Fighting continues in Iranian streets

Premier Ibrahim Yazdi and guerrillas loyal to the new government.

Some of the attackers identified themselves as communists while Yazdi said they were "communists, ultra-rightists and military personnel who all had one objective: to give the world the impression that chaos prevails in Iran and give our movement a bad name."

Yazdi stationed 40 of his government's "Islamic police" around the bullet-pocked embassy compound after the attackers were driven out and the Americans freed.

There was no word on the fate of about a dozen other Americans believed to be in Tabriz, 330 miles northwest of Tehran and 60 miles from the Soviet border. Tehran Radio reported that shooting could be heard this morning in many parts of the city and that "guardians of the revolution" fought an all-night battle in defense of the local radio station, driving off the attackers before dawn. It said the station was urging the city's 420,000 people to remain in their homes.

Tehran Radio said the attackers were "mercenaries and counter-revolutionaries," including agents of SAVAK, the shah's hated secret po-

'Blue norther' moves into state

By The Associated Press

A strong cold front, best described as a "blue norther," moved into Texas today, bringing with it sharply lower temperatures, brisk wind and the threat of snow and sleet by Friday for northern and northwestern sections of the state.

Before the cold front moved through, temperatures were unseasonably warm across much of the state. Highs were to range from the 70s to the 80s except for the Panhandle where readings were only expected to reach the middle 50s before the front arrived.

Forecasts called for lows tonight and early Friday to range from the teens in the Panhandle to the 50s in South Texas. Most of the state was to have lows in the 30s.

Indiana man seeks release from Hanoi 'labor camp'

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — An Indiana man seeking to return to the United States from Vietnam where he was taken prisoner 14 years ago said in a note that he had been held in a labor camp with 15 other Americans, lice. There were also rumors in Tehran that they included remnants of the pro-Soviet, Communist separatist movement that set up a short-lived People's Republic of Azerbaijan in 1946 as well as troops still loyal to the shah.

The government radio station said the Shiite Moslem religious leader in Tabriz, Ayatollah Qazi Tabataba'i, mustered a coalition of army and air force troops, police and guerrillas loyal to the revolution to take over the city. It said the leftist Peoples Fedayeen and the rightist Mojaahedeen, two of the many guerrilla groups that supported Khomeini's revolution, "are also cooperating with the army in controlling the city."

"For the past two nights curfew hours have been in force from 10 p.m. to 6 a.m.," a Tehran radio correspondent reported.

"Various rumors are heard in Tabriz," the correspondent continued, "including one about the prominent role being played by a mysterious power in providing help to SAVAK agents. The rumor says that this power is doing everything it can to arm the group."

Elsewhere, the official Pars news agency reported 24 people killed Wednesday when "revolutionary soldiers" clashed with forces of a local sheik in Qorveh, near the Iraqi border.

The agency reported 18 dead and 50 wounded in fighting in the town of Jāhrom, in southern Iran, and it said "the people" stormed a prison and police station in nearby Fasa and released "thousands of people."

Tehran Radio reported an attack against the capital's television center by unidentified persons was repulsed late Wednesday and said it had reports of an attack against a major broadcast transmitter in Dasht-e-Gazvin, 100 miles west of Tehran.

Leftist guerrillas also opened fire on an apartment building in northeast Tehran early today, claiming SAVAK agents were holed up inside.

Armed gangs were still roaming Tehran's streets and some gunfire was heard late Wednesday, but it appeared the government's forces were in general control of the capital. And most of the 300,000 weapons stolen or distributed from military armories last Sunday are reported still missing despite appeals from Khomeini that they be turned in.

Indiana man seeks release from Hanoi 'labor camp'

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — An Indiana man seeking to return to the United States from Vietnam where he was taken prisoner 14 years ago said in a note that he had been held in a labor camp with 15 other Americans, the Louisville Courier-Journal reported today.

But a state department spokesman cautioned against interpreting the message as firm evidence that Vietnam may still be holding American prisoners of war.

"It could be that he was talking about a labor camp he was held in many years ago," said Deputy Assistant Secretary of State Frank Sieverts. "We just don't know yet. Right now, we're most concerned with getting Garwood out. Then we'll deal with this other information."

Marine Pvt. Robert Garwood, 33, of Greensburg, Ind., was taken prisoner in September 1965. He remained in Vietnam voluntarily after his capture, according to other POWs.

State department spokesman Hodding Carter said Wednesday in Washington that Garwood had covertly passed a note to an unidentified intelligence source he met in a Hanoi hotel. In the note, Garwood asked American officials to help him get back home, said Carter.

But the Courier-Journal's copyrighted story says Garwood's note also said he was held in a Vietnamese labor camp with 15 other American prisoners a few miles northeast of Hanoi.

Vietnamese officials have said all American prisoners were released in 1973, when the United States withdrew from Vietnam.

Since that time, however, U.S. officials have received unconfirmed reports from various sources who have said they saw or heard of American prisoners in Vietnam. Defense department officials said last week that they investigated each of the reports but were unable to confirm any of them.

"Certainly we are going to be more keenly interested in that possibility," Sieverts told the Courier-Journal. But, he said, "We won't make any firm evaluations until we can get him out of there so we can talk to him."

"If it does turn out that there are indeed 15 other Americans being held in the labor camp, then we will get them out, too."

When word of Garwood's reappearance was released, Rep. G.V. Montgomery, D-Miss., said at a news conference, "Let's hope he does come home. He should be put in jail."

Montgomery, who was chairman of the House Select Committee on Prisoners of War and Missing in Action in the last Congress, said the committee had information that Garwood was a defector who led North Vietnamese units against U.S. patrols.

But Garwood's brother, Donald, denied Wednesday night that his brother was a defector.

"That's a lie. I'll go anywhere and say that was a lie. He was an American and did not fight against Americans," he said.

Hodding Carter said the U.S. government approached the Vietnamese "at a high level" and asked that Garwood be allowed to leave. Carter said he did not know what Vietnam's response had been.

submerging of prejudices on both sides of the border, telling Carter: "You and I have the task of dealing with the problem of rationalizing realities and prejudices."

From the start, Carter's state visit was markedly different from any others made here in recent decades by U.S. presidents. The initial welcome was warm but subdued. Crowds numbered in the thousands, rather than the million or more who greeted Presidents John F. Kennedy and Lyndon B. Johnson.

A White House official said, with evident irony, "It was a friendly crowd, but it didn't strike me that they were in any danger of getting out of control."

Carolina will be shipped through Texas to New Mexico, she said.

The problem here lies with who will be liable if an accident does happen "as it's hard to sue the federal government as an individual."

Mrs. Naylor conceded the government needs a safe place to store the wastes since there are hazards involved in the country's three temporary sites now in use.

"But I'm not sure the salt domes in New Mexico are the right spot," she said.

ANOTHER ASPECT to the transportation, according to a PBRPC board member, is that the government has not outlined any security plans for the trucks or trains that will be transporting the wastes.

Mrs. Naylor showed diagrams of the strata of land in the proposed area. The Santa Rosa aquifer from which several counties in the PBRPC area get their water is on top of the salt beds, she said.

But Mrs. Naylor noted that there is no guarantee the wastes would not leak, eventually contaminating the water.

Testimony to continue

Defense testimony was to continue today in the trial of Frank O. Flounoy in Midland, charged in federal court in Midland with two counts of willfully and knowingly failing to provide the IRS with required information.

During presentation of his defense, Flounoy took over questioning of witnesses from his attorney, William Mann of Amarillo.

Mann remained at the defense table to assist Flounoy.

Flounoy took the action during testimony of Jerry Stamps, IRS group manager.

Stamps had been called to testify about IRS investigation procedures. But during cross examination by a U.S. Justice Department attorney, Stamps told the jury Flounoy had testified as a defense witness during another tax trial.

At that time, Stamps testified, Flounoy said he did not provide the IRS with the information it requires and had never been investigated.

Government witnesses included bank officials, Flounoy's former employer and Midland city and county tax collectors.

Another contrast was the absence of a bear-hug "abrazo" greeting between the two leaders after Carter's big jet rolled to a stop. The two men shook hands instead.

Nor did Lopez Portillo greet Carter at the foot of the ramp rolled up to Air Force One, as has been done in every other country the U.S. president has visited.

The Mexican president greeted his visitor at the halfway mark along a red carpet rolled up to the ramp.

Carter's remarks during his first day here were overshadowed by Lopez Portillo's toast. However, Carter said he and his host "both look across the flowing water of the Rio Grande with interest, extension of friendship, concern, sometimes a lack of understanding, but a determination to make the future brighter."

"They're (the government) hoping that as it (nuclear wastes) leak, it will bind with the salt. Then, in 30 years the government will come back in, fill up the holes with salt and silently steal away," she said.

If WIPP does become a reality, Mrs. Naylor said the league was asking the agency's support in recommending the government follow certain guidelines and precautions. These include:

— Nuclear wastes to be isolated in as retrievable manner as possible, pending future technology when the wastes could be safely disposed.

— Constant monitoring of water supplies in the Delaware Basin for a period of at least 1,000 years. If pollution should escape the confines of the Delaware Basin, the areas downstream also should be monitored.

THE UNITED STATES government could let the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency monitor these water supplies or the government could give the Texas and New Mexico legislatures authority and funds to see that it is properly monitored.

— Importation of a pure water supply for the area affected if pollution should occur. This importation of water should be at the expense of the United States tax base, as the tax base would be receiving the benefits of the use of the WIPP site.

The group agreed to review the project with their local governments and adopt a resolution at the next PBRPC meeting.

In other action, the board gave favorable comments to grants for equipment and supplies for the Coahoma Police Department, funding of an investigator project in the Winkler County district attorney's office, a portable radio project for law enforcement agencies in the region and priorities for the 1980 Criminal Justice Projects.

District judge denies bond for 22-year-old Odessa man

ODESSA — District Judge C.V. Milburn Wednesday denied bond for Odessan Stephen Fife, 22, charged with murder in connection with the death of Catherine Ann "Fifi" Murphy of Odessa.

The action followed a hearing on a motion filed by Ector County District Attorney John Green.

Defense attorney Royal Caswell reportedly indicated he wanted to continue the hearing today to consider a motion for a reduction in Fife's bond. That hearing was scheduled for 3 p.m. today.

However, Judge Milburn reportedly said in court Wednesday that he believes a request for a reduction in bond is moot.

Fife originally was held on a bond of $60,000, set by Peace Justice Charles Gee. But Fife's bond was raised to $100,000 following his indictment earlier this week by an Ector County Grand Jury.

The prosecution offered evidence

Wednesday to the effect that Fife was under a felony indictment for alleged possession of marijuana at the time he was arrested in connection with the Murphy death.

In addition, testimony Wednesday from Odessa Police Detective Lt. K.R. Jones indicated that Fife has given police officers a statement admitting he killed Miss Murphy.

The detective told how he received a call from Ector County District Attorney's office investigator Jerry Davis last Thursday. He said he went to a local cafe, where he talked with Davis and Fife.

The detective said he accompanied the two men to a Crane County location and that Fife showed officers where the Miss Murphy's body was buried.

After returning to Odessa and taking a statement from Fife, Jones and Davis returned to the Crane County gravesite to recover the body, the detective testified.

"I pledge to sustain my devotion of time and effort to the citizens of our community," he added.

New Texas Highway Commissioner guest at Wednesday luncheon here

By ROGER SOUTHALL
Staff Writer

The new Texas Highway Commissioner, A. Sam Waldrop of Abilene, was the honored guest Wednesday at a luncheon hosted by the Midland Chamber of Commerce and its Highway Committee.

The event in the Midland Hilton drew business leaders and chamber officials from both Midland and Odessa, who heard a brief talk by Waldrop and a report by District Highway Engineer Henry Pearson of Odessa on the status of highway construction or improvement projects which either are planned or now under way in the Midland-Odessa area.

Waldrop, president of a major retail home furnishings store in Abilene, was appointed highway commissioner by Gov. Dolph Briscoe before Briscoe left the governorship several weeks ago.

A graduate of Abilene High School, he holds a bachelor's degree from Baylor and received his law degree from George Washington University. He was a special agent with the Federal Bureau of Investigation from 1943 to 1947. He was vice president of Waldrop Furniture for a number of years before becoming president of the firm in 1968.

Waldrop is a former Abilene city councilman and mayor pro tem who has been active in various civic and service organizations in Abilene, including serving as a director of the Abilene Philharmonic Society.

A Baptist, he is active in Abilene's First Baptist Church and has held offices in the Baptist General Convention of Texas, the state South Baptist organization.

In his new capacity, Waldrop said he was "enjoying this work — it's different from anything I've ever been in before," and he added it was a pleasure "to be associated with some of the great people who are employees of our state highway organization."

The official paid tribute to the employees and professional staff of the highway organization who, he declared, "have built what I think is the greatest highway department in the world."

Good highways, he said are a basic "life blood" of the state and national economy.

"As I see it, as we look into the future, the emphasis is going to be on the adequate and safe upkeep of present roads, rather than new roads," he said.

Waldrop declared he wants to be the best possible highway commissioner for West Texas and his fellow West Texans, just as he wants to be the best possible commissioner for all the state.

District Engineer Pearson, who introduced his new boss to the assembled group, took the floor again to review the highway department's various improvement or construction projects under way, or ready to be initiated, in Midland and Ector counties.

Pearson gave special attention in his review to some of the major projects in the two-county area, including the "Midland Loop" around the city of Midland, for which funds are presently available, he said, and the Midland-Odessa "North Route" which would be north of Midland Regional Air Terminal.

The district official spoke of the 20-year highway construction and improvement program now on the planning boards for this area. He said that one additional interstate construction project remains to be accomplished to bring IS 29 to final, total completion in the Midland-Odessa area.

Gene Abbott, chairman of the Midland Chamber of Commerce's highway committee, presided at the luncheon meeting. He paid tribute to W.H. "Bill" Collins, editor of The Midland Reporter-Telegram, as a "Road Hand," a special honor bestowed by the Texas Good Roads Association on citizens of the state who have long and diligently worked for the cause of good roads in the state.

Violin craftsman isn't playing second fiddle

By TERRY LEONARD

DALLAS (AP) — Fingers that coaxed Mozart and Bach from string now guide woodcutters' tools across aged spruce and maple. But David Caron, a once promising young cellist, still doesn't play second-fiddle.

Caron abandoned concert aspirations to become one of just a handful of professional violin makers. He calls it "fiddle making," but the quality of his craft, instruments that sell for $3,000 to $4,000, can hardly be called fiddling around.

"For me it's an art first and then a craft," said Caron. "For an awful lot of violin makers it's just a craft. They had a second job," said Caron. "I thought repair would be a good since I already was handy with wood."

From instrument repair, "fiddle making" was just a natural progression for the Chicago native working under the guiding eye of Viennese-trained violin maker Franz King-burg.

It took three years for Caron, 37, to finish his first violin. And now, 17 years, later he turns them out at the rate of a dozen a year.

"Assuming you know how to make a good violin, there are three basic things you need," Caron explained. "Very good wood, which is hard to take a pattern that from someone else and try to duplicate it.

"I do it to please myself. If I did it to please everybody else I would go crazy."

But if Caron steps to the beat of a different drummer, he does so in tune with some of classical music's giants.

Elmar Oliveira, the first American gold medalist in Moscow, played a Caron violin in concert for nine months.

"He finally returned it because he decided the shoulder was too square. But he ordered a matched violin and viola," said Caron.

And Ruggiero Ricci, who he said "fiddle players consider a minor diety," also has drawn his bow across a Caron instrument.

Economics more than art lured Caron from the concert hall to a sunlit workbench in his north Dallas home.

"Even very good cellist was out of work alot. A symphony season usually lasted 20 to 24 weeks, so everybody find, a good design and a good varnish.

"A minor change in the arching or the hardness of the wood causes a large change in the sound. A good fiddle maker is supposed to know this — most of them don't."

Caron has an artist's eye, a craftsman's feel for the wood, a musician's ear for its resonance, a gypsy's zeal for the violin and a surgeon's dexterity.

Using tiny planes and chisels he carves the components to an exact thickness and applying his experience and knowledge hones the precise sound he wants for each violin.

"Changes in the top alter the basic sound, changes in the back adds color or timbre," explained Caron.

"I know how my customers play and I make each instrument to suit that person. I once had six of my customers together at one time. Each one thought the instrument he had was the best instrument. And they did for their needs."

Priest of 29 years loses defamation of character suit

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — A priest of 29 years may face perjury charges after losing a defamation of character suit against a female parishioner who said he accompanied her in a cross-country love affair.

Middlesex County Superior Court Judge Thomas Morse Jr. set cash bail of $1,000 Tuesday and ordered the Rev. Stanley Miaskevicz, 58, to appear next Tuesday to present evidence showing why he should not face charges for allegedly committing perjury on five separate occasions during the nine-day trial. Morse's action followed a jury's verdict Monday that Arlene LeTourneau, 58, did not defame Miaskevicz. She testified Miaskevicz was a "thief, a gambler and a philanderer."

After the verdict, Morse, in a memorandum read in court, said the priest lied five times about his relationship with Mrs. LeTourneau. Miaskevicz had officiated at the funeral of Mrs. LeTourneau's husband and the wedding of her daughter.

Miaskevicz had no comment after Morse's actions. Officials for the Boston Archdiocese also declined to comment.

Miaskevicz's status with the church remains in limbo. He has not served in a parish since 1975, the year he accompanied Mrs. LeTourneau on a three-month trip to Canada, Las Vegas and South Carolina.

Cardinal Humberto Medeiros, called as a witness by the defense, testified he barred the priest from celebrating Mass or wearing clerical garb in 1976.

Miaskevicz, a tall, broad-shouldered man, wore his clerical suit at the trial. He said he had never received Medeiros' order.

Mrs. Tourneau testified Miaskevicz was a "kept man," who took money from her to buy a new wardrobe and finance gambling sprees. She said he promised to marry her after his 25th anniversary as a priest.

Miaskevicz denied the charges, claiming Mrs. Tourneau owed him $3,600 in expenses and $1,200 in salary for the trip.

Members of St. Malachy's Church of Burlington, Miaskevicz' last parish, described him as a "priestly and pious man."

Whalen one of many polluted playas

By NICHOLAS C. CHRISS
The Los Angeles Times

ANDREWS — It is a small lake in the arid west Texas vastness — not quite the lovely patch of blue water with cattails and leaping fish you might see on a scenic calendar.

Instead it is a mess of crude oil, chemicals and salt water — byproducts of the hundreds of oil wells that dot the West Texas landscape.

A ring-around-the-collar of black goo and salt encircles Whalen Lake. An estimated 200,000 barrels a month of brine — sometimes containing globs of crude oil — have been dumped into its 300 acres.

The brine is a byproduct of the oil extraction process. Today, most major petroleum companies dispose of the salt water by injecting it below the water table, deep into the earth.

But for many decades, when there was no state or federal regulation — and even today in some places — the dumping of oilfield salt water continues. Thousands of acres of land have become contaminated, fresh water supplies have been endangered and migratory birds have been killed in vast reaches of West Texas, Oklahoma and New Mexico, according to the Bureau of Land Management and U.S. Geological Survey.

"This country is so remote and so ugly to many people who don't know how to love it that some of the oil companies have been getting away with murder for years."

No one appears to know how much land has been ruined by the contamination. Currently, the Environmental Protection Agency is trying to make the U.S. Department of Justice take some legal action to block further contamination.

"This country is so remote and so ugly to many people who don't know how to love it that some of the oil companies have been getting away with murder for years," said Midge Erskine, an environmentalist who for two years has been trying to draw attention to the problems of contamination of groundwater and to the deaths of thousands of migratory birds that land on the oil waters. Mrs. Erskine has seen places, she said, where the grass has turned black from the birds rubbing their feathers against it, trying to rid themselves of the crude oil and salt.

WHALEN LAKE BECAME so badly polluted that it was closed several months ago by the Railroad Commission of Texas, the agency that regulates the oil industry in the state.

The commission is widely regarded as a friend of the oil industry. In 1969 it produced a regulation forbidding the pollution of such freshwater areas as the playa lakes. But since then it has issued 6,000 exceptions to the regulation, many of them in West Texas.

Long ago, Whalen Lake and the other shallow lakes that dot the Southwest were a boon to Indians and wildlife in the desert, where water can be more valuable than gold.

In West Texas, a barrel of distilled water costs $24. A barrel of crude oil cost about $13.

The richest oil wealth of West Texas lies in the Permian Basin, one of the nation's most prolific energy producers. Since drilling began there in the 1930s, the Permian Basin has produced about 17 billion barrels of oil. Obviously, the oil industry is king in West Texas.

But West Texas also includes the high plains, one of the nation's breadbaskets, producing bumper crops of wheat, corn and cotton from the Panhandle in the north to the Pecos in the south.

Playas are snow basins created by wind erosion that catch rainwater and melting snow to become lakes. In this part of West Texas, most of these lakes are polluted with salt water and crude oil from the wells. The crude oil is supposed to be separated from the brine in special tanks or pits, but much of the time both are simply poured into the lakes, into unlined pits or onto the ground.

On the whole, federal and state agencies still don't appear to be much concerned about all of this.

But one day in 1976 Midge Erskine and her husband, Woody, a consulting geologist for oil companies, spotted a rare whooping crane far off its normal flyway. Fearing that the crane might land in oil-polluted Whalen Lake, they notified Richard C. Endress, a law enforcement agent of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife agency in San Angelo.

IN LESS THAN FIVE months, Endress found 138 dead birds at Whalen Lake and speculated that there were many, many more that sank to the bottom or flew off, encrusted with oil, only to die later.

The lake has been used by the Whalen Corp., a subsidiary of Triton Oil and Gas Corp. of Dallas, Phillips Petroleum Corp. of Dallas, Phillips Petroleum Corp. and the Petroleum Corp. of Texas, as a saltwater disposal site for a number of years.

After Endress and the Erskines walked around the lake looking for dead birds, Endress noticed that the soles and laces of his boots had begun to disintegrate. Woody Erskine concluded that the sulfur dioxide and hydrogen sulfide in the oil had mixed with the salt brine to create sulfuric acid.

Agent Endress filed a complaint about the lake with a federal grand jury in Midland. But the jurors and the U.S. attorney sent the complaint to the Railroad Commission of Texas, saying that state agency has jurisdiction.

The commission granted the Whalen Corp. a provisional permit to continue to dump brine into the lake.

"It's a classic problem," Endress said. "What is the value of a few migratory birds? Are they valuable enough to cause all these problems for the oil industry or energy production?"

"I fall back on the law. The law says that they are."

"It's against Texas Railroad Commission regulations to place hydrocarbons (oil and gas) in open pits. It's a waste of natural resources. But it's being done," he said in an interview.

One estimate claims that about 150,000 barrels of crude oil have accumulated in Whalen Lake.

Endress, the agent who pursued the Whalen Lake problem, is getting a promotion — and being transferred to Miami. His one-man Fish and Wildlife Service office in San Angelo is being closed, leaving much of West Texas largely unsupervised.

As much as the Erskines are concerned about the migratory birds, their greatest concern is the contamination of fresh water in West Texas.

SOME OIL COMPANY officials, such as Arnold Arrow, head of the Whalen Corp., which dumped brine into Whalen Lake, say that the oilfield salt water does not contaminate groundwater supplies, although there are numerous reports stating otherwise. Darrow calls the contention "ridiculous."

But a study made by the Lea County Land Use Planning Board in southeast New Mexico in 1973 reported that contamination of fresh groundwater had been shown to come from a saltwater disposal pit in the area.

The study noted that approximately 110 acres of underground water source were contaminated, and that 75 to 100 million barrels of fresh water had been made "unusable for man or livestock." In 10 years, the study added, the movement of the brine in the water could contaminate 170 to 210 million gallons of fresh water.

Various officials over the years have warned of possible brine contamination, but for the most part they have been ignored.

Mrs. Erskine quoted L. G. McMillon, former director of the groundwater division of the Texas Water Commission, who said that vast areas of Texas were "experiencing falling water tables, water quality deteriora-

The Railroad Commission of Texas in 1969 produced a regulation forbidding the pollution of such freshwater areas, but since then it has issued 6,000 exceptions to the regulation.

tion and soil salinization, much of which can be attributed to the existence of brine resulting from oil and gas operations."

That warning was made in 1965.

While water in West Texas is equivalent to lifeblood, many ranchers of the high plains are reluctant to talk about brine and crude oil pollution. Many of them receive hefty royalty checks for oil and gas mineral rights.

LAST YEAR IN ANDREWS County, home of polluted Whalen Lake, 47 million barrels of oil were produced, worth $424 million. The state received $22 million in taxes from the oil production, and royalty payments totaled $37.5 million to holders of the mineral rights in the county.

So the battle of oil vs. water may go on until the oil gives out.

Mrs. Erskine said, "Ranchers bring lawsuits against the oil companies all the time when their fresh water becomes contaminated, but you don't hear about it because the cases are settled for money out of court."

The Whalen Corp. has stated that Whalen Lake has never been much more than a good place for dumping brine. The company says the economy of the area is dependent upon the oil companies, and Whalen Lake serves the need for oil producers to dispose of salt water.

But workers who were sent in to clean up the company tanks, which are supposed to separate the brine and the oil blobs, said the tanks probably had not been used for a long time. "It looks to me as if the brine and oil were just poured straight into the lake," one of the workers said.

The manager of Whalen Lake said that the company has promised to clean it up and that one day it would be "a model of its kind."

Said Midge Erskine: "seeing is believing."

Bergland, farmers arguing farm economy in U.S. House

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Secretary Bob S. Bergland and the protesting farmers are arguing their cases on the farm economy before House members.

Bergland is making his annual appearance before the agricultural appropriations subcommittee to defend his budget, always tighter than that panel thinks it should be. He concludes two days of testimony late today.

And, about 20 more members of the American Agriculture movement get a chance to air their complaints before the House Agriculture Committee, which listened to 21 farmers Wednesday and plans to hear other groups' views on farm programs next week.

The farmers argue they cannot survive unless grain and cotton support prices are raised to levels set during periods of wartime shortages. Huge surpluses exist today, dragging down prices despite increases in support the past two years.

Without the higher supports, Georgian Tommy Fulford said growers cannot encourage their children to stay in farming. That level "is only guaranteeing us a minimum wage," said Lynwood James, also from Georgia.

Bergland repeated Wednesday his contention that, while some have problems, most ranchers and farmers are sharing in last year's gains of 40 percent in net income from farming and 11 percent in net equity.

But committee members responded that family farms are in much more serious trouble than his statistics reflect. Chairman Jamie L. Whitten, D-Miss., said international grain merchants who export farmers' products are trying to keep prices down.

He asked Bergland for additional testimony today detailing "what you could do to relieve this situation. ... If you can do nothing, we'd like to know that point blank."

Maintaining the country is threatened with economic depression, Whitten said, "We've got to treat agriculture equally" with the other 97 percent of the nation.

The farmers want supports raised to 90 percent of parity, a theoretical measurement of prices and expenses based on 1910-14 conditions.

World cotton output expected to increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — World cotton output could increase sharply this year, meaning there is much uncertainty about prices American farmers will get for their 1979 crop.

But the Agriculture Department says domestic mill use of cotton may hold fairly steady through the coming year and that exports will continue relatively high.

The department's outlook board said Wednesday mill use of cotton in the 1979-80 marketing year beginning Aug. 1 "is expected to remain near this season's" level of about 6.3 million bales.

But the board said in a preliminary report that domestic cotton use next season could range between 5.7 million and 6.7 million bales, "depending on general economic activity."

Cotton production in Milk supply to increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Department officials are still predicting that milk production could go up this year after showing a slight decline in 1978.

After increasing for two years to the highest level since 1965, milk production declined about 1 percent in 1978 to 121.9 billion pounds.

Howard W. Hjort, the department's chief economist, told a House appropriations subcommittee Tuesday that milk production this year "is expected to be slightly larger" than in 1978.

1978 dropped to 10.8 million bales from 14.4 million produced by U.S. farmers in 1977. Strong export demand helped boost prices to an average of 60.5 cents a pound through December, compared to 52.3 cents for the entire 1977-78 marketing year.

"Some price weakness began in late 1978, however, partly reflecting anticipated larger production in 1979," the report said.

In a survey Jan. 1, growers indicated they plan to boost cotton plantings to about 14 million acres this year, up 6 percent from 1978.

"This season's higher cotton acreage led to increased cotton acreage and production in 1979 here and abroad," the report said.

"Thus, while the outlook for 1979-80 is highly tentative at this date, prospects point to a rebuilding of world cotton stocks" which are expected to drop to 18 million bales by Aug. 1, the smallest reserve in eight years, it said.

Cotton exports this season are projected at around 6 million bales against 5.5 million in 1977-78, reflecting strong demand from China, South Korea and Japan. "U.S. exports are expected to remain at a relatively high level in 1979-80 but could slip a little below this season's expected level," the report said.

Permian Basin areas gain 81 more oil, gas projects

The headquarters office in Midland of District 8 of the Railroad Commission of Texas last week handled 30 requests from operators to drill new oil or gas projects in the sprawling district.

The Permian Basin total, including West Texas and southeast New Mexico, totaled 81 for the week. The projected new tests included 16 wildcats and 65 operations in proven field areas.

In District 8, 28 field projects and two wildcats were staked, with Reeves County getting both the wildcats.

Fourteen operations were announced for District 7-C, headquartered in San Angelo. Three of those requests were for wildcat operations, one each in Concho, Crockett and Irion counties.

Andrews County in District 8 gained the most new projects in West Texas, seven. All are in proven producing areas.

Permian Basin areas gain 81 more oil, gas projects

The headquarters of the Railroad Commission of Texas last week handled 30 requests from operators to drill new oil or gas projects in the sprawling Permian Basin.

The Permian Basin total, including West Texas and southeast New Mexico, totaled 81 for the week. The projected new tests included 16 wildcats and 65 operations in proven field areas.

In District 8, 28 field projects and two wildcats were staked, with Reeves County getting both the wildcats.

Fourteen operations were announced for District 7-C, headquartered in San Angelo. Three of those requests were for wildcat operations, one each in Concho, Crockett and Irion counties.

Andrews County in District 8 gained the most new projects in West Texas, seven. All are in proven producing areas.

Lea County, N.M., was the Basin leader from the standpoint of new locations with nine—three wildcats and six field operations.

NEW YORK (AP) —

From Henry Ford to Billy Carter, from Oliver Brown to Alan Bakke, from the Holocaust to anti-boycott legislation, the Anti-Defamation League has involved itself, as one official says sheepishly, in "a catholicity of interests."

"We like to think of ourselves as the professional experts in the field of prejudice," says Benjamin Epstein, who retired Feb. 1 after 30 years as ADL's national director.

Indeed, since its inception in 1913, when 15 prominent Chicago Jews convened the league's organizational meeting, the ADL has battled not only anti-Semitism, but has also struggled "to secure justice and fair treatment to all citizens alike," as its charter states.

Through a worldwide network of offices and B'nai B'rith anti-defamation committees, a $10 million budget and a prolific stream of news releases, publications and speakers, the organization exposes and responds to bigotry; and tries to promote a climate in which prejudice will not flourish.

AND, ALTHOUGH ADL officials don't like to be called lobbyists, the league is one of the most potent lobbies in the Jewish community. Its representatives frequently appear at congressional hearings and meet with individual legislators and members of the executive branch.

In one of the more recent examples of ADL's clout on Capitol Hill, the league, together with the Business Roundtable—officers from many of America's largest corporations—drew up the outline of a bill, eventually signed into law, to break up an Arab boycott of firms that deal with Israel.

to achieve its broader goal of fighting all discrimination, the ADL—technically, the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, the Jewish fraternal organization with which it is affiliated—works closely with civil rights groups, educational institutions and the business community, says Epstein.

Epstein points proudly to the friend-of-the-court brief ADL filed on behalf of plaintiff Oliver Brown and others in Brown vs. Board of Education, the case in which the Supreme Court outlawed segregation in public schools and set the stage for the civil rights movement.
