facts. Accordingly, some officials doubt Sharon's ability to talk Begin's government into anything like so ambitious a development plan for the West Bank.

Instead, the few settlements Sharon has been able to get through Begin's cabinet could turn out to be more like Potemkin villages than the begin- nings of serious future towns.

That is the rosy view of Sharon's public de- clarations. If it is wrong, the religious fanaticism unleashed in Iran could spread to Moslem Jeru- salem and the West Bank, introducing a lethal element not yet felt in that tortured land.

ANDREW TULLY:

Pinch On Pensions

WASHINGTON—Wealthy widows will not be hurt if Congress buys President Carter's proposal to eliminate the Social Security payment of $225 to bury their husbands.

But the end of this gratuity would work a real hardship on millions of faceless wives whose hus- bands' Social Security pensions are the couple's only means of support.

I don't know why a government that can coolly write complicated income tax laws that drive us all up the wall can't arrange its supervision of So- cial Security to allow benefits only to those who need them.

The President's budget proposal in this field is typical of the lunacy that has always bedeviled the Social Security program.

A BILLIONAIRE covered by SS can rake in millions of dollars every year from dividends and still not lose his Social Security pension.

But a retired shoe salesman loses his pension if he earns too much at a retirement job. In short, there is a penalty if you earn money by working.

There should be a limit to how much unearned income is allowed the wealthy Social Security re- cipient before losing the program's monthly check.

If the wealthy were cut off from SS benefits, the money saved might go a long way toward rescuing the program from the threat of financial collapse.

Jimmy Carter, the people's Presidential candi- date, almost seems to have a grudge against the people. Another of his proposals would end So- cial Security survivor's benefits to students after they reach the age of 18.

HE ALSO proposes to return to 72 the age at which retirees may earn as much money as they choose and still get full SS benefits. Congress has set the age at 70, beginning in 1982.

There are young people who couldn't stay in college if they lost that monthly check. There are retirees who would become destitute if they didn't work to sweeten their SS pension.

The solution is simple—simply pass a law say- ing that such benefits would be prohibited to those whose family assets are fat enough so they don't need help from Social Security.

Meanwhile, we have government employe unions yowling at Carter's plan to hold federal workers to a 5.5 percent pay raise for the second year in a row and cut the number of federal jobs by more than 20,000.

PEOPLE WHO work for Uncle Sam get life and health insurance at dirt-cheap premiums and holidays practically every hour on the hour. Their retirement future is made secure by a sweetheart pension system.

After retiring, many of them take jobs in the private sector and qualify for SS pensions on top of their government pensions.

Every study made shows they're much better off than workers in private jobs. Carter should have the guts to tell them the gray train stops here: No more raises until inflation is ended.

Phooey. The little guy would get it in the neck again in the Carter budget. At the same time, Carter would increase defense spending by 9.9 percent—3 percent faster than inflation. Some people's President.

Destitute Photographer Resorts To Bank Robbing To Pay Bills

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — Gary States was a successful photographer whose works hung in many of Boise's leading homes and businesses. Then his business failed, and now he is also an admitted criminal who may go to jail for robbing a bank that displayed his work. States, 38, who faces sentencing March 3, said in a recent interview that he turned to crime after getting deeply in debt, with bills piling up and creditors calling every day.

In desperation, he said, he and a cousin, Dale Shideler, 31, put on masks and wigs, armed themselves and robbed a branch of the Idaho First National Bank on two separate days in December.

"I know that people go bankrupt every day and don't rob banks," States said. "I know my reasons are going to sound like a poor excuse for the average person. That's why it was something I thought about for many, many months."

Since getting caught, "every day now is hell," said States, who like his cousin is free on $25,000 bond until sentencing. "Every night about 10 o'clock, that's the worst for me. Two nights ago I put my head in the pillow and screamed."

States was no stranger to the bank. His photographs of outdoor scenes had hung on its walls more than once. A picture book on Idaho — sponsored by the bank — contained 14 of his photographs. He even had a $1,000 loan from Idaho First for camera equipment.

He said once he got in financial trouble, the bank would "call up, two or three times a week, and swear at me. They said they were going to take my equipment."

Neither robbery went smoothly. In the first holdup they had to fire a pistol into the floor of the bank to make a teller obey instructions. In the second robbery, a man rammed their getaway van with his pickup. They shook him after blasting his truck with a shotgun.

Boise police, acting on a tip, arrested States five hours after the second robbery. Shideler was arrested the next day.

Both were charged with robbery, assault with a deadly weapon and using a firearm in the commission of a felony. Both pleaded guilty to robbery in a plea bargain agreement.

Authorities never said how much money was stolen, nor how much was recovered. But States said he had about $10,000 in debts, and after the first robbery was able to pay off 75 percent of his bills.

"I would have cleaned everything up and gotten home free," if he had gotten away the second time, he said.

States, who is divorced, said he hasn't been able to talk to his children since he was arrested. Friends and neighbors, mostly professional people, have stopped talking to him.

"I've lost my respectability, my standing in the community," States said. "It will be a long, uphill fight to restore it. In a way, it's like a person who once was a good Christian and who gave it up."

SAVE $75

A WORLD BOOK SALE!

A World Book sale is really news... and it's good news for parents! Imagine saving $75 off the regular price of the 1978 edition... an impressive saving on the world's largest-selling encyclopedia.

World Book outsells all the others because it's the encyclopedia for the whole family.

World Book fits its language to its most likely readers.

Articles are written at the language level of those most likely to read them. For example, World Book's article on puppets—which would be of greater interest to young children—reads more easily than the one on thermodynamics, written for older children and adults.

Major articles begin with simple explanations, so that even young readers can get the basic information they want. The 24-page article on insects, for example, begins... "Insect is a small six-legged animal." But as the article unfolds, it progresses to a scholarly discussion of insect growth patterns, development, and classification.

You can see that World Book is the encyclopedia your children won't outgrow.

Call 800-447-4700 now to take advantage of this saving.

It's a sale you won't want to miss... a chance to own the 22-volume World Book in the luxurious Renaissance binding; was regularly $399, now special sale price only $324.

So call now for more information... or mail the coupon today.*

* This offer expires on March 20, 1979. However, you must mail or call by March 5, 1979 so that you'll have time to look at our materials and decide. No obligation to buy. Sale begins February 15, 1979.

Dear Dr. Ruble: A controversy has arisen in our house over my three-month-old infant. It has to do with solid food. What is the current thinking on this? Is three months too soon? Some doctors (mine) seem to think it is too soon, but other mothers say it isn't. My baby seems ready for it because he will take a bit — cereal, etc. — if it is offered on a spoon at the table. Please comment. — M.C.

The thinking on this used to be much more conservative than it is today. Some doctors used to advise waiting until 12 months. Differences of opinion can still be found. If you have a pediatrician advising you, I certainly wouldn't want to be the one to tell you to go against his wishes. His thinking may be based on factors you do not mention in your letter. For example, if a baby was premature things might have to wait a while.

Otherwise, current thinking does not discourage early introduction of solid food, and it's commonly done between three and six months. Solid food is not needed, though, in the first six months.

It's best to begin on a one-meal-a-day basis, and it's wise to use the meal at which he seems most hungry. A lot of infant psychology enters the picture, but from what you say I doubt you have any such problems. However, keep in mind that eating habits of a lifetime are formed in these early months, so don't stuff him with giant portions of any food. Try a bit of fruit at first, then begin introducing cereals and meats. From your description this tot should be taking just about anything you have on hand in the way of baby foods, at least, when he is six months old. Continue to give him the bottle since at this age milk remains his most complete food.

Dear Dr. Ruble: The difference, please, between a "gastric" ulcer and a "peptic" ulcer. — B.W.

No difference. The term peptic describes the kind of ulcer — one associated with the effects of acid on the walls of the stomach, intestines or esophagus. Gastric merely locates the ulcer in the stomach. Thus, one could have a peptic ulcer of the stomach or one in the intestines, and so on. There is a layman's language discussion of ulcers in general in the booklet, "How to Heal Peptic Ulcers." For a copy, send a quarter and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Dr. Ruble, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611. A business-size envelope will do.

Dear Dr. Ruble: Where are women supposed to go for a Pap test when it is so expensive for just the few minutes' time it takes? I paid $25 plus lab work cost. I live on a very limited monthly income and I just cannot afford it. Are we older women supposed to pass it up? Don't we count for anything — we women past childbearing age? — Mrs. L.B.

Searching questions, these. Doctors do advise patients to take care of themselves and to get regular examinations and take expensive medicines, but costs continue to soar in the health field as in others.

The answers are not easy. Many cities do have good health clinics and other social services available at very low cost (nothing's entirely free). Yet many people just never seek them out or feel too proud to use them. In most cases, it is their tax money supporting the services so they should feel free to use them. At least you should be able to get the examination you mention. Check with a local cancer society office for information about services in your area. I doubt you need pass this vital bit of preventive medicine by. I would like to know how you fared.

Dear Dr. Ruble: I have been taking tranquilizers for seven years. I have been off them for two weeks now. I have been sweating real bad, like I had the flu. Could this be a drug hangover? I'm married, a female, and 45. — R.C.

The drug should be cleared from your system by two weeks. The perspiration might be due to the same tensions for which the drug was prescribed. If that was the case I can only suggest that you try to endure. If the choice is between a bit of perspiration and continued use of tranquilizers, sweat it out. They are the No. 1 used (misused?) drug in the world — not just in the U.S. We should do something to correct that. The flu has nothing to do with it. That is a virus infection. Granted, though, withdrawal from heavy longtime use of various drugs can produce physical symptoms. One should withdraw gradually. Your next step is to deal with any emotional problem that brought on the drug use in the first place.

Dear Dr. Ruble: If a woman taking birth control pills misses a period, should she continue the pills or stop? — Mrs. N.E.

Stop until pregnancy is ruled out.

Low blood sugar is often the cause of faintness, headaches, visual and emotional disturbances. To learn how it can be

Every woman can look and feel younger.

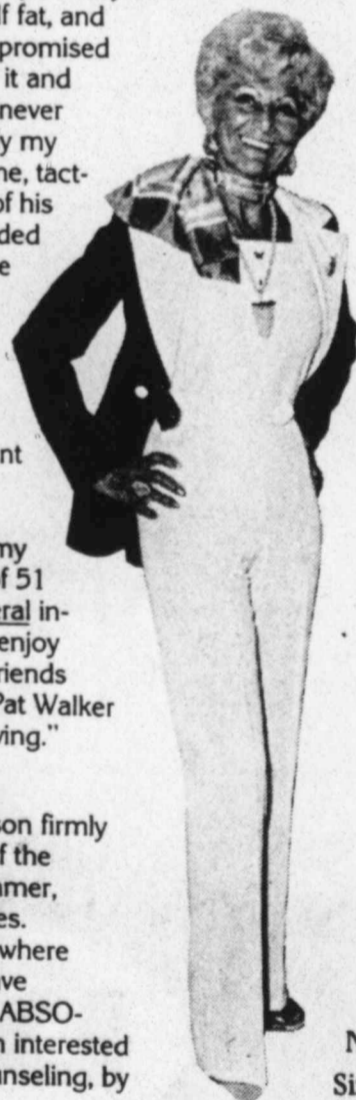

Let Pat Walker help create a new you.

S. Nelson is perhaps one of the more spectacular examples of the stunning results that may be attained through Pat Walker's Figure Perfection Salons International. Read what she has to say about the program that has benefited millions throughout the world over the past 26 years:

"I hated myself fat, and every new year I promised to really get with it and lose; however, it never happened. Finally my doctor advised me, tactfully, to stay out of his office until I decided to lose weight. He just couldn't help me. Out of desperation, not believing, I called for a courtesy treatment at Pat Walker's.

This was the turning point in my life. With a loss of 51 pounds and several inches, I began to enjoy my life with my friends and family, especially my three grandchildren. The Pat Walker program gave me a positive approach to everyday living."

Now Size 5!

How's your approach to life?

Now the national director for Pat Walker, Ms. Nelson firmly believes the program can upgrade the life outlook of the overweight as surely as it makes them slimmer, trimmer, more confident of their appearance—and themselves.

In the elegant atmosphere of a Pat Walker salon (where there's none of the noise and confusion you may have encountered at gyms and spas), you can reduce IN ABSOLUTE PRIVACY. Moreover, you have assistance from interested professional counselors (who also conduct their counseling, by the way, in complete privacy).

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

With a mere 21 high-card points, South might well have let the bidding die at five hearts, but like most players South hated to stop in no-man's land between game and slam. Things started out well for him with a diamond lead up to his ace-king-jack. There were still plenty of problems. He was going to have to try a heart finesse sometime or other as well as a spade finesse.

There is a well-known principle of good play: Take your off-suit finesse first. There was also the matter of getting rid of his possible diamond loser so South started by cashing his ace and queen of clubs. Then he took and lost the spade finesse.

A diamond came back. He won, led the eight of spades to dummy's ace and was then ready to attack hearts. He was careful to start by leading dummy's eight. This held and he led the queen next. West showed out. Now South cashed the king of clubs to discard his deuce of diamonds, repeated the trump finesse again, drew the last trump and claimed.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: When I was a baby my mother and father were divorced. He dropped out of our lives and offered no financial support. I never knew him. My mother eventually married a man who raised me as his own. I love him very much. To me he is my one and only father.

Recently I moved to another city. My natural father called on the phone. He wants to see me and thinks I want to see him because he heard from a relative that I had asked if I looked like him.

At first I thought it would be romantic and exciting, like something out of a movie. But now I realize I don't want to see him. He has his life and family and I have mine. What's more, it might hurt my parents.

He'll be calling again soon to get together. What should I do? I don't want to be cruel but I don't want to become involved either. — One Father Is Enough

Dear One: Apparently you've given your natural father the idea you ARE interested in reestablishing a bond. Now you've changed your mind. That's your privilege.

Simply tell him you've decided not to complicate your life — or his — by getting together and you now believe the early pattern of no communication was better for all concerned. Then stick to it.

Dear Ann Landers: May I borrow your column to speak to a hitchhiker? Dear Hitchhiker: I passed you slowly this evening. As I went by you said, "I would have picked YOU up, lady." Sir, there is no way I'd ever try to hitch a ride. I'd walk, take a bus, a taxi, or call a friend or relative. If I still had no ride, I wouldn't go.

I don't pick up thumbers because there's no way of knowing if they have a knife or a gun. By the same token, how do you know I'M safe? The newspapers are full of horror stories about soft-hearted people who gave a "nice-looking" per-

Three State Utilities May Have To Make Customer Refunds

AUSTIN (AP) — After a three-month investigation, the Texas Public Utility Commission staff has recommended almost $20 million be returned to customers of Texas Electric Service Co., Texas Power Light and Dallas Power Light. The three affiliate companies — subsidiaries in the Texas Utilities Co. system — will try to convince the commission not to order the refunds in a hearing that begins Tuesday and could last several weeks.

Among them, the utilities provide electricity to approximately 4 million persons in North, Central, East and West Texas, including the cities of Fort Worth, Dallas, Arlington, Midland, Odessa, Wichita Falls and Big Spring.

Almost all transactions among the three companies and other affiliates were studied by the commission staff. The major deal investigated involved TESCO's sale of electricity generated from its cheapest natural gas supply to TPL.

In exchange, TESCO acquired part ownership in the Martin Lake lignite plant near Henderson.

DPL also bought an interest in the plant and lignite reserves from TPL, but not in exchange for electricity.

John Bell, commission general counsel, says utility commission law on affiliate transactions requires that payments to one company cannot be higher than prices charged another.

In pre-filed testimony, Bell said he has no reason to believe the companies or their officials "willfully or knowingly" violated commission law, agency rules or engaged in criminal or civil misconduct.

The Martin Lake exchanges resulted in lower fuel costs to TPL customers while raising short-term costs to TESCO rate-payers.

Company officials contended in pre-filed testimony that customers had no right to challenge the energy transactions.

"The transaction was made for one reason only — to benefit the 1.1 million customers of the two companies (TESCO and TPL)," TESCO has said.

"Any attempts to order such 'refunds' would be unlawful and impermissible under the principle prohibiting retroactive rate-making," the companies contend.

Bill Avera, director of the commission's economic research division, has recommended the utilities be given four months to return the money — either by crediting bills or by cash vouchers.

ECONOMY CONFIDENCE DOWN
WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Federation of Independent Business says its survey of some 560,000 small business firms shows that small business confidence in the economy is down.

Hospital Shows It Like It Is

Most expectant parents don't see the hospital in which their baby will be born until the labor pains begin.

But Community Hospital, 5301 University Ave., has begun a monthly Pre-Natal Tea, in which husbands and wives, whose babies are due at the hospital the next month, are invited to tour the hospital's facilities and are given refreshments and a small gift of a baby rattle.

The hospital began the teas in December and Louise Stokes, director of volunteer services, says the response from the mothers-and-fathers-to-be has been very good.

"It helps the parents know what to expect," Mrs. Stokes said. "We show them the labor room, the fetal monitor equipment and where fathers who want to accompany their wives into the delivery room can change clothes."

Following the tour, the parents are served refreshments and given a baby rattle as a "party favor." Mrs. Stokes said. There also is a drawing for a door prize — a diaper bag.

This month's pre-natal tea will be held at 7 p.m. today with parents gathering in the hospital's lobby. Eighteen couples have been invited.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I bought 100 shares of stock, at $43 a share some years ago. The company is still operating, after coming out of bankruptcy about three years ago. But the stock is worthless and has no present market value. How can I take this loss off my income tax? I tried to get a letter from brokers, stating that the stock is valueless. But no broker will give me such a letter. How can I write this off?

A. I doubt that you can. Since the company is still operating, it has to be worth something. The total present value of the company may be very small. Nonetheless, there has to be some value there. And, because stock represents ownership in the company, each of those 100 shares you have must have some value.

Granted, the current value of the stock may be very low — maybe only pennies a share. And, as long as there is any value there, you can't write your $4,300 off as a tax loss.

If you can find someone who will buy that stock from you, that's a different story. Then, you would establish a loss. A brokerage firm with which you do business might buy the stock from you. If you sell the stock for a penny a share, you'll get $1. That would give you a $4,299 long-term capital loss to report on Schedule D of your federal income tax return.

If you don't sell and if the stock becomes truly worthless, you can then report it as having a "zero" value as of Dec. 31 in the year in which it became valueless. That would give you a $4,300 long-term capital loss.

Q. I bought 100 shares of stock. My broker firm sent me a certificate for 100 shares of a different stock, with a somewhat similar name but which is worth about eight times more than the stock I ordered and paid for.

A. I have already received one dividend check from the company whose stock certificate was sent to me. I cashed that check, because it was made out to me. I haven't told the broker about this. Will they catch this error?

A. Maybe, yes; maybe, no. With most brokerage firms operating "sophisticated" computer systems these days, errors normally go undetected after they are put into the system. Most likely, there was one human error — of some person pushing the wrong buttons. As a result, you became the registered holder of the wrong stock.

What to do now? Let your conscience be your guide.

Q. I am 23 and would like to retire at 30. I have concluded that my desired retirement life style will require $9,000 income annually. To accomplish this, I intend to acquire $100,000 by age 30 and then live on the interest. What do you suggest I examine?

A. Your whole plan, which I have to call "flakey."

As I understand your letter, you already have a method worked out for getting hold of $100,000. That's good — because neither I nor anyone else could come up with any sure plan for putting together that amount of money in seven years.

You seem to be looking for a place to put that money, after your very early retirement. You'll have to look, at that time. No one can tell now what interest rates will be then. Savings certificates, bonds or preferred stocks might be the highest-yielding things, then. They might not be.

In your long-term planning, I hope you have thought about inflation. The way the buying power of the dollar keeps declining, $9,000 a year won't provide a very desirable life style seven years hence. You might reach age 30 and find that you have to keep working, just like the rest of us.

DOYLE welcomes written questions, but he will be able to provide answers only through the column.

Young Conductor Gets Rave Notices

LONDON (AP) — James Conlon, a 28-year-old American conductor, scored a success when he took over the London Philharmonic Orchestra at short notice and conducted Dvorak's Symphony No. 7.

Conlon, a New Yorker, has won rave notices conducting the Metropolitan Opera and most major U.S. orchestras. He was already booked to conduct the first half of Sunday evening's concert when Mstislav Rostropovich came down with the flu that afternoon. Rostropovich was to play Dvorak's Cello Concerto and then conduct the Dvorak symphony.

Conlon conducted the orchestra from memory in which one London newspaper critic called an "eloquent" and "impassioned" account.

TALKS PLANNED

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — Turkey and the United States will begin technical-level talks Tuesday on a plan for cooperation in criminal cases and a treaty for extradition, the Turkish foreign ministry announced Monday. The announcement said a political officer from the U.S. Embassy and the head of the consulate section at the Turkish foreign ministry would head the negotiating teams.

Award Winning Show Planned That Way

NEW YORK (AP) — "The Advocates," public TV's award-winning debate series, features testimony from expert witnesses on both sides of hot political issues. The weekly confrontation is far from a consideration of extremes, says Marilyn Berger, whose job it is to keep it that way.

"It's just too easy to bring together the black and white on an issue," says Miss Berger, who covered foreign policy for the Washington Post and later the White House for NBC News.

"Our first program dealt with U.S. involvement in covert activities," she says. "It's easy enough to say, 'No assassinations.' But what about deciding whether we should give money to foreign governments when the Soviets are supporting the opposition?"

"Bill Colby, the former CIA director, was one of the witnesses, and I was amazed at the reaction. I sensed the audience at Harvard, where we do the show, strongly sympathetic to the Colby side, that maybe we've gone too far in restricting the CIA.

"You would never have found that kind of feeling there three or four years ago, and I think it's at least partly a result of the way the issue was debated."

Miss Berger is in her second year as moderator of "The Advocates," which is produced by WGBH, Boston's public TV station, and Harvard's Institute of Politics. She shares the gavel with Charles Nesson, moderator for this week's program, "Freedom of the Press."

Miss Berger appears next week in a debate on competency testing.

"The Advocates" is aired in Lubbock at 5 p.m. Sundays on Channel 5.

"The Advocates," first broadcast in 1969, was aired live until this season. The program now is taped from the Forum of Harvard's John F. Kennedy School of Government, but the debate is conducted as if the program were live.

"It's no accident what happens on the air, that the program moves the way it does," says Miss Berger. "They prepare very carefully, and go over in advance with the witnesses the kinds of things that will be covered.

"It's not at all staged. The witnesses don't know the questions and answers, but we're on the air only an hour, so you can cover only so many subjects. You can't get sidetracked."

"I'm sort of the conscience of the audience," she says. "Part of my job is to bring out the issues that the well-read, intelligent viewer who watches the program would like to hear discussed."

The format is a combination of courtroom confrontation and classic debate. The advocates argue their positions with the help of expert witnesses, like Colby, who then are subjected to cross-examination.

At the end of each program, the television audience is invited to vote on the question under consideration, for example, "Should our foreign policy include covert action by the CIA?"

Each response is tallied, and the results are forwarded to Congress, the White House, and other interested parties.

"The Advocates" in past seasons won Peabody and Emmy awards, and a citation by the American Bar Association.

Marilyn Berger's assignment with "The Advocates" takes up only a portion of her work week. She anchors "Special Edition," a nightly "op-ed" type news program for New York's WNET.

New Phonograph Also Shows Pictures

NEW YORK (AP) — First there was the phonograph, then radio, television and color TV. Now two electronics giants are betting the next big consumer electronic item will be the "videodisc player" — a record player that also provides pictures.

But watch out, the videodisc machine you buy may become a white elephant.

Two companies are developing players but the machines and their discs will be incompatible. Once it becomes clear which type is more popular, experts expect the market for the other to wither, leaving consumers who bought the loser with an expensive oddity for which no new discs are being manufactured.

The combatants are RCA and N.V. Philips, the Dutch electronics giant. Both have gambled millions on the competition. Philips, through its American subsidiary Magnavox, won the race to the showroom in December by offering some players for sell in Atlanta.

RCA's machine won't be on the market for at least a year, but RCA says it will cost only $400, compared to $695 for the Magnavox player.

With a player hooked to a TV, consumers will be able to watch movies within months of their appearing in theaters. The manufacturers expect rock bands to make discs that duplicate their hit records, with pictures added. Ballets and operas will be available. The discs cost $15.95 for recent movies and less for most other programs.

The potential market for the players is huge. Virtually every home in America has a television. Nearly four out of five homes have color sets.

But before money is made, videodiscs must win consumer acceptance and prove they can compete with videotape recorders, already provided by several manufacturers. Those machines, of which about 800,000 have been sold, have the advantage of being able to record programs off television. But they cost more and provide lower quality pictures and sound.

Proponents of disc players are not worried by competition from the tape machines. As Jim Rittinger, an Atlanta dealer, puts it, discs will be more popular "for the same reason that 90 percent (of the public) won't go out and buy a tape recorder and record the hit songs off the radio. They buy records instead."

The Magnavox machines were an immediate hit in Atlanta. More than 100 players have been sold and hundreds more ordered. The company says sales will begin in the Seattle area this spring and will spread gradually throughout the country.

The players are similar in some ways. The pictures are bright and crisp and the sound is in high fidelity and stereo, far better than is available from television. They hook up to any television set and can be connected to a stereo sound system.

"It's wonderful on Sunday mornings, when there's nothing good on TV," said Ray Kuehne of Cumming, Ga., one of the first buyers. Like others, he has discs of recent movies and of some educational programs, which he said fascinate his two sons, ages five and eight.

The industry is fascinated, too. RCA President Edgar H. Griffiths says videodiscs will become "a multi-billion dollar business in the 1980s." Magnavox President Kenneth Meinken thinks sales will reach $1 billion by 1982.

"It will be the greatest consumer product to come along," predicts Marvin Saffian, an analyst with the Wall Street firm of Loeb Rhoades, Hornblower & Co.

But Saffian adds that eventually the market "will shake out and there will be a lot of losers."

The Magnavox player is more sophisticated than its RCA counterpart, offering slow motion and stop action as well as normal speed. It uses a laser beam to read the discs, meaning they are never touched by a stylus and, Phillips says, will last virtually indefinitely.

"You'd need a pen knife to scratch it badly," said June Hensley, a Phillips spokesman. "You'd have to do it deliberately."

That is a selling point for Magnavox. The RCA machine uses a plastic disc that looks much like a phonograph record and is played by a diamond stylus. It can be scratched and needs more careful handling than the Phillips disc, facts that led RCA to design a system allowing the disc to be inserted into the player and returned to its holder without being touched.

But RCA Vice President Richard Sonnenfeldt says the disc "really is not vulnerable to fingerprints" and notes it can easily be washed. He says it will stand up for thousands of playings.

Both 12-inch discs rotate at rapid speeds — 1,800 revolutions a minute for the Phillips system and 450 rpm for the RCA system — and manage to store huge amounts of information. The RCA disc has 9,500 grooves to the inch, or 40 within the width of a human hair. Phillips does not use grooves, but says that 54,000 separate pictures can be put on one disc.

The competition between the two companies has been going on for years, as each firm nervously watched the other develop its system and pondered whether to risk the millions of dollars needed to get the system in operation.

RCA delayed for months its decision to go into commercial production and as a result will not have any in stores until next year at the earliest.

That delay, says RCA's Herbert Schlosser, will not be critical. "The question will not be 'who's out first?' but 'who's out with what the consumer will buy?'" he said.

A former president of NBC who is in charge of lining up programming for RCA disks, Schlosser says most movie companies are eager to sign deals. The movie companies have been alarmed by the spread of videotape because it means that once a film is shown on television, anyone with a tape machine can copy it. Two studios have sued Sony, maker of the Betamax videotape machines, for copyright infringement.

With discs, the studios have much more control over their product. Royalty agreements have been signed giving them a fee of about $2 for each disc sold.

The RCA discs will provide one hour of programming on each side, allowing most movies to be on one disc. The discs for Magnavox machines can provide the same only by sacrificing such features as slow motion and freeze frame. Otherwise, the discs provide only 30 minutes a side.

Clorox Product Warning Amended

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Clorox Company will have to carry a new warning on labels that its popular cleanser, Soft Scrub, might cause scratching of surfaces, the Federal Trade Commission said Monday.

The company, based in Oakland, Calif., said the FTC action will not cause substantial change in a warning that already appears on the product.

The new warning, which will take effect after a 60-day public comment period, will say, "Attention: To prevent scratching fiberglass, plastic and appliance enamel on refrigerators, dishwashers, oven doors and on other appliances: Use sparingly and rub gently with a damp sponge."

A company spokeswoman, who declined to be quoted by name, said, "We don't anticipate any material changes" because of the FTC case. She said the new warning will replace one that says, "Use lighter pressure and a sponge to clean fiberglass, plastic and appliance enamel."

The FTC charged in a complaint that started the case that the firm failed to provide adequate warnings when it introduced the product in 1976. It said this misled the public and was an unfair trade practice.

Since its introduction, the product has had great success and is used in an estimated 8 million American homes.

In signing the consent order, the company did not acknowledge any law violation.

The consent order also requires Clorox to have substantiation for all claims for the product.

Photography, Film Day Set

Photographers, imaginative films and photographic exhibits will be featured Wednesday during Photography and Film Day of Texas Tech University's Mass Communications Week.

Events will include a 9:35 a.m. address by Patrick O'Dell, CBS photographer and cameraman, and a 10:35 a.m. talk by Fred Bunch, Houston Post photographer.

O'Dell and Bunch will conduct a panel discussion on photography and film at 1:35 p.m.

Other afternoon sessions are devoted to film. The 2:35 p.m. showings will include "Binary Bit Patterns," "Braverman's Condensed Cream of Beattles," and "Frogs."

"Binary Bit Patterns" is a three-minute computer-programmed film study exploring the graphic variations of a Persian-like pattern.

The era of the 1960s and the Beatles is explored in "Braverman's Condensed Cream of Beattles."

"Frogs" delves into man's various relationships with the long-legged amphibians. The 15-minute film draws attention to men who hunt frogs, a woman who collects frog pins and sells frogs for dissection, a frog-hypnotist, a chef who prepares frogs' legs for human consumption and humans who participate in the Calaveras County frog jumping contest.

Audiences attending the 3:35 p.m. session will view "Camera Magic: The Art of Special Effects." "The Searching Eye," "Stuntman," Clio Award-winning commercials, and films by Texas Tech mass communications students.

"In this film we are out to trick you," the viewer is told in the opening segment of "Camera Magic." The film illustrates how to create such effects as rotation in space, multiple images, upside-down and reverse film action and the instant appearance and disappearance of objects and people.

"The Searching Eye" builds upon the simple actions of a 10-year-old boy to create visual metaphors of a world that is normally unseen. It is not what the lad sees, but what he does not see, that adds an extra dimension to the 18-minute film.

"Stuntman" spends the day with Greg Anderson, a motion picture stuntman who discloses a few of the tricks of his trade and expresses feelings about his job. Some special effects explored in the 11-minute film include gunshot wounds and free-falls from tall buildings.

Photography and film students and faculty at Texas Tech, as just one aspect of this week's Mass Communications Week. Each day is devoted to seminars, demonstrations and lectures on a separate facet of mass communications. All sessions are free and the public is invited.

Rhodesian Warplanes Bomb Mozambique Guerrilla Dump

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (AP) — Rhodesia said its warplanes bombed a guerrilla "storage complex" in neighboring Mozambique on Monday. The attack appeared to be the start of a campaign to make sure black nationalists do not sabotage upcoming elections.

The elections, scheduled for April 20, will give Rhodesia's black majority limited control of the government after 90 years of rule by the whites. Black nationalists have vowed to disrupt the voting.

A Rhodesian communique Monday said the warplanes struck in the morning against a storage complex of Robert Mugabe's Zimbabwe African National Union located in Chimoi, about 80 miles east of the Rhodesian border.

The communique said only that the complex was hit and all planes returned safely to base. There was no immediate comment from Mozambique.

The raid was the third reported in the past three days by Rhodesian planes against foreign bases of black nationalist guerrillas.

According to reports from Lusaka, the Zambian capital, Rhodesian jets struck on both Saturday and Sunday against camps of Joshua Nkomo's Zimbabwe African People's Union around Livingston, near famed Victoria Falls.

Mugabe and Nkomo form the Patriotic Front, a guerrilla alliance that fought white minority rule in Rhodesia and opposes the upcoming elections planned by Prime Minister Ian D. Smith and his biracial executive council.

The Rhodesians acknowledged only Saturday's raid. In Lusaka, sources said only two men were injured in Saturday's raid because the camps had been evacuated in anticipation of massive retaliatory Rhodesian raids following the downing of a Rhodesian airliner last week by ZAPU. Fifty-nine persons were killed in the fiery crash of a Viscount near the resort of Kariba.

Last September, when guerrillas shot down a Rhodesian airliner, the Rhodesians retaliated with a series of major raids against ZAPU camps, including some as close as six miles to Lusaka.

But the Rhodesians said the new raids were part of a regular campaign against foreign guerrilla bases — not the revenge they have vowed for the downed Viscount.

Lt. Gen. Peter Walls said last Thursday that the military would concentrate on preventing sabotage of the upcoming elections and would strike guerrillas in neighboring black-ruled countries if necessary in order to do so.

"To make sure that we create the right atmosphere for our people to be able to vote, our strategy must be based on a countrywide concept and be external as well as internal."

According to Rhodesian military men, Chimoi in Mozambique and Livingston in Zambia are important staging points for the infiltration.

In Zambia, the Rhodesian raids has triggered a series of attacks against whites accused of acting as Rhodesian spies.

According to reports reaching the capital of Lusaka:

ZAPU guerrillas surrounded a farm Friday just outside Livingstone and opened fire with mortars and small arms. The house was destroyed and the farmer was wounded in the arm. The man subsequently was evacuated from a Livingstone hospital when a lynch mob showed up.

On Saturday, another white Zambian, Carl Bothma, was shot and killed about seven miles west of Lusaka. His wife said they were stopped by a group of 50 ZAPU guerrillas and led to a nearby ZAPU camp. Bothma was shot when he resisted having a hood put on, his wife said. The Zambian government said Bothma was shot trying to run a bandit roadblock, and has arrested an unidentified man.

Also Saturday, an unidentified foreign tourist reportedly was wounded by Zambian troops on the Lusaka-Livingstone road. The man was also accused of being a Rhodesian spy.

Following a series of Rhodesian air raids into Zambia last October, dozens of whites were harassed and beaten by black guerrillas, troops and civilians in a campaign to "root out Rhodesian infiltrators."

YOUR PERSONAL BIORHYTHMS

By Bernard Gittelson, Author of "Biorhythm: A Personal Science"

The personal science of biorhythm can tell you how your day will go. Now you can judge the highs and lows of not only yourself, but loved ones and friends, and celebrities and stars. Biorhythm, our newest scientific discipline, is the study of the built-in natural cycles that powerfully influence our behavior.

Joint Rate Proposal Approved By Panel

A-J Austin Bureau
 AUSTIN — Legislation permitting railroads, motor carriers and buses to propose joint rates for approval by the Texas Railroad Commission has been approved by the Senate economic development committee and forwarded to the Senate for a vote.

Senate Bill 417, sponsored by Wichita Falls Sen. Ray Farabee, would exempt those activities from antitrust laws.

Farabee, presenting the legislation, said eliminating group requests for rate changes would quadruple the number of rate cases handled yearly by the Railroad Commission.

The legislation also reaffirms the commission's duty to regulate the activities of those carriers, as well as set their rates.

Tulia Youth Gets 4-H Scholarship

TULIA (Special) — Regional winners have been announced in the 1978 Texas 4-H Grain Sorghum Production Project.

Dudley E. McClurg of Tulia placed first and will receive a $500 scholarship for producing the most irrigated sorghum in Region 1 of the project.

Other winners, in order of placing, in the irrigated sorghum division of Region 1 include Jody Foster, Lockney; Lanny C. Fulton, Floydada; and Don D. Stone, Abernathy. Foster will receive a $50 U.S. Savings Bond and Fulton and Stone will each receive a $25 bond.

The contest was conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. The Texas 4-H Foundation arranged with Louisiana Seed Company, Inc. and Funk's Seed International for sponsorship of the awards.

Texas is divided in three regions.

Theme Of 'Mrs. Warren's Profession' Still Valid

By WILLIAM D. KERNS
A-J Entertainment Editor

When Texas Tech's University Theater was pressured last summer into canceling its proposed production of "Equus," director Ronald Schulz all but editorialized his views through his choice of "Mrs. Warren's Profession" by George Bernard Shaw as a replacement. After all, this particular Shavian drama also was thought to be controversial, and was subsequently censored and banned by an outraged public. And why? Because it dealt with such "vile" issues as the causes of prostitution, society's hypocrisy and (gasp!) women's rights.

What Schulz may be saying is that yesterday's censored works are usually tomorrow's classics. Dramatic society, which now reveres Shaw as one of the greatest English-language playwrights since Shakespeare, is now appalled with the notion that "Mrs. Warren's Profession" could ever be banned. Perhaps Tech officials of the next generation will feel the same way about "Equus."

In any case, the University Theater production of "Mrs. Warren's Profession" is a fine one, ably illustrating Shaw's ability at better attacking The System than individuals. The profession of the title is, of course, the world's oldest. And we meet all six key characters in the opening scene: Mrs. Warren, now operating several brothels; Vivie

Warren, the curious daughter; Praed, a self-proclaimed anarchist more in love with art than authority; Sir George Crofts, a rather vicious symbol of greedy society; Frank Gardner, a likeable sort of gigolo who wants to marry Vivie for her mother's money; and the Rev. Samuel Gardner, a milkops clergyman with a rather delicate past.

Those who prefer action and movement, not to mention easily definable characters, may not take an immediate liking to this play. Shaw gives his actors long reams of dialogue, allowing his points to be made through a series of dramatic conversations. In Act Two, for example, he seems to be pleading the case of the prostitute by allowing Mrs. Warren to relate the circumstances which led her to her trade. One of her sisters, she tells us, was very proper and died working in a factory for slave wages; yet another Audiences are not allowed to really take sides in a Shaw conversation; his characters all have their black and white sides. And as the playwright once said, "There are two tragedies in life. One is not to get your heart's desire. The other is to get it." He makes his point in "Mrs. Warren's Profession" through a tragic and cold ending.

Ronald Schulz's direction, aside from having young Frank speak with his back to the audience more than once, is very good. He has realized the limits of this dialogue-conscious play and has thus set all scenes in the center of the stage on an aproned platform. Efficient crew members change the locations through rapid construction of fences and tables. Entrances come from both the wings and the orchestra pit. And the flat lighting adds to the darker tones of the story.

Acting is good across the boards, so much so that no one performer stands out over the rest. Diane Hosey is a bold and brassy Mrs. Warren, her values transmitted through the aid of both dialogue and the talents of costume designer Nancy Steele. Miss Hosey holds up her side of the dramatic debates very well. Deborah V. Lemen, whose accent seemed to fluctuate in degrees, offers an icy portrayal of the daughter who learns the truth and comes to shun romance and beauty. Her words are chopped out in fragments, making the necessary biting edge most obvious.

T.H. Maynor is wonderfully despicable as Crofts, right down to the lascivious chuckle and the egotistical ability to emit the final cruel word. And young David Triplett also is deserving of kudos, as he instills just the right amount of jolly spirit and hypocritical etiquette to make Frank appear both believable and likeable.

All in all, "Mrs. Warren's Profession," despite the editor's notes, does not possess the same punch today as when first performed. Times have changed, at least to some small extent. But Shaw's statements are still valid, and the fact he manages to interest us in character debates without ever really separating those characters into Good Guys and Bad Guys makes this theatrical work all the more fascinating.

"Mrs. Warren's Profession" will be performed at 8:15 p.m. today and Wednesday at the Texas Tech University Theater. Call the theater box office for reservations.

A-J THEATER REVIEW

er sister was said to be too bold and reportedly committed suicide by jumping into an icy river.

Mrs. Warren reveals she was "more afraid of the factory than the river." Then, when she found out the latter sister was alive and very well off, she went into partnership with her.

Mixing wit and biting drama, Shaw initially makes us feel for the position of a woman in the late 19th and early 20th centuries. Women were rarely allowed to succeed on their own financially without entering into some off-color business. But on the other hand, Shaw does not show favoritism to any one character as Mrs. Warren is quite happy with her lifestyle. Perhaps her strained relationship with her daughter could have been avoided had she not lived one life while believing in another. But then, Shaw tells us, that was society's demand — a society which capitalized on a woman's appearance for profit, a society in which respectable men wisely invested in profitable businesses they publicly downgraded.

Pair Makes It Big With 'Fotonovels'

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Classical guitarist Herbert Stewart is proof that the builder of a better mousetrap can still find fortune in Hollywood.

Stewart, 36, and his partner, Argentinian Laszlo Papas, are co-owners of Fotonovels, a publishing phenomenon that has brought studios knocking on their door.

Showing of 'Roots II' Sparks Demonstrations

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Authorities said Monday they are seeking the persons who set crosses ablaze at the office door of the NAACP and at a television station carrying the sequel to "Roots."

The flaming crosses, ignited Sunday night after "Roots: The Next Generation" began on television, caused little damage.

Meanwhile, in Huntsville, Ala., some 20 robed members of the Ku Klux Klan picketed station WAAY-TV Sunday to protest the showing of the "Roots" series.

Nashville authorities also were seeking whoever stole a city library engraving portraying Confederate Gen. Nathan Bedford Forrest, a founder of the Ku Klux Klan.

Ray Aldridge, Metro Nashville fire marshal, said witnesses saw two men get out of a pickup truck in an alley near the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People's building on the city's north side Sunday but did not get a good look at them.

"A short time later the cross was ignited and the men were seen fleeing from the area," he said. "The building was unoccupied at the time of the incident. There were no injuries and the fire caused little or no damage."

About 5 feet tall and 3 feet wide, the cross was fashioned of two-by-fours covered with burlap and saturated with gasoline. The heat broke the office's glass door.

TOO HOT TO SELL
TORONTO (AP) — A Pablo Picasso painting stolen over the weekend will be virtually impossible to sell because it is too widely known, a gallery spokeswoman said.

SHAVIAN DISCUSSION — David Triplett and Diane Hosey are caught in a witty discussion in the University Theater's current production of George Bernard Shaw's "Mrs. Warren's Profession." The play will be staged at 8:15 p.m. tonight and Wednesday, with ticket information available by calling the theater box office. (Staff Photo by Gary Davis)

'Roots II' Rates Tops On Nielsen

NEW YORK (AP) — "Roots II" beat the competition in three major cities Sunday night, though the audience for the first chapter was considerably lower than for Part I of the original mini-series.

The ABC show beat "Marathon Man," on CBS, and "American Graffiti," on NBC. Both films were getting their first television airing.

The rating for "Roots II" was 28.6 in New York City, 30 in Chicago and 26.1 in Los Angeles, figures from the A.C. Nielsen Company showed Monday. That means that of all the homes in New York City with television, 28.6 percent saw "Roots II" Sunday night.

The rating for the first installment in the original Roots mini-series January 23, 1977, was 38.5 in New York, 45.6 in Chicago and 42.1 in Los Angeles. "American Graffiti," the movie said to have inspired ABC's "Happy Days" series, was a strong second Sunday night in all three cities, with ratings of 17.1 in New York, 24.2 in Chicago, and 19.7 in Los Angeles.

Ratings for "Marathon Man" were 15.6 in New York, 14.9 in Chicago, and 12.5 in Los Angeles.

ABC's research department estimated a nationwide audience of 65 million people for "Roots II" Sunday night. National ratings will be available later in the week.

The commercial networks are in the midst of a periodic ratings "sweep," during which local advertising rates are determined. That accounts for the unusually competitive schedule Sunday night.

During the first "Roots" series, rating climbed continuously, until the final show became the top-rated program in the history of television.

WHITE WHITE HOUSE—The White House blends with the sky in Washington Monday as the heaviest snowfall of the season hit. Up to 2 feet of the powdery stuff had fallen at daybreak and the snow continued through the day, piling up to 23 inches on the ground at National Airport. (AP Laserphoto)

First President's Farewell Recited

WASHINGTON (AP) — A rare blizzard isolated Capitol Hill in a whirl of snow Monday but failed to choke off senatorial oratory or stop the traditional readings of George Washington's farewell address.

Rep. William H. Boner, R-Tenn., dressed in a red jogging suit, had an audience of just four of the 435 members of the House as he sped through a drastically abbreviated version of the first president's 1796 farewell, on the 247th anniversary of Washington's birth.

Sen. John Warner, R-Va., stogged through snowdrifts from his home in Georgetown to give a complete version of the speech, ending his reading after 55 minutes, the second longest time so far recorded.

Boner, who lives two blocks from the Capitol, was drafted for the traditional reading at the last minute. He borrowed a coat and tie from a security officer in an effort to conform to the House dress code.

It took him just five minutes to complete an abbreviated reading of the speech called by Washington "the counsels of an old and affectionate friend."

Orator Rides Tractor

Warner, Virginia's junior senator, said he made the last leg of his two-hour trip across the city aboard a tractor provided by protesting farmers encamped below the Capitol.

Warner read the address in stately tones, taking longer at the job than any senator since Sen. Jennings Randolph, D-W.Va., who did the reading in one hour and eight minutes in 1962.

"I intend to read every word," Warner said. "The nation needs it."

Sen. Jake Garn, R-Utah, who claims distant kinship to Washington through the first president's brother, read the speech in 39 minutes in 1975, the fastest time yet recorded.

The annual reading has been a tradition since 1888.

Despite the snow and clogged streets, some 100 tourists were on hand in the Senate and 50 in the House to hear Washington's warning to the infant nation to steer clear of foreign entanglements.

Monday was to have marked the beginning of a two-week shakedown of a sophisticated, $2 million video system for continuous television coverage of House sessions. However, not enough people showed up to operate the system.

Warner said he believes Washington's advice that "honesty is the best policy" remains a valid message for our time.

Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., said he is impressed with Washington's warnings against deficit financing.

Warner said the city, with little traffic, was "like something out of a Currier and Ives etching."

"There was no sound but the snow falling," he said. "I thought of Washington at Valley Forge."

"I heard a noise behind me and three people whooshed down the hill on skis," he said.

For most, the deep snow was only an inconvenience, something to remember and tell tales about.

But it also brought tragedy to the Capitol.

At 9:07 a.m. two Capitol policemen found the body of Arthur Kuhl, 54, the assistant secretary of the Senate, in the snow near the Senate office buildings.

Kuhl, formerly a top aide for the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and a Senate employee since 1953, apparently was stricken while walking to work. He was pronounced dead at a local hospital.

Russians Avoid Hint Of Belligerent Acts

MOSCOW (AP) — The Kremlin appeared to be staying out of the Chinese-Vietnamese conflict Monday after issuing a statement conspicuously void of possible Soviet moves against Peking. However, the Soviets were said to have put their army on alert and canceled leaves.

The key phrase in Sunday's Kremlin statement of support for Vietnam was, "the heroic Vietnamese people...are capable of standing up for themselves."

This was followed by the reminder that Vietnam has "reliable friends" and the warning to Peking to "stop before it is too late." The statement fell short of suggesting direct Soviet intervention.

ese officials on the plight of 5,000 American passport holders and dependents remaining in Vietnam. She is chairman of the House Subcommittee on Immigration, Refugees and International Law.

European Concern Expressed

The nine members of the European Common Market expressed concern over "the serious consequences for international relations."

Do Ngoc Duong, Vietnam's charge d'affaires in Bangkok, said Vietnam has not requested Soviet troops but is in contact with Moscow.

An editorial in Nhan Dan, the Vietnamese Communist Party newspaper, accused China of "colluding with the imperialist forces who once invaded China and plundered the Chinese people," a reference to Chinese moves to improve relations with the West and modernize China.

Kremlin Options Mute

Monday, the Chinese advance seemed to have stopped and it appeared the Kremlin might not have to consider the options its statement left open.

Reports from Hanoi indicated the Chinese had halted three to six miles inside Vietnam as they had indicated they might in their statement that their attack was a punitive one intended to "teach Vietnam a lesson."

Moscow reports were circulating that the Soviet military had been put on alert and that leaves were canceled because of fighting in Asia. The Soviet Defense Ministry's foreign desk, when asked about the report, said Monday night, "we do not give out such information."

However Soviet journalist Victor Louis, often an unofficial pipeline for leaks, reported in the London Evening News that the army has been put in combat readiness and that troops were being called back from leave. He said in response to a telephone query that such alerts are not unusual here.

The Soviet statement, which came amid a barrage of anti-Chinese propaganda, demonstrations outside the Chinese embassy and rallies at institutes and factories around the country, said the Soviet Union will "honor its treaty obligations" with Vietnam.

American Slogan Surfaces

As a rallying cry, the Kremlin has brought out an American protest slogan from the days of U.S. involvement in Southeast Asia: "Hands off Vietnam."

It was a statement the Kremlin had to make, just three-and-a-half months after signing a "treaty of friendship and cooperation" with Vietnam. It went no further than the wording of the treaty, which provides only that "in case either party is attacked or threatened with attack, the two parties...shall immediately consult each other."

The treaty does not bind the two sides to military aid, and the Soviets offered none.

The question remained of what the Soviets might do if the Chinese do not "stop before it is too late."

The two nations share a 4,500-mile border which has been the scene of hundreds of clashes over the last 10 years, and there are reports that the Chinese have evacuated some border villages in case the Soviets launch their own strike.

The sharpest border fighting came in March 1969 when more than 200 Soviet troops and as many as 800 Chinese were reportedly killed.

heard from again and the ship sailed for Diego Garcia.

Ham radioplayers notified the U.S. government and the Navy sent a reconnaissance plane from Diego Garcia. The aircraft dropped food and medicine to the crew and then began escorting it south.

The operators gave the names of the crewmen as Kyomi Oda of Japan, Frederick Neil Lockard, Oscar Leroy Hromatka, Nicholas Ogburn Laney, Gary Blumenthal and radio officer Gary Milton Ruehle, 38, and his son, 13-year-old John Arthur who worked as cabin boy. The teenager reportedly suffered a blow to the head during the takeover, but his condition was not known.

The Ruehles are from Mount Clemens, Mich., but hometowns of the others were not known.

'Like A Tarzan Movie'

Gary Ruehle's sister, Nancy Ruehle, said in Mount Clemens that she had spoken by radio-telephone with her brother Sunday. "The way he described it to me it was like a Tarzan movie," she said.

She said he told her, "Three hundred natives boarded the ship. They tried to drown the crew in the engine room, but the crew had control of the pumps... They (the pirates) pillaged the ship."

She was asked about her brother and said, "I don't think this incident will ice his future plans at all, unfortunately."

"They were running into each other it was so bad," said Pat Chitwood, operations and safety duty officer at Dulles.

Charles Stuart of the District of Columbia's transportation department said it would probably be some time Friday before roads "will be in half-way decent shape."

Heating Problems Arise

A command center in the mayor's office was deluged with calls from residents complaining of frozen water lines and insufficient heat. Washington, said Stuart, is just not equipped "to fight a storm of this intensity."

At mid-afternoon only a few vehicles were on the road, but some cross-country skiers were spotted.

As the storm howled across Pennsylvania, more than 14 inches of snow was dumped on Harrisburg, the state capital. The National Weather Service said it was the worst snowstorm in south central Pennsylvania in 15 years.

In Philadelphia, where the airports were closed when snow reached 11 inches deep, two persons were injured in a collision of two elevated trains. Officials said blowing snow was causing poor visibility at the time of the collision.

Drifts up to 3 feet in parts of New Jersey brought traffic to a standstill and forced several motorists to abandon their cars, police said. The speed limit on the New Jersey Turnpike was reduced to 35 mph.

In what has been called the coldest winter on record in some parts of the country, the thermometer dropped to new depths in some areas accustomed to frigid weather.

Great Lakes Frozen

For all practical purposes, the Great lakes from Lake Erie through Lake Superior, were frozen over, while Lake Ontario is 90 to 95 percent covered with ice.

Prince's Birthday Not Celebrated

LONDON (AP) — Prince Andrew, second son of Queen Elizabeth II, spent his 19th birthday Monday engrossed in his studies at the spartan Gordonstoun School in Scotland.

The queen and her husband, Prince Philip, are on an 18-day tour of Saudi Arabia and other Arab nations in the Middle East, so there was no family birthday celebration, a Buckingham Palace spokeswoman said.

Andrew is preparing for school-leaving exams, after which he plans to enter the Royal Navy as his father and older brother, Prince Charles, did before him.

Curious Twin Locates Long Lost Brother

LIMA, Ohio (AP) — James Springer, brought up believing that his identical twin had died at birth, says meeting his brother face-to-face was "the greatest thing that ever happened to me."

Born in August 1939 in Piqua, Ohio, the brothers were adopted by different families when they were only weeks old. They say they don't know what has happened to their biological parents nor why they were put up for adoption. Originally, both sets of adoptive parents — Jess and Lucille Lewis and Ernest and Sarah Springer — had been told the other twin had died at birth. But Mrs. Lewis learned the truth by accident when she returned to probate court to complete adoption procedures.

As years passed, Lewis wondered about his brother, but he said he hesitated to try to find him because he was "afraid it might stir up some problems."

Lewis' mother says she believes her son "was afraid his brother might have a little more money than he had, or be better educated, or a little better looking."

Eventually, however, curiosity overcame Lewis, who works as a security guard at a steel company. The Miami County Probate Court located the Springers, who had remained in Piqua, and wrote them that Lewis had inquired about his brother's existence.

Springer, who lives in Dayton and works as a record clerk for a utility firm, then contacted Lewis and drove to his brother's home in Lima earlier this month.

Besides having the same first name, the brothers each first married and later divorced women named Linda. They have taken vacations on the same beach in St. Petersburg, Fla. Each has had police training and worked part time with law enforcement agencies.

They both name carpentry and mechanical drawing among their hobbies.

Dallasite Triggers Raid By Commandos

DALLAS (AP) — Computer magnate H. Ross Perot said Monday he arranged for an American-led commando squad to free two of his employees being held prisoner by the Iranian government in Tehran.

The daring escape was ignited when a mob, whipped up by Iranian revolutionaries, stormed Tehran's Gasre prison, allowing the two Americans to flee. Perot told a news conference.

William Gaylor and Paul Schiappone, both 39, two engineers for Perot's Dallas-based Electronic Data Systems Inc., had been jailed for seven weeks, with the Iranian Ministry of Justice demanding $12.75 million for their release.

Gaylor and Schiappone, trouble-shooters for EDS, were arrested apparently in connection with an investigation into accusations of official corruption involving the procurement of a $41 million computer contract won by EDS. They were detained in Iran in mid-November when officials from Iran's justice ministry demanded their passports. The two were arrested Dec. 28 but their families were allowed to return to the United States.

The $12.75 million figure was believed by those concerned to be the amount of money in dispute, but Perot said Iran was more than $5 million behind in payments to his computer firm.

Not Formally Charged

No formal charges or specific information about any involvement by Schiappone and Gaylor have been offered by the Iranians, the State Department has said.

The travelers were greeted Sunday night by several hundred jubilant friends at workers after they landed at the Dallas-Fort Worth Regional Airport.

"It's wonderful to be an American and wonderful to work for EDS," said an elated Gaylor, who spoke briefly during the news conference but declined to elaborate on his adventure.

Perot said Simon had trained the commando squad in Dallas beginning Jan. 1 as a contingency operation.

Five-Day Trek

But they managed to flee during the assault on the prison Feb. 11. Once free, the men met the Perot-organized commando team at a hotel about 10 miles away and made a dramatic escape to the Turkish frontier, covering 450 miles in about five days. Perot would not say how the men traveled or how they got across the border without passports.

The team arrived at the Turkish border on schedule," Perot said. "We had flown in a specially equipped 707 aircraft" and the entire team flew from Turkey to Frankfurt.

Perot, who gained prominence in 1969 when he attempted to fly two planeloads of supplies to Americans held prisoner in North Vietnam, and his team arrived in Dallas Sunday night on a commercial flight from London.

"Our strategy was to arrange for an Iranian mob to storm the prison," Perot said. "We first confirmed that our government could not do anything to help our men. We then arranged with revolutionary leaders in Iran to have the prison mobbed."

The group was led across the territory between Tehran and the Turkish border by retired Army Col. Arthur "Bull" Simon, 60, the Army officer who led the unsuccessful attempt to free American prisoners of war from a camp near Hanoi.

15 In Commando Team

Perot's commando team had 15 persons altogether, although not all of them were in Tehran for the escape. All but two were EDS employees, mostly former military men with combat experience.

Perot insisted the escape plan was activated only after he failed to negotiate a $12.75 million "ransom," he said was demanded by the Iranian government.

"Our first preference was to pay the ransom, but our efforts to pay it failed because the banking system in Iran collapsed," Perot said.

Perot stayed in Turkey while Simon carried out the escape plan.

He declined to say specifically whether the commandos were armed, but said, "They had the equipment they needed. It was a peaceful mission."

Police Dispute Dampens Mardi Gras Celebration

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The police strike forced cancellation of another bit of Carnival Monday and Mayor Ernest Morial said the realistic outlook is that Mardi Gras itself will also be canceled.

The mayor's decision was announced as federal mediators set up new negotiations between the city and the Teamster-affiliated Police Association of Louisiana led by President Vincent Bruno.

Morial said there had been little change in the deadlock. "It is therefore realistic to presume that unless circumstances change, the total cancellation of our Mardi Gras festivities becomes a real possibility," he said.

Mardi Gras, a celebration that ranks as a $50 million industry, comes up on Feb. 27. Carnival is the party and parade period preceding the big bash.

Morial's announcement canceled the elaborate Krewe of Pegasus parade scheduled for Tuesday night. Earlier, he canceled seven parades that normally would have rolled last weekend and Monday night.

A substitute force of National Guardsmen in Army jeeps and state police cruisers is patrolling the city, but authorities say they lack the expertise needed to control Carnival throngs.

Curious Twin Locates Long Lost Brother

LIMA, Ohio (AP) — James Springer, brought up believing that his identical twin had died at birth, says meeting his brother face-to-face was "the greatest thing that ever happened to me."

Born in August 1939 in Piqua, Ohio, the brothers were adopted by different families when they were only weeks old. They say they don't know what has happened to their biological parents nor why they were put up for adoption. Originally, both sets of adoptive parents — Jess and Lucille Lewis and Ernest and Sarah Springer — had been told the other twin had died at birth. But Mrs. Lewis learned the truth by accident when she returned to probate court to complete adoption procedures.

As years passed, Lewis wondered about his brother, but he said he hesitated to try to find him because he was "afraid it might stir up some problems."

Lewis' mother says she believes her son "was afraid his brother might have a little more money than he had, or be better educated, or a little better looking."

Eventually, however, curiosity overcame Lewis, who works as a security guard at a steel company. The Miami County Probate Court located the Springers, who had remained in Piqua, and wrote them that Lewis had inquired about his brother's existence.

Springer, who lives in Dayton and works as a record clerk for a utility firm, then contacted Lewis and drove to his brother's home in Lima earlier this month.

Besides having the same first name, the brothers each first married and later divorced women named Linda. They have taken vacations on the same beach in St. Petersburg, Fla. Each has had police training and worked part time with law enforcement agencies.

They both name carpentry and mechanical drawing among their hobbies.

Dallasite Triggers Raid By Commandos

DALLAS (AP) — Computer magnate H. Ross Perot said Monday he arranged for an American-led commando squad to free two of his employees being held prisoner by the Iranian government in Tehran.

The daring escape was ignited when a mob, whipped up by Iranian revolutionaries, stormed Tehran's Gasre prison, allowing the two Americans to flee. Perot told a news conference.

William Gaylor and Paul Schiappone, both 39, two engineers for Perot's Dallas-based Electronic Data Systems Inc., had been jailed for seven weeks, with the Iranian Ministry of Justice demanding $12.75 million for their release.

Bazargan, head of the National Iranian Oil Co. during the early 1950s rule of deposed Prime Minister Mohammad Mosaddegh, said Iran must resume oil exports or else "the revolution begins to be ruined from there."

Sources reported that a prominent human rights activist and opponent of the shah, Hassan Nazih, had been named head of the state-owned oil company. The report could not be confirmed. Nazih, is also president of the Iranian Bar Association.

Iran, once the world's second major oil exporter after Saudi Arabia, ceased exports of all but tanker fuel Dec. 26 as part of the general strike called by Khomeini against the shah.

Industry sources said the production has now reached an average of 700,000 daily barrels, enough for the domestic market but well below the pre-revolution levels of 6 million barrels a day.

heard from again and the ship sailed for Diego Garcia.

Ham radioplayers notified the U.S. government and the Navy sent a reconnaissance plane from Diego Garcia. The aircraft dropped food and medicine to the crew and then began escorting it south.

The operators gave the names of the crewmen as Kyomi Oda of Japan, Frederick Neil Lockard, Oscar Leroy Hromatka, Nicholas Ogburn Laney, Gary Blumenthal and radio officer Gary Milton Ruehle, 38, and his son, 13-year-old John Arthur who worked as cabin boy. The teenager reportedly suffered a blow to the head during the takeover, but his condition was not known.

The Ruehles are from Mount Clemens, Mich., but hometowns of the others were not known.

'Like A Tarzan Movie'

Gary Ruehle's sister, Nancy Ruehle, said in Mount Clemens that she had spoken by radio-telephone with her brother Sunday. "The way he described it to me it was like a Tarzan movie," she said.

She said he told her, "Three hundred natives boarded the ship. They tried to drown the crew in the engine room, but the crew had control of the pumps... They (the pirates) pillaged the ship."

She was asked about her brother and said, "I don't think this incident will ice his future plans at all, unfortunately."

Leisure Termed Evolution Aid

PITTSBURGH (AP) — An anthropologist from Johns Hopkins University says it may have been leisure, not hard work, that spelled the crucial difference in our evolution from ape-like creature to human.

Alan C. Walker outlined the theory here Saturday at a symposium on early man at the Carnegie Museum of Natural History.

The idea, which Walker and his colleagues have been discussing for only a matter of weeks, rests on the current belief that mankind's early ancestors ate a mixed diet that included a fair amount of scavenged or hunted meat.

Walker and a research assistant, Linda Perez, have noted that carnivores have much more leisure time than herbivores.

They speculate that an omnivorous diet gave our early ancestors the leisure to develop a primitive culture and communication.

Many anthropologists believe it was cultural improvements in food gathering and child care that gave some ape-like creatures an evolutionary advantage in competing for sparse resources. This, they argue, favored the development of enlarged brains.

Walker and Miss Perez began exploring the theory after noting that the amount of time spent eating by African herbivores increases proportionally with their body weights.

A small plant-eating monkey, the gray cheeked mangabey, spends only three out of every 24 hours eating. But heavier plant-eaters like impala and buffalo spend progressively more time gathering food.

At the top of the scale, the elephant spends more than 20 hours a day eating — "even working the night shift," Walker said.

By contrast, carnivores like the lion, leopard and jackal usually spend less than five hours a day hunting and eating regardless of their size, he said. This is true even though some carnivores, like the jackal, supplement their diet with grass and insects.

Fossils show that the early African ape-like creatures from which humans may have arisen stood 4 feet to 5 feet tall. Based on a chart developed by Walker and Perez, they would have had to spend most of their daylight hours gathering food if they were exclusively herbivores.

Shooting Suspect Sought

Police late Monday still were searching for a suspect in the shooting of a 28-year-old Lubbock man earlier in the day.

Johnny Rangel of 1316 33rd St. remained in critical condition late Monday at Methodist Hospital after being shot in the stomach about 2 a.m. as he stepped from a car in the 1100-block of 37th Street.

Reports indicate Rangel was shot when he and two friends got out of a car in front of a residence. The gunman was described as a Mexican-American man traveling in a brown vehicle.

Don Myers, principal of Parkway Elementary School at 406 N. Zenith Ave., told police that miscreants burglarized and vandalized the school sometime between 9 p.m. Friday and 7 a.m. Monday. He estimated losses and damage at $2,261.

Myers reported the thieves took two record players, a cassette recorder and movie projector as well as $4 from a teacher's desk. The thieves also broke windows and ransacked various portions of the school, throwing two typewriters, a movie projector and a copy machine to the floor in one of the classrooms.

In another criminal mischief incident, vandals reportedly did $1,500 worth of damage to Carolyn Bass' car, which was in a parking lot at 107 N. University Ave., sometime between 11:30 a.m. Saturday and 9 a.m. Monday.

Miss Bass said the vandals ripped the grill from her 1975 Fiat, slashed its tires and upholstery, punctured the dashboard and tore out the stereo speakers and air conditioner.

Mauricio Flores, manager of a service station at 2829 Clovis Road, said someone took two portable TV sets and a carton of cigarettes, valued at $227, from the business sometime late Sunday or early Monday.

Connie Ortiz of 1905 Ninth St. told police her residence was broken into sometime between 5:45 p.m. Sunday and 12:15 a.m. Monday. She told police the burglars stole $850 in property and also attempted to set the house on fire. When police arrived, reports show, the woman's mattress was ablaze.

Bill Davidson of 6411 Ave. W said he returned home about 7:15 p.m. Sunday to find his place ransacked and $1,730 in goods stolen. Among the items reported stolen were guns, a television, stereo and clothing.

In other activity, a 43-year-old Wolf-ford man was arrested by Lubbock police after he allegedly beat up his wife.

Officers were called to a Wayne Avenue residence about 4:45 p.m. Sunday where a woman reportedly ran from a back room and pleaded with police, "Arrest him; keep him from beating me."

Reports indicate the 37-year-old Wolf-ford woman was covered with blood and had a black eye. Police said the husband, who then walked into the room, also was covered with blood and had scratch marks.

The man was taken to county jail on suspicion of aggravated assault and public intoxication.

The woman was taken to a local hospital for treatment, but was not thought to be seriously injured.

Officers about 10:40 p.m. Sunday went to the 3200-block of Baylor Street where they found a 30-year-old man waving a shotgun.

The man, who reportedly was drunk, was ordered to put down the weapon, but disregarded the demand, according to police. The man was arrested after officers seized the shotgun and found a revolver tucked in the man's belt.

Children Run Away In Storm

DETROIT (AP) — Five children were in protective custody Sunday after they went to a service station and told the operator they'd been kicked out of their home in sub-zero weather, police said.

An uncle said the children had threatened to run away after he tried to discipline them for "acting up," and when he said "go ahead," the children took him at his word.

Clark Hurd Jr. said he looked for the children without success.

The children sought refuge in a service station at Eight Mile Road and Gratiot Avenue on the edge of Detroit. Police said one of the five, James Cecil, 7, was hospitalized with frostbitten feet.

The children left the house shortly after 3 a.m., police said. They were clad only in short-sleeved shirts and slacks. Police said the children were barefoot.

"The kids came up to the station and they were half-naked," said attendant Wally Molano, 18. "They started crying ... They said they lived with their uncle and he kicked them out of their house."

Police said they will seek a warrant for the arrest of Hurd, probably on a charge of gross neglect.

A hearing on whether the children should be removed from the custody of their uncle and aunt was scheduled for Monday in Wayne County Juvenile Court.

The children have lived with the Hurds for about two years, since their natural parents were slain in North Carolina, police said.

Hurd said that when he got home from work early Sunday, the children "were kicking the wall (in their rooms) and yelling, so I got them up to talk to them."

"I brought them in the living room, to ask them why they had been acting up the past few days. They really didn't say, they just said they wanted to run away. So I said, 'Go ahead.'"

"The next thing I know, they run out the door," he said. "I was shocked ... I didn't see them anywhere."

Hurd's wife, Ada, said that after the children left, her husband woke her up and she drove around the block looking for them.

James Cecil was admitted to Saratoga Hospital in Detroit and was listed in temporary serious condition.

His four sisters — Loretta, 13; Starlane, 11; Tammy, 10; and Julia, 9 — were under the protection of the child abuse unit of the Detroit Police Department. The three youngest girls were sent to the Healy Home for Children in Detroit.

Matadors Tangle With Tradition Again

By CHUCK McDONALD
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff
Tradition. The Estacado Matadors had to buck it, and the Odessa Ector Eagles rode it this year. But the results were identical—Estacado claimed the 1-AAA cage crown and Ector took the 2-AAA honors.

The two teams will square off tonight in Lamesa at 7:30 p.m. in the Lamesa Middle School gym for the bi-district title, and a chance to advance to the quarter-finals against the winner of the Snder—Mineral Wells contest.

Estacado won district by defeating Dunbar last Friday night in a playoff contest between the first and the second half district winners. Dunbar took the first half, and EHS the second.

The Matador's 74-65 win in that bout gave them the undisputed title rights and broke a long-standing tradition of Dunbar dominance in the district. It was also the first cage title Estacado has ever captured. But the Matador's have come close in the past.

Last year, EHS dropped a similar playoff contest with Dunbar to end it's season despite a fine 25-5 record.

"Last year when we lost to Dunbar, it was one of the worst feelings I've ever suffered," said EHS coach J.J. Wood. "It's something you never lose."

And now, after shaking off the bridesmaid tradition the Matadors are ready for more.

But if you ask Ector coach Keith Thompson, tradition isn't such a bad thing to have on your side. The Eagles have long been a cage powerhouse in district 2-AAA and have won or tied for the district title for the past six years. This season was supposed to be a rebuilding year for the Odessa club, with only one returning starter from the 1977-78 season, but things turned out a little better than expected.

Why? "I guess it's just a matter of tradition," says Thompson. "We've always been in it, and our kids just wanted to win. When you've been winning for this long, nobody wants to be on the team that suddenly starts losing."

So, in spite of their inexperience this year, the Eagles piled up an impressive 24-9 record and breezed through loop play with an unblemished 8-0 mark. And two of those district wins came against a tough (26-6) Andrews team.

Estacado's record isn't quite as glamorous (17-12) but there's a reason for that. All five of the Matador starters were on the EHS football team that was busy in playoff games lasting through the semi-finals.

"We didn't have our starters for the first ten games of the season," said Wood. "But these kids are all seniors so as far as the mental part of the game is concerned, they were ready to play."

It took them a little while, but by the end of the district play the Matadors were definitely "ready to play." They went 5-0 in the second half and then defeated Dunbar to put the icing on the cake.

That playoff game was the last action the Matadors have seen. The last time Ector mixed it up was Saturday when the

Of course, the Plainsmen would like a trip to the state capital, and tonight Monterey will try to get on the right road in a bi-district clash against 3-AAA champion Amarillo Tascosa. Tipoff is slated for 8 p.m. at the Dome on the South Plains College campus in Levelland.

Because Dimmitt and Tulia had reserved Hutchinson gym at Wayland Baptist, there was no halfway point for Monterey and Tascosa to play. Thus, the two teams flipped a coin between Levelland and Canyon, and the Plainsmen won the toss. Or did they?

"We're 1-1 in playoff games in Levelland," said Michalka. "In Canyon, we've only lost once in four or five games there."

Tascosa will bring a 22-6 record into the game, while the Plainsmen finished the regular season at 23-4. Monterey also had to wait an extra week to return to action, because Tascosa was involved in loop playoff with Amarillo High Friday night. Tascosa defeated Amarillo High 50-41.

"I'm sure our kids are a little tired waiting around," said Michalka. "We'll probably be out of the groove a little bit. I just hope it's not too much."

Tascosa and Monterey are familiar with each other's style of play. In a defensive battle at the Monterey gym during the regular season, the Plainsmen beat Tascosa 44-35.

"We were behind 33-30 at the end of the third quarter," recalled Michalka. "The game was so low scoring because both teams worked for good percentage shots."

Both teams' strength is size, and for that reason, Michalka expects for both squads to be patient this time around. Tascosa coach Dave Camfield agrees with his opponent.

"I imagine by most standards that the game will be relatively close," said Camfield. "It's no secret that Joe (Michalka) likes to slow things down when he gets the chance."

Hungry Raiders Await Hogs

By JIM FERGUSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff
Kent Williams yawned, leaned back on the couch and started unfolding a pair of legs in the same fashion a carpenter might straighten out one of those wooden rulers he carries in his overalls—inch by inch, foot by foot, yard by yard.

The 6-5 junior from Hobbs, N.M. was in the classic thinking position for a basketball player; hands behind his head and those miles of legs outstretched on the coffee table.

After a couple of seconds of thought, came the answer to a question just tossed out to him: "Even though we lost our last couple of games," replied Williams, "I don't think we lost any confidence in our ability. Maybe just the opposite. I think we might have gained some by the way we played against Texas."

"Remember, those guys (the Longhorns) are winning the conference."

Despite coming off back-to-back losses to UT and Houston, the Raiders will look to gain even more of that confidence Williams talks about when they take on the University of Arkansas at 7:30 p.m. in the Lubbock Coliseum tonight. The contest will be the regular-season finale for both the Hogs and Raiders.

The game is also one that will certainly have some bearing on which team, either TCU or Rice, the Raiders meet in the first round of the SWC post-season tournament which gets underway Saturday.

Although Tech has virtually assured itself of a home berth for the first round, the Raiders' opening-night opponent is still very much up in the air. Should the Raiders defeat Arkansas tonight, then they will likely meet TCU in the first round. But if Tech falls and Baylor wins against TCU tonight, then the Raiders and Bears would tie for fourth with identical 9-7 won-loss marks. (Despite the fact Tech has beaten Baylor twice this year.)

A flip, then, would decide who and meets Rice and who meets TCU.

And if you understand that, there's this little piece of real estate at the bottom of Buffalo Springs Lake...

But back to the Hogs. This will be the second time this season Tech and Arkansas have met, with UA winning the first encounter 63-57. During that meeting, the Hogs had to hit 13-14 free throws over the final three minutes to put the Raiders away.

"I thought maybe we should have one the first game," said Williams, "but we got a little too far behind at the start and it's hard to come back on somebody like Arkansas."

Down by 12 points with nine minutes left, Tech coach Gerald Myers called on the full-court press, forcing the Hogs into turnover after turnover. The Raiders, who scored 11 unanswered points during that span, are again expected to put some added pressure on Arkansas tonight, since it worked so well in the past.

"Our defense played good against them," continued Williams. "We really went out and played with a lot of intensity. That's something we have to do every night."

"And we did a good job on (Arkansas scoring leader Sidney) Moncrief, which we're going to have to do again."

Moncrief, currently averaging 22.1 points for the year, had just 13 points against Tech, with 10 coming in the first half when he was matched one-on-one flu-ridden Ben Hill. But after the Raiders went to a zone defense in the second half, Moncrief was held to only a pair.

TCU Coach Resigns

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Texas Christian basketball coach Tim Sommerville, who was under fire from several of his own players who complained he was too strict, resigned Monday. The resignation is effective at the end of the current basketball season.

Sommerville, 32, had a record of 10-40 during two seasons at TCU. He was promoted from assistant coach to take over the program in 1977 when former coach Johnny Swaim resigned four days before the 1977-78 season opened.

A TCU spokesman who asked not to be identified said Sommerville resigned because "He felt in two short years here he was not able to recruit the type of players he wanted for his highly disciplined type of situation. He was looking for the very disciplined type individual."

The spokesman also said TCU Athletic Director Frank Windeger offered only a one-year contract, and Sommerville, whose record this year so far is 6-18 overall and 1-13 against Southwest Conference opponents, wanted more. By contrast, TCU's football coach, F.A. Dry, recently won a five-year contract.

Sommerville became embroiled in disputes with some of his players, who took various grievances, mainly involving disciplinary policies, to local newspapers two weeks ago. However, Sommerville and the players said later the problems were resolved, and TCU was doing better in recent games.

Windeger said TCU would begin a search for a new basketball coach as soon as the current season ends.

School officials said Sommerville had indicated he wanted to stay in coaching, but did not have a specific job lined up. Sommerville attended a sports media luncheon Monday but gave no hint of his impending resignation.

Sommerville's team posted a 4-22 record during the 1977-78 season, but even that was an improvement over the previous season, when the Horned Frogs were 3-23.

Sudan will advance to bidistrict competition against Nazareth. Sudan is 8-1 in district play and 17-11 for the season. Lubbock finishes the season at 7-2 and 14-13.

Toronto Signs Gregg

CLEVELAND (AP) — Forrest Gregg, former coach of the Cleveland Browns of the National Football League, will sign a multiyear contract to coach the Toronto Argonauts of the Canadian Football League, according to a story in Tuesday's editions of the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The newspaper said Gregg, who was head coach of the Browns from 1975 through the second to last game of 1977, will assume full command of the Toronto operation.

The Argonauts have scheduled a news conference for 12:30 p.m. EST Tuesday. Gregg was unavailable for comment and the newspaper said he was on his way to Toronto Monday night.

Gregg, 45, compiled an 18-23 record in Cleveland and was named American Conference Coach of the Year by The Associated Press in 1975 after the Browns ran up a surprising 9-5 season.

Auburn Goes To NCAA For Help

AUBURN, Ala. (AP) — Auburn again will go before the National Collegiate Athletic Association next month in connection with alleged recruiting violations. Auburn President Harry M. Philpott said the return engagement is to present additional information regarding the allegations of violations in recruitment of basketball and football players. It has been reported unofficially that NCAA has slapped Auburn with a probation of up to two years for the charges.

Dimmitt's girls' team defeated Hartley 36-32 in a warmup for bi-district competition Monday night. Lori Dyer led Dimmitt with 14 points. Bonnie Resdorff paced Hartley with 12. Dimmitt is 28-3 for the season, and Hartley is 22-11.

Cult Death Trial Gets Delayed

GEORGETOWN, Guyana (AP) — The trial of Larry Layton, a People's Temple member accused murder in the deaths of Congressman Leo Ryan and four others, was postponed to Feb. 28 after he pleaded innocent Monday.

The killing of Ryan, a California Democrat, sparked the mass suicide-murder last November in which more than 900 temple members died in the jungle sanctuary of Jonestown in the northwest corner of this South American country.

Layton was scheduled to go on trial Monday, but his lawyer asked for a delay and the trial was rescheduled.

Judge Harold Bollers, chief Justice of the Guyana Supreme Court, announced the trial would begin Feb. 28. It was the second time the trial had been postponed. It originally was set for Feb. 12 and then for Monday.

There was no testimony given earlier in a preliminary hearing to implicate Layton in the slaying of Ryan at a jungle airstrip.

But under Guyana law, a person convicted of being an accomplice in a crime is as guilty as the person who actually committed the crime.

Layton was charged with murder in the deaths of Ryan, NBC correspondent Don Harris, NBC cameraman Bob Brown, San Francisco Examiner photographer Gregory Robinson and Peoples Temple defector Patricia Parks. Other charges against Layton include attempted murder of defector cult members Vern Gosney and Monica Bagby, who were wounded. And Layton is charged with attempted murder of Dale Parks, who reportedly escaped injury when a gun jammed. Layton also is charged with several weapons law infractions.

Layton entered his plea following a one-hour private conference among Bollers, prosecutor Nandram Kisson and defense attorney Rex McKay. At one point, McKay returned to the courtroom for a brief talk with Layton.

Court sources said Layton was given the opportunity to plead guilty on three charges of attempted murder. Layton reportedly turned the offer down because the judge would not give any indication of what Layton's sentence might be. He could have sentenced Layton to life upon conviction for attempted murder.

If Layton had decided to plead guilty, he would not be faced with a death sentence as he will be now if he is found guilty.

In Guyana, the maximum sentence for murder is death by hanging. No one has been executed in the former British colony since 1970.

Bollers accepted McKay's petition to postpone the trial for the second time when the defense attorney said he needed more time.

McKay said Dr. Hardard Sukdeo, a Guyanese psychiatrist based in New York City and a key part of the defense, would not be able to make the trip until next week.

McKay said he intends to show Layton was brainwashed by Jim Jones, the cult leader and one of the 900 Jonestown victims.

Court sources say the trial is expected to last at least two weeks, with most of the first day taken up with the selection of a 12-member jury.

The government plans to call at least 21 witnesses, prosecution sources said. Sources close to the defense said McKay is likely to move after the prosecution finishes that it has failed to prove it has a case.

If the judge accepts the no-case argument, he will direct the jury to deliver a verdict of not guilty. If he does not, the defense will present its side of the case.

During the trial, Layton will have the right to remain silent, to make an unsworn statement or take the stand and testify under oath.

Labor Leader Still Rates Carter At 'C Minus Grade'

BAL HARBOUR, Fla. (AP) — AFL-CIO President George Meany broadened his attack on President Carter Monday, complaining that Carter's foreign policy lacks direction and that his economic policies are failing to head off a recession.

Meany, whose relations with Carter have steadily deteriorated during the past two years, said the president's performance has not improved since a year ago, when Meany gave Carter a "C-minus" grade.

Asked if the AFL-CIO would support Carter for re-election in 1980, Meany said, "I'll talk about that when the time comes."

He was equally circumspect about his own future with the AFL-CIO. Asked if he would run for a 13th two-year term as federation president this fall, Meany shot back at the questioner: "I don't know. You give me your telephone number and I'll let you know. You don't call me. I'll call you."

Meany had been critical of Carter's economic programs for some time, but on Monday he assailed the president's handling of foreign affairs.

Asked about China's invasion of Vietnam and the turmoil in Iran, Meany said sarcastically, "I think our government has taken a very strong position. We deplore the invasion of Vietnam by Com-unist China and we deplore the invasion by Vietnam into Communist Cambodia.

"I think this is the way our foreign policy acts. Something happens and we deplore it," the 84-year-old labor leader said. "Frankly, I don't know what our foreign policy is today."

Meany said the administration apparently "didn't know what was happening" in Iran, and he faulted Carter for moving "too quickly" in recognizing Iran's new Islamic revolutionary government.

Meany spoke with reporters at a news conference as the AFL-CIO's executive council opened its annual winter meeting at this warm, seaside resort near Miami.

The council renewed its criticism of Carter's anti-inflation program, warning that the economy "is heading toward a recession" and predicting that inflation this year will top the 9 percent rate of 1978.

The council added that Carter's voluntary wage-price guidelines are failing to control inflation and the president's proposed cuts in social programs in his 1980 budget may only "increase the risk of recession."

Carter has proposed an "austere" budget to reduce the federal deficit in 1980, saying that will help control inflation.

The AFL-CIO opposes Carter's voluntary guidelines on the grounds they will hold down wages but not prices. Instead, the federation advocates that Congress adopt equitable mandatory controls on prices, profits and interest rates as well as all forms of income.

Meany said Carter's voluntary guidelines may be illegal because the threat of government sanctions against companies that don't comply make it more like a mandatory program, which can only be approved by Congress. Meany said the federation is considering whether to challenge Carter's program in court.

Despite its continued resistance to the guidelines, however, the AFL-CIO softened its opposition to Carter's proposed tax credit for workers who fall within the 7 percent annual wage guidelines.

Previously, the AFL-CIO has rejected the real wage insurance proposal as not broad enough and inequitable. But on Monday it said it could support a broadened version of the program to provide a credit to every worker who gets a 7 percent wage increase or less.

The council also called for a punitive tax on companies that exceed a profit-ceiling guideline proposed by Carter.

Carter's wage insurance credit would provide up to $600 per worker but would not necessarily include low wage earners and people who work for small employ-

Ex-Shipworker Keeps Grisly Records

KITTERY, Maine (AP) — Roland Belhumeur keeps a list of his friends, Portsmouth Naval Shipyard workers who have died. Once a single page, the grisly catalogue now overflows several folders of death certificates, autopsy reports, radiation data. There are 40 names.

"The government boasts about its staff studies and interim reports and says the Portsmouth problem is under control. Well, I can show them a bunch of new widows, fatherless kids and men being eaten away by cancer who don't agree," says Belhumeur.

Portsmouth is where Belhumeur worked 20 years ago, overhauling the atomic submarine Nautilus and other vessels in the infancy of the Navy's nuclear reactor program. The government is investigating whether radiation-induced cancer is causing the deaths.

But the probe moves slowly — and meanwhile, in homes near the shipyard, more workers have died. Others suffer, knowing they too have cancer. Even more people live in fear they may be next.

Throughout, the Navy has said exposure records indicate the radiation workers received was considered well within safe limits.

Still, Belhumeur keeps his list. He worked in the yard from World War II until the 1970s. He was a state legislator briefly, and now is service officer for the Disabled American Veterans in New Hampshire. He says he has traced 400 men he worked with, and is concentrating on some 75 who were in his unit of welders and laborers 20 years ago.

Most of the 40 now dead, he says, were among the 75 in that unit.

Belhumeur says he has given the figures to the government, but has never claimed they are a scientific study. One reason is that he and his colleagues worked when radiation dangers were little understood. For example, many now say they shielded badges that would measure high levels of radiation in order to stay eligible for overtime.

Belhumeur started his list after Dr. Thomas Najarian, a Boston hematologist, said in 1977 that nuclear workers at Portsmouth were contracting leukemia at a rate six times higher than non-nuclear workers. Belhumeur says he wasn't surprised.

"I knew something was killing the men," Belhumeur says. "Each year men who had worked with me on the Nautilus — men only 45 or 50 years old — were dying one after another."

"I'm not a doctor or a scientist but it didn't take genius to figure out something was wrong. So I started keeping a list of my friends and other shipyard workers who died, when and why."

Roland Cloutier was the latest entry. A year ago, he filed a compensation claim against the federal government, saying his cancer was due to long-term exposure to low-level radiation. But the 51-year-old welder was pessimistic.

"I doubt if I'll ever live to see the money," he said. "If they approve my claim, they'll be admitting that radiation has killed or is killing thousands of men all over the country."

Cloutier died three weeks ago. "We still haven't heard from the government," his widow told The Associated Press.

Bitterness and anxiety are common among such families. But at the shipyard, on an island between Maine and New Hampshire in the Piscataqua River, fear is more prevalent. There is some fear of radiation. But the more evident fear is of unemployment.

Much of coastal Maine and New Hampshire depends on the unstable tourist trade. By contrast, the Navy says the 7,800 shipyard workers earn a total of $120 million a year — an average $15,000 per worker.

At the Back-Aft Tavern near the main shipyard gate, workers boast of not being afraid to step over the red warning lines that criss-cross the yard, denoting radiation work areas. But some also admit doubts.

"It's the old timers — the men who worked on the subs when the nuke program was just starting who are dying," a 28-year-old electrician said. "The safety regulations are much tougher now."

A 36-year-old who has worked at the yard 15 years disagreed: "Who really knows how safe the radiation standards are today? It's really a moot point. Even if they decided to lower the exposure levels today it would be too late for most of us. The damage is done."

Dozens of workers were interviewed. Not one said he would leave his job even if dangers were proved.

And if the questions raised at Portsmouth have spread doubts among workers across the country, most remain silent. Safety procedures are tighter now than in Nautilus days. Workers carry better monitoring devices. More lab tests are used to gauge exposure levels. The men are more aware of the hazards.

The Portsmouth case became public after a former welder Najarian was treating told him many co-workers had died early. Najarian went to the Boston Globe. It conducted an investigation and then, early last year, President Carter ordered a study by the federal Center for Disease Control. At the insistence of Congress, a watchdog panel of civilian consultants was later appointed to work with it.

But the federal study is still two years away from conclusive findings, and the consultants have accused the Navy and other agencies of impeding the probe — allegations which are heatedly denied.

Meanwhile, president John O'Brien of the Metal Trades Council in Portsmouth says that "most of us would rather risk an overdose of radiation than anger Admiral Rickover by complaining about dangers that he says don't exist." He says workers balance concern over their health with fear that Adm. Hyman Rickover, who wields great influence over the atomic submarine program, might shut the yard.

"We'd like to believe the Navy is telling us the truth but there are too many unanswered questions," says O'Brien. "Like why are former nuclear workers still dying of cancer?"

HELP TO MEND HEART
WALLA WALLA, Wash. (AP) — The people of Walla Walla have raised about two-thirds of the $30,000 it will take to mend 3-year-old Jessica Proctor's heart. Jessica was born with a hole in her heart. For 18 months, doctors did not know if she would live or die.

meanwhile, in homes near the shipyard, more workers have died. Others suffer, knowing they too have cancer. Even more people live in fear they may be next.

Throughout, the Navy has said exposure records indicate the radiation workers received was considered well within safe limits.
