Soviets Warn China: Halt Brezhnev Demands Pullout; Viets Reject Talks

By The Associated Press
SOVIET President Leonid Brezhnev warned China on Friday to halt immediately its "brazen bandit attack" against Vietnam and pull out its invasion troops "to the last soldier."
Chinese troops tightened a noose Friday around the Vietnamese defenders of strategic Lang Son, sources in Bangkok, Thailand reported, but behind bitter bombast the two countries seemed to be moving slowly toward a settlement of the two-week-old war.
Vietnam, after heatedly rejecting a Chinese proposal for negotiations, made its own proposal for peace talks on the condition that Peking first withdraw its troops. There were growing signs in the Chinese capital that such a pullout might come soon.

Laos Attack Warned
In Moscow, the Soviets also officially warned the Chinese against expanding their Vietnamese invasion into Laos. The Russians previously have accused the Chinese of preparing to attack Laos.
A statement carried by the official Soviet news agency Tass declared: "Military demonstrations on the borders of Laos and preparations for an intrusion into that country should be stopped. These Chinese aggressors should know that the more crimes they commit, the greater the retribution will be against them."

Intelligence sources in Bangkok, Thailand said the Chinese invaders have virtually encircled the front-line town of Lang Son. They have cut the major highway arteries linking it with the rest of Vietnam, including the Highway 1 route to Hanoi, 80 miles to the south, the sources said.
Hold High Ground
An official Vietnamese broadcast indicated the Chinese held at least some of the high ground near Lang Son, a provincial capital and historic gateway to China.
The broadcast claimed Hanoi's troops killed almost 2,500 Chinese soldiers in fighting Thursday in the hills around Lang Son, and 1,500 in the previous two days.
Sources here believe Vietnam's reports of Chinese casualties are exaggerated and Vietnam's casualties have probably been heavier than China's. Peking has issued few reports on the fighting and casualties.
The sources said Lang Son itself had not been captured by the Chinese. One analyst speculated Chinese commanders may not want their troops to take Lang Son because they then would be vulnerable to Vietnamese attacks and shelling from nearby hills.
It is not known how many Vietnamese troops are in and around Lang Son, 10 miles south of the Chinese border, but it has been a major staging area for units defending Vietnam against the 12-day-old invasion.

The Chinese government Thursday sent an official note to the Vietnamese Embassy in Peking proposing that the two countries hold talks "as soon as possible." On Friday, Vietnam rejected the proposal. Hanoi radio called it a "trick" by the Chinese "to fool the public and cover up their war intensification."
Later the Vietnamese Foreign Ministry issued its own proposal, saying Vietnam would be ready to negotiate normalization of relations once Chinese troops withdraw from its territory and Peking respects Vietnamese sovereignty and independence. This proposal, reported by Hanoi radio, was said to have been sent to the Chinese Foreign Ministry in Peking.

Various reports from Peking indicated China may be preparing to withdraw its army from Vietnam.
Chinese Deputy Premier Ku Mu told a Japanese journalist Friday the offensive against Vietnam has been progressing smoothly and "China will be able to pull out its troops as originally scheduled," Japan's Kyodo news service reported.
Chinese leaders have said throughout the conflict that the attack would be of a limited nature and was aimed at "punishing" the Vietnamese.
Peking sources have said that by "punishment" the Chinese leadership meant a bad battering of main-force Vietnamese units. On Thursday, Chinese Vice Premier Li Hsien-nien told foreign journalists that Chinese troops had done just that, damaging "two or three" regular Vietnamese divisions.

In a report Friday from Peking, the Tanjug news agency of Yugoslavia, a communist nation that has established close relations with China, cited Li's statements as evidence that the invasion appears to be nearing its end.
Analysts in Bangkok say that virtually all the fighting duties so far have been borne by Vietnamese militia units, not regular troops. But some observers said China could still insist to the world that it had inflicted heavy "punishment" on the Vietnamese military.
Western analysts in Moscow said they See BREZHNEV Page 18

Clouds Bring Storm Watch, Little Else

By RAYNIE HARDESTY
Avalanche-Journal Staff
THUNDERCLOUDS menaced South Plains residents Friday afternoon with tornadoes, hail and rain as they rolled eastward across the area. In Lubbock, however, the dark swirling clouds were little more than a threat, bringing light rain and some blowing dust.
Elsewhere, six twisters dipped from the thick rolling clouds but only one produced any significant damage.
Ten miles west of Odessa a twister tore up a mobile home and barn, the Ector County Sheriff's office said. Two other tornadoes appeared east of the Greenwood school near Midland, and two more were reported near Big Lake.
Reagan County Sheriff's Department said one tornado was about 12 miles southwest of Big Lake, the other near Radio Station KWGH, 10 to 15 miles southwest of the city.
Deputies in Tom Green County saw a single tornado seven miles southeast of San Angelo on Farm Road 765. No damage other than to the mobile home and barn near Odessa was reported.
Twenty-three counties in West Texas remained under a tornado watch up to six hours Friday.
Severe thunderstorm warnings also were issued for much of the state as clouds carrying heavy rain, hail and high winds invaded the area.
Despite NWS radar indications of severe weather in the area, only pea-size hail was reported falling near Goodnight and Paducah.
Winds gusting to 75 mph were reported at Stamford, and Haskell and Roby residents reported wind damage in that region about 4 p.m.
The massive system carried scattered thunderstorms across the South Plains and Panhandle from as far north as Motley County and south to the Midland and San Angelo areas.
Although the NWS warned residents that the clouds might drop torrential rains, no more than a half-inch fall was reported to the Avalanche-Journal late Friday.
The front left the Lubbock area with slightly cooler temperatures today and Sunday. The high is expected to reach into the lower 50s this afternoon, dip into the upper 20s tonight, and return to near 50 Sunday.
A warming trend is expected throughout West Texas Monday, with highs near 60 by Wednesday and lows in the 40s.
Friday's storm, which produced simultaneous rain, snow and dust in El Paso, left residents in East Texas from Clarksville to Lufkin under a flash flood watch.

Cuba Willing To Aid Viets

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Cuban Ambassador Fernando Lopez Muino is quoted as saying his country will help Vietnam in its border war with China if asked and is "willing to send even military aid and soldiers to fight alongside our Vietnamese brothers."
Lopez Muino was quoted in an interview published Friday by the Mexican newspaper El Sol as saying, "It is necessary for all socialist countries to offer a sisterly contribution to Vietnam in its struggles against the Chinese aggressor."
He said that if the United States decides to support China, Cuba will help Vietnam — "a situation now more important to us, since the problems with the United States can wait."
"If necessary Cuba will send an armed contingent to fight alongside the Vietnamese armies," he added.
Cuba, whose Soviet patrons also support Vietnam, has sent thousands of troops and advisers to Africa to assist Marxist regimes.

New Rules Could Boost Gasoline Price 10 Cents

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Energy Department announced new regulations Friday that could boost gasoline prices a dime a gallon, and government experts say the total price rise in the next two years may top 19 cents a gallon.
Based on current American Automobile Association price reports, that means average gasoline prices could range from 87 cents per gallon for regular to nearly 94 cents for premium within two years.
Officials could not say how soon prices would begin changing.
Pass On Costs
The new rule, which took effect Thursday, will permit the oil companies to pass along to consumers more of their production costs.
A federal judge late Friday refused to issue an emergency order blocking the new regulation from going into effect. The suit had been brought by consumer advocate Ralph Nader, who alleged that the Energy Department had failed to consider harmful effects on air quality that higher unleaded gasoline prices could cause.
While denying a temporary restraining order, U.S. District Judge Aubrey E. Robinson Jr. scheduled another hearing for Monday on the matter.
"Tilt" Regulation
The rule is called a "tilt" regulation, because it allows the refiners to tilt the impact of price increases. This will result in gasoline prices going up more than other petroleum products to compensate for the extra costs of producing unleaded gasoline.
The tilt rule could benefit users of other oil products, however, by helping resist increases in the prices of such items as home heating oil, which will no longer have to include some of the costs of gasoline production.
At the same time, the Energy Department said it is considering action to hold down the difference in price between leaded and unleaded gasolines.

Some officials had sought to decontrol oil prices last year, but inflation and the shortages caused by the Iranian cutoff have discouraged this.
The tilt regulation comes close to deregulation in its effect on gasoline prices, however.
A 1978 analysis estimated that if controls were continued, prices would rise 9 cents in two years. Under the tilt rule, they would go up 12.4 cents, and the increase would be 12.8 cents with decontrol.

Department officials were less clear on the two-year impact of the tilt rule Friday, however.
They said the tilt rule should raise prices by 4.9 cents this year. Increases next year because of the rule were not clear, but an official said the average increase would be 12.8 cents with decontrol.

Area Motor Fuels Users To Pay More, Find Less

By KIM PALMER
Avalanche-Journal Staff
AREA USERS of motor fuels can expect to pay more for less in coming months as new federal regulations reduce supplies and pump prices continue their upward climb.
For the month of March alone, local distributors have been cut back anywhere from five to 30 percent of what they purchased in the same month of 1978.
The severity of the shortage from an individual distributor standpoint will depend on its 1978 sales record, according to Pat Strong, vice president of Townsend-Strong Oil Co.
"If a retailer experienced a heavy sales month last March, then he will receive a larger allocation this month than the retailer who had a light sales month in March 1978," Strong said.
And it won't only be gasoline that's in short supply; some distributors predict a shortage of diesel fuel as well.
"As it stands right now, we have no gasoline shortage, but we are running short on diesel fuel," said a spokesman for Towns Oil Co., Conoco distributor.
"This time of year the demand for diesel fuel increases because farmers are preparing their fields for planting. We are having to go to Big Spring and Abilene for additional fuel."
Distributors are not certain what their monthly allocations will be or if the Department will continue with the allocation program after May, but they predict that gasoline and diesel fuel prices will continue to rise.

Carter-Begin Talks Produce Bleak Outlook On Stale

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin, working with maps and documents, tried Friday to find a way out of the stalemate in Mideast peace talks, but there was no sign of a breakthrough.
U.S. officials, appearing glum, announced cancellation of an afternoon session. Carter and Begin planned to meet again tonight — after assessing the evidently bleak outlook.
"The situation is serious, even if you have good talks," said a source close to the negotiations. "Things are difficult, but while they are talking things can change." He declined to be identified.

In their 2 1/2-hour White House meeting, Begin spent more than an hour outlining Israel's position on key obstacles to a treaty with Egypt.
It was understood there was no softening of Begin's stance. There was speculation that the Israeli leader's position have hardened.

Gifts Of Shah's Envoy Probed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Justice Department and Congress are investigating reports the shah of Iran's ambassador tried to bribe lawmakers and reporters with cash, prostitutes, caviar, Persian rugs and junkets, officials said Friday.
Both Deputy Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti and Rep. Charles Bennett, chairman of the House Ethics Committee, described their respective probes as "preliminary inquiries" to determine whether the scandal allegations are credible and warrant full-scale investigation.
"All we have now are the rudimentary allegations," Civiletti said. "Therefore, I have no facts or basis on which to judge the weight or materiality of the allegations."
Some packages of gifts were said to have been sent to the Lubbock home of Crown Prince Reza Pahlavi, the shah's eldest son who is undergoing flight training at Reese Air Force Base.
"Various residents in Lubbock who had contact with former Iranian Ambassador Ardeshir Zahedi and the royal Iranian family were given such gifts as solid gold cuff links and bound volumes of books."
Among several newspaper reports on the scandal allegations, Friday's Dallas Morning News quoted anonymous sources — who said "they saw the gifts" and related documents — as saying Zahedi's payoffs ranged from $200 cans of caviar to $20,000 Per-

Despite Government Programs, Consumers Remain Uninformed

By The Associated Press

Check the fine print on the next box of cookies or bag of potato chips you buy and you'll probably find the words: "Registered with the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture."

The product may not come from Pennsylvania; it may not even come from the United States. But the words, or an abbreviated version of them, will be there.

Why Pennsylvania? A 1920s law requires anyone who sells a bakery product in Pennsylvania to register with and get a license from the state department of agriculture. Under the law, the term "bakery product" includes not only pies, cakes, cookies, bread, etc., but also such things as pasta, potato chips and pretzels.

The program is run by the state agriculture department's bureau of foods and chemistry. Joseph Brennan, executive director of the bureau, said Pennsylvania is the only state in the nation with such a comprehensive registration law. Neither Brennan nor anyone else knows exactly why. "Basically it's consumer protection," he said.

The program works like this: A manufacturer who wants to sell one or more of his or her products in Pennsylvania applies for a license. When Brennan's office gets the application, it checks with the appropriate agency in the manufacturer's home state — or country, if the request comes from outside the United States — and asks for the most recent inspection report on sanitation, health, etc.

"If we deem that they're in good shape, then we register them," said Brennan. "It assures us that this particular bakery is under a routine inspection program and we have no worries about sanitation."

The registration must be renewed annually. Not every product that carries a "registered with..." phrase is sold in Pennsylvania. A manufacturer who has several different lines — only one of which is marketed in Pennsylvania — will have all his labels stamped the same way to avoid extra printing expenses.

How many items are registered with Brennan's office? "I can't even tell you," Brennan said, adding that the total is easily in the thousands.

In a related area, meanwhile, the federal government is still reviewing its labeling regulations.

The Food and Drug Administration, the Agriculture Department and the Federal Trade Commission — all of which have some role in food marketing — began the review last year in an attempt to find out whether existing regulations on nutrition and other types of labeling give shoppers the kind of information they need and want.

Nutrition labeling began five years ago. Repeated surveys have shown that consumers want nutrition information and are even willing to pay for it. But they often say they don't understand the way the facts are presented. And some of them want different types of information — the sugar content, for example, instead of the number of calories.

Existing rules require manufacturers to provide, in standard format, the number of calories, the number of grams of protein, carbohydrates and fat and the amount of seven essential nutrients in each serving. These rules, however, apply only to manufacturers who make a nutritional claim for their products or who artificially fortify them.

The labeling requirements are part of a multi-million dollar federal effort in the nutrition field — an effort which one agency has said may be unsuccessful.

The General Accounting Office said last year that despite all the government programs, "many consumers do not know or do not understand how to select and prepare foods that provide a sound daily diet. They are confused, uninformed and lacking in confidence about what they eat."

Ohio River Floods Cincinnati Area

CINCINNATI (AP) — Some Cincinnati streets were under 5 feet of water and most of a 100-mile stretch of U.S. Highway 52 was closed Friday in the worst flooding of the Ohio River here in 12 years.

"I'm a sergeant now, but after this I should be an admiral," said one police officer as he guided his boat over the streets.

The river crested Thursday at 58.6 feet, the highest it has been here since 1967. It was expected to drop below flood stage of 52 feet by Monday.

It's an eerie feeling, policeman James Spurgeon said as his boat floated through alleys and streets, many of them under more than 5 feet of water.

Meanwhile, high water had closed U.S. 52 to traffic for most of a 100-mile stretch between Cincinnati and Portsmouth, upstream from here. The Ohio Department of Transportation was advising motorists to detour to avoid the washed-out highway.

In New Richmond, about 30 miles to the east, 126 people fled to Red Cross shelters Thursday night and an additional 24 persons were housed in emergency quarters at neighboring Newtown. Red Cross officials said they expected all those people to stay in the shelters Friday night.

Police, sometimes poling their boats through the streets under water for the second time since December, said there had been no arrests for looting.

"In a way, it's a boring detail," said Lt. Tom Burke. "We've spent most of our time assisting people who need to get to higher ground or checking people who had wandered into the area."

However, most people in this low-lying section of the city are accustomed to the river's treacheries.

"Most of these people are able to pick up and go at a moment's notice," Burke said.

Former Communists Get Citizenship

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Two former members of the U.S. Communist Party won American citizenship Friday. One of them had battled for the privilege for more than 30 years.

Jack Warnick, 72, a Sebastopol farmer, and Jean Kramer, 66, an Albany housewife, were sworn in by U.S. District Court Judge William Ingram after a brief hearing. Both had been ordered deported in the 1950s.

"I love this country," Warnick said in a prepared statement.

He was arrested in Sacramento during a statewide agriculture strike in 1936, but was never convicted of a syndicalism charge.

Warnick came to the United States from Canada in 1909 and filed his first petition for citizenship in 1948. However, he was rejected and in 1956 the government ordered his deportation.

Canada refused to accept Warnick, who had joined the Communist Party in February 1934, so he remained in the United States. Warnick sought to resign from the party in early 1935, court records showed. He was expelled in May of that year for being "too liberal."

"I hate to see this country making wrong decisions for its own welfare," he said in the statement. "I have children. I have grandchildren. I would like to see them live in a peaceful, prosperous and orderly situation."

Mrs. Kramer's statement said, in part, "You can be assured that I will treasure it (citizenship) and if received I will cherish it and I will do nothing to abuse the privilege."

Mrs. Kramer came to the United States from Russia in 1923 and had filed for citizenship in 1977. She had joined the Communist Party in 1932 and "left in disgust" in 1950.

However, the government used the same law that had been used against Warnick in demanding her deportation in 1957. She also remained because her homeland refused to accept her.

In the 1950s, U.S. law provided that party membership was grounds for deportation. The Board of Immigration Appeals ruled recently that deportation orders could be set aside if it was shown that they were the only impediment to citizenship.

Nations Agree To Cut Petroleum Consumption

PARIS (AP) — The largest non-Communist industrial nations, with the exception of France, agreed Friday to reduce oil consumption by 5 percent because of the cutoff of Iranian oil.

America, the world's biggest oil consumer, will bear the brunt of the reduction by cutting consumption by one million barrels daily, a U.S. official said.

But the reduction can be achieved without rationing, according to an informed source in Washington.

The 20 members of the International Energy Agency agreed unanimously on the need to take "firm, prompt and coordinated action" to offset the shortfall of Iranian oil.

France chose not to join the IEA when it was organized in 1974 to establish an emergency oil sharing plan and promote research into other energy sources. French leaders viewed the agency as antagonistic to oil exporters.

The IEA estimates that demands on the world market in 1979 will exceed supplies by about two million barrels per day, about 5 percent of the overall consumption of IEA countries.

The United States, which consumes oil at a rate of about 20 million barrels a day, agreed to the 5 percent cutback even though it actually lost only 2.5 percent of its oil supply when Iranian oil exports ended.

Richard N. Cooper, U.S. undersecretary of state for economic affairs, said at a news conference the United States has not yet decided on specific measures to meet its obligations, but that the government would rely heavily on voluntary means.

"But we are prepared to take mandatory measures as well," he said, adding that President Carter would make a statement on the subject soon.

He said the 5 percent objective could be achieved in some member countries by increasing domestic output of oil or by drawing on existing stockpiles. However, American officials said no marked increase in U.S. domestic production could be expected.

American energy officials said a reduction of 600,000 barrels daily can be achieved with relatively mild measures. These measures include enforcement of the 55-mile-an-hour speed limit, car pooling and mass transit, reducing heating and air conditioning in buildings, encouraging greater use of natural gas, transferring electricity between regions and easing some environmental rules.

The U.S. Energy Department announced Friday it was easing price controls on gasoline, which likely will mean an increase of about 10 cents per gallon.

The Japanese foreign ministry was confident it can meet the 5 percent cutback goal with an energy conservation program it adopted a month ago. The program calls on government ministries and agencies to lower their room temperatures 2 degrees and to cut the use of cars by 20 percent.

However, Japanese industry sources said the government was overly optimistic and that serious shortages might not be bar off if the government doesn't come to grips with the problem.

"It is vital for action to be taken now when there is still time and in order to prevent a deterioration of the situation," said Niels Ersbøll of Denmark, chairman of the IEA.

He said decisions on exactly how to implement the reduction in consumption has been left to each individual country, "but we expect contributions from individual members to be similar."

That does not mean countries that can do better will be limited to 5 percent, he said. "We hope and believe that some countries will do more than that."

The program set out by the IEA calls for a reduction in the demand for oil by more efficient use of energy and avoidance of energy consumption, and by utilizing existing possibilities for switching away from oil.

It also calls for development of energy production, shifting to non-premium grades of crude oil and adopting domestic pricing policies which would hold down consumption.

The IEA's standing committees on Emergency Questions and Oil Market have been instructed to monitor the oil situation carefully, as well as the adequacy of the conservation measures taken.

The committees will meet jointly each month to make recommendations.

U.S. Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, a member of the Senate Energy Committee who attended the IEA meeting, told reporters he had certain reservations about the language in the IEA decision calling on members to be more flexible on prices.

The IEA also expressed the hope that oil companies would pay particular attention to the need for the fair distribution of oil among member and non-member countries, particularly the non-oil developing nations.

Strategic Oil Reserve Program Far Short Of Expectations

By TOM TIEDE

BATON ROUGE, La. (NEA) — Five years ago, following the Middle East oil embargo, the United States leadership vowed to make the nation "energy independent." A major part of the promise was to create a Strategic Oil Reserve, a hoard of crude from which Americans would draw in event of emergency.

Ah, it was a grand idea. And in December of 1975 Congress ordered the Department of Energy to begin stashing the first of 1 billion barrels of petroleum in the hollows of salt formations here on the Gulf Coast. One billion. At present use, it would replace all U.S. imports for four months.

Now the country is again faced with an oil shortage. This time civil disruptions have cut the flow from Iran. But will the crunch be relieved by the heralded Strategic Oil Reserve? It will not. The DOE has not yet stockpiled enough oil to last the nation a week; the reservoir program has been delayed.

According to the 1975 schedule, 250 million barrels of petroleum should have been stored and ready by now. As it is, only one-fourth of the amount is in place: 74 million. Officials say the 250 million barrels won't be buried until 1980; as for the billion-barrel total, it may never be collected.

Congressional critics are howling over the matter. A House subcommittee is conducting hearings on the delays. And the White House is reconsidering full-term funding for the repository. But nothing speeds up the filling of the reserve; at present, only about 300,000 barrels a day are added to the stockpile.

The stockpile is actually three stockpiles. One, called Bayou Choctaw, is located in the marshes south of Baton Rouge. Another, West Hackberry, is near Lake Charles. The third is Bryan Mound, on the Texas Gulf Coast. One more site, Louisiana's Weeks Island, is being prepared as an addition to the system.

The three sites in use are ancient and massive salt domes, bubbles of sodium chloride that have risen to the earth's crust. Bayou Choctaw, for instance, covers an area of 375 acres, and sinks 630 feet into the ground. The domes contain brine hollows, called "jugs," in which the oil is deposited.

There is nothing fundamentally exceptional about the use of the mines for storage. Nations have been hoarding stocks underground for decades.

The U.S. keeps vast amounts of helium in the pores of rocks, for example; in Europe, some governments have squirreled away up to six-month supplies of crude oil.

But the scope of the U.S. intention is heroic. And so is the speed with which it was expected to be carried out. Bill Parker, deputy director of the reserve project, says no one has ever tried to stockpile so much in so little time, and as a result, "We have had more than our share of problems."

Parker says the brine jugs have caused the most problems. For one thing, the brine has to be removed from the hollows before oil can be injected. Since brine is toxic, it can't just be flushed in the rivers.

Some brine is sold to chemical firms; the rest has to have holes of its own for interment.

Besides this, many of the brine jugs have proven to be too delicate to hold petroleum. And engineers have found it out the hard way. The jugs have been certified, then condemned, and replacements have had to be found. In one case at Choctaw, a fragile jug now filled with oil may have to be drained.

Parker says trial and error have been part of the project from the start, hence the delays should have been expected: "Hell, we only got the pipelines in last November. Before then we brought the oil in by barge, and then moved it to the wells in little trucks; you can't get energy independent that way."

On the other hand, Parker insists the maddening phase of the stockpiling activity is past. "I'm not hanging my head. We've done as well as we could, and will continue to do so. I can have 248 million barrels in the ground by May of 1980, and I can have 1 billion by 1985 — that's the original schedule."

And yet it's not altogether clear whether the government is any longer interested in the original schedule. The cost of reburying the oil here has more than doubled since 1975 — from $1.50 to $3.50 a barrel. Program officers now say that storing 1 billion barrels will cost at least $25 billion.

Critics thus believe the reserve has become a strategic and fiscal disaster. The White House wants the project abbreviated, perhaps cutting back as much as 500 million barrels. Even many project administrators are frustrated, and are suggesting the entire program be turned over to private industry. Meantime, while the confusion rages, there is yet another irony associated with the reserve. We can't even get what's in there now. If forced, the crews here could withdraw a puny 250,000 barrels a day in six weeks; otherwise the drawdown equipment will not be ready until next winter.

Saudis Criticize American Policy

HOUSTON (AP) — The minister of state of Saudi Arabia said Friday the United States apparently "has no Middle East policy and has surrendered its role as a world leader for that of a spectator."

Dr. Fayed I. Badr, in an exclusive interview, said the present U.S. position, "puts a lot of burden on the nations of the Middle East" to defend themselves, "using money for arms that could go for schools, hospitals, highways and other projects to help the people."

Badr said Saudi Arabia wants no military assistance from the United States, "because we believe protection comes from within, not without" and that is why his nation recently rejected a proposal for establishment of a U.S. base in his country.

During the luncheon interview, Badr said detente with the Soviet Union "is an intellectual trap, proved to be a myth and is only a dream." Badr, who also serves as chairman of the Saudi Ports Authority, said the Soviets "value power only and if they do not see power they will take action against the United States and other nations as well."

The minister said he hoped Saudi Arabia would not become involved in the clash between South Yemen and North Yemen, "because it would become a disaster for the whole world. Saudi Arabia is too important to the whole world."

The Saudis have canceled all military leaves and ordered troops to report to their bases following the latest border war between North and South Yemen.

The United States and Saudi Arabia have close ties, Badr said, because "of our mutual values of freedom, of the rights of individuals, of the private sector, not just because of commercial ties (oil purchases)."

Asked why Crown Prince Fahd had postponed a scheduled March visit to Washington, Badr said:

"The timing is very crucial and events in the area were not good timing. Also, I understand there were certain prerequisites for such a visit and these have not been met."

Badr said he did not know for certain what prerequisites were involved. Badr also said the United States, not the rest of the world, could count on Saudi Arabia to fill the void of oil left by Iran's cutback in production.

He said, "We have not stood idle while the oil shortages grow. We have aided the international community, but we cannot physically increase production without additional time. The world cannot expect all of the help to come from the Saudis."

Badr was in Houston to accept an award as the international executive of the year, presented by BE International, a newspaper published in Houston for worldwide distribution to executives.

The minister, who has a Ph.D. in economics from the University of Southern California, said Saudi Arabia will increase the price of oil only "to wake up the international community to the fact that source of energy may not be always available, never to increase our income. We have always been moderate on prices."

"And we believe the world should not waste this natural resource. We believe it should be used where most needed."

Arab Corporation Takes Control Of Bankrupt Firm

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Arabian Seoil Corp., headed by Arab investor Roger E. Tamraz, will take over voting control of bankrupt Commonwealth Oil Refining Co. for 12 years as part of an agreement in principle between the two corporations.

The agreement with ASC, a group of unidentified private investors, was signed Thursday evening here. Corco filed a voluntary bankruptcy petition March 2, 1978, for reorganization under federal bankruptcy laws.

Corco President C. Howard Hardesty Jr. said the agreement gives ASC until April 16 to secure written agreements in principle from Corco's banking group, its principal owner, Tesoro Petroleum Corp., the government of Puerto Rico and Corco's principal unsecured trade creditors.

The plan must ultimately be confirmed by the bankruptcy court and approved by Corco shareholders. It also is subject to the resolution of Corco's partners in joint venture plants in Puerto Rico.

Under the agreement, Hardesty said, Corco would be free to adopt a different plan of arrangement should a better one become available.

ASC would invest $70 million, the agreement stipulates, in a new company to be formed to carry on Corco's present business. Of this amount, $50 million would be used to purchase subordinated secured debentures issued by the new firm.

With the remaining $20 million, ASC would purchase 22 million shares of the new company's special common stock, each share of which would have five votes for a period of 12 years, and warrants with an average life of eight years, exercisable for 8.7 million shares of the new company's regular common stock at $5.75 per share.

The agreement also says ASC will make available to the new firm at least another $60 million of financing for capital improvements.

After giving effect to regular shares expected to be issued to Corco's creditors under the agreement — at $5.75 per share — in exchange for a portion of the existing debt, ASC would own about 35 percent of Corco's common equity on a fully diluted basis.

CETA Demands Closer Look

RUMBLINGS in Austin and in Lubbock clearly indicate the need to shape up the federally funded Comprehensive Education and Training Act programs and restore public confidence in them.
 "Restore" may be the wrong word. CETA never really had the public's confidence, the suspicion that it was wasteful and inefficient having been strong from the beginning.
 In Lubbock, County Judge Rod Shaw resigned as a CETA Manpower Planning Council member to protest recent South Plains Association of Governments board action he says he "can't stomach."
 In Austin the new executive director of the Texas Department of Community Affairs said CETA programs in the state are "not clean" and he plans to do something about that.

Harvey promised to "take a good hard look at those 1,200 contractors (including 200 with CETA grants) we have got out there. We are going to start with programs that don't have good priorities."
 JUDGE SHAW resigned from his CETA Manpower Planning Council post in Lubbock because the SPAG board recently approved what Shaw thinks was "a report which whitewashes mismanagement."
 Specifically, he had raised questions about an alleged contractual violation by the Opportunities Industrialization Center here. Shaw says OIC permitted "at least five different counselors to change timesheets so persons could be paid for not attending (manpower training) class."
 The county judge said he has "spent countless hours investigating and confirming rumors of waste and mismanagement."

HE BLASTED a U.S. Department of Labor official, whose department oversees the multi-billion dollar programs nationally, for not taking his complaints seriously.
 Well, they should be taken seriously. Locally, statewide and nationally, there have been too many similar complaints for them to be taken lightly, whitewashed or left dispersed.
 The taxpayers have a right to expect that any waste or extravagance of their tax money be ended. Now.

"AFTER GETTING the financial thing in tow, we are going to go out and see if we are getting any program results," said Omar Harvey, whose TDCA funnels tens of millions of federal taxpayers' dollars into local programs across Texas, many of which long have been suspect.
 "Nobody here would tell you it is clean," said Harvey of funding that goes into such programs and agencies as manpower training, the Governor's Office of Migrant Affairs, the Governor's Committee on Aging, the Governor's Commission on Physical Fitness, etc.

Only Time, Talk, Will Tell

THE LATEST figures on the nation's economic outlook are in. The readings are still pretty cloudy.
 "Which is to say that while key government indicators show a slowing of things the past month, just how slow and what effect it all will have remains unknown."
 The key indicator of future economic trends took the sharpest drop in four years in January, marked by steep declines in building permits and the average work week. The drop followed much smaller declines in November and December.
 NORMALLY, SUCH a phenomenon, of three consecutive declines in the key figures, would presage an upcoming slowdown of no small proportions, something which while cooling inflation could also pose the threat of a recession.
 However, in the summer of 1977, when a similar three-month drop took place, the economy kept right on growing and blowing.
 Government officials, especially those in the Carter administration, say the new figures aren't anything to get overly upset about, they think, and they hope.

boost in everything from food to clothing, are more cautious.
 BEHIND ALL of this economic talk is another factor which has some people worried.
 Does the continued emphasis on a "possible recession," increased prices, a slowdown, etc., ad infinitum, cause people to over-react? Do they go out and stockpile items which they think may cost more later, thus forcing the price up? Do they pigeon hole their savings, thus slowing down buying? Do businesses cut back on expansion and workers?
 Thus far, there has been no indication that this current worry-phase is having all of those results.
 However, few economists will argue with the thesis that too much gloom and doom can bring about a recession. Part of a nation's, or business firm's, well-being is based on a healthy attitude and bright prospects and hopes for the future.
 Thus far, the indicators are maybe yes, maybe no. Also thus far, the public—with the exception of housing and a few related fields—are "still bullish on America." Only time, as well as the indicators, will tell.

M. STANTON EVANS:

One Picture Is Worth A Thousand Worriers

WASHINGTON—The bizarre disclosure that Rosalynn Carter had been photographed cheek by jowl with alleged mass murderer John Wayne Gacy highlights the pathetic condition of the nation's internal security apparatus.
 Incredible as it may seem at a time of rising violence against political leaders here and elsewhere around the world, we have virtually dismantled the safeguards needed to protect the President, his family and other public figures from potentially dangerous individuals.
 This has been done in the name of "civil liberties," though there has never been any demonstration that reasonable efforts to guard our public officials would violate the rightful liberties of anyone.
 Mrs. Carter was photographed shaking hands with Gacy at a political function in Chicago last year. The picture was subsequently autographed to Gacy by Mrs. Carter, and was found among his effects by Chicago police.
 THE PHOTOGRAPH shows him wearing an "S" in his lapel, indicating he had passed security clearance—even though he had a police record and had been convicted of sodomy in 1968.
 How Gacy got past the security procedures of the Secret Service is a bit of a mystery.
 According to a spokesman for the agency, "we made a routine criminal inquiry for background information on the list of guests Rosalynn Carter would be meeting. The information available did not indicate any prior criminal history of the guests on the list Mrs. Carter was to meet."
 That statement does not explain, of course, why the security check failed to come up with anything. A possible reason for that failure has been spelled out in testimony given last year by H. Stuart Knight, head of the Secret Service.
 AS HE explained in an appearance before a Senate Judiciary subcommittee, the recent "civil liberties" crusade against police intelligence files and collection of internal security data has crippled the Secret Service in the performance of its duties.
 Under the impact of the Federal "privacy" statute, newly adopted guidelines concerning Federal surveillance of subversive groups, and lawsuits brought by civil liberties groups, police intelligence files have been gutted, impounded and destroyed, and the exchange of information concerning potentially dangerous groups of individuals dramatically curtailed.

 As a result, Knight said, the quantity of information coming to the Secret Service has been reduced by as much as 60 percent, and the quality of the data that does get through has been degraded 25 percent or so.
 The most astounding of Knight's revelations was that there were actually cities in the United States where the Secret Service had advised the President not to go.
 THE AGENCY had experienced such a severe reduction in information concerning potential threats to presidential safety that it preferred to steer the chief executive away from certain cities altogether.
 Amplifying these comments in December testimony before the House Assassinations Committee, Knight said the attorney general's guidelines on internal security investigations had had an adverse impact on the agency's ability to prevent assassination attempts.
 "We no longer get information on groups that we think we should be receiving," he said. "...those that urge violence, those that publish tracts describing how to make bombs and Molotov cocktails, I think those are the groups that we are interested in—as to their potential danger to the people we protect."
 IN THE past decade and a half, we have witnessed the assassination of one American President, two attempts on the life of another, and the maiming of one presidential candidate.
 We have seen the murder of a U.S. senator, a civil rights leader, and other controversial figures in public life. The mayor of San Francisco was recently murdered, while terrorist groups have kidnapped prominent people, blown up buildings, and skyjacked airplanes.
 In the face of all this, we have actually decreased the level of security available to high officials of our government.

'Nobody Here But Us Job Seeking Unfortunates'

GEORGE F. WILL:

'Size' Is The Limit

WASHINGTON—Several visitors to the Oval Office, including legislators attentive to SALT, have found Jimmy Carter holding mistaken views about what his negotiators already have agreed to.
 He showed a comparable failure to master the subject of SALT when, in his Georgia Tech speech, he made much of the fact that SALT II will require the Soviets to reduce by 250 their number of strategic weapons.
 Those will be antique bombers or obsolete, single-warhead missiles, most of them liquid-fueled, of the same vintage as the Atlases and others the U.S. dismantled unilaterally in the 1960s.
 As previous administrations have wrongly done, Carter emphasizes numbers of launch vehicles. He does so because numerical equality in that category is one of the few equalities the U.S.

would enjoy under SALT II. It is crude cosmetic equality.
 You have a pickup truck, and I have an 18-wheeler: we both have a truck, but we are not equal. Size matters.
 Carter did not mention that the Soviets' size advantage in missiles means that under the treaty the Soviets are expected to add at least 5,000 warheads to their strategic forces, and thousands more to so-called "non-strategic" forces, such as the new SS-20, which can strike all installations in Europe.
 The Soviets need fewer than 3,000 accurate warheads to destroy U.S. land-based missiles. Yet, in Georgia, Carter said SALT II would "contribute to our ability to deal with the growing vulnerability of land-based missiles."
 Carter said that without SALT II limits on the size of land-based missiles, and on the number of warheads they carry, the Soviets "could vastly increase the number of warheads on their large land-based missiles—with grave implications for the strategic balance."

ANDREW TULLY:

Skirting An Issue

WASHINGTON—I neither cheer nor hiss (as of today) the proposal that women be drafted alongside men if national conscription is revived, as it should be.
 This position does not imply insensitivity either to women's rights or the old-fashioned theory that the female sex deserves full treatment as cute little balls of fluff.
 After all, there are all kinds of women. Besides in the current egalitarian environment, Congress is not inclined to offend a female majority.
 Anyway, I am more interested in redressing a glaring inequity in the old Selective Service system, which was suspended in 1973. That was the more-or-less blanket exemption of college students.
 THE QUESTION is whether it's fair to draft a young man merely because he can't afford to go to college. And that question still pertains directly to the fact that the old system was guilty of rank discrimination against blacks.
 Of those youths who do not attend college, the majority are blacks, a reflection of the continuing disadvantage under which too many black families live.
 In most cases, it doesn't matter whether the black youth has the stuff of which a college student is made; his family doesn't have the money to finance his higher education and usually doesn't know how to go about getting him a scholarship or a government loan. As a result, the youth is military bait.
 This is not only unfair, but wasteful. There is something irritating to the American tradition in a system which exempts youths from military service merely because their parents possess the wherewithal to send them to old No. U.

BUT WITH SALT II "limits" the Soviets will have a 5-to-1 size (throwweight) advantage, and a 3-to-1 advantage in the number of ICBM warheads.
 The agreements would permit replacement of single-warhead missiles (like the Soviet SS-9) by multiple-warhead missiles (like the SS-18, which carries 10 warheads).
 SALT II "limits" each side to 10 warheads per missile—precisely the number the Soviets have on their "heavy" missiles—the number that seems suited to disarming strikes against U.S. Minuteman sites. The most warheads on any U.S. ICBMs are three, on Minuteman.
 SALT II limits on missile sizes deny the U.S. the right to achieve equality in size. Both sides are "equally" limited to keeping or improving the "heavy" missiles they already have. The Soviets have 308. The U.S. has none.
 IN GEORGIA, Carter said that SALT II serves "our efforts to protect our missiles." What efforts? Carter has delayed the MX (a mobile missile) and is unwilling to decide how—or whether—it should be deployed.
 Carter said SALT II is "adequately verifiable" by "independent" technical means. But range limits on cruise missiles are not; neither are limits on production of mobile ICBMs; neither is compliance with some of the limits on improvements of existing ICBMs.
 Neither is the prohibition on improvements to the Backfire bomber: The administration does not even seem to know what Backfire's current capabilities are.
 The administration will not be able to dismiss opposition as "partisanship." Some Republicans will support Carter, and a larger number of Democrats will oppose him.
 And those, like Edward Kennedy, who say that opposition to SALT II could cause a "return" to the Cold War, will be hard-pressed to explain how today's conditions are an improvement upon the Cold War.
 The Carter administration will not be able to stigmatize opponents as "against arms limitation." The opponents' approach will be positive—perhaps a series of improving amendments, including ones stipulating that:
 —ALL BOMBERS capable of intercontinental range shall be counted against overall SALT totals. (Carter's agreements count all such U.S. bombers—including the four B-1 bombers built as test prototypes—but does not count Soviet Backfires.)
 —The U.S. shall have the right to as many "heavy" missiles as the Soviets are entitled to. (Again, Carter's agreements allow the Soviets 308, the U.S. zero.)
 —Limits on U.S. cruise missiles shall be linked to limits on Soviet ballistic missiles, so that all missiles of medium range shall not be counted in SALT II totals.
 (Carter's agreements limit ground- and sea-launched cruise missiles—even those without nuclear warheads—to a 600 kilometer range, but place no limits on Soviet deployment of the new SS-20, a multiple-warhead missile that has a range of 4,000 kilometers.)
 You may well wonder how—or why—Carter will tell the American people that such amendments are unacceptable. Carter probably will argue that no amendments are acceptable because the Soviets will reject the agreements if any changes are made. That is this administration's style.

VIRGINIA PAYETTE:

Stuffed Salary

EVERYBODY'S GOT job troubles: Those on the bottom worry about layoffs, those in the middle fret over advancement and those on top lie awake nights trying to decide which corporation they'll let seduce them with million-dollar contracts.
 And the ironic twist is that, on the level where salaries are highest, the money is least important.
 Not that an executive-suite whiz kid won't listen to headhunters when they come calling with sweetheart deals. But the siren song that wins them over is the challenge of a tough job.
 The rest of us wage slaves look upon a paycheck as something that comes in, lingers in our checking account maybe a whole minute, and then goes out again to the landlord, grocer, phone company and the folks who sell us heat, light and gasoline.

OUR "CHALLENGE" is how to juggle what's left between the doctor, the dentist and the local emporium that gets $12 every couple of months for Junior's new sneakers.
 When they talk about "job satisfaction" among the average workers, they're talking about that fleeting surge of triumph when we manage to pay every bill the same month it's due.
 The Labor department took a survey a while back and came up with a flock of figures that showed a lot of Americans have become dissatisfied with their jobs in the past five years. Especially college graduates, those under 30, less-skilled and blue-collar workers, and manufacturing employees.
 One third of the workers interviewed said they weren't earning enough to suit them, and one fifth said they weren't earning enough to cover their monthly expenses.

IT COST Uncle Sam $430,000 to find this out, which is just one more bill the taxpayer will have to help settle up come April 15.
 The Labor department spent a little more of our money (it's not saying how much) to discover that Americans are doing more career switching now than they did back in 1972.
 Around 12 percent changed occupations in 1977, it reports, compared to nine percent six years ago. The reason for this, the government thinks, is that there are fewer jobs now and more young workers under 25, and it's the young workers who tend to get restless and switch.
 Well, not necessarily. The old boys are finding there's plenty of room at the top across the street, and maybe we can save the government (and ourselves) another small bundle by pointing out that Washington isn't the only place where management talent is in short supply.

CORPORATIONS EVERYWHERE are on the prowl for financial officers who can cut costs and still come up with a profit at the end of the year.
 It takes a top performer to make money in today's tougher business climate and those who can't cut it don't stick around very long.
 Headhunters, who comb the executive suites for businessmen who can be sweet-talked into changing jobs, are getting rich filling vacancies.
 With requests for top-level managers up 32 percent, the recruiters are predicting they'll have a billing total of $184 million this year.
 Corporations are hungrier for new presidents, executive vice-presidents and any executive officer with a track record for making money. And they're willing to pay plenty to get them.
 It's called the "switch premium" and it gets higher every year. This puts a lot of new chief executive officers way up there in six-figure territory, but that's only the beginning.

THERE'S ALMOST always an annual cash bonus (up to 70 percent of his salary), a hefty insurance policy, a fat pension and stock plan, and the promise of at least a year's salary if he gets fired.
 But even in this rarefied atmosphere, job satisfaction is important. A man already pulling in $100,000 isn't easily seduced by big bucks.
 But it doesn't hurt to throw in a chauffeured limousine, bodyguard and maybe a private jet.
 More and more, this begins to sound like the pay-and-perks we lay on those fellows we send to Washington. Maybe the "headhunters" would do a better job for us down there.

HUMAN FAT turns solid when its temperature drops to about 45 degrees F. That's too cold to matter. What's left of the human won't care. But the fat of a hibernating animal remains liquid at far lower temperatures. Thus such a beast can survive.
 How low a hibernator's temperature can drop without killing it I just don't know. Do know that many a scientist has tried to take the body temperature of a hibernating bear. But the bear keeps waking up. Clearly, it has to be awkward for the scientist, caught in the bear's cave that way with an icy thermometer in hand. And pretty startling for the bear, too, undoubtedly.

College Newspaper Presents Nixon First Award

LEWISTON, Maine (AP) — The Bates College student newspaper came out Friday with a front-page story and photograph on its first award for "international communications" — to Richard Nixon. Robert Cohen, editor of The Bates Student, said he traveled from Maine to California this week and presented the award to Nixon at the former president's seaside compound at San Clemente.

Cohen, a 21-year-old senior, said he was granted an hour-long private meeting with Nixon. Although Cohen said Nixon gave him a yellow legal pad to take notes on and the possibility of an interview had been left "up in the air," he said he decided not to ask the former president about the Watergate scandal that forced him from office in 1974.

Rather, they discussed "various subjects, ranging from the weather to baseball," said Cohen.

"Our purpose was to honor him, not to interview him," he said. "This was really just a friendly conversation."

Most of the faculty and 1,400 students at the quiet liberal arts college were unaware of the award before it was announced in Friday's paper. The college administration took no part in the award.

Dean James W. Carignan said he first found out that Cohen had made the trip after the bespectacled student editor returned to campus Tuesday, the day after the presentation.

A college spokesman who serves on the newspaper's editorial board said he had asked Cohen whether the award was a campus prank. But Cohen insisted it was genuine, and later produced a snapshot showing him and Nixon.

The newspaper gave awards in four categories — international communications, national politics, journalism and campus activities. The other awards will be announced later.

When it came time to pick the winner in the international category, Nixon's name "came up immediately."

"I realize that he violated the Constitution, which I suppose is inexcusable, but that one fact does not negate his other accomplishments," said Cohen. "A lot of people have bad feelings about him, but his work in international communications cannot be denied."

Cohen said he arranged the visit by telephoning Nixon's staff, making two or three calls over a two-week period before Col. Jack Brennan, a top Nixon aide, approved the meeting.

Nixon's office at San Clemente refused to comment on Cohen's story. Cohen said the conversation took place in Nixon's office, where Cohen gave the ex-president a wooden plaque with a replica of the Bates College seal and an inscription with the name of the award, its recipient and the year. In his presentation, Cohen noted Nixon's "historic visits to the Soviet Union and to the People's Republic of China (that) opened long-hindered channels of communication."

"He listened intently, and thanked me when I presented him with the plaque," then asked to have a photocopy made of the handwritten presentation speech, said Cohen.

Cohen, a pre-law student with a double major in sociology and English, said he boned up for the trip by reading Nixon's published memoirs. He professes to have no strong feelings about the ex-president.

Nixon To Help Mark Moon Landing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Richard M. Nixon will travel to Las Vegas in July to help commemorate the 10th anniversary of the first moon landing — an event that as president he called the greatest "in the history of the world."

A spokesman for Nixon said the former president accepted the invitation of the Dunes Hotel to take part in a large party to which all astronauts have been invited. The hotel said Edwin Aldrin, the second man on the moon and now a California aerospace consultant, already has accepted.

The first man to step from the lunar lander, Eagle, on July 20, 1969, was Neil Armstrong, now a professor of aerospace engineering in Cincinnati. Michael Collins, the third Apollo 11 astronaut, is undersecretary of the Smithsonian Institution.

Nixon was president during all the Apollo moon landings. He met the Apollo 11 crew aboard the recovery ship, the aircraft carrier Hornet, and told the astronauts:

"This is the greatest week in the history of the world since creation because as a result of what happened this week the world is bigger infinitely."

Jerry Conte, a vice president of the hotel, said, "We want to make this something extra special, not a platform for politicians. There will be no speechmaking, just a pure tribute to the astronauts."

The Las Vegas event will be the week of July 15. The exact date will be set later to avoid conflict with other 10th anniversary celebrations.

Conte said the hotel already has received acceptances from Eugene Cernan and Ron Evans of Apollo 17; Charles Duke, Apollo 16; James Irwin, Apollo 15; James McDivitt, Apollo 9 and Wally Schirra and Walter Cunningham, Apollo 7.

Settlement Reached In Anti-Trust Suit

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department announced Friday the settlement of a 5½-year-old antitrust suit against nine companies that sell reinforcing steel in Texas.

The settlement, which is subject to approval of a federal district court in Houston, would prevent the defendants from conspiring to fix prices, allocating customers and limiting the competitive efforts of other steelmakers, the department said.

The defendants were charged in October 1973. They previously pleaded no contest to criminal charges arising from the case and were fined $566,500.

Defendants are Armo Steel Corp., Bethlehem Steel, Border Steel Rolling Mills, the Ceco Corp., Laclede Steel Co., Schindler Bros. Steel, Structural Metals, Texas Steel Co., and United States Steel.

Ring Tightens Around Idi Amin

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Tanzanian invaders, Ugandan guerrillas and mutinous troops were reported striking from the east and south Friday, tightening a ring around Ugandan President Idi Amin as the Tanzania-Uganda war apparently entered a decisive stage.

In Kampala, the Ugandan capital, Amin announced he was throwing emergency reserves of police, prison officials and former servicemen into the fight. Independent observers said the fate of his turbulent eight-year rule could be decided within days.

Witnesses said anti-Amin forces appeared to have won control of the eastern Ugandan town of Tororo in an hours-long battle involving jet fighters and tanks. Control of Tororo, 75 miles east of Kampala, means attackers have cut the road and rail links from Kenya that carry almost all of Uganda's military and civilian supplies.

Unofficial reports said about 50 persons were killed or wounded in the Tororo fighting, most of them civilians.

Southwest of Kampala, a Tanzanian invasion force pushed 20 miles beyond the provincial center of Masaka to within 60 miles of Kampala, their deepest penetration yet, Ugandan exile sources said.

Other unconfirmed reports said another column of invaders was moving past Mbarara, in the southwest, and swinging north to approach Kampala from the west. Unconfirmed exile accounts in Nairobi said a Ugandan battalion near Soroti, to the north, was refusing orders to leave its barracks and fight for Amin.

Uganda touched off the war with Tanzania four months ago by occupying 710 square miles of northwestern Tanzania. The Tanzanians threw the Ugandans back across the border and continued pushing on into Uganda, reportedly with the help of a guerrilla force of Ugandan exiles.

Amin appealed to U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim "to use your good offices to persuade (Tanzanian) President Julius Nyerere to change his attitude and accept peace and good understanding" between the two countries.

In the letter, dated Wednesday and released at U.N. headquarters in New York on Friday, Amin said the Tanzanians have committed "all sorts of atrocities," killing many innocent people and destroying property."

Nyerere has denied he is trying to bring down the Ugandan leader, but has rejected efforts by the Organization of African Unity to arrange a cease-fire.

In Dar es Salaam, Tanzania, Foreign Minister Benjamin Mkapa said Nyerere would accept an OAU call for a cease-fire only if it condemned Uganda for the initial invasion in October and if Amin renounced all territorial claims against Tanzania and promised compensation for war damage.

Tanzania has been a base for anti-Amin Ugandans since Amin toppled Ugandan President Milton Obote in 1971 and the Obote took refuge in Tanzania. The exiles and international human-rights groups say tens of thousands of Ugandans have been massacred under Amin's autocratic regime.

Residents of Kampala said by telephone Friday that life was going on normally there. Diplomats in the capital said there was no evacuation under way of the 3,000 foreigners in Uganda, 130 of them Americans. Most were said to be safely outside the current war zones.

The official Uganda radio, monitored in Nairobi, quoted Amin as telling thousands of police and prison officials to defend the country and saying the enemy was suffering from a lack of fuel.

Tanzanian army regulars — Amin contends the invasion force numbers 20,000 — were said to be nearing a 10-mile stretch of swamps and waterways on the road to Kampala Friday.

Some observers speculated Amin's troops would try to blow up bridges and make a stand around the low ground. Civilian trucks and buses were reported to be carrying Ugandan soldiers from northern areas to reinforce loyal units around Kampala.

Eyewitnesses said by telephone from Tororo that fighting punctuated by repeated explosions began at dawn and went on at least until mid-afternoon. Residents said jet fighters flew overhead and tanks and armored cars moved through the town.

One man in Tororo said that from his home he could see the barracks of the 1,000-man, air-ambitious Tororo Battalion burning. Damage was also reported in the town itself.

Some informants said the fighting stemmed from an anti-Amin mutiny within the battalion. Others said a guerrilla force landed on the shores of Lake Victoria, marched a few miles to Tororo and drove off Amin's dispirited men. Tanzanian territory lies 100 miles south across Lake Victoria.

Hundreds of Ugandan civilians were fleeing the fighting by crossing into Kenya.

Legionnaires Disease Water Related

AIKEN, S.C. (AP) — Low levels of Legionnaires disease bacteria have been found in two dozen South Carolina and Georgia lakes, indicating that the organism "is a natural part of man's environment," researchers said Friday.

The discovery came in a study of pathogenic organisms and large water cooling systems begun last September at the Savannah River Plant here.

Dr. Carl Fliermans, a microbiologist-ecologist at the plant, said he found the Legionnaires bacteria in 90 percent of 220 samples of water taken from the lakes, which ranged from small farm ponds to Lake Marion between Columbia and Charleston.

Dr. Albert Balows, director of the bacteriology department at the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta, said Fliermans' study confirmed initial suspicions "that the organism is a natural part of man's environment."

"It's in fresh water," said Balows. "It's in water found in central air conditioning towers and in some mud."

While the disease bacteria appear to be common in South Carolina and Georgia lakes and streams, Fliermans said its levels are low. Other officials said there was no cause for alarm over the findings.

"What had been known about the organism previously simply did not lend itself to being found in lakes," Fliermans said. He said most of the organisms developed scientifically had been done in complex compounds in CDC laboratories.

"There is nobody who has looked at it from an ecological standpoint except our research group," he said. "Our emphasis has been on its ecology and where it lives naturally."

The disease first came to public attention when it took the lives of 29 persons at an American Legion convention in Philadelphia in 1976.

Since 1976 at least 10 additional outbreaks of Legionnaires disease have been diagnosed in the United States. Two cases have been reported in South Carolina and 12 in Georgia.

JUPITER'S SATELLITE — This photo of Ganymede, largest of Jupiter's satellites, was taken just after midnight March 1 from a distance of 2.6 million miles. Ganymede is slightly larger than the planet Mercury, but less dense, roughly twice the density of water. The photo shows dark features similar to the dark, mare regions of the Earth's moon, but scientists believe they are unlikely to be composed of rock or lava as the moon's mare regions are. Ganymede's north polar region appears to be covered with water or frost. The brighter spots scattered across this hemisphere may be related to impact or may be source regions of fresh ice. ## Jupiter's Gas Ring Hotter Than Expected PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Voyager 1, soaring to a close encounter with Jupiter, amazed scientists Friday with evidence that a seething ring of ionized gas above the planet is 10 times hotter than expected.

"We have some spectacular results to report," said Donald E. Shemansky, a scientist from the University of Arizona. "We were surprised out of our chairs."

The discovery came as Voyager 1 closed to within 2 million miles of Jupiter. The ring was known to contain ionized gas or plasma — electrically charged atoms from which electrons had been removed.

But the discovery of much more intense heat and density opened up new areas of investigation, such as the possible source of the power that heats the ring and how the power is pumped into the ring, Shemansky said.

"The other significant factor here is the amount of power required to maintain a plasma at these temperatures," he said in a news conference at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory. "We're asking for something like 1,000 times more power than we did before — something like 500 billion watts."

Voyager 1, launched in 1977, will pass within 172,750 miles of the planet Monday before heading toward Saturn and on into deep space. Another Voyager will fly by Jupiter in August.

Shemansky said the doughnut-shaped ring, which he called a torus, churns around Jupiter with an orbit similar to that of Io, one of the largest of the planet's 13 moons. Io crosses in and out of the torus as it circles the planet some 240,000 miles away.

Shemansky said the surprise came when Voyager 1's spectrometer experiment revealed much more sulfur in the ring than had been expected from earlier measurements.

The other major development Friday was the continued transmission across 300 million miles of increasingly spectacular photographs, especially those of the two largest of Jupiter's moons.

The moons, Ganymede and Callisto, seem to be at least half water and ice. The pictures show both to be pock-marked with shiny spots that, scientists say, might be craters left by meteorites.

Libyan Jet Sale Sparks Controversy

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government of Libya, described by the CIA as "the world's most unabashed proponent of revolutionary violence," has obtained State Department permission to buy three Boeing 747 jet planes, it was disclosed Friday.

Sen. Richard Stone, D-Fla., said the jumbo jets can be used to transport troops and munitions and "even tanks." He sharply criticized State Department witnesses at a hearing for approving the sale without consulting Congress first.

Responding to Stone's questions at a meeting of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Assistant Deputy Secretary of State Morris Draper said Libya also had been given permission to buy two Boeing 727 passenger jets.

Draper said the planes are intended to serve Libya's national airline for flights in Africa and to Europe.

In normal commercial airline use, the Boeing 727 seats between 130 and 190 passengers. The 747 normally accommodates 350 passengers but has carried as many as 530 persons on charter flights.

Draper said "we have been careful to get assurances these aircraft wouldn't be misused," indicating this meant Libya would not use the planes for military purposes or in support of terrorism.

He noted the administration has refused export licenses for sale of two Lockheed L-100 cargo planes to Libya. The L-100 is the civilian version of the military C-130 and is thought to have potential military applications.

Libya bought eight C-130s five years ago but was denied export licenses by the Nixon administration. The planes remain in storage at Marietta, Ga.

Draper also said the State Department has approved the sale of six JetStars, an executive jet, to the government of Iraq. He said he made the decision last fall to sell four L-100 transports to another socialist Middle East country, Syria, in a move that also was taken without con-

Searches Declared Unconstitutional

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — A Springfield District Court judge has declared unconstitutional routine searches of rock music fans entering the Springfield Civic Center.

Judge George Sheehy ruled Tuesday that marijuana and tranquilizer pills that police said they seized during a search of 26-year-old Stephen Foti last Nov. 29 could not be admitted at his trial. Sheehy said the patting search of Foti's body, made before his arrest, was conducted without probable cause. The American Civil Liberties Union makes the same assertion in a pending federal suit. City officials said they would continue their search policy.

Stone said that although prior consultation in such cases is not required by law, Congress should routinely be kept informed because of what he called the volatile nature of the Middle East. "I'm distressed about some of these procedures," Stone said.

Under the regime of Col. Moammar Khadafi, oil-rich Libya has gained a reputation as a haven and training ground for terrorists.

In a 1976 research study the Central Intelligence Agency called Khadafi "one of the world's least inhibited practitioners of international terrorism."

Caring, Information Crucial Against Wife Abuse

By LISA PAIKOWSKI
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Community caring and knowledge are the keys to battling the problem of battered wives in our society, according to the keynote speaker at the South Plains Conference on Family Violence, which opened Friday at First Christian Church.

Terry Davidson, author of "Conjugal Crime," a book on abused wives, said that "world consciousness is rising" concerning the problem and cited the progress that churches and community organizations have made in recognizing the situation.

She said that one significant change was in the attitude of churches toward the problem. "The churches were not responsive at one time," she said. "Back in the Middle Ages, the Church exhorted men to beat their wives for the glory of God and for their own good, and that type of feeling hadn't changed much until recently."

Miss Davidson said that churches are now sponsoring conferences on wife beating and providing shelters for battered wives and their children.

She also noted the improved responsiveness of community groups and governments, who are providing shelters and passing legislation to assist in solving the problem of battered women.

Miss Davidson said that wife beating exists "when a wife is in fear of her husband's superior strength," and when she has not agreed to his subsequent behavior and "has no options."

She said that the wife-beaters with whom she has spoken typically feel sorry for themselves. "They feel oppressed by the world, and not necessarily by their wives. They feel justified in what they do, and they are hurt and angry."

"They all seem to feel as though the wife should somehow have stopped them," she said. "They feel their pain is worse, and they feel good when they beat their wives."

Miss Davidson, who grew up in a household where her father abused her mother, spoke of the need of counseling and help for the beaters as well as the victims. She said that one of the problems, however, is that more than half of the abusers refuse to go for help.

She said that once the abusers begin counseling, they find that they are, indeed, being helped. In some areas, a 24-hour hotline has been established to help the wife-beater who can "call when he feels that anger mounting. And the hotline praises him for taking the courage to do something about it."

She said that the husbands, who are law abiding citizens in other respects, will sometimes sign a contract which states they will stop their abuse, and they often feel bound to this contract.

Miss Davidson said that "we need non-violent men to show their support. We want them to go on record and say that wife-beating is wrong, is not occasion for jokes, and is unmanly."

She said that the children of wife-beaters and abused wives also need special assistance. These children "have a conflict about their guilt concerning the situation and they have a lack of coping skills."

She suggested that programs be started in the high schools in order to educate students about the social problem and to help them understand the roles of men and women and their expectations of each other.

Miss Davidson spoke specifically of the need for shelters for battered women and their children which can be furnished by churches and civic organizations. "Every time a shelter opens, the need for it is demonstrated because it's immediately filled up to overflowing."

The author said that education of the public about wife abuse is essential and that we must educate people to know that it exists in all classes.

She said that the problem is not confined solely to the lower classes and minorities, but that middle-class wives who are beaten have a special problem. "It is clear that it is much harder for them to be believed when their husband is a prominent doctor or noted child of privilege," said Miss Davidson.

She said that in order to change a battered wife into a former victim, she must learn self-esteem and the skills to cope. The conference continues through this morning.

Man Charged In Infant's Beating

A 39-year-old Lubbock man Friday was charged with causing injuries to a child in the reported Wednesday serious beating of a 2-year-old boy.

Trinidad Lovato of 2101 Emery, No. 139, is accused of bruising the boy over much of his body and of breaking his left leg.

Two Lubbock men, Gary Moore, 24, of 2107 Avenue P and Donnie Joe McNeely, 23, of 4209-A 35th St., were charged with burglary in a reported Wednesday break-in at an 1801 19th St. bar.

No Traffic Fatalities Last Month

February was a noteworthy month for Lubbock — not because of what happened, but because of what didn't happen.

Lubbock Mayor Dirk West announced Friday that last month was the first traffic fatality-free month since December 1976, and that traffic accidents had dropped 33 percent from February 1978.

So far this year, there has been only one traffic fatality, and West credited the five-month old Selective Traffic Enforcement Program and the Lubbock police for the reduction in accidents and fatalities.

In January and February 1977, there were 11 fatalities, and last year Lubbock had more traffic deaths per capita (51) than any other U.S. city.

But West noted he still sees "hot dogs" on the street, and pledged the traffic crackdown will continue until those drivers either slow down or lose their licenses.

"Obviously the program is working and it is going to continue," he said.

"We had a big problem and we're whipping it."

Comparing the five months the STEP officers have been patrolling city streets and the same five months (October-February) in 1977, West said accidents had dropped from 5,171 to 4,778.

Accidents with injuries dropped from 719 to 652, the number of persons injured was reduced from 1,002 to 899 and fatalities dropped from 20 to 9 during the period.

Arrests for driving while intoxicated (DWI) have risen since a special DWI enforcement program was launched, West said. Through Feb. 23, 109 such arrests had been made, compared to 177 DWI arrests in Lubbock for all of 1978.

West noted five percent of all accidents and 12.5 percent of the fatal accidents in Lubbock during the last quarter of 1978 involved drunk drivers.

Solon Introduces Land Office Measure

A-J Austin Bureau
A bill introduced by Sen. E.L. Short of Tahoka that would give the General Land Office more flexibility in trading and selling tracts of land of less than 150 acres was passed by the State Senate Thursday and sent to the House.

Senate Bill 542 was passed on a 24-2 vote.

Short's bill provides that when state land is sold, the state will retain mineral rights. Other provisions include: surrounding landowners will have first option to buy the land; there will be a 10 percent down payment with the balance paid over 20 years at 8 percent interest; and an appraiser will determine the market price of the property.

Step 1: From the year chart, find the numbers corresponding to your year of birth. For instance, if you were born in 1947, your number for Physical would be 21, Emotional 17, Intellectual 19. Note whether your numbers are preceded by an A or B; this will be used for Step 2.

Moslem Leader Decrees New Meat Laws In Iran

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, furthering his revolutionary program to return Iran to strict Moslem principles, decreed Friday that Iranians may no longer import or eat meat processed in non-Islamic countries.

In the central Iranian city of Najafabad, an angry mob was reported to have killed three former policemen from the old regime, and in south Tehran rival pro-Khomeini gunmen battled in the streets. Four men were reported wounded.

Khomeini's decree on meat imports, issued to provisional Prime Minister Mehdi Bazargan, ordered that existing stocks of such meat in Iran be destroyed or used as fertilizer.

Much of the meat imported into Iran — almost all of it frozen — is "haram" (forbidden) under Moslem law because it has been processed in foreign plants that do not follow Islamic prescriptions for the slaughtering of animals.

The ban is expected to seriously affect trade with Australia, New Zealand and Argentina, three countries that send millions of dollars worth of frozen beef and lamb to Iran each year.

Khomeini gave no definite date for putting the decree into effect.

In the past week in Iran, two men were reported flogged for drinking alcohol, another offense under Islam, and Moslem gunmen closed down a hotel bar in Tehran, although Khomeini has not yet officially banned the sale of alcoholic beverages.

Khomeini, the Shiite Moslem leader whose mass movement toppled Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi's regime, urged Iranians on Thursday to "pay attention to morality... We will create a country after the image of Mohammed (the Moslem prophet)."

Reports reaching here said the three former policemen in Najafabad, 250 miles south of Tehran, had been arrested by gunmen of the Mojaheden Islamic guerrilla group. They reportedly were accused of killing anti-shah demonstrators during the mass protests that led to the fall of the shah's government.

An angry mob seized the policemen and killed them as they were being transported to a trial before an Islamic court, the reports said.

The cause of the hour-long gun battle in south Tehran could not be determined, though it was believed the rival revolutionary groups were fighting over jurisdiction in the area. There are various factions in pro-Khomeini revolutionary committees, each of which is responsible for security within its self-proclaimed sectors.

By issuing the meat decree Friday, Khomeini again underlined his intention to continue playing a dominant role in Iran's national life.

The Moslem holy man, who returned to Iran from long exile last month to lead the revolution, left Tehran on Thursday and retired to the holy city of Qom, 80 miles south of here.

In a speech to hundreds of thousands of followers in Qom, Khomeini declared, "The remaining one or two years of my life I will devote to you to keep this movement alive."

Khomeini has created Islamic councils or committees throughout the country to enforce public order and mete out Islamic justice.

The councils and their courts apparently are in many cases bypassing the civil administration of Prime Minister Bazargan, who views the dual system with increasing dismay. Two days ago, Bazargan threatened to resign from the month-old government because of meddling by Khomeini's revolutionary committees in government affairs.

ported to a trial before an Islamic court, the reports said.

'Chile' Aficionado Has Energy Answer

By RUTHANNE BROCKWAY
 Avalanche-Journal Staff

A spokesman for the International Connoisseurs of Green and Red Chile proposed solutions to the world energy crisis, inflation and food shortages Friday night.

Gerald Thomas, president of the group's world headquarters in Las Cruces, N.M., explained that Chile is hot and heat is energy, so if scientists could figure out a way to "transfer that heat to electricity it would solve the energy problem."

It was all tongue-in-cheek, of course, as was most of the evening during which a Lubbock chapter of the Chile lovers was organized.

The Big Cheese of the Lubbock chapter is Sammy Marshall. Actually, the top echelon's official title is "Queso Grande." The group's Queso Chico (vice president) is Pete Hale and the secretary-treasurer is Art Johnson.

Chile aficionados at Friday's meeting explained it is an "exclusive" group. Membership is limited to those who produce, process, cook, eat or appreciate green or red Chile.

Thomas, a former Dean of Agriculture at Texas Tech, said one of the missions of the 3,000-member organization is to "send Chile care packages to those who leave the Southwest area and have Chile withdrawal symptoms."

The matter of spelling Chile with an "e" rather than an "i" is just one of the friendly debates the group has going with other Chile and chili groups.

"Aje" was the Spanish word from which we get the word "chile," he explained. "It doesn't really matter how you spell it but we think it's more appropriate with an 'e' because it's closer to the Spanish word."

Groaning, moaning and sweating at the meeting was the result of a bit of Chile overdose. For the initiation ceremony, selected Chile lovers tasted a series of sauces ranging from mild to hot-hot.

Jeanne Croft, executive secretary of the world group, said initiates must not perspire, show signs of flushed faces or drink any water during the ceremony. A pledge of allegiance to Chile solemnized the proceeding.

Actually, the Lubbock members had it easy, she said. Sometimes the ceremony includes a jalapeno wine which she said is a real test of dedication to the organization.

Chile lovers have an array of Chile trivia: such as Chile is rich in vitamins A and C, it comes from the genus Capsicum which is the same plant family as tomatoes and potatoes, and research at New Mexico State University indicates red Chile has antioxidant properties that prolong the life of frozen foods containing Chile.

Maybe that's why cooks have said for years that Chile con carne tastes even better after it's been refrigerated.

Chapters may adopt a slang name. Denver chose the Pod Fathers, Utah picked the Latter Day Pods, and Washington, D.C., is home of the Bureaupods.

Marshall said the local chapter hasn't picked its name yet but its goals are to promote research, education and enjoyment of Chile.

"But right now, we're working on enjoyment."

Panel Proposes More Additives Leeway

WASHINGTON (AP) — A National Academy of Sciences panel proposed Friday giving the Food and Drug Administration more authority to weigh the relative risks of food additives, and suggested that saccharin should not be banned completely.

In a long-awaited report to Congress, the committee of scientists, lawyers and public policy experts headed by Dr. Frederick C. Robbins of Case Western Reserve University said the federal food regulation system "has become complicated, inflexible and inconsistent." It cited the saccharin controversy as an example.

The FDA tried to ban saccharin in 1977 when tests showed that high doses of the artificial sweetener caused cancer in male rats. The agency invoked the so-called "Delaney clause" of a 1958 law which requires banning any food additive found to cause cancer in animals or man.

Because saccharin is the only general-purpose artificial sweetener left on the U.S. market, the FDA move raised a public outcry. Congress intervened and passed an 18-month moratorium on the ban, while requiring warning labels and further studies. The moratorium ends May 23 unless extended by Congress.

Academy panel members said the FDA generally has less discretion than newer regulatory agencies, and should be allowed to weigh benefits as well as risks of food products.

The report, undertaken by the independent organization under a federal contract, said the FDA should be allowed to classify suspected foods and additives as posing high, moderate or low risks. This would give the agency flexibility in dealing with each broad category, including banning substances if risks are overwhelming, the panel said.

Under this proposed system, the panel said, saccharin probably would be in the moderate- or high-risk category and subject to some restrictions.

The committee said that if Congress wanted to deal with the artificial sweetener apart from revising the food laws, there were options ranging from a total ban to unrestricted use.

Most of the 37 panel members suggested a middle ground on saccharin, but five members said in a minority statement that enough was known to take immediate strong measures against the sweetener.

Possible steps between the extremes include banning saccharin as a food component but allowing consumers to add their own sweetener to foods; restricting saccharin's use through distribution and labeling without a direct ban, or continuing present policy. This involves requiring general warning labels while considering revising the food laws.

The Calorie Control Council, representing soft drink makers and others in the low-calorie food industry, applauded the academy's report and said it supported revising the food laws. The group said that if Congress heeded the report, saccharin would stay on the market.

The new study supported the conclusions of an academy report in November which said saccharin was a low-potency cancer-causing agent in animals and appears to promote the cancer-causing activity of other substances.

Although there was no proven human risk, the report said, saccharin "must be viewed as a potential cause of cancer in humans."

Under the proposed revision of food laws, Congress would give the FDA power to bear arguments and make judgments on classifications.

Dr. Don K. Price of Harvard University said the revision would give the FDA the same decision-making ability of such agencies as the Environmental Protection Agency.

FDA Commissioner Donald Kennedy predicted the committee's recommendations will start a long debate over whether Congress wants to transfer so much of its authority to a regulatory agency.

Tech Law Students To Compete

Three Texas Tech University law students will compete in the 1979 American Bar Regional Client Counseling Competition March 10 at the University of Houston College of Law.

Members of the Texas Tech team are Linda Groves, third-year student, Steve Harr, second-year student, both of Lubbock, and Terry Carr, first-year student from Canadian.

Ten other law school teams will compete in the regional meet, with the winner entering national competition at San Diego School of Law on March 31-April 1.

Teams competing against the Tech students are from the University of Arkansas at Fayetteville, University of Arkansas at Little Rock, Baylor University, Loyola University of New Orleans, St. Mary's University of San Antonio, South Texas School of Law, The University of Texas, and Tulane University.

Client counseling competition tests students' counseling skills by simulating a law office consultation. Ten days before competition the team receives a short brief of the client's problem. The brief contains information similar to that a secretary might be told when a client calls for an appointment.

During the competition each team has 30 minutes to interview the client and 15 minutes to discuss the plan of action or solution to the client's problem and explain it to competition judges.

More than 110 law schools throughout the country have entered teams in national competition.

This will be the fifth year that the Texas Tech University School of Law has entered. Tech teams have twice won regional competitions and advanced to the national finals.

Tech team coaches are Charles P. Bubany, professor of law, and Phil Brown, Lubbock attorney. Brown's law firm is also sponsor of an annual award for Tech students participating in the competition.

Texas Primary Date Clash Nears

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Democratic leaders meet Saturday to thrash out the question of a presidential primary in 1980.

Some want a presidential preference vote before the primary elections, which have been held in May and June. Some want the presidential vote at the same time they vote on state and local candidates. Some don't want the presidential primary at all.

State Democratic Chairman Billy Goldberg said the 62-member committee, which represents each senatorial district of the state, would hear recommendations from the SDEC legislative subcommittee.

"Debate is expected to be brisk," he said.

The subcommittee voted Feb. 24 to oppose the presidential preference primary bill favored by Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and Speaker Bill Clayton.

The bill, introduced by Sen. Jack Ogg, D-Houston, would call for a presidential primary on March 11, 1980, and would move the primary elections from May and June to July and August.

Gov. Bill Clements has not declared himself on the date of a presidential primary but has said repeatedly he will veto any bill moving the date of the primary elections later in the year.

Former state Democratic chairman Calvin Guest, Bryan, said Friday he opposed Ogg's bill.

"The issue involved is not whether or not we have a presidential primary, but whether or not we protect the honesty of the nomination process," Guest said.

"The effect of this bill would be to further weaken the party system to make it even more difficult for the average grassroots Democrat, or for that matter the average Republican, to influence what his party does."

A Senate committee hearing on Ogg's bill and two other presidential primary measures is set for Monday.

Chief Says U.S. Navy Would Win Conflict

GROTON, Conn. (AP) — The U.S. Navy would win an armed naval conflict with Soviet forces, but it is diminishing in size and budget cuts are proving harmful, says the chief of naval operations.

"I think that if this country, God help us, had to go to war and we had to send our Navy to do its job, it would do it and do it all right," Adm. Thomas Hayward said Thursday during a visit to the Navy submarine base in Groton. "We'll lose a lot, but the other guy will lose more. I'm saying we will win." He added, "I'm saying the direction we're going in is a dangerous direction."

'Obedient' Skateboard Developed In Pittsburgh

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Inspired three years ago by a former Pittsburgh policeman, a city employee is trying to market a skateboard that won't run away.

Harry Hoover, a 50-year-old machinist from Sheraden, has filed a disclosure with the U.S. Patent Office, which protects the idea from infringement for a year.

The board is equipped with metal brakes that engage when the rider dismounts.

"I've gotten feelers, but no definite contracts," Hoover said.

Proposal May Improve Lubbock School Funding

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Lubbock taxpayers, who often gripe about systematic property revaluation by the city-school tax office, may get a big reward from state government because the office has done such a good job.

A legislative committee has endorsed an idea to appropriate more state monies to school districts — including Lubbock — that accurately appraise taxable property.

The concept, intended to encourage school officials to upgrade their tax appraisal practices, could mean a bonus of up to $1.4 million for the Lubbock Independent School District.

"I'm in full agreement with the idea," state Rep. Froy Salinas, Democrat from Lubbock's eastside District 75-B, said.

The Lubbock tax office does a good job of appraising property. Unfortunately, a lot of school districts across the state do a terrible job — and as a result, we in Lubbock end up paying more than our share in taxes.

The (House committee's) recommendation would reward districts for appraising property accurately. We need that kind of incentive for tax equalization in Texas."

The House Ways and Means Committee voted Thursday to recommend such a carrot-and-stick approach in reimbursing school districts for revenue losses caused by the 1978 Tax Relief Amendment.

The state constitutional amendment, passed by voters in November, requires local districts to give each homeowner a $5,000 exemption — and more to the elderly and disabled: to tax agricultural land on its productivity, instead of its higher market value; and to provide other tax breaks. Some of those mandates still require enabling legislation.

State officials have promised to reimburse school districts for all or part of the tax-revenue losses caused by the amendment.

The House panel endorsed a bill with these provisions:

—In 1980, a district would be reimbursed dollar-for-dollar for its lost revenue.

—But after that, a district could receive as little as 90 cents on the dollar if its property appraisals for tax purposes stray from market value by more than the state average. On the other hand, school districts whose appraisals are at least as good as the statewide average would get more than their actual losses.

The state School Tax Assessment Practices Board last year found the Lubbock city-school tax office to be among the most accurate in the state. On the average, the office's appraisals of tangible property deviate from market value by only 3 percent, according to the study.

In contrast, the average school district in Texas was found to be under-evaluating its property by 33 percent.

The Lubbock tax office attributes its accuracy in part to the four-year cycle of revaluing real estate here. Regular reappraisals of homes and businesses keep the tax values close to market values, as mandated by the state constitution. A computer printout shows that of the state's 1,100 school districts, 253 are doing an above-average job of appraising property. There could be more such districts in the 1981 fiscal year when the carrot-and-stick treatment would begin.

Students To Hear Lubbock Artist

Junior Historians are high school members of the Texas State Historical Association and study historical events of their communities and regions.

The students will tour the Ranching Heritage Center at Texas Tech University this afternoon.

Hosts for the meeting, which opens with registration at LCC at 9 a.m., are the Plains American Heritage and the South Plains American Heritage programs.

Among the most accurate large districts are Waco, Austin, Amarillo, Corpus Christi, Wichita Falls, Kerrville, Lubbock, Borger, Galveston, Killeen, Houston, Beaumont, Fort Worth, Texas City, Denton, McAllen, Victoria, Denison, Midland and Ector County.

The House Ways and Means Committee at first voted to limit a district's reimbursement reward for accurate appraisals to 15 percent. But on Thursday, the panel removed that ceiling.

As the bill stands now, explained committee Chairman Bob Davis of Irving, a district could receive as much as 48.3 percent more than its actual dollar losses.

Lubbock school Superintendent Ed Irons last week told the school board that the Tax Relief Amendment could knock as much as $200 million off the local tax roll. At the current tax rate, that would mean a loss of about $2.8 million — an amount for which Irons hopes to get reimbursed by the state.

Under the bill recommended by the House committee, Lubbock would be eligible for a bonus of up to 48 percent above the $2.8 million loss — that is, an extra $1.4 million.

"I'd certainly go for the reward idea," Irons said upon learning of the committee action. "There should be some incentive for districts with accurate tax methods. This would encourage all of us to do a good job in appraising property."

However, Irons noted that the recommended bill has a long way to go in the legislative process.

"I'll be happy with 100 percent reimbursement. There have been rumors that districts might be reimbursed only 75 percent," he said.

The House committee expects to take its final vote on legislation implementing the Tax Relief Amendment on Monday. Speaker Bill Clayton wants the House to debate the bill March 12.

Clayton disagreed with using reimbursement as a lever to improve school district property appraisals.

"My perception of reimbursement was reimbursement dollar-for-dollar. I would think that anytime you mandate somebody to do something that costs them money, you are required to reimburse that full dollar loss," he said. But Davis said federal courts have held dollar-for-dollar reimbursement unconstitutional in Louisiana because such a scheme rewarded districts for under-appraising property.

The two-year cost of reimbursement is pegged between $420 million and $450 million.

In its current draft, the tax relief implementation bill also would: —Exempt $10,000 of the market value of disabled persons and those over 65 from school taxes, without regard to income and in addition to exemptions granted by local school boards. This exemption would come on top of the $5,000 exemption every homeowner would get. —Exempt two cars or light trucks per family from property taxes, starting in 1980. This was proposed by Rep. Salinas to effect eliminate taxes on family cars.

Halloween Bath Proves Costly For Reveller

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — The bath that Terry Ackiss took last Halloween night is going to cost him $426 — mainly because he took it, uninvited, in Ruth Davis' tub.

Norfolk Circuit Court Judge Alfred W. Whitehurst on Thursday suspended a three-year jail term for Ackiss, but ordered him to pay Mrs. Davis $425 in damages, plus $1 for the water he used.

The damages were to the front door of the home of Mrs. Davis, 76. Ackiss kicked it in to gain access to the bathroom so he could take the bath.

Ackiss originally was charged with burglary, a charge that could have sent him to prison 20 years. But felony charge was reduced through plea-bargaining to a misdemeanor, and Ackiss' attorney, Franklin A. Swartz, expressed gratitude to the court.

Ackiss testified Thursday that for some reason — maybe the tequila and whiskey he'd been drinking — he had a sudden urge to take a bath while walking home from a Halloween party last year about 1:30 a.m.

After failing to break into one house, he said, he managed to kick in the front door of the home owned by Mrs. Davis, who lives alone.

When police arrived, he was quietly soaking in the tub of water.

Independence Day Celebrated In Texas

WASHINGTON-ON-THE-BRAZOS (AP) — Texas was 143 years old Friday, and presiding over the birthday party of the old Republic was the state's new Republican governor — the first in 108 years.

It was a cold and blustery March 2, 1836 — with the Battle of the Alamo raging to the west — when a group of frontiersmen gathered in a tiny gunsmith shop overlooking the Brazos River.

While the late winter north swept across the hill country outside, 59 Texans declared with their signatures Texas' independence from Mexico.

The garrison at the Alamo had but four days left. But their stand inspired the Texas Army led by General Sam Houston to eventually defeat the army of Santa Anna at San Jacinto.

Twice the capital of the Republic, Washington-on-the-Brazos also was the site of the signing of the Constitution of the Republic of Texas and the home of its last president, a country doctor named Anson Jones.

The pioneers would have felt right at home Friday as wind and rain pelted Gov. Bill Clements and about 400 bedraggled people who braved the weather to eat a piece of the five-tier birthday cake and celebrate the Lone Star holiday.

Clements told the audience that, even though this day commemorated the separation of Texas from Mexico, the state should lead in the effort to establish good relations with its neighbor to the south.

"Though still separated culturally, we can never be separated politically or geographically," Clements said.

"Now is an era of togetherness for Texas and Mexico," he said. "We must take the lead in breaking down the barriers that keep us apart."

Clements issued a proclamation commemorating the signing of the Declaration of Independence, saying, "The paper on which the statement is made is tattered, but it retains the vitality of those men who signed it.

"The words of the Declaration of Independence are just as pertinent to the state of Texas today," he continued.

He told the audience that a "revival of that spirit is needed today" to reaffirm faith in the principles contained in the document.

Beer Cans Used To Collect Solar Energy

SPARTA, Ill. (AP) — Officials of the Sparta high school vocational center are raising glasses in a toast to beer cans.

Students there riveted 48,000 cans into a 750-foot solar energy collector that could keep the facility from running out of heating gas as it has during the past two winters, said Michael Cundiff, Sparta vocational coordinator.

Southern Illinois University design teacher Richard E. Archer scaled his 30-square-foot model to a 250-square-foot version and recommended three of them for the center.

The Comprehensive Employment Training Act furnished $58,000 to pay wages for young workers and building materials cost $3,000.

The empty cans were cut in two and riveted to a metal litho plate. Everything was painted flat black and put in a long frame, the top of which was covered with heavy plastic.

Ducts connect the three panels to the inside of the building.

At ground level, a small six-horsepower motor pushes air from inside the building into the solar panel. The air travels up and over the half cans, which turn sunlight into heat and back into the building at ceiling level.

Last month, air in the solar panel registered 120 degrees while outside, it was a chilling 18.

PARIS (AP) — Fishermen on the trawler La Sabla hauled in their nets and found they had snared the French navy submarine Marsouin, maritime authorities reported Thursday.

$50 Billion Needed For Waste Cleanup

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency estimated Friday that the cost of cleaning up hazardous chemical waste dumps around the country could range as high as $50 billion.

The estimate is the first federal price tag put on the cleanup of such areas as New York's Love Canal and the so-called "Valley of the Drums" near Louisville, Ky.

Barbara Blum, the agency's deputy administrator, said there may be 1,200 to 2,000 dumps which could be leaking chemicals into soil and water.

"It's a tremendous problem," she told the Senate Environment and Public Works Committee. She said state governments "don't have the resources or money to solve it."

She said a federal fund, financed by taxes on chemical production, may have to be established to pay the cleanup costs.

Half the dumps are thought to be abandoned, she said. This means a company or owner of the land or wastes would have to be found if government tried to sue for cleanup costs.

Some of the chemicals can be burned or treated and rendered harmless. Others cannot be neutralized and would have to be sealed and stored indefinitely. The estimates include potential excavation and transportation costs.

Miss Blum said the figures should be regarded as only estimates. No study has been made of either the number of personnel needed or the legal means of enforcing a cleanup.

If the government does establish a control program for disposal of wastes in the future, she said, it will face a problem of where to locate dumps.

In related testimony, the agency's chief of radiation waste programs, David G. Hawkins, told the panel that "relatively high" levels of radiation have been found at 19 former uranium and radium processing sites in Denver.

Hawkins said additional agency monitoring equipment will arrive in Denver by next Wednesday. Testing for levels of radon gas will commence at that time, he said.

"We have to expect to find additional sites," Hawkins told Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., a member of the committee.

In response to Hart's questions, Hawkins said it is not yet clear to what degree the federal government, through its involvement in nuclear weaponry, may be responsible for the radiation.

Last year, Congress passed legislation to pay for the cleanup of uranium mill tailings at 20 abandoned sites across the country because those mills processed ore for federal use.

Hawkins said the difficult task facing the EPA will be to trace any building materials or soils that may have been taken from the Denver sites for construction.

Miss Blum said the Denver problem became known last month when an EPA officer found a surprise reference to uranium processing companies in Denver in 1914. The initial sites were found by looking them up in a 1914 Denver telephone directory, she said.

Federal Conflict Hampers Business

AUSTIN (AP) — The conflict between business and government that stems from increasing regulation could cause economic institutions to crumble, the president of the Rand Corp. said Friday.

Donald B. Rice said the nation must recognize that all the goals of government regulations — from price stability to product quality — cannot be met at once.

"Without changes of the sort I have suggested, business will begin to adapt the current set of institutions to its own ends," Rice said at a University of Texas symposium on business and government partnership.

He said the president should have authority to set priorities, with Congress monitoring his actions.

Regulations for energy efficiency might be more important at a particular time in the steel industry, for example, than regulations to reduce pollution.

"Achieving any one social goal would not — as it is now — be declared paramount and immutable," Rice said. "To say the least, this will require legislation."

The Rand Corp. conducts research on national security and domestic affairs.

Rice called the present abundance of regulations from different agencies uncoordinated and "chaotic."

He said companies will stop competing in the marketplace if regulations are not brought under control. Instead, he predicted, they will introduce products to take advantage of markets guaranteed by regulations.

Rice added he was not suggesting that government regulations be abandoned but perhaps a modest cutback is necessary.

"Once we recognize that our resources are limited and that tradeoffs must be made among equally laudable objectives, we have a start on a solution," he said.

Rice said the solution also includes changes in business practices.

For example, business should avoid "the double standard of being against regulations except when it benefits," Rice said.

John Paul II To Visit Poland In Early June

WARSAW (AP) — Poland announced Friday, after long and secret negotiations, that Pope John Paul II will travel to his native country in June, becoming the first pontiff to visit a Communist nation.

The Vatican waited almost three hours to confirm the Polish announcement, apparently indicating some embarrassment in the way the trip was announced. Papal trips traditionally are announced by the Vatican.

John Paul is the first Polish pope and the first non-Italian pope in 455 years.

He had wanted to visit Poland in May for the 900th anniversary of the martyrdom of Poland's patron saint, St. Stanislaw, whom he has described as an early advocate of human rights.

The date appeared unsuitable to Communist authorities, who apparently felt it would encourage Roman Catholic and other dissidents to voice opposition to the existing regime.

In John Paul's Christmas message to his old diocese in Krakow, he described St. Stanislaw as "a spokesman for the most essential human rights and the rights of the nation." Polish censors refused to let the message be printed, but it was read from church pulpits.

The pontiff, immediately after his inauguration, had announced his intention to visit Poland. L'Osservatore Romano, the official Vatican newspaper, had quoted John Paul as saying he felt it was his duty to be in Poland for the May 8 anniversary of St. Stanislaw's death.

Poland said the pope will visit June 2-10.

The Vatican's chief spokesman, when asked about the Polish announcement, initially said, "No comment, no announcement yet. The matter is under examination. I'm not authorized to say any more." The visit was confirmed almost three hours later, but a spokesman for Vatican radio said its evening broadcasts to Eastern Europe would not carry word of the visit.

The Polish religious office said the pope is to visit the cities of Warsaw, Gniezno, Czestochowa and Krakow at the invitation of the Polish episcopate led by its primate, Cardinal Stefan Wyszynski.

"The first son in the history of the Polish nation to hold the highest rank in church will be most cordially received by authorities and the community," the official Polish news agency PAP quoted President Henryk Jablonski as saying.

Town Has No Taxes - Or City Hall

CLEVELAND, Mont. (AP) — Unlike its big city cousin, this Cleveland has no use for taxes.

"We wouldn't know what to do with a tax if we had one," the town's leading — and only — businessman, Roy Sattleen, 43, owner of the Cleveland Bar, said.

That's because it doesn't have a City Hall.

There is no government, no politics, and the residents have a sure fire way of dealing with trouble-makers.

And the seven residents of this tiny unincorporated town in north-central Montana want to keep it that way.

"If somebody gets out of line here, we just tell them to leave," Sattleen said. "We don't have to battle any city hall to get what we want."

The residents pay only county, state and federal taxes.

"Politics, what's that?" asked Alice Albrecht, a 45-year-resident of the town. "Nobody here knows whether you're a Democrat or a Republican, let alone cares."

The seven-student Cleveland school, attended by children from surrounding ranches, is financed through county levies, and police protection — although seldom needed — is provided by the Blaine County sheriff's department.

"There's really no comparison between the two Clevelands — and that's a shame for the other one," Mrs. Albrecht said.

Iceland is a nation of 100 percent literacy. The per capita publication of new books is almost 20 percent greater than in the United States.

Older Drinking Age Requested

AJ Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Snyder State Rep. Mike Ezzell wants to raise the legal drinking age.

Under HB 1322 introduced by Ezzell, Texas would follow the lead of several other states that have increased the legal drinking age to keep alcohol out of high schools.

Ezzell's legislation would raise the 18 years old limit to 19 years.

Another bill introduced by Sen. Ezzell, HB 1324, would allow the establishment of cost-saving health maintenance organizations for dental care.

Current Texas laws allows HMOs to be established for health care, but only a few have gone into operation.

Ezzell has also introduced legislation, HB 1323, establishing a statewide system of cat and dog registration to prevent rabies. The bill gives county commissioners courts authority to require the registration and to operate animal control pounds.

Early Morning Arrest Ends Couple's Aluminum 'Pipe Dream'

Lubbock County sheriff's deputies Friday morning arrested a 26-year-old Lubbock man after they spotted him leaving a metal company where he allegedly was trying to sell stolen aluminum pipe.

Glen McKinney told deputies early Friday that about $300 worth of pipe had been taken from his farm north of New Deal. Upon checking several local metal dealers, the deputies found that a couple had inquired about selling a large amount of pipe at Commercial Metals Co., 305 N. Ave. H.

The deputies arrested the couple and booked the man into jail on suspicion of felony theft. The woman was released after questioning, deputies said.

In other activities, Glenda Keyton reported that nearly $3,000 worth of copper pipe valves had been taken from the Pierce Micronizing Co. of 1007 25th St. (rear) Friday. She said entry into the business had been gained through a window.

Burglars made off with about $2,100 worth of property from Lee Bodenhamer's rural Lubbock residence Friday morning, even though they left some of their booty behind.

Deputies said they found two TV sets and a microwave oven outside the Rt. 1, Lubbock house upon investigating the break-in, but Bodenhamer reported that some jewelry, a stereo, some camera equipment and some guns were missing.

A yellow tandem trailer, valued at $1,500 was hauled away from its resting place on the lot at the Security National Bank at Brownfield Highway and Slide Road, police reported Friday.

Vandals blew six holes in the windshield of Johnny Ramirez's car while it was parked in the front yard of his 3202 Emory St. residence sometime Thursday night, according to police reports.

The bullets broke out both the front and rear windshields of the car, doing about $300 worth of damage, the report stated.

Burglars ripped off Godwin's Service Station at 2829 Clovis Road early Friday, getting away with more than $1,000 in loot. The bandits pulled a board off a window to gain access to the station, and once inside, took many cartons of cigarettes, some hubcaps, clothes and tapes, police said.

E. G. Fowler of Fowler Manufacturing reported Friday that someone had entered his business at 1500 Marshall Ave. and taken $917 worth of property, including some tools and torches. He said the burglars entered through a sliding door.

A fight outside a Fourth Street club about 1:30 a.m. Friday resulted in the gathering of a large crowd, the arrest of three persons and the shattering of a car's back window.

Police reported that when they arrived at the nightspot in the 2200-block of Fourth Street there was a "very large" gathering, with much yelling, cursing and fighting. Reports show two male participants, ages 18 and 19, were arrested and a juvenile was taken into custody.

Daniel Garcia of 3104 Second Place said his car window was broken out when he backed his vehicle into the crowd attempting to break up the ruckus.

Officers said when they ordered the crowd to disperse, the 18-year-old walked to the east side of the parking lot, picked up a rock and threw it at a parked truck. When police went after the man, the suspect picked up a handful of gravel and tossed it, hitting two patrol cars and a television station's staff car.

The teen-ager was arrested in an alley after a brief struggle with two policemen, reports indicate.

The other man and the juvenile were taken into custody after they reportedly refused to obey police orders. Both briefly resisted officers, according to reports.

In other police activity, Kim Bailey of 2304-B 16th St. reported that her parked car was pushed into a telephone pole, causing about $225 damage, at 2:35 a.m. Friday in the 1500-block of Avenue W.

A $1,200 stereo was reported stolen in the break-in of Grey Uhorchok's 2207 Seventh St., Apt. 106, residence between 8 p.m. and shortly before midnight Thursday.

Farmers' D.C. Damages Guess Lowered Slightly

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The National Park Service Friday revised downward to $975,000 its estimate of damage done to Washington's Mall area by protesting farmers and their tractors.

"Our worst fears were not realized," spokesman George Berkley said. Initial estimates of damage were $1.1 million.

The 70-acre Mall, a mecca for tourists and strollers, stretches from the Capitol to the Washington Monument and is bordered by Smithsonian Institution galleries and museums and the Agriculture Department.

About 20 million people use it each year, more than any parkland in the nation. Its lawns were badly chewed up by tractor wheels and Berkley said the area will be closed from six to eight weeks for repairs.

About 2,000 tractors and trailers were barricaded on the Mall — surrounded by a wall of buses, trash trucks and police vehicles — after they created rush hour chaos when they entered Washington Feb. 5.

Tractors left gradually as weeks passed by. After police finally told them to leave, American Agriculture Movement farmers agreed to move most of the remaining tractors by this weekend.

They will be able to leave about 50 behind, parked in a symbolic demonstration near the Capitol.

Berkley said officials are seriously considering offers from groups of farmers from Maryland, Idaho, Georgia, Oregon and Kansas to help fix up the Mall, primarily with grass seed donations.

He said one Kansas farmer sent a $2 contribution and said "we could take the $2 and stick it. He was a little more specific than that."

Maintenance crews initially feared it would take a half million dollars to re-grade and fill in deep ruts caused by tractor tires.

They reduced the estimate to between $300,000 and $400,000.

"That's a big savings right there," Berkley said.

Cancer Claims Dewey Bartlett

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Former U.S. Sen. Dewey F. Bartlett, a one-term Republican who retired from the Senate in January, is dead at 59 of lung cancer.

Bartlett, a former governor of Oklahoma who prided himself on being a tough political fighter, died in his sleep late Thursday night at his Tulsa home.

Gov. George Nigh said Bartlett's body would lie in state at the Oklahoma Capitol Sunday, and a memorial service would be conducted Sunday afternoon. The funeral will be Tuesday in Tulsa.

In Washington, President Carter said that although Bartlett's Senate career was cut short by illness, he "had already established himself as a strong conservative voice in the Senate, with an abiding concern for solving our nation's energy problems."

One of only four Oklahomans to serve both as governor and senator, Bartlett was one of the state's most successful politicians despite being a Republican, a native of Ohio, a Princeton University graduate and a Roman Catholic.

When he won the Senate race in 1972, he became a spokesman for many conservative causes and a champion of the oil industry in Washington.

Bartlett is survived by his wife, Ann, and three children, Dewey Jr., Joan and Michael.

Live Cattle Prices Set New Record

CHICAGO (Reuters) — Live cattle prices hit $70 per hundredweight for the first time ever this week with 4,000 head of 1,000-1,150-pound choice slaughter steers changing hands for this price at Amarillo, market sources said. Demand at this level was good and sellers are holding out for even higher prices, they said. But rapidly rising live prices have out-paced the wholesale carcass and beef market and led to trade talk of less slaughter next week if meat packers close down to minimize current losses. Closures and less kill could force a rise in the wholesale beef market and enable packers to resume working trade sources said. Cattle-Fax research analyst Tommy Beall said a carcass price rise of $3 to $4 per hundredweight early next week would catch up with this week's jump in live cattle prices. He said this is possible as packers are likely to cut kill. Retail and wholesale beef this week moved well with little indication of consumer resistance to higher prices and no backups in the pipeline. (Cattle-Fax is an analysis firm linked to the National Cattlemen's Association). Packers find it more economical to close down temporarily than to reduce operations. In the past this has forced more aggressive wholesale bidding and raised wholesale prices toward profitable levels. An Illini Beef Packers, Inc., spokesman said the profit margin squeeze in the industry now is tougher than in a long time. "I don't think anybody is making a buck," he said, but added that Illini plans to remain open for slaughtering next week. He said he had heard talk of some packers closing next week but would not elaborate. E. W. Kneipe president John Stamm said his company is remaining open. He too had heard of impending closures but would not give details. Cattle-Fax's Beall said any cut in kill is unlikely to moderate the rise in live beef prices as it is primarily a seller's market with kill already well down from last year. Beall said he expects to see short term strength in live cattle prices as "we are moving everything we produce." Wholesale and retail prices have not yet caught up with live prices and for packers the economics now "are just not working," he said. Competition among packers for cattle is extreme and growing as the number available for killing declines — slaughter this week was 650,000, compared with around 725,000 a year ago. Thus it is not possible for all to work near capacity and remain profitable, he said. Some plants that specialize in cow killing have closed and more are to do so as cows are kept back for herd rebuilding. Cow kill in February was 500,000, against 800,000 a year ago, he said.

PLAINS AGRICULTURE

By DUANE HOWELL

THE NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF WHEAT Growers has called for a higher target price and loan level to boost participation in the 1979 wheat set-aside program and prevent "deep economic regression" in the wheat economy. Winston Wilson of Quannah, NAWG president, detailed the organization's 1979 farm program recommendations at hearings conducted by the House Agriculture Committee. He said last year's "modest" set-aside program and grain reserve actions had yielded only tentative improvement in the U. S. wheat situation and any less of an undertaking in 1979 would nullify last year's efforts. Wilson called attention to prospects for an increased 1979 wheat crop and near-record supplies and said the government's 20 percent wheat set-aside program would require maximum participation to be successful in improving wheat supply and price conditions.

THE NAWG RECOMMENDED A TARGET PRICE increase to at least 85 percent of parity with a guaranteed deficiency payment of 30 cents per bushel to provide incentives for increased program participation. Growers complying with the set-aside would receive these and other benefits over non-compliers. Other program recommendations included: — Price support loans at no less than 60 percent of parity in all counties. — Open-ended commodity loans at a maximum 7 percent interest with a minimum Commodity Credit Corp. resale price of 180 percent of the loan. — Immediate reserve eligibility for 1978 and 1979 crop wheat with storage payments of 30 cents per bushel and no interest charges. — Full program benefits to those electing to buy or graze-out wheat acreage and implementation of the special haying and grazing program. — Land diversion payments if the 1979 set-aside will not adequately reduce production. — Extension of the crop disaster program through 1981.

WILSON TOLD THE COMMITTEE THE WHEAT program could not "single-handedly" restore health to the wheat economy. He further recommended: — Increased Public Law 480 shipments and more wheat market development funding. — Repeal of the "Jackson-Vanik" amendment denying credits to important non-market economies. — Immediate government negotiations with major wheat exporting nations to conclude an agreement for share supply management in return for "significant increases" in the U. S. wheat loan rate.

Agency Bans Herbicide In Emergency Action

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency Thursday invoked emergency powers to temporarily and immediately suspend the use of the herbicide 2,4,5-T because it may cause miscarriages.

EPA Deputy Administrator Barbara Blum said the emergency suspension stemmed from studies that showed a dramatic increase in miscarriages among women in the Alsea, Ore., area soon after surrounding forests were sprayed with 2,4,5-T.

An estimated 7 million pounds of 2,4,5-T are used each year in the nation to control weeds on power line rights-of-way, pastures and forest lands, the EPA said. In addition, the agency suspended the use of the herbicide silvex, which is used primarily by homeowners to control weeds on lawns.

Both herbicides contain TCDD, a substance that tests have shown to produce birth defects, miscarriages and tumors in laboratory animals. "Taken together, all these facts sound an alarm. Prudence dictates EPA to stop use until we have a fuller understanding of this phenomenon and its implication for human health," said Ms. Blum. She said a new study of the health implications of 2,4,5-T was initiated after women from the Oregon community reported they experienced miscarriages soon after the forest area was sprayed with the herbicide.

The miscarriage rate in Alsea was significantly higher than an area in eastern Oregon where no 2,4,5-T was used. "The number of miscarriages peaked dramatically for the six years, and particularly for the last three years, in the Alsea area for the month of June," the EPA said.

Forest spraying occurs annually in March and April. "It's a remarkable correlation," Ms. Blum said. "While it is not proof of a cause-and-effect relationship, it is highly suggestive, particularly in light of animal data, and gives us great cause for concern."

Credit Association Told Farm Money Available

By KATHLEEN HARRIS, Avalanche-Journal Farm Writer

"Money is available and always will be as long as the farm credit system is healthy and people are willing to invest," Jack Barton, president of the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of Houston, said Friday at the Lubbock Production Credit Association meeting. About 400 members were present for the 45th annual stockholders' meeting at the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center. "Interest rates are tapering off some," he said, "but are still high, under the 11.5 percent prime rate." Barton, who has been president of FICB since 1976, said members should be proud of their investment in PCA. "The PCA is a national institution in the public money market second only to the U. S. government," he said. Alton Strickland, president of the 1-200 member Lubbock PCA, said about $117 million was loaned in the nine-county region in the fiscal year ended

September 1978. That figure was a $11 million increase over the previous year in which $106 million was loaned. "Officials have projected $125 million will be loaned through PCA in the current year," Strickland said, "but other lending institutions have loaned a large amount, so the PCA figure may be close to the same as last year."

"The increase in dollars loaned is due mainly to inflation and higher operational costs for farmers," Strickland pointed out. Renewals will be up considerably this year in the nine-county region, he added. Two directors were elected at the meeting. Representing Place 1 will be Cleve Littlepage of Lynn County while Dewey Wells of Crosby County will represent Place 2. In the reorganization meeting, Littlepage was selected chairman of the board and Wells was chosen vice chairman.

Experts See Beef Price Increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — Retail beef prices, already at record levels, jumped another 4.4 percent in February, according to preliminary figures released Friday by the Agriculture Department.

In a weekly report, officials said the supermarket price of choice grade beef averaged $2.14 a pound for all cuts, compared with a final January price of slightly less than $2.05 a pound. The department earlier had estimated January beef prices at an all-cut retail average of more than $2.05 a pound, up 6.6 percent from less than $1.94 in December.

Compared to a year earlier, February beef prices were up 32.3 percent from less than $1.62 a pound then, the figures showed. Last week, the Labor Department reported that rising beef prices contributed to a 1.4 percent increase in the January food price index, the sharpest rise since last April.

The department's new figures, although still tentative, will put further pressure on the consumer food index for February, which will be released by the Labor Department later this month. Soaring cattle prices caused by producers trimming their herds the past several years are the main cause of rising prices at retail meat counters.

The revised figures showed a January increase in beef prices of 5.8 percent from the December average.

CATTLE: 100, not enough on offer to test prices. Sheep: 25, no price test.

Experts See Beef Price Increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — Retail beef prices, already at record levels, jumped another 4.4 percent in February, according to preliminary figures released Friday by the Agriculture Department.

In a weekly report, officials said the supermarket price of choice grade beef averaged $2.14 a pound for all cuts, compared with a final January price of slightly less than $2.05 a pound. The department earlier had estimated January beef prices at an all-cut retail average of more than $2.05 a pound, up 6.6 percent from less than $1.94 in December.

The revised figures showed a January increase in beef prices of 5.8 percent from the December average.

Scientologist's Deferment At Center Of Dispute

BONN, West Germany (AP) — A legal battle is raging between the Scientology Church and the West German army over a draft deferment for a trainee minister of the controversial cult.

The deferment was granted to 23-year-old Franz Walter Siedler by a Darmstadt court last December, freeing him from 15 months of Bundeswehr duty while he completes studies in the Scientology Church of Germany, which claims 20,000 members.

The deferment was the first ever granted in West Germany to a Scientologist on theological grounds, and the group's leaders said the ruling was their "most significant success in a German court."

Siedler's deferment "sets Scientology ministers on a par with ministers of the Protestant and Roman Catholic churches who have taken vows as subdeacons," church spokesman Kurt Weiland contended.

But Bundeswehr officials, fearing Siedler's case will provoke a flood of cult-related deferments, appealed the ruling and the appeal was handed this week to the West Berlin court.

A rising number of conscientious objectors is already causing a manpower squeeze for the 495,000-strong Bundeswehr, NATO's biggest European force. An estimated 40,000 draft-age West Germans claimed conscientious objector status last year, choosing to work out their military commitment in alternate civilian services.

"We are of the opinion that Scientology is not comparable to traditional churches," said Siegfried Thiel, spokesman of the Wiesbaden Military Office which drafted Siedler. "The court's ruling was not legally binding. It was left open for appeal."

"We hope the deferment will be quickly overturned," said a defense official in Bonn, who asked not to be named. "We are worried the case could set a precedent for members of other sects."

Siedler is attending a Scientology seminar in Frankfurt to become a full-time minister in West Germany, church officials said. Currently there are four Germans, two Swiss and two U.S. citizens on the staff of ministers and 30 other Scientologists working as part-time "spiritual advisers."

If Siedler's study deferment is confirmed, Scientology officials said, he would automatically be exempted from military service after completing his studies, as are newly ordained ministers of traditional religions in West Germany.

The case is intriguing because Scientology is one of the groups branded a menace to young people by the West German government and traditional churches.

The Ministry of Youth, Family and Health has estimated that 150,000 West Germans, mostly in the 14 to 28 age group, have joined a dozen various sects whose "common aim is the pursuit of power and money."

Named in the ministry's warnings are the Rev. Sun Myung Moon's Unification Church, the Society of Transcendental Meditation, Hare Krishna monks, the Divine Light Mission of Maharaj Ji, Mose David Berg's Children of God and L. Ron Hubbard's Church of Scientology.

Hubbard founded the church in the United States in 1954 and moved his world headquarters to a mansion outside London in the late 1960s. He is currently appealing a conviction on fraud charges in France.

The mass suicide of more than 900 Peoples Temple members last November in Jonestown, Guyana, spurred calls in West Germany for a crackdown on sects and cults.

The Scientology Church of Germany, which is headquartered in Munich, claimed last month it is being victimized by government smear tactics reminiscent of Hitler's persecution of the Jews.

Spokesman Rudolf Moyses said Scientology has been erroneously lumped together with youth sects, and he denied the group has anything to do with suicides, brain-washings, sexual abuses and/or crimes.

Moyes described Scientology as non-profit, non-authoritarian and apolitical with a mostly adult membership averaging 30 years of age.

"The aim of Scientology is to better the conditions of man and society and to create a civilization without war, criminality and insanity," said Moyses.

CHARLES W. COLSON

Former Nixon Aide Runs Prison Reform Operation

NEW YORK (AP) — Charles W. "Chuck" Colson, the so-called "hatchet man" of the Nixon administration turned advocate of Christianity and prison reform, now runs an unusual, nationwide ministry — a "fellowship" for convicts.

"I learned to love those guys," he says, recalling his own seven months in prison for his part in defaming Nixon opponents. "I couldn't put it behind me."

Out of his prison experience, the one-time presidential strategist who was converted to Christianity shortly before his guilty plea, has built a fast-growing, broad and versatile network of tending to prisoners.

"It seems to be gathering momentum like a steamroller," he told a recent news conference, held in connection with the current motion picture, "Born Again," about his Watergate ordeal and based on his book of the same name.

"Christians across the country are rising up in behalf of these forgotten men locked away in cold, concrete holes."

His "Prison Fellowship," with its headquarters house in Washington, now has a staff of 40, including ex-convicts and clergy, working with prisons around the country, training leadership groups, forming communication lines with nearby congregations.

"It's up to Christians if anything is ever going to be done about changes in the prisons," he said. "No one else really cares."

Colson, 47, a New Englander who is now a Southern Baptist, calls the prisons "stinking rotten holes" of "utter, pervasive bitterness and despair" and says two-thirds of them should be closed as "not fit for human life."

He says the prison system is an "abysmal failure" and an incubator of crime with four out of five crimes in America committed by ex-convicts.

"The prisons are not working," he said. "They're not rehabilitative nor have they deterred crime. They've got to be radically reformed."

Meantime, Colson has designated all his royalties from the movie to the prison ministry. He says it is a "Christian duty" to help those in trouble such as prisoners, citing Christ's prescription in Matthew 25:36 for doing his work.

"I was a prisoner and you came to me,"

Said Colson: "I look into the eyes of inmates, and feel that sense of helplessness that I experienced in prison. I see the faces of those men. Their faces are crying out for help."

A striking innovation in Colson's approach is to arrange with prisons periodically to release groups of about a dozen prisoners, two each per prison, for two weeks of Bible study and leadership counseling training at Washington's Fellowship House.

Afterward, they are returned to prison as "ambassadors of Christ" to organize and influence groups inside.

Colson first obtained permission for the unprecedented procedure in 1975 from Norman Carlson, director of the Federal Bureau of Prisons, and it originally was applied only to federal prisons, but it since has been extended to state prisons.

More than 200 inmates of about 40 prisons across the country have gone through the out-of-prison training periods and are back inside continuing the work. Colson said none of the temporarily released prisoners ever has betrayed the trust in them.

"It's a miracle it hasn't happened," he said. "We expected occasional problems or incidents, but there haven't been any."

A Carlson report has commended the system as a "valuable and dynamic" boost to prison atmosphere. Colson said the small groups started in prisons often mushroom into scores or more meeting regularly for Bible study and prayer.

"Two inmates can truly infiltrate an entire institution," he said. "This is first century Christianity at work. It's the prayer of the powerless that God can truly use. Man cannot rehabilitate man, but God can."

Besides the groups taken out of prison for training, Colson teams also go into prisons to initiate Bible study among inmates whose severity of sentences prevent temporary releases. Altogether, such a process has been started in about 100 prisons.

Fellowship "chaplains" without ties to prison administrations also have been stationed in several prisons, and "one-to-one" links of letter-writing, visiting and concern have been set up between prisoners and 700 Christian families in congregations near prisons.

"We want to get 300,000 Christian families matched up on a one-to-one basis with the 300,000 imprisoned Americans, the most disenfranchised, alienated and lost group in society," he said.

Colson, besides talks to church groups, also appears before state and other bodies examining prison conditions to press for changes.

He says that after his conversion he had a "simplistic view" that salvation meant only winning people to Christ. That's vital, he says, but adds he also felt an "irresistible call" to work for change in the "barbaric hollowness of prison life," causing him to wonder whether he was an "evangelical or a social activist."

"Now, of course, I realize my struggle was all part of God's perfect plan, because I believe in the depths of my being that the two are inseparable."

Gift Shop To Get Permanent Home

The Plaid Door, an outlet for used clothing and religious gift items located in a temporary frame building at the 42nd Street and Elgin Avenue site of St. Christopher's Episcopal Church grounds, has recently been moved into permanent quarters in the new church addition.

A permanent book and gift shop has been established in the church building, following the recent removal of temporary structures and the addition of space to the church.

Religious gifts, books, jewelry, statuary, all occasion cards and gift wrappings have been offered for sale to the public as an outreach program of the parish since April, 1978.

The shop is staffed by volunteer workers and is open weekdays from 10 a. m. to 4 p. m. Purchases also may be made following the 10 a. m. Sunday worship services.

Inventory examples include handmade ceramic artifacts from the St. Andrew's Priory of Valermo, Calif. An offshoot of the Abbey of St. Andre in Bruges, Belgium, the Benedictine Monks were sent to China in 1929. After being expelled from Chengtu in 1952, they resettled at Yalermo, located in the high desert where they now fulfill their motto of "Work and Pray." The artifacts reflect Benedictine reverence for the saints of the Old and New Testaments and joy in nature, executed by hand with natural materials and no duplications.

Episcopal Mission Has Meeting

The first annual meeting of the Episcopal Mission of the Holy Cross was conducted recently at Winfrey School, where the congregation is temporarily meeting.

After Richard Wilson, priest-in-charge and presiding officer, called the meeting to order, Robert Bethea, acting treasurer for the congregation, distributed a tentative budget and gave the treasurer's report, which was accepted.

The congregation passed unanimously that a person must be a baptized or communicant member of 16 years of age in order to vote.

There were 39 voting members present at the meeting.

Ron McClendon was elected senior warden by acclamation and Steve Dowell was elected treasurer.

Elected to the Bishop's Committee for one-year terms were Mrs. Art Foster, Mrs. John Cassel, Conrad Brumley, Paul Snyder and Melvin Edwards.

Hugh Fry was elected delegate to council and Bethea was elected as alternate.

Wilson announced that a "Laymen's Conference" will be conducted at the Episcopal Conference Center in Amarillo the first weekend following Easter Sunday. Theme for the conference is "Lay Ministry."

Fry announced that a "School of Prayer" will be March 30-31 and the Holy Cross Mission has been asked to be responsible for providing a breakfast for the participants.

Methodists Set Record Budget

A recent "Pony Express" stewardship campaign has been completed by members of St. Matthew United Methodist Church, according to Rev. Buff Hearn, pastor.

The campaign finished with members estimating they would give more than $55,000 to the church during the coming year.

With those estimates, he said, the church will be able to underwrite one of the largest budgets in its history.

"We trusted our members to act responsibly, and they did," the pastor said. "Our members showed they have a great deal of faith and willingness to share what they have."

Rev. Hearn added that the "Pony Express" theme for the stewardship campaign sparked enthusiasm among members and resulted in the congregation gaining a greater sense of togetherness.

"We all had a lot fun — children and adults," he said.

Rev. Hearn said he was especially pleased the Pony Express campaign involved the young people of the church. School age children received the Pony Express coloring books and balloons and made miniature saddlebags, similar to the larger bags used by their parents in the campaign.

Each child was encouraged to fill in an "estimate of giving card," just as their parents did, he added.

"This has helped our young people to start thinking about giving to their church and hopefully they will form a habit of Christian stewardship which may continue throughout their lives," Rev. Hearn said.

Barry Brower was general manager of the campaign, which included route riders, trail bosses and station agents.

LCC Professor Publishes Book 'Diety Of Christ'

Dr. Leon Crouch, an associate professor of Bible at Lubbock Christian College, has recently published his first book, entitled "The Diety of Christ."

Dr. Crouch, who has been at LCC since 1972, spent eight months in actual writing of the 112-page book, but said he did "research off and on for years" concerning the subject.

"It's just a small book devoted to a study of the Biblical content concerning the Diety of Christ and there is no historical theology."

"It's a study of Old Testament prophecies, the birth account of Christ, his works, the Titles of Christ and Greek grammar as it relates to the title. The basic point of the book is to give help to those dealing with the Jehovah Witnesses or others who deny the Diety of Christ," Crouch said.

The book was published by Starr Bible and Tract Publications of Fort Worth.

Crouch received his bachelor of science degree from West Texas State University, his master of arts degree from Harding College and his doctor of ministry degree from Lutheran Seminary.

FIND STRENGTH FOR YOUR LIFE — ATTEND CHURCH

promise

The Saxons had a word for Spring. It was Lencten, shortened, in time, to Lent.

So the name Lent was given to that springtime period of 40 fast days from Ash Wednesday until Easter.

Lent came to mean a time of penitence. And it is. But it is also a time of preparation, and of promise. For because Lent means Spring, it heralds good things to come. It forecasts the glorious message of Easter. It is the dawn of the most beautiful season of the year.

The bare branches of these trees will burst into bud and leaf with the touch of Spring. Our thoughts during Lent, our personal preparations, also will reach fruition when the 40 days are through.

Lent is the time for prayer and self-examination. Make this Lenten season really mean something by seeking help and guidance at your church services.

U.S. Oil Firm Resumes Buying Iran Oil; Premium Price Paid

NEW YORK (AP) — Ashland Oil Inc. announced Friday it has resumed buying oil from Iran. It said a supertanker carrying Iranian oil would be loaded next Wednesday and could arrive in the United States in about three weeks.

Ashland is the first American company to say it has started buying Iranian oil since the nation's oil industry was shut down during civil strife. Referring to the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, the company said it would be paying "somewhat higher than official OPEC prices" for the Iranian oil, but spokesman Bob Thomas refused to elaborate.

Thomas, in a telephone interview from company headquarters in Ashland, Ky., also would not say how much oil had been purchased. Ashland is the nation's 15th-largest oil company. In Houston, Ashland Chairman O.E. Atkins told a reporter the destination of the supertanker has not been determined.

On Thursday, traders reported that Japanese buyers had purchased about 2 million barrels of oil at between $18 and $20 a barrel, the price Iranian officials have said they would like to receive for the nation's initial oil shipments.

The basic OPEC cartel crude oil price is $13.35 a barrel for light crude oil from Saudi Arabia. OPEC prices normally fluctuate around this benchmark on the basis of quality and on demand in the spot market.

In the aftermath of the four-month Iranian oil shutdown, however, several oil producers have boosted prices by 5 percent to 10 percent above the base level.

Ashland said in a prepared statement that it has "resumed purchases of crude oil from the National Iranian Oil Co. under a long-term supply contract it has with that company."

"While prices are somewhat higher than official OPEC prices, these prices are considerably below the spot prices many of the major oil companies are now paying to obtain spot supplies," Ashland said.

Prices in the spot market for crude oil have risen above $20 a barrel in recent weeks. The spot market is where the small amount of oil not covered by long-term contracts is traded.

Ashland is not one of the 14 international oil companies comprising the 25-year-old consortium that marketed Iran's oil before anti-shah strikes cut the nation's oil output.

Earlier this week, Hassan Nazih, the new Iranian oil chief, said Iran would no longer deal with the consortium and that the National Iranian Oil Co. was prepared to deal with foreign oil companies individually.

Dime-A-Gallon Hike Via New Gasoline Rule Seen

crease should be 5 cents each of the next two years, although fluctuations during that time might not mean the price would be exactly 10 cents more at the end of that time.

Early confusion on the impact had resulted from an unclear department analysis. The author of the report later clarified its meaning.

Oil companies have complained of the high costs of producing unleaded gasoline, required in most new cars as an anti-pollution measure.

Price controls on gasoline and other products had prevented increases to cover er the cost of converting refineries to unleaded production, the refiners complained.

The tilt should provide the industry with the incentive that will encourage it to implement plans now on the drawing board for expanding gas manufacturing capability, especially for unleaded," said Gulf Oil Co.

And Carl Meyerdirk of Standard Oil Co. of Indiana said the change "is a recognition of the higher costs of production of gasoline. Unleaded gasoline costs more to produce, and regulations didn't recognize this. These new regulations do."

Before the rule took effect, oil companies had to allocate their production cost among all their products, even if much of the expense was related to a single item, such as unleaded gasoline.

The boost in the price of gasoline prices by 5 cents in each of the next two years could mean price hikes of 19 cents a gallon when coupled with the anticipated 9-cent hike expected from other factors, including price increases by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

Only last December, OPEC boosted crude oil prices 3 to 4 cents a gallon. Consumer groups have been concerned that loosening gasoline price controls would allow refiners to hike the price of unleaded gasoline far above the price of regular, leaded fuel, thus encouraging drivers to use the cheaper product.

Bill Webb of the Energy Department said that until the proposed rules to limit this price difference are adopted, "Hopefully, the spread will stay the same."

On Wednesday, however, Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger predicted sharply higher prices for unleaded gasoline this year. He told a Senate subcommittee gasoline prices could rise 10 cents a gallon by the end of the year, with even sharper increases for unleaded fuel.

been involved, nor "is anybody willing to testify with knowledge of any money or improper action."

"We're doing whatever we can to get the facts," he said. "That doesn't mean, necessarily, there's going to be any trial. We don't have any hard facts yet."

The scandal allegations surfaced in Washington last week when Barnes disclosed that Shahrir Roushani, who now runs the Iranian Embassy as the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's envoy, had told him embassy files — since sent to Iran for safekeeping — contained evidence of widespread bribery of congressmen.

"He detailed these payoffs as including bribery, provision of luxury overseas travel accommodations, gifts ranging from caviar and champagne to substantial cash payments, prostitution and blackmail," Barnes told a news conference.

Bennett, however, suggested Iran's new envoys might be spreading such allegations, while withholding the proof, as a means of discrediting the shah and embarrassing the United States.

BUDGET PROPOSAL HIT
WASHINGTON (AP) — Supporters of a constitutional convention to draft an amendment requiring a balanced federal budget suffered a setback Friday at the National Conference of State Legislatures. By a two-vote margin, the conference rejected a resolution urging Congress to establish procedures requiring constitutional conventions to "stick to the subjects for which they are called."

Salinas Defends Proposal On Insurance

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff
State Rep. Froy Salinas of Lubbock, who earns his living as a life insurance salesman, is sponsoring a constitutional amendment which would benefit mutual life insurance companies like the one he for which he works.

However, the two-term legislator said he sees no conflict of interest in sponsoring the amendment, saying the state's taxpayers will be the beneficiaries if the amendment is approved.

The Association of Life Underwriters, which contributed $1,000 to Salinas's reelection campaign last year, has listed the amendment as one of its legislative priorities.

Eight of 10 major insurance companies in America are mutual companies owned by the policy holders, Salinas said. In a mutual company profits are returned to the policy holders, while profits are returned to stockholders in stock insurance companies.

Salinas's amendment would permit the mutual life insurance companies to write

Fuel Price Climb To Continue

gallon are expected within the next week by many distributors.

"It seems we have an increase every other day," said Gene Wiseman of Brown-Griffin Oil Co. "We have had three or four increases in our gasoline and diesel fuel prices since the first of the month."

Local representatives were reluctant to estimate how high gasoline prices might rise this year. "It's anybody's guess," said Wiseman.

Exxon spokesman Max Nally said recent price increases announced by many Arabian exporters would have to be reflected somewhere down the line. Recent Exxon studies suggest that long range energy costs will run about even with the rate of inflation, eight percent in 1978 and projected at about nine percent this year, Nally said.

lucrative policies for political subdivisions of the state like cities, counties and school districts.

Constitutional provisions prohibit "mutual assessment life insurance companies" from doing business with political subdivisions and the state because courts have held the possibility of an assessment to be a pledge of the state's credit. Mutual assessment companies, which not all mutual companies are, can "assess policy holders up to a certain extent if they went into debt," Salinas explained.

The constitutional prohibition against mutual companies doing business with political subdivisions is "archaic," Salinas said, adding "many school districts and cities could save tax dollars" if the companies were permitted to bid.

"This doesn't mean mutual companies are going to outbid stock companies," he said, "but it will open it up to competition which is more sensible."

The mutual companies "offer, in many cases, a better price on health insurance," he said.

"That benefits the taxpayers more than the mutual insurance company," Salinas called it "unfair competition" if the mutual company's bid is lower, but a city or school district is constitutionally prohibited from purchasing insurance from the company.

He noted the 8,000-member Texas Association of Life Underwriters, to which Salinas belongs, "wholeheartedly endorsed" the amendment. The association members view it as a "benefit to them indirectly through lower taxes," he said.

Elsewhere, though, there appeared to be little support for Salinas's claim the amendment could lower taxes.

One insurance agent said the cost of the two types of insurance were virtually the same and City of Lubbock finance director Sterling Miller said the amendment probably wouldn't have an effect on Lubbock.

"The only thing I can say for sure is the introduction of more competition into the arena might lower rates," Miller said. "But, he added, the city "has never had any real problem getting enough stock

Clements To Head Texas Trade Junket To Russia

No China Trip Until 1981, Governor Says

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements said Friday he will lead a Texas "People to People" delegation to Russia this year but won't go to China on a trade mission before 1981.

Clements, who discussed a trade mission Feb. 19 with Han Hsu, a Chinese diplomat, laid to rest in emphatic terms speculation he would go to China this year.

"I am not going to China in 1979. I may very well consider it in 1981. ... I don't want to go in 1980 because I have other plans. I am sure Mr. Carter would like me to go to China in the fall of 1980," Clements said.

He referred to his role in campaigning for the Republican presidential ticket in the 1980 elections.

"My decision is I am going to Russia," he said at his weekly news conference. "The governor said the People to People organization sponsored by the Eisenhower Foundation asked him in January to lead a Texas delegation to Russia. He said the trip probably would take place this fall."

He said the thrust of the Russian trip was agricultural. He jokingly said he anticipated questions about conflict of interests and told reporters, "I want you to understand I own some mother cows" — 450 of them.

Clements said he hoped a Texas trade delegation would go to China this year as envisioned by the Texas Industrial Commission and Agriculture Commissioner Reagan Brown.

He parried questions about possible conflict of interests in an application by SEDCO, the oil drilling firm he founded, and Hunt Oil Co. of Dallas for Chinese drilling rights.

Clements has placed his SEDCO interests in a blind trust. His son, Gill, heads the company.

Clements said that while discussions between SEDCO and Hunt began in November he wasn't part of them.

"I have told you I am isolated from SEDCO and its operations and I meant it," Clements said.

He said he and Han Hsu didn't even talk about oil during their meeting at his Dallas home in February. "All we discussed was Texas grapefruit," he said.

He predicted the SEDCO-Hunt combine would not win the Chinese oil concession because it was competing with such giants as Gulf, Texaco, Standard Oil of California and Standard Oil of New Jersey.

On other matters, Clements said: — Texas "ought possibly — please underline possibly — consider" accepting a disposal site for nuclear wastes generated in this state, primarily those from nuclear power plants.

"As we in Texas are advocating all-out production of energy ... we can't on the one hand say we should build more nuclear plants and on the other hand close our minds to the possibility that we ought to consider — underline consider — a small nuclear waste facility in this state," Clements said.

Brezhnev Warns China To Halt Viet Invasion

found Brezhnev's remarks on the China-Vietnam conflict surprisingly moderate. He essentially did not go beyond a Kremlin statement issued the day after the invasion began.

Western analysts in Moscow said they found Brezhnev's remarks on the China-Vietnam conflict surprisingly moderate. In substance, he did not go beyond a Kremlin statement issued the day after the fighting erupted on Feb. 17.

However, Soviet journalist Victor Louis, who often reflects official Kremlin thinking, said in an article published by a West German newspaper that Moscow may be planning action.

"In the West people are asking: Will the Soviet Union attack militarily to help its ally Vietnam against the Chinese?" he wrote.

"In my opinion there is hardly any doubt that the Soviet government will not just restrict itself to sharp words and threats if China does not end the war as quickly as possible. The Soviet Union has always been loyal to its allies."

A Western diplomatic source said Brezhnev's mild tone seemed to reflect Soviet satisfaction with the current status of the war, sharing Vietnam's optimism that it can contain the Chinese offensive without direct outside help.

However, this source added, the Soviet position could change if the Chinese were to launch an all-out drive toward Hanoi, chew up Vietnamese main force divisions or give indications they planned to remain on Vietnamese territory for an extended period.

But Brezhnev did not say what steps the Russians might take beyond expressions of support for Hanoi.

In his speech at the Kremlin's huge Palace of Congresses, Brezhnev declared: "The Soviet people together with the peace-loving people of the whole world demand the immediate ending of the Chinese aggression against Vietnam, the withdrawal of all troops of the interventionists to the last soldier from the land of Vietnam."

He cautioned that "nobody should have any doubts: the Soviet Union is true to the treaty of friendship and cooperation binding together our countries."

That treaty, signed last Nov. 4, obliges Moscow to consult with Hanoi if Vietnam comes under attack, "for the purpose of eliminating the threat and taking appropriate and effective measures to safeguard peace and security."

But it does not specifically bind the Soviet Union to take any military action in support of its Southeast Asian ally.

"By their unprecedentedly brazen bandit attack ... the present Peking rulers have revealed fully to the whole world the petulant, aggressive essence of the great-power policy pursued by them," Brezhnev said.

He alluded only indirectly to the earlier Soviet charges over U.S. tacit backing for the invasion, noting that "the danger of any forms of connivance at that policy is more evident now than ever before."

Brezhnev's speech was in connection with his candidacy for a seat in the Supreme Soviet.

ALASKA OIL TAX HIT
JUNEAU (AP) — An industry-sponsored study has concluded that Alaska again ranks highest in the nation for taxes on petroleum production — and that the gap has widened since a study last year. The Alaska Oil and Gas Association-commissioned study said that the state taxes are about 65 percent steeper than the average of eight oil-producing states surveyed.

strong voice throughout his 70-minute speech. Brezhnev is running unopposed in Sunday's Soviet parliamentary elections, but all candidates traditionally make at least one campaign speech.

Brezhnev made it clear that the recent wave of global crises, including the Chinese invasion of Vietnam, had not altered the Kremlin's desire to conclude a new strategic arms limitation treaty or his own desire for a summit meeting with President Carter.

Diplomatic sources said his remarks on Soviet-American relations were "very pleasant indeed."

Calling the arms race and the threat of nuclear war the "greatest threat to world peace," Brezhnev said the Soviet Union was not waiting for a "constructive answer" from the United States.

"The Soviet Union is prepared as a first step to withdraw 30,000 members of military personnel and a considerable amount of military equipment, including 1,000 tanks from Central Europe within a year provided that the United States will also reduce its armed force in that area, even though on a smaller scale."

"This is a sensible compromise, taking into account the interests of both sides," Brezhnev said. "On the whole this is a great and good thing."

"The work of six years appears to be near its completion now," Brezhnev said. "The new (SALT) treaty, when finalized, will probably be signed during my meeting with President Carter — I the near future, I hope."

"Undoubtedly, not everything in the treaty meets our wishes," he said. "But the treaty will involve no damage to the security of the Soviet Union just as it will not for the United States."

Brezhnev, dressed in a dark blue suit with a row of medals on his chest, said that after the conclusion of the SALT-2 treaty, "work will begin on a SALT-3 agreement."

"It should go still further, slow down the creation of new types of weapons and insure not only the limitation of the growth of armaments but also bring about its end on both sides," he said.

Brezhnev recalled the Soviet Union proposed in 1976 that all nations at the Helsinki Conference should pledge to strike first against one other with nuclear weapons. He said the time the West responded then that such a pledge would only increase the danger of conventional warfare.

"Well, let us then agree to renounce the first use of both nuclear and conventional arms," Brezhnev said. "In other words, let us conclude something like a pact of non-aggression between participants in the all-European conference. I think this would fully accord with the spirit of Helsinki."

Breakthrough Eludes Talks On Mideast
even one difficult moment." Begin also said he was encouraged.

It is understood that if the talks go well, both men would consider asking Egyptian President Anwar Sadat to join them for a new summit at Camp David.

For that to happen, though, either Israel would have to make concessions or Carter would have to back away from a package of U.S. proposals that diplomatic sources say supports key Egyptian demands.

The major unresolved issues include: — Whether a timetable for establishing Palestinian autonomy in Israeli-held territory be attached to the treaty. — Whether the treaty should take priority over Egypt's military lies with other Arab countries. — Sadat's refusal to exchange ambassadors with Israel until all of the Sinai territory held by Israel is relinquished and steps are taken toward Palestinian autonomy.

The United States supports the timetable approach, not giving the treaty precedence and delaying a swap of ambassadors — all positions taken by Sadat. The Egyptian leader has said he will not change these positions and he has authorized Prime Minister Mustafa Khalil to complete the treaty for Egypt.

taxes ought to be," he added. — Federal gasoline rationing proposals that would limit how far one could drive is "a classic example of Department of Energy discrimination, almost by intent, if you will, against Texas," where distances are greater and commuter facilities less common than in eastern states.

— Governors from all four states bordering Mexico — Arizona, California, New Mexico and Texas — will meet in June in Arizona to discuss mutual problems. He said governors of Mexico's border states will be invited "and in my judgment will be present."

Clements said he would seek the views of a broad spectrum of Texans, including academic experts and Mexican-American politicians who have criticized his stand in favor of a bracero-like program of using Mexican labor.

He said the governors would submit their findings to the State Department "for further discussion" with Mexico's foreign ministry.

SALT Pact Signing Hoped By Brezhnev

MOSCOW (UPI) — President Leonid Brezhnev said Friday he hoped to sign a new SALT pact at a summit meeting with President Carter "in the near future."

Brezhnev, in his first major policy speech in more than five months, gave an optimistic view of U.S.-Soviet relations and, for the first time, proposed a non-aggression pact between the Communist bloc and the West to cover both conventional and nuclear wars.

Greeted with chants of "Glory! Glory!" by 6,000 of his constituents at an election rally in the Kremlin's Palace of Congresses, Brezhnev reiterated Soviet demands that China withdraw its troops from Vietnam but issued no new warnings to Peking.

The 72-year-old Soviet leader, fresh from a month-long winter vacation in the Crimea, looked healthy and spoke in a

Bus Plunges Into River

KATMANDU, Nepal (AP) — A passenger bus heading towards Katmandu plunged into the Sunkoshi River 50 miles north of here, killing at least 15 persons, police said Friday.

Police said 20 others were injured when the bus fell nearly 200 feet into the river after the driver tried to give way for an approaching bus on the Katmandu-Tibet Highway.

Police said it was the first major traffic accident on the Chinese-built Katmandu-Tibet Highway since it was completed in 1963.

Breznnev made it clear that the recent wave of global crises, including the Chinese invasion of Vietnam, had not altered the Kremlin's desire to conclude a new strategic arms limitation treaty or his own desire for a summit meeting with President Carter.

Diplomatic sources said his remarks on Soviet-American relations were "very pleasant indeed."

Calling the arms race and the threat of nuclear war the "greatest threat to world peace," Brezhnev said the Soviet Union was not waiting for a "constructive answer" from the United States.

"The Soviet Union is prepared as a first step to withdraw 30,000 members of military personnel and a considerable amount of military equipment, including 1,000 tanks from Central Europe within a year provided that the United States will also reduce its armed force in that area, even though on a smaller scale."

"This is a sensible compromise, taking into account the interests of both sides," Brezhnev said. "On the whole this is a great and good thing."

"The work of six years appears to be near its completion now," Brezhnev said. "The new (SALT) treaty, when finalized, will probably be signed during my meeting with President Carter — I the near future, I hope."

"Undoubtedly, not everything in the treaty meets our wishes," he said. "But the treaty will involve no damage to the security of the Soviet Union just as it will not for the United States."

Brezhnev, dressed in a dark blue suit with a row of medals on his chest, said that after the conclusion of the SALT-2 treaty, "work will begin on a SALT-3 agreement."

"It should go still further, slow down the creation of new types of weapons and insure not only the limitation of the growth of armaments but also bring about its end on both sides," he said.

Brezhnev recalled the Soviet Union proposed in 1976 that all nations at the Helsinki Conference should pledge to strike first against one other with nuclear weapons. He said the time the West responded then that such a pledge would only increase the danger of conventional warfare.

"Well, let us then agree to renounce the first use of both nuclear and conventional arms," Brezhnev said. "In other words, let us conclude something like a pact of non-aggression between participants in the all-European conference. I think this would fully accord with the spirit of Helsinki."

even one difficult moment." Begin also said he was encouraged.

It is understood that if the talks go well, both men would consider asking Egyptian President Anwar Sadat to join them for a new summit at Camp David.

For that to happen, though, either Israel would have to make concessions or Carter would have to back away from a package of U.S. proposals that diplomatic sources say supports key Egyptian demands.

The major unresolved issues include: — Whether a timetable for establishing Palestinian autonomy in Israeli-held territory be attached to the treaty. — Whether the treaty should take priority over Egypt's military lies with other Arab countries. — Sadat's refusal to exchange ambassadors with Israel until all of the Sinai territory held by Israel is relinquished and steps are taken toward Palestinian autonomy.

The United States supports the timetable approach, not giving the treaty precedence and delaying a swap of ambassadors — all positions taken by Sadat. The Egyptian leader has said he will not change these positions and he has authorized Prime Minister Mustafa Khalil to complete the treaty for Egypt.

Blumenthal Lauds Settlement

SHANGHAI, China (AP) — W. Michael Blumenthal said Friday the United States and China can forge a closer economic future because they solved "a very important problem from the past," by settling 30-year-old property claims. Then he visited his own past in the streets of Shanghai.

The U.S. treasury secretary, who spent World War II in a Jewish ghetto in this eastern China city, clearly was elated after reaching a last-minute agreement in Peking on partial payment of the $197 million in U.S. claims against China. The claims date from 1949, when the new communist government expropriated American-owned property.

The settlement opens the way for work on trade agreements between the two countries, which the United States was unwilling to do until the claims were dealt with.

China has agreed to pay Americans a total of $80.5 million, or 41 cents on the dollar.

The remaining $116 million almost certainly never will be recovered, because the agreement finishes the matter as far as the U.S. government is concerned. The money will be distributed on a pro-rata basis among the claimants.

In exchange for China's payment, the United States will release $80.5 million in Chinese assets in the United States that were blocked in 1950 in retaliation for the expropriation.

"We consider this to be a very good and fair arrangement," Blumenthal told reporters. He said it was better than past claims settlements with other communist countries.

The agreement was made just before Blumenthal was to leave Peking for Shanghai. His flight was delayed nearly two hours while he and Finance Minister Chang Ching-fu initiated the agreement in an airport lounge.

Blumenthal came to Shanghai to tour the city and some of its industries. It was a homecoming of sorts, because he lived here in a Jewish ghetto from 1939, when he was 13, until he left in 1947 for the United States. He returned once before, in 1973.

Blumenthal's parents went to China after fleeing the Nazis in their native Germany.

An initial Chinese payment of $30 million is to be made Oct. 1 of this year with the remaining $50.5 million to be paid in four equal annual installments until the total amount is paid by Oct. 1, 1984.

The value of the expropriated property is in 1949 terms, which would make it worth three times as much after three decades of inflation.

The U.S. claims, which previously were validated by the U.S. foreign claims commission, are from 677 businesses, individuals and religious organizations.

The largest single claim is $53.8 million from the Boise Cascade Corp. for the expropriation of the Shanghai Power Co., a subsidiary.

The second largest is $23.2 million from the United Board for Christian Higher Education in Asia for nine colleges.

More than half the claims, $122 million worth, are from businesses, and 82 are from religious groups. The Treasury Department will oversee distribution of the money.

Settlement of the claims issue was Blumenthal's chief purpose on his nine-day trip to China, which ends here Sunday.

He told reporters that during the recent visit of Chinese Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping to the United States, Teng and President Carter agreed that settling the claims should be the first priority after the establishment of diplomatic relations Jan. 1.

The next step will be to negotiate a formal trade agreement to promote expansion of U.S.-China trade, which was about $1 billion last year. Blumenthal said he hopes this will be achieved within a few months so a trade accord can be submitted to Congress before the end of the year.

He said the Chinese want the agreement to include tariff concessions under the most-favored-nation clause of U.S. trade law. Congress must approve this, something it has not yet done for the Soviet Union.

Blumenthal often has described the Shanghai of the World War II Japanese occupation as a "den of iniquity" — a city of poverty, disease, brutality and starvation.

While Shanghai is still poor, the people look well-fed and adequately clothed. There are no beggars on the streets and the streets are cleaner than in most American cities. With a population of nearly 11 million, Shanghai is one of the world's largest cities.

Blumenthal told reporters that when he lived in Shanghai, as many as 400 persons died every day from disease or starvation.

When he visited the Forever bicycle plant, Blumenthal was asked whether he had owned a bicycle in Shanghai. He replied, "I couldn't afford a bicycle in those days."

Blumenthal attended a banquet given in his honor Friday night by the Shanghai Revolutionary Committee — the city council.

Questions Linger About One-Day Presidency

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is one of a series of stories on events from America's past.)

By TOM TIEDE

WASHINGTON (NEA) — Sunday, March 4, 1849. It was chilly in the nation's capital, and the wind blew briskly from along the Potomac, and the churches were more crowded than the streets. A quiet day. An altogether ordinary day, with one exception, it was the day the United States had no president.

The White House term of James Knox Polk came to an end at noon that Sabbath, much to the retiree's delight, and by custom his successor should have been sworn in the same hour. But Zachary Taylor, the new man, was an unending Episcopalian, and he refused to injure the Lord's day with an inaugural.

Old Zack scheduled the proceedings for the following afternoon, and if anyone protested the decision it has not been prominently recorded by history. Indeed, capital citizens felt the delay was appropriate; merchants were especially pleased, because their shops could be open for a Monday ceremony.

Besides, a president was not really necessary for the 24 hours. Having chased the stubborn Mexicans across the Rio Grande, the nation of 130 years ago was at peace. Some new states had joined the Union, gold was discovered in California, but otherwise both domestic and foreign affairs were routine.

This is not necessarily to say things were dull. Henry David Thoreau was publishing his thoughts on "Civil Disobedience." The ladies were holding their first feminist convention in Seneca Falls, N.Y. And a man named Walter Hunt was about to reveal to the cosmos the invention of the safety pin.

In addition, the United States was gripped in debate regarding abolition. Many people believed Polk, a slave owner, had started the war with Mexico in order to enlarge the nation's slave territory. And the period's newspapers carried notices of rewards for the capture of "colored runaways," dead or alive.

But in the main, the country was functioning reasonably well in March of 1849. The New York Stock Exchange was "steady" (there were no averages), beef cattle were selling at $3.50 per hundredweight, and the National Agriculture and Seed Warehouse was marketing Peruvian guano for the spring plant.

Even medical science was on an orderly march. Apothecaries in Washington were advertising 12-cent boxes of "Russell's Celebrated Laughing Candy." They were something like cough drops, and were guaranteed to cure "consumption, bronchitis, spitting of blood, night sweats, nerves and depression of spirits."

No president? It didn't seem to matter. The 30th Congress had adjourned ("This is no longer the Senate," one member said in parting, "it is a mob!"). The Treasury Department's listing of outstanding notes was a proper $7.6 million. For all his faults, Polk was leaving a strong and prosperous nation.

And yet, even back then, there were bureaucratic fustibudgets who insisted the republic could not stand without leadership, even for one Sunday. Accordingly, the suggestion at the time was that the presidency was not actually vacant; rather, it was by law filled with a temporary substitute.

The supposed stand-in was David Rice Atchison, a 42-year-old bachelor who was president pro tempore of the Senate. He was second in line of succession to the presidency. And inasmuch as the term of the vice president expired with that of the president, the contention was that Atchison took over for the day.

He didn't. Even now, record books insist he did, and officials from his home state (Missouri) once raised a statue in honor of Atchison's 24-hour term, but government scholars say the conjecture is erroneous. In fact, Atchison himself generally denied that he ever held the power of the office.

Years after retiring, Atchison reminded a reporter that he'd never been sworn in as chief executive, and no one of position had considered him to be chief executive. He recalled there had been joking by his colleagues, and requests for one-day Cabinet appointments, but it amounted to nothing more.

Actually, Atchison said he was not even in line for the job. He believed that his responsibilities as president pro tempore of the Senate had expired with the end of the 30th Congress, the day before the presidential vacancy. So he was only another Senator on March 4, no longer second in succession.

Atchison said he slept most of that Sunday. Others in the capital were similarly occupied. The day we had no president grew warmer in the afternoon, then colder toward evening, which is the way of late winter here. Night came at 6:30, and many of those not already in bed retired, still leaderless.

General Taylor was sworn in the next afternoon. His vice president was the redoubtable Millard Fillmore. The crisis had passed, ho-hum. The republic lived. As it happened, the only noticeable difference in Monday from Sunday was that Old Zach's horse, Whitey, was pastured on the White House lawn.

Newspaper Enterprise Association

Teen Suicides Problem For Advanced Nations

(EDITOR'S NOTE: A wave of teen-age suicides is sweeping the Western industrial world — even as suicide rates have stabilized for other age groups in these countries. This marked rise in the number of youths taking their own lives coincides, PMS writer Eve Pell reports, with a dramatic narrowing of their career options as post-industrialization disrupts the traditional labor market, eroding the middle sector of skilled, manufacturing and professional jobs.)

By EVE PELL
1979 Pacific News Service
It is not a disease, but last year it claimed the lives of some 5,000 young people in the U.S. and thousands more throughout the Western industrialized world.

It strikes females at a disproportionately greater rate than males. It strikes principally those without occupations, and without hopes of any occupation. It is suicide, and in today's economically troubled world, it is growing into an "epidemic of youthful violent death," says Dr. Richard Seiden, a suicidologist at the University of California's School of Public Health.

Surprise! Ex-Prisoners Honor Fresno Jailers

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — The jailers were flabbergasted. Their prisoners like them.

Here was a trophy, standing almost four feet tall, a gift of gratitude from anonymous former inmates at Fresno County Jail.

The inscription was signed: "Your friends in 4-A. We love you." A former prisoner showed up at the sheriff's office with the trophy Thursday. Officer Frank Dodd said.

Dodd said he recognized the man as a former inmate, but couldn't remember his name.

"I have something here for you," the man told Dodd, handing him a huge trophy and a handwritten note.

The 46-inch-tall trophy is topped with a figure of Lady Luck holding a torch. It is inscribed to Dodd "and fellow officers in gratitude for being such beautiful people to all the inmates in your care."

The note said, in part: "This trophy is being presented to you for services rendered beyond your duties. This is the only way we could thank you for your humane treatment of inmates and fellow officers as well."

"You stop and help the ones that are lost. And at the same time tolerate ones that have nowhere to go and nothing nice to say."

Dodd's reaction was one of surprise. "I tried to tell him I couldn't take it, but he wouldn't take no for an answer," the jailer said. "I tried to tell him that I was just doing my job."

Robber Partial To Ancient Weapon

DUDLEY, England (AP) — A man wearing a stocking mask over his head walked into the Birmingham Road branch of Barclays Bank on Thursday, leveled a loaded crossbow at a cashier and ordered her to fill the bag he was carrying with cash.

A woman customer pummeled the robber with her handbag, but he escaped in a car with $2,402, the bank manager told police.

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

On a certain TV quiz show, they want to know how many people out of 100 select a certain answer.

We wonder if as many as two bridge players out of 100 will play a low spade at trick one, in the East seat.

It looks like a mighty silly play. You know your partner has led a singleton. You know the declarer also holds a singleton.

Now let's see what happens if you rise with the ace of spades. Your best play is to lead a spade back. South ruffs. Draws trumps while making sure to win the third trump in dummy. Discards two minor suit losers on the last two spades and winds up with six trumps, two spades and the ace of club and diamonds.

Suppose you duck the first spade. South leads a second spade from dummy. East ducks again. South discards a low card. West ruffs and leads any low card he wants to lead.

South has only one entry to dummy. He can get in with the ace of trumps and lead another spade. East will finally play that ace. South will ruff, but will have no way to get back to dummy to cash the last spade. He will wind up with just one spade trick for a total of nine.

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY DR. PAUL E. RUBLE

Dear Dr. Ruble: My husband and I have an infant daughter who is a thumbsucker. We wonder if there will be any damaging effects to her teeth? — Mrs. D.K.

By infant I presume you mean she is in the first year of life. Some consider infancy as the period before a baby can stand unaided. In any event, it is much too young to cause concern about thumbsucking. I've known parents to get rattled with a child's thumbsucking one moment and the next put a pacifier in the baby's mouth.

Thumbsucking usually continues after the bottle-feeding stage, but even at five years it is probably more upsetting to the parents than harmful to the kids. After five or six the danger of dental problems increases. The teeth may be pulled forward. There may be a slight elevation of the roof of the mouth, which in turn can create a narrowing of the jaw and further dental disturbance. So, I'm not saying that thumbsucking should be ignored. The sooner it's put behind the better for all concerned.

Parents can make too big a deal of thumbsucking too early and create more problems than they solve. As she gets older she'll encounter other tots who do not suck — the greatest motivation to all to stop. For now concern yourself with real problems — like nutrition and her need for being held and assured that the non-thumbsucking world loves her.

Dear Dr. Ruble: Is it true that left-handed people develop personality problems later in life, more so than right-handed persons? Should a parent try to force "right-handedness"? — D.K.

The only personality problem is the frustration of living in a right-handed world, which can be considerable. Is it wise to try to make a right-hander of a child who is naturally a lefty? No. Best to allow children to develop according to their natural instincts. We don't know why some use left hands and not right. For that matter we know just as little about why right-handers are that way. Some have speculated that it is related to how the fetus is carried in the womb. This has not been proved.

Right-handedness would show itself early in the game, because society favors that trait — with righthanded doorknobs and water fountains, etc. If a child demonstrates a natural tendency toward use of the left hand over the right, let him do it. More problems, psychological and otherwise, might be caused by trying to force things.

Dear Dr. Ruble: About six months ago I contracted cytomegalovirus. I am still tired and my balance has been affected. What do you know about the virus, and is it possible for it to last this long? — L.W.

Viruses are peculiar animals. Some get around from person to person like those that cause flu. Other are present silently in our bodies, and are activated by mysterious events about which we know little. This is the case with the virus you mention — the cytomegalovirus. It is found in most adults (80 percent) and may never produce symptoms. In this respect it is like the viruses for shingles or cold sores.

Occasionally, this virus will create a serious infection with symptoms akin to those of infectious mononucleosis (mono) — fever, aches and pains, and abnormal liver tests.

As with most viral infections, no medicine shortens the course of infection, which eventually subsides. Resting and eating a well-balanced diet is about all you can do. Keeping resistance high may prevent spread of symptoms to other organs, which can include the lungs, liver and kidneys. One cannot predict how long you will have fatigue or other symptoms, but rest and proper nutrition are certainly helpful.

Dr. Ruble: I have read that vitamins, minerals and other food substances have no effect on rheumatoid arthritis. So I was surprised when my doctor (a rheumatologist, incidentally) prescribed vitamin and mineral supplements. Is there a difference of opinion? Can you explain if these things will help my rheumatoid arthritis? — Mrs. H.T.

For various reasons — lack of exercise, loss of appetite, etc. — some arthritics may tend to become undernourished, just as anyone might from any disabling disease. Your supplements are not intended to cure your arthritis, only to keep you fit so that you can be as active as possible. See the booklet, "How to Control Arthritis." For a copy, send 50 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Dr. Ruble, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611.

Dear Dr. Ruble: Is it always necessary for a person who has had a heart attack (mild) to go into the hospital, or can some be treated at home? — Mrs. P.E.

Hospitalization isn't always required. It is a judgment the doctor makes. The chief advantage of hospitalization is availability of various testing facilities and personnel to monitor the damaged heart in the days after the attack. Most serious complications occur during the first three days. After that, recovery should be the same in or out of the hospital in the uncomplicated case. There seems little difference between hospital and home care for a mild heart attack so far as ultimate recovery is concerned.

Dear Dr. Ruble: I have been having circulation problems in one leg. My doctor wants to X-ray my femoral artery. What is that and what would it show? — H.N.

The femoral artery is a major blood vessel serving the thigh, buttocks and leg muscles. The X-ray will show the condition of that artery and the location and extent of the obstruction of blood supply to the leg.

There's an old saying — if you feel hurt, you hurt all over. The booklet, "Relief and Care of Your Feet," shows you how to avoid and take care of foot problems. To get your copy, write to Dr. Ruble, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611, enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 35 cents.

Dr. Ruble welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann: I was a virgin until I was 17. Then I met Rick. We went together several months and he talked me into "proving my love" — you know the old line.

Well, I was crazy about the guy and didn't want to lose him, so I gave in. Two months later, Rick dropped me for another girl. I cried for three weeks. It took me a year to get over him. Eventually I met a terrific person and that's what I am writing about. Whenever I run into Rick he gives me a sexy wink. I know what he's thinking and it makes me very uncomfortable.

What I remember most about our love affair was that I was always scared I would get pregnant. Like so many other dumb kids, we had the idea that any attempt to prevent pregnancy made our relationship "cheap" and unnatural.

Now that I am really in love and planning to be married, I realize that virginity can be a woman's most precious gift. I'm ashamed for having laughed at the idea and letting Rick sell me off of it.

My question is, should I tell my mature, highly-principled fiancé about Rick before we marry? Or should I live in fear that the guy with the sexy wink will one day brag on his conquest and do me in? — No Name Please, Just Sorry

Dear Sorry: If your fiancé is as mature and highly-principled as you say, he won't ask. Any woman who volunteers this kind of information is foolish. Such confessions might be considered good for the soul (some people call it "clearing the air"), but my mail tells me it can be a time bomb that could explode later and destroy a relationship.

Dear Ann: Yesterday afternoon a pack of my husband's in-town relatives arrived (two carloads, to be exact). I was lying down, trying to take a nap after having been in the kitchen for several hours preparing dinner for 18 people who were invited the next evening.

Would you believe my husband offered the pack of locusts the food I had prepared for my dinner party the following night? The group made hogs of themselves and wiped me out. After they left I had to clean up the mess and start cooking and baking all over again. I was in the kitchen till midnight.

My husband isn't speaking to me. He says I humiliated him because I wasn't charming and hospitable. I'd like your comments. — Mad In Wyoming

Dear Mad: Husbands should keep their noses out of the kitchen unless they are doing the cooking and baking. That man of yours had no right to offer the food you had prepared for the following day. When people drop in unexpectedly, the surprised victims (host and hostess) have no obligation to lay on a feed or anything else.

Dear Ann: I'm a 31-year-old woman who really wants to be married — but I just broke a fifth engagement. There MUST be something wrong with me.

All my ex-fiances are married and have lovely families. I look at their wives and say to myself, "FOOL! It could have been YOU!" What's my problem? — Kooky Kate

Dear Kate: I don't know. Maybe you can figure it out if you look inside your head. Do you REALLY want to be married or are you afraid of being single? Have you created a dream image no man can equal? Talk to a professional who can help you unmask your fears. This means therapy — and the sooner the better.

Is alcoholism ruining your life? Know the danger signals and what to do. Read the booklet, "Alcoholism — Hope and Help," by Ann Landers. Enclose 50 cents with your request and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

Friendly Reassurance Supports Victims of Domestic Violence

By CONNIE CHAPMAN
Family News Staff

Never underestimate the value of a friend, participants in the South Plains Conference on Family Violence were told Friday.

While much of the content of the conference dealt with ways the entire community or its institutions and agencies can help in situations of domestic violence, one workshop dealt with the role of the individual as friend and helper.

The convenors of this workshop were Terry Davidson of New York, author of "Conjugal Crime" and the keynote speaker for the opening plenary session, and Anne Christmann of the Lubbock Junior League. Both in answering questions posed by the more than 50 attendants of that session, and in making their informal presentations, these two women emphasized the value and importance of each individual in relating in an affirming and supportive way to victims of family violence.

In terms of what kinds of things individuals can do, a few very concrete ideas were shared among the group. The most important emphasis at the present is to make the people in the community aware of the resources which are available here.

One way of doing this which Miss Davidson suggested was to have a list of appropriate local resources and their telephone numbers and contacts posted in local grocery stores. Another possible way of disseminating such information would be through the communications which children bring home from school. These bits of information are essential to the fuller utilization of existing community resources.

Miss Davidson also pointed out that these are two effective ways of getting this information to the public, because research has shown that men who are the perpetrators of domestic violence rarely go to the grocery stores or read the school notices.

On a one-to-one communication basis, several hints were given to individuals who find themselves face to face with a person involved in violent family relations. First, be reflective of the feelings the person expresses, and do not try to overwhelm her with denials of these feelings at first. Affirmation will come later. Another piece of advice was to help the person to see that she is not to blame for the actions of the perpetrator. Urging a person to leave a marriage relationship which has experienced a violent incident is not an immediate solution, either. Instead, friends can list the possible options existing in the situation and allow the person to make her own decision as to which one she will select.

A reassuring friend can be of great help, even if he or she has little or no training in specific counseling techniques. Referral for counseling can be given when the appropriate time comes and the person is receptive and ready.

Miss Davidson gave some ways in which the characteristics of the wife-beater and his spouse are similar. Both suffer from low self-esteem, for example. Both are insecure, but the man thinks he should not show it. Both are basically dependent persons who need the maintenance of the relationship for their own sense of well-being.

Is alcohol an issue in domestic violence? The answer which came from Miss Davidson was that sometimes it is, but often it is not. However, she said, it is somehow easier for both the perpetrator and the victim to live with the offense if the man has been drinking. He drinks, perhaps, to lose the inhibitions so that he can do the actual physical violence. For both partners, it is easier to say that, because of the drinking problem, "He really didn't know what he was doing."

The South Plains Conference on Family Violence continues at 9 a.m. this morning in the First Christian Church. A session involving all participants in brainstorming and community planning is scheduled to begin at 9:30 and the conference will conclude at noon. Anyone interested is invited to attend.

Lubbock Youth Exhibit Art

A little friendly harmony gives life a note of joy.

An exhibit of 225 pictures produced by Lubbock art students in the public elementary schools will go on display today in the gallery of the Museum of Texas Tech University. Refreshments will be served to those attending a special opening of the display from 10 a.m. to noon today. Many of the young artists will be present.

More than 400 students from kindergarten through sixth grade responded to the invitation from the Junior Program Committee of the Women's Council of the West Texas Museum Association to submit art depicting their ideas of the world around us.

Judges for the art show were Olive M. Jensen, Tech art faculty member; Alan Henry, Lubbock City Council member; Zonalynn Stevens, Lubbock public school art consultant; and James Toland, executive director of the Lubbock Cultural-Affairs Council.

The exhibit will be on display for 45 days in the Museum and is part of the observance of Youth Art Month.

An exhibit of pictures by students grades nine through twelve will also go on display this afternoon at the Garden and Arts Center. The official opening of the display will be from 2 to 4 p.m., and many of the students whose work will be exhibited will be present. The display will continue through the month of March. Additional art works by young people will be shown during the month at the Mahon Library.

Lack Of Job Prospects Linked To Growing Teen Suicide Rate

another 20 young people tried but failed. The number of successes today is three times the figure for 20 years ago.

Of the 100,000 or more young Americans who attempted suicide in 1977, 90 percent were female.

Following accidents and murders, suicides are now the leading cause of death among American youth.

The tragedy is repeated throughout the developed world. West Germany's suicide rate has doubled in the last 10 years. 1,468 West Germans between 10 and 25 killed themselves in 1976. France's suicide rate is steadily growing.

In Japan, a recent survey showed that one in four students periodically contemplates suicide. Some 900 Japanese under 19 killed themselves in 1978, an increase of 15 percent over 1977.

While there are many causes of suicide, more and more experts are singling out the economy as a primary factor in the recent wave. A combination of rising expectations and shrinking career opportunities is squeezing the young from all social strata into a dark and fearful corner.

Joblessness is no bargain at any age," says Seiden. "But its effect on young people is most severe. It has a great deal of meaning in terms of your identity. It is one of the ways society expresses its values."

And while the tragedy spreads, the future looks grim. Employment prospects for those on the bottom of the ladder, urban ghetto youth, are bleak at best, at worst nonexistent. Even the Army, in the past the employer of last resort, is turning down record numbers of applicants, from 35 to 45 percent, according to one recent estimate.

And for college graduates, the situation is far from promising, and it's changing for the worse. The U.S. Labor Department's Occupational Outlook Handbook sees millions of college graduates forced to take blue-collar jobs as craftsmen, technicians and mechanics by 1985, when more than 10 million new holders of B.A. and B.S. degrees will compete for only 8 million openings in jobs traditionally filled by college graduates.

Dr. Mary Miller, a consultant in suicidology who teaches at the University of California, Irvine, links depression among young people with the pressures of the job market.

California, Irvine, links depression among young people with the pressures of the job market. "There is a whole generation of disillusioned young people who are coming out of college all dressed up with no place to go because, in many cities, the economy cannot provide the specialized jobs they are trained for."

In Western Europe as well, where access to universities has been broadened from the middle and upper classes to include sizable numbers of working class students, university degrees have failed to become passports to economic success. In fact, notes a report issued by the Geneva-based International Labor Organization, "A university degree is fast becoming a ticket to nowhere."

The ILO put the total number of unemployed under 25 years of age in 24 industrialized nations at 7 million in 1977. The study showed that while those under 25 made up only 22 percent of the work force, they comprised 40 percent of the unemployed, "virtually a nation." And an Organization of Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD) report published the same year grimly predicted a "longer-term imbalance between the growing demand for employment and the absorptive capacity of the economy."

An earlier OECD study projected higher rates of inflation and unemployment for Western economies from 1975 to 1985, along with lower rates of economic growth than any since the end of World War II.

Dr. Ulf Otto, a Swedish suicidologist, warned the Ninth International Conference on Suicide Prevention in Helsinki in 1977 that mass unemployment could cause an increasing number of young people to take their lives. He called the mass unemployment among youth today "extremely dangerous."

Dr. Seymour Perlin, professor of psychiatry at George Washington University Medical School, links the rising suicide rate among young people to the decreasing opportunities available to them. He thinks society in the U.S. is growing more like Japan's, where there has long been intense competition for entry into good schools and a high suicide rate among the young.

In Japan, he says, "the student who doesn't get on the ladder at a certain point, won't. He believes that young people here are saying by their suicides either 'There's no way on' or 'I'm falling off' the ladder."

Some evidence indicates that the suicide rate for those under 19 is about the same in the U.S. as in Japan, even though the educational pressure in this country is not nearly so intense.

Unfortunately, prospects for improvement in the job market in the advanced nations are not good. Peter Melvyn, a researcher for the ILO, says that about 800,000 jobs were lost and not replaced in West Germany alone between 1973 and 1976; for every 10 jobs that disappeared, he said, only eight new ones were created.

Dr. Seiden of UC's School of Public Health, criticizes "the move in this country to make things more cost-effective and less labor-intensive."

He points to the Bay Area Rapid Transit system, which was designed to be operated with no employees on the trains or in the stations.

"It's a space age nightmare," he complains. "There's no one to sell you tickets or to make change. To get into a restroom you have to talk into a remote control television screen."

"But part of the capitalist system is to maximize profits," he continues, "and one of the unfortunate consequences is that in a matter between profit and people, people come in second."

In addition to the rise in young suicides, Seiden notes, is a surprising, even steeper rise in the number of young homicide victims. He considers the job market a major factor, though not the only one, in these tragic deaths.

What the experts are saying from statistics, others speak from bitter experience.

"Black folks, there's no need for you anymore," a black woman walked to a crowd mourning the 913 people who died in Jonestown, Guyana. "There's machines can take your place!"

No one appears to have answers. Few have found rewarding jobs through all the government subsidies for training workers and public works employment in Western Europe and in the U.S. The tide of youthful self-destruction continues despite a widespread network of suicide prevention centers.

Says Seiden, "The way you deal with suicide is to change the world, to change society, so people feel that life is worth living and they have a purpose and a place."

America No Haven For 'Boat People' Fleeing Repressive Haitian Regime

By RAY JOSEPH

(C) 1979, Pacific News Service

While the Carter Administration extends a formal welcome to thousands more "boat people" fleeing communist Vietnam, hundreds of other "boat people" from the rightwing dictatorship of Haiti are being turned back or jailed every month in Florida.

The apparent contradiction in U.S. immigration policy has stirred resentment and anger among the would-be Haitian refugees, as well as U.S. lawyers and church groups.

Typical of the treatment meted out to the estimated 7,500 Haitian refugees processed by the Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) since 1972 is what happened to 27 refugees who arrived in southern Florida last November. They had sailed 800 miles in a flimsy sailboat, a journey that has claimed the lives of hundreds of others.

The refugees were arrested and promptly jailed as soon as their boat landed. Among those incarcerated was eight-year-old Rosalene Dorsaintvil and her father, Minfort. Father and daughter were separated, with Rosalene being held in a jail reserved for women. The child remained in jail for two weeks before she was rescued by Roman Catholic priest Gerard Jean Juste and Sister Marie Pierre. The clerics say the little girl was "sobbing hysterically" when they found her.

According to INS officials, the Haitians are illegal aliens. Richard Gullage, acting INS director in Miami, admits however, that in the case of Rosalene, "we goofed... it was an oversight."

But as far as Rosalene's father and the other 25 are concerned, INS officials admit no goof. They are being rightfully detained, the officials say, because they may be "economic" rather than "political" refugees, and if so, should be returned to Haiti.

However, because the legal processing can take a long time, many refugees remain jailed for months. On February 6, 54 Haitians at Florida's Immokalee prison, some of whom had been there for up to six months, went on a hunger strike to protest what they claim is unsanitary water and poor food.

Between November 1977 and September 1978, more than 1,500 Haitians arrived on American shores by boat, according to Gullage. He concedes that the number doesn't include those Haitians who eluded the Coast Guard and slipped unnoticed into the country. Gullage estimates that some 8,000 Haitians are living "illegally" in southern Florida.

INS divides the "illegals" into "deportation cases" and "exclusion cases." The "exclusion" people are those caught before they land or as they set foot on U.S. soil. Since last September, this country's policy toward these cases has been straightforward: refugees have the choice of "voluntarily" returning to Haiti or going to jail. Since the policy became enforceable in early September, says Gullage, more than 200 Haitians have "voluntarily" chosen to go back home following and interrogation by INS officials.

Gullage says the interrogation is tailored to ascertain whether refugees are "political" or "economic." About 99 percent of the cases are disqualified as economic, he says.

Critics of the INS policy claim the treatment of Haitians is both racist and political. Ira Kurzman, a Miami lawyer and a member of the National Emergency Civil Liberties Committee, a public-service group, asserts that "The Haitians are being discriminated against because they are black and fleeing a right-wing dictatorship allied with the U.S."

Immigration officials deny the charge about racism. But they agree that refugees from right-wing dictatorships can't be treated the same way as those fleeing left-wing regimes.

First, "The decision is made in Washington," Gullage says. And he adds, "The Vietnamese are escaping from communism, which we consider to be bad."

In Washington, INS Deputy Commissioner Mario Noto confirms that "It's a different matter" when dealing with refugees from communist-controlled nations. The State Department, Justice Department, and Congress agree that they are special cases, he says.

On the assumption that all those who flee from communist lands are bona fide refugees, the U.S. has welcomed about 750,000 Cubans. Late last year President Carter, stating again his concern for human rights, announced that this country will be taking in another 3,000 political prisoners that President Castro promises to release over the next few months.

MUSICAL CABBIE — Chicago cab driver Al Porett combats the frustrations of his job by playing the flute in his cab. Porett, who majored in psychology at the University of Illinois, says

Cabbie Plays Flute To Soothe Nerves

CHICAGO (AP)—Cab driver Al Porett has his own way of dealing with horns honking and motorists cursing in traffic jams. He plays his flute.

"I'll bet I'm the only cabbie in the world who doesn't worry about red lights or rush-hour traffic snarls," says Porett, who majored in psychology at the University of Illinois. "I just pick up my flute that I carry beside me in the front seat and start playing. There are a lot of frustrations on this job and it's better to blow a flute than honk a horn."

Porett, 32, says he hopes to become a professional flutist in about five years and in the meantime will keep driving his leased cab. "I like talking to people and I'm in the sea of life driving a cab. Been doing it for 10 years," he says.

"I've been playing the flute about 1 1/2 years. I started out playing by ear, but now I'm taking a few lessons," he said. "I also play the saxophone but that would be too hard to handle in a cab. I love jazz and have a lot of records. I'm a fan of John Coltrane and have most of his stuff."

Coltrane before his death was one of the great tenor and soprano sax players.

Porett, a bachelor, said when people see him playing a flute on his job they laugh.

"When I'm parked waiting for a pick-up, I play my flute and passersby will look at me and laugh," he said. "They just figure I'm doing my thing, I guess."

"I pick up all types of customers, and when I stop for a traffic signal, for instance, and pick up my flute and begin playing most of them can't believe it."

"Some passengers may be deep in thought, their faces strained with worry and problems," he said. "When I begin playing my flute, they smile, then laugh, and then they start talking to me. I like that. The flute is a conversation piece as well as a musical instrument."

Students Begin Migrating To Fort Lauderdale

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Swimsuits replaced parkas and suntan lotion replaced lip balm as thousands of college students got a headstart Friday on the annual Easter migration from the chilly North to the beaches of this resort city.

The phenomenon became a $45 million-a-year industry after it was popularized by the song and movie, "Where the Boys Are."

"The guys want to meet the girls and the girls want to meet the guys," said police spokesman John Cochrane. "They all fall into 'like' for a few days."

Sunny afternoons with 70-degree temperatures greeted several thousand collegians, lounging on beaches or strolling along Florida A1A, the oceanfront highway Jimmy Buffett sang about.

"You can't do that in Muncie right now," said Ball State sophomore Phil Nonneau as he pointed to the shorts he wore.

By mid-March, 10,000 to 15,000 young people are expected in this seaside resort, and up to 30,000 are likely to be on hand just before Easter, all taking advantage of the warm Florida climate during their spring break from classes.

"Last week we had 11 inches of snow one night, more the next day and then another eight inches," said Mike Wright, a senior from West Virginia. "We had 25 inches in a matter of a week. You couldn't wait to get out of there. If I could stay here I would."

Last year, 71 persons were arrested

during a single incident in which a mob, upset about a bar closing at 3 a.m., hurled beer bottles, eggs and trash at police.

"We have some good years and had years," said Police Chief Leo F. Callahan. "And then there have been some nondescript years, too."

But serious disturbances have been rare in recent years — after some near-riots in the 1960s — and police say the major problem is simply "the sheer numbers of people."

"We have officers down there prepared to handle the vehicle and pedestrian traffic," said Cochrane. "They (the students) jam everything, the stores, sidewalks, streets, beaches."

Callahan said dozens of officers will work overtime during the season. In the past, the extra hours have cost the city up to $50,000.

"But when you consider how much the collegians pump into the local economy, the overtime cost is minuscule," said Callahan, who has seen 24 spring throngs come and go.

The thousands of visitors are expected to spend about $45 million on drinks, food and lodging.

The Chamber of Commerce official said most of the students come from middle and upper-middle class families and take an economical approach to their visits.

But "some are so rich it's pathetic," he said. "They come down in Maseratis."

WHAT'S UP?

A capsule view of tastes, interests and attitudes

What's up in intimidation?

Even big stars are sometimes made to feel small. These were some of the responses when Cosmopolitan asked celebrities to disclose who intimidates them.

Betty White: "Writers."
Joan Rivers: "Anybody younger, thinner, with a better body or bigger breasts. Dolly Parton really makes me uncomfortable."

Billy's not intimidated.

Erich Segal: "People who outprint me at the 10-mile mark."
Jacqueline Bisset: "Snobs."
Tony Curtis: "My mother still scares me even though she's dead."
Orson Bean: "Headwaiters in fancy restaurants."
Oscar de la Renta: "An unknown voice over the phone."
Tony Randall: "Almost anybody taller or more muscular."
Carl Reiner: "People in authority, especially the type who don't smile — like policemen or customs inspectors."
Alex Haley: "God."
But first brother Billy Carter had a different response: "Nobody has ever intimidated me. Not one person in my entire life."

What's up in water?

No sooner had we learned to order wine without making fools of ourselves than we were faced with the new problem of ordering water.

To help ease the task of deciding which brand of bottled water to request, New West magazine recently conducted the world's first water tasting. Judges for the event were all intimately familiar with the subject; among them were an aquatic biologist, a car-wash owner, a Coast Guard officer, a swimsuit designer and a surfer.

These were their ratings:
1. San Pellegrino (Italy)
2. Apollinaris (Germany)
3. Evian (France)
4. Sheffield's (U.S.)
5. Poland Water (U.S.)
6. Perrier (France)
7. San Lorenzo (Mexico)
8. Mountain Valley (U.S.)
9. Calistoga (U.S.)

What's up with blacks?

Racism still abounds in the United States. That's the view of leading blacks surveyed by the publishers of "Who's Who Among Black Americans."

Some 69 percent of the 2,000 blacks questioned agree that most whites harbor racist feelings. Nearly nine out of 10 say that many whites who claim they don't discriminate really do in subtle ways.

Here are other findings of the survey:

Minorities are not fairly presented in the media, say 83 percent of those surveyed. Two-thirds think that the only way minorities can get adequate news coverage is by protest demonstrations.

Nine out of 10 believe blacks do not have the same opportunities as whites to advance in major corporations and white-owned businesses. And 85 percent say discrimination makes it difficult for blacks to raise the capital to start their own businesses.

Segregated education is viewed as inherently unequal by 90 percent of those questioned. Two-thirds believe school busing should be mandated to achieve racial balance.

About 90 percent believe minorities do not receive equal treatment from the police and courts.

The Rev. Jesse Jackson was voted the most effective leader of the black community. Runners-up were U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young, Vernon Jordan of the National Urban League, Benjamin Hooks of the NAACP, former Rep. Barbara Jordan and Georgia State Senator Julian Bond.

President Carter's job performance ranks low with respondents. Only 7 percent believe he has done an "excellent" job while 22 percent rate him as "unsatisfactory."

Jackson: Top leader.

What's up in fast food?

The Colonel is edging out Ronald McDonald in the race for fast-food outlets. According to a survey published by U.S. News and World Report, these are the world's 10 leading fast-food chains and the number of outlets each claims:

Kentucky Fried Chicken	5,355

March 5 — James Merritt Ives (1824-1895), the publisher of popular lithographic prints. He and his partner, Nathaniel Currier, issued about 7,000 individual editions of prints portraying American life and events in the 19th century. Today, Currier & Ives prints, surviving in scant numbers, are highly prized by collectors.

March 6 — Elizabeth Barrett Browning (1806-1861), the English poet and wife of Robert Browning, who in her lifetime was widely regarded as England's greatest woman poet. Her most famous work, "Sonnets from the Portuguese," records her romance with Browning.

Publisher Heads Boys Ranch Roundup

Johnny Bonner, president of West Texas Boys Ranch, has announced the appointment of Stanley Frank of San Angelo as chairman of the 1979 WTBR Roundup.

Frank is publisher of Livestock Weekly which he established 30 years ago. He has been on the Boys Ranch Board of Directors for 15 years.

Bonner, in his announcement, pointed out that the success of this year's Roundup is especially important for the STANLEY FRANK Ranch.

"Unchecked inflation seriously erodes the financial position of the Ranch," he said. "Roundup is a means whereby Wagon Bosses in the counties served by the Ranch solicit donating of livestock or each to be given to the Ranch for operating funds. All such contributions are deductible. However, the Board's position on not accepting federal aid is firm and adamant."

Frank's responsibilities as Roundup chairman will include assisting Wagon Bosses wherever and whenever possible, and he is asking them to let him know how he can be of help.

The new Roundup chairman does "a little ranching on the side" in addition to his publishing business. He was born in Evanston, Wyo., was graduated from high school at Barnhart, and did newspaper and magazine writing in San Angelo, Midland, Memphis, Tenn., and Los Angeles before starting Livestock Weekly. His family includes his wife, the former Mary Helen Hays, who is graduate of Pampa High School; a son Bob and a daughter Helen, both students at Angelo State University; and a daughter, Carol Hannon, of Evergreen, Colorado.

Berkowitz Letters

NEW YORK (AP) — Two notes written by "Son of Sam" killer David Berkowitz were sold for $625, the owner of a Manhattan gallery said Friday.

A "confessional" note, written to an unidentified fellow prisoner when Berkowitz was in a state psychiatric center in upstate Marcy, sold for $375, said gallery owner Charles Hamilton.

The note, dated Nov. 4, 1978, was purchased by an unidentified Connecticut collector. It reads: "I am the Son of Sam and I killed six people. David Berkowitz."

Newscares Signs Off

BALTIMORE (AP) — After more than 155,000 newscasts during a 40-year career with radio station WBAL, Galen Fromme has retired as the "dean of Maryland newscasters."

In the close of his last broadcast at 8 a.m., Fromme, 63, famous for his deep baritone voice, received taped congratulations from NBC news colleagues David Brinkley, Edwin Newman and Mike Moss.

Galen Fromme is about to fold up his typewriter and say goodbye to deadlines, Newman said.

Moss said, "Galen, you ought to be decorated for durability, if nothing else."
Brinkley added "that broadcasting is one of the few big industries in this country where the pioneers are still walking around and still working, and, of course, you are one of them with a record almost unmatched."

In his farewell to listeners, Fromme said, "As we old-timers used to say in signing off, 'Thanks for listening.'"

Columnist Tells Gossip About Herself

By ELLIE GROSSMAN

A lifetime ago in a London orphanage, Sheila Graham would wake herself up at night so she wouldn't wet her bed and get beaten with a hairbrush.

She was 6-year-old Lily Shiel then whose head was shaved, like her sister inmates. But she also had migraine headaches, eczema, chilblains and constant hunger.

Plus the particular pain of night. Even now, she says, "I can't bear darkness. I try never to arrive anywhere late at night because there's a loneliness and terror connected with it."

Still, she did have a spoon to herself. At home, she and her mother — an East End public bath attendant who had cancer — shared one. And she could steal food from the kitchen and occasionally buy tinned salmon and currant buns with the sixpence she'd win being smart in class.

Then again, she wouldn't have had to if her father had lived, she says. "He was a very educated, aristocratic European who died when I was an infant. That's all I want to say about him. After he died, my mother couldn't care for me and that's why she put me in the orphanage."

That's where she learned to take the present for what it's worth. And, if it wasn't worth a damn, to get on into a future that was — any way possible.

With a warm smile and blonde good looks, brash Lily Shiel became Sheila Graham, for 33 years the self-styled "last of the unholy trio" in Hollywood.

Along with Louella Parsons and Hedda Hopper, she wrote syndicated "Debbie and Eddie are happier than ever" columns. Eight a week at her peak, plus hosting television and radio shows.

What got her up there was persistent nagging. Her childhood appetites for food, love and money wouldn't let go.

By the time she was 17, selling toothbrushes, (for back teeth only) in a swank London department store, she'd learned that men could satisfy those appetites.

At night, after work, she'd roam Piccadilly, counting the men who smiled and accosted her. "I flirted automatically because I wanted to be admired," she says. "I was very innocent in those days, a pretty, defenseless, funny little thing."

So when a man like The Well-Dressed Codger stopped and invited her to dinner, she didn't hesitate. He took her to a private dining room in a fine restaurant where "dessert" involved more than eclairs.

"I ate with gusto, but my antennae were out," she says. "I did almost anything for food, but never the ultimate because my mother taught me you must be a virgin when you marry."

Therefore, when the Codger began advancing towards dessert, she was so horrified, she scared him to death. Laughing, marveling at the risks she took, she says, "I was lucky they weren't murderers."

At 18, it was farewell Piccadilly when she married dashing aristocrat Maj. John Graham, 43. He cured her of saying "coo lumpty" and aggravated her taste for the sumptuous, but he also succeeded at failing at business.

With loansharks snapping at his fine leather boots, he put her on the stage. "I had to be the wage earner," she says. "I divorced him in '37 to marry the Marquess of Donegall, but I supported him to the day he died in 1965." Why not? He couldn't help what he was, and mostly he was a dear, charming man.

"Even Scott loved him and would read his letters," she says.

F. Scott Fitzgerald, she means, whom she met in Hollywood in '37 at her own engagement party to the Marquess. By then she was earning better money writing here than singing in London.

LILY SHIEL, inmate of a London orphanage, and Sheila Graham, who still can't bear darkness.

By the time the party was over, so was her engagement and she began a three-year love affair with Fitzgerald described in her first book, "Beloved Infidel."

He educated her, she encouraged him to write "The Last Tycoon" and then, one day in 1940, he literally dropped dead in front of her.

She fled to England, married an aviation expert, had two children, divorced him, returned to Hollywood, kept writing, and married "Bow Wow" Wojkiewicz when she was 51 and he was 39. That lasted two years.

Now, still blonde and dazzling, she accounts for the beginning — and the appetites — in "The Late Lily Shiel," published by Grosset and Dunlap.

The cravings are still there some. "I absolutely remember every meal I've had," she laughs. "And the height of bliss would be to have a marvelous live-in chef."

He'd prepare her perfect meal: Scotch smoked salmon, Vichyssoise, filet mignon, sliced fried potatoes, asparagus. But only stewed fruit for dessert. "After all these years of hanging onto the precipice of what I wrote about people, I get indigestion rather easily."

The love of her grandchildren counts more now than any other, she says, but she still loves money and makes it buying and selling homes, now and again. But she probably wouldn't sell her "little doll's house" in London, though it's worth four times what she paid for it. It's too much a home, bought, though, on impulse, the way she's lived.

"I was passing by and stopped and said how pretty. The owner was standing in the doorway and the sun was coming through. She said, would you like to see it? And by the time I left, I'd bought it."

She's done it all in soft autumn colors, greens, russet, gold. "It's an 18th century gem," she says. "And when I open that door, I breathe a great sigh of pleasure." Especially, one would think, at night.

Trees, Landscape Aid In Cooling

By JOE P. TEAS
Texas Certified Nurseryman

Have you ever been driving home in the afternoon on a hot freeway with the sun burning through the windows? Then have you turned down a tree shaded street that seemed 15 degrees cooler? It probably was.

Trees purify the air filtering out dust and pollution. They convert carbon dioxide to the oxygen we breathe. They manufacture the basic carbohydrate materials we ultimately use as food. They screen views, deaden noise, prevent erosion and provide beauty.

It has been estimated that it requires 78 large trees per person to provide oxygen for our various living processes. One for breathing, 20 to replace oxygen burned in our automobile, 20 for our heating and air conditioning, five for household electricity, two for garbage disposal, and 30 for manufacture of our industrial goods.

As fuel costs soar, more people will be planting shade trees to cool their yards and houses. Where should these be planted and which trees are best?

We can depend on a light southeast breeze during our hottest months. This fact is the key to developing a more pleasant environment. The ideal house would have lots of open glass on the southeast side with a wide overhanging roof. No windows on the west, few on the east and only small exhaust windows on the north will keep the hot sun out in summer while not letting too much cold north wind in during winter.

On the west side of the property, a line of tall heavy shrubs will funnel the southeast breeze through the house. Tall deciduous trees on the west would help shade the house and yard in the summer, but allow sun during the winter.

On the south side tall growing deciduous shade trees with branches trimmed high could funnel the breeze down through the yard while cooling the air. No hedges or screens should be planted on the south or east which would stop the breeze.

On the north side a wind break planting would divert cold winter winds up and over the house. These should be evergreen shrubs in front of evergreen trees which would form a ramp for the north wind to go over the house.

On the east side, any flower, vegetable or fruit plantings with one or two tall trees to shade the roof would be ideal. Most gardens like morning sun but not so much hot afternoon sun.

This combination with a good lawn will take the hot summer breeze, cool it, compress it and aim it through your home providing increasing pleasure each year. A light watering late in the afternoon could make you look for a sweater late some July evening.

Tech Professor Writes Article On Nicaragua

Unless President Anastasio Somoza of Nicaragua accepts political and economic changes, growing numbers of individuals, groups and governments will support the guerrillas seeking to topple his rule, according to a Texas Tech University political scientist.

Dr. Neale J. Pearson is author of "Nicaragua in Crisis," published in the February issue of "Current History," a world affairs monthly. The entire February issue is devoted to Latin America, 1979.

In his article Pearson reviews the 40-year history of Nicaraguan rule by the Somoza Family.

"As master politicians, the Somozas have balanced the competing interests of the National Guard, government bureaucrats, rural landowners, aspiring industrialists, merchants, a small trade union movement and the opposition parties," Pearson said.

To do this the Somoza family has used jobs, pensions, favors, promotions, gifts and security, and they have exploited differences between opposition groups in Pearson's view.

The Somoza fortune, he said, was estimated in 1978 to be at least $500 million. But while the family has become personally wealthy, significant economic gains also have been made in Nicaragua during the Somoza rule.

"The number of schools, students and teachers greatly increased; agriculture and industry were diversified and productivity increased; new highways and bridges were built although some critics argue that most new highways go past Somoza properties," Pearson observed. Most of the economic gain has been made during the rule of the two sons of Anastasio Somoza Garza, patriarch of the clan, who became president after ousting his uncle from that position in 1936.

In his article Pearson, whose special interest is peasant groups, trade unions and political parties in Latin America, reviews guerrilla activities over the past several years, culminating last summer when those forces seized the National Palace and held more than 1,500 hostages. He also comments on support for Somoza's removal that has come from the governments of Costa Rica, Venezuela and Panama and from trade union groups.

"Anastasio Somoza Debayle is a brilliant and crafty political strategist," he said. "He may allow more political participation in his government, but he and his supporters are not likely to change the economic status quo because they are its principal beneficiaries."

"Nonetheless, unless political and economic changes are accepted, growing numbers of individuals, groups and governments will offer moral and material support to the anti-Somoza guerrillas in order to topple Somoza."

Surviving Twin's Condition Critical

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A Siamese twin who survived a separation operation in which her sister's life was sacrificed remained in critical condition Friday, but doctors said she was doing very well.

"Due to the nature of the operation, the doctors feel she is doing exceptionally well," said a spokeswoman for St. Christopher's Hospital for Children.

Twin "B" was sacrificed in the six-hour operation Thursday so that her sister, Twin "A," would have a chance to live, doctors said.

The infants, who shared a six-chamber heart and other vital organs, were born at Albert Einstein Medical Center on Feb. 20.

Scientists Stalk, Observe Rare Philippine Eagle

MONKEY EATER — Piercing eyes, a narrow, curved beak, and a bonnet of slender feathers make the monkey-eating eagle of the Philippines a distinctive bird. A group of American researchers have found that 300 to 500 eagles — also called the Philippine eagle — may live in the islands, despite forces that have wiped out much of the species. (Photo © 1979 by the National Geographic Society)

By BARBARA S. MOFFET
National Geographic News Service
WASHINGTON — After weeks of stalking the monkey-eating eagle through the dense forests of the Philippines, a group of American scientists finally found the rare bird. In fact, they think they might have found 500 of them.

They also discovered that the monkey-eating eagle isn't that wild about monkeys. The blue-eyed, white-crested bird seems to prefer dining on flying lemurs, animals that resemble flying squirrels.

Even though the eagle population apparently is in the hundreds, the bird still faces the threat of extinction, says Dr. Robert S. Kennedy, an expedition member.

So the bird's name recently was changed to Philippine eagle, the first step in an effort to have it declared the country's national bird. The Americans hope the new name will draw attention to the eagle, which was discovered in 1896 on the Philippine island of Samar but ignored for years.

"We view the eagle as a symbol," Kennedy said. "If we can help the eagle, we will preserve other Philippine wildlife."

One of the rarest eagles in the world, the Philippine (monkey-eating) eagle was believed extinct on Samar, but the group now thinks the island has a sizable population. More eagles were found on three of the other islands, especially Mindanao. But despite these discoveries, the bird remains in danger.

Native only to the Philippines, the eagle builds its huge nest — five by eight feet in size — high in the trees of mountain ranges. In the last 30 years it has lost nesting ground to extensive logging and clearing of forest for agriculture. The eagles also have been killed by trophy hunters.

Hoping to educate Filipinos about the bird's plight, the American scientists are observing and counting the eagles and filming their behavior, funded by a grant from the National Geographic Society. Other sponsors are the Marcos Foundation and Philippine Airlines.

Skylab's Fate Prompts Letters

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Imaginative letter-writers are objecting to a decision by scientists that it no longer is feasible to try to save the orbiting Skylab from a fiery death.

About 50 letters, and some telephone calls, have been received since the National Aeronautics and Space Administration announced that efforts to correct a decaying orbital path have failed and the space laboratory will plunge back toward Earth later this year.

Citizens have suggested remedies ranging from seeking help from the Soviet Union to use of a cowpuncher-type lasso device to stabilize the flight path.

A Sacramento, Calif., writer suggested an Agena rocket with a docking device be sent either to raise the orbit or to guide Skylab to a controlled ocean death.

treehouses, recording days in the lives of the eagle. The scientists also have attached a radio transmitter to the tail of a juvenile eagle to track its behavior patterns. "We know where he is 24 hours a day," Kennedy said.

To help assure the species' survival, Kennedy and a colleague, Ronald Krupa, have begun a captive breeding and release program. They plan to use such techniques as artificial insemination to breed the birds where they are safe from man's encroachment.

The scientists also are working with President Ferdinand Marcos to curb the destruction of the eagles' habitat by loggers and farmers.

The second largest eagle in the world, the Philippine eagle has a wing span of about seven feet and weighs up to 15 pounds. It has chocolate brown and white feathers and has an extremely narrow, curved beak. Its most unusual feature, is its "moppy crest," a bonnet of feathers that rise when the bird is provoked.

After it was first discovered, the eagle was practically forgotten until a scientist began studying it in the 1960s. It then caught the eye of Charles A. Lindbergh, who helped set up a program to preserve the species.

Female Boot Spurs Marine Corps

PARRIS ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — The Marine Corps' reaction to a small star-shaped tattoo on her left wrist has alienated the affections of a 23-year-old New York woman.

Lorraine Nicotera says, although Marine officials have reversed their policy of forbidding female recruits from having tattoos, she doesn't want to wear the Marine uniform.

"The Marines are always talking about how women have as much opportunity as men," she said Thursday. "I'm glad I found out about it."

"What made me really mad is I don't think it makes any difference," Miss Nicotera said.

Marine officials said Friday that since Miss Nicotera rejected a waiver of the dismissal she will be discharged sometime next week.

The pea-sized tattoo was discovered Wednesday, her first day of basic training at the Parris Island recruit depot, while she was standing in line waiting to be issued a uniform.

She said she had mentioned the tattoo as an identifying mark during her induction physical six months ago.

Officials at the recruit depot originally said she would be discharged because Marine regulations allow men, but not women, to have tattoos.

Then the Corps learned that at least three other women Marines who are about to graduate from training at the depot have tattoos. So the Corps decided Thursday to change the policy and let Miss Nicotera stay on, a spokesman said.

The spokesman, Lt. Col. Arthur Brill, said the Corps will revise its policy "regarding tattoos so it will apply equally to men and women."

Miss Nicotera signed up for a four-year stint after attending Nassau County Community College. She planned to become a meteorologist.

She said she tattooed herself several years ago, using a pen and India ink, because she liked the way one looked on a boyfriend.

Chicks Set Record For 15-Year-Old

HOUSTON (AP) — Janet Jamison, 15, of Corsicana, sold five prize chickens for a record $22,000 Friday and said she plans to buy more chickens "and anything else I want."

The chickens had been judged Thursday as the grand champion broiler pen at the Houston Livestock Show and Rodeo and were sold at the Friday auction to Pearce Industries, a Houston heavy equipment firm.

The old record of $18,000 had been set last year.

Bill Cowley, one of the judges in the Thursday competition, said the champions weighing a combined 22 pounds would have brought about 30 cents a pound if they had been sold through regular market channels.

The reserve champion pen exhibited by Wendel Bordovsky, 16, of Mart, brought a record $17,000 price from Mike Mitchell, a Shelby rancher. The old record of $9,000 also was set last year.

Big Spring Seeks Funds For Drug-Sniffing Dog

A-J Correspondent
BIG SPRING — Big Spring police chief Stanley Bogard received donations totaling $90 Thursday for the purchase of a drug-sniffing dog for the city.

This brings total contributions to $1,682. A total of $5,000 will be needed for the purchase and final training of the dog.

"When we get the $2,000, we'll sign a contract for the animal to keep the Price from going up," said Bogard.

The chief explained that between the time he began contemplating buying the dog and now, the price had risen by $1,000.

Paralyzed Woman Enjoys Tennis, Skiing

By NANCY JO HILL
HUNTINGTON PARK, Calif. (NEA)

Like many 23-year-olds, Marian Schooling enjoys tennis, water skiing and a good joc once in a while.

Also like most young people her age, she is busy preparing for the career she will launch after her graduation from college this spring. She intends to become a health educator.

But Miss Schooling is paralyzed from just below the arms due to injuries from an automobile accident four years ago.

She achieves her athletic feats with slight alterations of her sports.

For tennis, the court is shortened and the ball is permitted to bounce instead of one. (There are no arms on her wheelchair to get in the way of the racket.)

Miss Schooling, who played tennis competitively before her accident, recently won a trophy in a wheelchair tournament.

For water skiing, she sits on a knee board. And her version of jogging is wheeling her chair a mile or more around the park.

Why all this activity despite the difficulties involved for her?

"I was always athletic," she explains.

"I didn't see any reason not to be involved just because I was in a wheelchair. I wasn't going to stop doing the things I enjoyed."

Despite her traumatic experience in an automobile, she knew driving was the ticket to getting out into the world without having to depend on others. She has a car equipped with hand controls and a hand brake.

"The only thing that hinders me is having steps someplace," she says.

A major problem was getting to the car from the two-story house where she lives with her parents and two sisters. Her solution was to install an elevator.

She wheels out to a porch, rides the elevator down to the car, wheels over and slides onto the seat. She then collapses her wheelchair and neatly pulls it into the back seat. It's no simple task.

Her one concern about the outside elevator was the noise it created. She didn't like coming home late at night, because she feared the sound of the elevator might disturb the neighbors.

She discovered that the reverse was true. She installed a new, quieter model, but found her neighbors worried about her until they heard the elevator and knew she was home safely.

When Miss Schooling received an internship in health education with the Red Cross in Washington last summer, she decided she wanted to take her car. No one was available to drive her, so she made the cross-country journey by herself.

She had some car trouble on the trip, but found people more than willing to give her a hand.

Miss Schooling does a lot of public speaking and is active in a number of organizations—including the Los Angeles County Commission on Youth and the student government at California State University at Long Beach.

"A lot of people see the wheelchair and don't see me as a person. This is one of the biggest things I try to impart," she says of her speaking engagements.

"The main thing," she adds, "is that people who are handicapped or impaired have the same desires and drives as anyone."

Miss Schooling uses what she has learned about dealing with the world from a wheelchair to help others with the same problem.

Doctors Dispute Man's Hearing Return Claim

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A 30-year-old handyman who says he miraculously regained his hearing after 28 years still has a "profound hearing loss in both ears," according to doctors who tested his hearing.

But the man, Bobby Jimenez of Porterville, insists that he can hear and that he failed the hearing test because he misunderstood the instructions.

On Monday, Jimenez reported to police that he had seen two streaks of orange light and had heard an explosion. He said it was the first sound he has been able to detect since he apparently suffered permanent nerve damage from meningitis at the age of 2.

No one else reported seeing the streaks or hearing an explosion, leading to speculation that they may have been caused by his ears popping.

But doctors at the U.C. Medical Center here, who conducted an audiogram test on Jimenez on Thursday, said, "Bobby Jimenez... was tested by asking him to respond to a series of pure tone signals over a broad range of frequencies. The examination indicated he has a profound hearing loss in both ears."

"The doctors agree that something happened to him earlier this week, but they can't document what," said Anne Moffat, a public information officer for the hospital.

"We have no documentation that he ever regained his hearing," she added. "We've got lots of anecdotes, but when it came to the test, there was a profound hearing loss."

However, Dr. Robert Wesman of the Medical Center, said, "He does appear to have isolated islands of hearing."

After the tests, Jimenez was interviewed by reporters with the aid of Barbara Dodson, a sign language interpreter, because he had never learned to speak as a result of deafness.

He said he could hear the voices and the sounds of doors closing during the interview. Mrs. Dodson, who has worked with Jimenez for several years, said she was convinced Monday night that he can hear.

Mrs. Dodson said he may seem to be hearing fewer sounds because he might be simply shutting them out as he gets used to them.

Jimenez had complained at first of headaches caused by a barrage of unfamiliar sounds. At various times he had covered his ears with his hands or stuffed tissue in his ears, complaining of pain from sounds.

Ms. Moffat said Jimenez showed a great deal of stress during the tests.

Both Mrs. Dodson and Angel Mendoza, an uncle who accompanied Jimenez on the flight to San Francisco for the tests, said they believe he misunderstood the doctors' instructions. Mendoza said it hasn't been decided whether more tests will be conducted.

Jimenez' mother, Concha, who lives with him, said she is convinced her son can hear.

"He heard the tea kettle whistling Tuesday for the first time and a friend called and he answered the phone. None of my boys play jokes. I never let them tell lies," she said.

Farmers Oppose French Army Maneuvers

By MICHAEL ZWERIN
(c) 1979 Pacific News Service

Occitania is occupied. Though there are those who laugh at it, Occitania is not a country from some Marx Brothers movie. One million or so people — mostly old mountain people, plus, now, a number of youths — consider themselves Occitan and speak the language.

The sheep farmers of Occitania's Larzac Plateau, in the south of France, resent aliens from the capital — as do coalminers in Wales, farmers in Tennessee, Mohawks in Akwesasne and intellectuals in Barcelona.

In particular, the Occitans resent the attempt of the French Army to acquire 100,000 acres of their plateau for maneuvers, expanding from the 7,000 acres it bought in 1903.

One hundred and three landowners refused to sell at any price eight years ago and only three have since given in.

In this way, throughout France, which has one of the most centralized governments in the Western world, they made Larzac a symbol of the little guy fighting an overblown state. And they became part of the world-wide movement that signals a breakdown of centralized nations.

This movement includes conservatives who say government is too big, liberals who want local autonomy, and it does not break down into right and left. In the United States one of its names is bioregionalism. In Britain it is devolution. "a handing down of power and responsibility to smaller political units."

It links groups advocating that a State of Superior be patched from Northern Michigan and parts of Minnesota and Wisconsin, in keeping with geographical affinities; that an Ozarkia be recognized, independent of Missouri and Arkansas; that the Basque country, known as Euzkadi, be independent of Spain; that Bretons and Corsicans be freed from the cultural dominance of Paris.

What all these groups share is a conviction that people have the right to decide what happens to the places they inhabit.

Occitania rebelled when the mayor of the strategically located town of La Cavalerie tried to help the army oust the farmers. Somebody dumped a load of sheep manure on the mayor's front lawn. Petitions were signed, delegations formed, press conferences organized. Neighboring bishops and mayors wrote letters of protest to Paris.

An elderly guru by the name of Lanzo del Vasto, who ran a religious commune nearby, went on a hunger strike which attracted national attention. He became unofficial public relations director for the farmers and connected their problem to large issues, such as ecology and non-violent dissent.

When the French Minister of Defense announced the inauguration of expropriation proceedings, he touched a crucial nerve. For the French hold the right to property even more sacred than Americans do.

The French government announced that "if necessary the expropriations will be by force." Farmers blocked roads with tractors. They drove a truckload of sheep up to the Eiffel tower and grazed them under it. They planted 103 trees on the plateau: one for each farmer, as a symbol of "life, roots and continuance."

A delegation of Native Americans came to visit. A member of the Pit River tribe said: "The situation of the Pit River tribe is identical to the people of Larzac and we ought to be part of the same struggle." Janet Mat Cloud of the Nisqually tribe remarked: "I didn't think that I would find people in France with the same problems we have, and who want the same things we do for our children. Our children are not made for factories."

The Larzac plateau is harsh, windy, rocky. It is a land of bare light bulbs where families still spend winter evenings around the kitchen table because the kitchen is the only heated room.

The struggle has led the farmers to discover what they have in common, including their Occitan heritage. The fabric of this heritage is threadbare, maybe beyond repair. The Occitan language has even lost its name, it's called "patois" now, meaning incorrect French.

But Occitans now talk proudly of the medieval troubadours who, they say, were Occitan; of Occitan culture that flourished in the courts of Avignon and Toulouse while Frenchmen were still under rocks. Occitans were heretics, they explain, and in the 13th century, a Crusade decimated them.

The farmers' struggle is coming to a head. Court proceedings are grinding to a conclusion. In November, 20 farmers undertook a 500-mile protest march to Paris to make a personal appeal to President Giscard d'Estaing. However, the principal partner in Giscard's center-right coalition are the right-wing Gaullists, and there are Gaullist landowners who stand to make big profits at the army's purchase price.

Despite outside support, the Larzac protest remains locally controlled by the farmers who have no leader, no organization and no long-term platform. Their politics is simple and direct: "We will not leave."

Budget Cuts Wipe Out Two Government Books

WASHINGTON (AP) — The budget-cutting ax has felled at least two widely read government periodicals, and others may be threatened.

"Job Safety and Health," published by the Labor Department's Occupational Safety and Health Administration is the latest casualty, expiring with the just-published December 1978 issue.

"It was felt that other activities were more important in view of the resources available," said Whit Shoemaker of the Office of Management and Budget.

The 8-year-old magazine dealt with hazards in the workplace, discussing current issues, describing attempts at improving safety and listing new activities and programs of OSHA. It had a paid circulation of 8,019, with several thousand more distributed free through the government.

Also at the Labor Department, "Worklite" magazine has been terminated as of the February edition. Formerly called "Manpower," the magazine has a press run of 26,000 copies.

The winner of numerous awards for government publications, "Worklite" was distributed through employment offices across the nation, listing new government programs and describing the government's employment and training activities.

OMB's Shoemaker said general budget constraints are prompting close looks at various ways of saving money, but he indicated that no special emphasis is being put on publications.

The budgetary agency authorizes publications for up to five years, reviewing their usefulness whenever the approvals run out.

"It's just a matter of happenstance that these dates are occurring," Shoemaker said.

Also being discontinued is "Consumer News," the popular newsletter of the Office of Consumer Affairs, with a circulation of 20,000.

Managing Editor Marion Q. Ciccio said she doesn't know when the publication will be ended formally, but she expects the blow to fall "in the next few issues."

Money again was cited as the problem, particularly postage for the newsletter, which is mailed first class to subscribers across the country.

While "Consumer News" serves both individuals and consumer groups, Miss Ciccio said the department is considering replacing it with a publication directed at consumer organizations.

At the Office of Education, "American Education" magazine has been told by OMB to reduce its free distribution of some 22,000 copies a month.

American Education is also distributed to about 10,000 paid subscribers, and those currently receiving free copies are being queried to see if they are willing to pay for the magazine.

The OMB authorization for the Food and Drug Administration's glossy "FDA Consumer" magazine has expired. The FDA has asked for a renewal and is preparing information to justify continuing the magazine.

FDA Consumer deals with a wide range of current health and safety topics, how people are affected and the activities of the FDA.

Renewed authorizations are apparently possible, with extensions recently granted to the Environmental Protection Agency's "EPA Journal" and "Dimensions," the magazine of the National Bureau of Standards.

Cost cutting has also resulted in a curtailment at the Consumer Product Safety Commission.

"NEISS Data Highlights," a newsletter that keeps track of the causes of accidental injuries across the country, was converted from monthly to quarterly publication at the end of last year.

Car Salesman Seeks Discerning Buyers

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Among car dealers, Charles Schmitt is King of the Classics — with a royal record to prove it.

The 43-year-old son of a foundry worker estimates he has sold $400 million in rare and exotic automobiles since he began in 1952. And he expects to sell $20 million this year alone.

He'll sell you anything from a new $68,000 Rolls Royce Silver Shadow II, to a variety of antique Rolls priced up to $500,000. And he'll convince you it's a bargain.

A 1959 Rolls, for instance, has a book value today 25 percent higher than when it was new. Schmitt said. "It's like money in the bank. A perfect hedge against inflation."

But who can afford such a hedge? Schmitt's sales pitch appeals to people who view autos as works of art, not heaps of metal. And to folks with big bankrolls, he concedes.

"There's a mystique about the Rolls that defies traditional values," he said. "They are like pieces of fine art. Of course, not everyone can afford to purchase a Rolls, just as not everyone can afford a Picasso or Renoir."

He's a salesman's salesman. He's even sold some of his restored Rolls over the telephone, sight unseen.

Schmitt loves to tell about his biggest sales, and the grandest one of all — the one you can find in the Guinness Book of Records as the highest priced used car ever sold — was a 1959 Silver Cloud Rolls convertible coupe he sold recently for a cool half million dollars. The car, originally designed for the late King Faisal of Saudi Arabia, is the only one of its kind ever produced. "That one will go for a million next time it's sold," Schmitt predicted.

The St. Louis native operates Charles Schmitt & Co. Rolls Royce out of a modified car wash where, at age 18, he rented a stall from a Chrysler dealer for $35 and went into the car wash business. "I never conceived it would turn into this," he said.

Today, Schmitt's lot teems with automobile exotica: A 1956 Silver Cloud Rolls he bought from Fred Astaire, vintage Mercedes-Benzes, Bentleys and Jaguars. He tells of other classics he's bought and sold, including John F. Kennedy's Continental Mark II, Howard Hughes' 1925 Silver Phantom Piccadilly Roadster, Clark Gable's 300 SC Mercedes Cabriolet, and the Rolls Phantom once owned by Queen Juliana of The Netherlands.

How did Schmitt corner the market on luxury car sales from his somewhat obscure car emporium on St. Louis' auto row? Ingenuity, he says, and a good track record.

"People come to St. Louis to buy from me because they know I can get them the car they want. If it's out there, I'll get it."

He stalks the rare gems of the auto world like a beachcomber hunts agates. It's a passion, not a pastime.

"The secret in this business is the buy," he said. Selling is a science; buying, an art. Schmitt says he'll spend $10 million this year on old Rolls that can be restored and sold quickly at a handsome profit. Weekly flights to New York, monthly trips to Los Angeles and occasional jaunts to Europe help him maintain a network of "informants" that give him a bird's-eye view of the exotic-car market.

From the beginning, he knew his contacts with the affluent crowd would be vital to his success as a luxury car salesman. So he flew to Beverly Hills, Calif., where he stayed in the most expensive hotels, acquainted himself with the parking lot attendants, and offered them a tinner's fee for each potential customer they referred to him. It paid off. He sold 190 cars his first year, and soon afterward returned to St. Louis.

The movie star set became his return customers, and Schmitt's travels brought him many more. "After 26 years in this business, you meet a lot of people," he said.

Indeed, name dropping is a tool of Schmitt's trade. He'll tick off a galaxy of customers at the drop of a hat. Among them are Frank Sinatra, Tony Curtis, Steve McQueen, Muhammad Ali, Willy Mays and Elvis Presley.

But not all his buyers are luminaries. A Kansas farm couple who walked into his agency bought a Rolls for $55,000 and pulled out the cash in small bills from a big cardboard box, he said.

Sales this year are booming, and Schmitt figures he'll set about 1,200 new and used classics by year's end, despite what he calls competition "20 times more fierce" than a decade ago.

It wasn't another dealer, but the 1973 Arab oil embargo, however, that proved to be his worst enemy. "People were trading in Cadillacs for Pintos," and Schmitt was nearly forced to wash cars again for a living.

But the gasoline is flowing again, and Schmitt doesn't think any future energy crisis would put the same scare into the American public. "It won't happen that way again," he said with a measure of confidence. He's betting millions on it.

Government May Ban Multipiece Tire Rims

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government said Friday it is considering banning tire rims made of two or three pieces because it has received reports of explosive separations that have caused at least 71 fatal accidents since 1957.

The multipiece rims are commonly used on trucks, buses and campers and they have blown apart during maintenance in repair shops and while vehicles are on the road, the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration reported.

The agency issued an advance notice of proposed rulemaking asking for views, comments and information on the rims. Any new rule would either ban them or make them safer.

"The agency took the action at the request of the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety, which said the multipiece rims "are needlessly killing and injuring countless Americans every day."

The rims have two or three parts, one of which is a heavy, detachable metal locking ring that clamps over the tire and holds it in place under the pressure of inflation.

"Under a wide variety of conditions," said institute president William Haddon Jr., "the pressure of an inflated tire or a relatively slight change in tire pressure can cause this metal ring to leave the wheel in an unpredictable, extremely violent explosion, killing or maiming people working on the tire or simply walking or driving by."

Haddon said single-piece wheels like those used on all automobiles have no metal locking device and thus do not pose this hazard. He said single-piece rims are available for most sizes of trucks, buses and campers.

Joan Claybrook, administrator of the safety agency, said it has received reports of at least 439 explosive separations of multi-piece rims since 1957, with 71 of them causing one or more deaths.

"We are aware, of course," she added, "that these accidents in many cases are caused by the failure of maintenance personnel to follow proper safety precautions. But consideration of the data we have collected has led this agency to conclude that the hazards and potential remedies associated with separation of multi-piece rims should be reevaluated."

Last October the safety agency issued a public advisory on the problem and urged maintenance personnel to use adequate safety precautions while working on multipiece rims.

The agency asked that public comments be sent by June 5 to the Docket Section, Room 5108, NHTSA, 400 Seventh Street SW, Washington, D.C., 20590.

Product Liability Plan Views Sought

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer forums are being held in three cities to get public opinion on a planned new uniform product liability law.

The Commerce Department wants to explain its model law at the meetings and to solicit opinions and suggestions from the public.

The law would require manufacturers to design and produce safe products and to warn consumers of any hazards that might be present in using the products.

It also contains rules concerning the length of time sellers are subject to liability for injuries or damage caused by their products.

Once a final model law is developed it will be recommended for approval at the state level. The intent is to develop standard liability law across the country. This should help manufacturers facing higher insurance costs.

Officials said they are seeking to balance the interests of consumers and product sellers in developing the law.

The schedule for the public forums is: —March 8, 1:30 p.m., McNamara Federal Building, Room 1194, 477 Michigan Ave., Detroit, Mich.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I am 73 and retired. In January, 1973, I bought a $5,000 "senior subordinated note" of a real estate company, part of a $25 million issue. The company has had an operating loss for the past few years but it has never failed to pay the 7 5/8 percent annual interest. I collect the interest every six months. The notes are due next December.

A. How secure is a senior subordinate note, compared to other obligations of a company? If they are not paid off when they come due, what is the alternative?

A. To find out where that note ranks, in relation to other debts of the company, you will have to look at the company's balance sheet. Notes are debt obligation. So are bonds, debentures and some other things.

Because that company obviously has financial troubles, you should study its balance sheet carefully. Pay particular attention to the footnotes. Those words add the fine print on your note will tell you where you stand in the lineup of the company's creditors.

You own a "senior subordinated note." The word "senior" means it ranks ahead of some of the company's other debt. The word "subordinated" means it ranks behind some of the company's other debt.

When that note matures next December, the company will be required to pay off the entire $25 million issue to you and the other holders of those notes. If it doesn't do so, it can be forced into bankruptcy. The trustee for the note issue — usually a bank — has the job of seeing to it that the company meets its obligation.

Q. I deal with two brokerage firms and they charge different commission rates. The booklet I received from one brokerage firm says commissions are "negotiable." But I have not found this to be so. I can't get either of my brokers to discuss the matter, other than in evasive ways. Your comments?

A. Fixed commission rates — set by the stock exchanges — were abolished by the Securities & Exchange Commission on May 1, 1975. Brokers called it "Mayday" after the international distress call.

Since that time, commission charges for big "institutional investors" — bank trust departments, pension funds, mutual funds, insurance companies and such — have come way down. But, for the small investor, commissions have gone up — at most brokerage houses.

To get lower commissions than what ever happens to be the going rate at a particular brokerage firm, you have to be a hard bargainer. If you feel you're being over-charged, take your business elsewhere.

Q. I bought some Series H, U.S. Savings Bonds, in January, 1975. In its latest regulations about savings bonds, has the U.S. Treasury made any decision as to when H bonds will cease drawing interest?

A. Yes, indeed. H bonds issued from June, 1952, through January, 1957, will reach their final maturities — and stop receiving interest — exactly 29 years and eight months after the date on which each was issued. H bonds issued from February, 1957, through December, 1979, will suffer the same fate exactly 30 years after their issue dates.

Unlike Series E bonds, on which interest accrues and is collected when the bonds are cashed in, H bonds receive interest by check every six months. So, when an H bond reaches its final maturity, it should be cashed.

Q. I recently heard about federal mortgage bonds, on which there is no federal income tax. Are there such bonds? If so, where can they be purchased?

A. You undoubtedly heard about "new housing authority bonds." You can buy such bonds through most securities brokerage firms.

DOYLE welcomes written questions, but he will be able to provide answers only through the column.

MINI MARATHON

Here they go: 4,310 entrants in the Leggs Mini Marathon.

The start is on New York City's Central Park West.

Everybody's running, it seems—here are 4,310, at least. On a recent, hot, steamy Saturday morning in New York City they were entrants in the Leggs Mini Marathon, pounding through Central Park in fine style. The 10,000-meter (6.2-mile) race was open to all comers. And come they did, from all 50 states and Canada, their ages ranging from 7 years to 64. Four came and did the course in wheelchairs. Well over half were running in their first race ever and most finished.

But they weren't all first timers: record holders were out in force, too. The field was "the finest ever assembled for a women's road race," according to an official of the New York Road Runners Club, which organized the race, sponsored by Leggs Products. The winner made it into a maxi event, setting a new U.S. 10,000-meter record. She was 18-year-old Martha White of State College, Pa., and her time was 33 minutes, 29 seconds. The last finisher made it in 1 hour, 50 minutes—probably no less happy with her achievement.

Hints from Heloise

DEAR SPORTS FANS:

Here is a quick trick that I picked up recently on an outing.

On certain types of sports equipment, like scuba gear, cameras and the like there is a little rubber thing called an O ring.

This little O ring is very, very important to whatever it is that you are using. You can't scuba without it and you can't fly a hot-air balloon.

So my hint is to always carry extra ones, which is nothing new. But to carry them, hook them on a safety pin and attach it to your shirt, or your scuba gear or even the tank itself.

Nothing is worse than getting out to the water and discovering that the O ring is gone and you don't have an extra one and you can't dive.

Now I have shared with you, come on you sports nuts! Let's get together and exchange ideas on sports, caring for the equipment, and safety ideas.

We are all in this together. — Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

My family loves fresh spinach salad but I hate drying the washed leaves.

So to hasten the chore I drop the cleaned leaves into an old clean pillow case, then toss that into my washing machine to spin dry for just a few seconds.

It works wonders and, oh, so much time saved. — Karla Taylor

DEAR HELOISE:

Our son has discovered that by putting his long-john legs inside his pants legs and then putting them both on at the same time, no one has to help him pull the long-john legs down.

Seems to me that solves a troublesome problem and is pretty clever thinking for a 10-year-old. — Mrs. Joe Grady

I call that putting that old noggin to work. It's a pain in the neck to have to reach up under a tight pants leg and try to pull those other tight legs down. — Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

We girls here in the office read your column all the time and I just had to contribute this little laugh. Hope it brightens your day.

I had gone out to lunch and, naturally, I overstayed my lunch hour. So I rushed back to the office, hoping my boss hadn't returned. I dashed in the office, sat down at my desk and started typing like mad (just in case he came in, he'd think I had really been working hard).

After I had typed for awhile, naturally I made a mistake, so I reached up to correct it, and guess what? No paper in my typewriter. Thank goodness the boss didn't come in. We love your column. — Delores Townsend

DEAR HELOISE:

I have a good recipe for preserving flowers that you want to save. Sometimes we receive a beautiful corsage or bouquet from someone very special and we think how nice it would be to be able to keep them always.

With this recipe, you can. Use equal parts of borax, white cornmeal and three tablespoons of table salt per quart. Then just lay your flowers in a pan and cover with the mixture. I left mine about two weeks and when I removed them they were dried and so pretty. — Mrs. Nelson J. Badeaux

DEAR HELOISE:

To those who don't have the right color thread to re-hem a garment and have to use that crinkly thread that has been unraveled from the hem (of a ready-made garment): I've always had trouble with it reaching up under a tight pants leg and try to pull those other tight legs down. — Heloise

This may not be new to others, but I've been sewing for 33 years and had never thought of this. — Robbie Black

DEAR HELOISE:

My hint has to do with the things retirees can do to help the people who are still working.

Most retirees could do their shopping at a time between rush-hour traffic (it would be safer for us older people, besides). Also, other people who do not work outside the home could plan their day so they would have their errands run before the heavy traffic time.

Many people want to do what they wish when they wish, but there are enough of us to set a very good example of being willing to cooperate.

I worked in the public for 35 years and know what it's like to be on limited time. — Mrs. W. Beason

You are a very thoughtful and considerate lady, and I love you for it.

It truly is a problem for working people who have to shop, or such, on the way home, and end up standing in a long line of people, several of whom are patrons who could have shopped earlier. — Heloise

THIS COLUMN is written for you...the homemaker. If you have a hint or a problem write to Heloise 235 E. 45th St., New York, N.Y., 10017. Because of the tremendous volume of mail, Heloise is unable to answer individual letters. She will, however, answer your questions in her column whenever possible.

'Monkey Man' Led Double Life — Beggar And Businessman

WASHINGTON (AP) — For more than 40 years, Eddie the Monkey Man was a familiar sight panhandling from a wooden platform in downtown Washington during the spring and summer months. His monkey solicited money from passersby because Eddie had no legs.

But in the winter, Eddie would show up in Pensacola, Fla., where he was known as Eddie Bernstein — a well-dressed gentleman who walked on artificial legs with the aid of a cane. He didn't panhandle there. He owned the Red Garter bar, and was known as a generous barkeep who often would buy drinks for his friends.

Eddie Bernstein died in his sleep last month — in Florida — at the age of 79. Papers filed in a District of Columbia court say Eddie the Monkey Man left an estate valued at $691,676. When the weather turned nice in Washington, he could be counted on to set up shop with his monkey on F Street, sometimes in front of Reeves Bakery; sometimes across the street at Chandler's Shoe Store.

In 1938, his dog "Snowball" died under the wheels of a car. A well-known Washington socialite donated another dog. A few years later, Evelyn Walsh McLean, owner of the Hope Diamond, gave Bernstein a capuchin monkey, "Gypsy," which entertained the passersby who donated money to Eddie.

And in 1972, another beggar accused Eddie of using his begged income to buy property in Florida and a newspaper printed the story. "If I had money and property, do you think I'd be sitting out in the cold all day?" he angrily protested to the paper. "If you think begging's a good life, just try it." Begging was a good life for him.

His estate includes $16,200 cash, $364,000 in a bond account, tens of thousands of dollars in banks, a $45,000 home in Pensacola and the bar valued at about $80,000.

He left no will, so the estate will go to a brother and two sisters.

Eddie's father emigrated from Russia and peddled dry goods through the South. Eddie lost his legs at the age of 10 while crawling beneath a train that suddenly started to move.

Nobody knows why he came to Washington. But people along F street said his day's take sometimes was as much as $100. A bank official told the Washington Post that Bernstein sometimes came into the bank with $150 in change to be converted to bills.

He took the contributions he received from the corner and invested wisely, said assistant vice president Fred Lott of the McLachlen National Bank. "He apparently studied the stock market and he had good brokerage contacts."

Another man recalls that "he told me that he didn't beg, but that he just sat there and people gave him money."

"He thought he was doing people a service because all those people came to him. He said 'they're my clients'."

Lawsuit Fights Ticket Issued Youngster

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — Springfield's chief attorney said Friday he hasn't decided whether to fight a $920,000 suit filed by parents of a 7-year-old boy who was ticketed for jaywalking after he was hit by a car driven by an off-duty policeman.

Bryan Powell was cited for crossing a street at other than a crosswalk after he was struck last Oct. 8 by a car driven by an off-duty policeman. He had been playing with friends and an older sister, said Ronald Powell, 16, Bryan's brother.

Whoever heard of ticketing a 7-year-old kid? said Ronald E. Powell, Bryan's father. Powell and his wife, Bertha, are suing the city and the policeman who issued the ticket for civil damages.

The suit, filed Wednesday in state Circuit Court here, charges that Patrolman John Wilson took steps not regularly a part of the legal process "to protect a fellow officer from civil liability."

As a result of the incident, the suit claims, Bryan suffered "humiliation, nervous shock, loss of sleep, mental anguish and was placed in contempt and derision among his friends and acquaintances."

Bryan was taken to a hospital with cuts and bruises. While there, Wilson, who investigated the accident, showed up and issued the youngster a traffic citation, the suit alleges.

Had Bryan pleaded guilty to the jaywalking offense, he would have admitted to contributory negligence. Mark Harms, driver of the auto, then could have used that admission of negligence as a defense if Bryan's parents turned around and sued Harms for civil damages, legal experts said.

Neither policeman could be reached for comment.

Without reviewing the file, I can't comment on how our legal staff will proceed," said Fred Benson, corporation counsel for the city. "But the city council would have to approve any settlement."

Bryan's father said he was in the hospital room when Wilson showed up. Wilson told a nurse Illinois had enacted a new law allowing prosecution of 7-year-olds, the suit charges.

"He told Bryan to sign the ticket and if he couldn't sign his name, just mark an X," Powell said. But Powell said he told his son to do no such thing.

The Sangamon County state's attorney dismissed the jaywalking charge against Bryan, saying state law barred such prosecution of anyone under 13.

"It's a question of what constitutes malicious and abusive use of the legal process," said Michael W. Darnold, the Powell attorney.

British Zookeepers Seeking Mates For Lovelorn Apes

DUDLEY, England (UPI) — Bonzo's days of sitting alone in the ape house just munching bananas may soon be over.

Date-an-ape is trying to find the perfect match for this 450-pound, 19-year-old Romeo who has been forlorn ever since he lost his mate three years ago.

British zookeepers are worried that unless "single" apes can be introduced to one another and start breeding, they will vanish from the country's zoos and safari parks.

In order to arrange a dating service for eligible, but often fussy, apes, 20 zoo directors convened a lonely hearts conference Thursday at Dudley Zoo.

They were studying pedigrees, discussing temperaments of individual animals and trying to match up partners from among the country's 275 captive apes.

"This conference really is a matter of urgency," said Mike Mathias, general manager of Dudley Zoo. "We shall try and discover how to move animals around and mate if they are compatible."

They each have to like their mates and unless we can get them to breed they will die out."

"Apes are just like people," said Dudley Zoo curator Chris Round. "They can hate someone on first sight or hit it off straight away."

Another reason for getting the apes together, said Round, was to get rid of the "single ape" image in zoos.

"People don't like seeing single apes," he said. "They think they're lonely because they've got no one to talk to."

In addition to finding a mate for the lovelorn Bonzo, the conference hopes to match up Joe, a 20-year-old orangutan at the Dudley Zoo, described as feeling "down in the mouth" since his partner died.

Hogs Eliminate Raiders 93-77

By JIM FERGUSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff
HOUSTON — The great state of Texas may have declared itself independent of Mexico on March 2 about 123 years ago, but on this day in 1979, Texas Tech didn't find itself as lucky.

first shot of the night to give the Hogs their biggest lead at 36-16. But Tech countered with six unanswered points down the stretch (two

The Arkansas Razorbacks still have the Red Raiders bound in shackles and stocks. Let's see, after the Hogs defeated the Raiders 93-77 Friday night during the third round of the Southwest Conference post-season basketball tournament in the Summit, it was their seventh straight victory over the boys from the Plains. Now, the Hogs will meet rival Texas tonight at 8 right here for the ball of wax, so to speak. The championship game will be aired over Lubbock television too.

The Raiders got themselves in trouble with Arkansas right off the bat as UA rolled up a 36-22 lead at halftime. And at one point in the opening 20 minutes, Tech was down by as many as 20 points. After center Steve Schall hit a free throw and a field goal from four feet out, all-American Sidney Moncrief bucketed his long-rangers by Huston and a 10-footer by Tommy Parks) to cut the Arkansas lead down to 14, 36-22. Arkansas, which totally dominated the boards in the first half, 32-15, did not score from 2:23 on. It was the play of big man Scott Hastings, who hit six of eight from the floor, that the difference in the early going. The 6-10 freshman actually outscored Tech for a five minute period when he hit 10 points. The Raiders had only four. The Hogs had jumped on Tech right off the bat, grabbing a 15-2 lead before most of the UA fans even had time to adjust

Vega In Class A Finals

AUSTIN (AP) — Larue La Poyner jumped into the Class A schoolboy basketball finals Friday and will meet the "Happy Days" team from Vega for the championship. Lufkin shattered Houston Madison's perfect record and vaulted into the Class 4A schoolboy basketball finals with a 62-55 upset victory on the shooting of substitutes Martinez Grimes and Ronnie Blake. Madison had won 39 games without a loss, and held a 48-45 lead before Grimes and Blakes went on a 15-point scoring spree in the final quarter. Madison's highly touted Greg Kite, a 6-11 senior who is considered a top college prospect, scored only five points but had 20 rebounds. Kite made only two of 12 field goal attempts and one of five free throws.

Fem Cage Playoffs Tip Today

Regional girls basketball competition for Classes A and AA begins today at 8 A.M. in the Lubbock Municipal Coliseum and will last through tonight's 7 o'clock championship contests.

The 8 a.m. contest will pit Hale Center (25-3) against Phillips (21-6) and then at 9:30 Whiteface (25-3) will meet Crowell (24-2) in the other single A game.

At 11 in the morning Dimmitt (27-3) will tangle with Henrietta (18-4) and at 12:30 Slaton (28-2) will meet Crane (20-8) in the final preliminary match. Slaton is the defending state champion.

The two Class A winners will square off at 7 p.m. to determine the regional champion and the AA title contest will immediately follow that game. Tickets are available at the door.

Reagan County was favored over Vega as a result of its 69-63 regional victory over No. 1 Archer City, but Vega went on top to stay at 39-38 as Ronnie Williams hit a six-foot jumper.

Williams, a 6-4 senior, connected on an amazing 15 of 22 field goal attempts and finished with 32 points.

Reagan County had 20 more rebounds than Vega, which won despite a poor 9 of 24 performance from the free throw line. Reagan County lost the ball 17 times, and Vega converted the miscues into 23 points. Vega had only five turnovers.

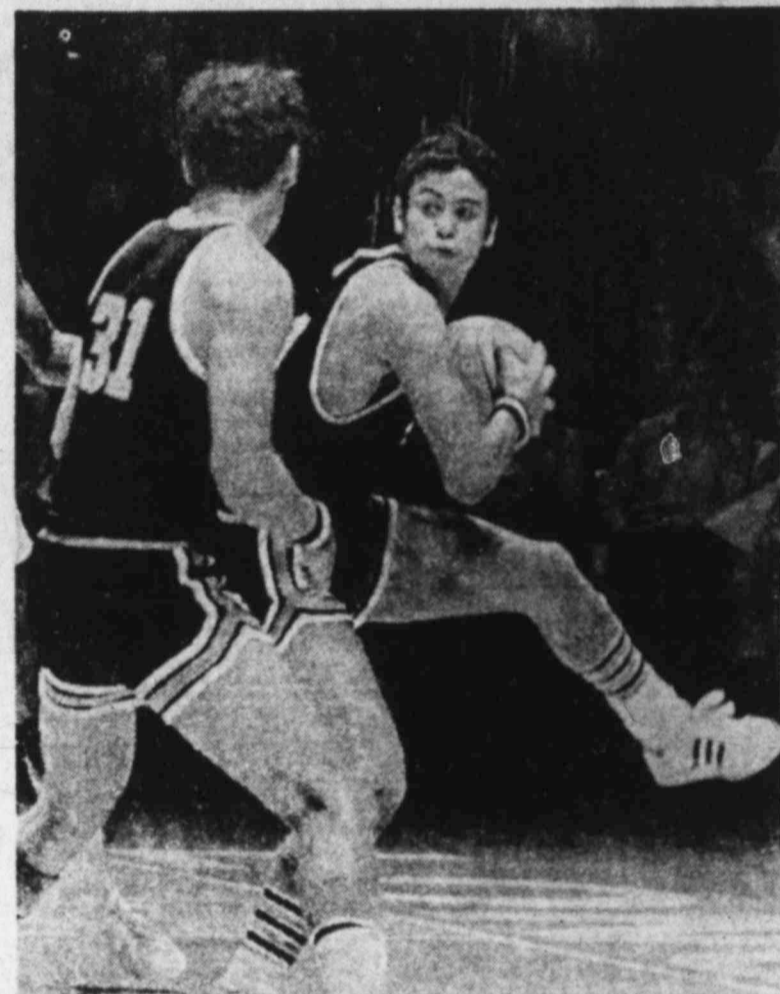

Bobby Woodard led Reagan County with 15 points and James Phillips had 14 points and 15 rebounds.

Vega's close-cropped squad — winning more on hustle than talent — was mindful of the teams that played in the tournament in the 1950s.

The subs stood on the sidelines and cheered as Vega brought the ball downcourt, and Vega players were quick to extend a hand when an opponent hit the floor. They continually offered each other verbal encouragement.

'Horns Charge Into Showdown

HOUSTON (AP) — The deadly free throw shooting of John Moore and Ron Baxter beat back a Houston second-half surge Friday night and the 14th-ranked Texas Longhorns charged into the Southwest Conference Post-Season Basketball Classic final with a hard-earned 70-65 victory.

Ninth-ranked Arkansas met Texas Tech in the second game of the semifinal doubleheader before 15,000 fans in the sold-out Summit.

The Longhorns made only six field goals in the second half, but Moore, who finished the night with 16 points, made six straight free throws.

Baxter, who tore down nine rebounds and scored 19 points, connected on four of four charity tosses.

The Longhorns rolled to a 40-29 halftime lead as Moore ran wild against the Houston press, scoring 10 points, and Baxter chipped in with 11.

The Texas matchup zone defense had Cougar gunner Ken Williams misfiring from long range. However, the "Juice," as Williams is nicknamed, sizzled in the second half, scoring 18 of his 25 points.

With Texas leading 54-44, Williams hit four straight buckets to bring the Cougars to within two points at 57-55.

That's when Moore started his perfect streak from the free throw line as the desperate Cougars fouled frequently after Texas went to a delay-of-ball-control offense.

Big Leonard Mitchell and guard Ken Collins fouled out in the last three minutes to damage the Cougar hopes.

TEXAS 70, HOUSTON 65
HOUSTON — A. Davis 2-0-8, Walker 4-0-8, White 4-0-8, K. Williams 11-25-25, Collins 1-0-0, Jordan 4-0-8, Gibson 0-0-0, O'Neal 2-0-4, Hamilton 2-0-4. Totals 21-37-85.
TEXAS — Baxter 4-7-19, Johnson 9-0-0, Bryant 2-4-9, Moore 8-8-16, Krivacs 3-4-12, Stroud 4-6-10, Shepard 0-2-2, Boyd 1-0-2. Totals 23-24-29.
Halftime scores: Texas 40, Houston 29. Fouled out: M. Mitchell, K. Collins. Total fouls: Houston 22, Texas 17. Technicals: none. A — 15:49.

Houston, which finished the season 16-15, shot 60 percent from the field in the second half, yet couldn't catch the Longhorns, who are now 21-6.

The other Longhorns in double figures were Phillip Stroud with 10 points and Jim Krivacs with 12.

No other Cougar was in double figure, although Mitchell and Or Goren each had eight points.

Texas survived an ice-cold shooting night. The Longhorns shot a miserable 28 percent from the field in the second half and a luke-warm 44.2 percent for the game.

The Cougars shot 44.3 percent for the game, but were outrebounded 38-35 by the Longhorns.

Texas hit on 24 of 29 free throws as Houston was whistled for 22 fouls. The Cougars made only three of seven free throws they were given on 11 Texas personal fouls.

Texas Coach Abe Lemons used 10 players in the game and he explained, "We haven't used a lot of substitutes this year, but we substituted tonight because we were just not shooting."

Yarborough, Allison Disciplined

ROCKINGHAM, N.C. (AP) — Donnie Allison and Cale Yarborough each were placed on three months probation Friday, retroactive to Feb. 20, for their roles in a last-lap crash that cost both drivers a chance for victory in the recent Daytona 500 stock car race.

The equal probation periods were recommended by a special commission that heard an appeal by Donnie and Bobby Allison over original findings of Bill Gazaway, competition director of the National Association for Stock Car Auto Racing. Gazaway reviewed the commission's recommendations, and concurred, announcing the new disciplinary measures.

Donnie Allison originally had been placed on six months probation and assigned sole responsibility for the accident. Both Allison and Yarborough also had been fined $6,000 for participation in a post-race fight.

However, the National Stock Car Racing Commission, which heard the appeal Feb. 26 in Atlanta, found that the accident occurred as a result of "two competitors' errors in judgment and was not solely the fault of Donnie Allison.

Gazaway's earlier decision criticized Donnie Allison severely for allegedly un-sportsmanlike efforts to block the track while leading. Yarborough was exonerated at that time.

The commission recommended Donnie Allison's probationary period be reduced to three months, and that Yarborough receive similar disciplinary action.

The commission upheld Gazaway's earlier action on the $6,000 fines — $5,000 of which is to be refunded over the next five races assuming no there is recurrence of violence — for all three drivers.

The nationally televised fight "cannot be tolerated or condoned," the commission's report noted.

The commission was comprised of Les Richter, president of Riverside International Raceway; John Riddle, president of Dover Downs International Raceway; and Lance Childress, national field director for NASCAR.

Local Swimmers Compete

MIDLAND (Special) — Lubbock swimmers will be vying for a spot in the state meet when the regional meet winds up its competition here at the Mabee Pool at 2 p.m. today.

Robert Green of Coronado High School placed seventh in the Friday's preliminaries of the 200 intermediate with a time of 2:12.1 and will swim in today's finals. The top two qualifiers in the finals will go to Austin March 16 and 17 to compete at the state meet. Green also placed sixth in the 100 breaststroke with a time of 1:05.8 to qualify for the finals in that event.

Monterey's qualifiers included Scott Mickey, fourth in 100 freestyle at 51.2 and fourth in the 100 backstroke at 59.6. Joe Madden also qualified in the 100 breaststroke at 1:07.0. The MHS 400 free relay team of Mickey, Madden, Nigel Leserve, and Scott Dodson qualified in the 400 free relay with a sixth place finish at 3:36.3.

Linda Cooper of MHS set a new school record and qualified in the 100 Breast Stroke with a third place finish at 1:13.9. The 200 medley relay team of Cooper, Suzy Burkholder, Colette Matticks, and Heidi Isaacson qualified with an eighth place finish at 2:10.2.

Arkansas Chains Raiders

those fashionable Hog hats. U.S. Reed had nine of those points and Schall the other six.

But Tech, which had advanced to the second round by defeating Texas A&M 63-62 in overtime Thursday night, wasn't about to turn stomach up. With 15:43 left in the game, the Raiders had managed to cut Arkansas' lead to eight (it was the closest Tech would get the rest of the night).

However, U.S. Reed countered with a layup and Schall connected on a three-point play after he was fouled by Jeff Taylor to put the Hogs out front by 13.

And after that the crowd headed for the doors.

"They got us down real bad in the first five minutes and we had to play catch up," said dejected Raider coach Gerald Myers. "The thing that made it tough on us was their defense. We weren't executing on our offense real well, but their defense had a lot to do with that."

"We didn't have a good edge physically, but in a tournament you have to overcome fatigue. It's just a combination of us not being that determined, and their great defense," is how Gerald Myers explained the loss.

Sidney Moncrief, who trailed Reed as Arkansas' scoring leader with 21 points (Reed had 22 mostly on layups), agreed with Myers. "We got out on them early and that made a big difference. Tech played hard and never gave up.

"We knew that we couldn't let up even though we almost blew the game open one time. Scott (Hastings) and U.S. (Reed) did the scoring in the first half and I just concentrated on defensive rebounding and assists."

He was right as he dealt out four assists in the first half, but scored only one bucket.

Joe Baxter, who ended his playing career at Tech as did Geoff Huston, said "Arkansas looked like the best team in the nation during the first five minutes of the game. They could do no wrong and we couldn't get started."

"I don't know about our mental preparation," continued Baxter. "We were tired after the game last night. The last time we played this bad was the Rice game and we hit about the same bad percentage that time. But Arkansas plays superior defense and that might have something to do with our poor shooting.

The game might not be the last of the season for Tech though, since the NIT has promised it might take as low as the third place team in the SWC, meaning either Tech or A&M. That decision is expected to be made earlier this week after the NCAA pairings are completed.

LISD Invite Today

Barring a tornado, or any other nasty trick mother nature has in mind, area AAA and AAAA schools will kick off the 1979 track season today at Coronado High School at the annual Lubbock Independent School District Invitational.

Last year the meet was cancelled due to heavy snows. It doesn't look like any snow is in sight today but the way the weather has been playing fickle tricks this spring, nothing's impossible.

Several other track meets are on tap today in the South Plains. Competition will be held at Pampa, Pecos, McCarney and Idalou.

The Lubbock action begins at 10 a.m. with the preliminaries. The running finals are slated to start at 2:30 p.m. Six AAA schools will vie for the team trophy and eight schools will be competing in the AAAA division.

In the large school division will be Coronado, Lubbock High, Monterey, Plainview, Amarillo Palo Duro, Abilene Cooper and Abilene High. Hobbs, N.M., will also field a team.

In the AAA class Brownfield, Levelland, Andrews and Odessa Ector will compete with the two Lubbock schools. Estacado and Dunbar, for the team championship.

There will also be limited junior varsity competition.

Bean Struggles In 2nd Round

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Andy Bean, who once threatened to run away from the field, gave back a couple of shots on what he called "mental lapses" but still managed to stretch his lead to two strokes Friday in the second round of the $250,000 Bay Hill Golf Classic.

"I think I lost my concentration a little bit," Bean said after posting a 2-under-par 69. "That happens sometimes. We were playing in a twosome, so we had to wait on every shot and I may have gotten a little impatient. Just a couple of mental lapses."

The 6-foot-4, 210-pound Bean, who has threatened consistently this year, paused for a moment, then added: "But it won't happen again."

Despite a couple of bogeys late in the round — his first of the tournament — Bean put together a 36-hole total of 133, nine shots under par on Arnold Palmer's Bay Hill Club course. The 7,102-yard layout took a beating in Thursday's opening round, but snapped back at the touring pros Friday. Tougher pin placements and some breezes sent scores considerably higher.

Bean once held a five-stroke lead, but finished two in front of Ed Sneed, Sneed, who had a chance to win the Los Angeles Open last week, salvaged a 68 with a scrambling par on the final hole and had a 135 total.

"I struggled for my score," he said. "I played pretty well over the front side, but on the back I was fighting for everything I could get."

John Schroeder, Joe Hager, Bill Rogers and Jerry Pate were another shot back at 136. Hager had a 5-under-par 66. Rogers shot a 69 and Schroeder and Pate had 68s.

Bob Byman, with a 70, and Phil Hancock, with a 69, were at 137.

Jack Nicklaus, the game's most feared competitor, carded a solid 70 and moved into contention at 138.

"I played very well today," said Nicklaus, who is making only his second appearance of the season. "I'm very pleased. Four under par after two rounds is not that bad. My position, with 36 holes to go, is good."

Palmer shot a 74 and, at 144, made the cut for the last two rounds for the first time this year. He was tied with Lee Trevino, who had a 72. Tom Watson was at 140 after a 68.

Bean got it two under par on the front side, then reeled off consecutive birdies on 10 and 15-foot putts on the 10th and 11th holes. At that point, early in the day, he had a five-shot lead.

But then the mental lapses occurred, he said. He got his tee shot into the woods on the 12th hole, hit his next across the fairway into woods on the other side, eventually hit a 155-yard shot for his fourth and two-putted for a bogey-six.

After a long wait on the tee on No. 17, he hit a poor shot into a bunker and bogeyed again.

Others, however, had more severe problems. Schroeder, for example, got into the chase despite hitting two balls into the water.

"There's a lot of holes out there that you can make 6 or 7 on so fast it'll make your head swim," he said.

OJC Vaulters Paces Meet

LAREDO (AP) — Garland Colson of Odessa Junior College cleared 6 feet, 11 inches to break a decade-old junior college high jump mark Friday as the 47th annual Border Olympics got under way at wind-swept Shirley Field.

The win helped put Odessa on top of the junior college division, as it piled up 35 points in the six final events contested Friday. San Jacinto Junior College was second with 28 points and South Plains was third with 25.

Ranger Junior College, division winner the past four years, managed only four points in the early events.

The two-day meet opened with competion in the 22-team junior college division.

Colson's jump broke the old meet record of 6-9 set in 1969 by Joe Davis of Blinn Junior College.

The Odessa jumper was pushed in the event by Donald Cuba of Southwest Christian College who cleared 6-9. Carlos Cacer of Guadalajara, Mexico, was third at 6-8. Colson missed in three attempts to break the 7-foot barrier.

In other finals Friday, San Jacinto Junior College took the top three places in the pole vault. Gary Vanderbeek cleared 14-6 to win the event.

Competition in the 37-team high school division began later Friday. Corpus Christi King led the way into the finals by qualifying its mile relay team and 11 individuals, headed by Texas Tech football recruit Matt Harlien. Harlien posted the top marks in the discus and shot put preliminaries with a 165-1 discus and a 56-6 1/2 put of the shot.

The junior college three-mile run, an event traditionally dominated by Mexico, held to form as runners from south of the border took the top eight places. Jose Gallegos, of the University of Mexico in Mexico City, clocked in at 14:13.4 to edge Gerardo Bautista from Vocational No. 10 by less than a second.

The junior college javelin crown went to Ricky Coskrey of Odessa with a throw of 206-10.

Defending champion and favorite Ranger Junior College ran well in the morning preliminaries, sending 17 athletes to the finals.

Odessa sent 12 to the finals with sprinter Steve Martin qualifying in three events. The Baltimore native tied for the fastest times in the 100-yard dash and the 120-yard high hurdles. He had 9.9 seconds in the 100 and 14.6 in the hurdle event.

His 22.4 in the 220-yard dash was a tenth of a second off the best time in the preliminaries.

Cold, Darkness Chase Fans Then Players

By CHUCK McDONALD
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

By the time the ninth inning rolled around on Friday afternoon even the guy in the sleeping bag had given up and left the Texas Tech diamond. The Raiders trailed Rice 9-6 in a windy, freezing affair that just wouldn't end.

Attendance at the start of the game had been estimated at nearly 500 but in the late stages the number was more like 17. Finally the umpire behind the plate had enough. With two out in the bottom of the ninth, two men on base and the Owls leading 10-6, he threw his hands up in the air. A brief confab with the other officials followed and the game was called because of darkness.

Rice was awarded a 9-6 victory (the entire ninth inning was not counted) giving the Owls a 1-0 SWC slate while Tech fell to 0-1. Overall Tech in now 5-4. The two teams will meet today for a doubleheader beginning at 1 p.m. at the Tech field.

It was nearly 7 p.m. and the contest had started almost four hours before—and it had been a tough four hours for the Raider basebatters.

Tech's starting pitcher, Steve Ibarguen, was chased in the second inning when he gave up a couple of walks, a pair of bloop singles and finally back-to-back home runs by Kenny Baldwin and Steve Grossman. That gave the Owls a 6-0 lead that they never relinquished.

Ibarguen didn't blame the wind for his problems but he did admit that they weren't exactly a pitcher's dream.

"You never know what the ball is going to do," said the junior from Richardson. "Sometimes it makes the ball break too much, or sometimes it doesn't break at all and just hangs on you. The only time the wind helps is when it's blowing right behind you."

And the wind wasn't blowing in behind the pitchers on Friday. Even Owl pitcher Allan Ramirez, one of the top hurlers in the SWC, had his problems. The Raiders tagged him for four runs in a fourth inning explosion.

First, second baseman Johnny Vestal got on with a bunt single, then came home on a Larry Selby double to left center. Brooks Wallace followed with a line drive double and Selby scored. Then John Keller, Tech's one man wrecking crew, poked his fifth home run of the year for the final two tallies.

But Ramirez got stronger as the game went on, even though the Raiders got to him twice more, the Victoria senior was in control. He finished the game with 13 strikeouts as he went 8 2/3 innings before the game was called.

But the Raider hurlers were having their troubles. The strongest performance came from Chuck Johnson who

Actor Reveals Former Newspaper Experience

WASHINGTON (AP) — Television's favorite city editor told members of the national news media Thursday that he once really was a newspaper editor.

Michelle Marvin Takes Stand

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Michelle Triola Marvin was called to the witness stand Friday to testify for the defense in her $1.8 million lawsuit against actor Lee Marvin.

Marvin's chief attorney, A. David Kagon, questioned the former showgirl at length about a 1966 singing engagement in Hawaii. Miss Marvin has contended that she neglected her own career and devoted herself to Marvin for the six-year period she and the actor lived together.

Miss Marvin, clad in a Navy blue suit and wearing her hair in a new shoulder-length style, said her memory was vague about dates.

Show" held up a yellowed, wrinkled copy of the Wyandotte High School Pantograph in Kansas City, Kan., and Ed Asner read his contribution to the feature page: a column called "The Question Box" in Thursday, Marvin's lawyers called a recording company executive who said Miss Marvin would have had a hard time finding stardom as a singer.

"Miss Marvin sings professionally, not especially brilliantly," Joseph Smith, chairman of Elektra-Asylum records, testified.

In a surprise move earlier Friday, Kagon put Miss Marvin's attorney on the witness stand briefly.

He challenged Marvin Mitchellson on the authenticity of a book Miss Marvin's lawyer wrote in 1976 titled, "Made in Heaven, Settled in Court."

which years ago he asked, "What do you want for graduation and what do you think you'll get?" Asner decided against a career in journalism with the encouragement of his high school editor, he said, and "22 years later I was an overnight success in television."

A number of reporters at a National Press Club luncheon told Asner what he says reporters are always telling him — that he looks like their first city editor.

Asner said he thought he looked like a city editor because he was "bald, had the bulk, and a boss's stance. But then I could also be the foreman of a factory or the owner of a used-car dealership. It's that bossist attitude."

Asked how he prepares for his role as editor of the mythical "The Los Angeles Tribune," Asner said: "I drink." When the laughter died down, he added: "My writing has become illegible and I have lost more hair."

Critic Says Format Changes Improving U.S. Television

By JERRY BUCK
HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Television is getting better. No, no, not the series — for the most part, they're going downhill. Take a look, instead, at the made-for-TV movies and the miniseries.
 What's being offered now is as good, and in some ways better, than the fare during TV's so-called "Golden Age." The networks are offering today mature and provocative themes and treating them with uncommon honesty and directness. Actors, writers, and directors who've never done television before are attracted to the medium, particularly by the long form.
 Equally important, the movies and miniseries are getting good ratings, which bodes well for the future.

 "That's one of the things that inspired us the most," said William Self, CBS vice president for TV movies and miniseries.
 CBS is a latecomer to the field, and even after getting its feet wet, the network was reluctant to take the plunge. Nevertheless, it was CBS that brought TV "The Autobiography of Miss Jane Pittman," "The Migrants" and "The Defection of Simas Kurdika."
 The network didn't air its first miniseries, "The Dain Curse," until last May. Three years ago, when Self joined CBS, the network had only four movies on its schedule. The next year it jumped to 20, then to 30.

This season, with 38 movies and 34 hours of miniseries, CBS has a schedule on a par with the competition.
 CBS, picking up momentum, has some heavyweights in the works. For example, "Blind Ambition," based on John Dean's book on the Watergate scandal; "Blood and Money," Thomas Thompson's riveting story about death and conspiracy among Houston's super-rich; "You Can't Go Home Again," Thomas Wolfe's classic; "Strangers," starring Bette Davis and Gena Rowlands as an estranged mother and daughter; "The Tenth Month," with Carol Burnett as an unmarried mother; "Letters from Frank" with Art Carney and Maureen Stapleton, and two books by Pete Hamill, "Flesh and "Blood" and "The Gift."

 "The quality's getting better," said Self, a former movie producer and president of 20th Century-Fox Television for six years.
 "I think that has resulted in several things. The independent producers realize we're serious about movies. And we're able to attract writers and actors we could never attract for series television."
 "It's snowballing. People are saying, 'If Katharine Hepburn or Jason Robards can make a movie for television, then I'll do it.' I hear Gregory Peck may do his first TV movie. We're also getting the big writers like William Goldman and directors like George Cukor and William Friedkin."
 Cukor directed Miss Hepburn, a three-time Oscar-winner, in "The Corn Is Green" for CBS. Friedkin, also an Academy Award-winner, will direct "Blood and Money," being produced by Broadway entrepreneur David Merrick.
 There is more substance to the network movies than ever before. "But we have a mix," Self said. "We have fun movies like 'Murder By Natural Causes' and romantic comedies like 'Women at West Point.' That's strictly Dick Powell and Ruby Keeler time."

 "My feeling, however, is that if you want escapism you can find it in the series, like 'All in the Family' and 'Charlie's Angels.' I think the public has an appetite for serious drama. We found that out with 'The Incredible Journey of Dr.

Meg Laurel, 'First You Cry,' and 'My Name is Jonah.' They were shows of substance that got big audiences."
 The TV movie is only about 45 years old, and in its short life has hit for a respectable batting average. Fewer turkeys are being made, and even much of the fluff has charm and appeal. TV movies tackle intimate and controversial subjects that theatrical producers avoid in their quest for box office bonanza.

Selling Method Enraged President

BONN (UPI) — Marlene Dietrich sold $1 million in U.S. war bonds during World War II, but her unorthodox methods enraged President Franklin D. Roosevelt.
 And her efforts to help finance the war and entertain combat troops along with other Hollywood stars did not keep the government from dunning her for back taxes once the war was over.
 In her autobiography published in Stern Magazine, the German-born actress recounted her meeting with Roosevelt.
 She also took a swipe at her movie co-star John Wayne — "He proved anew you don't need much intelligence to be a film star."
 "He did not have the slightest inkling about acting... I helped him as best as I could. He revealed to me he never read books," she said.
 Miss Dietrich, now 77 and ailing, said after speaking at six to eight war bond rallies in the daytime in World War II she would go to night clubs to sell bonds to "hall-drunken guests."

 "The Treasury had an agreement with all banks so it could be determined even in the middle of the night if checks people gave us were good," she said.
 "I would have to sit on the laps of the guests to keep them in the night club until my bodyguard returned and signalled with a nod that the check was good."
 She said once on a nightclub tour in Washington she was summoned to the White House at 2 a.m.
 "President Roosevelt was standing — yes, he was standing — as I entered the room he was in," she said. "He let himself down in his chair, looked at me with his clear eyes and said, 'I hear you are helping sell bonds. We are thankful to you for this. But I cannot allow this type of prostitution methods. In the future you will not operate in night clubs. That's an order."

 After the war, she said, she was billed for back taxes. "I needed years to pay. I was broke, but that interested no one."

Crosby Estate Worth Millions

REDWOOD CITY, Calif. (AP) — The late Bing Crosby's estate is worth at least $6 million — and possibly much more, according to inheritance tax documents.
 The documents filed Thursday show bank accounts, securities, stock investments and other assets worth more than $4.5 million. Previously filed papers show a $1.5 million ranch owned by Crosby in Shasta County.
 Much of Crosby's wealth, however, will not be made public. He left the bulk of his estate to his second wife, Kathryn, and his seven children, in a living trust that is not subject to disclosure.
 The inventories are required by a referee of the State Inheritance Tax Commission to determine how much tax is owed by the Crosby estate.

 The documents filed in San Mateo County Probate Court Thursday list securities and stocks totaling $2.8 million. These include 46,000 shares of Cox Broadcasting Corp. worth $1.25 million at the time of Crosby's death in October 1977.
 The files also show some $870,000 in bank accounts, and another $700,000 in promissory notes and other loans owed him when he died.
 Life insurance policies valued at $661,000 were also listed.

Flatbush Residents Oppose 'Their' Show

NEW YORK (AP) — The president of Brooklyn borough said Friday that the CBS program "Flatbush" portrays the community "in an unrealistic and unflattering light."
 Howard Golden said he received a storm of protest from Flatbush residents and community organizations after the debut of "Flatbush" last Monday.
 In a letter to John Bocke, president of the CBS television network, Golden said the program presents an image of the area that is "patently untrue."
 "I am aware that only the title refers to or relates to the reality that is Flatbush today, but I am afraid that millions of Americans will come away from the program believing that Flatbush is an undeveloped area whose main population is composed of semi-illiterate and threatening young boys," Golden wrote.

 Golden also charged that the program is "unflattering to Italians, Jews, Hispanics and police officers," and asked for a meeting with Bocke.

Janitor Opens Door, Discovers Cannon

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — Janitor Harold Scholes started his day Friday looking down the barrel of a cannon.
 Scholes, a janitor at Concord High School, began his routine rounds by unlocking a multi-purpose room. He found himself face to face with a 105mm howitzer.
 The artillery piece, smuggled into the school during the night, was apparently stolen from an Army Reserve unit stationed in Concord, according to school Principal Eloise Honett.
 The weapon, 4 1/2 feet high with a 5-foot barrel, was sealed shut and could not be fired, Mrs. Honett said. Police are investigating.

Critic Praises Prison Drama, 'On The Yard'

NEW RELEASE
ON THE YARD (R) — John Heard, Mike Kellin, Thomas Walthers. Drama — A prison drama that escapes the confines of a cliched setting. Plot and characters unfold gradually, showing how each of a varied group of cons comes to be his own victim. A nod to acting, directing and editing. Caution: Strong language, some violence. GRADE: A-minus.

GENERAL RELEASES
AGATHA (PG) — Vanessa Redgrave, Dustin Hoffman. Mystery-romance — In 1926, mystery writer Agatha Christie

vanished for 11 days. That is fact. This film (based on Kathleen Tynan's book) invents an explanation for that disappearance. We see her stalking her husband's girl friend, and perhaps her intentions are sinister. An American newspaperman, playing detective, falls in love with her. Well-made, well-acted, but only moderately well-realized. GRADE: B.

CALIFORNIA SUITE (PG) — Jane Fonda, Alan Alda, Maggie Smith, Michael Caine, Walter Matthau. Comedy and drama — Neil Simon's play, like his

"Plaza Suite," is a group of a stories united only by the fact that they all take place in one hotel — this time, The Beverly Hills Hotel. Director Herb Ross is much more successful with the dramatic stories than with the comedies, which become embarrassing. Fonda and Smith are superb. GRADE: A (for the drama), C (for the comedies) and thus, B (overall).

DEER HUNTER (R) — Robert De Niro, John Cazale, John Savage, Meryl Streep, Christopher Walken. Drama — This is a powerful, memorable look at three Pennsylvania steel workers who go off to fight in Vietnam. Director Michael Cimino has created images you may never forget. It is too long, and some of it is forced, but it remains a classic film. GRADE: A.

HARDCORE (R) — George C. Scott, Season Hubley, Peter Boyle. Drama — Another ray of gloom from Paul Schrader, who gave us "Taxi Driver" and "Blue Collar," but this one has more heart, more hope, more humanity. Scott is an upstanding Midwesterner whose teen-age daughter drifts into the porno film pit, and he tries to find her. If you look for philosophy, you'll be disappointed. Look for entertainment, and it's there. Caution: Considerable nudity and street language. GRADE: B.

INVASION OF THE BODY SNATCHERS (PG) — Donald Sutherland, Brooke Adams, Leonard Nimoy. Science fiction/horror — A remake — really a sequel — of the classic 1956 film. For once, a re-make (or sequel) is as good as the original. This is a totally scary, but very logical and intelligent, story, and done with great taste and skill. GRADE: A.

LAST WAVE, THE (R) — Richard Chamberlain, Gulpili. Suspense drama. This compelling, well-paced thriller is an Australian product directed by Peter Weir. Chamberlain, as a Sydney tax lawyer, is mysteriously drawn into a criminal case involving a gang of aborigines. What follows is a fascinating study of tribal culture — and an entertaining movie that misses a few payoffs but ultimately satisfies. GRADE: B-plus.

MURDER BY DECREE (PG) — Christopher Plummer, James Mason.

David Hemmings, Susan Clark. Mystery — Sherlock Holmes vs. Jack the Ripper but the issue is clouded with red herrings (radicals and psychics, etc.) Director Bob Clark tries hard to create mood, but the mood is misty and the total effect is a film that is tedious. GRADE: C-plus.

NORMA RAE (PG) — Sally Field, Ron Leibman, Beau Bridges. Drama — Forget the drab title, this is a grabber of a movie. It's about the attempts — by a union organizer from New York and his ally, a little Southern gal — to organize a tough textile mill in the South. Director Martin Ritt must be commended not only for what he did, but for what he didn't do — he didn't seize on the obvious clichés, and so he has a warm, surprising film. GRADE: B-plus.

New Orleans Firemen Set Secret Vote On Contract

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Fire fighters canceled a vote on whether to accept a new contract or join a two-week-old police strike Friday. Union officials said they feared their meeting would be disrupted by violence.

Suit Alleges Illegal Searches Conducted

CHICAGO (AP) — A suit filed by the American Civil Liberties Union alleges the Chicago Police Department conducted at least 10,000 illegal strip-searches of women during the past five years.

The class-action suit filed Thursday in U.S. District Court seeks damages of $125,000 for each victim of improper searches on grounds that the victims suffered "degradation, humiliation and pain" and were deprived of their constitutional rights. ACLU officials said improper and unneeded strip-searches still are being conducted despite new guidelines regarding such searches issued by Police Supt. James O'Grady on Feb. 16.

ing after a lot of hesitation on our part, was the concern of safety of our members and the possibility of a riot in the middle of Tulane Avenue," said Clarence Perez, head of the 965-member New Orleans Fire Fighters Association.

He said the vote would be handled by mail. Voting started Thursday, with the tally coming out nearly even — 226-225 in favor of the proposed contract. That vote was voided, Perez said.

The fire fighters' contract expired Friday and they had threatened to walk out if the contract was not approved.

Perez said earlier in the day that the narrow vote was the result of police picketing and lobbying outside the fire fighters' meeting.

The announcement came after police changed the time of their union meeting, which was called to discuss an ultimatum by Mayor Ernest Morial that they have a secret vote on the proposed contract.

Both union meetings had been set at 8 p.m., but police moved theirs to 6 p.m. and there was speculation they would send large numbers of pickets to the fire-fighters' session.

Police have picketed fire stations, but fire fighters have continued to work. Perez said that fire fighters will continue to work while they wait for the mail balloting to be tallied.

The fire fighters are affiliated with the AFL-CIO. The Policemen's Association of Louisiana is affiliated with the Teamsters.

Perez said the 3-year contract offer includes increases in overtime, a 5 percent pay raise each year and a clause assuring fire fighters will get increases in pay or benefits given other city employees.

The city's offer to police is called a final offer, but mayor's aide James Chubbuck refused to say what the city would do if the policemen reject it. "The absolute that can happen is that they can lose their jobs," he said.

The Policemen's Association of Louisiana claimed that more than 1,000 members of the 1,500-man force were still on strike Friday as policemen, state troopers and National Guardsmen patrolled the city.

Meanwhile, the state 4th Circuit Court of Appeal has agreed with Civil District Judge Richard J. Garvey that the police strike is illegal.

Garvey ordered more than 100 strikers to be in court Monday, and if he finds them in contempt, they face fines of up to $500 as well as six months in jail.

Government Wants Control Of Federal Credit Programs

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration, engaged in a tough battle to hold spending next year to $532 billion, is urging Congress to get control of federal credit programs — which are worth another $552 billion.

All federal agencies will be directed this spring to include limits on credit programs when they prepare their budget requests for 1981. Dale McOmber, assistant director of the Office of Management and Budget, told the Senate Banking Committee Friday.

McOmber and Roger C. Altman, an assistant secretary of the treasury, said the administration wants Congress to set strict limits in the budget for each of the scores of federal lending programs, as well as an overall limit on government credit.

"The activities of federal credit programs have substantial effects on the way our economic system functions, and on its stability," McOmber said. "Yet there is now little coordination of credit policy between different programs, and little effort to require alternative choices among programs."

The administration's concern won the endorsement of Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., committee chairman. He noted that most federal credit programs lie outside the budget and beyond the control of any congressional committee.

"There is no way of setting priorities and making federal credit programs compete against each other for scarce credit resources (and) no way to determine which programs are more effective and which less effective in achieving their goals," Proxmire said.

As a result, he added, there is "no way of making rational decisions about federal credit policy and the appropriate level and form of federal intervention in the financial markets."

Nancy Teeters, a governor of the Federal Reserve System, called the treatment of credit activities "a major loophole in the congressional budget process." While federal credit programs help promote such worthy social objectives as home ownership, she said, the benefits have their costs.

"The lower interest costs paid by groups receiving credit can in effect be viewed as a form of subsidy provided by the government," Mrs. Teeters said. "Moreover, since the supply of credit is not unlimited, when certain groups obtain credit with federal assistance, other groups find it more difficult to do so."

All told, she said, government lending and loan guarantees now account for about one-sixth of the nation's credit supply.

The administration's credit-control proposal would apply to direct loans and to guaranteed or insured loans. It would not apply to such privately owned and federally sponsored agencies as the Federal National Mortgage Association, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board and the farm-credit system.

"The original uses of guaranteed credit were in the areas of home and farm mortgages involving large numbers of relatively small loans secured by a physical asset," Mrs. Teeters said. "We now have proposals or programs to fund a large number of unsecured, small loans — such as student loans — and others to assist a small number of very large loans."

Financial markets will be called on to finance $37.4 billion of new federally guaranteed loans during the next fiscal year — a figure that will have grown steadily since reaching $16.2 billion in 1976, Altman said. By comparison, the administration expects the federal deficit to drop during the same period from $66.4 billion to $29 billion.

Inmate Freed With Time Still To Serve

McALESTER, Okla. (AP) — A prisoner was released from Oklahoma State Penitentiary Friday before officials discovered that he should have been held to serve another sentence, authorities said.

Donald Ray Stanley, 27, completed serving a 10-year sentence from Custer County for second-degree burglary on Friday, said Nancy Nunnally, a Corrections Department spokeswoman.

Stanley was dressed out in the clothes normally given to released prisoners and he and another prisoner were driven to the McAlester bus station by a guard, Mrs. Nunnally said.

When they reached the station, Stanley said he was going inside to get cigarettes, she said. When he didn't come back and couldn't be located, officers checked with the prison and the error was discovered.

Records showed Stanley was to have started serving a 15-year sentence for burglary in Jackson County when he completed the first one. Officers immediately began a search of the bus station area, she said.

Textile Company Sees Takeover Bid In Hong Kong Firms' Stock Purchases

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — A federal judge Friday removed legal restraints against the purchase of stock in Dan River, Inc., by two Hong Kong firms which the huge textile company alleges may be trying to take it over.

"I believe the defendants have complied with the substance of this court's injunction," said U.S. District Judge D. Dorth Warriner at the end of a 90-minute hearing.

He was referring to a temporary restraining order he imposed a week ago on Unitek, Ltd., of Hong Kong and its subsidiary, Mannip, Ltd., in response to a Dan River complaint.

Mannip has spent some $6 million over the past three months to buy more than 380,000 shares, or about 6.9 percent, of Dan River's outstanding stock.

In filing revised forms with the Securities and Exchange Commission, the two firms said they have no present intention of trying to take over Dan River, one of the world's largest textile operations.

"It is not their intention to take this company over," Unitek attorney Michael W. Schwartz told Warriner.

He insisted his clients have been purchasing huge chunks of Dan River stock merely because they think the stock is undervalued and they hope for a long-term capital gain.

"We think the stock is going up. We think it is a good buy," Schwartz said.

But Dan River attorney Max Gidder said the supplemental forms which Warriner ordered filed with the SEC "are even more of a mystery than what we had before."

He said it was very suspicious that Mannip would borrow money at 12 percent interest to purchase stock in a company that yields only 6 percent.

"The notion that this is an investment for investment only doesn't make sense," he added.

Warriner, however, said Dan River had made many allegations but produced no proof.

Arizonan Slates Photo Lecture At Texas Tech

James L. Eneyart, director of the Center for Creative Photography at the University of Arizona, will present an illustrated lecture on his photography in the Texas Tech University Department of Art Room 102, at 7 p.m., March 13.

He also will show some of the holdings and discuss activities of the Arizona center.

An authority on the history of photography and the photographic process, he will meet with the acquisitions committee of The Museum of Texas Tech University to discuss building photographic collections. He also will appear as a guest critic in photography classes within the department of art.

Eneyart's visit is part of a program of visiting artists-critics sponsored by a grant from the National Endowment for the Arts awarded the department of art a year ago.

Eneyart has appeared as lecturer at California State University in Long Beach, San Francisco Museum of Art, Corcoran Gallery of Art, Washington, D.C., University of New Mexico, University of Exeter, England, Minneapolis Institute of Art and the Smithsonian Institution.

His works appear in collections at the "Bibliothèque Nationale," Paris; George Eastman House, Rochester, N.Y.; and Sheldon Memorial Gallery at the University of Nebraska.

Oregon Law Bans Disposable Tabs

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Those disposable metal tabs that have become common on many beverage containers have been disposed of in Oregon by a state law.

The law was passed in 1977 and went into effect Thursday. It is an outgrowth of the 1971 state act popularly known as the "Bottle Bill." Under that law, deposits are required on all beer and soft drink cans and bottles. Also banned were detachable metal tab openers, or "flip-tops." Supporters of the bill said such metal tabs were a cause of litter on beaches and roads.

He said he cannot simply assume the information on the forms filed with the SEC under oath are false.

While conceding it is "extremely difficult to pierce the inscrutability of a firm halfway around the world," he said, "I can only assume they are true."

Warriner said that for him to take any other approach would open the door to potential target companies initiating expensive legal proceedings every time a stock purchaser files a form with the SEC.

While lifting the restraining order, the judge gave attorneys for both sides additional time in which to file briefs on the question of whether he has jurisdiction to order additional inquiries into the backgrounds and intentions of the two Hong Kong firms.

He said he may hold another hearing on this issue on or before March 30.

Mart Slips After Rally

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was mixed Friday, slipping back into a trendless pattern after Thursday's rally.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, which climbed 7.02 points Thursday, slipped 0.9 to 815.75. That left the average with a net loss for the week of 7.53.

The daily tally on the New York Stock Exchange showed about four gainers for every three issues that lost ground.

The biggest gainer among the blue chips was International Paper, up 1 1/2 at 43 1/2, as the 4 p.m. close of the NYSE. Plans were announced last Thursday for the company to sell its oil and gas operations to Gulf Oil for about $850 million. Gulf eased 1/4 to 23 1/2.

None of the other 29 stocks in the Dow moved as much as a point.

Boeing, which received a contract from British Airways for 19 Boeing 757 medium-range jets, added 1/2 to 64 1/2 in active trading.

Gold mining issues retreated, meanwhile, as bullion prices eased in Europe.
