

U.S. 'ready to work' with Iran's new leaders, Carter tells nation

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter today said he has been in touch with the new rulers of Iran and "we stand ready to work with them."

Carter said the administration has been in contact with designated Prime Minister Mehdi Bazargan and that the new Iranian government was "very helpful in insuring the safety of Americans."

The president told a nationally broadcast news conference that "I see continued hope for very productive and peaceful cooperation with the new government of Iran."

Meeting reporters hours after followers of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini took control of the government of Iran, Carter said "our objective has been and is a stable and independent Iran which maintains good relations with America."

As for the affect of the takeover on U.S. oil supplies, Carter said the situation "is not a crisis, but it certainly could get worse."

If Iranian production, which once accounted for 900,000 barrels a day of U.S. oil imports, is not resumed shortly, he said, the situation "would require additional measures."

The administration is considering such conservation measures as forcing gasoline stations to close on Sunday and regulating heating and cooling levels in public and commercial buildings.

Carter said events in Iran have made it more important that Americans comply with voluntary conservation measures designed to save oil.

The president said "there is no immediate danger" to the United States from the current loss of 500,000 barrels of Iranian oil daily, but that world oil stocks are steadily being reduced. He supported Energy Secretary James Schlesinger's appeal for voluntary energy conservation.

Carter said public cooperation "early and on a broad-scale basis" could insure that interruption of oil supplies because of the Iranian cutoff would be brief.

"The situation is not crucial now, it's not a crisis, but it certainly could get worse," Carter said.

The president said there must be instilled in the American consciousness that the United States can absorb these shortages if it shifts from oil to other energy sources and "if we restrain our wastefulness as much as possible."

On inflation, the president said the heavy, 1.3 percent increase in wholesale prices in January supported his prediction last fall that "inflation might get worse in the short run before it got better."

He urged Congress to approve administration legislation that would contain hospital costs and provide "wage insurance" for workers who observe his 7 percent guideline on pay increases.

For his part, Carter said, he will continue to work to reduce the federal budget deficit. "If we all do our part, we can succeed in reducing inflation step by step," he said. "I'm determined to use the full authority of my office to make this effort succeed."

Khomeini seeks end to 'traitorous' acts

By ROBERT H. REID

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Iran's new revolutionary government reported today that resistance by Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi's armed forces has ended, but that it was having trouble controlling its own supporters.

In Washington, President Carter told a news conference he has been in touch with the new government and "we stand ready to work with them."

Thousands of armed youths roamed Tehran threatening symbols of the monarchy and its foreign allies. Three generals were reported slain. Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini appealed to his followers for order and the surrender of thousands of looted weapons.

Khomeini's 14-year fight to convert Iran from a monarchy to an Islamic republic succeeded Sunday after two days of bloody street fighting in Tehran. The turning point came when the armed forces chief of staff ordered all troops back to their barracks and declared his support for the 78-year-old Shiite Moslem patriarch's revolution.

With the army no longer behind him, Prime Minister Shahpour Bakhtiar was reported to have delivered his resignation to Mehdi Bazargan, Khomeini's nominee to head a provisional government. Bakhtiar dropped out of sight, though one highly placed source said he was under guard for his own protection.

Carter told the news conference he was in touch with Bazargan and that the new government was "very helpful in insuring the safety of Americans" in Iran. He said he sees "continued hope for very productive and peaceful cooperation" with the new government of this oil-rich nation.

More than 200 persons were reported killed in Tehran, 150 in the northeastern city of Tabriz and 44 in the southern city of Shiraz.

Khomeini condemned "arson, destruction and cruelty" and said those indulging in such "savage acts" were "disobeying Allah's orders and are traitors to the Islamic movement."

The "provisional operational staff of the revolution" in a broadcast on Radio Tehran said "all Iranian armed forces have laid down their arms and declared their total solidarity with the revolution. There is not the slightest resistance by the armed forces."

The announcement called on the revolution's supporters "to stop surrounding barracks and government centers and not to use their weapons, except against the enemy."

An army spokesman said Gen. Abdul Ali Badrel, a former commander of the Imperial Guard, was shot and killed as he tried to talk with a group of insurgents who surrounded the guard's barracks.

Gen. Bokrat Jafarian, the military governor of Khuzestan Province, was killed when his helicopter was shot down near Ahwaz, the spokesman said. He said he did not know who fired on the aircraft.

Meanwhile, the new government's armed guerrillas, rushed to threatened sites all over the capital, trying to maintain order and ward off attacks.

They took up positions around the 13-story Intercontinental Hotel, headquarters of most of the Western press, to protect it from a crowd threatening to burn it.

Radio Tehran said another crowd was marching on the shah's Niavaran Palace "bent on burning and destroying it." The broadcast said since the revolution had triumphed, the palace was "part of the wealth and riches of the nation" and should not be harmed.

Armed youths converged on Sultanabad Barracks, on the northern side of Tehran, in response to a false report that the Imperial Guard and American military advisers were attacking supporters of the revolution there.

There were no Americans at the base. The Iranian troops there put up no resistance, and guerrilla units obedient to the provisional government kept the crowd from looting the post.

Truckloads of armed guerrillas arrived at the Hilton Hotel and announced they were going to turn it into a hospital. They ordered the 400 guests, many of them Americans, to bring all their baggage to the lobby and searched it thoroughly, apparently looking for weapons. But it was unclear whether they would be forced to move out of the hotel.

The 7,000 Americans still in Iran were warned to remain in their homes, and there were no reports of attacks on any of them.

With the army no longer behind him, Prime Minister Shahpour Bakhtiar was reported to have delivered his resignation to Mehdi Bazargan.

Ration stamps not part of fuel future

By SALLY JACOBSEN

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans won't need rationing stamps to fill up at the gas station, says a leading Senate energy expert who predicts that other fuel allocation measures are not far off, however.

Sen. Henry Jackson, chairman of the Senate Energy Committee, said Sunday the allocation program will start by prohibiting Sunday gasoline sales.

In an interview on CBS-TV's "Face the Nation," the Washington Democrat said the cutoff of oil from politically troubled Iran was forcing the United States to take strong steps to conserve fuel.

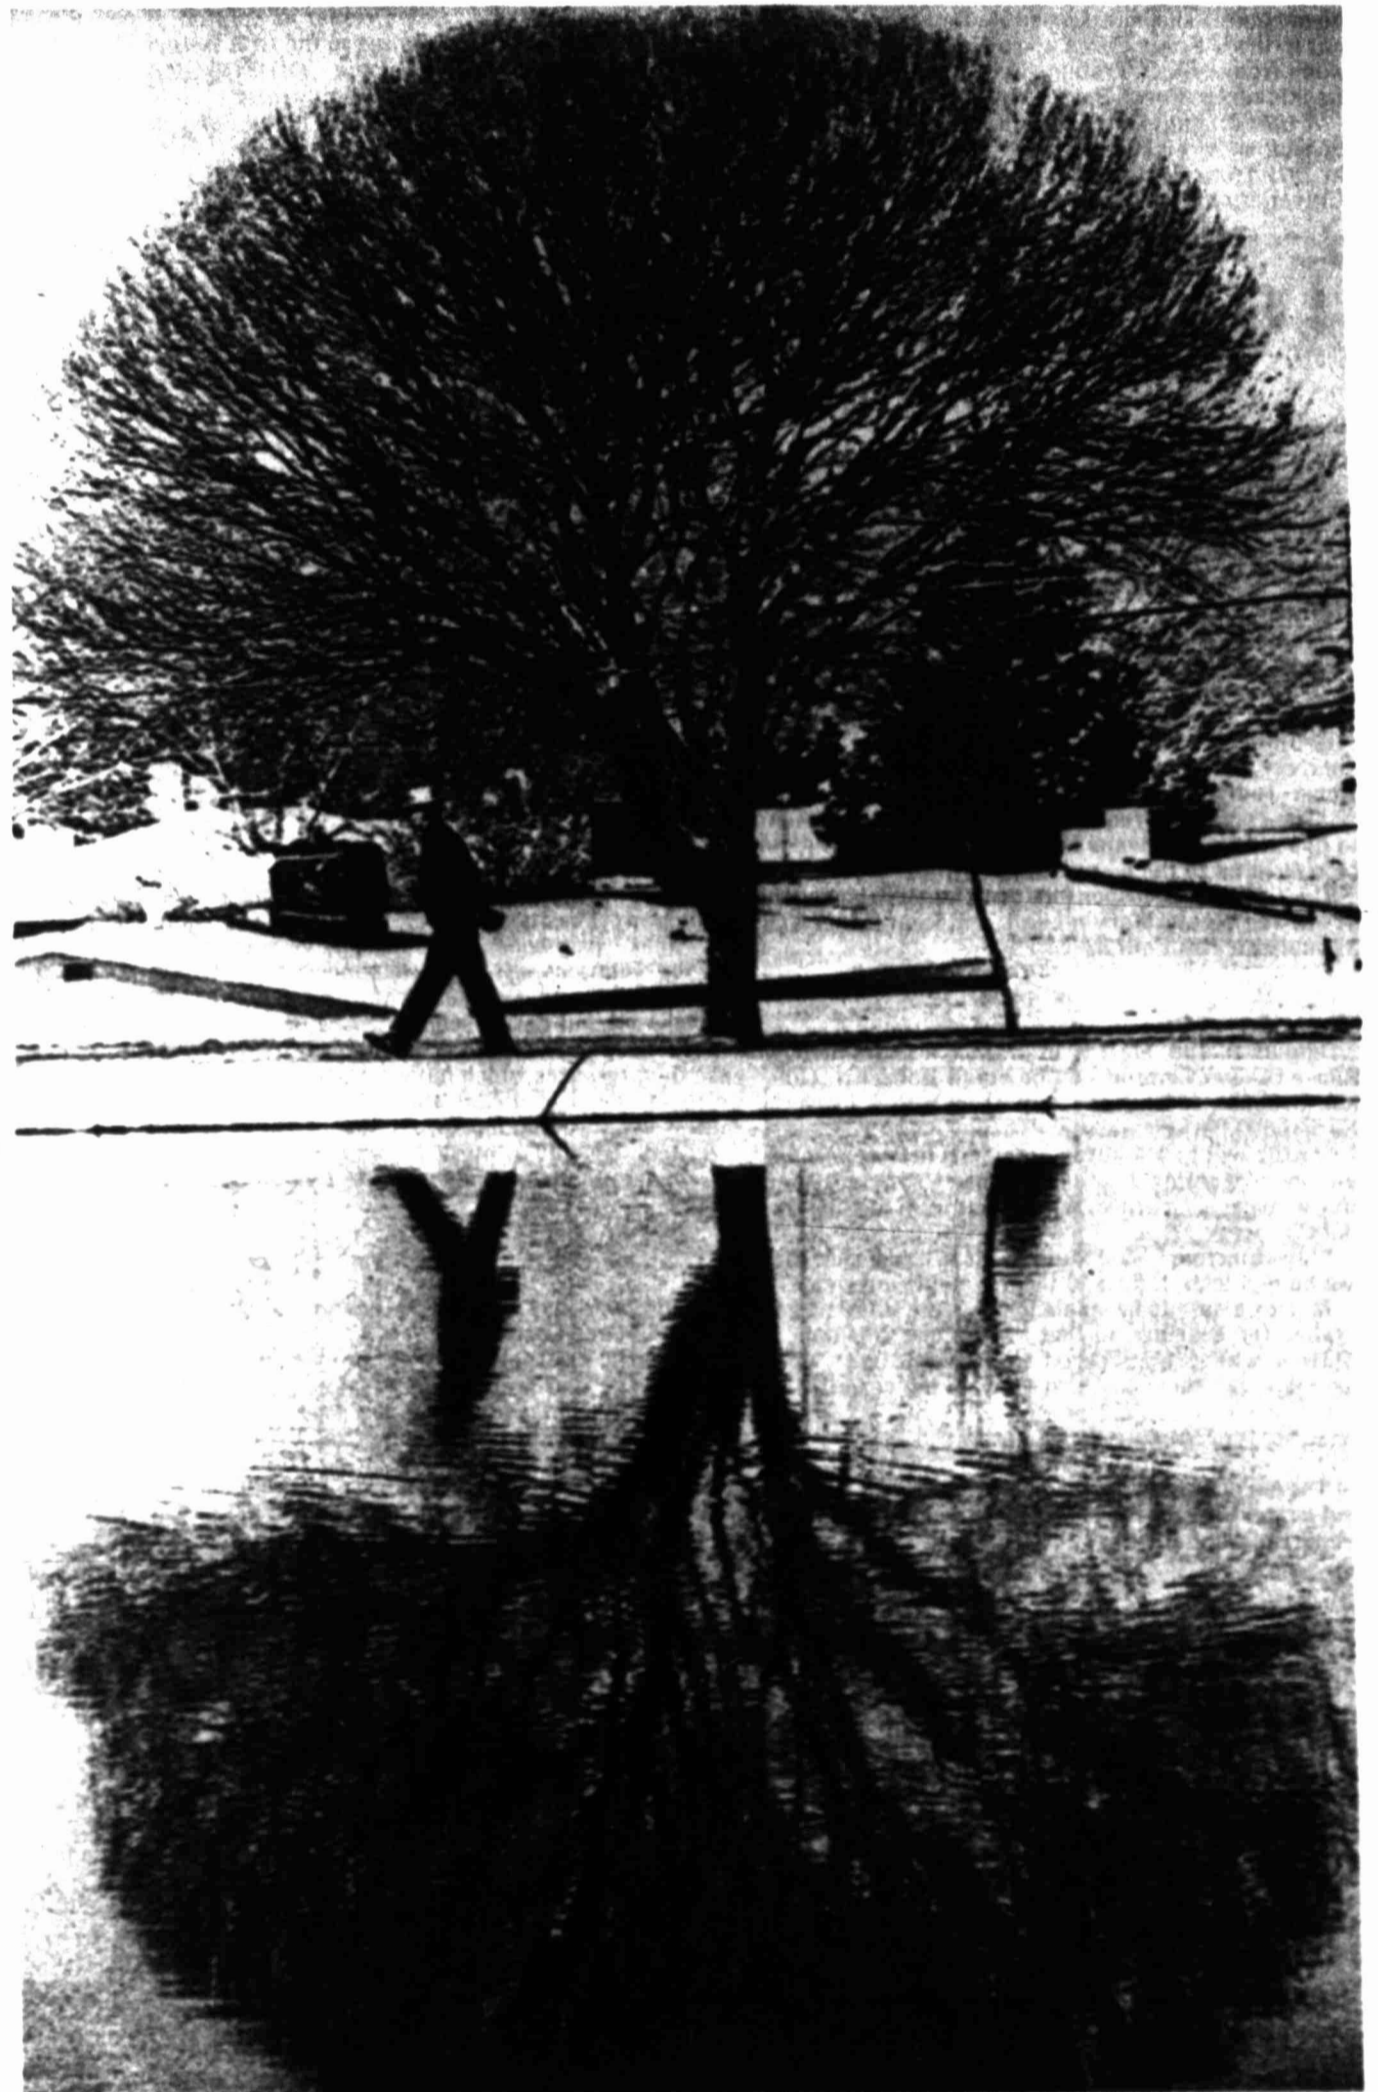

"There isn't any question that we will have to shortly undertake a program of allocations," he said. "It will start out with a prohibition on the sale of gasoline on Sundays. No doubt about it in my mind, it's a question (of) not whether but when. I think the sooner the better."

He ruled out rationing unless Saudi Arabia's oil exports are sharply curtailed, but did predict the price of gasoline could climb to $1 a gallon in a year.

Jackson's observations came on the heels of Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger's Senate testimony last week that the Iranian oil situation is "prospectively more serious" than the 1973-74 Arab oil embargo. His pessimistic assessment was blamed for a decline in stock market prices and a sharp drop in the value of the dollar on foreign exchanges.

Iran formerly provided about 5 percent of the U.S. oil supply or about 900,000 barrels a day.

Reflecting a nice turn in area weather, Arthur Bickford, 57, chose Young Park, Las Cruces, N.M., for his Sunday morning walk. Bickford, who usually jogs two or three miles daily, chose a slower pace while skirting the scenic lake. (AP Laserphoto)

Ector County couple fighting for houses

By GUY SULLIVAN
Staff Writer

GARDENDALE — A northeast Ector County couple may lose three rent houses because the federal government claims they owe income taxes on the property.

Buster and Peggy Hahn dispute that claim. And Sunday they said they plan to sue the federal government and the U.S. Internal Revenue Service.

The Hahns said they have spent most of their lives working in their Odessa vacuum cleaner sales and repair business to earn enough to pay off and keep up the three Odessa rent houses.

The houses, all located in Odessa, are slated to be sold at auction Friday.

Instead of "securing" the three rent houses, Hahn said, "They (the government) should concentrate elsewhere. People have rights whether they're rich or poor. No man has the right to dictate over another man's life."

HAHN CONTENDS THE government's action is illegal.

"The government has illegally seized my rent homes in Odessa. They are trying to illegally sell them and we're initiating a lawsuit against the government and the IRS," said Hahn, who added he plans to act as his own attorney.

"The government is absolutely in violation of my fourth and fifth amendment rights under the U.S. Constitution. We have not had due process of law," he said.

The IRS sent the Hahns a notice of deficiency saying the couple owes $37,873.50. The notice warned that if the money is not paid, the government would seize what property it can.

Hahn said he is trying to stop the property sale slated for 10 a.m. Friday outside the IRS office in the First National Bank Building in Odessa.

Hahn said the government should have started a civil suit or even a criminal procedure, instead of trying to take his property through seizure.

HE SAID THE NEXT step after stopping the sale, if he is able to do that, is to determine if in fact there is any tax liability involved and if so, how much money. He said he wants to settle the matter in court.

"On Jan. 10 of this year, they (the IRS) seized the three houses and posted notices to that effect," Hahn said. "The notices said the property had been seized for nonpayment of internal revenue taxes due from us by virtue of a lien issued by the district director of the Internal Revenue Service," said Hahn.

The document on each house was signed by Sam McKinney, Odessa-based IRS officer.

An IRS spokesman in Odessa today said no information could be given out regarding the case.

HAHN INSISTED: "If those homes are sold, they will be sold without due process of law and anybody who buys them will be tied up in court for the next 20 years."

"I've spent all my life working so that when we get old we won't have to depend upon the federal government for a living," Hahn said.

He said he previously had worked 15 years in the lead and zinc mines of Oklahoma and the potash mines of New Mexico.

The Hahns have five children.

Hahn, 50, paused before sitting down to Sunday supper with his family and said, "I really don't want to have to depend on the government for a living when I get old. You know, when you're right, you are right. And I'm right and they're (the government's) wrong."

TV personality clarifies her role on night Nelson Rockefeller died

NEW YORK (AP) — Television personality Ponchitta Pierce, attempting to answer questions about her role the night of Nelson Rockefeller's death, says it was she — not a Rockefeller aide — who called the police emergency number.

Miss Pierce's public statement, issued Saturday night through her lawyer, was the first by any person known to have been present when Rockefeller died of a heart attack on Jan. 26 at his office-townhouse at 13 West 54th St.

Meanwhile, today's editions of the Daily News quoted an unidentified member of the Rockefeller family as saying privately that despite confusion over specifics of Rockefeller's death "we are absolutely satisfied nothing could have been done to save him."

Miss Pierce's statement emerged out of mounting confusion about the events surrounding Rockefeller's death, specifically concerning the time and place of the death and the presence of a Rockefeller aide, Megan Marshack.

Varying reports initially indicated the person who summoned help was a female neighbor. The caller was later identified as Miss Marshack, a research assistant who was with the former governor and vice president when he was stricken.

Unidentified sources subsequently said the caller was Miss Pierce, a one time Rockefeller employee who now works for WNBC television as co-host of a local public affairs program.

In her statement, Miss Pierce said she was called by Miss Marshack, her friend and neighbor in a cooperative apartment building at 25 West 54th St., between 10:50 p.m. and 11 p.m. "She told me that Gov. Rockefeller had suffered a heart attack and asked me to come immediately to 13 West 54th St.," just a few buildings away.

When she reached the apartment, Miss Pierce said she saw only Miss Marshack administering mouth-to-mouth resuscitation to Rockefeller, who was lying on a couch.

"It seemed to me that the best thing I could do was call 911. I phoned 911 and asked for emergency medical assistance," her statement said.

Miss Pierce said after she placed the call she left the townhouse and walked back to her apartment. On the way, she said she saw a police car and told the officers to go to Rockefeller's apartment.

Consulate employee resigns

HONG KONG (AP) — A Chinese employee of the U.S. Consulate resigned today, three days after he was attacked by Vietnamese refugees who charged he made advances to Vietnamese women seeking resettlement in the United States.

A spokesman said the consulate accepted the resignation of George Lai, a 40-year-old Chinese national employed by the consulate for nearly 15 years.

Lai, who worked as a refugee coordinator, was cut and bruised when refugees went after him with wooden chairs Friday at the Shamsho transit camp.

The man told the police some of the refugees had grudges about migration to the United States. But the consulate suspended him without pay Saturday after receiving a letter from refugees at the camp accusing Lai of being arrogant and making advances to Vietnamese women.

"Losing Hair? Try This At No Risk"

HOUSTON, Texas— If you don't suffer from male pattern baldness, you can now stop your hair loss... and grow more hair.

For years "they said it couldn't be done." But now a firm of laboratory consultants has developed a treatment for both men and women, that is not only stopping hair loss... but is really growing hair!

The great majority of cases of excessive hair fall and baldness are the beginning and more fully developed stages of male pattern baldness and cannot be helped.

But, if you are not already slick bald, how can you be sure what is actually causing your hair loss? Even if baldness may seem to "run in the family," it is certainly not proof of the cause of YOUR hair loss.

Loesch Laboratory Consultants, Inc., will supply you with treatment for 32 days—at their risk—if they believe the treatment will help you. Just send them the information listed below. All inquiries are answered confidentially, by mail. Adv.

Texans push for 'balanced budget'

By MILLER BONNER

WASHINGTON (AP)— Texas delegation notes: Freshman Rep. Phil Gramm learned that brevity has its advantages with fellow congressmen. The former Texas A&M economics professor was one of nine House members to introduce a resolution calling for a balanced budget amendment to the Constitution.

Gramm gained 11 co-sponsors — including five Texans — for his effort that would prohibit federal deficit spending except during war or national emergency.

Gramm's resolution is 22 lines long, by far the shortest of the nine similar resolutions sent to the House Judiciary Committee for consideration.

"The concept of requiring the federal government to live within its means is a simple one...and should be short and to the point," said Gramm.

The five Texas cosponsors are Democrats Martin Frost, Joe Wyatt, Marvin Leath and Kent Hance and Republican Jim Collins.

Democrat Jim Mattox of Dallas was named by House Budget Committee Chairman Robert N. Giacomini, D-Conn., to head the committee's task force on National Defense and International Affairs.

Mattox will be walking a tightrope between House members wanting a strong defense at any cost and those more concerned with trimming the federal deficit.

"My objective," said Mattox, "is to make sure that we have a lean, tight and tough defense budget." Mattox also said he wants to bring the task force to Dallas for hearings so that "some of the people in Dallas who are involved in defense can, when possible, put their points of view on the record."

The 96th Congress passed its first law last week. It set a later date for the president to send his economic report to Capitol Hill.

The continuing saga of Red China and Taiwan was addressed by a couple of Texans last week.

Leath introduced a resolution calling on the United States to recognize the Republic of China as the sovereign of Taiwan.

"When the United States officially recognized the Peoples Republic of China, it was said that we were just giving formal recognition of conditions on the mainland of China," said the freshman from Marlin.

"This resolution in the same way acknowledges the reality that the Republic of China is the government of Taiwan. The resolution calls for an official two-China policy."

House Majority Leader Jim Wright of Fort Worth predicted the House will "create a mechanism" that will allow the United States to continue relations with Taiwan — including the sale of "defensive military weapons."

"In fact, do everything we've been doing, just as though our embassy still were there. We won't call it an 'embassy.' We'll call it something else. But the end result will be the same."

Wright, who along with Sen. Lloyd Bentsen will accompany President Carter to Mexico City later this week, has been a staunch advocate of improving relations with our neighbor to the South. Both Wright and Bentsen want the U.S. to buy Mexican oil and gas as soon as possible.

"The boon to Mexico's economy, moreover, could ease the pressures which have contributed so mightily to the flood of illegal aliens into this country," said Wright. "Slipping across the border into the U.S. has become almost as unavoidable as the act of a hatching chick bursting out of the eggshell."

Wright also has alluded to upcoming problems with the Peace Corps.

Noting "concern, bordering on alarm, over a subtle change that seems to have taken place" in the program, Wright added that the organization has been doing more in foreign countries than building schools, teaching school and growing crops. "Our Peace Corps was not invited to meddle in the politics of foreign nations," he said. "There is a concern that it may have begun to do so."

Every pencil pusher has his price. Leonel Castillo, the Immigration and Naturalization Service commissioner, has invited the press to view his new computer system designed to enable the INS to keep better track of non-citizens in the United States.

As an added enticement, Castillo promises to "treat you to a taco — homemade by a friend of mine whose reputation as a cook is unchallenged."

Gov. Bill Clements is in town today. He made the trip from Austin to attend the inauguration of Arthur Wiese as president of the National Press Club. Wiese runs the Houston Post's Washington bureau.

Nixon bust still in storage

WASHINGTON (AP) — A $5,000 marble bust of Richard M. Nixon is still languishing in storage 11 years after its completion despite a resolution providing for its display in the Capitol.

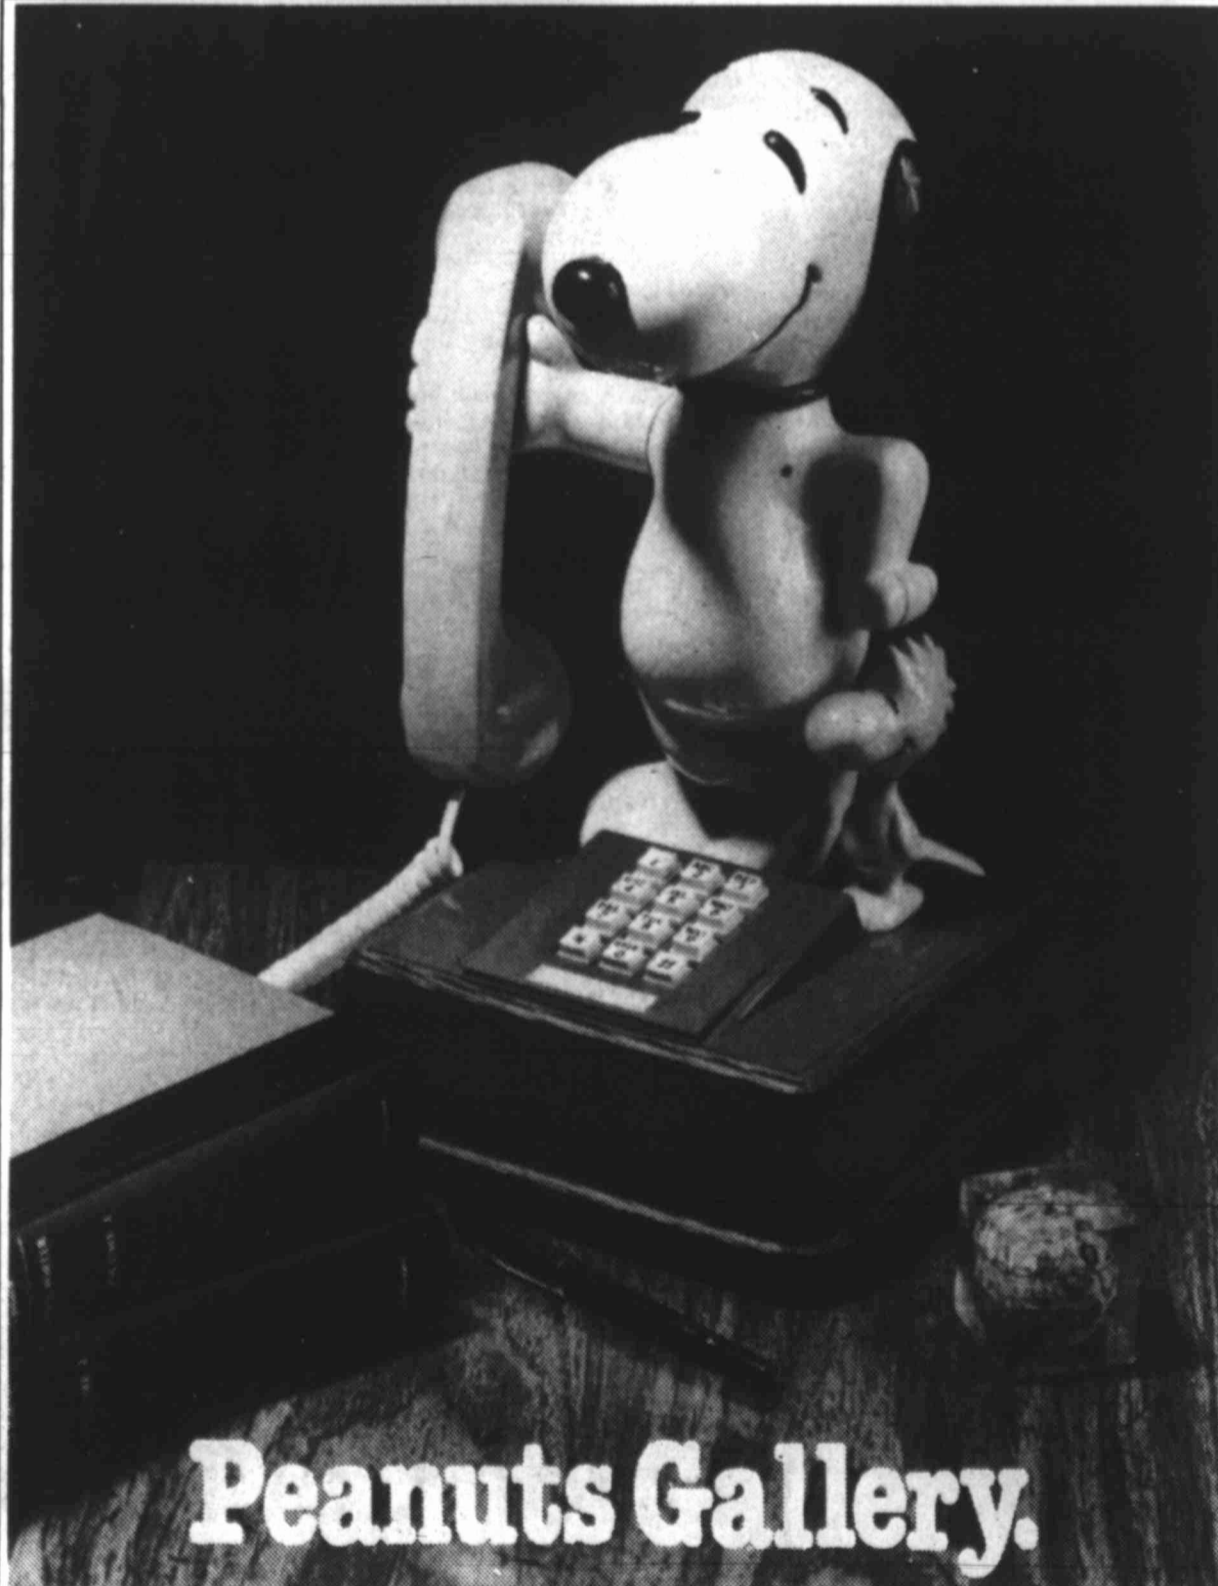

The bust of a more recent vice president, Lyndon B. Johnson, also is awaiting display. Sculptress Jimilu Mason said the Johnson family wants Nixon's bust to be installed first.

The dedication of Nixon's bust has been put off by the Senate Rules Committee ever since his resignation.

And the postponement looks indefinite. Asked whether there is a timetable for installing the Nixon likeness, committee spokesman Bill Cochrane said, "There's nothing new on it."

Vice presidents serve as presidents of the Senate and as such are entitled to have busts of themselves made and placed in the Senate chamber or a wing.

Moslems appear to have control

By THOMAS KENT

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Armed men and speeding automobiles filled the streets of Tehran, and gunfire cracked in the air after the army and police withdrew to their barracks and left Iran's capital to the revolutionary forces of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

Vigilantes loyal to the Moslem religious leader appeared to control the entire city Sunday night. Heavily armed groups of 10 to 50 gathered at intersections, still edged by sandbag barricades thrown up during the rioting of recent days.

Khomeini supporters, many waving automatic rifles and shouting in victory, sped up and down the streets in automobiles and in captured army jeeps, trucks and armored personnel carriers. Many vehicles were overloaded with armed men clinging to their roofs and fenders.

Some said they were heading to trouble spots where diehard troops still loyal to Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi and Prime Minister Shahpour Bakhtiar's government were reported holding out. Most of the gunfire, however, seemed to come from exuberant Khomeini men testing their weapons.

Near the ayatollah's headquarters in the squalor of South Tehran, the streets looked like a military camp. A score of captured army vehicles were lined up and men unloaded thousands of weapons from them. The arms were carried into the shabby Moslem schoolhouse that has become the command center of Khomeini's revolution.

Men and youths climbed over armored personnel carriers and a tank, studying their inner compartments.

Floodlights lighted the scene, and announcements crackled over loudspeakers.

Ordinary folk celebrating Khomeini's victory had cleared off the streets by about 8 p.m., leaving them to the vigilantes.

A taxi driver taking a Western reporter through the city paused to pick up several armed men rushing to a reported trouble spot. Two of them, in their 20s, said the revolution was being waged by "Marxist-Leninists" as well as Khomeini's Shiite Moslem supporters.

"For the moment, we must all fight together," one said.

Members of the outlawed Communist Party joined ranks with Khomeini's forces in the fight against the shah's authoritarian rule, but in recent weeks there have been reports of clashes between the Communists and the Moslems.

In contrast to recent nights, there were no fires or barricades blocking the streets. But debris from the fighting of the past three nights was everywhere.

Location of Marines on 'standby' unknown

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. Marines and helicopters have been sent to a staging base near Iran, probably in Turkey, but officials say they are optimistic the calming words of Iran's dominant religious leader will make it unnecessary to rush help to Americans in Tehran.

But a spokesman for the Turkish Foreign Ministry in Ankara said Turkey would not accept the Marines. "It is out of the question for U.S. Marines to come to Turkey in order to be dispatched to Iran," the official statement said.

As of midday today, there were no reports in Turkey that the 69 Marines had arrived there. Their whereabouts could not be determined. There was speculation they were in the Canary Islands off the North African Atlantic coast, a regular refueling stop for American planes.

U.S. officials in Ankara said the Turkish government had not been officially asked for permission to land the Marines. A Defense Department spokesman in Washington said today he was unaware of the Turkish refusal and had no immediate comment.

Defense officials stressed Sunday that "we are simply preparing for contingencies" in sending a reinforced platoon of 69 Marines from the United States and six Air Force "Jolly green giant" helicopters from Europe to a staging base in Turkey.

"These moves are strictly on a precautionary basis," defense spokesman Thomas Lambert said in confirming reports that a Marine detachment and helicopters would be ordered to positions near Iran in case the "leathernecks" are needed to help protect the U.S. Embassy in Tehran and the helicopters to evacuate Americans.

"We have no plans at this time to deploy either the helicopters or the Marines to Iran," Lambert said.

By Sunday night, defense officials were saying they were heartened by a statement by Iranian religious chief Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini urging Iranians not to "make mischief and make misery" or harm foreigners.

Nonetheless, the decision to commit the Marines, even in such a relatively small force, and to send the helicopters was an indication of growing U.S. concern about the status of the United States under new political arrangements shaping up in Iran.

Also, the military moves carried a more urgent tone than others by Washington during the Iranian crisis concerning the well-being of an estimated 7,000 Americans remaining in Iran, most of them defense contractors' employees and their families.

State Department spokesman Kenneth Brown said Sunday the embassy is warning Americans to stay off Tehran's streets, but he also said of U.S. citizens still in Iran, "To the best of our knowledge they are safe."

The State Department said about 250 Americans left Tehran Saturday on military flights and possibly others on commercial flights.

All guests at the Tehran Hilton were brought to the lobby this morning as armed insurgents prepared to turn the facility into a hospital. Here, a rebel passes food to the displaced guests. Several Americans currently reside at the hotel. (AP Laserphoto)

Consulate keeps lines open

By ARTHUR MAX

JERUSALEM (AP) — From behind the high stone walls and locked gates of the U.S. Consulate in Jerusalem, American diplomats are keeping open their lines to the Palestinians in the occupied West Bank despite growing hostility from the Israeli government.

The consulate and the government have never been on good terms, but bad feeling has surfaced in public only recently as the American staff took a bigger part in the search for Arab-Israeli peace.

The consulate's 10 diplomatic officers are the State Department's eyes and ears in the West Bank and the U.S. government's channel of communication with the Palestinians under Israeli rule there. One of the Americans' chief tasks is to try to enlist Palestinian support for the Camp David agreements. But so far the Palestinians have rejected the Egyptian-Israeli plan for them to have self-government rather than an independent state.

The Israelis fear the Americans may be promising the West Bank Arabs more than Israel is willing to give. The U.S. diplomats firmly deny improper behavior, but several recent incidents have heightened tensions and have put the consulate staff uncomfortably in the spotlight.

—Agriculture Minister Ariel Sharon accused the consulate of "going behind Israel's back in an attempt to establish facts of a Palestinian entity or state" on the West Bank. He did not elaborate.

—The Washington Post published confidential cables from the consulate to the State Department alleging Israeli torture of Palestinian prisoners.

—Consulate officers were spotted photographing construction of new Jewish settlements in the West Bank. The Israelis resent U.S. monitoring of settlement activity because Washington considers the settlements a violation of international law.

Suspicious of the consulate staff are partly a result of the anomalous status of the consulate in Jerusalem. To Israel's chagrin, Washington refuses to recognize Jerusalem as Israel's capital, technically abiding by a 1949 U.N. resolution declaring Jerusalem an international city.

That means, as far as the United States is concerned officially, the consulate is not in Israel. It has no formal ties to the U.S. Embassy in Tel Aviv and reports directly to Washington. It also has no official contact with the Israeli government.

It maintains buildings in both the Jewish and Arab sectors of the city, a holdover from the pre-1967 situation when Jerusalem was divided between Israel and Jordan. The stately consulate building in Jewish West Jerusalem is now the home of the political section, while visas are handled in East Jerusalem.

Israel has long demanded that Washington move its embassy to Jerusalem.

Farm issue again before Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — Protesting farmers, in Washington demanding higher price supports from the government, get an opportunity to press their case formally in Congress this week.

The House Agriculture Committee opens hearings Tuesday to review the nation's farm policy and proposed legislation, and members of the militant American Agriculture Movement are on the witness list for Wednesday and Thursday.

Thousands of farmers, dressed in blue jeans, work shirts and boots, spent last week demonstrating in Washington, complaining that crop price supports are too low.

Many of them ventured to Capitol Hill to talk with home-state congressmen and senators, and their leaders testified at a special hearing Friday before the Senate Agriculture Committee.

The farmers brought their protest to Washington a year ago, and nearly won congressional approval of legislation they were seeking. This year, their prospects for success are considered less likely, in part because many members of Congress fear higher price supports would spur inflation.

The Carter administration also has vowed not to raise price supports out of concern such a move would be inflationary.

Farmers aside, the action on Capitol Hill will be in the House of Representatives this week, as the Senate takes a one-week recess three weeks into the congressional session.

On Tuesday, the House is expected to approve its first legislation of the session, a minor measure loosening the conditions under which the government can sell rare Carson City silver dollars.

Officials say the Treasury could sell about one million coins for $20 million if current sales restrictions were lifted.

Also on Tuesday, a labor subcommittee will conduct hearings on the impact of the Carter administration's budget on the Humphrey-Hawkins Act.

Approved by Congress last year, the measure calls for reducing inflation to 3 percent by 1983 and trimming unemployment to 4 percent.

The budget also will be the topic of continuing hearings by the House Budget Committee. The panel will take testimony on Wednesday from the secretary of health, education and welfare, Joseph A. Califano Jr.

Youth killed

HOUSTON (AP) — Patrick Van Remoortel, 15, was crushed to death Sunday when his horse tripped during a riding school exhibition at Dewalt in Fort Bend County.

About 150 relatives had been watching students at the school when the horse failed to clear a hurdle, flipped over and crushed the boy's head and chest.

Protesting farmers finding lobbying pickin's mighty slim

WASHINGTON (AP) — Protesting farmers, now in the second week of 1979 lobbying for higher grain support prices, have been working long days in the congressional field. Pickin's are mighty slim.

Protest leaders are still hopeful, however, saying acceptance of their ideas is wider than expected.

The legislation the American Agriculture Movement is backing this year is a resolution urging the Carter administration to raise the supports and basic market prices to 90 percent of "parity."

One hundred percent parity theoretically would give farmers a return on crops comparable to that received by growers in the 1910-14 period. But that sounds too much like a "guaranteed

Midland woman remains critical

A 27-year-old Midland woman remained in critical condition today in Midland Memorial Hospital with injuries she received in a car-pedestrian accident in the city Saturday night.

Velva J. Turner of 1200 E. Pine Ave. today was in the hospital's intensive care unit, undergoing treatment for a broken pelvis.

Police said the woman, who was attempting to cross Lamesa Road, was injured in an accident involving a car driven by William A. Callaway, 27, of Lamesa, shortly before 9 p.m. Saturday.

Callaway's car was northbound on Lamesa Road at the time of the mishap, according to reports.

Questions raised on safety options

By WARREN E. LEARY

WASHINGTON (AP) — A study questions the contention that automobile safety equipment should be optional, after finding most people injured in car accidents in the survey had no say in buying the vehicle when it was new.

The report, published Sunday in the American Journal of Public Health, said fewer than one-fourth of the injured occupants studied in a Baltimore County, Md., survey were the owners and original purchasers of the vehicles.

"Most of the injured would have had no opportunity to influence the choice of safety features, had such features been optional when the car was initially purchased," says the report.

Susan P. Baker of Johns Hopkins University says she conducted the study because no attempt has been made to see if the personal-choice argument is valid.

"An argument often made against requiring motor vehicles to meet federal safety standards is that purchasers should be free not to invest in their own protection," she says.

Because only one's own personal safety is at stake, the argument goes, a car owner should have the right to omit expensive safety features.

Ms. Baker says this contention rests on the premise that the person injured in the vehicle is the one who initially buys it. But her study says this is not the case.

The study looked at car crashes in which 172 occupants of 147 vehicles were injured.

Ms. Baker found that 21 percent of the drivers and 74 percent of the passengers injured neither owned the vehicle nor appeared to be related to the owner.

The study also found that no more than 51 percent of the injured were in vehicles owned by the original purchaser.

Ms. Baker says that even if one assumes that spouses helped decide about car options, not more than 28 percent of the injured were likely to have influenced the initial purchase decision.

Mideast talks to begin soon

By BARRY SCHWEID

WASHINGTON (AP) — The next round of Israeli-Egyptian peace treaty talks will begin Feb. 21 at Camp David, Md. It could be the last American attempt at driving the two sides into removing obstacles to completing their historic agreement.

Acceptances to invitations have been received from Egyptian Prime Minister Mustafa Khalil and Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan.

Secretary of State Cyrus Vance will be host for the talks at the snow-capped Camp David site where President Carter and leaders of the two Middle East nations last September hammered out two framework agreements.

With the negotiations deadlocked over the Palestinian and other issues, Carter has suggested that unless a treaty is quickly completed, U.S. diplomatic efforts will shift to other world trouble spots. This could mean tossing the conflict into the lap of the United Nations or trying to set up a broader peace conference involving other Arab countries and possibly the Soviet Union.

American officials, disclosing the starting date, could not predict how long this round of negotiations would last. Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin said Sunday there would be a recess so Dayan and Khalil can consult their governments, indicating the talks would last longer than the three or four days originally planned.

Special U.S. Ambassador Alfred L. Atherton Jr., late last month undertook an apparently unsuccessful shuttle mission between Jerusalem and Cairo. Previous efforts by Vance and U.S. diplomats here and in the Middle East failed to resolve the outstanding differences.

Egypt wants to link the treaty with Israel to concrete steps establishing Palestinian self-rule on the west bank of the Jordan River and in the Gaza Strip. Israel has resisted, while insisting that Egypt allow the treaty to take precedence over its military ties with other Arab countries.

American officials, cautious about the prospects for success, are hoping the turmoil in Iran will influence both Egypt and Israel to settle their differences and restore an element of stability to the region.

New report alleges human rights violations in 'friendly' nations

WASHINGTON (AP) — While countries that receive U.S. aid or buy U.S. weapons. Not included are some countries most often accused of human rights violations, such as the Soviet Union, China, South Africa, Rhodesia, Argentina, Chile and Uruguay. Those countries do not receive American aid or arms.

Even before it was released, the study aroused much interest because of its charge that Israel mistreats Palestinians arrested on the West Bank of the Jordan River. That section was released early.

The full report, however, indicated

Iranian insurgents take positions around an enlisted club at the Sultanabad Garrison, an American military advisor center in Tehran, today. Iran's new Islamic government claims that all military resistance has ended, but is having trouble controlling supporters as thousands of armed people roam in Tehran. (AP Laserphoto)

Public safety group recognizes need for better health warnings

By JEFFREY MILLS

WASHINGTON (AP) — An outgoing member of the Consumer Product Safety Commission says the public is confused by frequent warnings about cancer-causing substances and wants better guidance from the government on just what the dangers are.

"We can't all be crying wolf when nobody really knows what it all means. The public is turning us off because people don't know what to listen to," said Barbara Hackman Franklin, whose six-year term ends Friday.

Ms. Franklin noted in an interview that cancer warnings have lost enough impact in recent years that "Johnny Carson tells jokes about Canadian rats." Substances suspected of causing cancer in humans are often tested on rats and other animals.

"Cancer is a curious set of diseases where exposure to some substance today can mean cancer 20 or 30 years hence. It is hard to comprehend, ... so this is an area where government has to take some initiative. The government needs to focus on the problem much more clearly and with much more urgency than it has."

Cancer is the No. 2 cause of death in the United States, trailing only heart disease. A variety of federal agencies regulate suspected carcinogens, or cancer-causing substances, including the Consumer Product Safety Commission.

The commission's best-known regulation of a carcinogen involved Tris, a flame retardant used in children's sleepwear.

It was to comply with federal flammability requirements that Tris came into widespread use. Later it was found to be a carcinogen and the commission banned it amid complaints over the inconsistency of government regulations.

Ms. Franklin said the Tris experience and others involving several agencies that regulate carcinogens in their specific areas led her to conclude that a single government-wide cancer policy is needed.

She noted there are inconsistent approaches between agencies. For the Food and Drug Administration to ban a product, for instance, it must only be shown to cause cancer in laboratory animals. The commission, however, must decide whether a product poses an "unreasonable hazard" to humans.

She has written President Carter several times to urge a stronger White House role in the regulation of carcinogens. "There has been some progress, but I had hoped the president would take a more personal interest and get things moving faster," Ms. Franklin said.

She was appointed by former President Richard M. Nixon when the commission was formed in 1973.

Promising young actor almost gets stewed as Air Force cook

By GREG THOMPSON

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Will Walker is a well-paid, energetic young actor who already has numerous movie and television credits — all at the Hollywood-tender age of 22.

So what's he doing with the skin-head haircut and ill-fitting blue uniform of an Air Force basic trainee? And with official orders, no less, to become an Air Force cook?

"A lot of people I respect a lot started in military films. I am impressed by the things I have seen, especially now when they are making so many contemporary films with real appeal," he said.

"It'll probably save me about 10 years (in my movie career)," added Walker, who hopes to use his experience in the Air Force's sophisticated film production to break into the difficult, high-stakes field of producing Hollywood films.

It took some quick shuffling, however, after Air Force officials routinely evaluated Walker's aptitude test scores and assigned him to cook school — instead of the audio-visual job Walker had hoped for.

"I saw my orders and almost died," he grinned. "That was kind of a shock."

THE AIR FORCE DISCOVERED Walker's film credentials and reconsidered, however, creating a job slot for him at the Aerospace Audio-Visual Service near Los Angeles. Walker graduated last week from the grueling, 30-day basic training at Lackland.

By now, you are no doubt wondering how a glib recruiter conned Walker into volunteering for the Air Force in the first place.

Walker said he had only wandered into a recruiting station in Van Nuys, Calif., late last year to discuss a USO show his agent had scheduled for him. He had just finished filming George C. Scott's new movie, "Hard Core," in which Walker plays the role of a man who lures Scott's movie daughter into a pornographic movie career.

During the visit, recruiters showed him "Air Force Now," a slick, well-financed, monthly information film put out by the audio-visual service.

"I was impressed by the quality. I went in there with an open mind. The recruiter was honest," he said. "There was no guarantee of a job in Air Force films. I had to take my chances."

"I had a gut feeling I would get a fair shake. I hoped they would listen and presented my case. Things worked out."

THE BLOND ACTOR INTENDS to continue his career during the Air Force hitch — even if he has to use only leave time to do it. He said he is scheduled next month to shoot an episode of the television show, "Stasky and Hutch," and is involved in the upcoming movie, "American Gigolo."

His movie credits already include "Towering Inferno," "White Buffalo," "The Driver," "Deathsport," and "Black Sunday." He's appeared in several television episodes and movies, including "Stasky and Hutch," "Baretta," "Emergency," "Journey from Darkness" and "Katherine."

"I'm established. I have the credits, so my career will not slide downhill in the four years I'm in the Air Force," he said.

"If nothing else, I'll take some leave time off to do some roles. I'm hoping to find some program in the Air Force that would want to sponsor me on something like that and get some press out of it."

Walker turned 18 years old on the set of "Towering Inferno," his first movie role. Actor Richard Chamberlain had seen Walker's lead performance in the American Conservatory Theater's "Romeo and Juliet," and asked him to join the cast.

Temperature may soar Tuesday

It seems more and more as if spring may have come early this year.

That's if one studies the temperatures recorded in recent days by the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport — and the forecast for the next few days.

The mercury should rise to near 80 Tuesday. Tonight's high was expected to be in the 70s.

The weatherman said fair skies and warm daytime temperatures should greet the Permian Basin for the next few days, quite a change of pace from the freezing and drizzling weather that hit the area a week ago today.

Winds are expected to become light and variable tonight. The National Weather Service recorded a high of 70 degrees at the airport Sunday. The record high for Feb. 11 is 85 degrees set in 1962.

The overnight low was 31 degrees. The record low for today is 14 degrees set in 1963.

Betting issue divides landowners

BY GUY SULLIVAN Staff Writer

ODESSA — It doesn't take much horse sense to figure out that if pari-mutuel betting were legal in Texas last year, West Texas would have its share of racetracks.

One such facility might even have been built in Notrees, between Odessa and Kermit.

But although some Odessans speculate on that possibility, others deny it.

Texas last year in a non-binding referendum voted by a narrow margin their disapproval of legalized pari-mutuel betting.

Had a majority favored the idea, many observers were speculating, the Legislature likely would have followed suit with appropriate legislation.

Two Odessans who own substantial acreage in the Notrees area recently talked about the horse-racing prospects there.

S. F. "Sonny" Henderson of Odessa denied he has ever had plans of building a racetrack on his Notrees land had pari-mutuel betting been legalized in Texas.

However, he said he owns about 20 quarter horses and is very much in favor of pari-mutuel betting.

AND MRS. JAY DEE Amburgey of Odessa, who says she owns about half the land in the Notrees area, has expressed strong opposition to pari-mutuel betting in Texas.

She and her husband, a pioneer West Texas cattleman who now makes bowling balls for a living, said they disapprove of pari-mutuel betting.

Whether or not Notrees becomes the site of a racetrack should pari-mutuel betting ever pass in Texas, the views of these people on the subject are strong and in opposing directions.

The Amburgeys and Henderson are longtime West Texans. They own land in the Notrees area. And each has a background in the area dating back to the turn of the century.

"We've had land out there (Notrees) for years," said Mrs. Amburgey. "It's a nice little town."

"We used to graze cattle out there, and I used to use a phone in the store."

Jay Dee Amburgey calls himself one of the last West Texas cowboys. Born in Odessa, he spent most of his life in Notrees.

"It wasn't a town back in 1907. It became one in the 1940s," he said.

"MY DAD, JOHN AMBURGEY, taught the first term in Odessa's one-room schoolhouse," Amburgey said.

Mrs. Amburgey sees no reason for horse racing.

"I'm against pari-mutuel betting," she said. "I just don't think we need it here." Too many people would be adversely affected by a racetrack in Notrees, she said.

Henderson takes exception to her stand.

"Sure, I own about 13,000 acres of land near Notrees," he said. "I use it for grazing, and I take my quarter horses who are alling out there to mend."

"I favor pari-mutuel betting in Texas, because I think it will provide more state income taxes and jobs and start a need for 'support services,' which could become an entire new industry."

Henderson said he has a 25-acre pasture in New Mexico where he keeps most of his racing quarter horses. His passion for quarter horses is reflected in the decor of his office in the First National Bank Building in downtown Odessa.

Walls and corners of the room sport photos or sculpted likenesses of his racing quarter horses and give the office a resemblance to a Western museum.

HE BRANDED AS false reports that he had plans to build a racetrack in Notrees.

"I think pari-mutuel betting isn't bad. We're one of the few states that doesn't assess state income tax," he said.

As for allegations that organized crime would encroach on the sport, he replied, "I think organized crime is already here. Look at the Dallas Gambling Syndicate. They're probably making $1 million each year on football bets. I do not think organized crime would present a problem in pari-mutuel betting."

"I think Texans were shortsighted in turning down pari-mutuel betting. This is probably one of the most highly regulated sports in the country," he said.

When asked about corruption, he answered, "Scandals? There are scandals in all kinds of businesses. Even county and city governments have scandals."

"RACING IS A HIGHLY professional sport," he said. "And it's exciting. It's something I like to do. Some people play golf. I like to breed and race horses. Notrees is just where I put my problem horses, those mending or the babies."

"I regret that people in Texas opposed pari-mutuel betting, because I feel it's highly regulated."

Council to review housing plan

A plan to make it easier for moderate-income families to purchase homes will be reviewed by the Midland City Council when it meets at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday in the Council Chambers at City Hall.

Presenting the plan will be the Housing Authority, which also will be asking the City Council for permission to amend its contract, enabling Authority members to investigate the program further.

The council also will set an election date for city elections, establish election precincts, polling places and name election officials.

Council members whose terms are expiring are Doris Howbert, Gordon Marcum II and Carroll Thomas.

Sale of the Wemple Property should be finalized during this session. Action was initiated on the sale at the council's Jan. 9 meeting. The property borders on Loraine and Main streets.

The remainder of that block already is under construction for the city's Exhibit Hall. A new Chamber of Commerce building also is planned for the north side of the block.

But the Council had claimed earlier that it needed the Wemple property to round out the Exhibit Hall concept. Underground parking in this section of land is being explored.

Pioneer Natural Gas also should get the final go-ahead on a rate hike as the City Council will consider the ordinance authorizing the increases on second reading.

At a Jan. 24 council meeting, the gas company was given a 14.88 percent increase, down from the 26 percent the firm had requested. Also set were rates for various types of service, service charges and length of free line.

Also on the agenda is an ordinance to amend the City Code to allow trapping and removal of birds in cases in which a large concentration of the feathered animals constitutes a public nuisance or health hazards.

An ordinance outlining one-way streets on portions of Illinois, Texas and Cuthbert avenues will be up for a second reading. If the ordinance is passed by the Council Tuesday, one-way signs should be installed and in effect by the first part of March, according to city officials.

Items for consideration from the aviation department include an amendment to HTB Construction Co.'s contract at Midland Regional Airport, a change order to BFW Construction's contract at the airport, an agreement with the Federal Aviation Administration on leasing its new facility, and accepting a bid for construction of a general aviation taxiway at the airport.

Parkhill, Smith and Cooper, Inc., will be asking for approval to proceed with a final design on the proposed FAA Flight Service Building.

Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission will be asking for additional office space.

The council will consider a bid for constructing a cart storage building at Hogan Park Golf Course.

Public hearings will be held on the request of D.L. Bradshaw to put a mobile home at 1111-A S. McKenzie St., and on zone change requests by HBF Corporation and Clyde Brown.

Preliminary plats of Crestgate Addition, Polo Club Addition and Pollard Addition will be considered.

Zone change requests from Andrew Kauffman and Morris Hamilton Jr., will be considered on second reading.

'Twin plants' concept keeps El Paso economy in sunshine

By TOM DeCOLA

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — El Paso exists in splendid isolation, more than 250 miles from the nearest major American city, Albuquerque, N.M.

A fence separates it from the largest Mexican border city of Ciudad Juarez, and the two sport a combined population of 1½ million people.

So dependent are the sister cities on each other that they must be considered one entity to explain why things are going so well in El Paso.

Promoters call it "Sun City," and they use the lure of the weather and the action in Juarez to gain new money, be it from tourism or new industry.

Industry seems to be taking the bait, with 12 companies scheduled to move in by 1980, providing 6,000 new jobs.

To quite an extent, a concept begun by RCA in 1969 is responsible for much of the growth.

Damned by some and praised by others, the concept is called "twin plants" by most. One who doesn't like the name is Bill Mitchell, marketing director for an industrial park in Juarez and considered the liaison man for the "twin plants" that he prefers to call "in-bond" industry.

El Paso Mayor Ray Salazar says there are 99 "in-bond" plants in Juarez, employing 33,000 workers and pumping an annual $300 million into the El Paso economy.

The roll call of "in-bond" industries is impressive: Westinghouse, Sylvania, American Hospital Supply, Ampex and AMF are among the companies taking part. General Motors and General Electric joined the ranks in the past two years, and Chrysler is involved in opening an operation.

First in a series

The promise is simple: The American companies farm certain work to a related plant in Mexico. The product is re-sent to the United States and duty is paid only on value added, taking advantage of cheaper labor in Mexico. A bond is posted with the Mexican government and used to offset any impact the product might have should it appear on the Mexican market.

Critics say the concept keeps jobs away from Americans, but Mitchell says it just isn't so.

Citing a recent survey among the "in-bond" industries, Mitchell said that if the operations were shut down, 60 percent of the companies involved would remain, but would order raw materials from outside the United States. He said the other 40 percent would move from the El Paso-Juarez area.

The "in-bond" plants on the American side employ about 2,000 workers.

Proponents argue that the border operations keep industries active in the United States — industries that would otherwise surface in Taiwan or other countries where labor is even cheaper and entire plants are proliferating.

That the "in-bond" concept benefits the Mexico economy is without question. Jobs are provided, and those who look to the future see even more benefits.

Many would like to see the Mexican portion of "in-bond" industry penetrate into Mexico's interior, and Mitchell says some Juarez operations are ready to spin off into more plants deeper in the heart of Mexico.

"The people working at the plants in Juarez are gaining the experience and expertise to run other plants," Mitchell said. "The United States could make money available for development in the interior. This would also help to keep down the numbers of illegal aliens."

Always, there is one opponent that "in-bond" operations can count on — big labor. "The unions apply heat every year," Mitchell says. "They spend lots of money."

The concept, though, seems solidly entrenched along the border.

If El Paso itself is an example, its success seems ensured.

NEXT: Why El Paso?

Labor organization schedules rally to protest interest hike

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Proposals to raise the maximum legal interest permitted on home loans by 2 percent are a "disastrous rip-off of Texas home buyers," claims the Texas AFL-CIO.

The labor organization scheduled a rally at the Capitol today to dramatize its opposition to bills that would raise the maximum amount of interest allowable on home loans from the present 10 percent to 12 percent.

"Stop the billion-dollar lobby," is the theme of the AFL-CIO's campaign against the proposals.

State AFL-CIO President Harry Hubbard asserted at a Friday news conference that savings and loan associations have, in effect, gone on strike by withholding loan money until the Legislature raises the interest rate.

He said the legislative sponsors of the bill — Sen. Bill Meier, D-Eules, and Rep. Jerry Donaldson, D-Gatesville — each have received campaign contributions from supporters of the bill.

"Mr. Hubbard is attempting to stir up the politics of this measure rather than debate the obvious merits it has, especially to the many thousands of workers he purportedly represents that will lose their jobs if this bill doesn't pass," countered Meier.

Asked if higher rates might lead to more loans and more jobs, Hubbard said, "It's not true if history repeats itself."

Lending institutions, which often borrow the money they lend to homebuyers, contend that in periods of "tight money" they cannot profitably lend money at the current ceiling rate of 10 percent. There is no indication, however, loan rates would rise to 12 percent. A Democratic-Republican election controversy also was surfacing, with arguments over a 1980 presidential primary and proposals to move party primary elections from May and June to July and August or later.

Court stops petition in center

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A Fort Worth woman trying to prevent further prosecution of millionaire Cullen Davis cannot use a shopping center parking lot to support the petition she is circulating in support of the industrial-murder-for-hire trial in Houston ended in a hung jury.

She seeks the signatures of two-thirds of Tarrant County residents who voted in the last general election. The petition asks for no further prosecution of Davis, whose recent

Persons eligible for Medicare may enroll for protection now

ODESSA — Persons who are eligible for Medicare but do not presently have this medical insurance protection may enroll for it between now and April 2.

According to Erven L. Fisher Jr., Social Security district manager in Odessa, persons eligible to sign up during the 1979 general enrollment period include citizens 65 years of age or over, and disabled people who have Medicare hospital insurance but who failed to sign up when they were first eligible, or who once had this protection but canceled it.

Protection will begin next July 1 for persons who sign up between now and April 2, Fisher said. Those who sign up during the general enrollment period may pay a higher premium if there was a period of 12 months or more during which they were eligible for medical insurance but did not have it, he added.

Full information about Medicare may be obtained from the Midland or Odessa social security offices, and staff members at each office will help eligible persons to sign up for the medical insurance protection, said Fisher.

The Midland office is in Room 108 of the Federal Building, 200 E. Wall St., and the telephone number is 683-3396. The Odessa office is in Room 516 of the First National Bank Building, and the telephone number is 332-9423.

Source of sickness is sought

NAPLES, Italy (AP) — Medical experts from the United States and Europe were due here today to help Italian physicians try to pinpoint the cause of the "mystery disease" that has taken the lives of at least 63 children, most of them infants from Naples' crowded slums.

The latest victims, two boys 6 and 11 months old, died Sunday at Santobono Hospital. Officials there said another child, an 11-month-old girl, was being treated in the intensive care ward for the illness, whose symptoms include a high fever and vomiting often followed by a coma.

Some local experts believe the disease — dubbed the "obscure evil" by the Italian press — is a form of viral pneumonia.

Among those coming to Naples for consultations are William Baine, an epidemiologist at the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta, Ga., and two physicians from the National Institute of Health in Bethesda, Md.

DEAR ABBY

Knocked for loophole

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
DEAR ABBY: Referring to the letter from a Florida CPA: He amended your advice to the woman who asked about the seriousness of her husband's practice of pocketing part of his daily income.

The CPA quotes you as saying it was indeed a serious offense, and her husband could be fined or jailed or both. Then he goes on to say that you, Dear Abby, didn't go far enough—you should have advised her that if she and her husband signed a joint federal tax return, she is equally guilty of fraud, and therefore subject to the same penalty.

Your comment: "Leave it to a CPA to catch the omission."

Well, the CPA is correct up to a point; however he didn't go far enough either! Had he read Section 6013 (e) of the Internal Revenue Code, he would know that the spouse is relieved of liability under certain conditions.

On omitted income, it reads: "The other spouse establishes that in signing the return he or she did not know of, and had no reason to know of, such omission."—C. J. S.: TAX CONSULTANT VENTURA, CALIF.

DEAR C. J. S.: Leave it to a California tax consultant to find a loophole that was overlooked by a CPA.

DEAR ABBY: A woman wrote to complain about barbers who charge bald-headed men and those with full heads of hair the same price for haircuts. She thought the baldies should pay half price.

You replied, "So how much should the barber charge the man with long hair that requires twice as much time for a haircut? Sorry, it all evens out. Anyone who feels that the trimming he's getting isn't worth the trimming he's getting should stay out of barber shops."

Gotcha, Abby! At my barber shop, in addition to the already inflated prices, they charge a minimum of $2 extra for long hair. And no discounts for baldies.—M. B. M.

DEAR M. B. M.: Your barber shop sounds like a clip joint.

DEAR ABBY: My husband has developed the habit of taking long naps (from one to three hours) almost every night when he gets home from work.

I think he is anti-social and uses these naps to avoid people.

He usually wakes up about the time most normal people are ready for bed. Then he stays up and reads, eats, watches TV, etc. He goes to sleep for the night about 1 o'clock and sleeps like a baby until it's time to get up for work. On weekends he sleeps most of the day and all night, too. I told him I thought he ought to see a doctor, but he says there's nothing wrong with him. We're both in our early 50s.

Do you think he's just being anti-social? Or is there something wrong with a person who can't seem to get enough sleep?—SLEEPER'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: Your husband appears to be sleeping far too much for a normal, healthy person. Insist that he see a physician for a thorough examination.

Are you the lonely face in the crowd? Friends make you a winner, and Abby tells you how to win them in her booklet, "How To Be Popular; You're Never Too Young or Too Old." Send $1 with a long, self-addressed, stamped (28 cents) envelope to Abby: 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Pill affects baby's milk, say experts

By WARREN E. LEARY
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mothers who previously were long-term users of birth control pills have decreased amounts of vitamin B-6 in their breast milk, a condition which may affect a baby's brain development, according to a Purdue University researcher.

Dr. Avanelle Kirksey said Friday that most nursing women take vitamin supplements that could decrease the potential problem seen in animal experiments. But she said it's unknown how much supplement is needed to correct any deficiency.

"I think that if women have a good diet and the supplements that their obstetricians recommend, they'll be okay — they'll have adequate vitamin B-6 in their milk," she said in a telephone interview. "But we know that diet alone is not enough."

"For one thing, breads and cereals are good sources of vitamin B-6 but many women leave them out of their diets because they are watching their weight," Ms. Kirksey said.

"We are very concerned about the B-6 finding because in rat experiments, we find some basic differences in brain development with this vitamin deficiency," she said. Ms. Kirksey said the deficiency appears to decrease the brain's supply of myelin, a substance that forms a protective sheath around some nerves.

She said the research, conducted with Dr. Judith L. Roepke, will be published in an upcoming issue of the American Journal of Clinical Nutrition.

Abraham Lincoln

Today marks the 170th birthday anniversary of Abraham Lincoln, and the nation yet pauses on this particular day each year in memory of this great American and to offer thanks for his courage, determination and leadership.

Abraham Lincoln is recognized around the world as one of the truly great men of all time. During his lifetime, Lincoln displayed a nobility of character which continues to grow in international appeal.

It was Lincoln who preserved the American Union during the War Between the States, and this one great and far-reaching achievement placed him on a pedestal in history which never will be toppled.

It is no wonder that Americans remember and honor this great American on the anniversary of his birth.

Abraham Lincoln was the first president elected by the Republican party — rising from humble origin to the nation's highest office. He was called to serve in this high office during the most trying time in the nation's history, and it was most fortunate for the United States of America, as we know it today, that he was.

Among his greatest characteristics were his iron-will determination, his ability to express himself clearly, his insight, his patience and his compassion. These, with others, largely were responsible for carrying him — and the nation — through and over the rough spots.

His famous Gettysburg Address will be remembered and quoted always.

Another of his great and meaningful statements had to do with studying and abiding by the Constitution, in which he said:

"Let every American, every lover of liberty, every wellwisher to his posterity swear by the blood of the Revolution never to violate in the least particular the laws of the country, and never to tolerate their violation by others. As the patriots of '76 did to the support of the Declaration of Independence, so to the support of the Constitution and laws let every American pledge his life, his property and his sacred honor. Let every American remember that to violate the law is to trample on the blood of his father, and to tear the charter of his own and his children's liberty...."

And what better occasion than on the anniversary of Lincoln's birthday to give serious thought and consideration to the wisdom of his words, which yet have special meaning for the United States of America.

'SHUCKS - WE'LL JUST TURN THE THERMOSTAT DOWN'

CHARLEY REESE

'People who would rule others hate capitalism'

By CHARLEY REESE Sun Belt Syndicate

ORLANDO, Fla. — Have you ever thought about why some people hate freedom and capitalism? You should. If you think it through, you will be able to recognize your enemies more quickly.

Most of what is good in life is simple. If we think back to pre-civilization, it's obvious what the Universe had in mind for us to do. We are not created biologically self-sustaining. We have to work to survive.

If we can work, can keep what our labor produces, find another human being to love and to share our labor and its products, acquire a home, raise children, earn ourselves enough leisure to contemplate the beauty of this wondrous planet, and live out our days in peace, then we will be about as happy as it's naturally possible to be.

There are a few conditions, however, that are necessary to make this course of action possible. We must be free to work and free to keep what our labor produces and we must be safe from physical attack by people who survive by looting workers.

When we are free to work how, where, when and at what we choose and are free to keep what we earn and to spend it as we like, we are experiencing the economic system someone named capitalism. Note that government is not required for these private acts of working, accumulating and spending.

Charley Reese

The proper role of government is to protect the workers. That is what our military forces exist for today. They are there to prevent other people from coming into our land with weapons and forcing us, by threat of death, to give them what we earn with our labor. The police serve the same function internally.

Our forefathers assigned government a few other tasks, but not many, and if you read the Constitution, you can see plainly that all of the tasks they assigned to government were intended to facilitate and to encourage the private acts of working, accumulating, and spending. They also intended to limit the power of government.

What kind of people are not willing to leave their fellow man alone? Well, some are greedy, some lust for power, some hate themselves and so hate everybody else, and some are too lazy to work and so wish to live off the labor of others.

These are bad people and bad people usually get together. It did not take them long to discover that the most efficient form of looting ever invented is to use the police powers of government to confiscate the labor products of the people.

People who have an itch to rule others hate freedom and capitalism. A free man doesn't want a ruler and capitalism allows men to become so self-sufficient they don't need a ruler. I used to think the poverty you see in all totalitarian states was merely a by-product of the system's inefficiency, but now I understand. They produce the poverty on purpose.

Poor people are easier to rule. If you make a person labor from dawn to moonrise just to stay alive, he has neither the time, the energy, nor the resources to overthrow his master. A person who would do that to another human being is evil.

There are some of these evil people in our country today. Some are in government and some are not, but they all intend to make us poor because they intend to rule us. By devious means they are destroying the economy of this country by erecting roadblocks to stop people from working efficiently and by confiscating with taxes and inflation the major portion of their earnings.

They want us poor, disarmed and dependent on them for our survival. Of course they don't say this, but their actions speak the truth their words seek to hide. They want an energy crisis, lowered productivity, high taxes, huge debts, inflation, and laws which destroy entrepreneurs.

Such people deserve our hatred, for they are true enemies who intend to make us serfs.

Fast food in China

China is said to be coming up about $200 billion short of the $600 billion needed for its ambitious program to modernize the mainland by 1985. How are the Chinese going to earn enough to buy all the goods and technology they want from the West?

Well, one answer already is in sight, with news that Coca Cola and McDonald's will be among the first names to appear on Chinese signboards.

Consider, if you will, the impact on the Chinese lifestyle if the cook can get dinner on the table quickly just by running around the corner for a sack of Coke and Big Macs — or the packaged equivalent of a tv-dinner, which is another innovation the Peking traders are eyeing.

The result will be a massive saving in time and energy spent slicing up meat and vegetables and juggling all those pots and pans in the kitchen. This can be devoted to more productive activity, a plus for the gross national product.

Don't laugh. A Japanese businessman left Peking with the impression that Chinese leaders have exactly that in mind. They are interested in fast-food marketing and packaged meals so their people will be freed from household chores to spend more time working outside the home.

It might work, but it is understood the Chinese also are dicker with the Japanese to buy golf clubs — and you can take it from there.

INSIDE REPORT:

Overall political strategy seen in Abzug dismissal

By ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — The implications for overall political strategy in President Carter's decision to sack Bella Abzug are suggested by this fact: Vice President Walter F. Mondale first learned of the decision, made hours earlier, as he left work that day.

Mondale has been the administration's principal exponent of accommodation with pressure groups within the Democratic party. Mrs. Abzug's appointment last June as co-chairman of a blue-ribbon women's advisory group was an accommodation to organized feminists. "The only voice here who disapproved of getting rid of Bella last week was the vice president," one White House insider told us.

Her dismissal was not merely the inescapable reaction to rudeness of the former congresswoman from Manhattan; it was recognition of accommodation's limits. It marked a way station on Jimmy Carter's path back to his successful, more instinctive political formula of 1976, when he did not worry about coalescing pressure groups but appealed to broad popular sentiment.

Rare in an administration not prone to admit error, there is universal crow-eating among Carter's senior staff that naming Abzug was a mistake in the first place. When she was finally fired press secretary Jody Powell immediately telephoned Rosalynn Carter, to say: "Mea culpa."

It was Powell and two other senior aides, Stuart Eizenstat and Anne

Evans Novak

Wexler, who last spring told the president and first lady — instinctively skeptical of Abzug — that her appointment was essential. Ms. Wexler's advice was partly shaped by threats from women's activist Gloria Steinem, Abzug's comrade in militancy, of dire retribution if she did not get the job.

But appeasement is never concluded in one installment. It soon became clear that Abzug would use her post to browbeat the president not just on women's questions but on vital national and defense policies, utilizing a technique perfected during a decade of intramural bloodletting within the Democratic party.

Abzug immediately challenged Sarah Weddington, the soft-spoken Texas feminist who is the president's fulltime aide for women's questions. In her inimitable manner, Abzug let the White House know the score: Bella is Carter's principal women's adviser, and Sarah had better stay out of her way.

Just before Thanksgiving, the Women's Advisory Committee rejected a 15-minute scheduled meeting with Carter on grounds it was too short. At the Democratic midterm conference in Memphis early in December, Abzug was perceived by the president's men as fighting Carter on the crucial budget resolution. No wonder, then, that several months ago there was private admission of error at the White House for signing on the uncontrollable Bella.

But there was no overt talk of correcting the error until Jan. 11 when the White House received the advisory committee's press release on the eve of its meeting with the president. Senior aides Powell, Hamilton Jordan and Gerald Rafshoon could scarcely believe their eyes when they read criticism of Carter's social priorities, his anti-inflation plan and the "proposed 10 percent increase" in defense spending. As might have been predicted by Abzug-watchers, she was turning a part-time commission on women's questions into a political platform to ridicule Carter's basic policies.

Carter's advisers compared notes that evening, some just then learning of Abzug's role in Memphis and her treatment of Weddington. They met again the next morning and recommended Abzug's dismissal. But her fate was not sealed until that afternoon when she assaulted Carter at the formal meeting.

Contrasting with the sense of emancipation for Carter and his senior staff, middle-level aides have been wringing hands over retaliation by angry feminists. Gloria Steinem appeared like an avenging angel to denounce the president, quickly followed by resignations of about half the advisory committee members. Mondale said nothing, but an aide noted: "The vice president is not inclined to confrontation."

Although Abzug claimed the resignations were spontaneous, several women who quit confided to the White House about pressure put on them and hinted at future service when the heat is off. Other women telephoned congratulations and offered themselves as replacements. Outside the cozy world of organized women's politics, there was little protest.

Indeed, sacking Bella Abzug may well help rather than hurt the equal rights amendment (ERA) and win, not lose, women's votes for Carter — a prospect noted within the White House. If so, the politics of accommodation was dealt a serious blow the day that Jimmy showed Bella to the door.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Fourth El Salvador cleric slain

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — Before dawn on Jan. 20, in a suburb of San Salvador, uniformed agents of El Salvador's dictator Carlos Humberto Romero burst into a Roman Catholic retreat center and sprayed the area with machine-gun fire.

Four young people and a 31-year-old priest were killed; more than 30 others, many in their teens, were arrested, interrogated and charged with "subversive acts" against the Romero regime. The government claimed that the Catholic center was being used for peasant organizing activities which had been declared illegal.

Why such activity should be punished by summary execution, the Romero administration did not say. The priest, Father Octavio Ortiz Luna, and the other victims had not been armed; nor had they offered any resistance to the security police.

In fact, according to several sources, no illegal activity of any kind was going on in the retreat center. A youth seminar was being conducted as part of the Week of Prayer for Christian Unity declared by the Catholic Church hierarchy.

An eyewitness gave this account to our reporter Bob Sherman: "While I was still asleep, uniformed members of the security forces violently entered the retreat center firing their weapons. Behind them came a large olive green military vehicle, a small tank and an army jeep, which were parked in the center of the conference grounds."

The eyewitness, a co-director of the seminar, found Father Ortiz Luna's body "lying in a pool of blood, with blood still flowing from his head." The co-director denied that any conspiracy against the state had ever been held at the center, "nor has there ever been any doctrine taught that is contrary to public order."

Ortiz Luna was the fourth priest to be killed in the two years since the right-wing regime of President Romero came to power. An unreleased report by the human rights commission of the Organization of American States concludes that the Romero government has been systematically persecuting the church.

Confrontations between clergy and state are not uncommon in Latin American dictatorships. Often, however, it is only the poorer priests who protest against a dictator's violation of human rights, while the wealthier bishops remain silent. What makes the situation in El Salvador unusual is that both parish and priests and church hierarchy have spoken out in opposition to the government's abuses of power.

Archbishop Oscar Arnulfo Romero (no relation to the dictator) is considered the champion of human rights for the 5 million — mostly Catholic — population of the country. The Sunday after Ortiz Luna's murder, the archbishop suspended all masses in the country and delivered a homily castigating the Romero regime. His overflow congregation numbered 10,000, and millions more heard his denunciation on the radio.

Archbishop Romero has gone even further than attacking the administration on human rights. He has called for redistribution of the land, almost 60 percent of which is now owned by less than 2 percent of the population.

Obviously considering the archbishop a threat, the government has sought to undermine his influence by linking him to left-wing revolutionary groups.

Archbishop Romero's supporters in this country and in Britain have nominated him for the Nobel Peace Prize. Rep. Robert Drinan, D-Mass., himself a Catholic priest, is circulating a letter among his congressional colleagues urging support for the Nobel nomination. The peace prize would boost the archbishop's position immensely, and might force the Romero regime to at last soften its repressive measures.

WHITE HOUSE PIPELINE: One of the reasons President Carter enjoys going home to Plains, he confided recently, is that he gets to drive his own car — a pleasure he is denied in Washington.

White House insiders are fuming over what they see as the Social Security Administration's inept job of explaining the new tax and benefits amendments to the American public. As one example, they say the SSA has failed to make clear just how much more in payroll taxes the average wage earner will get hit with.

POLITICAL POTPOURRI: Word has reached the White House that Jerry Brown, the enigmatic California governor, will challenge Jimmy Carter in the presidential primaries. Sources close to Brown have confided that he'll test his strength against the president in the Iowa caucus, New Hampshire primary and Massachusetts primary.

Worried White House aides have acknowledged privately that Carter's biggest challenge could come in the Democratic primaries rather than the general election. But they're more apprehensive about Ted Kennedy than Jerry Brown. Their private polls show that the Massachusetts senator could whip them resoundingly in the primaries.

Those who know Kennedy, however, say he won't try to pull the nomination out from under Carter unless Brown appears to be a presidential threat. The senator has two reasons, intimates say, to hold back — first, he doesn't want to divide the Democratic party by bringing down its president but, second, he dislikes Brown enough to keep him from getting the nomination.

Mosco undisputed mule racing champ

By JEANIE ESAJIAN

SANGER, Calif. (AP) — As Mosco pounds down the track, his four legs driving and neck outstretched, he has the unmistakable mark of a champion.

Equally unmistakable are those mule ears. But Mosco isn't just any mule. He is the champion of the world.

In his first year in the infant sport, the 4-year-old has won mule racing's unofficial triple crown.

He was named Running Mule of the Year, the American Mule Association's champion for 1978, and last July won the Larry Chimbole Mule Championship of the World, the first parimutuel mule race.

"He is the Affirmed of mule racing," says LaVerne Ordway of nearby Fresno, secretary of the American Mule Racing Association.

Mosco lost only two of 21 starts in the racing circuit that draws mostly from the southwestern United States.

At Bishop, Calif., a Mojave Desert town called the Mule Capital of the World, Mosco won a 440-yard race named for former California Assemblyman Larry Chimbole who authored legislation establishing a five-year pilot program of parimutuel mule racing.

The victory gave Mosco's owners the lion's share of the $3,500 purse, raising his earnings to $8,000 in 1978. Mule-racing purses are considerably below those of horse racing.

Co-owner Al Dodds began training Mosco at age 2½, along with race horses he trains for himself and others at his Silver D-Bar Ranch here.

"It's a little tougher training a mule," says Dodds, 38. "They require a lot more foundation riding before you start working them."

He says mules aren't as kind as a horse and are harder to handle. "They are half burro and that burro will show up. Lots of times, mules are ornery out of fear. They have more natural fear of man than a horse does."

But the adage, "stubborn as a mule," doesn't fit the new breed of racing mules that receive the same training as the most highly-bred race horse.

"They are breeding more and more thoroughbred mares and will be getting longer, thinner mules," Dodds says. "A race mule looks more like a horse than a mule."

In mule breeding, the mare's characteristics are considered more important and more dominant in the offspring. However, a small-boned jackass is used to sire the racing mule for better results.

Racing mules have surprised many, including those who sheepishly point to Mosco, whose mother was a thoroughbred, and ask: "Is that a horse or a mule?"

"I think a lot of people were disappointed," Dodds says of the Bishop parimutuel race. "They thought they were going to see some comical things like donkey basketball."

Dodd expects more professional race-horse trainers like himself to become involved in mule racing.

"It's more fun because it's like a hobby, one that goes with my business," he says.

The land-reclamation program is one of several offerings the independent university says are available at no other higher-education institution in the country.

Among them are a four-year program in game and fish management and a full-time program that trains people to recruit young men and women for college.

The university was conceived by President Lincoln as a means of helping Appalachian residents escape the bonds of poverty and to reward East Tennesseans for their loyalty to the Union during the Civil War.

The school is now career-oriented, but strayed off-course for a while. "When Lincoln conceived our university," Welch says, "he saw us as being a place where Appalachians could break their poverty cycle by learning a career."

In the late '40s, and in the '50s and '60s, however, the institution changed its scope to being a liberal-arts college.

Nationally, says Welch, interviewed while in New York on a business trip, "career orientation is now becoming the major program thrust."

Welch assumed his $34,000-a-year post five years ago, at a time when the university was almost

University has rare courses

By GENE SCHROEDER

NEW YORK (AP) — The president of a university located in the heart of Appalachia's coal-mining region believes the land-scarring havoc caused by strip-mining can, and must, be repaired.

So, Dr. Frank Welch has established at Lincoln Memorial University in Eastern Tennessee the nation's only four-year program in reclamation of strip-mined land.

"We recognize that the United States needs coal to generate energy," the 39-year-old Welch says. "But at the same time, we're concerned that we do not destroy our environment in the process of mining it."

Experts say reclamation of strip-mined land is a new and complex blend of several sciences. "It's a very difficult job," Welch explains. "Something like trying to grow crops on a farm that's had its soil completely eroded. But it can — and must — be done."

Some 45 students are now majoring in mined-land reclamation, with several wildlife management students also taking courses.

The land-reclamation program is one of several offerings the independent university says are available at no other higher-education institution in the country.

Among them are a four-year program in game and fish management and a full-time program that trains people to recruit young men and women for college.

The university was conceived by President Lincoln as a means of helping Appalachian residents escape the bonds of poverty and to reward East Tennesseans for their loyalty to the Union during the Civil War.

The school is now career-oriented, but strayed off-course for a while. "When Lincoln conceived our university," Welch says, "he saw us as being a place where Appalachians could break their poverty cycle by learning a career."

In the late '40s, and in the '50s and '60s, however, the institution changed its scope to being a liberal-arts college.

Nationally, says Welch, interviewed while in New York on a business trip, "career orientation is now becoming the major program thrust."

Welch assumed his $34,000-a-year post five years ago, at a time when the university was almost bankrupt. Under his fiscal management, the institution moved into the black, more than doubled its enrollment from 400 to some 1,000 students, and made $1.25 million-worth of capital improvements on campus buildings.

Welch, who was born in a rural area between Memphis and Nashville, says he learned the work ethic early in his life. He grew up on a farm.

And he has imposed his standards on the faculty, while at the same time abolishing the system of tenure in favor of multi-year contracts.

"When we hire people, we let them know absolutely from the outset they are going to work harder at the university than anywhere else," he says.

"We tell them they're going to be expected to teach at least 15 hours a week, and be on campus another 25 hours a week, with a normal work week of at least 40 hours."

"We tell them they also need to be available to students, to go to basketball games and dances, and to the campus center to get their mail and drink coffee with the students, because these are the places students are going to relate to them as a person — not just as faculty."

Welch, who teaches some classes on his own, says he enjoys the small amount of traveling he must do as head of the Lincoln Memorial, but feels the primary role of a college president is to be the educational leader of the institution he heads.

"He cannot delegate that responsibility. You can hire fund-raisers, but you can't hire somebody to be a leader because if you give up your responsibility for leadership, then you can expect to head for disaster."

Low IQs blamed on test radiation

PERRY, Ohio (AP) — Poor scores on college entrance examinations and low IQs may be partially a result of the atomic testing after World War II and its radioactive fallout, a physicist says.

Dr. Ernest Sternglass, University of Pittsburgh School of Medicine professor of radiation physics, told a nuclear-power conference at Lakeland Community College recently that widespread atomic testing in the 1950s and early 1960s contributed to the fact that Johnny can't read now. "The drop in levels of students' ability to read and write is correlated to the fallout at that time," Sternglass said. Children born in 1965 and later will show higher scores on national tests and IQs, he said.

About 100 persons attended the conference to learn about nuclear power and mobilize against a power plant being built here.

Conceit leads to 'white death'

INNSBRUCK, Austria (AP) — Every winter hundreds of thousands come to ski the Austrian Alps. Every winter dozens of them perish in the "white death" — snow avalanches that often come without warning.

The avalanches, many times unpredictable even for experienced mountaineers and experts, occur mainly on steep slopes when a number of factors combine to send tons upon tons of snow crashing down the mountainside.

Austria, a favorite skiing ground for Europeans, Americans and other foreigners, has a sad record for white deaths for the past two decades or so. Efforts are being made, however, to make conditions safer.

But Hannes Gasser, who runs a school for mountain climbers and alpine rescuers in this Olympic city, claims carelessness and ignorance on the part of the skiers are to blame for most of the avalanche casualties.

Another alpine rescue expert, who asked to remain anonymous, said in a recent interview: "Exaggerated self-conceit and disregard of all warnings by people in the know are the main reason for the annual statistics of avalanche victims."

and blizzards sweep the slopes even inexperienced tourists will not risk anything.

"On the other hand, a snow-scarce winter brings little or no danger for valleys but spells hazards for skiers higher up because the snow is drifts."

Even under normal snow and weather conditions, ski-tour guides call for absolute silence when crossing a snowfield.

They do so for good reason: loud shouts, or other loud noises, are known to set overloaded snow in motion. According to one unconfirmed report the clatter of a rescue helicopter touched off an avalanche as the craft was on its way to a snowslide in another area.

Schimpp called "tragic" the death of three students from Florida's Stetson University this past Jan. 15. It was Austria's most serious avalanche accident so far this winter.

THE SKI SCHOOL SLOPE AT Mt. Seegrube near here had been closed for lack of visibility and unsafe snow conditions early that day.

After several snowslides had come down, the trail was prepared by caterpillar-type gear and a go-ahead for skiing was given in mid-morning by the avalanche commission in charge.

Just about an hour later, however, a huge slide buried a number of skiers. The three U.S. students were dug out dead.

Schimpp said large sums of money have been spent on "avalanche control structures in postwar years, but much remains to be done."

He explained that for a single avalanche-prone slope near the village of Neustift protection fences and other structures cost about 50 million schilling ($3.7 million).

Schimpp also said it was impossible to rule out forever such disasters as occurred in 1954, when three avalanches killed 132 persons between Jan. 11 and Jan. 18, crushing scores of homes and farm buildings in several alpine villages. In one of them, Blons, 41 persons perished in matter of seconds and the village was almost wiped out. "Such disaster winters are indeed rare," Schimpp said, "but if you consider that in Tyrol alone we have 2,300 potential 'avalanche strips' in wooded and populated areas you know what I am talking about."

He added that hundreds of millions have yet to be invested in avalanche protection measures.

There's nothing like a good misfortune cookie to brighten things up, according to Joel Hadary, left, as he tries out a message on Michael Durkin and Mrs. Janice Hadary, right. The three are the founders of Misfortune Cookies, which avoid platitudes and tell it like it is. For example: "If you're looking for prosperity, happiness and romance, you chose the wrong cookie. (Los Angeles Times Photo)

'Misfortune Cookies' is fortunate undertaking

By DAVID LARSEN
The Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — It was a little over a year ago that Janice Hadary was sitting in a Chinese restaurant, going through the ritual of opening a fortune cookie.

"There we were, my husband and I, both out of job and this strip of paper was giving us one of the usual happy predictions," she recalled. "I asked why they didn't tell it like it is once in a while."

Since no truth-in-fortune-cookies-law has yet been enacted, Mrs. Hadary decided then and there to take matters into her own hands. She and her husband conferred with a friend, a scriptwriter named Michael Durkin, and the three of them set out to launch Misfortune Cookies.

"Start tomorrow with a smile," Durkin wrote for one of the samples. "It'll be your first and only chance."

"Nobody in Chinatown thought it was funny."

"We made the rounds of all the big bakeries," Joel Hadary said. "Not only was no one interested — very few of them even spoke English — but some gave the impression that they were a little offended."

One outfit said they would bake a batch of cookies, but only if an order could be placed for 2,000 pounds of them, which the three local entrepreneurs had no money to do.

"But finally we found a little bakery in Chinatown," Mrs. Hadary said. "The owner's son spoke English and they had an ancient machine operated by a woman who would fold each cookie individually around the fortune."

"The son said he thought we had a dumb idea, but that the bakery was willing to enshrine a few of the misfortunes in dough," Hadary, who was getting his MBA at Pepperdine University here, lined up a printer.

And Durkin hit the typewriter. Said one fortune: "Tonight you will meet the love of your life, but only if you tell your wife you're working late."

And: "Your analyst will try and tell you different, but people really are trying to stab you in the back."

And: "If you're looking for prosperity, happiness and romance, you chose the wrong cookie."

The writer came up with 50, friends contributed a few others and the unholy trinity was ready to begin operations. However, it was already September.

"My marketing teacher advised that it was too late in the year," Hadary said. "He suggested that we wait until after the holidays."

But the Hadarys and Durkin managed to place their $8 cans of Misfortune Cookies in a few boutiques and specialty stores.

Not only that, but Hadary was graduated and then reported for a job, his wife has been hired as a script reader and Durkin has some entertainment people interested in a couple of his plots.

To top it off, the cookie venture is running in the black.

As Confucius or somebody once said: "It pays to use your noodle."

HE REFERRED TO THE FACT THAT some skiers leave prepared trails and by doing so often release a snowslide as they cross a slope covered by a layer of compacted snow plus some treacherous shifting snow on top.

Between January 1958 and January 1978, 754 persons were killed by avalanches in Austria. The total killed in all alpine countries — Switzerland, Austria, Germany, Italy and France — was 1,851.

Gasser insists that "95 per cent of deaths could have been avoided. That means that 1,700 people died out of carelessness or sheer ignorance."

In the province of Tyrol alone 12 skiers were killed by avalanches in the 1977-78 season, and six have perished so far this year.

"We are fortunate. The death toll is not above average, although snow and weather conditions are unfavorable this season," Benno Schimpp, the head of the Innsbruck Avalanche Warning Center, told The Associated Press.

SCHIMPP SAID THERE have been a number of minor snowslides.

"This is typical of a winter with little snow in the beginning," he added. "Subsequent heavy snowfalls tend to make for unstable snow conditions and warm spells make things even worse."

"It is not the so-called catastrophe winter that causes us headaches. When weather is rough

Carter made many inside contacts in little-known group

NEW YORK (AP) — Ever wonder how a Georgia peanut farmer and self-professed outsider to Washington's power games got to know the insiders who now run America's foreign affairs?

He dealt with many of them when he was a member of a little-known commission that describes itself a bit too modestly as "a private North American-European-Japanese initiative on matters of common concern."

Founded nearly six years ago by banker David Rockefeller, this body called The Trilateral Commission has issued 17 white papers on subjects like energy, East-West relations, and ways to double rice production in Asia.

But its membership rolls suggest that this isn't just another semi-annual lunch club.

Jimmy Carter, new to Washington two years ago and governor of Georgia at the time he joined the commission, staffed the top reaches of his administration heavily with people he knew as a member of this commission.

Carter, a commission member until shortly before his election in 1976, became acquainted with other members he was to make household names during his presidency: Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal, Defense Secretary Harold Brown, Vice President Walter Mondale and Secretary of State Cyrus Vance, among others. United Nations Ambassador Andrew Young, an old Carter friend, was also on the commission.

Carter's national security adviser, Zbigniew Brzezinski, was the director of the commission from 1973 through 1976.

Other names on the commission may also ring a bell: Henry Kissinger, West Virginia Gov. John D. Rockefeller IV, Illinois Gov. James Thompson, 10 members of Congress — in all, about 250 of the most powerful government, business, labor and intellectual leaders in North America, Western Europe and Japan.

The commission's aims reflect Rockefeller's reasons for founding the group in 1973. At that time, the Nixon administration strained U.S. relations with Japan and Europe with a series of sudden changes: placing quotas on certain imports, devaluing the dollar, and his trip to China in 1972.

Rockefeller's idea, says commission spokesman Francois Sauzey, "was that a group of influential private citizens might improve the climate between Western nations."

In short, Rockefeller convinced some of the world's most powerful individuals that relations within the non-communist world were in bad repair.

East greedily doubled six hearts, and Peter Jay, British ambassador to the United States, sidestepped to six no-trump. Declarer won the diamond, ran the spades, discarding two hearts from dummy and then ran the diamonds, discarding a heart from his hand. East had to throw a club and a heart on the diamonds. Quite sure that East had the ace of clubs and good hearts for his double of six hearts, declarer would make the slam with two club tricks.

PLAYS LOW

When East actually played a low club, South took the queen of clubs, cashed the ace of hearts and led a club to make East win. East had to return a heart, giving dummy the last two tricks.

If East had passed six hearts he would have collected 200 instead of losing 1440 points.

DAILY QUESTION

Partner opens with one heart, and the next player doubles. You hold: S10 9 7 2, H Q 10 8 5, D 7 3, S A 8 5. What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid three hearts with an expert partner. This promises excellent trump support but not much else. If your actual partner is likely to play you for a much better hand, raise to only two hearts. Avoid a partnership misunderstanding.

Elayne Boosler jokes for living

By DAVID N. ROSENTHAL

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — What's a nice girl like Elayne Boosler doing in a place like this, telling jokes like that?

"It is a pretty strange occupation for either a man or a woman," admits one of the few women who tells jokes for a living. "I still can't get used to just standing up there and talking. I do it because I have a knack for it. It feels good to be good at something."

Elayne Boosler, Brooklyn-born college dropout, reformed song-and-dance girl and luscious blonde, is indeed good at making people laugh. In a nightclub, on TV and in an interview.

"Hookers have such low morals," she says. "I mean, how can they sleep with a total stranger without going out for dinner and a movie first? And what do they do on their night off — go somewhere and type?"

"Have you ever read the ingredients on a can of Campbell's Soup for One? One bean, one pea and if you think we're opening up a whole squash just for you, you're crazy."

"I love the philosophy of est — what is it and what ain't ain't. Doesn't that sound like it needs an E-I-E-I-O after it? I'm skeptical of fast food religion, though. A lot of things look different when you don't go to the bathroom for two days."

You get the idea — one liners, fired off at the speed of sound, on any subject. "Some people tell stories slowly," the 26-year-old Miss Boosler explained after a rare headline appearance here. "I have a punch line every three seconds. With that many jokes, it took me years to write 30 minutes of material. I could have cured cancer in the time it took to develop this routine."

But this is no female Henny Youngman. Boosler is a lively woman whose humor springs from growing up Jewish in New York and whose target is the human condition, instead of just her own.

"Only in California do they sell shirts at Just Pants," she says. "And in Los Angeles, they are all afraid of getting old. In New York, they are afraid they won't."

Her career began in the mid-'70s at the Improvisation in New York, after a stint as a singer and dancer in the Bahamas, where she had gone after dropping out of Tampa University.

First she was a waitress at the Improv. Then she was the comedy club's MC, the first step on the road toward polished performing.

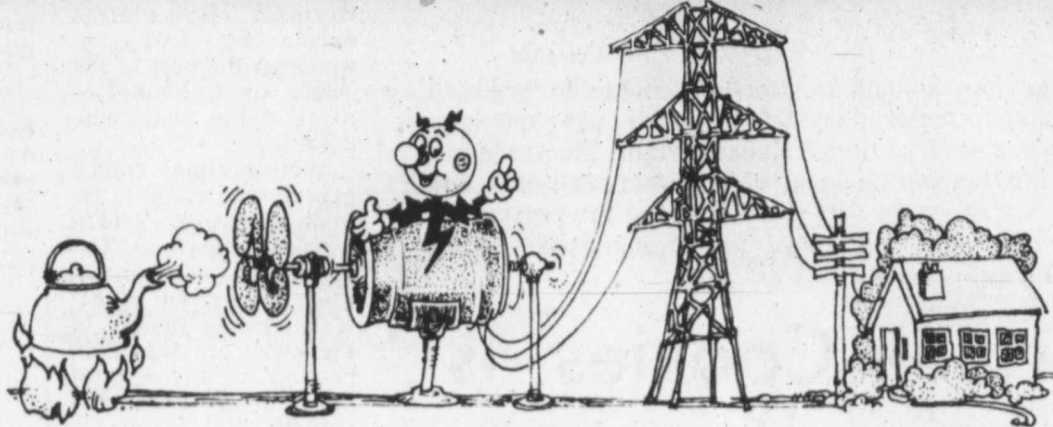

"It was easier doing it that way — if something wasn't working, you just introduced the next act and got off," she says. "There are few overnight successes. I think it takes at least five years to develop an act and being an MC was great experience."

Eventually, she left New York and took up professional residence at the Comedy Store in Los Angeles, a breeding ground for young comedians, but at that time, few comedienne.

"I don't know if it is tougher being a woman," she says, "but I think that audiences are relieved when I am good. It's more embarrassing to see a woman flounder."

Here's why it takes fuel to make electricity.

It takes fuel to make electricity.

A lot of people don't understand that, but it's true.

Most of the power plants in this country require steam to generate electricity. To make steam you must boil water, and that requires a lot of heat.

That's why we have to buy and burn large amounts of fuel, such as lignite coal and natural gas, every month. The steam we make with it turns the generators that make your electricity, which we distribute to you right when you need it.

The fuel we use costs money, more all the time, which is why we show it separately on your bill. At Texas Electric, we want you to know what you're paying for. And to remember: it takes fuel to make electricity.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Over-exertion may be harmful

Dear Dr. Solomon: My husband is 50 years old and has never been very athletic. But when it comes to shoveling snow in the winter, he insists on doing it himself — says he enjoys it. We've had some heavy snows these past few winters, and I'm getting more and more worried. Shouldn't he leave this chore to the youngsters? — Mrs. G.R.

Dear Mrs. R.: You have reason to be concerned. Strenuous physical exertion, such as snow shoveling, can be a cause of heart attacks and sudden death. As might be expected, the risk is increased for individuals whose physical activity far exceeds that to which they are accustomed. Extreme cold may also be a contributing factor.

Fortunately, this is one risk that can be avoided. First, a thorough physical examination can identify conditions that pose a threat, such as cardiac disease.

Secondly, for those whose activity need not be restricted, a training program gradually leading to strenuous physical activity should be the rule. Next year, your husband would do well to check in with his physician before the snows come, and to prepare himself gradually before undertaking any unusual physical activity.

Dear Dr. Solomon: We are a group of 10 couples in our 30s who are close friends. Three of the men have had vasectomies and three women have undergone a surgical sterilization procedure. This seems like an awful lot of people in a single group, and I'm wondering if surgical sterilization is becoming more widely used. — Andy

Dear Andy: The figures you cite may be somewhat above the average. However, the use of surgical sterilization has increased significantly during the past few years. According to the National Center for Health Statistics, in 28 percent of couples in which the wife was 15 to 44 years of age, at least one spouse had undergone surgical sterilization by 1978. In 1973, the rate was 22.9 percent. The indications are that surgical sterilization is gaining in popularity.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have been smoking for 27 years and would love to quit. Do you have any suggestions? — Mr. T.G.

Dear Mr. T.G.: The cigarette companies have spent billions of dollars and half a century trying to link smoking to the beautiful things in life. Their ads have been banned from radio and television, but they are trying hard everywhere else to keep up the brainwash. Seeing through this barrage is a major requirement for quitting.

What smoking is really linked to is disability and death. Quitting is deprivation, but an advantage. You can quit "cold turkey" or set a date two weeks ahead. You can record how many cigarettes you smoke and when; then try to smoke half as many. You can make a pact to quit with a friend. You can go to a withdrawal clinic. You have to find the way that works for you.

But first, you have to want to quit. Once you really want to, you'll find your way to do it. The minute you stop smoking, your body will go to work to repair some of the damage cigarettes have inflicted. More than 30 million Americans have quit smoking. Join the group.

Small-town doctor carries big load

By GEORGE W. HACKETT

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Paul Maddox doesn't have time to get sick; he's too busy keeping other folks alive.

Last year he saw an average of 130 patients a day. The figure would have been higher but the 53-year-old general practitioner took a 15-day vacation.

His clinic at Campton, operating seven days a week, opens at 8 a.m. and, despite the hour, the lines are long.

"We make no appointments," Dr. Maddox explained. "Appointments slow you down. When people feel bad, they want treatment today, not three days or a week from now."

Maddox runs his clinic like an assembly line. He has three examining rooms and 12 employees to get things set up for him and handle the paperwork.

"Our program's similar to General Motors, which puts out a car every minute and a half. We're so well organized I get to spend enough time with each patient."

He also has "one of those computers that you dial into Chicago. It gives you a diagnosis in 30 seconds, except on Mondays when you may wait 30 minutes for an answer."

The people of Appalachia don't know what they'd do without him.

"I'm a hillbilly and they're hillbillies. That's why we understand each other," said Maddox, a native of Elliott County.

He came to Campton, population 500, because the community lacked a physician. "I've always believed a young doctor should go where needed."

Maddox's wife "is the best bargain man could get." She helped him through the University of Louisville Medical School, gave him four sons and now serves as an unpaid assistant.

MHS, Lee girls in showdown tonight

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Sports Writer

Life among the District 5-4A girls' basketball teams has never been easy, and today's 8 p.m. 5-4A cage finale in the Midland High gym is no exception.

Midland Lee's surging Rebels meet the hopeful Midland High Bulldogs tonight with everything at stake. The outcome could decide the girls' championship, or it could throw the loop in a wild playoff scheme that would rival a James Bond movie.

The Bulldogs could make things easy for the arm chair follower with a victory. Midland High tied for the first half 5-4A championship with Abilene High, both posting a 6-1 mark, but Lee and Midland High share the second half lead with perfect 6-0 readings heading into tonight's final game. In simple terms, the Bulldogs win the district championship and a state AAAA playoff berth with a victory tonight. That's simple enough, but it doesn't end there.

THE REBELS can throw a big monkey wrench into the Bulldogs' plans with a win of their own, and things just aren't simple after that.

If Lee wins tonight, the Rebels will be the outright second half champion. In 5-4A play, the winner of the first half must meet the winner of the second half in a district playoff. That would mean that the Pack would have to have a playoff with Abilene High to determine the first half champion. Then that winner would have to meet Lee for the state playoff berth in another district playoff contest.

As it stands now, Midland High has a foot in the door. The Bulldogs can earn that state playoff bi-district playoff berth against the District 6-AAAA winner with a win tonight over Lee. If the Bulldogs lose tonight, their hopes are still alive since they own a share of the first half lead.

Lee, however, would be in a good position with a win tonight since the Rebels would have to play in only one district playoff game while Midland High and Abilene High would have to win two straight district playoff battles.

THE EAGLES of Abilene High, completely out of the second half chase, are waiting in the wings for the results of the Midland High-Lee meeting. The Eagles would probably send the Rebels a couple of extra players to insure a Lee victory. Lee must win tonight for the Eagles to have any playoff hopes.

This is only the second year of UIL competition for girls basketball in District 5-4A. Lee won the last year's first championship, and they don't want to give up that crown.

Green wins Hawaiian Open

HONOLULU — Hubert Green squirted a 3-under-par 69 through rain squalls to successfully defend his Hawaiian Open golf tournament title by 3 strokes with a 267 total, 21 shots under par.

Fuzzy Zoeller finished second with a 7-under-par 65 on the final round for a 270 total, 18 under par. Larry Nelson was next at 67-272.

Charles Coody, Miller Barber and Lindy Miller were at 273. Coody shot a 66, Barber had a 69 and Miller 70.

MANILA, Philippines — Mya Aye of Burma won the $55,000 Philippine Masters Invitational Golf Championship by 1 stroke.

The 38-year-old Burmese pro shot a final-round 74, 2 over par, for a 72-hole total of 280 and took the top prize of $12,000.

Taiwan's Ho Ming-chung finished with 281 and won the $7,000 second prize.

Heiden wins again

OSLO, Norway — American Eric Heiden captured his seventh world championship in speed skating in three years by winning all four races at Oslo's Olympic Bisset Stadium and setting records in each.

With times of 38.22 seconds for the 500 meters and 6:59.15 for the 5,000 meters Saturday and 1:56.05 and 14:43.11 for the 1,500 and 10,000 meters races Sunday, the Madison, Wis., star set a new world record for a single meet and new championship record of 162,973 points.

Women's mark set

BUDAPEST, Hungary — Romanian Natalia Marasescu established a world indoor record, running the women's 1,500 meters in 4 minutes, 3 seconds, the news agency MTI reported.

Marasescu bettered her own record of 4:05, set in the same Budapest Sports Hall on Feb. 21, 1978.

SAN SEBASTIAN, Spain — Italy's Alberto Mattioli set a world indoor best of 11 minutes, 32.07 seconds for the 3,000-meter walk during a triangular meeting among Britain, Italy and Spain.

The old mark of 11:43.02 was established last year by Mattioli's countryman, Vittorio Visini.

LA clears hurdle

NEW YORK — The U.S. Olympic Committee and a private organizing group signed a contract, effectively clearing the last hurdle to bring the 1984 Summer Olympics to Los Angeles.

The private group, the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee, extracted agreement from the national committee on eight points involving financial liability, budget authority, the makeup of the organizing group and the plan for dispersal of assets after the Games.

Umpires warned

CHICAGO — A published report says major league umpires have been told by top baseball officials that unless they have signed their 1979 contracts, they will be barred from spring training and may be replaced.

Chicago Sun-Times baseball writer Jerome Holtzman reported in Sunday's editions that all 52 major league umpires received identical letters from American League President Lee MacPhail and National League President Charles Feeney.

Cuba whips U.S.

HAVANA, Cuba — President Fidel Castro and about 20,000 other Cubans watched their national boxing team, led by heavyweight Teofilo Stevenson, score a 9-3 victory over the United States after trailing 3-2.

Chaps to face Hawks' slowdown

BIG SPRING—Last time the Midland College Chaparrals played here, Howard College took the air out of the ball and pulled a 59-56 upset. Fortunately, the game was in the ABC Classic right after the holiday break and didn't count in Western Junior College Conference standings.

"We didn't expect it and weren't ready for it," Coach Jerry Stone reviewed, but you can be sure his Chaps will be expecting anything at 8 p.m. tonight when the Chaps square off against the Howard College Hawks.

Coach Harold Wilder, who has been pushing all of the buttons in attempt to salvage something from his most unrewarding season as Hawks' coach, has been using his slow down offense any time HC has gotten in front.

ONLY THURSDAY he almost pulled one of the major upsets of the season against red hot New Mexico Military Institute. In fact, a couple of free throws with one second to play gave the Hawks a two-point lead and the game looked like it was in the bag. The Bronchos uncorked a long bomb to Lewis Lloyd and he sank the game-tying bucket at the other end of the court.

Three overtimes later, Howard wound up a 45-42 loser.

The way the Chaps have been playing, they can't afford to take anyone lightly, not if they are to keep alive their hopes for a Region V playoff berth, which will be played in this same Dorothy Garrett Coliseum, the handsome new pride and joy of the HC campus.

The Chaps have lost three straight, all to contending opponents, and need something to pull them out of the tailspin. MC is in fifth place at 7-5, a half game behind Odessa College, in the WJCC race and breathing hot and heavy on their neck is Amarillo College, South Plains College and Frank Phillips College.

THE CHAPS return home Thursday to play Frank Phillips, a team they barely lost to 80-79 in Borgier a few weeks back. In the previous WJCC game with Howard, back in December, MC posted a 102-77 victory and that's the form to which Stone hopes his team returns tonight.

At that time, MC was 4-0 in conference and 11-3 overall. Now they are 15-10 for the season.

One encouraging sign for Stone was the return to action Thursday of soph-

Midland High Booster club meets at 7 p.m.

The Midland High Booster Club will meet today at 7 p.m. in the Midland High Youth Center, and all MHS fans are invited to attend.

Don Humphrey, Midland High basketball coach, will be the guest speaker, and he will give a report on his District 5-4A championship team. Humphrey will also give a scouting report on Wichita Falls High, Midland's first opponent in the state playoffs.

Coaches in all spring sports will also be on hand to give brief talks on their teams.

The meeting should be over in time for fans to move over the Midland High gym for the contest between Midland High and Midland Lee, which may decide the District 5-4A girls basketball championship.

omore Henry White, who missed five games with a knee injury. The Chicago isn't full speed yet, but his return to form could supply a little more balance to the MC scoring. Freshman Robert Tate has been a refreshing relief for the Chaps and it was his seven-for-eight shooting against Amarillo College Thursday that gave Midland hope right up until the end.

Some 500 youngsters showed up for the basketball clinic at Chaparral Center Thursday before the AC-MC game. The fourth, fifth and sixth graders received tips from six coaches and many stayed on to see the game.

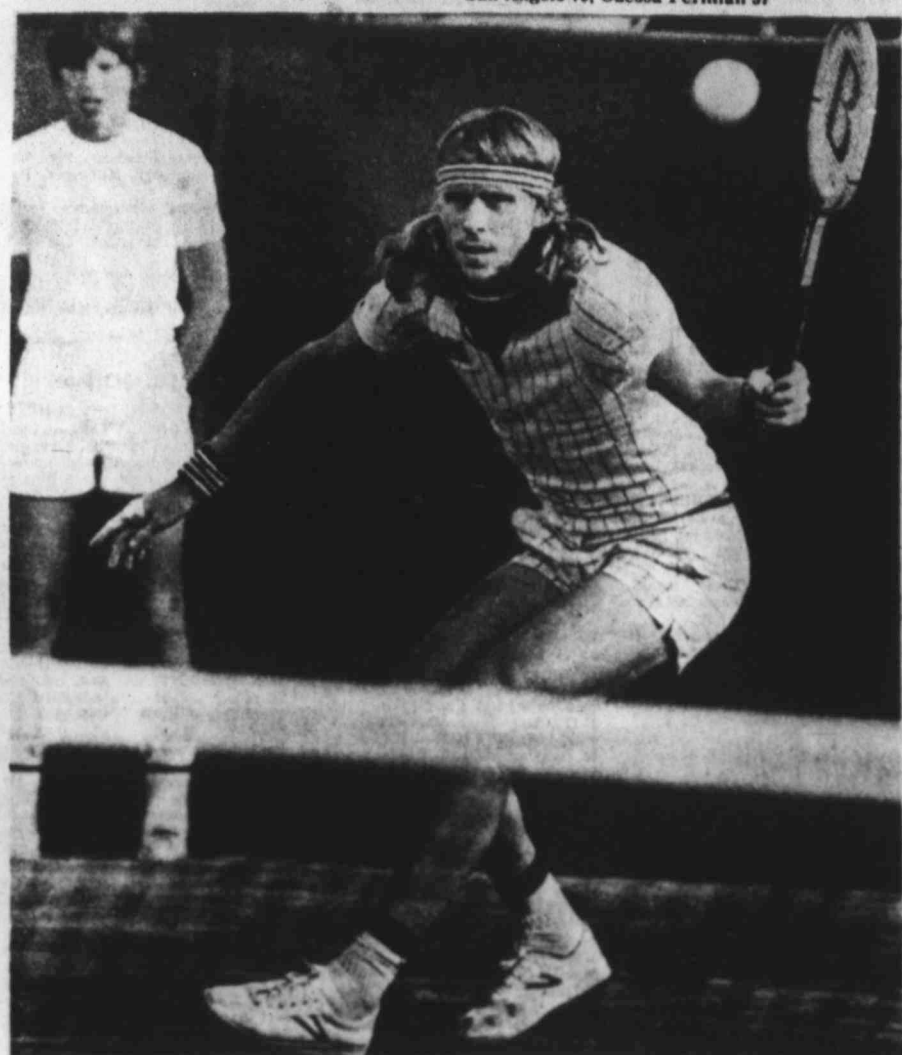

Howard College, 1-11 for WJCC play, and with 0-12 Clarendon are the only teams in the nine-team conference without a chance at a playoff berth.

Russians wipe out NHL stars

NEW YORK (AP) — When it was over, after the Soviet National team had dismantled the National Hockey League's attack piece by piece and won the Challenge Cup, the Madison Square Garden work crew took down the boards that border the playing surface ... piece by piece.

At one end of the abandoned arena, the cover was taken off a rectangular pit which would swallow up the melted ice the way the Soviet defense had swallowed up the NHL attack — and the hopes the North American players would back up their claim on hockey supremacy.

The sullen fans had long since filed out, leaving sullen NHL players to explain the 6-0 Soviet triumph that gave the visitors a 2-1 victory in the three-game series.

"I was terrible," said Boston goalie Gerry Cheevers. "They aren't better than us; they just got better goaltending."

"I'm shocked and I will be shocked for a long time," added Philadelphia center Bobby Clarke, captain of the team which surrendered the last nine goals of the series.

"We gave it all we had," said Islanders defenseman Denis Potvin. "We played pretty well. We worked our butts off and played hard, but they had a system, and any team with a system is going to beat the team that doesn't have one."

THE SOVIET system was executed by workmen in different clothes; veteran Boris Mikhailov was their foreman. The Nationals cut off the NHL passing lanes the way a boxer cuts off the ring on his opponent. They negated Guy Lafleur, despite the exhortations of 17,545 voices crying "Guy, Guy, Guy" every time he handled the puck.

"I didn't hear them," said Lafleur, who started Thursday night's 4-2 NHL triumph with a goal at the 16-second mark.

He was powerless to please them, even if he had heard. The Soviets controlled his magic, withstood the bruising NHL body attack — not all of it legal — and got 24 saves from goalie Vladimir Myskhin to win the prize they came 4,665 air miles to claim.

"Before this series, we had said these games were important to us for two reasons," said Viacheslav Koloskov, chief hockey official of the USSR Sports Committee. "First, they are an important stage in our preparation for the championship of the world tournament (in April). This was our opinion before the victory and we hold to our view after it."

"Secondly, we have a very clear idea of the prestige of these games. The two best teams in the world have confronted each other, and the confrontation has indicated that we are the best team."

"This, however, does not indicate in any way that hockey in Canada is poorer than the hockey in our country," said Koloskov.

IT WAS for most of the three games, however. The NHL survived a late letdown in its opening-game triumph, blew a 4-2 lead in Saturday's 5-4 loss, and virtually never was in the decisive third match.

Mikhailov, at 34 the graybeard of the Soviet squad, scored his third goal of the series at 5:47 of the second period. Alexander Golikov intercepted a Bob Gainey pass at the NHL blue line and fed Mikhailov — playing in his 233rd international contest — who sped up right wing and used Colara-

Borg's waiting game pays off in Slam

BOCA RATON, Fla. (AP) — Bjorn Borg didn't buy all that chauvinistic U.S. talk about the battle for tennis domination between Jimmy Connors and John McEnroe.

Borg gave a convincing demonstration of his skepticism Sunday with a surprisingly easy 6-2, 6-3 victory over Connors in the championship of the $300,000 Grand Slam of Tennis tournament, his third straight victory over Connors in the finals of the special event here.

The 22-year-old Swede established control by staying back at the baseline and waiting for Connors, who totalled 34 unforced errors, to make a mistake. He broke Connors' serve five times, and scored with his passing shots when Connors rushed the net in the second set.

CONNORS HAD won their last two meetings, including the finals of the U.S. Open, and while Borg took a six-week layoff, the resurgent Connors and the fast-rising 19-year-old McEnroe sparked discussions about a new rivalry for No. 1.

"That always happens in the U.S. I think it's all different opinions, especially in the states. People in the rest of the world might have different opinions," said Borg, who last week ended his layoff with a tournament victory in Richmond, Va., that included a semifinal triumph over McEnroe.

"I had off six weeks, and I was ready to play again. I came back to win last week and I won this week," Borg said.

Borg's thorough victory over Conners was overshadowed Sunday by announcement of a compromise agreement between tennis' top five male players and the governing Men's International Professional Tennis Council.

The five — Borg, Connors, McEnroe, Guillermo Vilas and Vitas Gerulaitis — were angered when new rules were introduced that limited for the first time the number of exhibitions and required their participation in six designated tournaments.

When the rules were announced, the five threatened to boycott the Grand Prix circuit.

WHILE ADVOCATES said the new rules would give tennis the same order and continuity of other sports and also protect tournament sponsors, the players said they wanted the freedom to choose their own events and maximize their income.

In return, the five faced being barred from Wimbledon and the U.S. Open, among other tournaments. John McEnroe Sr., father of the player and a Wall Street lawyer, forced the two sides to the bargaining table.

With all the players except Gerulaitis participating in the tournament here over the weekend, the two sides were able to hold lengthy sessions that resulted in a compromise that will allow them to veto one of the six designated tournaments and raised from three to six the number of exhibitions they could play in.

"There was plenty of give and take on both sides," said council representative Bob Briner. "There's also plenty of room for discussion on some special event that may come up."

"I'm happy about it for this year. Maybe in another couple of months we can sit down and work it out for next year. It was a compromise down the middle," said Connors.

CONNORS DIDN'T have much else to be happy about Sunday. Borg broke his serve in the third game of the match as Connors hit a backhand long after coming to the net. The next game went to deuce four times before Connors ended a long baseline rally with a backhand return that was long and gave Borg a 3-1 lead.

Heavier foes no chore for Sugar Ray Leonard

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Sugar Ray Leonard, marching at his own measured pace toward what he hopes will be a million-dollar payday, says he's not bothered by the thought of taking on heavier opponents.

"Oh yes — for sure" the former Olympic gold medal winner said when asked if he'd continue to reach beyond his weight class as he did in demoting Canadian middleweight champ Fernand Marcotte Sunday.

At 155 1/2, Marcotte had a six-pound advantage over the 22-year-old Leonard, who said he thought Marcotte may have been counting on the weight differential at first.

"But he didn't underestimate me too much in the later rounds," Leonard said in quiet understatement.

TRIGGERING sizzling combinations, Leonard controlled every round. Then in the eighth he ripped a right hook that hit the Canadian flush, decking Marcotte. He lurched to his feet at the count of eight, but referee Jay Edson stopped it at 2:33.

It was Leonard's 19th straight victory since he turned pro two years ago after a dazzling gold-medal performance in the 1976 Olympic Games at Montreal. Marcotte is 36-9-2.

By the third round Leonard was stalking and measuring his stocky opponent, staying clear and waiting.

"I picked my shots and waited for the right opportunity. I hit him when he brought his chin close to me," Leonard explained.

A head-rattling combination left Marcotte wobbling in the third and he bled from the nose and right eye.

Action had to be stopped briefly in the sixth for an examination of the gashed eye, then the fight went on.

Marcotte was an open target but was cleared and still punching until Leonard dropped him. "It was a perfect shot," said Marcotte's trainer-father, Fernand Sr. who often speaks for his French-Canadian speaking son.

He chuckled last week at speculation of being offered $800,000 to meet Wilfredo Benitez, the World Boxing Council's welterweight champion. The WBC ranks Leonard No. 10.

Russians triumph

do's Barry Beck to screen his 25-foot shot.

Victor Zhukov took it 2-0 on a power play just 1:57 later, converting a pass from Helmut Balderis, and that was more than enough to seal the NHL's fate. Later, when the NHL forsook defense in attempting to catch up, the Soviets got third-period goals in a 6:02 span from Balderis, Vladimir Kovin, Sergei Makarov and Golikov.

And they got excellent goaltending from Myshkin, representing his team for the first time in international competition.

The blond netminder wore a blushing smile on his face and a medal over his chest. He agreed a celebration was in order.

"I'm going to have a good supper," said Myshkin, openly pleased at his success and mindful of the fact it was well past 6 a.m. in his native Kirov.

THE WINNERS nearly walked out on the contest. NHL referee Andy Van Hellemond handed Myshkin a ruling penalty for a shoving exchange with the Islanders' Bryan Trotter at 12:27 of the middle period — drawing howls of protest from Valentine Sytch, deputy chairman of the Soviets Sports Committee.

Enraged, he rushed to the Soviet bench, with NHL President John Ziegler close behind and Alan Eaglson, executive director of the NHL Players Association, following suit. In a heated exchange through interpreters, Sytch said Myshkin was in his crease when attacked and acted illegally — adding he'd yank his players off the ice if another such penalty were called.

Van Hellemond called only one other penalty, to Mikhailov, but Golikov added insult to the injured NHL pride by scoring with his team captain in the box.

"It's a disappointment, because we know how involved the people were in Canada," said Gainey. "But we were playing against an excellent team, and in my own opinion, these were good games to watch and enjoy."

Baker already has good week

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Even if he doesn't accomplish his primary goal of winning the prestigious Daytona 500 next Sunday, Buddy Baker already considers Speed Weeks '79 a deeply enriching experience — at least $70,000 worth.

The 38-year-old Baker, off to the greatest start in his 21-year career in stock car racing, figures that's about what about 20 minutes of work Sunday at Daytona International Speedway was worth to him.

For pulling off a dramatic half-car victory in the 50-mile Clash of '79 over "co-conspirator" Darrell Waltrip, Baker collected $50,000 — the richest payout per mile in stock car racing history.

His searing average speed of 194.384 mph also made it the fastest race in history. It took less than 16 minutes to run the entire event.

Earlier, in the first round of qualifying for next Sunday's $600,000 Daytona 500 classic, Baker displayed awesome power with a lap at 196.049 mph that smashed by nearly a half-second a 10-year-old track record set back in the days of unrestricted power.

THAT WAS worth $6,000 plus merchandise, and it qualified him for next year's 50-mile Clash, a unique event open only to pole position winners on the Grand National stock car tour. That should be worth at least $10,000 and possibly as much as $50,000 if he wins again.

Baker said the day's activities went exactly according to his script — a script he and Waltrip helped work out together several days in advance. Baker said he and Waltrip discussed ways to limit the competition in the 50-mile race.

"Waltrip and me talked about it for two or three days before the race, and decided to break away from the others if we could by staying together and drafting," Baker explained. Two cars running nose to tail in this business run faster than one car alone or two or more cars running side-by-side.

CALE YARBOROUGH won a four-way fight for third place with Benny Parsons, Bobby Allison and David Pearson. Lennie Pond, Neil Bonnett and J.D. McDuffie were next.

Waltrip qualified fourth fastest for the Daytona 500. Only the top two positions, nailed down by Baker and Donnie Allison, who ran 194.889 mph, were locked in by the day's qualifying. Yarborough was third fastest at 194.321 mph.

The rest of the 40-car lineup will be determined by a combination of qualifying speed and finishing positions in two 125-mile qualifying races Thursday.

Mahre gains new downhill confidence

ARE, Sweden (AP) — Billy Kidd, who used to battle against the great Jean Claude Killy in another era of Alpine skiing, watched Phil Mahre flash down the World Cup slalom course and said:

"Phil is really hot now. He is loaded with confidence after those early-season failures. He knows he can make it. And I think he can too."

With a new scoring system that could cause headaches even for a mathematician, a Swiss-American duel has been set up for skiing's top prize.

The battle between Mahre, 21, and current leader Peter Luescher, 22, of Switzerland, resumes at Lake Placid, N.Y., March 2.

Sweden's Ingemar Stenmark, with two world titles in slalom and giant slalom and three World Cup overall crowns, swept all four runs here in another amazing performance.

But it won't do him any good in the overall points race. This year, each skier can only count his three best finishes in the three World Cup events, and since Stenmark refuses to race the downhill, he can't win the combined title.

Naulls' clutch free throws upset No. 1 Notre Dame

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Tyren Naulls is a fiery freshman with a senior's icy instincts. He was definitely the wrong man for the Notre Dame basketball team to foul in a crucial situation Sunday. "He's a confident individual," confirms UCLA Coach Gary Cunningham.

Only a 64 percent foul shooter, Naulls was just perfect when he had to be — converting four free shots in the final 13 seconds as the fourth-ranked Bruins defeated the top-ranked Irish 56-52.

"In many ways, he reminds me of myself when I was a freshman," noted UCLA's cool senior guard Brad Holland after watching Naulls' pressure-proof performance in the face of passionate Notre Dame fans at the Irish's Athletic Convocation Center in South Bend, Ind.

Naulls appeared not to be bothered by the legion of Notre Dame fans waving wildly behind the basket in an attempt to distract him at the foul line. During his preshot meditations, he looked only at the floor before shooting.

"We fouled him because we thought he wasn't in his rhythm," said Notre Dame Coach Digger Phelps. "Our other choice was (James) Wilkes. But he had hit two-of-two earlier."

NAULLS WASN'T the only reason the Irish lost, of course. Their inconsistent offense was another.

"We missed too many easy shots when we had the lead at the start of the second half," said Phelps. "They took advantage of our mistakes. Defensively we played well, but not offensively."

Notre Dame's loss came one day after some upsets shook the Top Twenty. Third-ranked Duke lost a 71-69 shocker at home to Pittsburgh; No. 11 Texas A&M was beaten on the road by Texas Tech 67-63 and No. 16 Alabama dropped an 80-71 decision to Kentucky.

Elsewhere, No. 2 Indiana State beat

Bradley 91-72; No. 9 Marquette trimmed No. 5 Louisville 71-55; No. 6 North Carolina whipped Providence 89-55; No. 7 Syracuse defeated St. Bonaventure 74-69; No. 8 Louisiana State beat Florida 88-82 in overtime and No. 10 Michigan State routed No. 13 Ohio State 73-55.

Also, No. 14 Arkansas routed TCU 108-65; No. 15 Iowa beat Wisconsin 79-65; No. 17 Vanderbilt turned back Mississippi State 70-68 in overtime; No. 18 Georgetown whipped Seton Hall 87-62; No. 19 Temple crushed La Salle 97-81 and No. 20 Illinois edged Minnesota 59-57.

UCLA had trailed Notre Dame in the nationally televised game by 28-25 at halftime, but went in front in the second half by as many as six points before the Irish closed within two on a tip-in by Bruce Flowers with 21 seconds to go.

The Irish then fouled Naulls, who sank the first pair of free throws. A basket by Tracy Jackson with seven seconds left pulled Notre Dame back within 54-52 before Naulls hit the final two free throws with six seconds left.

Roy Hamilton led UCLA with 12 points. Jackson and Kelly Tripucka paced the Irish with 11 points apiece.

SAM CLANCY'S slam-dunk shot with two seconds remaining lifted Pitt over Duke. Clancy, who scored 23 points and grabbed 11 rebounds, made the winning basket after stealing a Duke pass.

"They deserved to win this game," said Duke Coach Bill Foster after the Blue Devils lost for the first time at Cameron Indoor Stadium in 21 games. "Quickness was the deciding factor. I don't have any excuses."

Noted Pitt Coach Tim Grgurich: "We thought our big advantage coming into the game was quickness. We used our fastbreak and transition game well. We did not want to get into a power game inside, because we have only one power player (Clancy)."

Kent Williams sank four big free throws in the final 22 seconds, leading

Texas Tech over Texas A&M. Tech led throughout the game, but had to fight off two furious rallies by A&M.

Kyle Macy and Dwight Anderson combined for 42 points in Kentucky's victory over Alabama. The Wildcat victory overshadowed a splendid performance by Alabama's Reggie King, who scored 36 points.

Carl Nicks scored 31 points and Steve Reed added 19 to lead Indiana State over Bradley. The victory — the 22nd straight for the undefeated Sycamores — was conspicuous by the superb performance of Indiana State's Larry Bird, who scored only four points and had no assists in the face of a double-teaming defense.

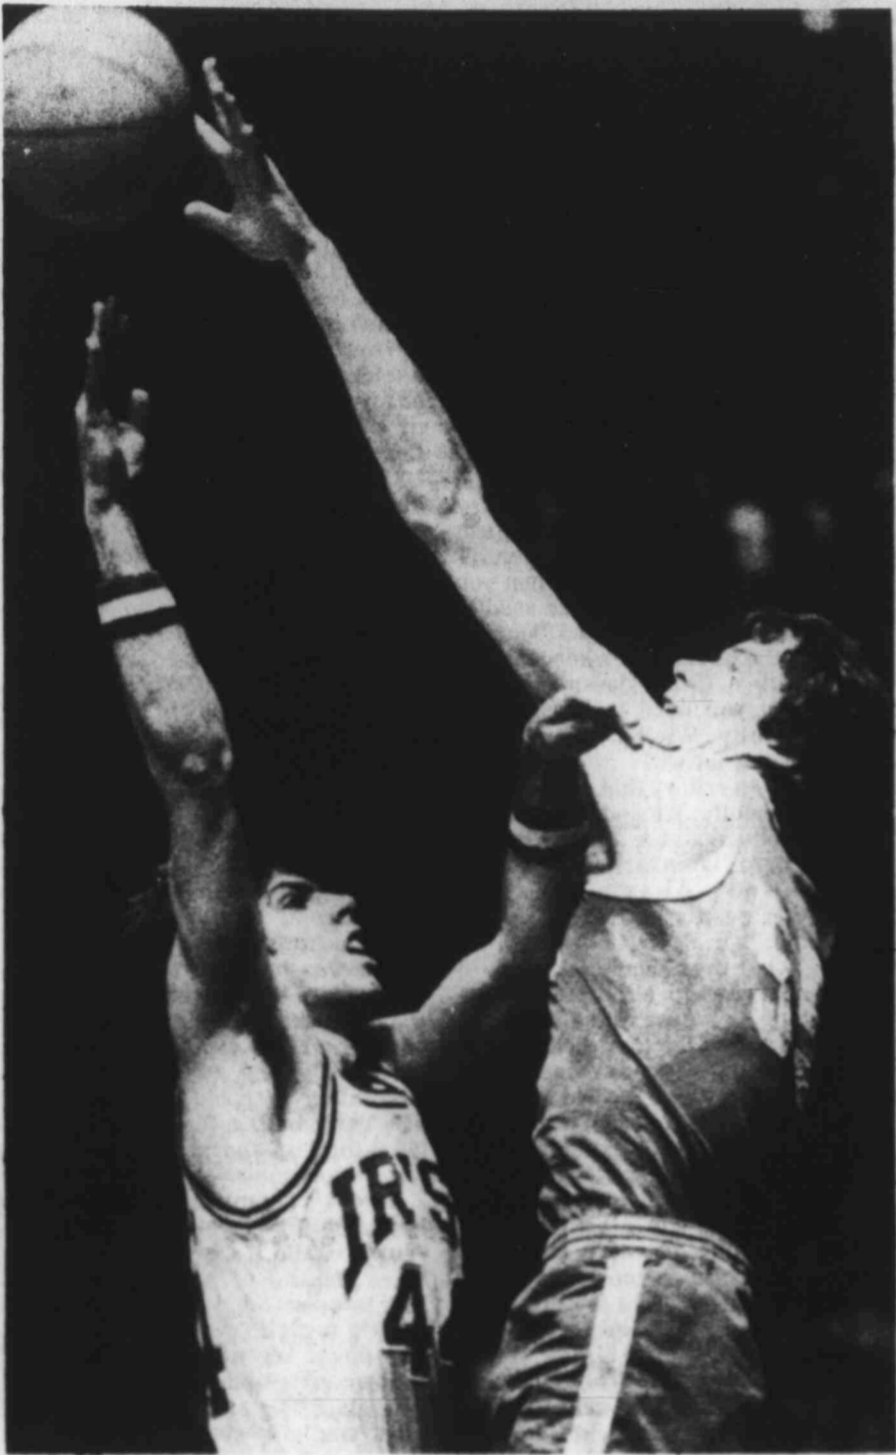

Afterwards, Sycamore Coach Bill Hodges was incensed about the tough time given his star forward.

"I was not happy at all with the situation," said Hodges. "The rule book makes it clear that a man must have room to maneuver. But when he is hemmed in with his back to the belly of one player and his chest to the chest of another, he doesn't have any room and that's a foul. He's supposed to be the greatest player in the country, so you can get away with anything to stop him."

ODELL BALL scored 21 points and Robert Byrd and Michael Wilson provided brilliant defense as Marquette beat Louisville. Mike O'Koren scored 15 points and helped North Carolina pile up a mountainous 40-point lead at one point as the Tar Heels routed Providence.

Dale Shackelford scored 18 points and Marty Headd added 16 to lead Syracuse over St. Bonaventure. Ethan Martin's four straight free throws in the final two minutes of overtime helped LSU beat Florida. Earvin Johnson's 26 points and deft passing triggered Michigan State past Ohio State. Arkansas used a man-to-man defense to take a 31-4 lead and then coasted past TCU behind Sidney Moncreif's 28 points and 15 rebounds.

WEST TEXAS HUNTING AND FISHING

Harsher laws needed to control slaughter

By JON CHASE

I was visiting with a fellow at a coffee shop the other day, and we got on the subject of duck hunting.

I told him about several hunts during the last season where I had to quit shooting early because I had killed my limit. I went on about how frustrating it was to unload the old shotgun while the ducks were pouring into the decoys.

His reply was, "Why did you quit shooting?" This All-American sportsman was really amazed that anyone would quit when they had killed a measly four ducks, and on one occasion, two ducks (a canvasback and a teal). He then proceeded to tell me about a recent hunt on a West Texas ranch where he and two companions managed to slaughter 108 ducks, including a mixed bag of over 20 canvasbacks, redheads and mallard hens. The amazing thing about his tale was that his two "hunting" buddies were a sheriff's deputy and an attorney.

I THINK the most disgusting thing about this story is that the perpetrator of the crime was bragging about it, and at the same time, considered himself to be a "respected" member of the community.

The point of all of this is to state something that I have said over and over again—we must have harsher penalties for game law violations.

Had the fellow telling me his story of greedy slaughter been guilty of shooting some rancher's cattle or of car theft, he wouldn't be bragging about it. Nor would he have had the companionship of a sheriff's deputy and an attorney during his caper.

If this fellow had been caught by a game warden and convicted of exceeding the limit, he probably would have been fined and prohibited from hunting for a certain length of time. The trouble is that he would not have gone to prison, so, he was willing to take the risk of a fine and suspension of hunting rights.

"WITH THE kind of sentences being meted out by judges today, it is no wonder that the affluent with no sense of fair play are often guilty of game law violations.

If it costs upwards of $150 per day on some guided duck hunts to kill four ducks, why wouldn't the killing of 50 ducks over the limit be a major felony? Exceeding the limit is darn sure stealing, and no amount of rationalization could make it less than such.

Unfortunately, the story I have passed on to you is not an unusual one, and I know all of you have probably heard as bad or worse before. Exceeding the limit and poaching, whether it be fishing or hunting, is becoming more and more prevalent, and has even become an organized crime in the big deer country of South Texas. The only way to slow down this type of criminal activity is to hand down stiff prison sentences to the most flagrant violators.

THE FELLOW who told me about killing the 108 ducks said that after the ducks had been counted and a few pictures taken, he and his two buddies left all 108 of them on the ground to rot. He explained that cleaning the ducks is a lot of work.

The weather has kept most anglers in the area around the fire, but a few good fishing reports have come in. Bill Crane and Doc Johnson of Odessa limited on bass last Thursday and Friday at Lake Amistad.

The fish were in the 1½-pound to two-pound range, and fell to charr-trout worms in 10-foot of water. A few strippers were caught last week on Lake Spence with an 11½ pounder going to Jay Corona of San Angelo on a Silver Hellbender in 40-foot of water.

The fishing should start picking up in the next week or two if we can get an extended period of warm weather.

So, when they found a quantity of cocaine strapped to the guy's rented car mudguard, you had to figure the guy was going to spend more time on Shark Island than Dr. Mudd.

THIS GUY wasn't really a cocaine smuggler. He was something worse. He was a guy who had written something bad about Ken (Snake) Stabler, the idol of Foley, Ala., pop. 2,889, the cultural center of this section of Alabama.

Now, nobody needs to go from Sacramento, Calif., to Foley, Ala., for a cocaine score. Nobody needs to go there to hear the opera, either, or listen to Beethoven.

Can't you hear that poor guy? "But, honey, we just stopped in to check the church services when the shower leaked. I was reading the Gideon in the living room at the time, but, naturally, I tried to fix the shower. And that's when the cops came. I don't care what they say. Nellie had a towel on at the time. What do you mean around her head. Me? Well, of course, I took my clothes off. You don't think I was going to try to fix that shower in my good slacks and jacket did you? Of course my shoes are under the bed! What'd you think I was going to do—wear them in the shower or go in the shower with only my shoes on? Honey? Honey? (click, click) Operator! We were cut off! Pitcher Dennis Eckersley, brash and confident as always, says he wants what his Boston Red Sox teammate Jim Rice got—a long-term contract and big money. The 24-year-old right-hander posted a 20-8 record, helping the Red Sox tie the New York Yankees for the American League East title before losing in a playoff game. In fact, nine of Eckersley's victories halted Red Sox losing streaks. Eckersley is entering the final year of a three-year contract reportedly paying $150,000 a year. Meanwhile, he and Keating are eyeing Rice's seven-year deal for a reported $800,000 per season. "It's going to cost them one-third to one-half more," Eckersley said. "By doing what they've done (signing Rice, trading Bill Lee and letting Luis Tiant get away as a free agent), the Red Sox have made me more valuable. I'm now using Rice's contract as my yardstick. Celtics acquire McAdoo from Knicks

NEW YORK (AP)—The Boston Celtics have agreed to acquire three-time National Basketball Association scoring champion Bob McAdoo from the New York Knicks in exchange for three 1979 first-round draft picks and 6-foot-11 center Tom Barker, Celtics President Red Auerbach confirmed early Monday morning.

"Harry Mangurian and John Y. Brown, the owners of the Celtics, and Sonny Werblin of the Knicks discussed it, and it looks like the deal has been made," Auerbach said from his home in Washington.

"As far as I know it's a deal," added Auerbach. "Nothing is a deal until the league okays it, but I don't know why they wouldn't."

Every National Basketball Association player transaction requires approval of the league office before it becomes official.

Asked whether he was happy with a trade for McAdoo, Auerbach said, "Sure, otherwise I wouldn't have okayed it."

According to a story by basketball writer Sam Goldaper in Monday's editions of the New York Times, the trade was agreed upon by Brown and Werblin after the teams played at New York Saturday night. The clubs then traveled to Boston for a game Sunday, won by the Celtics 107-102 in which McAdoo scored 32 points for New York.

Now, three seasons later, Allen is under fire at SMU. And Orr? His Navarro Junior College team, after 18-13 and 30-7 seasons, is ranked No. 1 nationally in junior college circles with a 24-0 record. The only other unbeaten record belongs to No. 2 ranked Westchester Community College of Valhalla, N.Y.

Lone WJCC team to break the top 20, according to the latest poll, is Western Texas College at No. 12...

TOM BRAHANEY was a free agent last year, but it really didn't mean much. The Midlander spent the season playing behind all-pro center Tom Banks, relegated to specialty chores, and admitted, "Being a free agent won't do me much good. I didn't play that much and I don't think anybody would want to gamble."

This year Brahaneay is one of 10 St. Louis Cardinals who are on the free agent list and the former Oklahoma All-American admits it's a little different than a year ago. Last season he not only played, but played several different positions. "I'm not making any statements, but I have a few irons in the fire."

In all effort to sign the players and Brahaneay did enjoy playing for Bud Wilkinson and predicts the Cards, who draft eighth, will go after running backs, somebody to make St. Louis forget Terry Metcalf...

Cavaliers' Fitch plans to reactivate Smith

RICHFIELD, Ohio (AP)—Cleveland Cavaliers Coach Bill Fitch says he expects to reactivate veteran center Elmore Smith sometime this week.

Smith, a 7-footer who underwent knee surgery during training camp, has been on the National Basketball Association team's injured list for the entire season.

Fitch said Smith's playing time, at least initially, will be limited to less than 20 minutes a game. Smith will share the center spot with 6-foot-11 Jim Chones, who has moved back from power forward to man the middle this season.

When Smith is activated, someone will have to be cut from the team's 11-man roster to make room.

Jim Marshall

Marshall named new Oakland A's manager

CHICAGO (AP)—For Jim Marshall, it's now just a 10-block stroll back to the major leagues—considerably shorter than past journeys that took him out of the bushes.

As a major league baseball player and manager, Marshall never matched his success in the minors. So he's thrilled to take another turn at the helm—even if it is with the Oakland A's, who finished next to last in the American League West last season.

"I think you always have instilled in you, if you're any kind of person, that you want to get back on top," Marshall said Sunday after A's owner Charles O. Finley called him at his Scottsdale, Ariz., home with the offer to lead the A's.

"It happened so suddenly and it's such a surprise. I'm just so happy to be back in the major leagues," he said.

For how long, one acquainted with Finley's revolving-door approach to managers might ask. That doesn't concern Marshall now.

"I've got the job and I'm really happy. I'm looking to the future," he said in a telephone interview from his home, located 10 blocks from the A's spring training base. Spring training for the A's opens in just 11 days.

Marshall, 47, replaces Jack McKeon, who was fired after the 1978 season. McKeon had taken over for Bobby Winkles, who quit May 23 with Oakland in first place.

Marshall spent six years as a minor-league manager before succeeding Whitey Lockman on July 24, 1974, as manager of the Chicago Cubs. The team finished in sixth place in the National League East that year, but things improved the next two seasons.

"I know that it doesn't maybe mean a lot but I did go from sixth to fifth to fourth," said Marshall. "I was quite proud of that."

But after the 1978 season the Cubs' new general manager, Bob Kennedy, let Marshall go and replaced him with Herman Franks.

The rare, the lovely at Breakfront

Soon after entering Breakfront, one of the first things you will see is a clock, over seven feet tall, and with case and frame measuring 30 inches wide. It once stood in a train station in Germany. It is one hundred and thirty-two years old, and still keeps good time. The face is of zinc - a rarity for many years. You will notice that the number four is made with four 1's, rather than IV, to balance more aesthetically with the numeral VIII, its opposite member on the clock face. The over-all design is clean and functional. Its weights are 20# apiece, and the clock is wound every 5 days. Breakfront is featuring small antiques, such as inkwells. They are true antiques, and make a conversation piece par excellence. Museum reproductions, with great appeal and fidelity to the originals, are among the new things which are also found at Breakfront. Most are sculpture pieces, but there are other things too, and more will be added soon.

New and breathtaking at the brick-red building at 407 Liddon are the hand-blown and fashioned paper weights. Each is one-of-a-kind, is signed, dated, and registered. They are produced at Orient and Flume, in California. They are indescribably beautiful, with iridescent colors and flowing designs. Each comes with its own box, descriptive folder, and soft fabric bag.

Indeed, for the rare and the lovely shop at Breakfront.

Pair accused
FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A federal grand jury has accused a Fort Worth postal worker and his wife of a massive mail theft scheme.

The 11-count indictment names Isaac Stewart and his wife Ruby. Prosecutors said it took seven legal-sized pages to list the goods found by federal agents in the Stewart home Jan. 2.

The truckload of items included wrist watches, cowboy boots, a home computer, calculators, 78 women's rings, a diamond bracelet, toys, cheeses, jet fighter parts, cigarette lighters, pen and pencil sets, clothing and government microfilm.

ABA to re-examine ban on cameras
ATLANTA (AP) — Cameras in the courtroom, a concept condemned by the American Bar Association for 42 years, is being re-examined this week by ABA policy-makers who are expected to endorse the practice.

The association's House of Delegates was scheduled to open two days of deliberations today with a vote on a proposed amendment to the ABA's ethics standards that would allow film and tape coverage of trial proceedings.

Some resistance was expected but association leaders have predicted the proposal will pass easily, striking down a set of standards that has served as a model for federal and state courts.

Some states have already veered away from the ABA guidelines to tinker with experimental programs that allow some courtroom coverage by television, radio and still photography. Now 22 states allow some form of court coverage by cameras and microphones.

ABA delegates, nearing the end of a week-long national convention, also will decide whether the 250,000-member group should adopt these proposals as official policy.

Sweeping changes in how the nation's courts treat juveniles. Approval of the proposed changes, the product of an eight-year study by judges, lawyers and legal scholars, would spark ABA lobbying efforts to have state legislatures adopt them as law.

Quake shakes state

PALM DESERT, Calif. (AP) — An earthquake measuring 4.4 on the Richter scale jolted residents of Southern California's lower desert, but authorities say no damage or injuries were reported.

Dennis Meredith, spokesman for the Caltech Seismology Lab in Pasadena, said the quake Sunday night was centered in unpopulated mountain terrain 17 miles south of this desert town 120 miles east of Los Angeles.

Numerous residents of Palm Desert, Indio and Thermal called the Riverside County sheriff's office at Indio, but none reported damage or injuries. Police said the quake was not even felt in nearby Palm Springs.

The Richter scale is a measure of ground motion as recorded on seismographs. Every increase of one number means a tenfold increase in magnitude.

American Security Council mansion preferred by some dignitaries

By J. REGAN KERNEY
The Washington Post

BOSTON, Va. — When Ian Smith, the controversial Rhodesian prime minister, came to Washington last fall, he shunned the fashionable Madison and Hay Adams hotels that many visiting heads of state prefer.

Instead, Smith and his party headed directly from Dulles International Airport for a sprawling stone mansion overlooking the Blue Ridge Mountains 65 miles southwest of Washington.

It was the same place that Army Gen. John K. Singlaub headed for when President Carter fired him for criticizing the president's planned troop withdrawals from South Korea.

Smith, who visited here, and Singlaub, who got a public speaking job here, joined a parade of hundreds of congressional aides, retired military officers and corporate executives who each year come to this tiny, bucolic hamlet to talk about the Pentagon, Moscow, and ultimately, World War III.

For this is Boston, Va., home of the American Security Council, a place where the Cold War still rages.

Boston, Mass., may claim to be the home of the American Revolution. But in this Boston, which comprises little more than a post office, several churches and an American Legion post, the Russian revolution is a constant topic.

COUNCIL PRESIDENT John M. Fisher, who was a World War II bomber pilot and whose offices sit on a rolling, 850-acre former estate, puts it this way: "Here, we are interested in communism with a capital C."

His press liaison, former Newsweek foreign editor Philip C. Clarke, puts it more lightly. Directing a visitor to go a few miles west of Culpeper (Va.) up a country road to a pair of imposing brick pillars, he says with a chuckle: "It's the last left turn you'll make."

Inside the estate is a complex once billed as the nation's only private Cold War college. It has seminar rooms, plush dormitories and offices from which a staff of 30, using computers, generates millions of mailings each year on behalf of the council and its tax-exempt arm, the American Security Council Education Foundation. Each mailing carries the same message: Moscow is winning the Cold War.

It is, of course, a controversial message and one that draws frequent criticism from Pentagon and administration officials. But it wins praise from the right.

"They're very sharp activists," says William Rhatigan, an associate of Richard A. Viguierie, the direct-mail wizard of conservative causes. "They're respectable both in terms of the New Right and Capitol Hill."

INDEED, THE COUNCIL has put together a group of 140 congressmen called the Coalition for Peace through Strength to oppose the current SALT talks results, and the council's masthead is peppered with distinguished names and a gleaming list of polished brass.

The leadership once included former Virginia governor Mills E. Godwin, and now claims several former chairmen of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, ex-ambassadors, corporate executives and professors. One staff member, Herminio Portell-Villa, is a former professor from Havana who once flunked Fidel Castro in history.

"They're not kooks," says Wes McCune, who watches the right for the left through Group Research, a Capitol Hill-based operation. "They're the cold warriors. I just plain call them The Military-Industrial Complex."

Perhaps because of its prominent leadership, the council recently has avoided the extreme right image of groups like the John Birch Society and the Liberty Lobby that are "still looking for a communist under every bed," according to a council member Elbridge Durbrow, a U.S. ambassador to Vietnam from 1957 to 1961.

But the red-under-the-bed syndrome was not too far distant in the council's past. Originally founded in Chicago in 1955 as the Mid-American Research Library, the council's initial function was to compile files on suspected communists who might apply for jobs at large corporations. The first council members included Sears, Roebuck & Co., where Fisher worked until 1961, Motorola Inc., and Marshall Field & Co., but grew to include more than 1,500 employers.

IN 1972, THE COUNCIL finally phased out its Chicago library, then believed to be America's largest private file on the political beliefs of individuals, and Fisher announced the council was shifting its focus to international security and nuclear strategy.

But the personnel records, which ran to over 6 million files cards and which a 1960 council brochure called a "specialized subversive activities library," were moved to Boston, Va., where the council was trying to set up its Cold War college.

Newspaper investigations in the 1950s said that many of the files had been purchased from sources such as Harry Jung, a right-wing publisher known during the 1930s for anti-Semitic and anti-labor sentiments. Fisher told a reporter in 1961 that he had tried unsuccessfully to obtain the files of the late senator Joseph R. McCarthy, R-Wis., whose anti-communist tactics earned the censure of his Senate colleagues.

The personnel files are still here in Boston in the council's Sol Feinstein Library for the Survival of Freedom. Fisher says few requests for their use come in. A reporter who asked to wander in the stacks was allowed limited access only when escorted by the resident library director.

The personnel files were not shown to the reporter.

Mostly, the council has tended to stir squabbles over its hawkish politics, as was the case in 1970 when it launched Operation Alert, a national campaign that sought to discredit six U.S. senators up for re-election on the basis of their national security voting records.

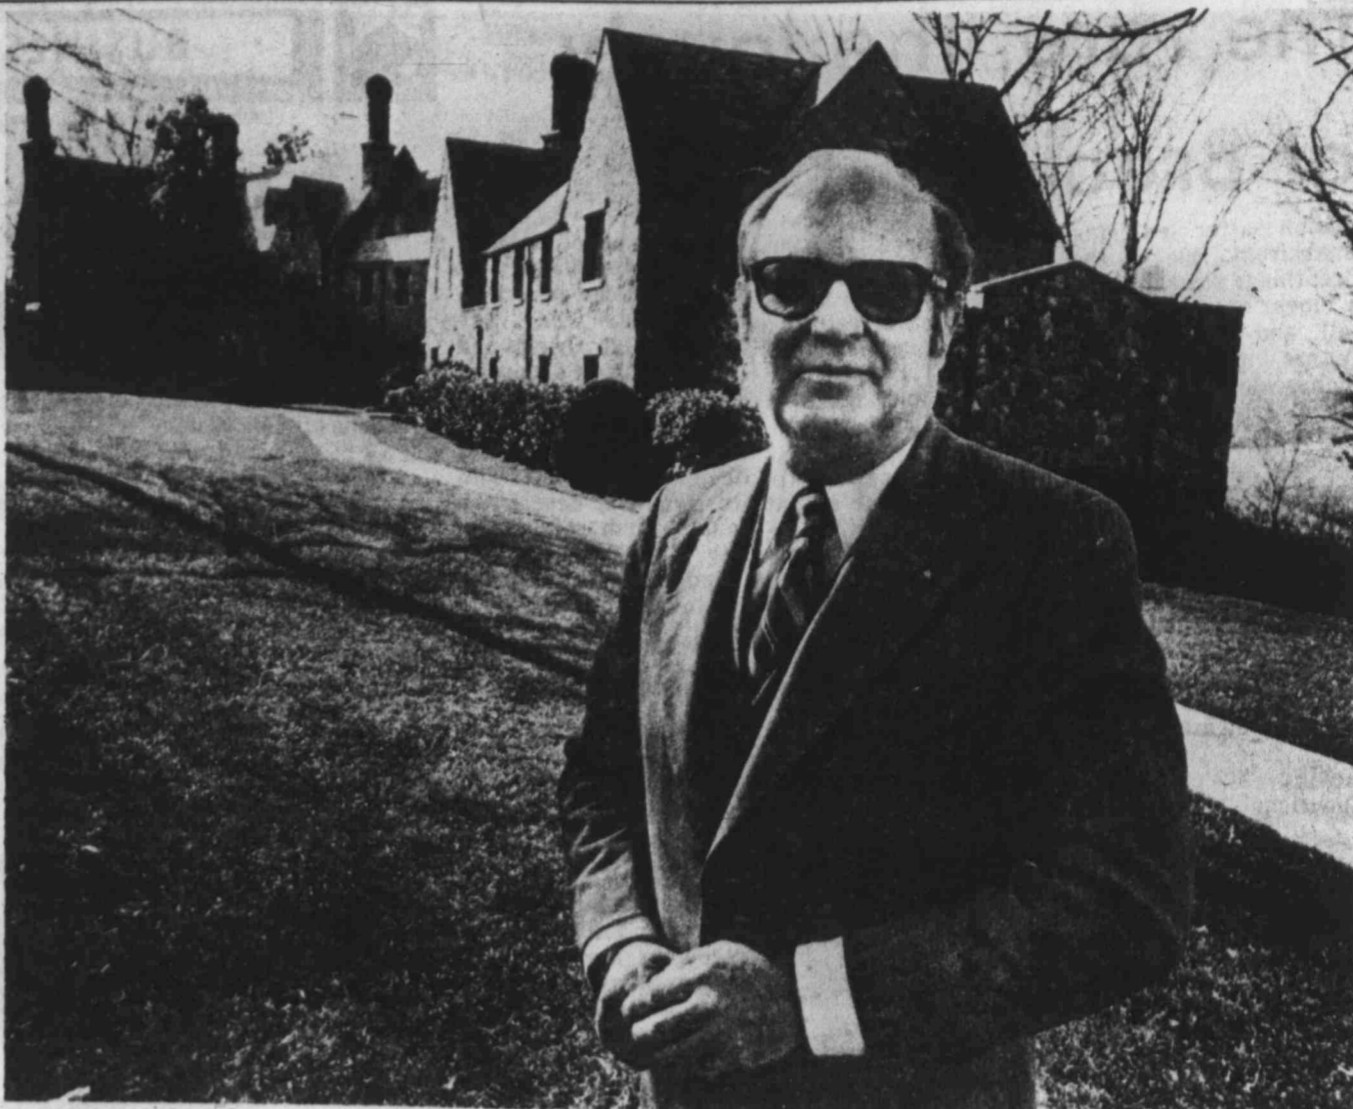

ONE OF THE SENATORS, Maryland Democrat Joseph D. Tydings, was the subject of a particularly vitriolic campaign that used extracts from Operation Alert newspaper ads. Both he and New York Republican Charles E. Goodell lost their races, but what impact the ads had is questionable since the four other senators won re-election.

Fisher says council critics are just jealous of the council's professional work, which includes films about what the council deems is the impending Soviet dominance in the arms race.

"They're not bad films," says a dovish aide of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. "They're really quite slick. What upsets a lot of us is that they're better than ours."

There was a brief stir in 1970 over whether the council should have to file contribution reports as a political organization under the Federal Corrupt Practices Act, and the post office that year accused it of abusing cheap mail rates accorded its tax-exempt arm when it mailed out more than 1.5 million pieces of literature before the election. The council prevailed on both points; never having to file as a political group and never losing its mailing rate.

And this fall there was a flap when Fisher and Lt. Gen. George Seignious, former head of The Citadel military college at Charleston, S.C., traded charges after Seignious said he had been lured into the Coalition for Peace Through Strength because Fisher had misled him about the group's SALT position. Seignious, now head of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency and the chief SALT negotiator, quit the coalition.

'You have to spend money...' among Carter budget policies

By FRANK CORMIER

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter understands that sometimes you have to spend money to save money, or to make more.

That's why he borrowed heavily to buy a peanut sheller and make other improvements at the family business establishment at Plains, Ga.

And, according to White House aides, that's why Carter wants Congress to appropriate another $8.5 million to keep alive a rather obscure agency that is limping along under a March 31 congressional death sentence.

On the surface, it seems strange. Here is a president, who vows to hold down spending and eliminate needless agencies, seeking more money to keep one alive.

The agency in question is the Renegotiation Board, created in 1951 to eliminate excessive profits on defense and space contracts through informal, non-adversary proceedings. Any contractor who doesn't agree with an excess profits finding can take his case to the Court of Claims.

In seeking a supplemental appropriation of $1.1 million to help finance the board this year, and another $7.4 million for 1980, Carter argues that the agency reclaims far more in excess profits than it spends in its search for same.

Thus the latest federal budget notes that the board in 1978 pinpointed $31.5 million in claimed excessive profits — money it wanted returned to the government.

Since its creation, the budget says, excess profits determinations by the board have totaled $1.4 billion.

The budget is silent on the fact that about half the board's findings are overturned in the Court of Claims.

Nevertheless, Carter can argue that the tiny agency — it has fewer than 200 employees — generates for the Treasury far more money than it spends.

But there's another side to the story. Sen. Alan Cranston of California, the Democratic whip and leader of a so-far-successful battle to kill the board, argues its abolition would save $120 million a year.

The claimed savings, which friends of the board say are exaggerated, would largely benefit contractors, who allegedly spend millions complying with the board's regulations and fighting its challenges.

But Cranston contends savings also would accrue to the Treasury, since the cost of compliance gets added to the cost of contracts.

The California Democrat also notes that when a contractor has to return money to the government, he amends his corporate tax return and gets a refund of up to nearly half the amount he pays out.

Carter's principal Senate ally against the Cranston position is Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., who sees the board as a safety net protecting taxpayers from any excesses by the military-industrial complex.

No other agency, he says, has the specific mission of squeezing excess profits out of defense and space contractors. His approach is more ideological than Carter's.

If the board is to stay alive, Congress must reverse its 1978 position and pass Carter's $1.1 million supplemental appropriation for 1979, plus a regular appropriation for next year.

And there's a further complication. With the recent resignation of Chairman Goodwin Chase, the Renegotiation Board has two members and three vacancies.

Since three members are required for a quorum, it is unable to transact any meaningful business.

The White House says Carter is looking for a new chairman and soon will send the Senate a nomination for the post.

But will the Senate, which has twice voted to send the board to bureaucratic heaven, expedite action on a nominee for a moribund agency?

Miracles do happen, they say, and whatever transpires, a miracle of sorts seems inevitable. The Renegotiation Board either will be raised from the dead — or one federal agency will go out of existence, which would be a miracle of another kind.

Norway ready for war with costly bark beetle

By ERIK A. WOLD

OSLO, Norway (AP) — Norway will start a war this year — against the Ips typografus, better known as the bark beetle or bark engraver.

During 1978, millions of bark beetles destroyed 1.1 million cubic meters of valuable forest in southern and eastern parts of Norway. Forest owners suffered losses of at least $22 million, the Ministry of Agriculture said.

Forests in these parts of Norway are now so infested with bark beetles that the ministry decided something had to be done about it — and quickly. A fast-working expert group was appointed last October to suggest an action program for 1979 and the next couple of years.

The experts feared that damage to forests in 1979 might be even worse than in 1978 and concluded that a full-scale war against the bark beetles must start immediately.

They suggested that the government and forest owners share costs of the anti-beetle program, which it is estimated will cost at least $16 million this year.

"There is no fast and easy way to win this war and eliminate the bark beetles completely. The aim must be to get the stock of bark beetles down to what can be termed normal. As of now there is an abnormally high number of beetles in affected forests," said Agriculture Ministry information chief Per Erik Bjoerklund.

"The fight must go on over several years. The war against the beetles this year will be fought with both completely new methods and with previously known conventional methods," he added.

New weapons in the bark-beetle war are so-called bark-beetle traps and odor patches, both prepared with the bark beetle's own odor substance which scientists have now succeeded in developing.

Tests with the traps last summer proved so successful that Norwegian firms are now producing 650,000 such traps for use in the 1979 war.

In addition 700,000 odor patches — pieces of cloth prepared with bark-beetle odor substance — will be produced.

The beetle traps are perforated narrow plastic tubes treated inside with odor substance to lure beetles through a funnel, trapping them inside plastic bottles at the lower end of the tube.

The traps are placed in the forests on poles about 3 feet above the ground. Test traps used last summer lured 25,000 beetles in a short time, to be destroyed.

The odor patches are placed on "decoy trees" already felled and left on the ground. The beetles are drawn to such decoy trees to mate and hatch eggs there, thus preventing attacks on healthy standing trees.

Next summer decoy trees will be felled systematically and then removed from the forest soon after the beetle attack. The experts thus hope to destroy hundreds of thousands of beetles and spare tens of thousands of healthy trees.

More forest roads will be constructed also to facilitate the removal of sick trees much faster than before.

Removing sick trees is important because the bark beetles work fast. They cause damage to trees all through their life cycle.

From the moment male beetles start the damaging process early in the spring by penetrating the bark to build "mating chambers," until new beetles emerge later in the summer after passing the egg, grub and cocoon phases, an intricate network of mating chambers, mother channels, grub channels and cocoon chambers completely destroys the inside of the bark.

Craftsman, at 82, has stong hobby

By JOE MCKNIGHT

UHRICHSVILLE, Ohio (AP) — If it weren't for friends, relatives and now, even strangers, Bill Cecil's woodworking hobby would be nothing more.

Because of them, he spends 10 to 12 hours a day in his backyard garage, among chisels, saws and the smell of walnut, maple, dogwood and sawdust.

It's a hobby he always wanted but never mentioned until he turned 70 a dozen years ago, sold his hardware store and retired. There's a stock of items he likes to make, like a box full of double-roller rolling pins and a half-dozen Victorian-style jewelry cases.

Big items like grandfather clocks, dry sinks or corner cupboards are made on order.

"I wouldn't have started this schoolhouse clock if I'd known it was going to be such a bother," he said, bending to measure and mark on the octagonal frame for the clock's face. "It'll turn out OK, but these plans are a nuisance."

An erect 6-foot-11 at 82, Cecil would rather work from memory than a pattern.

"I've made 749 of these jewelry cases," he nodded toward a shelf where several sat wrapped in sawdust covered plastic. "My wife's grandmother gave her one a long time ago, and that's where I got the idea."

In the house, Cecil showed the original filled with his wife's jewelry. Though his handiwork is everywhere, there is little to attract him in there since Mrs. Cecil broke a hip and moved to a nursing home.

"This woodwork is all mine," he said, pointing to oak door framing and baseboards. "When we moved here back in the '30s, I took out the woodwork and put this in. It fits better."

A WORLD BOOK SALE!

A World Book sale is really news... and it's good news for parents! Imagine saving $75 off the regular price of the 1978 edition... an impressive saving on the world's largest-selling encyclopedia.

World Book outsells all the others because it's the encyclopedia for the whole family. World Book fits its language to its most likely readers.

Articles are written at the language level of those most likely to read them. For example, World Book's article on puppets—which would be of greater interest to young children—reads more easily than the one on thermodynamics, written for older children and adults.

Major articles begin with simple explanations, so that even young readers can get the basic information they want. The 24-page article on insects, for example, begins... "Insect is a small six-legged animal." But as the article unfolds, it progresses to a scholarly discussion of insect growth patterns, development, and classification.

You can see that World Book is the encyclopedia your children won't outgrow.

Open a savings account for your son or daughter. Or, would it be for a grandchild? It's a Valentine gift of thoughtfulness they'll learn to cherish. And one that grows with the interest we add to it.

Carter brass privately admit gas lines coming

By J.P. SMITH The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Carter administration officials are now privately conceding that the nation is likely to return to gasoline lines and Sunday gas-station closings if Iran's oil shut-down continues through the rest of the year.

This bleak assessment is offered on the heels of Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger's remark last week that the Iranian oil shutdown was "prospectively more serious" than the 1973 Arab oil embargo. The new assessment stems from State Department and Central Intelligence Agency "best-case" analyses suggesting that Iran would return to its previous production levels by December. Many officials, including Schlesinger, have already ruled that out publicly.

Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., Sunday flatly predicted, "We will have to shortly undertake a program of (oil) allocations." Jackson, chairman of the Senate Energy Committee, went on to say "It will start out with a prohibition of gasoline sales on Sunday," and that gasoline prices could mount to $1 a gallon within the next year.

Energy and State Department officials and major oil-company executives meanwhile are saying that spot market prices for oil have risen so rapidly in recent weeks — nearly $6 a barrel in some instances — that the oil exporters may abandon their official posted prices that would have raised oil prices 14.5 percent by December, for still higher prices.

At the same time the ranks of the major oil companies that have begun to restrict sales of oil and petroleum products — many for different reasons — have widened to include Texaco, Continental Oil Co., Exxon, Royal Dutch Shell, British Petroleum and Standard Oil Co. of Calif.

Another uncertainty in the increasingly taut world oil market is whether nations such as Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, Libya, Venezuela and Nigeria will continue the stepped-up production they initiated to make up for 5 million barrels a day in lost Iranian exports.

Last month, following a succession of mixed signals and flat denials out of Riyadh and the administration, the Saudis cut back their oil production nearly 1 million barrels a day and at the same time raised their oil prices significantly, suggesting that others, such as conservation-minded Kuwait, might also rein in exports.

Despite the talk of $1-a-gallon gasoline and gas-station lines, there is ample evidence that the world may not be sliding toward a crippling oil crisis.

The Iranian shortage, once additional production from other exporters is taken into consideration, is still only 2 to 3 million barrels a day, out of a free world market that produces, sells, and consumes more than 50 million barrels a day.

The shortfall in the United States is only about 500,000 barrels a day, compared to nearly 1.6 million barrels a day lost during the 1973 Arab oil embargo.

Valentine of lead delivered by mob 50 years ago

By CHARLES CHAMBERLAIN

CHICAGO (AP) — Fifty years ago, on a day when Cupids are supposed to shoot arrows of love, mobsters delivered a Valentine of lead.

Seven men associated with George "Bugs" Moran were lined up against a brick wall inside a North Side garage and riddled with machine gun slugs.

The St. Valentine's Day massacre, Feb. 14, 1929, was Prohibition's goriest gangland crime. It awakened the public's fear of organized hoodlums and was instrumental in bringing the federal government into the Chicago crime picture.

The massacre climaxed 10 years of gang battles for control of illicit beer and whiskey profits. The warfare had narrowed to a fight for supremacy between Al Capone's South Side mob and the henchmen of Moran, the North Side booze czar.

The massacre still is listed in police files as "murder by persons unknown." No one was ever brought to trial, but gangland vengeance exacted 22 men whose names popped up in the investigation.

"Machine Gun" Jack McGurn, who had been in contact with Capone, was believed to have masterminded the hit. He and John Scalsi of the Mafia were indicted for the murders and released on $50,000 bond.

Scalsi later was slain, and the state lacked enough evidence to bring McGurn to trial. Seven years after the massacre, McGurn was machine-gunned down at a Northwest Side bowling alley.

Police blamed the Capone mob for the massacre, but couldn't prove it. The garage had served as Moran's booze depot, and Moran missed being there by a stroke of luck. Afterward, Moran told police:

"Only the Capone gang kills like that." But Capone himself had an iron alibi. At the very time that tommy gun slugs were ripping into the seven victims, "Scarface Al" was chatting with the district attorney in Miami, Fla., where he was vacationing. Told about Moran's accusation, Capone replied:

"They don't call that guy Bugs for nothing." Earl Aykroid, retired Associated Press staffer, was one of the first reporters to enter the garage after the shooting. "Inside was a scene of carnage rivaling a battlefield," he recalls. "Six men lay dead along the north wall of the building, their bodies riddled by machine gun bullets. A seventh man, fatally wounded, was being carried to an ambulance by two patrolmen. He lived only briefly."

But the attempt to rub out Moran's gang was a botched job, according to various accounts. Only two of Moran's toughest musclemen were killed — Frank and Pete Gusenberg. The other victims were Johnny May, a mechanic who kept the bootleg trucks working; James Clark, Moran's brother-in-law who once was tried for murder; Adam Hyer, a trained accountant who has served time for embezzlement and now handled the gang's finances; Albert Weinschank, operator of a speakeasy; and Dr. Reinhard Schwimmer, an optometrist strangely fascinated with underworld factions.

Federal lawmakers focusing on budget's big money issues

By CARL C. CRAFT

WASHINGTON (AP) — After spending the opening weeks of this 96th Congress hearing President Carter's plans and getting themselves organized into committees where legislative work begins, federal lawmakers are starting to focus on big money issues.

Here is the status of major legislation: Fiscal 1980 Budget Congressional committees are considering Carter's proposed budget for federal fiscal 1980, the year beginning Oct. 1, 1979, calling for the government to operate at a $29 billion deficit, spend $331.6 billion and collect $502.6 billion in revenue.

In handing the new budget plan to Congress, the administration estimated the fiscal 1979 deficit eventually will be $37.4 billion — with $493.4 billion in spending and revenue of $456 billion — compared with fiscal 1978's $48.8 billion deficit.

Last September, Congress had figured on a fiscal 1979 budget containing a $38.8 billion deficit. When he sent his fiscal 1980 budget plan to the lawmakers Jan. 22, Carter termed it "lean and austere," with an emphasis on restraining spending while fighting inflation.

The biggest boost he proposed is for defense, representing "real growth" of 3.1 percent after allowing for inflation. Total military spending would be $122.7 billion.

Anti-Inflation The tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee completed a round of hearings last week on a key element of Carter's anti-inflation effort.

He asked Congress Jan. 17 to set up a special program of "wage insurance." The most any worker could get would be a payment of $600, and — like the wages it would replace — it would be taxable.

What brought them together? One account is that a hijacked truckload of whiskey was being brought in for sale. Other accounts say that was a phony report spread to get the Moran boys together.

Across the street, two brothers identified as Phil and Harry Keywell of the Purple Gang, which had interests in the Detroit bootlegging racket, watched the garage from a rented boarding house room.

They saw Moran's boys go in at about 10 a.m. The last was Weinschank with his German shepherd dog, High Ball, on a leash. Weinschank looked like Moran. Police think the watchers mistook him for the big boss.

The brothers telephoned the Circus Cafe 20 blocks south and said Moran and six others were inside. The cafe contact went to a small garage and said, "He's there and he's got six of them with him."

Two men dressed like policemen and two in street clothes piled into what looked like a detective bureau car and drove to the garage.

The "policemen," brandishing revolvers, entered the building and went to the back, where the trucks were. The two others followed, one with a package wrapped in newspaper. Moran's men thought it was just another raid. They were ordered to line up against the wall, and did.

The man with the package ripped off the newspaper. It was a tommy gun. He sprayed the seven men with slugs, back and forth, back and forth, and squeezed a torrent of shots into them after they fell.

Most of the victims were bundled in overcoats and wore fedoras. There was no heat in the garage. The dog High Ball barked and snarled. He had been tied to a truck and kept lunging the length of his leash, but could not break free.

A landlady saw two men leave the garage with hands raised, followed by two policemen with guns. "Just another arrest," she thought.

But the shots and the dog's howls had drawn attention. Police found four men lying face up, blood pouring from their heads. Another was face down against the wall. A sixth was sprawled over a chair.

Crawling out from the entanglement of bodies was Frank Gusenberg, with 22 slugs in him. He lived for 90 minutes and was asked who shot him. True to gangdom's code, he replied: "Nobody."

Moran and two of his top boys were reportedly nearing the garage on foot when they saw the execution squad's parked car. Thinking it was a police shakedown, they went to a restaurant nearby. Afterward, they went back and found the street cluttered with police. They scattered.

Moran bootlegged until repeal, then turned to other crimes. In 1957, at 64, he died of cancer in prison, serving time for a bank holdup. Capone, who served time for income tax evasion, died in 1947.

The garage was used by a moving and storage firm until 1967, when it was torn down to make room for apartments for the elderly. The bullet-scarred bricks were sold to a Canadian food executive, George Patty of Vancouver, who planned to reconstruct the wall of his den with them.
