Proposals 'welcome'

TOKYO (AP) - Deputy Premier Teng Hsiao-ping said today that his government "'wholeheartedly welcomed" proposals in the U.N. Security Council calling for the withdrawal of Chinese troops from Vietnam and Vietnamese troops from Cambodia, the Kyodo news service reported from Peking Kyodo said Teng added: "We would not make that a bargaining condition." It said that was taken to mean that China might pull out its forces out of Vietnam even if Vietnam did not withdraw from Cambodia.

Raid reported

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (AP) - The Rhodesian air force made its first raid on Angolan territory today, bombing a "very large" training base for Joshua Nkomo's guerrillas, the Rhodesian military command announced.

A communique said the 1950svintage Rhodesian Canberra bombers and Hawker-Hunter fighters flew across Zambia to make the attack and all returned safely.

Risk 'higher'

WASHINGTON (AP) - Many amputees run a much higher than normal risk of developing cardiovascular disease and dying of heart attacks, says a new study.

The study of amputations resulting from injuries, done for the Veterans Administration, is the first solid evidence of a link between amputations and heart disease. VA spokesmen say it could mean higher benefits for some veterans.

Soviets in orbit

MOSCOW (AP) - Two Soviet cosmonauts circled the Earth today making preparations to dock with the Salyut 6 space station.

Tass, the Soviet news agency, reported that the flight by Vladimir Lyakhov and Valery Ryumin aboard the Soyuz 32 spaceship was proceeding normally in its second day. There was no indication when they would link up with the space station, which has been in orbit for 16 months and has been host to a number of space crews.

New offensive predicted in Vietnam border war

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) -Sources in Peking predict a big Chinese offensive in the Vietnam border war in a few days, Japan's Kyodo news service reported, while Hanoi claimed China is sending in more reinforcements after losing 4,000 troops in four Vietnamese counter-

Kyodo said sources in the Chinese capital told it the goal of the intensified "punitive action" against Vietnam would be to destroy at least one tary bases and artillery emplacements near the border.

But British reporters in Peking said Vice Premier Wang Chen told them the Chinese invasion force would not try to advance down the Red River valley toward Hanoi.

Kyodo said Peking Radio reported Chinese troops had engaged Vietnamese army regulars in hand-to-hand fighting near the village of Dong Dang, seven miles from the key northeast town of Lang Son. The broadcast said a Chinese battalion overran five hilltop position near Dong Dang but gave no casualty figures and did not say when the battle

Hanoi Radio claimed the counterattacking troops killed almost 4,000 Chinese and destroyed 160 tanks in weekend battles. It claimed a total of 16,000 Chinese killed since the invasion began Feb. 17.

There was no way of verifying the claims of either side, but intelligence sources in Bangkok believe the Vietnamese casualty figures are exag-

Hanoi said Vietnamese forces counter-attacked at Tan Lang, in Lai Chau province northwest of Hanoi; at Thanh Thuy, in Ha Tuyen province north of the capital; in the Tong Dang district of Lang Son and along eastwest Highway 4, which parallels the border in Cao Bang and Lang Son provinces.

Intelligence specialists in Washington say about 75,000 Chinese troops appear to have driven up to 20 miles into Vietnam in places but the average penetration of the offensive is put at 12-15 miles. At the start of the invasion, U.S. sources said China had about 225,000 men massed on the bor-

On the diplomatic front, the U.N. Security Council debated China's invasion of Vietnam and Vietnam's invasion of Cambodia for the third day in New York. Representatives of Thailand, Indonesia, Malaysia, Singapore, the Philippines and Japan joined the Western powers in calling for an end to the fighting between Vietnam and China.

However, the United States and its allies were still unable to draw up a resolution that would not be vetoed by Chinese or by the Soviet Union, Vietnam's ally. The council debate was suspended until Tuesday.

The Soviet news agency Tass attacked U.S. Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal's visit to China, calling it a "clear encouragement" to Chinese moves against Vietnam. Blumenthal, in Peking for trade talks, said at a banquet Sunday that further improvement in U.S.-China ties could depend on a quick end to the border war. He said Peking was risking a wider war and loss of world support.

The London Observer reported that a telephone call from President Carter prompted British Prime Minister James Callaghan to slow down negotiations for the sale of British Harrier vertical take-off fighterbombers to China. The talks were not cancelled, but Callaghan agreed that no decision would be made on the sale until the end of the war, the newsaper said

China said it invaded Vietnam to "teach Vietnam a lesson" after months of border provocations.

Sun-watching prospects dim

SEATTLE (AP) - Cloudy, drizzling skies greeted thousands of skywatchers at daybreak in the Pacific Northwest today, dimming pros-pects for a good look at the last total eclipse of the sun in North America this century.

Sunrise came shortly before 7 a.m. about an hour before the moon started its march across the sky in front of the bright orange disc of the sun.

Scientists, amateur astronomers and the curious gathered on parking lots, porches, decks and grassy knolls, huddled in blankets with jugs of juice and other eye-openers to await the eclipse, which was to be nationally televised on ABC.

Odds on the prospects of cloud-cover clearing enough to provide a look at the gradual blacking out of the sun were slim as the National Weather Service issued hourly eclipse reports on sky conditions.

A mattress of clouds thousands of feet thick gave promise of turning the eclipse into the greatest cosmic disappointment since the Comet Kohoutek turned tail and disappeared into the heavens five years ago with hardly a peep at its ballyhooed brilliance.

Weather forecasters said chances for a good view of the solar spectacle improve as the path moves eastward, with viewers at Lewistown, Mont., having a 50-50 chance of seeing the moon-darkened sun.

Viewers in Goldendale and Yakima, Wash., were given only a 30 percent chance and in Missoula, Mont., eclipse-watchers had only a 10 percent chance of seeing anything but low-flying birds.

As a Pacific front pushed the clouds in from the coast, observers aloft were the only eclipse-chasers with a guaranteed chance to see what they

Among groups chartering planes, the Seattle Science Center offered an unobstructed view plus a champagne brunch 35,000 feet above the Columbia River gorge. The ride on a chartered Alaska Airlines 727 jetliner cost $115 Today's eclipse was the first total eclipse visible in the United States in nearly nine years and another will not come around until 2017. A total solar eclipse occurs when the moon moves between the sun and Earth.

The 175-mile-wide moon shadow was due to hit the West Coast near Portland, Ore., at 8:13 a.m. PST and cross Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Montana, North Dakota, Saskatcjewan, Manitoba, Ontario and Quebec at more than 3,000 mph. Along that path, the eclipse was to last from 45 seconds to a top of 2 minutes, 36 seconds - in Helena, Mont.

Other parts of North America had to settle for a partial eclipse - weather permitting. Despite the overcast, thousands of travelers from around the country mobbed small towns of the Pacific Northwest and northern Great Plains in a replay of the solar mania that seems to grip humans when the moon blocks the view of the sun.

Ira Schneider, 46, of New York City led a group of 75 amateur astronomers to Lewistown. He went to South American last year for a total eclipse in Colombia, but he was foiled - by clouds. Still his mood was upbeat.

'There is a festive air about the whole occasion," Schneider said, as Lewistown's 8,000 residents girded for an expected 4,000 visitors. "People are very elated and excited even if they are usually conservative and

School authorities in Yakima, Wash., and Butte, Mont., ordered schools to open an hour early so children would be in class and not staring at the eclipse, possibly damaging their eyes. Pendleton, Ore., school officials urged parents to keep children home until after the eclipse.

Turing the last total eclipse visible in the United States - on March 7, 1970 - 121 people suffered permanent eye damage from looking directly at

Although the eclipse attracted throngs of amateurs, none of America's major solar observatories sent a scientific expedition.

Invitation puts Begin in spotlight

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Carter wants Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin to come to Camp David by the end of the week to try to complete peace treaty terms with

The presidential announcement Sunday put Begin in the spotlight because it would be up to him to either approve or reject a combination of undisclosed U.S. and Egyptian proposals for dealing with the Palestin-

The door was left open for Egyptian President Anwar Sadat to join the summit session in the Maryland mountains if the negotiations succeed. In the meantime, Egypt would be represented by Prime Minister Mustafa Khalil.

Begin's response is expected after a special Cabinet meeting Tuesday. A government source in Israel said Begin was not likely to attend without

In Jerusalem today, however, Begin told a group of Dutch reporters: "It's up to President Sadat to come or not to come.... It's not a question of anyone's personal partici-

"Our country is a democracy and the government and the Knesset (Parliament) take the decisions," he added. "In Egypt, President Sadat is the man who makes most of the decisions. The issue is between the two countries, and not two individuals." New U.S. ideas for resolving the Palestinian dispute reportedly were submitted by Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance at Camp David last week in talks with Khalil and Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan.

The idea is to link the treaty to civil self-rule for the 1.1 million Palestinian Arabs living on the Israeli-held west bank of the Jordan River and in the Gaza district.

The Begin government does not want peace with Egypt to be dependent on future negotiations over the Palestinians, particularly because no Palestinian leader has indicated he is willing to participate in those talks.

Iranian press reports execution, floggings

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) - The execution of another official of Shah Mohmmad Reza Pahlavi's secret police and public floggings for violators of Islamic law were reported today.

The newspaper Andegan reported that Mohammad Hossein Naderi, the secret police's torture expert in the central city of Isfahan, was brought to Tehran and executed by a firing squad Sunday night. There was no confirmation of the report from aides of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, whose security committee has executed eight generals and a police commander accused of setting a theater fire that killed hundreds in Abadan last year.

Two other police officers were reported shot by firing squad Feb. 19 in Najafabad, central Iran, for killing anti-shah demonstrators. There have been unconfirmed reports of other executions by vigilante groups.

Execution sentences have been passed by special revolutionary tribunals set up by Khomeini. The ancient tradition of public floggings for violations of Moslem law has been revived by Islamic courts. They have been administering justice under the supervision of local religious leaders and applying Moslem law since Khomeini's revolution was victorious on

Feb. 11. Press reports said a large crowd in the city of Zanjan, 180 miles north of Tehran, looked on Sunday as a thief was given 25 lashes for breaking into a widow's house. A crowd of 5,000 turned out in the eastern city of Kerman when two youths got 30 lashes each for drinking liquor. In Yasooj, two men got 80 lashes each for drink-

Tehran Radio reported Sunday that Khomeini called on foreign nations for the delivery of former Prime Minister Shahpour Bakhtiar, indicating that he had escaped abroad.

Bakhtiar, a longtime opponent of the shah who tried unusccessfully to stem the Khomeini revolution by getting the ruler to agree to a limited monarchy, disappeared after he resigned Feb. 11. He was reported under arrest or under the protective custody of his successor and former political ally, Prime Minister Mehdi Bazar-

Khomeini's aides staged a show of force Sunday to counter leftist guerrilla groups challenging the conservatism of his revolution. Some 2,000 troops of the new National Guard marched through Tehran shouting "Long live Khomeini!"

Aides said the Shiite Moslem patriarch would return this week to Qum, the holy city 100 miles south of Tehran where he was the religious leader until the shah exiled him more than 14

One aide said Khomeini "will be as active as he was in Tehran." But there was speculation that his departure might enhance the authority of Bazargan and his government and diminish the authority of Khomeini's revolutionary committee, which has been acting as a separate government answerable to no one but the ayatol-

Khomeini met Saturday with Soviet Ambassador Vladimir Vinogradov and told him Iran wants good relations with all countries but will "fight with all our strength" against foreign interference.

It was Khomeini's first meeting with a representative of a major foreign power. His warning against interference was believed intended for the United States as well as the Russians. A U.S. Embassy spokesman said he knew of no plans for Ambassador William Sullivan, who had close ties to the shah, to meet Khomeini.

Associated Press correspondent Robert H. Reid reported from Abadan, Iran's oil capital, that the oil industry is in the hands of radical workers who demand a major role in deciding who gets the oil and the price to be paid for it.

Oil workers said they expect the government to heed their demands for redistribution of oil income, an end to foreign control of the industry, the right to reject management appointees and a substantial increase in oil prices above the level set by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting

Oralia Corrales files for Place 6 position

A native Midlander and community volunteer today set up the second contested race to appear on the April 7 school board ballot. Oralia Corrales filed this morning for the Place 6 position currently held by Trustee Edward E. Runyan,

Mrs. Corrales, an insurance underwriter, outlined seven election goals, including maintaining the two high school concept, continuing to seek academic and vocational excellence and furthering a balanced curriculum - including fine arts, academics, athletics and career aware-

Other goals listed in her prepared statement include "continuing a meaningful staff development program for educators, keeping effective compensatory programs and screening others to meet the needs of students, placing a top priority on fiscal responsibility, with budget increases carefully scrutinized and justified, and instilling discipline and respect for authority in every classroom in the district.

Mrs. Corrales is past director of Family Services lease-purchase housing program and was a field worker for the Human Relations Council. She currently serves on the Midland County Hospital District citizens advisory committee and has served on the Governor's Conference for the Aged.

She was a member of the Committee on Emergency School Act, designed to help ease the transition for desegregation of Midland's schools.

Ship sinks after being hit by tanker

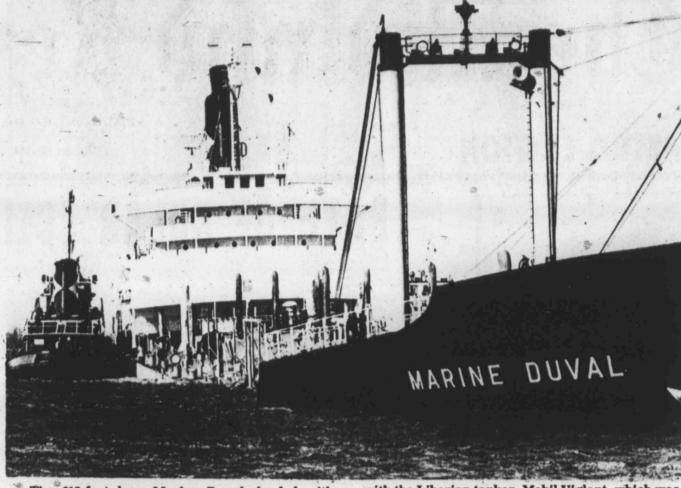

PORT ARTHUR, Texas (AP) -The Coast Guard tried to lighten a 612-foot ship loaded with sulfur that blocked the Neches River today. It sank after being struck by a Liberian tanker Sunday during turbulence on the river, a major shipping channel in the Beaumont-Port Arthur area.

No one was hurt, and officials said no pollutants were leaking into the river, but three ships were backed up waiting to use the blocked channel.

The ship, the Marine Duval, was not completely submerged, and Coast Guard crews began pumping the sulfur onto a barge Sunday night. A spokesman said they would later try to pump water out of the ship's hull.

All 19 persons aboard the Marine Duval got off safely after it was rammed amidships while maneuvering in the river about 4 a.m., a Coast Guard official said.

"She is crossways in the middle of the channel of the river. The vessel has sunk right where she's at," Chief Petty Officer Bill Odom of New Orleans Coast Guard said. "She's not submerged, but she's sitting on the

China seeks U.S. help in blocking Taiwan

PEKING (AP) - China's finance minister asked Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal for help today in removing Taiwan from four international financial organizations as Blumenthal opened talks on settling $197 million in U.S. claims for property seized by Chinese Communists.

According to a U.S. official who attended the first day of talks, Chinese Finance Minister Chang Chingfu said he "deplored" the fact that the institutions still recognize Taiwan, which he referred to as a "province of the motherland."

'The government of the People's Republic of China is the only representative of the people of China,' Chang was quoted as saying.

The World Bank, the International Monetary Fund, the International Finance Corporation and the Asian Development Bank were the four institutions Chang mentioned, said the U.S. official, Assistant Treasury Secretary Joseph Laitin.

Laitin quoted Chang as asking the United States "for help in bringing about a prompt settlement of this strain resulting from Blumenthals criticism of the Chinese invasion of Vietnam during his toast at a banquet in his honor Sunday night. He said then that if the conflict continues, it could slow the development of Chinese-American relations because "our bilateral relations, particularly our commercial and scientific relations, will only flourish in a world of peace and stability."

Blumenthal is expected to express the U.S. government's concern over the China-Vietnam war again Tuesday afternoon when he meets with Deputy Premier Teng Hsiao-ping.

The secretary is seeking settlement of nearly 400 claims by American businesses and individuals. The largest is one for $53.8 million by the Boise Cascade Corp. for the Shanghai Power Co., a subsidiary.

Until the American claims are settled, the U.S. Congress will be reluctant to give favorable tariff treatment to Chinese goods or to approve loans by the Export-Import Bank to help finance Chinese purchases from the United states.

Blumenthal said he would also begin discussion of a bilateral trade agreement under which both countries would agree on both the amount and kind of goods they would trade. He told the Chinese the United States also wants agreements on shipping and air traffic between the two coun-

CIA suspected James Angleton might have been Soviet agent

WASHINGTON (AP) - A published report says CIA officials once developed a case that the agency's counterintelligence chief James Angleton might be a Soviet agent, but William Colby, the CIA director who pressured Angleton into retirement, says he never had any doubts about his loyalty.

Newsweek magazine reported Sunday that a special CIA unit searching for a "mole," or high-level Soviet agent within the CIA's ranks, at one time developed a case against Angleton, but that top agency officials dismissed it in 1974 as too circumstantial and speculative.

Newsweek's report follows a year of printed and private speculation about the possibility of a Soviet mole inside the CIA. Fueled by the case of a low-level former CIA employee convicted recently of giving the Soviets a secret U.S. spy satellite manual, interest in the agency's decade-long search for a mole has generated newspaper and magazine stories and even has been treated in a book. Colby himself has begun public speeches by denying he is the mole. The mole search was conducted largely by Angleton, and Newsweek reports that, although nothing ever was proved, a score of CIA officers came under suspicion of being moles during the 1960s and the careers of several suffered as a result.

Although Angleton and three of his top aides were forced into retirement in 1974 while Colby was still CIA director, Colby said in a telephone interview Sunday night, "Any such

Three Midlanders arrested in Stanton burglary

STANTON - A trip back for seconds apparently was the undoing Saturday of three Midlanders who were arrested in connection with the burglary of a Stanton drug store. Charged with burglary are Billie Lynn Bailey, 24; Mitchell Melvin Bailey, 18, and Dennis Lee McElroy, 19, all of the Haystack Apartments.

Stanton Police Chief Jerry Register said three persons were seen with a car backed up to the pharmacy and arrested as they were leaving about 8:40 p.m. Saturday. Police said they recovered 24,496 pills, about $400 worth of general merchandise and a safe which held $1,000 in cash and narcotics valued at about $2,800, Register said.

Police said the retail value of the stolen items was approximately $11,-000, but their street resale value would have been between $20,000 and Register said the three told authorities they had been in the store earlier and came back to get the safe.

McElroy and Mitchel Melvin Bailey were in the Martin County Jail today in lieu of $15,000 bond each. Ms. Bailey was free on $15,000 bond.

allegation wasn't a factor in Angleton's departure."

Colby said, "I never had any doubt about his loyalty at all. We had differences professionally but not on that subject." Asked about the case that was developed, Colby replied, "I frankly have forgotten the details of the matter and really can't com-

In his book, "Honorable Men," Colby said he decided to remove Angleton because "I looked in vain for some tangible results from the counterintelligence field and found little or none." He complained about Angleton's "tortuous theories" about Soviet agents in western intelligence agen-

The magazine said the case against Angleton was the result of an extensive two-year investigation of his career. That case stressed Angleton's heavy reliance on a defector from Soviet intelligence named Anatoly Golitsin and instances in which CIA files showed no action by Angleton on important leads, Newsweek said.

"I don't believe it," said Angleton in a telephone interview Sunday night. "It's a lot a garbage. There may have been individuals or an individual who did something but to my certain knowledge no organized group did such a study or had such suspicions."

Warm, windy weather expected to continue for the Permian Basin

More warm, windy weather is in store for the Permian Basin, according to the weatherman.

Today's fair skies should become partly cloudy for tonight and Tuesday with the high Tuesday in the mid-60s. a spokesman for the National Weather Service office at Midland Regional Airport said.

Low tonight should be near 40, with winds from the south remaining at 10 to 15 mph through Tuesday.

High Sunday was 58 degrees with the overnight low dipping to 29. Record temperatures for the date are 83 degrees set in 1950 and 14 set in 1934. No rain is mentioned in the forecast to change the .26 inch figure for February or the .42 inch annual rainfall accumulation thus far.

Residents of surrounding Permian Basin towns were sharing the bright skies this morning, with most reporting clear skies and crisp temperatures early today.

Temperatures dipped below the freezing mark overnight along the Red River and in parts of West Texas. But forecasters predicted a general warming trend would continue today Early morning readings west of a line extending from Mineral Wells through Junction to Del Rio were in the 20s. Marfa reported a 20 degree reading, Wink and Junction had 26 and Dalhart had a 27.

Central Texas had readings in the 30s, and along the coast the temperature climbed into the 40s.

Van Horn council ousts police chief

VAN HORN - Van Horn Police Chief Buddy Harris is out of a job today after a vote at a special session of the City Council Saturday.

The move in the hastily called session came after months of discussions on ways to cut expenses in the city budget. Although the police department has been within its budget, the city's sewer and water department is in financial trouble The reason the police department was singled out for budget cuts has created controversy in this predominantly Mexico-American town.

Many Mexican-Americans in the community reportedly contend discrimination against the two Mexican-American patrolmen on the police force under Harris is the real reason for the action.

Larry David Riggan of 3005 Meadowbrook Drive was hospitalized for treatment of multiple contusions. Also injured in the accident were two Odessans, Mike James Atkins, 17, and Alex Twig Fraley, 21. The trio was injured about 4 p.m.

Saturday when vehicles driven by Atkins and Riggan collided on East 42nd Street near its intersection with Grandview. Atkins and Fraley were treated and released from the hospital, said a hospital spokesman.

Governors seek out expert in fighting battle of the budget WASHINGTON (AP)-The nation's governors to help Uncle Sam get his books in order. But this turned to a congressional expert today for guidance brought on another brouhaha from their colleagues in their ever more difficult and confusing drive to force the federal government to balance its budget without crimping theirs.

The expert, Rep. Peter W. Rodino, D-N.J., chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, was the featured speaker for the first general session of the National Governors' Association winter meeting, where the battle of the budget already was raging.

Kentucky Gov. Julian Carroll, the group's chairman, said he invited Rodino because Carroll thinks the movement to call a constitutional convention that would draft a balanced-budget amendment is becoming as confusing as it is heated.

said on a television interview show that he would press his crusade for such a convention. Carroll said later this was "reckless" behavior.

Brown and Carroll, both Democrats, did agree that the states should be prepared to do without their allotment of federal revenue-sharing aid if necssary

But the issue took on new fire after California voters launched the so-called taxpayers' revolt last summer. Brown, who at first opposed his state's tax-restriction initiative, is now leading a drive to Sunday, California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., force federal fiscal restraint.

Brown said he would talk to fellow govenors during their three-day meeting here and perhaps travel to other states to preach the cause. He said California cut back its spending after the voters' mandate last year and the same kind of scare might get action

"I think the federal government, if they feel the harsh winds of this call to convention close enough, they're going to take the same attitude and start cutting a lot of things," Brown said.

Carroll said he favored a less-drastic approach and said governors are seriously concerned about some congressional threats to balance the federal budget by ending aid to the states.

Critics of the convention idea say such a body would not be limited to the budget question, but might rewrite or greatly alter the Constitution.

Clements explains cutting pay raise

Bill Clements, whose proposed budget slashed a raise for schoolteachers recommended by the Legisla-tive Budget Board, says the board added the teachers' pay raise only as an afterthought when it realized it had a surplus of funds.

"I just don't agree with that kind of budgetary control and discipline, Clements said in a "Capital Eye" news interview program broadcast Sun-

Clements trimmed the budget board's recommendations before passing on the proposed spending plan to legislators in hopes of giving $1 billion in tax relief, as he had promised during his campaign last year. The Legislative Budget Board was working on their budget and they reached the last day and they found out that they had a $600 million or $700 million surplus, so they said, 'Let's just give a big raise to the teachers," the governor said. "I don't think their foresight and their judgment in this regard should override," he said. "They end up with a lump sum, sethey say, 'Well, we've got to get rid of this some way, so we

The budget board recommended an annual 5.1 percent raise for schoolteachers, who now get raises from the state ranging from 3.2 percent to 4.9 percent annually, depending on their experience. Clements' proposed budget included a 5.1 percent raise for state employes, and he was asked about the gap between them and teach-

"What I think may well happen in the legislature is that our schoolteachers and our state employees will be put on exactly the same basis," Clements said. The teachers and the state employees should receive the same percentage increases."

Connally invites backers to White House picnic

FLORESVILLE, Texas (AP) -John Connally's hometown supporters had something to look forward to today

They've been invited to a picnic on the White House lawn.

The candidate for the Republican presidential nomination made the offer Sunday as close to 1,000 neighbors and friends turned out for a courthouse square birthday honoring him and his wife, Nellie

Monday morning, Connally was to appear at a breakfast in McAllen, then travel to Corpus Christi and Dallas today.

Juanita Mosher, a leader in the local Connally drive, reported that 2,000 persons in Floresville, which has a listed population of 4,026, had signed a petition saying they would support Connally in the next presidential elec-

"The rest of you all better get on that petition,' Connally shouted, " 'cause I'm going to have everybody that signs up for a get-together on the South Lawn of the White House."

There were whoops and hollers, and a rush for the petition table. The Floresville rally came in the midst of a seven-day Texas tour to touch 22 Texas cities. Connally has said he must carry Texas, if the state has a presidential primary, or he would not stand a chance for the nomination.

"This county is way on the Democratic side," said Wilson County Sheriff Asa Fuller, "but I'll guarantee you it will go solid for John Connally in the general election.

The town's only hardware store carried a sign: "Get your Connally for President T-shirts here." Many were wearing them Sunday. Six of Connally's grandchildren were present at the rally, some of them wearing T-shirts that said: "Gully for President." It seems that one grandchild could not say "governor," so he became "gully," and the others picked it up.

Sixty-three housewives cooked as many cakes and they were joined in one big cake that covered the top of a large table. The design was a map of the United States with the simple notation: "Nov. 4, 1980," which is the date of the next presidential elec-

Unemployment shows increase

Unemployment in Midland County increased slightly during January, according to a spokesman for the Texas Employment Commission.

The labor force also went up by 1 percent during this period, bringing the total number of people working in the county to 43,260. That put employment growth for the past year at 5.6 percent, the spokesman said. December recorded 43,050 persons working with only a 3.4 percent unemployment rate.

The rise in unemployment was attributed to seasonal effects and bad weather conditions. But the commission indicated it expects Midland to bounce back with the advent of spring and the Easter shopping season.

Forecast for April calls for 44,240 persons to be working and only a 2.9 percent unemployment rate. That would reflect a total of only 1,300 persons not working, down from the 1,760 reported by the TEC

The total civilian labor force should keep going up, according to employment authorities. They expect Midland County to have 45,540 persons eligible to work in April. In January, there were only 45,020 According to officials, an after-the-holidays slump

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Facing a 613-yard hole, a par 5, and you have a great tee shot with a driver where the wind isn't much of a factor, what club do you take from your bag for that second golf shot?

Lanny Wadkins just kept his driver and used it again from the fairway and got close enough to the 17th hole to use a sand wedge to the green even though he wasn't in the sand.

The ball stopped two feet from the hole, Wadkins carded a birdie and that brought him the championship of the Glen Campbell-Los Angeles Open

Indiana State's Hodges wanting to go first class

By KEN RAPPOPORT AP Sports Writer

Bill Hodges just doesn't want to go to the NCAA basketball playoffs - he wants to go first class.

"We'd like to win our conference tournament title because of the bye we would earn in the first round, notes the coach of the Indiana State Sycamores

By winning the regular-season championship of the Missouri Valley Conference, the Sycamores have virtually assured themselves of a bid to the prestigious postseason tourney.

THE NATION'S second-ranked team will go into the MVC playoffs this week with a sparkling 26-0 record after putting the finishing touches on the regular season Sunday with a 109-84 beating of Wichita State.

"We don't feel any pressure," said Hodges, alluding to his team's perfect record. "And therefore we don't need a loss to take any pressure off us."

The Sycamores will ride into the MVC playoffs against West Texas State Tuesday night on the wings of Larry Bird's finest scoring performance of his career. Indiana State's fabulous forward registered 49 points and collected 19 rebounds in Sunday's regionally televised game.

'We came out and played with so much emotion early that we played to a peak ... and after that, we hit a valley and decided to call a timeout," said Hodges, who watched his team build a big early lead, then lose most

HODGES STRAIGHTENED out his team's problems after a while,

"I told our guys to get tough on defense, and from there on out it helped us on both ends," he said.

Meanwhile, Jacksonville officially became the first team to gain an NCAA playoff berth by winning the Sun Belt Conference tournament Sunday with a 68-54 decision over South Florida. Thirteenth-ranked Louisville, the Metro Conference regular season champion, also played Sunday, dropping a 91-76 exhibition game to the Russian national team. The Cardinals had beaten Tulane 95-71 on

In a key game Saturday, sixthranked Duke defeated fourth-ranked North Carolina 47-40 to tie for the Atlantic Coast Conference championship. But the Tar Heels later won the draw for a first-round bye in the ACC playoffs, which start on Thursday.

THE BIG TEN race was tightened as a result of Saturday's action, as No. 7 Michigan State whipped Illinois 76-62, No. 12 Iowa beat No. 14 Ohio State 83-68 and No. 18 Purdue defeated Michigan 67-59. That set up a threeway tie between Michigan State, Iowa and Ohio State, with Purdue one game behind with two games to go. Elsewhere, UCLA maintained a one-game lead over Southern Cal in the Pacific-10 race with a 110-102 triple-overtime victory over Washington State: third-ranked Notre Dame beat La Salle 93-70 and fifth-ranked Louisiana State was upset by Mississippi

State 65-57. Also, eighth-ranked Syracuse walloped Colgate 113-62; No. 9 Marquette was upset by No. 20 DePaul 61-60; No. 15 Temple turned back Dayton 66-63; No. 16 Detroit stopped Loyola of Chicago 72-69 and No. 17 Georgetown beat Holy Cross 63-54 in double over-

IT TOOK Bird nearly seven minutes to score his first point, then he made up for lost time. The Indiana State star scored 27 of his points in the second half as the Sycamores pulled away from a tenuous two-point lead to 30 deep into the game. Carl Nicks added 25 points for the winners.

Center James Ray scored 15 points and guard Paul DeVito added 12 as Jacksonville beat South Florida in the Sun Belt playoffs. Regular-season. champion South Alabama wasn't even in the finals, having lost to Jacksonville in the semifinals Friday

ANATOLI MISHKIN scored 10 points to lead a balanced Russian team past Louisville in a nationally televised game. The Soviet Union built a 25-point lead with just over five minutes gone in the second half, virtually sewing it up at that point.

"We tried to get the ball inside against them and when we got it in there, they just intimidated us," said Louisville Coach Denny Crum. "They were very intimidating with their

Jim Spanarkel scored 17 points and Duke survived a surprise four-corner delay game by North Carolina in the early stages to beat the Tar Heels. The Tar Heels went into their patented stall just seconds into the game after falling behind 2-0. But the strategy stalled and they actually went into the dressing room at halftime without scoring a point. The Blue Devils led 7-0 at that juncture.

"The Duke crowd kept yelling, 'Play basketball," said North Carolina Coach Dean Smith. "But a team is foolish to play against the zone if they don't have to. I was hoping they would come out of their zone. I was really surprised when they didn't."

EARVIN JOHNSON scored 21 points, handed out 11 assists and collected 11 rebounds to lead Michigan State over Illinois. Ronnie Lester's 31 points powered Iowa over Ohio State. Purdue beat Michigan as Joe Barry Carroll scored 35.

Brad Holland, Roy Hamilton and Kiki Vanderweghe hit 10 straight free throws in the last three minutes of the third overtime to boost UCLA over Washington State; Bill Laimbeer's 19 points paced Notre Dame over La Salle; Wiley Peck's 21 points led Mississippi State over LSU.

MARTY HEADD and Louis Orr teamed for 34 points as Syracuse beat Colgate. Gary Garland's layup with four seconds left after a missed shot by teammate Clyde Bradshaw lifted DePaul over Marquette. Dodger pitcher raring to play

VERO BEACH, Fla. (AP) - Reliever Terry Forster, who underwent surgery on his pitching elbow last November, says he'll be ready for the Los Angeles Dodgers' baseball season-opener on April 5.

Forster, the National League champions' top reliever last season with 22 saves, is currently throwing at only about 50 percent efficiency.

"I'll be 100 percent by the start of the season," said the 27-year-old lefthander after Sunday's rain-shortened workout at the Dodgers' spring training camp. "When I had the operation I did it with the idea that I'd be ready by the time the season started. I still feel that way.

"Right now I'm throwing about 15 minutes every day against a wall," added Forster. "I'm not going to cut loose for a while. The adhesions are still tight in my arm. Once I break those I'll be fine.

Los Angeles Manager Tom Lasorda has indicated that he'll open the sea-son with a nine-man pitching staff and a five-man starting rotation. He also said there remains a chance of the club making another trade, but until a decision is made on Forster any deals

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) -Lawyers for eight Oklahoma State athletes will file a federal lawsuit here Monday challenging the handling of a federal grant program, according to the Daily Oklahoman.

The Lynda Fillmore story for Monday's editions quotes attorneys James P. Linn and William Skepnek.

The lawyers said they will file suit on behalf of seven football players and one basketball player challenging Oklahoma State's handling of Basic Educational Opportunity Grant funds. They said other studentathletes contacted them but refused to sign affidavits joining in the lawsuit.

Connors pockets $100,000 payoff

DORADO, Puerto Rico (AP) -Top-seeded Jimmy Connors says success hasn't spoiled him, at least "not more than when I was a kid."

Interviewed after winning the $100,-000 dollar purse in a World Championship of Tennis tournament in Dorado, on Puerto Rico's north coast, Connors said that he's going to invest part of the money in "a place."
The 28-year-old Connors, who beat

Vitas Gerulaitis 6-5, 6-0, 6-4 and didn't lose a match during the weeklong six-man round-robin tournament, said he didn't know exactly where he'd like to buy a residence, but that it would be in a place where he could practice. Connors made it clear that it would not be a house. "I played well overall, but it's not easy to play expert tennis," Connors said when asked about some of the errors he made during Sunday's final match "The wind is different every day. I may have committed errors, but I still won the match."

Connors has defeated Gerulaitis more than a dozen times without a loss in the last several years, so his victory Sunday was expected. Gerulaitis has beat him only once, seven years ago, Connors said.

Asked about his style of playing, which starts off with a grunt every time he hits a ball, Connors said, "I let things shake me when I want them to shake me."

He proved that during the match, when several times he argued with linesmen over their calls. "Why can't we go hit them on the head?" Connors asked jokingly, referring to linemen who make bad calls. Connors said he has trained as a child by his mother and grandmother, but they realized he needed a man's influence, so Pancho Segura was brought in as his coach. He said, however, Segura's coaching was only a "psychological influence," although Connors is known for his two-handed backhand style that Segura made famous with a fore-

It was supposed to be an old fashioned Texas shootout, the winner being the team that was quickest on the draw. Instead it was the San Antonio Spurs' much-maligned defense that defused the Houston Rock-

"They can say what they want about our defense, but we just shut them down completely in the first half," said San Antonio Coach Doug Moe, whose team broke out to a 65-44 halftime lead and went on to beat the Rockets 127-107 Sunday.

The victory extended San Antonio's lead over Houston to three games in the National Basketball Association's Central Division.

While the Spurs lead the NBA in scoring, they rank third from the bottom in defense. But they held Houston to 14 points in the second period on 23 percent shooting, taking command of the game. Overall the Rockets shot just 37 percent, compared to a season mark of 49.6.

'The first half was the best half of basketball I've seen us play in three years here," said Moe. "It was awesome. The Rockets are the best pure shooting team going, but I never saw them shoot an open shot in the first

Wojtek Fibak topples Amaya in Denver Men's tennis finals

DENVER (AP) - It was a classic tennis matchup: The booming serve of Victor Amaya against the brilliant service-return game of Wojtek Fibak of Poland.

But even the towering Amaya seemed to have an inkling of what was in store. "Basically, I believe a great returner should win over a great server, if they're both on their games," Amaya said. And that's just what happened as Fibak, negating Amaya's big serve with a solid return game and some pinpoint passing shots, emerged with 6-4, 6-1 victory Sunday in the singles final of a $125,000 Denver men's tennis tournament. The triumph was worth $25,000 to Fibak, the tournament's sixth seed. The unseeded Amaya pocketed $12,-In the doubles final, second-seeded Stan Smith and Bob Lutz defeated the top-seeded tandem of Fibak and Tom Okker 7-6, 6-3. The winners shared $7,500 and the losers $4,500. The 6-foot-7 Amaya, who had unloaded 17 aces to knock off Arthur Ashe in the semifinals, managed only five aces against Fibak - all in the

Both players held service until the 10th game of the first set, when Fibak, cashing in on key passing shots, broke Amaya's serve. Three more well-placed passing shots gave Fibak another break early in the second set, and the Polish pro then broke again to take a commanding 5-1 lead. He then held serve in the next game to close out the match.

"Wojtek has such a great return that even when I'd hit a good serve, he'd often come up with a better shot on the return," said the 24-year-old Amaya, a former Michigan All-America

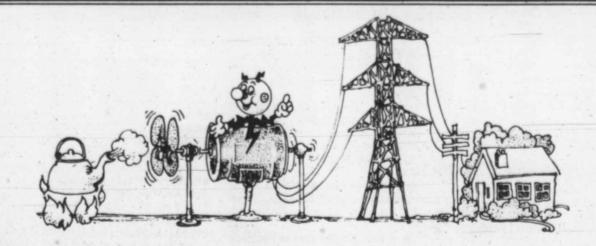

"I was trying to force him to beat me with passing shots and his re-turns, and he did," Amaya added. 'On his returns, he gets the ball down so low and so firm that it's hard to volley. And he was hitting his passing shots so close to the lines I couldn't get to them

"I didn't think I served that badly - he just returned great, and passed great, too. Amaya, meanwhile, was unable to break Fibak's serve, which isn't particularly overpowering.

"I didn't go for aces," the 26-year-old Fibak admitted. "I just tried to put in a safe first serve, as always. I was going to try to win with my volley, instead of my serve. Most of the time it worked.

Turnbull captures tough tennis win

DETROIT (AP) -Wendy Turnbull had served her 12th double fault of the match when she fell behind Virginia Ruzici 5-3 in the third and deciding set.

The scene was the singles championship Sun-day in Detroit's $150,000 women's professional

It's understandable that the 26-year-old Australian said she was "a bit nervous." It was her first trip to the finals on this season's tour and things looked bleak. But she went on to break Ruzici's serve, then held her own to even the match at 5-5. Both players then held service, sending the match into a 12-point tiebreaker.

Turnbull proceeded to handily win the tiebreaker 7-4 and the $30,first prize 7-5, 1-6,

"All I wanted to do was get my first serve in," said Turnbull after the match. "I was lucky when Virginia missed two straight forehands.

"All I could think about was that I had been down 5-3 in the first set, so I knew I could get back into the match."

The Australian, seeded No. 5, reached the final with an upset Saturday night over top-seeded Martina Navratilova 6-4, 1-6, 6-4. It was the first tournament this year in which Navratilova did not reach the singles

Turnbull made it a perfect day later by teaming with Betty Stove of the Netherlands to defeat Sue Barker and Ann Kiyomura 6-4, 7-6 for the tournament's doubles title. The winning team split $10,000.

Officials of the Ladies Professional

Off Association tried three times to start the third round, but only a few shots were hit before they gave up and scheduled the start for 9 a.m. EST today.

Jane Blaiock leads the event by 3 strokes.

HONG KONG — Greg Norman of Australia shot a final-round 68 and won the $100,000 Hong Kong Open Golf Championship by 3 strokes with a 7-under-par 273.

AUTO RACING
SYDNEY, Australia — Larry Perkins of Australia, driving an Elfin MR8, won the Rothmans international motor racing series with a second-place finish in the final event Sunday.
Perkins, who did not win a race in the four event series accomplated 35 points.

Perkins, who did not win a race in the four-event series, accumulated 35 points. Alfredo Costanzo was second with 28 and Warwick Brown third with 22.

Brown won the 160-kilometer, 57-lap race at the Oran Park circuit Sunday as only six of the 26 starters finished the endurance event.

HOCKEY

UNIONDALE, N.Y. — Mike Bossy of the New York Islanders tied a National Hockey League record Saturday when he scored in his 10th consecutive game.

The streak ended Sunday when the New York Rangers held him without a shot in a 3-2 victory over the Islanders.

The record-tying goal came on a power play at 4:54 of the first period against the Detroit Red Wings when he deflected a slap ahot by teammate Denis Potvin.

Bossy now shares the record with Andy Bathgate of the New York Rangers, who first established the modern record scoring streak at 10 games in 1962-63, and Bobbb Hull, who tied the mark in 1968-69 with the Chicago Black Hawks.

Aminoil USA geophysicist Mike Pilson says the only way to measure success of someone in his line. of work is to look at the track record for finding deposits of crude oil in natural gas. This task nas become increasingly difficult, he says, as more and more prospects have been drilled.

Aminoil geophysicist believes track record correct yardstick

HOUSTON - There are probably as many was to measure career success as there are careers. For actors, one measure of success is the Oscar. For a scientist, success might come in the form of a Nobel Prize. But for a geophysicists, says Ainoil USA's Mike Pilson, there's only one measure -the ability to find crude oil and natural gas.

Pilson, who has been a geophysicist for Aminoil since June of 1978, notes that for an individual in his line of work, success means "you've got to find commercial deposits of hydrocarbons wherever they happen to

He points out that this job has become more difficult over the years as more and more large prospective hydrocarbon structures have been drilled. Despite steady advancements in technology, the interpretation of geophysical data in an attempt to find smaller prospects is still an extremely subtle science.

It's not unusual to give two experienced geophysicists the same data, Pilson explains, and get remarkable different interpretations.

'The pressure is always there to make the best possible interpretation," Pilson continues, "because a geophysicist is measured by whether or not he actually finds hydrocarbons. That's always the bottom line."

TWA cancels six flights

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) - Trans World Airlines canceled six of its 53 flights out of Kansas City International Airport because of jet fuel shortages. The airline said five flights would be canceled today.

The cancellations, the airline's first since the widespread oil shortages caused by the Arab oil embargo of 1973, resulted from reductions in fuel from Texaco and Champlin, major TWA suppliers, said Larry Hilliard, director of corporate communications for the airline.

Texaco and other jet fuel suppliers reported earlier this month they were experiencing spot shortages. The tight supply has been caused by the cutoff of oil from Iran because of the political upheaval there and a travel boom that hit the nation's airlines last summer as deregulation led to re-

Two of the canceled TWA flights were to Chicago, two to St. Louis, one to Boston and one to Miami. They will be reinstated today, and TWA will cancel two flights to New York, one to St. Louis, one to Pittsburgh and one to Columbus, Ohio.

If fuel supplies increase, the full flight schedule could be restored by Tuesday, company spokesman Louis Fourie said in New York.

Passengers on the canceled flights Sunday were told of other flights available to their destinations, Hil-

C. W. King appointed

Charles W. King has been appointed manager of exploration of Union Oil Co. of California's Central Region in King previously was regional geo physicist for the company's Gulf Region in Houston.

In his new post, King will be re-sponsible for the company's onshore exploration activities throughout the continental United States, with the exception of the Pacific and Gulf coast areas.

King holds a B.S. degree in Geophy sics from the Massachussetts Insti-tute of Technology. He joined the company in 1963 and is a member of the Society of Exploration geophysi-cists and the Houston Geophysical Society.

Pilson began to acquire the skills to successfully search for oil and gas by attending Virginia State University and the University of Washington, where he received a master's degree in Geology.

"Even though I had several job offers after I graduated from Virginia State," he says, "I had made up my mind to continue studying for an advanced degree. I figured it would be a valuable asset as my career pro-

Pilson worked for one other oil company before joining Aminoil and says he was surprised to discover how little he knew about the practical aspects of geophysics once he began his professional career. "I discovered that academic training only familiarizes you with the terms you need to know and serves as a stepping stone into the dustry. It takes anywhere from 5 to 10 years to really become a professional in this business.

As a geophysicist, Pilson's responsibilities include interpreting geophysical data to map prospects, travelto field locations to monitor well tests and seismic work, and even dealing with various governmental agencies which require detailed reports on Aminoil's exploration and production

Pilson wants to improve his skills as an explorationist by working in as many different exploration areas as possible. This will enable him to eventually become familiar with a wide variety of potential hydrocarbon-bearing formations.

"When you are able to get experience in one area and then move on to something new," Pilson says, "a job remains challenging, and, for me, that's what keeps it interesting."

Dollar gasoline distant memory in many areas

By The Associated Press

Irritated at having to pay 83 cents for a gallon of gasoline in Chicago, or 72 cents in Houston? Think of motorists in Paris, where the price is $2.50

In the United States, there's a lot of talk about how soon gasoline will cost $1 a gallon. But in France, Jamaica, Belgium, Denmark and much of the world, a dollar a gallon is a distant memory rather than a future threat.

At $2.50 a gallon, the price in France is among the highest in the world. But an Associated Press survey found many nations where the price is nearly that high - $2.37 in Jamaica, $2.30 in Belgium and $2.28 in Denmark, for example.

Most other nations aren't far behind. Argentina, Italy, Spain, West Germany and India are among the many nations where gas prices are well above $1 a gallon.

And in many cases, the rising price of crude oil from the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries and the recent cutoff of Iranian oil are going to mean even higher prices.

UNLIKE THE United States, most foreign nations do not have their own supplies of oil. The United States can produce about half the oil it needs, blunting the impact of price rises on imports, but other nations must take the full brunt of any price increases or supply changes.

U.S. Government price controls keep the cost of most domestic crude oil below the price of imported crude. And gasoline taxes in the United States are substantially lower than those in most other nations.

Belgium got 20 percent of its oil from Iran before political turmoil shut down Iranian oil fields. That and the 5 percent increase instituted by OPEC Jan. 1 led to a rise in the price of regular gasoline in Belgium from $2.16 a gallon to $2.27, and of premium from $2.19 to $2.31. And Belgian oil companies say their supplies are

The price increase was the largest since one at the height of the Arab oil embargo in 1974, and while the higher prices have led many commuters to switch from private cars to mass transit, the number of persons using cars for weekend trips and vacations is virtually unchanged over the past five years. FRENCH DRIVERS also are undeterred by the high price they pay for gasoline, and officials there are said to be wary of imposing rationing plans because for fear of running afoul of the French love for automobiles. The OPEC increase caused the recent increase in gasoline prices to $2.50 a gallon from $2.39. Because Iran only supplied 8 percent of what the French use, the problems in Iran are not expected to have a great Higher prices do not always go unopposed. In Jamaica recently, demonstrators created massive traffic jams to protest a rise in gasoline

Israel and South Africa, which had looked to Iran for most of their gasoline, are now looking for big price increases. The new Iranian regime has vowed not to send oil to those two nations once production resumes because of political and religious differences with Israel and objections to South Africa's apartheid policy.

Israelis now pay $1.81 a gallon for gasoline, and the nation's ministry of energy is reportedly about to raise the price by an undetermined amount to bring it within line of price increases so far absorbed by the government.

The petroleum situation in Israel which had received 60 percent of its oil from Iran - is currently described as "acceptable" by one oil company official. The Israeli government has built up extensive emergency reserves and also has an agreement under which the United States assures Israeli supply. But Israeli officials are preparing conservation

SOUTH AFRICAN prices went up 10 percent Jan. 1, to $1.38 a gallon for regular and $1.46 a gallon for premium, because of the OPEC increase.

But another increase is in the works. Iran had supplied 90 percent of South Africa's oil, and the nation has been forced to purchase substitute oil on the open market, where prices have been as high as $23 per 42-gallon barrel. The OPEC price is $13.35 a barrel. The government is said to be readying a 20 percent increase in gasoline prices to cover the extra expense. And a government commission is looking into conservation possibilities

Although gasoline prices around the world are generally higher than those in the United States, there are a few areas where gas is quite a bargain.

In Ecuador, for example, government subsidies keep the price of gasoline, which is produced from the nation's own reserves, down to 22 cents a gallon. Venezuela, an OPEC member, has prices as low as 15 cents a gallon, again the result of government subsidy, although the prices are believed about to go up a bit.

But being an oil-producing nation does not necessarily guarantee cheap In Abu Dhabi, which produces about 2 percent of the non-communist world's oil, the price of a gallon of gasoline in some areas is currently 72 cents a gallon - about the same price as a gallon of premium in Houston. But not for long. Because parts of the nation don't have the refinery capacity to produce the gasoline they need, they are forced to import. As a result, they're as vulnerable to high import prices as anyone - and the price is expected to jump soon to

Baltimore Canyon bids to be seen Wednesday

AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) - Several years after the oil presumed to be off the Atlantic Coast was ballyhooed as the answer to East Coast energy needs, you still can't fuel your car or heat your home with it.

Legal and technical problems, and just plain bad luck, are keeping the area from playing a key part in the nation's energy picture.

Now, though, the stage is set for

ENERGY OIL & GAS

another try

On Wednesday, the federal government will open bids from oil companies for drilling rights in more areas of the Baltimore Canyon, the bestknown of the Atlantic offshore areas. And a U.S. Court of Appeals last week lifted an injunction against the sale of sites in the Georges Bank area off Cape Cod.

The East Coast offshore oil fields were never intended to help relieve the nation's reliance on oil imports before the next decade. But now even the most optimistic analysts don't expect to see energy from the Atlantic before 1990.

In fact, the amount of natural gas produced from the two successful Atlantic offshore wells in a day would be less than enough to heat 100 average-sized homes for a year.

"I THINK IT'S going to be a long, slow process to find the oil and gas out there," one industry source said. The numbers involved are what caused the initial optimism. The Atlantic Coast area is believed to hold 13.5 trillion cubic feet of natural gas about eight months worth of U.S. supply - and a lesser amount of

Five years ago, with foreign oil prices rising, that looked great, especially to the East Coast, which uses four times as much imported oil as other parts of the nation. But attempts to rush into production brought environmental protests that are still being sorted out. As a result, only two areas have been explored, and only partially at that.

Wells off Georgia and the Carolinas in the region known as the Southeast Georgia Embayment produced nothing, and oil firms have just about given up on that area.

Drilling in the Baltimore Canyon has been just about as unsuccessful. Eleven wells have been completed in the year since exploration began, and nine have come up dry. The other two produced natural gas, but not nearly enough for commercial production.

BUT WHILE Wednesday's bidding on additional Baltimore Canyon tracts will probably not garner the $1.1 billion in bids the first auction of sites brought, it is seen as a key to the area's future.

"I think the next stepping stone to see what the outlook is is to see what

Gulf workers back on job

PORT ARTHUR, Texas (AP) -Union workers at the Gulf Oil Co. refinery here were called back to work today for the first time since

Striking machinists ratified an agreement with the refinery in a Sunday afternoon vote, bringing to an end a 48-day strike that has kept about 2,900 union workers off their Gulf had to settle with six different labor groups, and the machinists, with about 160 employees, were the last ones to approve an agreement. A tentative settlement was reached Saturday night, and a vote was held Sunday afternoon.

Union officials said all groups generally got raises of about 8 percent the first year of a two-year contract and a 5 percent hike guaranteed on the second year with the option to reopen wage talks next year.

Notices were being sent out to the refinery's workers Sunday night, telling workers to report beginning with today's 6 a.m. shift. Supervisory personnel at Gulf have been operating the refinery since office workers, members of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers union, set up picket lines Jan. 8. All other unions honored those picket lines.

Office workers, comprising about 150 of Gulf's employees, settled a week ago, but as they signed their two-year contract, the International Association of Machinists called a strike, and the work stoppage continthe industry does in this next bidding sale," said Henry A. Hill, regional exploration manager for Continental Oil Co., which has drilled two "dry holes" in the Baltimore Canyon.

Exploration experts say a drilling success rate of one in five is good, and that is about what has happened in the Baltimore Canyon. But the hits have not been where most of the gas and oil is supposed to be.

Most of the nine unsuccessful wells drilled in the canyon have been drilled on a gigantic geological structure called "Stonedome." Other wells were drilled on a smaller structure a few miles south. Shaped like upsidedown teacups, these structures were believed to be the best hopes for gas and oil in the area.

But that did not prove out. "You drill your best shots first," said a drilling expert for one company that's. had its share of Baltimore Canyon failures. "It's disappointing that the biggies have not been productive so

INSTEAD, THE TWO discoveries of natural gas have come on the fringes of the Baltimore Canyon area, near the edge of the continental shelf about 100 miles offshore. There, Texaco found a small amount of gas and is now looking to see if there's enough to begin production, and a group of firms drilling under government contract struck gas accidentally - in a well supposed to be only a geological

The well hit a tiny amount of gas, and the discovery made a site next to it a hot item in Wednesday's sale.

Once Wednesday's sale is over, government officials will begin planning the next auction of East Coast drilling rights - this time for Georges Bank. Last week's court approval of drilling there - with conditions to safeguard the bank's rich fishing grounds paves the way for an auction, probably in September, government sources say.

Georges Bank has been a hot issue among environmentalists, the government and the oil companies because of the fishing there.

As a result, the court order requires the companies to, among other things, set up a fund to compensate fishermen for any loss in business due to an oil spill. Massachusetts is seeking even more stringent fisheries pros tection, and that worries the oil com-

This tinkering with the rules, though, is nothing new to oil companies. They experienced the same two decades ago when they started out in the Gulf of Mexico, which today is the United States' key offshore oil-producing area.

In fact, executives say, that experience is taking some of the mystery out of operations on the East Coast. "I think it's getting to be more normal," said Hill. "It's getting to be similar to the Gulf Coast in its early stages of drilling and development.

But that doesn't make it any easier. "My optimism has faded considerably from what it was before the first lease sale," said Hill. "I think it's going to be a long pull.'

WASHINGTON (AP) - The United States is prepared to use its military force to protect the flow of oil from the Middle East, say two members of President Carter's Cabinet.

Brown, who recently returned from a Middle East trip, said countries in that area are concerned about possible threats from outside the region and from nearby "more radical

Frustrated by what they regard as an overthe-hill image and resistance to change and new ides, they complain that the labor movement is losing ground as it marks time waiting for the 84year-old Meany to step

Most claim, for the record at least, that the malaise is exaggerated by outside critics and a few inside ones. While acknowledging some troubles, they blame them largely on a conservative drift in the country as a whole and other forces beyond their control.

Some of the critics say the problems run far deeper than Meany's age, raising questions about how well unions address the concerns of today's workers - about the future of the labor movement itself.

Interestingly, there was enough uncertainty about what workers really think that talk developed at one Executive Council session last week about commissioning a poll to find out.

Attention focuses on Meany because his larger-than-life presence is so deeply implanted in the public's mind that he comes to personify the labor movement, even though few of today's workers are 84-year-old Bronx-born plumbers. And his presence is so strong, so forceful, that it tends to squelch dissent to see Meany step down soon concede that he is a living legend, a poweful "presence" who has given the labor movement unprecedented cohesiveness and an intimidating voice in the arena of political debate, a man whose steel-trap mental elders, parchment skin, a cane for walking and assistance from aides as he descends from a podium. The problem, a small but growing band of union leaders suggests, usually privately, is that the labor movement is in. a rut that is getting deeper all the time: waning influence on Congress, souring relations with a Democratic administration, organizing difficulties, a flexing of corporate muscle both at the bargaining table and within the political arena, and a gnawing sense that the leadership is out of touch with the Union membership declined from roughly 24 percent of the labor force in 1960 to just over 20 percent in 1976, and imaginative, aggressive organizing efforts are more of an exception than a rule. Many members, helped up into the middle class by their unions, are voting from their pockets rather than their union cards.

Labor's legislative agenda, torn to shreds by the last Congress, has been shorn of any new initiatives and recast in more modest terms.

Former USIA official founds, directs Museum of African Art

By SARAH BOOTH CONROY The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The way Warren Robbins tells it, the Smithsonian Institution has a new museum because the State department took away his parking place.

Robbins got mad, quit his job as a USIA Foreign Service Officer and went on to found the Museum of African Art.

In 14 years, he has acquired for the museums art and real estate valued at $10,000 million. About three years ago, he began to worry that after he was gone, no one else would spend 24 hours a day fund-raising for his museum. So he talked the Smithsonian and the Congress into taking it on.

It's an unusual story and Warren Robbins is an unusual man. When he started his museum in 1964, he'd never been to Africa, never worked in a museum, never been in the arts or politics, or raised money.

ROBBINS AROUSES strong reac-

Smithsonian Secretary Dillon Ripley says, "He's the best director of this size museum in the country."

The late Sen. Hubert Humphrey called him "a national treasure."
His friends say Robbins is persistent and singleminded.

Others who know him use harsher words: "worrywart," "pushy," "monomaniac."

Amina Dickinson, program director, is the highest ranking black person on his staff of 42 (40 percent black). She says: "He's an eccentric, a character, demanding."

Robbins' museum is stuffed into nine small gingerbread and bay window townhouses three blocks from the Capitol. There are about 100,000 visitors a year, three-fourths of them black.

INSIDE, GREEN tropical plants recall the rainforests of Africa. From every wall, the magical images of Africa call for your attention—5-foot high polychrome masks with straw beards; tiny gold weights in the shape of men; aerodynamic antelope heads; drums carved into fantastic animals; ceremonial stools for royal seats; costumes jingling with beads; tapestries recalling desert and sky. Sliding glass doors from the galleries open onto a courtyard painted with symbols of the N'Debele people of Southwest Africa.

Robbins' office is upstairs in the second row house. He sits behind a contemporary desk in a comfortable brown-walled bay-windowed room. On the shelves are books on art, on protocol, on Africa — "Who's Who" ("Because I'm in it," says Robbins); "African Art in American Collections," Robbins' first book (he's working on another). There are a few pieces of African art. Gus, the dachshund ("My chef de protocol"), inspects visitors with the boredom of one who has seen many.

Recently Robbins sat in his bay, the south sun on his back and talked about the way he began his museum.

In the 1960s he was a cultural officer with the American Embassy in Bonn. One day he went on a trip to Hamburg, with now-Sen. S. I. Hayakawa, R-Calif. On an impulse, they walked into a shop and Robbins bought 25 pieces of African art for $1,000. Hayakawa says, "He and I wildly spent money."

ON THE BOAT back to the United States Robbins read a book by Eliot Elisofon about African art. Robbins was hooked.

As a social scientist, he was also interested in the great civil rights movement then at its height. "I've always been fascinated by the moment when divergent peoples come together and suddenly understand each other.

First Robbins organized "The Center for Cross Cultural Commuications." He set up a typewriter in the basement of his Capitol Hill house. He dusted off his propaganda talents, honed with USIA in Bonn. And he persuaded a number of important people to serve on his center's board. (The center is now on the "back burner," but he plans to revive it some day.)

HE HEARD that the Frederick Douglass house, home of a well-known black reconstruction era leader, was up for sale. To buy it, Robbins raised $13,000 (his first attempt at fund-raising). He also took out a $35,000 mortgage.

"My mother left me something under $20,000 when she died in 1962. It was a big help during those first three years of the museum when I wasn't taking a salary. In all, I guess I and my family have given the museum about $150,000," he said.

That most people think Robbins is rich strikes him as funny. "We were in comfortable circumstances for most of my life. But I remember the Depression years when we didn't have enough coal and had to burn old furniture. But my mother saw we got to the beach every summer.

"My brothers and sisters have been successful financially. They've given money to the museum at critical times. My brother Norman gave the Henry Tanner 19th-century Afro-American paintings as well as a group of Joseph Epstein bronzes."

ROBBINS NEEDED other things as well. His first political venture was politicking the District of Columbia city government to change the zoning ordinance to permit museum in residential areas.

to a secretary in return for typing.
And he flooded radio, television and newspapers with news releases, telephone calls, invitations and photoco-

From the first, Robbins concentrated more on education — he'd taught at American dependent schools in Germany — than connoisseurship.

The museum is full of the sound of African drums and the sing-song of story-telling. Instructors from the museum go out to schools and universities. Robbins likes to say it isn't a museum with an education department but an education department with a museum.

ROBBINS SPENT much time educating the public about the museum. He found being director of an art museum, if a small one, put him on the list for art openings. He turns up at all of them and he's likely to be noticed.

He has a handsome facial structure, decorated with a Mephistophelean beard and enough black hair to show he's an artiste. He wears corduroy suits for day, op art shirts and sometimes velvet suits for evening. He has an aura of fin de siecle Paris. Robbins is 55, but looks a good 10 years younger. He is a hunchback, not that it's kept him from piloting planes, skiing, or collecting a number of "longtime relationships" with

At one party, Frank Getlein, a Washington art critic, introduced Robbins to sculptor Chaim Gross. The sculptor gave the museum several pieces. As important, he gave Robbins names of people like himself who had African collections.

"I learned all the New York collectors, though we missed many collections then because they didn't think we were stable enough," he said.

Robbins thinks there are about 50 first-class private collections in the country. Ever resourceful, he turned his research for support for the museum into a book, "African Art in American Collections."

SINCE THE MUSEUM at first had no collection, he put together loan shows. He hoped, of course, some of the donors would leave a few pieces of art or at least some moneme from African governments. others came from collectors Harold Rome, Chaim Gross, the Gaston de Havenons, Dr. Milton Ratner, among others.

Robbins has had other problems along the way.

The Case of the Missing Statue, for instance, in December 1973, called up all his diplomatic training. The Afo-A-Kom statute, sacred to the Kom people of the Cameroons, was smuggled out of Africa by relatives of the King of the Koms. It turned up in the New York gallery of Aaron Furman.

Robbins heard about it, raised money to buy the statue from Furman at his cost, and took it back to the Kom King with a group from the National Geographic Society.

At that time, resentment against a white man running a black museum surfaced again. Robbins replied: "I make no apologies for being white." You don't have to be Chinese to appreciate ancient ceramic, and you don't have to be a fish to be an ichthyologist."

one detractor says much resentment against Robbins comes because a black man couldn't raise the kind of money Robbins has. Robbins says that's wrong — Alma Lewis in Boston, for instance, has raised money for the Afro-American Cultural Center

"People think I've been able to do what I've done because I had contacts. That's not so. I made the contacts because of what I was doing. And, after all, I had 10 years of experience with USIA, putting together cultural programs."

To art professionals who criticize his lack of formal art education, Robbins says, "I've had on-the-job training."

AS FOR POLITICAL savvy, Robbins was a quick learner.

bins was a quick learner.

He met Hayakawa 29 years ago when he wrote him a fan letter. Robbins met then-Vice President Hubert Humphrey through his State Department sister Frances Howard. Humphrey was chairman of the museum's board for years. "Robbins would tell me who had money, and I would say 'Let's go get it,'" Humphrey said later.

He's been able to attract many famous people to the museum's parties, from Henry Kissinger to Elizabeth Taylor Warner.

One of Robbins' brighter ideas was to rent the museum as a party place. Since it's only a few blocks from the Capitol it work out well for fundraisers.

"I remember one American for Democratic Action pre-inaugural party we had. We expected 300, and in the end 1,100 came," said Robbins.

"We have it all down pat. We have our own arrangements with caterers to do African food. For an honorarium, we'll throw in a speech." (Robbins fancies himself as a standup comedian as well as a philosopher. I do several dialects. Our only big regulation — no red wine on the first floor because of the rug."

SOME 1,300 GROUPS have rented the museum. Such events helped introduce the museum to congressional leaders who have become supporters such as Rep. John Brademas, D-Ind., former Sen. Frank Moss (chairman of the museum's board), Sen. Edward W. Brooke, R-Mass., Chairman of the national board), Sen. Edward W. Brooke, R-Mass., Chairman of the national board, and Rep. Lindy Boggs, D-La., also a Smithsonian Regent.

They were important when Robbins decided that the best hope for survival was to become part of the Smithsonian. The Smithsonian had had its knuckles firmly wrapped for acquiring new museums without Congressional advice and consent. So when Robbins made his proposal to Smithsonian Secretry Dillon Ripley at the-Hirshhorn Museum opening, they agreed that the impetus would have to be from Congress.

Seldom has a bill slipped so smoothly through Congress. Sen. Humphrey, too ill to introduce the bill, sent a letter around urging the merger.

congress has promised to appropriate $1 million for the museum's yearly maintenance. The museum hopes to add $300,000 from donations and museum shop sales. Robbins' salary will go from $25,000 to about $47,500. His staff members may also get raises.

The Smithsonian is currently studying a plan to build a new home for the African museum as well as rare book libraries.

Robbins says that when the Smithsonian takes over, he hopes to take up some of his old hobbies "I am not uninterested in women," he says "I might take up skiing again, or piloting."

Foreigners seeking to invest millions in U.S. real estate

By PATRICK TYLER The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — One day last November, one of Richard Shadyac's wealthy Arab clients came to Washington with $25 million to spend on a downtown office building.

After an intense search by Shadyac, a real estate lawyer here, the Arab left town, empty-handed. Shadyac says he has a dozen other Arab clients who would buy in Washington tomorrow if they could find the right deal.

That is the story of downtown Washington real estate: it has become one of the most sought after investments in the world.

Eight large buildings have been sold to foreigners in the last four Foreign investors from the Arab world and Western Europe are dangling millions of dollars before the owners of downtown office buildings. But the owners, delighted by high returns and the best investment security in the country, are, for the most part, not selling.

EVEN WHEN a transaction occurs, it is nearly impossible to document the extent of foreign ownership in urban real estate. Sales are handled by intermediaries sometimes in the name of Caribbean-registered corporations that blur nationalities.

A survey of more than a dozen brokers and lawyers indicates that whatever their national origin, foreign investors are retreating before a perceived threat of Eurocommunism and seeking refuge for their capital.

In addition, they are reshuffling their investment portfolios, especially those of large pension funds, whch have just recently recognized the advantages of American real estate investments.

Moreover, they are taking avantage of the depressed position of the dollar on international money markets by investing in choice American properties.

"THE COMPETITION is stiff," said Neil Krucoff, a real estate lawyer who recently handled a $12.5 million sale to a group of Europens. "I would venture to say that there are as many European investors interested in downtown as there are buildings downtown," Krucoff added.

But with some noteworthy exceptions, properly owners are fending off the assault, which is coming not only from abroad, but also from out-oftown American investors, who have recognized the strength and security of the Washington market.

"There's absolutely nothing for sale," said Shaydac, the real estate lawyer who says he represents more than 20 "individuals from the Arab

"I must be looking for good investments for 10 to 12 (Arabs)," said Shadyac. "I'm talking solid investors who would buy tomorrow if the right property were on the market. You just can't buy a building in D.C. if you wanted to."

But buildings have been sold and foreign investors have established a significant beachhead in downtown Washington.

Perhaps the most visible foreign purchase here in recent years was that by Kuwaiti Investment Company in 1975. The Kuwaitis paid $22 million for the 12-story, governmentleased Columbia Plaza near the State Department.

THE MAN WHO handled the Kuwaiti sale, Warren K. Montouri, vice president of Shannon & Luchs Co., said, "We are trying to acquire properties for other foreign investors," but "it's become a problem of the availability of property here—there just aren't many reasons for

One of the reasons downtown building owners don't want to sell is that occupancy rates in Washington — and therefore investment security — are among the highest in the country.

"Office building space tends to be a refuge for capital looking for a solid market," said Dustin Cole, marketing manager for the National Building Owners and Managers Association. "The most interesting thing about Washington is that it's probably the most stable market in the country."

Cole said the most current figures from a voluntary survey of the association's membership show 98 per cent occupancy rates in Washington, compared with 94 percent in Houston, 92 per cent in Chicago and 95 per cent occupancies in San Francisco.

In some cases it is more than security. When the lawyer who sold the Vermont Building here first encountered his French-speaking buyers, "These people were impressed by having two buildings close to the White House. That had never impressed me."

But there are other reasons why downtown property owners are holding on to what they have, according to brokers.

WITH HIGH occupancy rates, returns on investment for premium buildings can be as high as 20 percent, though the average yields are among

And to sell means paying capital gains taxes. The tax on a $5 million sale, for instance, can be as high as $1 million.

"Say you sell," said William Savage, president of Savage-Fogarty, a foreign-owned investment firm here. 'You got a tax to pay, then what do you do? There's not another building around. What are you going to do that's better than the building you got?"

Exact determination of the level of foreign investment in downtown Washington — or any other downtown — is currently unachievable. Congress passed legislation in 1978 requiring foreign owners of farmland to register with the Department of Agriculture, but there is no similar requirement for urban real estate.

"These people are not looking to buy up the world," said Shadyac, the lawyer representing several Arab interests. "They're looking for solid investments with a halfway decent return at this point," he added.

Motivation aside, tracing the ownership of foreign-owned properties can be arduous.

FOR EXAMPLE, the purchase of the Highland Towers Hotel on Connecticut Avenue NW was officially made by Dainar N.V., a corporation registered in the Netherland Antilles in the Caribbean.

The president od Dianar is Yusuf A. Haroon, who is also president of Development Industrial Corp., a management company based on Fifth Avenue in New York.

"I don't know where the money is coming from," said Milton Quint, the lawyer who represented the hotel's seller. "We were lawyers performing a very narrow function. All my dealings were with Mr. Haroon."

However, Shadyac, who said he was familiar with the transaction, confirmed that Haroon represented Middle Eastern interests in purchasing the hotel: "Without violating any confidences, I guess it might be classified

Haroon could not be reached for comment, but a spokesman, M. Lee Dayton, a former director for hotel-development at Pan American World Airways Inc., said, "There may be some Mideastern" investors involved. "I simply don't know. That's none of my business ... and I don't see why it concerns anybody else."

Blood boosting advised

NEW YORK (AP) —
Athletes might improve their performance if they got "high" on their own blood rather than turning to vitamins, according to a recent report.

Studies on blood boosting — the removal and subsequent reinfusion of the athlete's blood — can improve exercise time and performance by as much as 40 percent, according to the report in The Physician and Sportsmedicine magazine.

Under the boosting program, a physician removes up to a quart of blood from the athlete. The blood is then frozen in a process that prevents red blood cells from dying.

The athlete trains normally until the body has regenerated the blood supply — usually about six weeks — and then the quart of blood is transfused back into the body.
