China's leading newspaper, the People's Daily, said "the just, defensive counter-blows of our frontier forces have deflated the aggressive arrogance of the Vietnamese authorities ... and dealt a telling blow to the Soviet Union's scheme for aggression and expansion in Southeast Asia."

The paper reiterated the Chinese contention that it invaded Vietnam only after numerous border provocations. The People's Daily said China's victory in the two-week-old war would speed modernization plans, saying workers should learn from the Chinese soldiers "spirit of fearing no sacrifice."

Tech-Indiana Cage Tickets Going Fast

AFTER A brisk opening day, tickets remain on sale today at Texas Tech for the Red Raiders' Thursday night basketball game against Indiana University in the first round of the National Invitation Tournament. Tech officials reported Tuesday afternoon that more than 5,250 tickets had been sold during the first day of sales. The Tech athletic ticket windows will remain open today and Thursday, and tickets which remain will then be transferred to Lubbock Coliseum prior to the game.

Prices are $5 for adults and $3 for students, and there are no reserved seats. Tech officials said.

Winner of Thursday night's game will advance to the second round of the national, post-season basketball tournament. This is Tech's first time to play in the 42-year-old tournament which has its semifinals and finals in New York City's Madison Square Garden.

Shah Trial Slated In Absentia In Islamic Court

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) - The exiled shah and his family will stand trial in absentia before an Islamic court for alleged 'crimes against the Iranian people," the revolutionary government said Tuesday. Firing squads executed nine more persons, seven for alleged sex offenses.

Abbas Amir Entezam, deputy prime minister, said during a news briefing that the trial will take place "in a few days, and following the court's decision, Iran will make fresh efforts to freeze royal family holdings held in Swiss banks."

The site of the trial and specific charges against the deposed monarch have not been disclosed. Following the revolutionary government's ascension to power Reb. 12, however, government spokesmen spoke of trying the shah in Tehran's 100,000-capacity soccer stadium for treason, corruption and illegal transferring of funds abroad.

The shah fled Iran about a month before an Islamic peoples revolution toppled the 2,500-year-old monarchy. He presently lives in exile in Morocco. In an interview with ABC News corre-

Islamic revolutionary firing squads in Tehran and elsewhere executed nine more persons within a 36-hour period, seven of them for sodomy, while a couple caught committing adultery was publicly flogged at the Caspian Sea resort town of Jamshid Abad.

Local press reports said Tuesday that three men were shot in Shiraz, about 630 miles south of Tehran, for sodomy. One was an Afghani immigrant.

A photograph of the executions was prominently displayed in a Tehran paper. An editorial said the executions would shock those ignorant of Islamic rule, but for those in favor of Islamic revolution and with young children, the executions were a sign of hope for the future.

Laetrile Patient's Tests Worry Lawyer

PLYMOUTH, Mass. (AP) - The courtappointed lawyer for leukemia victim Chad Green said Tuesday he is troubled by tests showing the 3-year-old has three times the normal level of cyanide in his blood but a lawyer for the parents says there is no problem.

The buildup of cyanide, a powerful poison, is a side effect of repeated doses of Laetrile

John Wyman said of the results of tests at Ohio State University, which showed the highest amounts of cyanide yet reported in the 16-month controversy over Chad's treatment that includes Laetrile.

Laetrile is a trademark for a substance derived from the chemical amygdalin, found naturally in the pits of apricots and peached and in bitter almonds.

Advocates claim Laetrile is an effective cancer treatment, but the U.S. Food and Drug Administration and the medical establishment in this country have said there is no proof it is of any value in treating cancer.

Assistant Attorney General Jonathan Brant also claims the Laetrile is poisoning Chad. "There is clear agreement that Chad is toxic, Brant said. "The question is whether he is acutely toxic.

But George Donovan, lawyer for Chad's parents, Gerald and Diana Green, said Tuesday that "Dr. Daniel Couri, director of toxicology of Ohio State University, concluded from his toxicological analysis...that Chad Green is not suffering from cyanide poisoning."

Donovan said the report was mailed Monday to Judge Guy Volterra, who had ordered the Greens to stop giving Chad Laetrile and other special diet items and ordered the boy to receive chemotherapy at Massachusetts General Hospital. That was when the Greens fled to Tijuana to continue the Laetrile treatment.

Donovan said Dr. Couri reported a cyanide level of 32 to 36 micrograms per decaliter of blood sent to Columbus, Ohio, last month. He said normal levels are between five and 10 micrograms and quoted Dr. Couri as saying "a toxic dose would have to be at least 100."

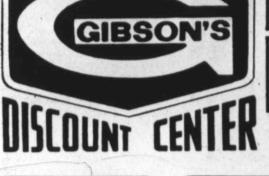

"If you take an aspirin, your aspirin level will be up, but that doesn't mean you are being poisoned by aspirin," the lawyer said.

"I saw him (Chad)," Donovan said. "I was out there last week. He looked good to me. He looks better than he did a year

AN EDITORIAL:

We Pay More; Enjoy It Less

TWO EXAMPLES of the way in which power to deny Texans their constitutional guarantee of equal treatment under the law have been in the news lately.

Perhaps the most flagrant example is the Department of Energy's "tilt" regulation that will require Texas motorists to pay higher prices for gasoline so that persons in the more populous Northeast can enjoy lower prices for heating oil.

Another example, about which City of Lubbock officials are complaining, is the bias toward the populous snow-belt cities of funding formulas for federal taxpayer grants through the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

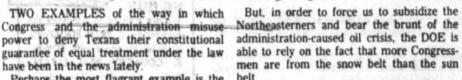

IN BOTH INSTANCES, of course, the reason for favoring one section of the country over another is painfully obvious: The Democratic-controlled Congress and the Democratic administration are buying votes with

In its "tilt" regulation, DOE is permitting refiners to assign more of their costs to gasoline and less to other products, such as home heating oil.

The net effect is to force motorists to pay more for gasoline than is justified so that heating oil can be sold at a lower cost than can be justified.

Texans are more dependent on gasoline for going to and from work, for commerce, for everything they buy, sell and produce, than are the residents of snow-belt states.

AN EDITORIAL:

FOR THE SAME reason, HUD is able to blatantly favor older Northern and Northeastern cities over those in the South and

Refusing to treat the poor alike in the two regions, HUD has adopted formulas that confer preferred status on cities where more than 34.5 percent of all housing was built in the 1930s or before, where per capita income has grown slowly and where unemployment rates are highest.

This formula rewards mismanagement in older cities where high taxes are forcing people to move out.

IT ALSO ENCOURAGES a do-nothing attitude toward joblessness because more federal taxpayer funds will roll in the higher the unemployment figures are.

'A low-income citizen of Lubbock should have just as much access to government programs as a low-income person in New Jersey." Lubbock Mayor pro tem Alan Henry

He can argue until he is blue in the face, but it's unlikely to eliminate the greed which the Northern and Northeastern liberals are exercising in order to get into Texans pocketbooks

Peace Within Reach--Almost

WHETHER INTERNATIONAL tensions will continue to ease-or if, indeed, they will still be relaxed between the writing and the reading of these lines-is impossible to predict. but even a momentary relaxation is to be savored.

On Monday, the Red Chinese announced they would pull their troops out of Vietnam, the first oil in two months flowed from Iran and peace accords between Israel and Egypt again appeared to be a possibility.

Such a round of good news caused the stock market to spurt, the dollar to strengthen on foreign exchanges and the average American to heave a big sigh of relief.

IT WAS EASY in such an euphoric atmosphere to forget or overlook that the situation false hopes have been raised before about a lasting peace in the Middle East and that the oil out of Iran bore a price tag 50 percent higher than the last oil shipped by the deposed shah's regime.

It was a little more difficult to forget that prices of just about everything are escalating weekly-and, in some cases, almost daily -and that despite loud breast-beating neither Congress nor the administration has any intention of bringing the federal deficit under control

The sorry state of the Free World's defenses, especially in Europe (so much of the rest of the world having already fallen under Communist domination), and the continuing racial unrest in Africa remain as big of a problem as ever

Thus, while it is nice to catch our breath now and then, we cannot permit ourselves the luxury of being overwhelmed by any fleeting moment of relief.

ALL AMERICANS must sincerely hope, however, that President Carter's trip to the Middle East and the latest proposals for resolving the Israeli-Egyptian impasse will lead to the signing of peace accords.

With an unstable and probably unfriendly regime in Iran, it is imperative that a higher the U.S. maintain friendly relations with other governments in that part of the world. For this to be accomplished, any treaties that are signed must not leave open so many loopholes that the Middle East would tick as a timebomb waiting to explode.

The Palestine Liberation Organization, for example, is just waiting to strike against Israel from its sanctuaries in Iran and elsewhere in the region.

The message for America is clear: Speak softly. But carry a big stick.

M. STANTON EVANS:

We Did All We Could Not To Help The Shah

WASHINGTON-If there is any comfort for the U.S. in the recent upheaval in Iran, it can only be that the events occurring there provide an object lesson in how not to save a country from disaster. In retrospect, it is hard to imagine anything we might have done to prompt the Iranian revolution that we neglected to do. By making a seemingly strong commitment to the shah, then backing away from it; by failing to understand the nature and strength of the forces that were arrayed against him; by what appears to be an appalling lapse in our intelligence information, we contributed to the collapse of our ally and the resulting upheaval in his nation. The conventional wisdom, of course, is that the shah provoked his own downfall by indulging in repression, denying the democratic aspirations of his people.

THE DEPREDATIONS of the Savak, corruption in the imperial entourage, and other viola-tions of the democratic ethic are said to have created bitter opposition to his regime, despite the good things he attempted otherwise. In this perspective, the Iranian revolution has simply been a morality play in which the oppressed rose up against their oppressors.

One need not be an apologist for the shah or his methods to suspect that something is missing from this picture.

In particular, the degree to which Marxist revolutionary cadres in Iran contributed to the prob-lem has yet to be determined fully, though there is little doubt that such involvement was exten-

But even beyond this crucial point, there were factors involved in the Iranian calamity which are accounted for inadequately, or not at all, in the conventional explanation.

MOST OBVIOUS of these is the alleged "good" accomplished by the shah despite his many de-predations. This supposedly consisted of his strenuous effort to modernize Iran as rapidly as possible, using the enormous oil wealth of his nation to purchase technology and expertise from the West.

Most analyses of the Iranian debacle give him full credit for these endeavors, even while faulting him for the performance of the Savak or efforts to build his military arsenal.

On reflection, however, it should be obvious that this alleged "good" was the actual source of

For it was precisely his desire to modernize Iran, whatever the cost, that created conditions of general upheaval and set him at odds with the Muslim majority in his nation.

WITHOUT THESE contributing conditions, it is unlikely resentment of high-handed tactics or agitation by the Marxists would have been sufficient to topple him from power.

He was a strenuous promoter of literacy and other education programs, with particular stress on opportunities for women and youth. He was enamored of "plans" to speed investment in the industrialization process.

The result of this endeavor was the same in Iran as in other countries where it has been tried: Continuous turmoil, vast displacement of rural workers into teeming cities, and creation of a contentious class of cocksure would-be intellectuals-symbolized by the ubiquitous Iranian students who have cavorted across the U.S.

MOST IMPORTANT, the "modernization" set the shah at odds with the tradition-minded Musthe shah at odds with the tradition-minded Mus-lims who pledge allegiance to the Ayatollah Khomeini and who are clearly the most powerful single political factor in Iran.

What really brought the shah to grief, in other words, was the thing for which he was most widely praised by liberal circles in the U.S.:

His effort to flog a rural, tradition-minded so-ciety into the patterns of modernity, with scant regard for established social custom, religious habit or points of doctrine. habit, or points of doctrine.

Among the potential Democratic contenders. both Teddy Kennedy and California Gov. Jerry Brown also stand loose up at that plate. They want peace, of course.

As for Jimmy Carter, at this point he needs a big victory, and a peace treaty offers his best chance of winning one. Polls soared in his favor after Camp David I. He has since lost an awful lot of ground as the Egyptians and Israelis fol-lowed that brief euphoric period with a policy of shilly-shallying.

So it is understandable that he should remind to have heard that last item from a colleague. I suspect that generations pass without Lord Byron But I am glad that even Untermeyer, who is as cosmopolitan as Voltaire, has a vestigial trace of the characteristic Texas habit of fibbing to foreigners like me. I welcome evidence that Americans retain some regional differences. But Texas, like everything else (only, as you would expect, more so), isn't what it used to be. It is losing the splendid sense of self its history "In most states," writes T. R. Fehrenback

"the frontier was ephemeral, lasting a decade at most. The Texas frontier-a bloody, embattled frontier both in the West and along the Rio Grande-lasted some three generations.

THERE WAS "little immigration from Europe or anywhere else into the state after 1875 until the middle of the 20th century."

And "the first wave of migrants to Texas cities were Texans from the surrounding countryside -farmers and other rural residents who rarely migrated more than 200 miles." But today, William Broyles, editor of Texas Monthly, is a voice crying in what is no longer enough of a wilderness to suit him. He is afraid that Texas-which has, after all, a history as a separate nation—is becoming "just another bland ingredient in the national melting

In the other, South Dakota has joined four other states in rescinding earlier approval. Both actions are subject to second thought as well as second rulings.

One of the major weapons, urging various organizations to boycott or cancel conventions in those states which have not passed the ERA, has been given at least a temporary legal okay. In this instance, it was a Kansas judge. Further court tests are most likely.

While some states will knuckle under to the threat of losing lucrative convention delegates. others may resent such actions and become even more adamant in their opposition.

The Democrats would love to return to Chicago for their meeting, but hesitate because Illinois hasn't passed ERA. As we have said before, that's a heckuva way to prove the ERA is a worthy amendment, and any state or group that bows to such threats hasn't much backbone. Ah, Democracy!

RUMMAGING through some odds and ends the other day, we came across a story which is most apropos today. Entitled "Paradise Lost," it relates how the seagulls of St. Augustine. Fla., are starving to death in the midst of plenty-because they have forgotten how to fish.

For a good many generations, as gull generations go, these sea birds were fed by the waste from the shrimpers of the area. About all the gulls had to do was sit on the seawall and feast So the birds never bothered to catch fish as their brothers out at sea. Then the shrimp fleet moved down to Key West, ending paradise. and pretty nearly ending the gulls, too. A few of the birds had the intuition to follow the fleet. A few more were enterprising enough, or had enough instinct left, to take to the sea. But many can be seen sitting sadly where they bring them their shrimp. Sound familiar?

IT IS no mistake to admit a mistake.

Fuel Shortages Force Flight Cancellations

By Associated Press A jet fuel shortage forced widespread cancellation of airline flights Tuesday while several American oil companies said they will boycott Iranian oil because the price is too high.

Two of the nation's largest airlines, United and Delta, said hundreds of flights will be scrubbed in March because they can't get enough jet fuel.

In another development, Exxon said it would limit the amount of gasoline it sells dealers during March.

United said it will cut back its flight schedule by 3.4 percent this month. Spokesman Ed Williams said that means an average of 38 flights will be cancelled each weekday, with 118 flights scrubbed on Saturdays and 141 on Sundays.

"The idea is to save fuel," Williams said. "Shell oil has told us we can't get our normal supply of fuel temporarily, so we're cutting back through the end of the

U.S. Carrier Ordered To Sail To Waters Near Persian Gulf

WASHINGTON (AP) - The 80,000-ton U.S. aircraft carrier Constellation has been ordered to sail from the Philippines into waters near the Persian Gulf in a demonstration of U.S. concern about conditions in that oil-rich area, administration officials said Tuesday.

This is the second time the Constellation, carrying from 80 to 90 planes, has been ordered from the U.S. naval base at Subic Bay to move toward the Indian Ocean. However, the last time this occurred in late December, President Carter reportedly changed his mind and kept the ship in the South China Sea.

Since then, the shah of Iran, strongly supported at the time by the United States, has fallen and the United States apparently has lost a firm oil-producing ally in the Persian Gulf region.

The Constellation will be accompanied by three or four escorting warships and probably an oiler on the long voyage from the Philippines through the Indian Ocean to the Arabian Sea.

Officials said it was uncertain how long the Constellation would be kept in the area. However, other recent moves by the United States in the wake of the shah's fall and the installation of the government backed by Ayatollah Khomeini have indicated that the United States intends to strengthen its military presence in the Indian Ocean-Arabian Sea-Persian

One objective is to demonstrate support for countries that are considered American friends, such as Saudi Arabia. Within the past two weeks. Defense Secretary Harold Brown and other senior U.S. officials have stressed that the United States would, as Brown put it, "take any action that's appropriate" to protect the flow of Mideast oil to the United States.

Brown and other top officials also indicated that the United States was consulting with Saudi Arabia and other friendly Middle East countries about possible military measures that would underscore the importance the United States attaches to stability in the area.

President Carter has ruled out any permanent U.S. military bases in the region, but there have been indications the United States would use an expanded naval presence and possibly periodic visits by U.S. warplanes to accomplish that pur-

The United States has been sending. carrier task forces into the Indian Ocean on two-month deployments since early 1972, but has never maintained any significant continuing naval presence. A small "show the flag" force of two de-stroyers and a command ship has cruised the Persian Gulf and Red Sea for about 30 years, but this represents only minor naval power.

However, last November the United States sent a cruiser, a frigate and a guided-missile destroyer into the Indian Ocean ostensibly for joint maneuvers with the Iranian and Pakistani navies. These ships have been relieved, and the United States apparently intends to keep a small force of that size in that general area, in addition to the Constellation-led carrier task force from the Philippines.

Three destroyers and frigates which passed through the Suez Canal from the Mediterranean last week are now in port at Djibouti in the Gulf of Aden.

The Soviet navy first entered the Indian Ocean more than 10 years ago and has maintained an almost constant presence there, usually numbering some 20 ships. About half of those ships normally are combat vessels and the others are support craft.

Ever since being ousted from Somalia in 1977, the Russian navy has used Aden in South Yemen as its main base.

Last week, the United States took steps to speed up deliveries of military equiment to North Yemen in response to attacks from Soviet-backed South Yemen.

This was one more piece in a picture of increasing tension and possibly big-power confrontation in the vital Persian Gulf-Arabian Sea-Indian Ocean area.

Pentagon spokesman Thomas Ross told a briefing that two U.S. Air Force C-141 transport planes last week delivered some 7,000 shoulder-fired antitank rockets to North Yemen.

The State and Defense Departments have said North Yemen will also receive 12 F-5E fighter planes for about $300 million, including ammunition and training aid: 64 M-60 A-1 tanks for $76 million. and 50 M-113 armored troop carriers for $12.7 million.

sive radiation - especially from medical X-rays - may be to blame for a rise in the incidence of cancer in recent years. Radford was among the four who called for a reduction in radiation standards.

The five scientists testified before a Senate Governmental Affairs subcommittee on energy on a recent report by an Interagency Task Force on Ionizing Radiation appointed by President Carter.

The first five sections of the report, which were released last week, surveyed the debate over the health effects of lowlevel radiation and made recommendations on how to handle public information and health data.

Some scientists believe levels of radia-

Other scientists dispute studies that have suggested such a link as inconclu-

A sixth section of the task force report, which will be released soon, is expected to recommend ways to reorganize government efforts to gather health data on radiation and set standards.

The energy subcommittee, headed by Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, is writing legislation that would simplify federal regulations on radiation, which are now set by more than a dozen agencies.

Some of the scientists criticized the interagency report as not going far enough in outlining possible radiation dangers.

"There is abundant evidence that lowlevel human radiation exposure poses a cancer risk that may be as great or greater than at high levels and that is not stressed in the report," said Dr. Karl Z. Morgan of the School of Engineering at Georgia Institute of Technology. One frequent critic of the government's nuclear policies. Dr. Irwin D. Bross of Roswell Park Memorial Cancer Center in Buffalo, N.Y., noted that about a halfdozen studies now warn of dangers from low-level radiation.

"It is virtually impossible that these are all false alarms," Bross said.

But Eisenbud charged that if the dangers were as great as Bross said, cancer rates should be rising much more steeply than they are.

The limit for nuclear industry workers is five rems of radiation a year. A rem is a measure of absorbed radiation. The maximum rate for the general public is only 0.5 rems a year.

Bross said the rate for workers should be reduced to 0.5 rems a year. Morgan said 2.5 rems a year would do, while Rad-ford and Dr. Warren Sinclair of Argonne National Laboratories in Argonne, III.,

nto Reserve Oil Supplies Anticipated

WASHINGTON (AP) - Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger said Tuesday the loss of Iranian oil may force the United States to dip into its Strategic Petroleum Reserve for the first time to bolster supplies of heating oil for next winter.

Schlesinger also said a plan to cope with the Iranian situation, calling for voluntary conservation efforts and for more industrial use of coal and natural gas, has been sent to President Carter for final approval.

The energy secretary said there is a "lively possibility" that the petroleum reserve. in Louisiana on the Gulf Coast, may have to be utilized by September to avoid a possible shortage of heating oil for next winter - even though it now contains only 80 million of its eventual one billion-barrel capacity.

The energy secretary said recent resumption of oil imports by Iran appear to be only token amounts designed to draw high prices. He said they fall far short of any significant restoration in production from a nation that once supplied some 18 percent of the non-Communist world demand.

Schlesinger also told a House Appropriations subcommittee that his agency's "1ranian response" plan has gone to President Carter and that Carter will make a decision and announce the steps shortly.

However, the energy secretary said the draft of the plan sent to the president includes these options:

- A major call for voluntary actions on the part of the public to reduce U.S. energy consumption. There have been reports that the plan would ask every citizen and business to reduce energy consumption by 3 percent, but Schlesinger did not specify a level.

- Industrial conversions from oil to natural gas, where feasible, to make use of an estimated one trillion cubic feet of gas newly made available to interstate pipelines under terms of the energy bill passed by Congress late last year.

- Incentives to industry to burn more coal, including the possible temporary waiver of federal clean air rules restricting its burning in certain areas.

- A temporary suspension of the federal program under which refineries must produce increasing amounts of unleaded gasoline.

- Steps to move electric power from states with coal-burning utilities to regions where power plants are fueled by petroleum.

Unemployment Rate Lowest In Midwest

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Midwest had the lowest unemployment rate in the United States last year, while joblessness in the Northeast continued to pace the nation, the Labor Department reported Tuesday.

State and regional figures released by the department's Bureau of Labor Statistics showed that the Midwest - or North Central" states - averaged a 5.3 6 percent in 1977

Unemployment in the Northeast states declined sharply from 1977, but still was the highest of the four U.S. regions at 6.9 percent. The jobless rate in the Northeast was 8.4 percent in 1977, the bureau said.

Unemployment in the South last year averaged 5.6 percent, compared with 6.4 percent in 1977. Joblessness in the West was 6.6 percent, down from 7.8 percent the year before.

Nationally, unemployment last year averaged 6 percent, down from 7 percent in 1977.

Nebraska had the lowest average unemployment rate in the country last year at 2.9 percent, while Alaska had the highest rate, 11.2 percent, the government said.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Bowing to Congress, the Fish and Wildlife Service Tuesday withdrew federal protections from hundreds of rare species and their habitats, a move that could affect everything from butterflies to grizzly bears.

The service had proposed adding 1,850 species to the endangered list and those plants and animals were provided at least partial protection while their cases were under consideration.

But Congress last year passed a law forcing the wildlife service to withdraw protections for most of those species while it prepares an economic impact statement for each - a break-

"Many species may be extinct before we complete the necessary work," a government biologist said.

The service said 1,700 animals and plants proposed for protection would not be added to the endangered speries list until the wildlife officials collect economic information as required by the 1978 amendments to the Endangered Species Act.

In addition, the service withdrew proposals to list 50 critical habitats, several in areas near cities pushing for developments. An official said the economic review and public hearings re-

Proposals for about 10 million acres of critical habitat for the grizzly bear in western Montana, Idaho, northeastern Washington state, and Wyoming also will be withdrawn pending comptetion of the economic review.

Black Man Gives View On High Court's Review

a $25,000-a-year electrician who is the son of black field hands, doesn't understand Brian Weber's complaint or why the Supreme Court should be ready to hear it.

Nailor got his job at Kaiser Aluminum Chemical Corp. through a training program that paid special notice to minorities. Weber, a white man, alleges reverse discrimination in the program, and the Supreme Court has agreed to hear his case on March 28.

The court challenge does not focus on Nailor's job but on the concept behind the program that gave him his boost. This story is about Nailor's views on the controversial issue.

"I don't know why he's coming up with all this stuff. He had this opportunity all along," he said. "When Brian Weber was born into this world, the opportunity was there for him right then.

This is the first time I had an opportunity to really try to get somewhere," he said as he bounced his 2-year-old son, James Jr., on his knee. "As black men, we had nothing. I had nothing."

said he was excluded because of his race. The high court's decision could affect millions of workers like Nailor - and like Weber - and drastically alter socalled affirmative action programs aimed at helping minorities catch up from years of discrimination.

Kaiser and the United Steelworkers union set up such a training program in 1974. It led to advancement into skilled trades at the company's big refinery at Gramercy. La., about 25 miles up the winding river road from New Orleans.

Half of the training slots in the Kaiser program were set aside for blacks, and Nailor was accepted. But Weber - who had more seniority - was rejected, leaving him in a job as a lab technician that pays several thousand dollars less each year than electrician's work.

He sued, arguing that he had not discriminated against blacks and should not be punished because others had. He has seems so obvious.

Two lower courts have agreed with Weber, ruling that the Kaiser program was illegal because there had been no previous finding that the company had discriminated in the past.

From Nailor's point of view, meanwhile, a special minority employment program like Kaiser's was necessary for blacks to break the cycle of generations of low-paying, menial jobs.

When Kaiser first opened its Gramercy plant, only whites were hired, he said, so they would always have seniority over Nailor is 47, and when he was growing up here, the public schools for blacks stopped at the eighth grade. His parents sent him to Alabama where he finished high school.

'Many nights at that boading school I didn't have too much to eat, but I was trying to get an education," he said.

Nailor said he went on to finish junior college in California, and to participate in the two-year training program at Kaiser he had to take a healthy pay cut and forego any chance at overtime.

Supporters of the former California governor and 1976 presidential contender, now the clear front runner in a crowded GOP field, will announce formation of an exploratory committee for his presidential campaign.

An exploratory committee - a legal maneuver short of a declared candidacy - allows Reagan to organize a campaign and raise and spend money while continuing the radio broadcasts and newspaper columns that are his main source of income.

Once Reagan becomes an official declared candidate, his political competitors could demand equal time and space in these public forums.

Sen. Paul Laxault, R-Nev., manager of the 1976 campaign that fell just short of besting Gerald Ford for the nomination. will announce formation of the new committee at a news conference. Reagan will not be present.

Laxal! will disclose that an impessive team of Republican professionals has been assembled to run the campaign.

They will include John Sears, the conservative political whiz who masterminded Reagan's 1976 drive; Lyn Nofziger, the executive director of Reagan's Citizens for the Republic; and Charles Black, political director of the Republican National Committee.

Acting on an anonymous tip, officers arrested the two men without resistance Monday night at a downtown restaurant. Several items stolen from Hays' apartment, including credit cards, were recovered, police said.

The professor, Davis said, had known Meyers for some time.

The detective said Meyers is from Florida and St. Anthony is from Arizona. Hays, who had headed Trinity's Department of Journalism, Broadcasting and Film since 1973, was stabbed in the abdomen and had the back of his head bashed in with a blunt instrument, said Bexar County Medical Examiner Dr. Ruben Santos.

The Mississippi is expected to crest well above flood stage at some points by the weekend, but veteran river watchers are not too concerned at the moment. As for the present flooding in Tennessee, Jerry Clemons of the National Weather Service said:

"That land is so low, it's not unusual for it to be flooded. That land belongs to the river anyway. Man just went in there and took it away. Periodically, the river takes it back.

But elsewhere there were problems. Nebraska Gov. Charles Thone declared a state of emergency and told his National Guard commander to start blasting the troublesome ice jams with dynamite at his discretion.

A helicopter bombed an ice jam on Cattaraugus Creek southwest of Buffalo, N.Y., as a number of streams in the Empire State surged over their banks and routed hundreds from their homes.

The Union Pacific Railroad, which suf-fered $1.5 million in damage to its prop-erty last year, has just completed build-ing a dike a half mile long and 12 feet igh to protect its property this year. The National Weather Service at Memphis, Tenn., said the Mississippi was ov-erflowing Monday in some lowlands in northwest Tennessee and will be above flood stage at several points by this week

The weather service said the Ohio River, which joins the Mississippi at Cairo, Ill.. will crest at Cairo on Friday and the lower Mississippi will begin cresting Sat-urday at New Madrid, Mo.

The residents of the tiny Pennsylvania village of Powys were marconed by floodwaters of the Susquehanna River and the school children got a day off from school because the buses couldn't get in. A farmer in nearby Ulster evacuated his 175 cows to higher ground and a mobile home dealer in Towanda had to move out all his trailers.

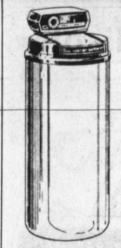

About 60 firefighters in Marathon, NY.. threw up a sandbag dike, but more than 2 feet of water covered much of the middle of the town, anyway.

Psychologist Helps Defense Attorneys

PRYOR, Okla. (AP) - As each prospective juror in the trial of Gene Leroy Hart undergoes exhaustive questioning, a small, blonde-haired woman sits at the defense table next to Hart, intently pondering each response by the juror and suggesting questions herself.

She is Cathy Bennett. 28. of Santa Barbara, Calif.. a psychologist hired by Hart's attorneys to assist them in jury selection. Hart is on trial for first-degree murder in connection with the sex-slayings of three young Girl Scouts at a camp June 13, 1977. Miss Bennett said she is one of only 15 psychologists in the United States who regularly perform such work.

She estimates she has been involved in 75 to 80 other cases in which she has been hired to give her advice about what prospective jurors should be retained and who Among the cases in which she has assisted were the Wounded Knee trials in South Dakota in the early 1970s. We're looking for jurors who are independent-minded, will give the guy a fair shake and will listen to the evidence and will not give in to peer pressure in the jury deliberations." Miss Bennett said.

Her influence could be detected by the questions flart's attorneys asked during Monday's opening day jury selection.

"Do you always follow your husband's advice?" Isaacs asked a woman college stu dent as he apparently tried to determine how independent-minded she was.

Throughout the questioning. Miss Bennett sits next to Hart, poised over a yellow legal pad, often writing vigorously and occasionally talking to Hart and Isaacs She said she first heard about the Hart case two years ago. I guess I heard about it like everybody else did - on television when it first broke two years ago." she said. "Then I didn't hear anything more about it until four months ago when Garvin Isaacs called to ask if I would like to work for him in

Miss Bennett would not specify how many cases she has won or lost, saving she telt her performance really couldn't be measured in won-lost verdicts. She also wouln't say how much she was getting paid.

She said the first time she met Hart was Monday morning after flying to Oklahoma from San Francisco, where she had participated in a case. Next week, she said she will be performing similar duties in Phoenix

Louis Goldman, recalled to the stand as a witness for Marvin in the landmark property-rights case, said the incident occurred two years before the love affair between the actor and showgirl ended He said Miss Marvin called to ask him to intercede in the matter and that he asked her to dinner to talk about it. "Later in the evening, she took me aside and said, 'Lou, I'd like you to do me a favor. Would you contact Lee and see if he could put some property in my name maybe the house or something else, perhaps a lump sum amount?" "She said. 'I have to watch out for myself. I don't know if this relationship will last forever. Who knows what the future may hold? However, Goldman said Miss Marvin show Marvin never intended to share his possessions with the woman who lived with him for six years. Miss Marvin's attorney, Marvin Mitchelson, was rushed to a hospital after he was stricken with a coughing spasm while questioning Goldman.

Mitchelson's assistant, attorney Penny Mercurio, said the attorney has suffered from asthma in the past and is recovering

Superior Court Judge Arthur Marshall who called off court for the balance of the day, visited the attorney as he awaited help and reported: "He's in good

Miss Marvin, 46, is suing the 55-yearold actor for $1.8 million, an estimated half of his assets during the time they lived together.

Goldman also quoted what he said was Miss Marvin's philosophy of marriage and her relationship with Lee.

"She told my wife and me she had a fine relationship with Lee," Goldman said. "Lee did not want to get married. She did not want to get married. She said not to feel sorry for her. She wanted to be free and Lee wanted to be free of all obligations to each other.

Terrence Adamson, chief press spokesman for the department, said the options were discussed for about an hour Tuesday morning at a meeting with nine Re-publican members of the House Judiciary Committee. The meeting was requested by Rep. Robert McClory of Illinois, the ranking GOP member.

Rep. R. James Sensenbrenner Jr., R-Wis., said after the meeting that Justice Department officials had agreed to explore the propriety of naming a special prosecutor and promised to report in two weeks on whether this step would be appropriate.

Adamson said a special prosecutor was one of several options discussed at the meeting, which included Attorney General Griffin Bell, Deputy Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti and Assistant Attorney General Philip B. Heymann, who heads the department's criminal division and is overseeing the investigation of the Carter family business.

Records from the warehouse business in Plains, Ga., have been subpoenaed in connection with investigations of financial dealings by former federal budget director Bert Lance. In 1975 and 1976, while Lance was president of the National Bank of Georgia, the bank made $6.5 million in loans to the Carter warehouse. The FBI. Internal Revenue Service and a grand jury are looking into the case. The president's 63 percent share of the warehouse has been placed in a blind trust while he is in office. Trustee Charles Kirbo has acknowledged that a search is underway for a purchaser.

The president's mother, Lillian Carter. owns 22 percent of the warehouse. His brother. Billy Carter, who managed the warehouse, owns 15 percent.

Adamson said Heymann had just received a lengthy FBI report on the case and was reviewing the investigation so

We told them that he (Heymann) would complete that review of existing data and be making a recommendation to the deputy attorney general on the whole range of options that are available," Adamson said

"That would include proceeding on the regular course within the department itself, appointing a special team of attorneys such as was done in the Lance case, also within the department," Adamson

It might include appointing a review panel to be formed outside the department, an esteemed panel of persons of unquestioned integrity, to review the work of the assistant attorney general." Adamson said, "or the rather extraordi-

Boy Walking Again After Serious Injury

MIAMI (AP) - A 14-year-old boy, who had been expected to never walk or see again after a machine-gun bullet tore through his head when Bahamian gunboats fired on American-based lobster fishermen, is both seeing and walking.

"He is a living miracle," Migdalia Perez said of her son. Vladimir.

Although the teen-ager had lain comatose for weeks after the shooting. "We never gave up hope." Mrs. Perez said in an interview published Tuesday. "We knew that if God had saved him, he would walk and see again.

The youngster behaves now like most teen-age boys, teasing his 4-year-old sister, talking about cars and roughhousing with his pet dog. His speech is slow, but his mother said he is progressing with a tutor's help.

"He has always been, very active, very agile." his mother says. "He will be the same one day.

Seven months ago, he was wounded when Bahamian gunboats opened fire on a fleet of American lobstermen fishing in waters claimed by the Bahamas. Island authorities arrested about two dozen Cuban-Americans, including the boy's father, on poaching charges.

'His father was destroyed with all this." Mrs. Perez said. "My husband will never fish again. It was his life. He always fished. But after something like We have all suffered so much, but then it has brought the family to-

The family has filed a $15 million suit against the nation of islands in the boy's behalf, but Mrs. Perez said the government hasn't responded and a resolution is nowhere in sight. Since the shooting incident, the law under which the Bahamian patrol boats raided the fishing fleet has been tossed out by a Nassau court.

Dwindling Water Causes Concern

WASHINGTON (AP) - Signaling growing concern over dwindling water resources, many universities have asked for federal matching funds to support new research programs

Interior Secretary Cecil D. Andrus said Tuesday the government has received some 300 proposals from 45 universities seeking a total of $17 million for this

Of the last option, Adamson said: "This of the last option, Adamson said: "This is very rarely done, and we have a great deal of confidence, naturally, in the career attorneys of the department. But you also have to be concerned with the perceptions of those processes."

Because of his friendship with the president, Bell has disqualified himself from making decisions in the Lance-Carter warehouse case, and decisions are being made by Civiletti

It was Sensenbrenner's idea to appoint a special prosecutor. The congressman said a neutral person should consider how to proceed with the investigation be-cause of the friendship between Lance

"I think an independent person would general public," he said. He also said that because there are three investigations underway "there is the possibility that something could fall through the cracks."

Under a law passed by Congress last year, a majority of the minority — or Republican — members of the Judiciary Committee can request appointment of a special investigator in unusual cases.

CAIRO MEETING-Egyptian President Anwar Sadat greets U.S. Security Adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski, left, at Sadat's residence in Giza Tuesday. The two men discussed U.S. Proposals concerning a Mideast peace treaty. President Carter leaves

Washington today for Cairo where he will also confer with Sadat on Thursday and later go to Israel for talks with Prime Minister Menachem Begin. (AP Laserphoto)

Carter Eyes Train Trip To Alexandria

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Carter is seriously considering a train trip Friday from Cairo to Alexandria to draw out a massive show of Egyptian support for a peace treaty with Israel, a high White House official said.

The official also said Tuesday it won't be possible to conclude all formal action on a peace treaty during Carter's Mideast peace mission.

And he reluctantly confirmed that Carter discussed the possibility of a U.S.-Israeli mutual defense treaty "in passing" with Israeli Prime Minister Menachem

A train trip to Alexandria, through Egypt's most heavily populated region, could well draw crowds numbered in the millions. An identical trip by Richard

But bar association members who voted to support the court of record legislation are just as adamant.

Bar Votes Approval The bar voted to be in favor of it, period," said Tom Purdom, a member of the bar's legislative committee.

Despite rumors to the contrary, Purdom said his committee "has not considered calling for a revote and I don't expect it to Committee chairman Harvey Morton said, "the bar made a recommendation and I suppose that will stand."

Both Purdom and Morton said any agreement among lawyers on the bill is highly unlikely.

'Lawyers are a very independent lot,' Purdom said. "No matter what the bar decided on, there would be some lawyers who don't like the decision - that's just the way we are. Purdom, who said he would testify in support of the court of record bill before the legislature, attributed some of the opposition to "resistance to change," but defended the right of the attorneys to disagree with bar action. Agreement among all lawyers on a particular subject is an "impossibility." Purdom said.

Although Short refused to speculate on his position if attorneys remain irreparably split on the court of record, he predicted the bill will be approved by the

Short Sees Need

"I believe we're going to pass this court of record bill. I'm convinced it's needed and it's probably overdue," he said.

But, Short said he is "purposely delaying the bill" before allowing the Senate to vote on it to allow time for additional input on the legislation.

Short said he is sure agreement will be reached on changing the term of the judges from two to four years in the bill, and on selecting a jury in a way other than using the county jury pool.

"Lots of attorneys helped me make up my mind" in favor of the court of record, that "any law that is passed is not going to be agreeable to everyone As for claims a court of record would eliminate the right of appeal for some persons, Short said the "right is still there — we're not deleting it."

Once Short has received local input on changes which should be made to the legislation, he said it will "progress very

"It will fly out of the Senate like a bunch of black birds," he said.

Such a trip would provide a demonstration of support on the part of the Egyptian people for their president. Anwar Sadat, and for the peace initiative he began more than a year ago, the official

The official, asking not to be named, said a massive show of support for Sadat and of course, for Carter - could hardly fail to make an impression on the Israelis just before Carter hops from Egypt to Jerusalem in his bid to nail down a Mideast peace agreement

The official said no comparable crowd event is planned in Israel.

Carter leaves today on a peace mission to Egypt and Israel in hopes of getting agreement between the two old enemies. His schedule is being deliberately left open, but it now appears he will be in Egypt at least through Saturday before going to Israel.

The official said it would not be possible to complete all action on a formal peace treaty during Carter's trip, although he added that "if we resolve the differences and reach agreement, you'll all know about it.

Pact Goal Assumed

He insisted his remarks indicated "no change" in White House expectations, but it had previously been assumed that Carter's goal on his Mideast trip was a completed document; signed, sealed and delivered.

But the official insisted that there is no way to conclude a peace treaty and all that would take" in a single trip.

Technically, there is no way you could draft the whole thing," he said, adding that approval also is required from the Israeli cabinet and the Knesset, or parlia-

At first, he said it was "untrue" that Carter had offered Israel such a defense pact. He insisted: "The president didn't ask for it. We didn't offer it."

But later the official was forced to admit that such a U.S.-Israeli arrangement had been discussed "in passing" when Carter met Begin at the White House over the weekend.

What forced the modification was release of congressional testimony by Begin, who said Carter offered him a defense arrangement with the United

"I told him, 'yes, gladly," Begin informed the House Foreign Affairs Committee on Monday

Begin reiterated Israeli policy against stationing U.S. troops in Israel, and did not specify what kind of arrangement he discussed with Carter.

Aid Offer Denied The White House briefer also denied reports that the United States had offered $3.5 billion to fulfill a promise to aid Israel in replacing air strips it would be giving up in the Sinai under a peace treaty with Egypt. And he denied another report that the air bases would be turned over to the United States instead of to Egypt.

The official said such reports come from people who are either biased or ill informed, and said the reports hurt the chances of concluding a peace treaty. Carter will be accompanied on his peace mission by Defense Secretary Harold Brown, Pentagon officials said Tues-

Fees Proposed

For Attorneys

Of Mrs. Davis

FORT WORTH (AP) - Celebrated Houston defense lawyer Percy Foreman testified Tuesday that lawyers for Priscilla Davis should be awarded between $2.5 million and $4 million dollars for their work in the long and bitter Cullen Davis divorce case.

Mrs. Davis has asked State District Judge John Barron to order the Fort Worth industrialist to pay her legal fees in any divorce settlement.

Foreman said that her lawyers, Ronald Altman and Jerry Loftin, should be awarded fees "not less than $2.5 million to $3.5 million" for their work in the case. And that they should be awarded an additional "500,000 if the case is appealed to the Texas Supreme Court."

Davis' lawyer, Donn Fullenwider, contended Altman and Loftin tore up an intitial contract with Mrs. Davis and made a new one because their fees would have been limited under the first agreement.

But Altman countered that Fullenwidr's claim was "flat not true."

Altman and Loftin said they have worked more than 8,200 hours in the divorce case that is over four years old. And they said so far they have been paid

Division of property is the only issue in the divorce case that Loftin has described as the most complicated in Texas history. Mrs. Davis's attorneys claim she is due a portion of almost $100 million they contend Davis has realized in corporate profits from the mammoth family industrial empire during the couple's stormy 10-year marriage. Lawyers for Davis argue that the couple's extravagant lifesytle depleted Davis estate, and that only about $600,000 is available for a community property set-

House floor action would begin next Monday and probably extend through Wednesday, said Rep. Bob Davis, R-Irving. committee chairman.

The bill, HB1060, gives school districts $420.7 million in state funds to cover revenue losses from the bill and the Tax Relief Amendment itself.

Appraisals Rewarded Districts would receive dollar-for-dollar in 1979-80. But in 1980-81, districts that are above average in the accuracy of their appraisals, as measured against market values determined by the School Tax Assessment Practices Board, would receive more than they lost. Those below the state average in appraisal accuracy, would receive as little as 90 percent.

"It rewards those who have been making a good tax effort, and I think that is proper," Davis said. Key provisions of the bill would:

Exempt $10,000 of the market value of homes owned by the disabled and persons 65 and over from school taxes, on top of the $5,000 exemption all homeowners will receive and in addition to any other exemptions a school district might

Hospital Costs Battle Pledged

Carter pledged Tuesday to lead the fight against the hospital lobby and win passage of a hospital cost control bill that offers us one of our best opportunities to bring down the rate of overall inflabursement each district would get.

The administration's compromise proposal, softened considerably since its defeat in the House last year, would give hospitals until the end of 1979 to slow rising costs or face mandatory federal ceil-

The bill's "national voluntary limit" for this year would limit fee increases to 9.7 percent, a figure that could be relaxed if costs to the health-care industry exceeds expectations.

Industry Rejects Plan The administration said the new measure overcomes a key objection of the industry by permitting the "voluntary" limit to rise if the cost of goods and services purchased by hospitals, the so-called hospital market basket, increases more than the presently projected 7.9 percent. The industry, however, said it would still be caught in a squeeze and continued to reject the plan.

Carter, who announced the program in the Cabinet Room of the White House with several sponsors of the legislation, said it is similar to a measure that passed the Senate in the closing hours of the Congress last fall but died in the House. "The hospital lobby defeated it last year." the president said. "It's more determined and well financed this year, but the patience of the American people is wearing thin, and rightly so."

"Will Lead Fight"

This time, he said, "I will lead the fight on behalf of the American people. House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., immediately promised to work for passage of the measure, saying he hoped the House could vote on it by July 1.

O'Neill expressed optimism that the proposal would win approval.

During the earlier battle over hospital cost containment, the industry launched a voluntary program that it says succeeded in the first 11 months in reducing cost increases from 15.8 percent in 1977 to 12.9 percent last year. The industry says further reductions are possible but that the administration plan is too drastic and would threaten the quality of care patients receive. Example Cited Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr., who briefed reporters on the plan, said that over five years an average family of four could save $133 in insurance premiums, $37 in income taxes and $220 in Social Security payroll taxes through passage of the legis-excess of the mandatory limit. But the White House estimates that even if the voluntary goal isn't met, more than half the nation's 6,000 community hospitals would be exempt from mandatory controls because they are small, already operate within the limits or are located in states where average costs meet the guidelines.

Debt Limit Hike Cut By Panel

noyed with "show" votes on deficit spending, a House panel trimmed $6 billion from a proposed hike in the national debt ceiling Tuesday.

Last week, the House rejected a proposed $836 billion debt limit 222-194 de spite warnings from the White House that the government would probably exceed the current $798 billion ceiling on Friday, provoking a financial crisis.

In a straight party line vote on Tuesday, the Ways and Means Committee approved instead a proposed $830 billion debt limit. The measure was approved by a 23-12 margin. However, the ful House is not expected to vote until March 14 or 15. If approved by the House, the measure would also need

Debt Limits Set

Currently, the permanent debt limit is $400 billion and the temporary limit is $398 billion. That means that if a new temporary limit is not enacted by March 31. the debt ceiling would fall back to the permanent level, well below the government's needs for paying its bills. The dispute centers on the question of to what extent the Congress should authorize increasing the debt limit beyond the $798 figure.

Most of the committee's comments were directed against members who have used the debt limit bill as a way to register opposition to red-ink budgets or to make points with the voters back before finally enacting one Other committee members noted that failure to approve the higher debt limit could cost the government money and damage U.S. prestige abroad.

This is like writing checks on a bank and then saying 'I'm not going to put in the money," said Rep. Sam Gibbons, D-Fla. "I can't think of anything short of declaring war that the United States could do to unsettle the world situation than failing to pay its debts.

"Lose Prestige" Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., committee chairman, argued that failure to permit the government to pay its bills could cause it to "spend great sums of money and lose great amounts of prestige.' Richard Kelly. deputy Treasury secretary, told the committee that if the debt limit is exceeded, the government might be forced to dip into trust funds to pay its bills. That, he said, would mean losing interest that is collected on those The federal government holds trust funds in such areas as transportation

Britain Moving To Decriminalize Prostitution

LONDON (AP) — Prostitutes trooped into the public gallery of the House of Commons Tuesday and watched the assembled lawmakers approve the first stage of a bill to repeal laws that make street-walking a crime.

When the vote was announced, some of the girls started shouting and were hustled out by stewards. "The poor darlings didn't understand what was happening. They thought we'd lost," said the sponsor of the bill, economist and Parliament member Maureen Colquhoun.

Helen Buckingham, 39, a prostitute campaigning against police persecution of her profession, was so delighted she canceled a threat to name prominent men, including Parliament members, among the clients of prostitutes unless there were action. "There is no need now," she said.

By 130-50, the mother of parliaments ratified the first stage of the Protection of Prostitutes Bill. It was a "free-conscience" vote in which party discipline was not invoked. Opposition is expected to mount for the second reading, on May 18. If the bill survives, it goes to a committee, where amendments may be made, then returns for a final third vote.

Prostitution as such is not illegal in Britain. Advertising, procuring, soliciting and other activities deemed essential to the practice are against the law.

"I know my bill has very little chance of becoming law," Mrs. Colquhoun told areporter, "but I am very glad about the

The bill would protect prostitutes from police harassment, exploitation and victimization, abolish imprisonment for soliciting and get rid of the police description "common prostitute."

"That is very offensive to women," said Mrs. Colquhoun, a 50-year-old Labor Party member.

She said the law classifying two women living together as "a brothel" should be amended because it forces prostitutes into the hands of organized crime through dependence on pimps. "The women must be able to live to-

The opposition came from Northern Irish Protestant clergyman Ian Paisley.

"This is only the beginning of a scheme to undermine all the laws at the very heart of the moral fabric of our society, he thundered.

"I think that helped secure the vote for my bill," Mrs. Colquhoun said kindly. "It is time to stop persecuting prostitutes. They really are sexual therapists and very valuable members of the community.

To insure her fellow lawmakers knew the score. Mrs. Colquhoun turned up Monday night with 50 prostitutes. The committee room was packed.

Male legislators lined the walls to hear Miss Buckingham, a former journalist and founder of PLAN - Prostitution Laws Are Nonsense - say that Britain has two million women "on the game," as street-walking is called here.

"We are so penalized by the law we can hardly carry on our business," said the tall, aristocratic-looking Miss Buckingham, who has a teen-age son, a London apartment, a house in Italy and annual earnings assessed by income tax officials

"So long as men want to buy sex, the law can never effectively prevent women from selling it. We want prostitution de-criminalized, rather than legalized," said Miss Buckingham, who wore a neat, wool dress and a string of pearls.

She said legalization leads to con-trolled, red light districts "which still treat prostitutes as outsiders, tolerated only in certain places.

"If it's decriminalized," she said, "it would no longer be an offense, and we professionals could conduct our business in a more responsible way." She argued that the laws reflect an era when women were forced into prostitution by poverty. Miss Buckingham said she turned to prostitution after starting work as a journalist. "An editor made me realize that my services in bed were much more valuable than on paper," she related.

Miss Buckingham said their campaign was encouraged by prostitutes in Spain, who ended police harassment by threat-ening to name their better-known clients.

French prostitutes successfully cam-aigned against harsh laws threatened against them by saying they would name 200 top politicians who sought their fa-wound on, former Arts Minister Hugh Jenkins left the room. "I agree the law is very unhealthy about this," he said, "but I think it's something the government doesn't want to get into." As the House of Commons meeting

Mrs. Colquhoun introduced smartly dressed "Jennie," who said she is a fulltime prostitute in central London.

"We are therapists, psychiatrist mothers and helpers, fulfilling many di ferent roles," Jennie said. "Without the community would be in a bad way."

New Grading Rules Vex Teacher

Avalanche-Journal Staff

Teachers in the city's junior and senior high schools overwhelmingly object to a new grading procedure promulgated by the Lubbock Independent School District administration, a survey shows. Most instructors feel the administration-imposed grading standards are too lenient, according to the survey conducted by the Lubbock Classroom Teachers Association and Lubbock Educators As-

Specifically, teachers said they do not believe they should be required to pass a student whose course average is a .5 on a 4.0 scale.

Also, secondary teachers disagree with the new grading procedure because it does not allow them to differentiate between the student who refuses to do an assignment and the student who attempts an assignment but fails it.

Teachers believe the latter pupil should receive more credit than the former, the survey indicates.

The survey was conducted by a sixmember committee appointed by the classroom teachers' organization and the educators' group, which includes both teachers and administrators.

However, Mrs. Ginn and other teacher leaders talked with The Avalanche-Journal about the survey findings.

The new grading system, adopted in mid-December by the central administration, mandates a uniform procedure for averaging secondary students' grades at the end of each academic quarter.

Under the scale, each letter grade recorded in the teacher's grade book will be assigned a numerical value. An A will equal a 4: a B, a 3: a C, a 2; a D, a 1; and

Each student's set of numbers then will be averaged. If the pupil's average point equivalent falls between 4.0 and 3.5, the student will receive an overall A in the course for that quarter; between 3.4 and 2.5. a B: between 2.4 and 1.5, a C: between 1.4 and .5, a D; and below .5, an F.

The new grading scale was instituted for the sake of consistency among the citv's 14 public junior and senior high schools, said Dr. E.C. Leslie, assistant superintendent for administration.

Previously, grading scales varied greatly from school to school and teacher to teacher. Some teachers used 4.0 scales, others used 5.0 scales. Some distinguished between different kinds of F's. And teachers varied in their cutoffs for translating point equivalents into letter

The joint review committee was authorized by Leslie after the two professional association expressed concern about the grading procedure.

The committee polled secondary teachers on various staements.

The first was, "Work not turned in should receive a lower grade than work unsuccessfully attempted." Almost 80 percent of the teachers strongly agreed with that statement, and most others agreed to a lesser extent.

Teachers are saying here that they would like to be able to differentiate between the child who does nothing and the child who tries but does unsatisfactory work," Mrs. Ginn said.

Another statement was, "Credit for a course should reflect some accomplish-high standard." Sixty-five percent of the responding teachers strongly agreed, and the remainder also marked some degree of concurrence.

In this age of accountability, we need to require students to demonstrate a certain level of proficiency," Mrs. Ginn said. Most teachers seem to feel that a .5 on a 4.0 scale is not enough evidence of such proficiency, she added.

Teachers were also polled on general grading philosophy. They were asked to respond to this statement: "Students and parents have the right to know the basis upon which grades are determined. And students have the right to know what their grades are at reasonably frequent

Mrs. Ginn said 59 percent of the secondary teachers strongly agreed with that statement, and almost all others agreed to a lesser extent.

Sometimes parents get the impression we are trying to keep secrets from them "said Tony Compton, Evans Junor High assistant principal and Lubbock Educators Association president. "That's

Citizen Anti-Crime Funding Sought

By SYLVIA TEAGUE

Avalanche-Journal Staff The Crime Prevention Task Force won't be asking for a federal grant to fund the group's actitivities, but it will be looking to Lubbock County citizens for financial assistance. The task force made that decision Tuesday after learning that an application for a Law Enforcement Assistance Administration grant would obligate Lubbock's city and county governments to pay $100,000 a year to keep the crime prevention program going.

Hal Hensley, administrator of the district attorney's office, said the threemember finance subcommittee could not recommend that the task force seek the tederal grant because "we feel it would be committing the county and city governments to an unreasonable financial

Another subcommittee member. Lubback County juvenile probation officer Lloyd Watts, explained the 15 LEAA grants of between $200,000 to $300,000 each are intended to be "seed money"

A project could be funded for a maximum of three years, Watts said, but "at some time later the money will be withdrawn and the project must be continued with funding from local govern-

Hensley suggested using contributions from the "private sector" to fund task force activities over the next six months, then "look at the progress we've made and determine if we want to pursue the grant next year.

He noted the grant money wouldn't have become available until October, had the task force decided to seek the funds. so "we would have had to call on private sources anyway if we wanted to launch the program immediately.

Mal Cleland, Better Business Bureau director, urged subcommittee chairmen to attend next Tuesday's 7 a.m. meeting with "concrete plans" and estimates of costs to implement those plans. Then the task force should work up a budget, anticipating funding and expenditures, he said. Task force members also decided to use the Chamber of Commerce's Crime Abatement Program telephone number as the clearinghouse number for Lubbock County crime prevention activities, provided the chamber agrees. The group set April 1 as the target date to launch a countywide program of markg valuables

North-South reached the only game contract that had chance of success, in spite of their 28 high-card points. Even with a strong eight-card spade fit, game in spades was a poor proposi-tion. Nevertheless, it would take good defense to defeat the contract.

The major problem with he North-South holdings was the extreme duplication in the heart suit. Another problem was that their hands had mirror distribu tion. It was no fault of North South that they could not discover this in the bidding.

After East won the first heart trick with the ace and returned a heart, it was obvious to everyone that declarer had started with the king-queen doubleton.

Declarer drew three rounds of trump, ending in dummy, and led a club. East played the nine, declarer the ace and it was up to West to make the key play. West already knew declarer had started with four spades to the ace-king and king-queen doubleton in hearts. The other distribution was almost certainly four-three between clubs and diamonds. Because declarer had not taken a club finesse. West mentally assigned the queen of clubs to his partner.

The most important question was the location of the jack of diamonds. If East had that card any defense would defeat the contract. But if declarer had the jack of diamonds, West would have to avoid being end played with his club king.

After all this thought West dropped the king of clubs on declarer's ace Eventually, declarer lost two club tricks and a diamond trick to go with the ace of hearts and went down one.

Some time ago. I read in your column of a way to clean tough stains from a ceramic tea pot. I misplaced the item. Would you please print it again? Marge Philhower

DEAR MARGE

Would be my pleasure, especially since so many others have the same problem. And it's not only teapots, but coffeemakers, plastic containers of one sort or another, thermos bottles, etc., that develop these stains. Most folks find them hard to remove without buying some special product or resorting to rather drastic

But here is a simple and inexpensive way to remove coffee and tea stains. Just till the container with hot water, dump in a couple of tablespoons of dishwasher detergent, stir, and let sit overnight. Those stains will disappear like magic.

All you'll have to do the next morning is rinse the container thoroughly before using. - Heloise

When you purchase glassware that has cardboard dividers in the box, save the

The boxes the glasses come in are stronger and will protect those precious decorations better.

Your hint made me think of the cardboard boxes various bottles are packaged in. These have heavy dividers between each bottle or jar and one box would hold a lot of ornaments.

Of course, you would want to place layers of newspaper etc., between each ornament to prevent breakage or marring.

Pick these boxes up at your supermarket or any package store. - Heloise

At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK

I read something pretty frightening the other day. A story in a magazine said the cost of building had become so exorbitant that we would soon enter into a doit-yourself boom. It made my flesh crawl. I didn't raise sons to send them off to another do-it-yourself boom. Why does it have to be this way? Are we never to have a period in history where there is no wounding or maiming? No blood or no pain?

I remember when their father served in the do-it-yourself boom of 1949 How my eyes glistened with pride when I saw him in his coveralls. How courageous he looked standing there with his new tool box under his arm...ready to defend our home against warps, drafts, peeling paint, leaks and deterioration. If I knew then what I know now, I would never have let him enlist.

Do-it-yourselfers are naive. They be-lieve the pamphlets that start off, "You can install a new ceiling for pennies" or the pictorial teaser that shows a man digging a hole in his yard at 10 a.m. and 15 people splashing in a 35-foot pool when the sun is setting.

The basic training of most men in home chores is a simple exercise called hanging a picture. Many men consider this a sexual violation of a wall. They do not want to make a mistake. They measure the width 15 times, depth eight times, make a small mark with a pencil, recheck the measurements one more time, put the wrong bit on the drill and discover within two minutes that they have missed the stud by three inches. The memory of that hole in the wall haunts them the rest of their lives.

From there on in, it's just one confrontation after another. I watched my husband go through the Dragging Door Campaign where a door had to be shaved when we got a shag carpet, the Battle of Running Toilet where the float he had been bending broke off in his hand, and The Contact Lens Down the Shower Drain Skirmish, not to mention the Grape Wallpaper in the Kitchen Encounter where there was a talk of a trial separation until he could figure out that grapes grew down.

I saw a young couple the other day examining a tile kit for the bathroom. He was so young. He didn't know yet about the long hours, trips to the emergency room for treatment, the costliness of a nfistake. I whispered in his ear, "A do-itvourself boom only seem glamorous. Trust me, wait until you're drafted!" Copyright 1979, Field Enterprises, Inc.

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

DR. PAUL E. RUBLE

Dear Dr. Ruble: My son, now six, was born with Hirschsprung's disease. He had bowel problems, and at eight months they performed a colostomy on him to give his bowel a rest. It was four times normal size. At 16 months they removed the colostomy and reconnected the colon.

At first he had no control and had accidents. At four he began to have trouble having movements. Barium enemas and X-rays showed nothing wrong. I have tried fresh fruit and vegetables, bran, and mineral oil. After two or three days of this he starts having accidents again.

The doctor suggested giving him an enema daily for six weeks and to allow him plenty of time in the bathroom. He told me not to worry, that he would outgrow this. Do you think I am doing right. and do you have any other suggestions?

It sounds as though your son has had excellent and standard care for this congenital (at birth) defect. You were fortunate to discover it soon enough for the surgery to be done effectively. The results are excellent in about 80 percent of cases. The X-ray reports are encouraging.

This problem begins with a defect in the nerves and muscles serving a section of the colon (large bowel). As a result peristalsis (waves of bowel motion) decrease and constipation results as well as enlargement of the bowel. An early sign is a distended abdomen. In some youngsters this can be controlled by diet alone (high residue), stool softeners and lubri cants until the bowel adjusts.

When all else fails the colostomy (a bowel opening through the body to allow collection of contents) is tried.

Don't overdo the laxatives. Often the biggest hurdle at this point is to find the ideal amount of bowel stimulation - not too much, not too little. Until this is achieved accidents can be expected.

They should end in time. Be patient and follow the doctor's suggestions. The enema stimulation idea sounds like a good one. While Hirschsprung's disease is not very common, it should be investigated in any case of stubborn constipa-

Dear Dr. Ruble: What do you know about the aloe plant? I understand it has medicinal value used externally on sores or internally for stomach pain, as with diverticulosis, also with some types of arthritis. I heard where it cured a person of arthritis of the hands. Is there any truth in this? - C.C.C.

The aloe vera plant is used in making a number of lotions. It is an ingredient in some cosmetics - lipsticks, creams and skin ointments. In combination with Benzoin, it is used as a tincture for the skin.

It'should be limited to external uses, such as applications for skin. The active ingredient (aloin) is extremely potent as a laxative and may cause stomach or kidney disturbance taken internally. And it does absolutely nothing for arthritis. Dear Dr. Ruble: Should a woman with diabetes be leery of the birth control pill?

- Mrs. T.M.

She should. Hormones in the birth control pills may elevate blood sugar and may necessitate adjustments in diabetes medicine. A recent article in Diabetes Forecast, published by the American Diabetes Association, suggests women diabetics opt for the mini-dose birth-control pill. However, since the chances of becoming pregnant while on the low-dose pills are increased, she might better switch to another form of birth control entirely, especially if she is having difficulties with the pills.

The Pill may also cause a vaginal yeast infection, to which some diabetics are more prone than others.

Dear Dr. Ruble: A few weeks ago my doctor removed a cancer from the back of my neck. He recently notified me that he had gotten a report back that he had removed all of it. He said I am OK now. How is this determined? - Mrs. R.S.

When cancerous tissue is removed many sections of it are studied under a microscope by the pathologist, an expert at this. In your case the examination showed that the cancerous tissue was sur-

Consumers Confused About Diet

SAN ANTONIO (Special) — Although public interest in food and nutrition is at an all-time high, most consumers are more confused and frightened about food safety and overall nutrition than ever before, according to a national expert on

Dr. Gilbert Leveille, a Michigan State University nutrition professor, said in a recent issue of "Food Technology" that it is increasingly clear that consumers need help in sorting out claims about nutrition

Perhaps first and foremost, according to Dr. Leveille, consumers should realize that the American food supply is safe.

"The American diet is recognized o be unparalleled in the world today in terms of quality and safety," he said. "To be sure, we need to strive for greater assurance of safety, but consumers need to know that they are not currently being subjected to any significant risks through

Many people, according to Dr. Leveille, have heard and read that the American diet is-responsible, in large measure, for

Over the years, according to Leveille, the American diet "has not deteriorated and probably has improved significant-

Dr. Leveille added that the American food supply contains all of the necessary nutrients required for good health. He also said, however, that consumers need to be educated on food selections in order to receive those nutrients. Dr. Leveille strongly urges consumers to balance their diets by making daily selections from the Four Food Group system. The groups are milk, meat, vege tables and fruits, and breads and cereals He also recommends that consumers reg-ulate their caloric intake and physical ac-tivities so they can maintain and achieve a desirable body weight.

Other recommendations include: plac-ing more emphasis on nutrition education: encouraging the food industry to de-velop more products to assist consumers in meeting nutritional goals; and helping consumers reduce fat intake by promoting such things as selecting lean cuts and trimming fat.

HOUSTON (AP) — A fired police officer used a hand of a prosecutor Tuesday to demonstrate how a fellow officer placed a "throw-down" gun in the hand of a youth who was shot to death in a 1977 high speed chase with police.

William E. Byrd said he supplied the gun, a long-barreled .22 pistol he said he had been using only to shoot rabbits since finding it in a patrol car in 1974.

Byrd testified in the federal court trial of three former policemen who are charged with violating the civil rights of the youth, Randall A. Webster, 17, Shreveport, La., at the end of the chase that began with a report a van had been stolen from a car dealer. Byrd was fired last April after entering a guilty plea to a charge of knowing a felony had been committed but failing to

Former Officer Shows Evidence Set-Up

Byrd testified he arrived at the scene after the shooting and was told by Holloway that Mays had struck Webster on the head with a gun and the gun discharged.

The witness said he told Holloway and other officers he had a long-barreled pistol in his patrol car and the officers decided to use his gun because it "probably would look better because of what was put out over the air." Earlier testimony had indicated Mays had mentioned, during a radio report to a dispatcher, some-

The plucky fowl, some battle-scarred from their fighting matches, were re-leased from the Lubbock Animal Shelter about 2:30 p.m., shelter director Tom Trombley said.

The roosters had been in the pen since about 3 p.m. Sunday when Lubbock County sheriff's deputies, Department of Public Safety officers. Texas Rangers and a Texas Tech policemen raided the gambling activity in a barn, located on a dirt road about 112 miles east of the city just south of U.S. 62-82.

The surprise visit from authorities also resulted in a 15-year-old youth and 24 men being placed behind bars - at the county jail.

Sheriff C.H. "Choc" Blanchard said pictures were taken of the birds to be used as evidence in court and then the cocks were turned over to lawyer representing defendants in the case.

Trombley, however, said "the owners were down here getting them with their lawyers.

The roosters, trained to do battle against each other for the purpose of gambling, can be worth between $250 and $1.500, according to Trombley.

The director said the shelter had never housed any gamecocks. but "I was going to have my men build a pen for them."

They were at the animal shelter and that's no place for a chicken," Blanchard

Parks Policy Manual Approved

Following lengthy discussion over a policy concerning the use of city park facilities for political functions. the Parks and Recreation Board Tuesday voted approval of the proposed Parks and Recreation Department policy manual.

The manual, a formal presentation of parks policies, was accepted with the understanding that board member Adolphus Cleveland could later present an amendment pertaining to the political policy in ques-

Discussion centered around the definition of political functions and Cleveland's contention that the policy "leaves too much room to allow popular candidates to use the centers and keeps unpopular candidates

Section A2 of the manual states that "Reservations for political functions may be made under the follow-

1. All candidates or sides of an issue are invited to participate.

2. The meeting is sponsored by a third party.

3. The public is invited. 4. Seventy-two (72) hour public notice is given."

Cleveland argued that the recent town hall meeting conducted by U.S. Rep. Kent Hance in park facilities did not meet the parks department definition of political functions. He said that the meeting was not simply an information forum to serve a community purpose which is alThe partment does not permit the use of parks facilities for political rallies and candidate speeches.

Cleveland said he does not believe the policy guarantees equal access to parks facilities to all candi-

Parks director John Alford said the problem "all boils down to the definition of political functions."

Jim Weston, director of community facilities, said,
"I think we're talking about semantics and we could talk it to death. I think this wording is as safe as we can get. From a city staff standpoint, I don't think people will be discriminated against."

The manual was passed with an additional amendment concerning the use of facilities for religious functions. The board amended the original policy which prohibits use of facilities for religious functions to allow facility use by religious groups for recreational purposes such as banquets.

The board also approved a request by the Sounthwest Little League to construct a Pee Wee field at Maxey Park with the provision that the organization finance construction of the lights and fence needed.

The little league organization would construct the park without lights and then will attempt fundraising to subsidized the cost of lights in the future.

Board chairman Henry Huneke and Alford both said that the department has no funds for the lights and fence, but had no objections to the Maxey Park site.

David Abbott, president of Southwest Little League estimated the cost of the fence at $956. Alford noted that the cost of lights would run about $8-10,000.

The diamond will be located south of the major than the cost of the major located at Manage Park.

The diamond will be located south of the major league field at Maxey Park.

Ken Kerr of Kerr Construction, who has agreed to landscape the diamond, said that existing grass would be kept so "they can play as soon as possible," and that "little material would be dug up." He said that sandfill would be hauled in only for base pads. In other business, the board granted a request by Phi Delta Theta Social Fraternity to sponsor a softball tournament at Mose Hood Park to raise funds for the American Cancer Society. Brazilian Beans In Poor Shape

By GRAHAM WILLIAMS

SANTO ANGELO, Brazil (Reuters) -The recovery in Rio Grande do Sul's soybean plants during the past few weeks may be misleading as far as crop prospects are concerned, sources from a number of cooperatives in the state said.

Around Santo Angelo, one of Brazil's main growing regions, the yellowish tields of early February have now all turned green after the adequate rain recently, and from the air particularly, look fairly uniform and promising.

But as experts from the local Cotrisa Cooperative pointed out, closer inspection on the ground soon shows there is a lot of difference between early and late variety plants, that many of the former have been stunted and have less beans than normal, and that generally the plants are less bushy than they should be, despite good leaf growth lately.

Santo Angelo is generally considered to be one of the worst hit areas in Rio Grande do Sul, the state worst hit by this year's drought in southern Brazil.

By this time of the year, the early variety_fields should be like a carpet, and the plants waist-high, making it difficult to; walk through them, the Cotrisa sources said.

Instead, there are wide gaps between the rows, and the plants are generally not more than 30 centimetres high. The rows are broken where some have died. and few have more than 20 pods on the undernourished stems and branches, instead of two or three times that amount in a normal year.

Some of the pods on a typical early variety plant are mature, while others are almost flat even beans within the same pod vary from yellow to green.

Some pods have undersized mature beans in them, and a few have burst open due to the effect of rain followed by hot sun, the Cotrisa sources said. These sort of features can be found every year, they added. Only this year they are more frequent than last year, and a lot more so than normal. The Cotrisa sources said they thought the rain had been of almost no benefit to early varieties, which cover 33,000 of the cooperative's 310,000 hectares this year. (One hectare is 2.471 acres.)

The new pods which have formed since the rain started will not mature in time for the harvest, and neither is the good new leaf growth of much use at this late stage, they said. There is even a risk the new pods will drain those now ripening of part of the plants' strength, they added.

In places it will not be worth harvesting early variety fields, which will be left until later in the year when wheat planting preparations begin, the Cotrisa sources said.

A few fields will not even give back the seed put into them, estimated at 70-90 kilos per hectare, they said.

Yields of around 300 kilos per hectare are needed to cover annual production costs, as opposed to total costs including land, machinery and infrastructure in vestments, they added.

Bean samples from the minimal areas already harvested around Santo Angelo show a higher percentage of impurities this year than last year, and are coming out very dirty from the harvester.

This is a result of the pods growing closer to the ground this year than last year even, and the problems this causes for harvesting, especially where soil erosion has made the ground uneven. The beans also tend to be slightly shri-velled and mishappen with few healthy looking specimens, although less marked features of this sort last year had no particular effect on oil quality, the Cotrisa sources noted.

The first fields harvested in the area are yielding around 700 kilos per hectare, they added.

There the plants are slightly undersized for this time of the year. But still growing taller while the early varieties The flowering, which in the early varieties was hit by the dry weather, is in progress now, and therefore escaped. There is good new leaf growth, which will still be of benefit to these later types and their bean formation, the Cotrisa sources said. Even so, the Cotrisa sources said they do not expect normal yields of around 1.600 kilos per hectare from the late vagreatest benefit to these types, but the drought during thir early growing period has left its mark, they said.

The condition of the medium varieties, which cover about 145,000 hectares, is somewhere between the other two types, and difficult to generalise about, they added.

Cotrisa currently estimates its overall yields this year, will average 906 kilos per hectare, down from 914 last year and 748 in 1977.

This year an estimated 13 percent of its area has not been planted or failed to germinate, whereas this hardly happened last year, they added.

Farmers have planted a few odd fields since the rain started, but even if these mature yields will be low because they were planted well out of season, and they will not make any difference to the crop size, the sources said.

Sources from the Erexin Cooperative. which is in the northeast of the state. said in Porto Alegre meanwhile they are achieving similar results to Cortisa with the first fields harvested, averaging around 650 kilos per hectare.

The sources said their misfortune this year was to have planted 80 percent of their area with early seed.

This gave the best results last year, and with little wheat in the area, with which soybeans are often doublecropped, farmers planted as early as possible they said.

Sources from the Nao Me Toque Cooperative near Campo Real, one of the thought to have been least affected generally look good, are of normal height, and no fields have been left unsown.

But the plants are again not as thick as they should be, and the very start of the harvest there is only yielding 720-1,200 kilos per hectare, they said.

Even the late varities there have no chance of reaching last year's yields. they said.

The fecotrigo, sources said the northwestern missoes region, which includes Santo Angelo, and the northern Alto Uruguai region seen to have the worst affected. These account for roughly half the state's estimated area of abut 3.3 million hectares.

around Passo Fundo. Carazinho and Campo Real, seems to be the least seriously affected.

The Northeast around Vacaria and Lagoa Vernelha is not as good as the Planalot Medio, but better than Missoes, while the less important centre south is fair to the east of Santa Maria, and less good to the west.

Cachoeira do Sul in the east centresouth is one spot which hardly seems to have been affected, the Fecotrigo sources added.

The Fecotrigo sources said it is difficult to estimate for the state as a whole what percentage this year has been planted with the various types of beans, although more early types were planted this season than last.

Although one could say most regions have between 20-40 percent early varieties, there are exceptions on both sides. One result of the damage to early varieties this year is that this could cause a shortage of seed of this sort for next year, they added. State Gov. Synval Guazzelli said late last week Rio Grande do Sul will lose more than 30 percent of its soybeans, which should leave a crop of around 4 million metric tons. This is a mid-point roughly of the wide range of trade estimates circulating on the state crop. There are, however, some people who remain optimistic about the recovery capacity of the medium and late variety beans and are thinking in terms of nearer 5 million metric tones.

The Official Statistics Institute of the Federal Government (IRGE) puts last year's Rio Grande do Sul crop at 4.5 million metric tons.

While the weather has been almost ideal for soybeans in Rio Grande do Sul in the last few weeks, a number of sources pointed out one factor to watch.

seasonably low at around 10 degrees centigrade recently. This is not serious so far, but any fur-

Nighttime temperatures have been un-

PLAINS AGRICULTURE

BY DUANE HOWELL

WHEAT PRODUCERS HAVE PROPOSED changes in plans for a special haying and grazing plan for 1979-crop wheat.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture has announced a proposal to allow producers of wheat, feed grains and cotton to "hay or graze-out" up to 40 percent of their normal crop acres as wheat pasture, deduct the graze-out acres from total normal crop acres before figuring the crop set-aside, and maintain eligibility for payments equal to those that might be paid on "harvested acres."

Otis Harman of Tulia, president of the Texas Wheat Producers Association, and the TWPA has been working with the USDA even prior to the 1979 wheat said the TWPA has been working with the USDA even prior to the 1979 wheat set-aside program announcement last fall to get those provisions.

And now the TWPA still is trying to get some modifications during the 10-day public comment period which ends Thursday.

"WE REGRET THAT USDA IS WAITING to this late date to announce the program." Harman said. "as many cattle already have been contracted for March delivery, precluding their grazing out wheat and having a May delivery

Bill Nelson. TWPA executive vice president, pointed out that the USDA pro-Bill Nelson. TWPA executive vice president, pointed out that the USDA proposal simply calls for the producer to receive "any deficiency payment which might be made as if harvested for grain." There might not be any deficiency payment, he pointed out, depending upon grain market prices.

Under last year's program, the producer could receive "50 cents per bushel or the level of deficiency payments," whichever was higher. And one-half of the 50-cent minimum was paid in advance at signup time.

"This advance interest-free operating capital gave added incentive to participate in the program." Nelson said.

THE TWPA HAS REQUESTED THAT THESE provisions be reinstated in the 1979 program prior to the expected final announcement Friday.

Nelson said the association also is requesting that "year-around grazing" be permitted on set-aside acres and that this be announced at the same time for 1979 and future crops.

Harman said the combination of the current three-year farmer-held reserve of 411 million bushels, the one-year loan program of another 200-plus million bushels, and the farmer-trade held open stocks of approximately 500 million bushels— a total of 1.1 million bushels of wheat on hand— "is too much wheat as we approach another 2-billion-plus bushel harvest." Accordingly, he said, all farmers who can should "participate in the production adjustement set-aside and special grazing programs to reduce price-de-pressing supplies and strengthen the sagging markets."

By enrolling prior to the April 30 deadline, he pointed out, producers will become eligible for price deficiency payments and disaster protection.

Most Cattle Futures Close Limit Down

week on profit taking and other selling after the new historic high of 91.90 was paid for March on Monday. Traders feared consumer resistance following record high cattle and beef prices.
There have been 92 deliveries thus far.

Cash feeder cattle were up $5 to off $2.50 with the best top $139 per hundredweight at San Antonio. About 6.-600 head are expected today at the major terminals. Hog futures closed 95 lower to 2 higher in heavy trade of 10,822 lots. August was the weakest after dropping 110 with only nearby April ranging higher. Earlier, distant April gained 40.

Limit level declines in other meat pits brought pressure as did heavy hog runs and lower prices. However, selling was partially braked by the discount under rash hogs and cattle futures.

Wholesale hams were unchanged to up cent at 88 to 92 cents a pound, f.o.b river. Cash hogs were off 25 to $2.25 with the best top $53.25 per hundredweight, which is a two-month low at Peoria, Kill was 331,000 head. Receipts at the major markets today are exp to total 25,500 head.

Grain Futures CHICAGO (AP) - Soybean futures were mostly higher Tuesday on the Chiago Board of Trade, corn was mostly gher and wheat futures were mixed. Reports indicating lower-than-expected supplies and strong demand for soybeans offset the bearish effects of lower silver futures, analysts said. The government said after the close Monday soybean exports last week at 19.6 million bushels were about 53 percent higher than the previous week. Another government report showed domestic supplies of soybean oil at the end of January at 945.9 million pounds were some 55 million pounds below trade estimates. Wheat exports at 18.8 million bushels rose 71 percent, and corn exports at 35.9

million bushels rose by 4 percent. Buying by exporter interests continued to fuel rumors of a large soybean sale to the Soviet Union, presumably to supplement vegetable oil supplies from its weather-damaged sunflower seed crop.

WOMEN WHO KNEW JESUS

Anna Ready For Exalting Role

The aged Anna was one of the saints in the Jerusalem Temple. She was familiar no doubt with Isaiah's prophecy that the redeemer of Israel would come, that his life would be regarded as a tragic failure but that his death would be seen by God as a glorious sugcess.

From the moment the child Jesus was brought into the Temple by his parents. Anna recognized him as the redeemer of whom Isajah had spoken.

The devout Anna was prepared for her exalting role, for she had fasted night and day to give thanks to God for sending this child.

a, who lived for others, typified the Jerusalem Temple an at her noblest. She was one of those rare beings who finds her main reason for existence in praising God. Anna probably lived in the Temple after she became a vidow. If she did not live there, she spent more time there than anywhere else. She hid there in times of trouble, sang to God there in times of joy.

Second In A Series

It is not surprising that Anna was the first to declare Christ as the long-awaited redeemer of her people. She had opened a door for Christ's New Testament church to come.

Anna makes us certain that devout women have a heritage in religion "to regain, develop and carry forward," as stated so well by Margaret Brackenbury Crook in her 1964 book. Women and Religion.

Mrs. Crook, who has taught Old Testament studies at universities in the United States and abroad, is well prepared to speak on women's innate life-conserving capacities and intuitive insights to meet the needs of religion today.

She tells us: "The Universe has outrun our computations We are being invited to move to new experiences and new attempts at definition of God's part and our own. We stand at the opening of a new era in religion.

We have to win our emancipation from bondage to ancient concepts without losing our sense of being at home in the universe. ... This. too, is part of our heritage. Although our predecessors were naive about it, they were wholeheartedly at home in the universe as they knew it.

"God has not changed since the early Temple experience of Anna, but we have changed. And we must be willing to share in molding the spiritual life of our time, for women and men bear the same responsibility.

"Our service may seem infinitesimal, like the ripple of a tiny rock thrown into a deep sea, but that ripple can reach a wave and wash into a breaker.

cans will have to celebrate this St. Patrick's Day without a shamrock from the Old Sod because of a postal strike in the Emerald Isle.

The strike by some 13,000 post office workers has stopped all mail service and blocked the export of thousands of sprigs of the three-leafed plant traditionally worn by the Irish in honor of their patron saint on March 17.

But the shamrock trade is only one industry hit by the strike which began on Feb. 19. Businessmen who were hoping to export a record $6.5 billion from the Irish Republic this year are furious.

"If the government fails to act quickly, exports worth $20 million per day will be exposed to risk," said John Kenna, head of the Confederation of Irish Industry, the country's major employers' group.

'And the government's promotional effort to create 30,000 new jobs in industry this year will be damaged at a time when competition for foreign investment is very sharp.

The strikers, who include mailmen, telephone operators, sorters and postal counter clerks, say they'll stay out until the government comes up with more money. Postal workers currently earn about $125 for a 40-hour, five-day week.

The strikers, members of the Post Office Workers' Union, want increases of up to 37 percent. The government has offered up to 9 percent. The government says there will be no talks until the strikers return to work

We will stay out until the government reaches agreement with us," said Terry Quinlan, general secretary of the union.

Because of the strike it is impossible to make operator-assisted telephone calls, which cuts off service to thousands of rural residents. About 20 percent of Ireland's phones are not yet linked to automatic exchanges.

For nearly 200,000 telephone users outside Dublin and Shannon, international calls are impossible because they are not connected to the international trunk system and depend on operators in Dublin. One young Dublin real estate agent, Michael Farrell, spoke of the frustration of running a business during the strike. "I cannot run my business efficiently," he said. "How can I get in touch with all my clients, tell them of auctions, house sales, property deals. The whole system here is a big joke. "I started my business two years ago, and after 18 months of begging and scraping I finally got a phone installed three months ago," Farrell said. "Since then hardly a week has passed when there hasn't been some disruption in the service - because of strikes or the antiquated system has broken down. The Dublin Chamber of Commerce has set up an emergency "clearing house" system for mail. It has rented a downtown office for a sort of central post office where businessmen collect mail and leave it for collection by other firms. Delivery van services are doing a 24hour business and can't handle any new

First Lady Slates Variety Of Trips

WASHINGTON (AP) - Rosalynn Carter has scheduled separate trips to New York, Connecticut and Florida in the next several weeks, the White House announced Tuesday.

The new trip plans come on top of several other previously announced trips, leading to speculation that the first lady is stepping up her travel schedule in preparation for President Carter's re-election effort.

Mrs. Carter took an extremely active part in her husband's last campaign. She said recently she does not intend to campaign 18 hours a day but will take a major role nonetheless.

The new trips include

- An appearance at the Christian Life Commission of the Southern Baptist Convention in Orlando, Fla., on March

Accepting a Distinguished National Service Award from the Jewish Theological Seminary in New York on March 29.

Welding her initials into the keel plate of the Trident missile submarine Georgia in Groton, Conn., on April 7. The keel-laying ceremony will be held at General Dynamics Corp.'s Electric Boat Division. At the same time, Sen John Glenn will christen the Ohio, the first Trident missile sub.

Queen's Costly Arabian Gifts May Never Be Seen By Subjects

LONDON (AP) - Queen Elizabeth II is home from the shores of Araby with a fortune in gems, but Buckingham Palace says her loyal subjects may not get a glimpse of them. The queen, already one of the world's richest women, reportedly was astound-ed by the splendor of the presents showered on her by oil-rich rulers in the Persian Gulf during her 18-day tour of seven countries which ended last Friday.

But a palace spokeswoman, asked Monday about suggestions that everyone would be delighted to have a peep at the wonders, said cautiously: "We haven't heard that there is to be a show." The queen brought some of the gifts home with her by plane. "The heavier ones are coming on Britannia, the royal yacht," the palace said.

The 45 journalists accompanying the queen said she frequently was overwhelmed and even embarrassed by the munificence of her hosts. Every day when she returned to the Britannia, more treasure had been added to the trove of precious stones, gem-encrusted ornaments and rich carpets.

Queen Victoria, the famous great-greatgrandmother of Elizabeth, didn't travel much. In her day, as paintings of the period confirm, princes of the far-flung empire came to London bearing gifts, and knelt before their empress to present

Nowadays, oil and other vital interests have reversed things. Elizabeth's tour was the first ever by a reigning British sovereign to Arabia, and the rulers showed their delight.

In Dubai the queen gasped. It happened when Sheikh Rashid presented her with a 2-foot square box containing a necklace of sapphires and surrounded by 200 diamonds, with matching earrings.

300 diamonds, with matching earrings There also were two model camels sculptured in gold, standing beside an 18-inch high golden palm tree with pearls and rubies for dates. Nobody really knows the value of all the gifts. Reports talk of anything up to $6 million, and the presents are the queen's personal property. She won't have to give a reckoning to the customs; Her Majesty's Customs says gifts from heads of state to the head of state aren't

And "she wouldn't put jewelry into a museum unless it was utterly unwearable," Buckingham Palace said.

In Kuwait, the queen's first stop, Emir Sheikh Jaber launched the treasure train with three strands of pearls as big as marbles. The queen, reputedly worth a billion dollars and herself the owner of no mean jewel collection, put on the choker for dinner and said to her entourage, "Don't you think my pearls are lovely?"

Emir Sheikh Khalifa of Qatar gave her a knee length necklace of gold that an awed British reporter said looked "like chain-mail." Also: an oyster shell containing a huge pearl, a lapis lazuli fruit bowl supported by prancing golden horses studded with diamonds, a five-strand pearl and diamond necklace, a gold and diamond watch and a gold handbag.

The queen collects a lot of things on every trip. Past gifts have included a 110-foot totem pole, a painting of a power foot totem pole, a painting of a power station and a mink coat from Canada, a bronze cauldron and an umbrella from Australia, a Nepalese yak's hair fly-whisk and talking drums from Ghana.

Everything is catalogued, stored and looked after so that it can be displayed whenever the donor visits England. The queen gave her Arabian hosts silver salvers engraved with a picture of her yacht. They reportedly cost $30,000 each from Plante and Johnson, court silversmiths of Bury Street, St. James's, and the queen was said to have brought seven of them along. Sheiks' wives received signed photographs and other small gifts and a book on Bedouin jewelry.

Little New Appears In Video Ratings

NEW YORK (AP) - Mary Tyler Moore was far from a smashing success in her most recent TV incarnation, but Stockard Channing, a relative newcomer to the medium, did quite well, figures from the A.C. Nielsen Co. show.

Both "Stockard Channing in Just Friends" and "The Mary Tyler Moore Hour" premiered on CBS Sunday night as the networks sought a return to more normal programing

February was perhaps the most competitive month in television history, with programs like "Roots: The Next Generations" on ABC scratching and clawing for viewers against first-run movies and big-budget mini-series. There was little new in the overall picture for the week ending March 4 -ABC first in the ratings for the eighth time in a row, followed by CBS and NBC.

ABC, in fact, listed seven of the week's 10 highest-rated shows, including No.1 Three's Company" and runnerup "Laverne & Shirley." and the configuration was good for a rating of 20.8. CBS's rating was 18.1, NBC's 17.5.

The networks say that means in an average prime-time minute during the week. 20.8 percent of the TV-equipped homes in the country were tuned to

The first episode of Miss Channing's half-hour situation comedy finished in 14th place, a strong showing for a new program. Miss Moore's comedy-variety show, on the air immediately after "Just Friends," ranked 29th.

The rating for Miss Channing's show was 23.6, compared to 32.5 for "Three's Company." Nielsen says that means of all the homes in the country with TV. 23.6 percent saw at least part of "Just Friends.

CBS's best for the week was "60 Minutes," in fifth place. NBC. still struggling to escape the ratings' cellar, listed "Little House on the Prairie." 10th in the ratings, as its top-ranked show NBC was moderately successful with a two-hour pilot, "Mrs. Columbo," but the first regularly scheduled episode in the comedy-mystery series finished a disappointing 45th

Both NBC and CBS had two programs among the bottom five in the ratings: CBS's "Kaz" was No. 59, followed by NBC's "Supertrain," "Makin' It" on ABC. "Leopard of the Wild" on NBC and "Boston and Kilbride" on CBS

Black Composers Contest Set

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Kennedy Center announced Tuesday a competition for black composers, pianists and string soloists with prizes totaling $10,000. The final concert will be performed at the Kennedy Center next January, following regional auditions to be held in September in Atlanta, Chicago, Houston, Los Angeles, New York and St. Louis. The budget for the venture is $150,000. It is being met largely by the Kennedy Center Corporate Fund, supported by major corporations' donations. The budget does not include services in kind from officials of the center and the National Masic Council, an organization with 1.5 ion members. the project is titled the "Black Music nium and Competition." It was arranged by an advisory panel comprised of composers Ulysses Kay and Elie Sing-

Jeanne Wade Heningburg of the Friends of the Kennedy Center. e aim is to stimulate more black inteast and attendance at the Kennedy Cepter. Dr. Archie Buffkins, dean of the uate school at the University of Mard who is president of the center's nission on black participation, said, ere we hope it will take us is a pursuit of cultural diversity. We want to make certain there is a forum for black composers ... We are trying to do new things in a different way.

The hope is to make this an annual event and to expand it to vocal artists and other instrumentalists. Singmaster said one reason for confining it this year is a practical one, because judging reed and brass instruments would require a number of judging panels.

Dr. Merle Montgomery, who heads the National Music Council, said the budget includes money to produce recordings of the two winning compositions.

The 12 winners - six pianists and six string players - in the regional auditions will each receive a cash award of $500 and be featured in a local concert. All 12 regional winners will take part in master classes and seminars in Washington during the national competition Jan. 8-18.

chael Chapman. Edited by Tom Roll. Music by Jack Nitzsche Stars George C. Scott, Seaon Hubley and Peter Boyle. Rated R. At the Fox Fourplex.

By WILLIAM D. KERNS A-J Entertainment Editor

There is a scene in Paul Schrader's "Hardcore" in which George C. Scott, his face bathed in pure, pious hate, uses a lamp as a weapon and attacks a young man with whom his runaway daughter has appeared in a spornographic movie. And it's all the more frightening in that we, the audience, are happy with the assault.

Hardcore" opens long-avoided doors and reveals the reality of the southern California porno trade, and we are repulsed as much as-informed. Schrader, who last year unmasked the American Dream to show us a nightmarish shaft in "Blue Collar. has again succeeded at entertaining us with tragedy, at producing a film which demands not only thought, but action.

Regrettably, he turns chicken at the finale and glosses over his ending. But the fact remains we have been shocked, we have had our eyeballs burned by an ugly reality. If any film will inspire audiences to rage against the waste of human souls which is the pornography business, it is "Hardcore.

And one wonders just how long this picture has been nurtured in the darker recesses of Schrader's mind. The opening scenes involve a Calvinist family in Grand Rapids, Mich., which just happens to be the town in which the writer-director was raised. Scott is a very religious businessman, divorced and raising a 16-year-old daughter. We see the church, the Christmas dinner, the fearful faith in the mere speaking of grace. The camera forces us to visualize the family's morality, but in respectful tones. But when the church's youth leave to attend a Calvinist convention in California, we know to expect trou-

It comes in the form of a phone call. Scott's daughter has disappeared." The police do little more than tack her picture up on a bulletin board alongside the hundreds of photographs of other missing teenagers. So the anguished father hires private detective Peter Boyle to track down his daughter.

What Schrader concentrates on in "Hardcore" is not the runaway daughter, but instead the pain and doubts of the abandoned parent. And George C. Scott is superb in that role. When Boyle, as seedy and cynical as the streets he walks, finds a blue movie featuring Scott's daughter, he rents an art theater for a half hour and forces the father to watch it. The scene quickly becomes so powerful and moving as to inspire embarrassment. We want to hide our faces, to leave the room, as Scott stares, shamed and surprised and with his spirit draining as though from a knife wound, and drops to his knees begging Boyle to stop the film.

That the detective forces him to watch the entire reel of 8millimeter degradation emphasizes even more how much Scott has been removed from his element. Even the private eyes, we learn, are hardened. They must protect the innocents, but they don't have to respect their lifestyles. And that protection comes only at a price.

Scott is the figure through which we learn about the films and bookstores, the entrepreneurs and victims of the porno trade. When he catches Boyle about to make love to one of the industry's teenagers, a girl who may be likened to his own you set it up again?

daughter, he fires the detective and begins searching on his own. We watch his growth, his daily courage at entering the street Hell and his nightly fears of failing. His suits give way to Hawaiian prints, and the prints give way to tye-died T-shirts as he masquerades as a smut producer.

He learns guerrilla warfare, in a sense. He learns how to blend in with the enemy

There is a wonderful segment in which he meets a young prostitute, a hardened woman named Niki (portrayed by Season Hubley) who agrees, for a price, to use her connections and help track down his daughter. Their conversations are the most fascinating the film has to offer, as we find their views on sex contrasted into a common bond. He finds sex unimportant, and thus doesn't think twice about it. She finds sex so unimportant she doesn't think twice about who she's doing it

The more we see of Niki, the more we see she is not beyond saving. She puts her hopes in Scott. She even puts up with his violent anger because, after all, she's no doubt experienced much worse

Season Hubley and George C. Scott work marvelously together. Peter Boyle also offers an excellent performance, and Jack Nitzsche, who gave us that moody electronic score in "One Flew Over The Cuckoo's Nest," beautifully contrasts the pious with the pornographic by laying a soft hymnal sound against the loud, tough synthesized street themes. Schrader's direction is also tight, his cameras capturing Scott as a wrathful god trying to find his way through a demon's maze, punishing the sinners while weeping at his own loss.

Still, this sort of film demands a downbeat ending and Schrader loses us in his final segment. Like Travis Bickel in 'Taxi Driver," we expect Scott to be cleansed only after some sort of blood ritual. But there is no way we can expect things to revert back to the way they were before his daughter's disappearance. Schrader has concentrated on the father's anguish, and thus we expect a sense of irony at his conclusion. Frankly, we expect the daughter to tell us why she ran away, to show us that the strict morality will not hold one and all, to reveal that the boundaries between good and evil are difficult

Instead, the girl offers feeble and frightened excuses before falling into daddy's arms. A reconciliation is found and, in the process, reality is abandoned.

We are also forced to lose our respect for Scott's character. as well, since he allows Niki to fall back into the pit she was trying to escape. We learn he wasn't the white knight after all. He has used her, just as her pimp has used her. He has seen the inside, smelled the garbage which is the lifestyle forced on these homeless women - and yet still retained his inborn, selfish religious predjudices.

Paul Schrader has a habit of dealing with the violence of today's headlines. And the films he's taken part in - "The Yakuza." "Taxi Driver," "Rolling Thunder." "Blue Collar" and "Hardcore" - have all seen their heroes initiated into both awareness and action. In "Hardcore," his message is most explicit. It is perhaps his best sociological statement, one sure to have an impact on every viewer. But it cannot be denied his new film is also his most inconsistent. "Hardcore' closes in a dead end, a virtual tie between the blindness of street brutality and the blindness of morality.

We leave not only angry, but also dissatisfied. But then, as Schrader stated in press notes, "After you take down the white picket fence of traditional morality, where do stock market will do but we can remember few periods where the opinions were so polarized and yet confidence in them so thin. This showed up clearly as we went from a Mr. Hyde market last Tuesday to a Dr. Jekyll one on Monday.

A. G. Edwards & Sons, Inc. WEEKLY MARKET REPORT

On Tuesday, market action was very ugly as volume expanded, the advance/decline ratio was a wildly negative 8 to 1 with over 1400 issues down, the decline in important growth stocks was eye popping, and the low industrials dropped over 14 points. This week started with a beautiful bang upward and although fading somewhat on the close. still managed to show a positive move-

The most recent reading of leading investment service sentiments as reported by investors intelligence is yet another illustration of the balance tug of war with 47 percent bearish, 40 percent bullish and with the bullish camp running up to 50 percent recently.

One common thread running through both the bull and bear camps, and if cranked into this indicator would turn it decidely bearish, is that most are impressed that stocks have acted better than the news. This creates a complacency and reduction of selling programs which we find dangerous. The history of the market is replete with several weeks to month-long periods when institutions seemed immune to bad news.

tee which has previously met and decided to so some buying. Despite fundamental changes in the market, the buying continues until the next meeting or a call from the boss - a bearish condition.

Monday's action was positive despite the late fade. One day's action, in our opinion, should create no more than a short term conviction unless lots of other things are in place. Being short term bearish, our blood pressure did go up. However, with a big improvement in the news (Egypt/Israel, China/Viet Nam, Iranian Oil) and coming into a moderately oversold market, a rally should have been no surprise.

We believe there has been a kick up in the severity level of the problems facing investors which will require either lower prices, below 780, or a period of ease building, wearing everyone out in the 790-830 range. If cumulative and stuborn buying does not develop after yesterday's party, disappointment could bring a fairquick list of 780. Those looking out a month or two should stay defensive long term investors can continue to do some buying but also maintain some

Stability Gain Seen In Currency Markets

WASHINGTON (AP) - There should be much more stability in world currency markets this year because of an expected decline in U.S. international trade and payments deficits, Treasury Undersecretary Anthony Solomon said Tuesday.

Solomon said inflation will continue to be a problem in many industrial nations, and he expects little further progress in reducing unemployment in the near fu-

With growth rates as low as 3.5 percent, there is little prospect for further reduction in unemployment," he said.

Solomon discussed the world economic outlook at a news conference held in connection with the opening of the annual meting of the International Monetary Fund's Interim Committee Wednes-

The committee, which comprises representatives of the fund's 138 member nations, will meet only one day instead of the usual two because there are few issues to be decided, Solomon said.

He said there are only two primary items on the agenda, the outlook for the world economy and a discussion of ways of strengthening the fund's monetary asset, the special drawing right.

Solomon said the committee will consider proposals to create a so-called substitution account that would allow foreign central banks to trade in dollars for drawing rights, but he anticipates no decision. The United States does not yet have a position on the substitution account plan, he said, but is willing to join in additional study. "I expect the committee will ask... to continue to work on it," he said.

With respect to the world economy, Solomon said the committee likely will determine "there will be much more stability in exchange markets" as the United States makes progress in reducing its deficit and Germany and Japan trim their surpluses.

Solomon said the United States favors implementation of the fund's responsibilities to supervise economic policies of member nations insofar as they affect the world economy generally.

But he said "there are no issues for decision at this point" on the world econo-

With respect to the substitution account proposal, Solomon said the United States does not think of it as "a dollar support operation. We know some people think of it that way, but we do not.

INVESTORS' GUIDE By BILL DOYLE

Q. I have invested $3,000 for each of my two grandchildren in an "option income mutual fund, in the form set up by the "gift to minors act." All dividends are reinvested to buy more shares. Each of the two accounts now holds 224 and a fraction shares.

My broker tells me that the fund paid 10 percent last year and he thinks it will do as well or better this year. He says I should stay with it and he will advise me when to pull out. What do you say?

A. Based on what you tell me, I say your broker is shading the facts. The mutual fund you named in your letter paid income dividends of 58 cents a share last year. As I pound this through the typewriter, that fund's asset value per share

That means the fund has a "current yield" - income dividends divided by asset value - of 4.4 percent. That's a long way from 10 percent.

Your broker may be playing the discredited game of adding capital gains distributions to income dividends to come up with a percentage of what the fund pays. Last year that fund made capital gains distributions of 84 cents a share. Throw in those numbers and divide by asset value and you come up with a percentage of 10.8.

But that's a bad calculation. The Securities & Exchange Commission won't allow mutual funds to do it or mention any such thing in their prospectus or other sales literature. The SEC, however, can't gag every broker.

At $13.14 a share and 224 plus shares each grandcbild's account is worth $2,955 and change. Not bad, considering how the market has been acting - and that you paid a commission of $255 on each $3,000 investment.

That particular mutual fund has to be counted as being in about the middle of the risk scale. It might or might not turn out to be a good investment for your grandchildren. But my advice is to be wary of a broker who plays games with numbers. And run for cover, if the broker suggests "pulling out" and putting the kids' money into something else on which a fat commission would have to be

Q. I own stock in a company which has both a dividend reinvestment plan and a stock purchase plan for shareholders. A few months ago, I sent the company a check for $300 to purchase additional shares. According to the plan, the shares should have been bought for me at the going market price.

The statement I received showed that the additional shares were purchased for me at $24 a share. I had been watching the newspapers and that stock had been quoted for months at $20 bid, $21 asked. When I questioned the $24 price, the company said that was the figure quoted by the broker. Can you explain this?

A. To even begin to understand this, you have to realize that bid and asked quotations in newspapers represent overthe-counter quotations at the close of a husiness day

The "bid" price in the "OTC" market - for stocks not listed on stock exchanges - is the price near which you might have sold at the end of the day. The higher "asked" price is the price near which you might have bought at the end of that particular day

Both the bid and asked prices could have been higher or lower at various times during the day — including the exact moment at which your buy order was executed.

But I have to say that a $3 price swing in a $21 stock is a most unusual situation. Despite some brokers' protestations to the contrary, the "counter" market remains a wild and wooly place. I'd demand a better explanation than the one you got from any company in which I was stockholder.

DOYLE welcomes written questions, but he will be able to provide answers only through the column.

The struggle for gold: miner claws his way into tunnel containing precious gold reef, or band.

Reaching For Recognition

THAT TELEPHONE CALL to Gerald Myers' residents Sunday afternoon came as no surprise, after getting an indication (of possible post-season action) while in Houston for the conference tournament. Fact is. Myers was waiting so close to the phone that his "Hello" interrupted the rrrrring.

But, when the call came from NIT officials asking if Tech would be interested in playing in their 24-team tournament, Myers - and other Tech administrators hesitated only long to decide whether to answer "yes" or "we're very delighted

After that. Myers turned it over to his players. For the older players - such as seniors Geoff Huston. Joe Baxter and Tommy Parks - it was a reward for dozens of long practice sessions and long

For the younger folks, it was experience to be banked for future dividends. And, that youth is dominant on the Raider squad; only the three seniors and juniors Kent Williams and Thad Sanders keep it from being a full freshman-soph

DAVID LITTLE

Most of the season, at least one freshman has been in the lineup, either Jeff Taylor or David Little, with the other two trosh (Steve Smith of Hobbs and Larry Washington of Brooklyn) filling spot

IF THE MOVES and mannerisms of Little look familiar to Tech fans, it's understandable. Just a few seasons back, there was another kid who played with the same enthusiasm, same confidence, same competitive spirit, same quickness

Only thing, older brother Richard was a guard and about 3 inches shorter than the 6-6 David Richard quarterbacked the Raiders to a conference championship in 1973 and earned all-SWC honors. Then, when David came out of Abilene High. Tech wanted him, too.

With Richard's help. Myers finally won the recruiting duel from Oklahoma

Three times this season, David has started for Tech, but most of his playing time has been coming off the bench. Like anyone with that competitive drive, the Abilene freshman would like it better on

'Sure." he remarked recently, "if could play as much as I'd like, it'd be 40 minutes. I'm not being negative about it, but it's hard to come off the bench."

This desire to be on the floor is not lost on Myers. "David." he said recently, "is one of those kids that is ready to play the minute he gets in the game. Some guys have to get warmed up, or if they come in off the bench, they may be inclined not to play as hard if they're not starting.

But David, he's ready to go full blast when he gets in there.'

BUT, RIGHT NOW, it's a new season. for the Raiders, after their invitation to compete for the NIT championship. Last Friday night. Tech's season looked to be at an end. following that 93-77 loss to Ar-

We were really tired when we got back (from the Houston tournament). Little said Tuesday. ("We didn't have a good workout Monday." said Myers, and I think it was because they were so worn out.") Then, it hit us what this (invitation) means

"For those of us coming back, this is a stepping stone." Little added. "If we make it to New York, it'll be national recognition for next year, just like Texas (in winning the NIT) last year "Indiana is good, but we've played some good clubs (Arkansas, Michigan, A &M. Clemson, Texas included), and I think we can beat Indiana. If we do, then we'll play either Alcorn or Mississippi

'And, sure, I think we can make it to New York. If we have good crowds, we can beat anybody down here."

TECH WILL BE coming off that loss to Arkansas, a game where Little admits the Raiders started out flat, got behind early and couldn't climb the hill.

"Some teams, we can get down by 15 points and come back, but not against Arkansas," said Little, "They're too patient, waiting for the good shot. But, no. I don't guess I played too well.

But, (against Indiana), we definitely have something to prove. We have to show them that the Southwest Conference is as good as any in the country."

Hoosiers' Prayers Answered

By BOB HAMMEL

Bloomington Herald-Telephone BLOOMINGTON, Ind. - Indiana has the most defeats (12) of any of the 64

teams still playing college basketball. which makes the Hoosiers perhaps the happiest of all the 24 squads that start play tonight in the 42nd National Invitation Tournament

The Hoosiers went to their final game at Illinois last Saturday hopeful a victory could keep them going. "Coach (Bob) Knight told us he thought the winner of this game would get to play in the NIT." Indiana guard Butch Carter said after the Hoosiers had whipped Illinois 72-60. 'Now, we're just going to go home and hope and pray.

Some Hoosier prayers were answered on the playing floor at Illinois. Indiana's leading scorer, junior forward Mike Woodson, delivered a game that must have been Heaven-sent: 48 points, the best scoring performance by a Big Ten player in the last three years and by a Hooser in the last 16 years.

Woodson had 29 points by halftime and was ahead of the Illinois team 37-36 with 15 minutes left. Still, it was a close game, Illinois clawing to within 55-50 when Woodson blocked a shot - the key defensive play of the game in Knight's eyes.

"It was a game where an individual by himself solely controlled the outcome. Knight said. "He had about as good an offensive game as I've ever seen in a Big Ten game

Woodson, 6-5 and a third-year starter. picked up the newspapers Saturday morning in Champaign and learned that for the third straight year - Big Ten coaches had voted him to a second-string spot on the all-league team.

Tickets Still On Sale For Indiana Game

As the Raiders worked out in Lubbock Coliseum Tuesday, no one was on hand, outside of the team, coaches, and idle onlookers.

But, when the Raiders trot onto the coliseum's Tartan floor Thursday night, the crowd will be quite larger; that has been assured already.

Tickets for Thursday night's National Invitation Tournament battle with nationally regarded Indiana only went on sale Tuesday at the Tech ticket office, but at the end of the day's run, more than 5,250 tickets had been dis-

Tech officials are hopeful for a capacity crowd of 10,000 for the contest. and Tuesday's brisk ticket sales enhanced that possibility. Winner of the Thursday game will-meet either Alcorn State or Mississippi State in the second round next Monday, the site to be determined later.

General admission tickets, priced at $5 for adults and $3 for students, will be on sale today and Thursday at the Tech ticket office and at the Coliseum gates Thursday night.

Tech officials reported that most of Tuesday's sales were to adults

There will be no reserved seats at Lubbock Coliseum Thursday We're hoping to sell it out," said Tech coach Gerald Myers. "We were fortunate to have the game here, since Indiana has been averaging about 14,-000 per game at home. This is an opportunity to show the NIT people that we can draw a crowd.

mpires May Miss Spring Games

By The Associated Press

Major league spring training begins today - without major league umpires.

"I see no possibility that this thing will be settled in time." Richie Phillips, negotiator for the 51 big-league arbiters, said Tuesday. "Without individual contracts." the umpires will not work.

Phillips said he expected to hear from American League President Lee Mac-Phail later in the day, but that negotiations on the umpires' individual contracts. had not been progressing satisfactorily. He had no immediate plans to meet with National League President Chub Feeney

'It's an individual action on the part of 51 individuals who are unhappy," said Phillips by phone from his Philadelphia law office. "I'm not feeling any pressure to give in. In fact, the only pressure I'm getting is that some of the individuals are thinking of re-evaluating their situations to ask for more money.

Baseball has been preparing for the possibility the umpires wouldn't be working today. A teletype had been sent from the two league offices, asking the clubs to make preparations to have local umpires informing the clubs that it didn't appear that the regular umps would be working and that local officials would be needed to fill in

Dick Butler, supervisor of AL umpires. said from Sarasota, Fla., that the games would be officiated by former minor league umps and college baseball umps.

We don't foresee any problem," said Butler. "Every town's got plenty of umps. So much college baseball is played down here and in Arizona, anyway.

Butler pointed out that when the major league teams play "B" or split-squad games, extra umpires are used. "Most of these guys will have done umpiring for us before." he said. "They won't be as good as our guys but the players probably won't notice. They're concentrating more on getting in shape and making the ballclub than on umpiring.

The fill-ins will be paid $40 a game. reimbursed for their mileage and covered by workmen's compensation.

Phillips welcomed the fill-in umps. contending that he would help line up amateur officials if they were needed The contrast would just emphasize the quality of of our umpiring," he said. Phillips doesn't consider the new umps scabs because the regular umpires are not involved in a strike. "Our plan is not to disrupt the spring training schedule." the attorney said We would like to see spring training go on as scheduled. There's no problem at all with these other guys going to work. We urge them to work.

Lou Smith tried on Woodson "We tried Smith, we tried (Neil) Bresnahan, we tried (Steve) Lanter, and sometimes we tried all five," said Henson."And most of the time it looked like we had nobody on him."

"I think he's the absolute best offensive player never to make all-Big Ten, Knight said. Woodson averaged 22.5 to rank second in Big Ten scoring. His three-year conferen ce scoring average is 21.4. he needs only a 17.9-point average in his senior year to become the league's alltime scorer - "which makes it a little ridiculous that he nas never made allconference," Knight said.

Woodson started the season in a scoring sturde, and so did the Hoosiers. Indians was 3-3 and Woodson was averaging about 12 points a game when another crisis came: The early-December discipliplayers for what later surfaced as marijuana smoking.

Indiana's next game after the move was with one of its chief rivals, Kentucky at that time unbeaten and riding a winring streak that stretched through last year's national championship drive. Woodson had 27 points and Indiana won in overtime 67-66.

The Hoosiers survived one other skid, a 14 Big Ten start that invluded three of the worst beatings in Knight's eight seasons here (successively 80-63 at Minnesoth, 90-61 at Iowa and 82-56 at Michigan

It was a 9-4 recovery after that, including account-squaring victories over Iowa, Minnesota and Illinois, that convinced NIT selectors that Indiana was a team on the rise and an interiesting tournament

Knight's late-season lineup included two freshmen (6-9 center Landon Turner and 6-5 guard Randy Wittman), a sophomore (6-9 forward Ray Tolbert), and two juniors (Woodson and the 6-5 Carter). Carter and Wittman rank among Big Ten leaders in assists, and Tolbert is the No. 2 scorer, averaging 11.5 a game.

The squad's only senior, 6-9 forward Scott Eells, has been a part-time starter and first substitute. Steve Risley, a 6-8 sophomore, also has started some games.

Indiana finished fifth in the Big Ten race, its ninth straight first-division finish in a period that has included four Big Ten pionships and the 1976 NCAA title The Hoosiers put 31-1 and 32-0 seasons back-to-back and ranked No. 1 for virtually all of both seasons. Besides all that, an 18-12 season pales, but Knight enjoyed the finish - and the NIT invita-

"The objective of any season is to get into a post-season tournament," he said. It's a real tribute to this year's team that it had the ability to keep that objective in mind, when there were some times when it might have seemed to be supping over the horizon.

game on the first batter as third baseman Kenny Toney threw wild at first trying to get Horlos Barrett.

Burke, who threw 79 pitches, walked two, committed a balk and fanned five. The no-hitter was the first by a Chap pitcher since Glenn Palmer turned the trick April 9, 1974, and was only the fourth ever by an LCCer, but the second accomplished here against Jarvis.

In the opener, freshman left hander Chris Cook hurled a five-hitter, fanning six and walking two before giving way to Bob McNicol for the final frame.

The Chaps scored 4 times in the first trame, with Tim Leslie doubling home a run and Toney singling in 2 more.xz Benford Hurst, who was 12-2 last year and 2-0 this time, also gave up 2 unearned runs in the early going, and JCC was unable to recover.

Hurst only allowed five hits, but one was a 2-run homer by Toney in the fifth that salted the game.

LCC managed only five hits in the nightcap. Leslie plated a first-running run with a sacrifice tly, and Toney singled in another. An error and sacrifice fly by Steve Bri-gante made it 4-0 in the second.

The Chaps scored 5 times in the third only only hit, a grand-slam homer by Steve Cargil. Charley Casiano got the other RBI on a bases-loaded walk.

A balk and Leslie's triple accounted for the final 2 runs in the fifth inning of the run-shortened game.

LCC. now 4-2 returns home Friday-Saturday-Sunday for its only home stand of March, with seven games against Paul Quinn and Jarvis

UK Gridders Plead Innocent To Charges Of Rape, Sodomy

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) - Eight Uni- different, names to appear simultaneousversity of Kentucky football players charged with rape and sodomy against a 19-year-old woman pleaded innocent of all charges Tuesday in Fayette District Court.

The players did not appear in court but their attorney, Tom Miller, entered the innocent pleas and waived formal arraignment. District Judge Michael Roney scheduled a March 29 preliminary hearing for the eight.

The woman bringing the complaint is ments related to the case. not a University of Kentucky student, Miller said.

The university president ordered a complete investigation, however, because the incident allegedly occurred on campus.

The defendants were free on their own recognizance after their release earlier Tuesday from the Fayette County Detention Center. They were arrested Monday

They were identified as defensive back Venus Meaux and halfback Henry Parks, both of Harrodsburg, Ky.; fullbacks Randy Brooks, Louisville, Ky., and Charles Jackson, Georgetown, Ky.; quarterback Larry McCrimmon, Tampa, Fla.; halfback Norman Green, Martinsburg, W.Va.: defensive tackle Earl Wilson, Atlantic City, N.J., and offensive tackle Robert Cobb. Sheffield, Ala.

All are charged with first-degree rape and first-degree sodomy, according to court records. McCrimmon also is charged with first-degree sexual abuse, the records showed.

The names of two women appeared on the court docket as complainants, but Miller said there was only one. He said a recording error caused two similar, but

Miller asked the right to withdraw from the case if need be, saying there might be a conflict of interest.

Spring Training Notes

Rains Force Cards Indoors

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. - Morning long rains forced the St. Louis Cardinals indoors for their workout Tuesday but did not stop pitchers and hitters from putting in full days.

Under the supervision of Manager Ken Boyer, eight squad hurlers served up deliveries to infielders and outfielders during an extended hitting session in the wind tunnel

Boyer said the same type of deill will be held today if, as predicted, additional rain is received. The rain could wipe out the Cards' scheduled exhibition game against the University of Missouri at Al Lang Field.

of the club's Busch complex facility.

Reds Head To Weight Room

TAMPA: Fla. - Rain forced the Cincinnati Reds indoors Tuesday, lopping one day off their spring training schedule.

The National League baseball team went through light exercises indoors and some players did additional work in the weight room.

Reds trainer Larry Starr said infielder Harry Spilman should be able to return to practice today. Spilman sprained his back last week ducking out of the way of a pitch. That has been the most serious injury reported in the Reds camp

Lasorda Likes Team's Progress

VERO BEACH. Fla. - Los Angeles Manager Tom Lasorda said Tuesday that the Dodgers are far ahead of where they were a year ago at this time and he's extremely pleased with the defending National League champions' progress.

We'll have five intra-squad games by the time we play our first exhibition game. and Lasorda following the Dodgers' workout Tuesday. "I hear the Yankees' first intra-squad game is Wednesday. So we're ahead, probably further ahead than where we've been in a long time The Dodgers, who will play for the third season under Lasorda, open their exhibition schedule Friday against the Texas Rangers.

I'm particularly pleased with what I've seen so far from Andy Messersmith and Joe Ferguson." said Lasorda. "We don't know about Terry Forster, of course, but I an't be concerned just yet whether he'll be ready by the opener

Torre Evades Tough Question

ST PETERSBURG, Fla - New York Mets Manager Joe Torre refuses to be drawn into the play-me-or-trade-me controversy created by Elliott Maddox, his high-priced but unhappy free agent outfielder-third baseman.

I'm not going to comment on it." Torre said Tuesday. "because Elliott has never ome to me and expressed any dissatisfaction.

Maddox said Monday he did not want to sit around until the end of spring training while the Mets looked at rookie Dan Norman and others in right field and and a couple of others at third base before deciding where he would play. "I don't want to be a safety valve at two positions." Maddox complained.

I don't know who my right fielder will be." Torre said. "But until someone takes the job away from him, it belongs to Maddox

Dent May Become Free Agent

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. - Bucky Dent, the New York Yankee shortstop who parlayed his World Series hero status into commercial and television roles off the held, said Tuesday he doesn't want to talk contract during the baseball season

They don't want to talk before the season, then I dont want to talk at all." said the World Series Most Valuable Player who wants to negotiate an extension to his contract while he is still a hot commodity. "I just would rather not talk during the sea-

Dent says he is prepared to test the free-agent waters following the 1979 season. The Yankees are not in any hurry to negotiate. "When you have people signed to contracts, you don't always feel that's a matter to put on the front burner. Yankee President Al Rosen said

O's Set Intrasquad Games

MIAMI - The Baltimore Orioles will play the first of three intrasquad games Wednesday afternoon at their spring training base here.

Third base coach Cal Ripkin will manage one team and first base coach Jim Frey will pilot the other.

Jim Palmer, Mike Boddicker and Don Stanhouse are scheduled for pitch for Rip kin's team. Scott McGregor. Ed Hook and Jeff Rineer will hurl for Frey's squad-The game will last six innings. Two more intrasquad games are scheduled Thursday

Barker Inks New Contract

TUCSON. Ariz. - Len Barker had a good day Tuesday

First, the young right-handed fireballer for the Cleveland Indians reached agreement with the American League club on a one-year contract.

Then. Barker went out and threw two strong innings in an eight-inning intrasquad

The 23-year-old pitcher, acquired during the winter in a trade with the Texas Rang ers. had been something of a disappointment to Indians Manager Jeff Torborg until Tuesday opening of training camp last week. Torborg had projected the 6

Prior to 235-pound Barker as a probable member of the team's starting rotation

Phillies Move Training Site

-ChEARWATER, Fla. - The Philadelphia Phillies moved their training facilities Tuesday from Carpenter Field to Jack Russell Stadium, where the National League team will play its exhibition games. A heavy rain forced postponement of Tuesday's team workout at the stadium, said

Phillies spokesman Larry Shenk The Phillies meet the Clearwater Bombers, a softball team. Wednesday night and

Kennedy Back On Bench

TAMPA. Fla. (AP) - Junior Kennedy had a good season a year ago, playing nearly half the National League schedule at second base for the Cincinnati Reds. But he'll be back on the bench when the 1979 campaign starts Kennedy's consolation is the stature of the player he stood in for last year. Joe Morgan. The man playing in front of me is a superstar." Kennedy said. "I think I can play, but we need Joe in the lineup. He can help us play in the World Series. Morgan is the first baseball player in the modern era to hit

200 home runs and steal 500 bases, a rare combination of power and speed. He missed a lot of last season aafter he injured some stomach muscles. Kennedy, after a big year at Phoenix and a good spring training season, had just earned a spot on the Reds' roster. He came on to hit .255 in 89 games for Cincinnati. I'm happy with the way things went last year." Kennedy said. "I'm pleased that I even got to play. "I spent 10 years in the minor leagues. I just want to be in the big leagues. I don't care how much playing time I got.

Kennedy. 28. did not sign a contract until after spring training started this season, but that doesn't mean he had any intention of holding out

The first day we talked I signed," he said. "It was just a matter of getting together. Kennedy is willing to bide his time with the Reds. Morgan is 35, and Kennedy would appear to be the heir apparent at second. "I started as a shortstop, but I feel more comfortable at second." Kennedy said. He's also played third, but doesn't think he's in the running tor Pete Rose's old job. "I thing they'll give Ray Knight first shot at it." Kennedy said. Ray deserves it, since he backed up Pete two years," mainly as a late-inning defensive replacement. "We'll just see

He isn't pushing too hard right now, but the thing that took Kennedy's baseball career out of neutral was an ultimatum hegave Reds management.

I'd played nine years in the minor leagues, and I was still stuck there." Kennedy said. "I asked them to do something with me. Phoenix needed a shortstop that year, so the Reds optioned me to Phoenix

Everything came together there, and it got me into the big leagues. Kennedy said

Horner's Hearing Date Set

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) Marvin Miller, executive director of the Major League Players' Association, said Tuesday an arbitration hearing for Atlanta Braves' Bob Horner, the National League Rookie of the Year, would be moved up to April.

Miller, in his annual spring training tour of major league teams, made the statement during a 112-hour talk with the Braves. Atlanta opens the regular season April 4.

Horner, the 21-year-old from Arizona State, blasted 23 home runs and drove in 63 runs in-only 89 games last season after being chosen No. 1 in the college draft.

Horner and the Braves have been involved in a contract dispute since the third baseman's agent. Bucky Woy, filed a grievance contending the Braves failed to offer Horner a valid contract by the Dec 20 deadline set by major league baseball

The Braves have offered Horner a onevear $100,000 contract while Woy was seeking a long-term contract for an estimated $300,000 per year. He now wants Horner declared a free agent.

Miller said Tuesday that Ray Grebey. head-of the owners' players relations committee, has consented to move the Horner case to the top of the arbitration docket. Originally, it was not expected to be heard until possibly May, well into the regular season.

Grebey had earlier said the cases would be heard chronologically, and that Horner was 11th on the list, instead of first.

"I don't have it in writing." said Miller. but Mr. Grebey assured me he would consent to moving Mr. Horner's case up. I think that is eminently fair since this is a case involving a player's status. I think this type of case should always be heard

Miller said, however, that any arbitration hearing still appears "more than a month away. I can't imagine there being a hearing date before some time in April. at the very best." he said.

He said it could not be moved up any earlier because his tour of the spring training camps did not end until March 31 and that Grebey had some other committments

Miller also pointed out that the Braves have until March 11 to renew Horner's 1978 contract or the blond youngster willbecome a free agent

Tech Fems To Compete In Tourney

TULSA (Special)-The Texas Tech women's basketball team will join 14 othschools in the Southwest AIAW Basketball Tournament at Oral Roberts University today. Tech will play Louisiana State in first round action at 11 a.m.

-ranked Stephen F. Austin he back to defend its regional title, but the top-seeded Ladyjacks will have stiff competition from two other nationally ranked teams-number three Texas (34-3: and fourth ranked Louisiana Tech (27-

Other seeded teams vying for the two top spots and advancement into the Midwest satellite tournament, include 13th ranked Wayland Baptist (20-8). Louisiana State (12-11), Oral Roberts (24-9), Northeast Louisiana (13-10) and the University of Houston (16-12). The Raiders (14-18) were an at-large selection due to their sixth place finish during the Texas AIAW Tournament. Tech's record against the teams in the tournament is 1-10. The Raiders only victory came against Oral Roberts, the Oklahoma champions and sixth seeded team.

Last year, the Raiders placed eighth in the regionals. Tech's chances to improve this year were hampered when center Rose Pengunis suffered an ankle injury Friday. Miss Pengunis is the fourth post player Tech has lost this season to either injury or academic ineligibility.

Coach Gay Benson will fill the spot with either Jill Owens (6-0, Sr.) or Donette Marble (5-10, Jr.). Miss Owens has fouled out in four of her last eight games and is averaging four fouls per contest. Miss Marble has seen limited action since returning to action 10 games ago. Her 11.0 points per game average, however. still leads the Raiders in scoring.

The remainder of Tech's lineup will have Liz Havens (5-10, Jr) and Lynn Webb (5-10, Fr.) underneath, while the outside attack will consist of Rosemary Scott (5-7, Sr.) and Louise Davis (5-9, Jr.).

Coronado Whips Monterey Again

By CHUCK McDONALD

Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff Ho hum. Coronado wins the district tennis crown again. That's only dual match number 39 that the Mustangs have won without a loss, since area schools went to the dual format five years ago.

But things weren't actually all that boring when Monterey and Coronado squared off at the CHS courts Tuesday afternoon. It came down to the final doubles match of the day before the Mustangs could walk away with a narrow 5-4 victory and the district title with a 7-0 district slate. MHS is 5-2.

And the Mustangs had to come from behind in that last match to finally win it

'I told you it would be tight," said Coronado coach Jim Carter when the Mustangs had finally won it. "But it was a little tighter than I liked.

But really things went just about as expected. And after everyone was finished playing singles, the score was all tied up 3-3. Coronado picked up wins in the No. 1 seed position, the No. 3 and the No. 6. MHS took the rest.

The Mustangs were operating at somewhat of a handicap since Phillip Catuogno (CHS' top seed) injured some muscles in his side the last time the teams met and has been out of action ever since

But junior Greg Wright still managed to pick up the win in the top spot for CHS by defeating Kenneth Coulter 6-3, 6-3. Coulter displayed an on-court temperment something like that of Jimmy Connors. He did a lot of talking but most of it was directed at either himself, his racket or at the ball.

'Yeah, he always does that," said Wright after the match. "But you just can't think about it. The only time it bothers you is when you're losing-then you start thinking about what he's saying. Today it just made me want to play harder.

But Coulter was a little more successful in doubles competition. He teamed with Curt McFarlin in the No. 1 doubles match to annihilate Coronado's Greg Conaway and Tony Gibbs 6-1, 6-0.

The CHS team won the first game of the first set and then the Monterey netters proceeded to take the next 12 games to win it going away.

But in the other doubles matches, things weren't going quite as well for the Plainsmen. David Farrell and Wright teamed to win the No. 2 seed doubles match 6-2, 6-1 and that made the overall score 4-4. Then all attention turned towards the No. 3 doubles match.

Although all the doubles matches be-games were over before the No. 3 match had even gone through a single set.

The MHS team of Steve Smith and Greg Mason captured the first set 6-4 and the Plainsmen fans thought that maybe they had finally broken the Coronado hold on tennis supremacy. But the CHS team of Mark Cook and Douglas Farrell began to come back. Midway through the second set the Mustangs took complete control and won that one 6-2 and then swept through the final set without hardly losing a single point-winning 6-0. This was the first time they (Farrell and Cook) have played together." said Carter. "I'm proud of them'

But the CHS coach did have his moments of doubt. After Cook and Farrell

That's the thing about coaching tennis." he said. "You can't say anything to the players until it's split sets. So when he finally got a chance to talk to his players. Carter gave them some

"I just told them to relax and keep the ball in the court," he said. "I told them to let Monterey make the mistakes.

Economic Confidence Slipping, Poll Shows

The public's confidence in President Carter's economic policies appears to be slipping. Although people are still hopeful, their doubts about the Carter economic program are increasing. The real question now is whether Americans will have the patience to wait to see if the program will take hold.

Here are the results of the latest ABC News-Harris Survey of 1,199 adults nationwide showing the prevailing public expectations about Carter's economic

-By 64-21 percent. Americans do not think that the program will reduce the rate of inflation. Just after the President announced his anti-inflation measures, a much smaller 46-40 percent plurality felt this way. Increases in the price of oil and the upward surge of food prices have contributed to this public pessimism. Americans are simply less impressed with governmental pronouncements than with the prices at the gas station or in the supermarket.

-By 46-41 percent, a plurality now feels that the President's economic program will increase unemployment. Up to now, the rate of unemployment has remained remarkably stable, hovering just below the 6 percent mark. However, with a 62-21 percent majority of the public now convinced that there will be a recession in the next 12 months, expectations that joblessness will rise are increasing.

-By 62-30 percent, a sizable majority feels that the Carter economic program will cause real hardship for the elderly, the poor, the handicapped and those on small incomes. Since its inception, the President's program has raised fears among the disadvantaged that a slowing down of the economy will create disproportionate hardship for them. Despite administration assurances that the President's new budget actually increases aid for the less privileged segments of the population, these groups remain appre-

-By 58-23 percent, a majority now is doubtful that Carter's program will halt the decline of the dollar abroad. Right after he announced his program, a 49-35 percent plurality felt this way. It must be pointed out, however, that the decline of the dollar abroad is not a major concern of Americans. In fact, the number of those who are worried about it has gone percent today. One reason for this may be the recent stabilization of the dollar in currency markets around the world. But most important is the fact that as people here at home become more worried about their own economic security, the problem of the dollar becomes increasingly remote. The irony, of course, is that one of the key reasons why the administration chose to slow down economic growth was to reassure foreign countries that the United States was serious about its commitment to defend the value of the dollar. In light of all this, one would expect that the public would have given up hope that the Carter anti-inflation program will work. But this is not the case. At latest count, a 56-31 percent majority actually favors the President's program, even though a majority of 54-37 percent also thinks that the country eventually may have to institute mandatory wage and price controls to keep inflation in great difficulty of controlling inflation. Although they are not convinced that a better alternative exists, people are simply not sure that they can stand the 'cures' set forth by the Carter administration. In short, they just may not have the patience or endurance to wait for the Carter program to work.

What Americans are saying is that they are hurting economically, that the crunch of high prices is deeply disturbing and that they fear that the Carter's program could lead the country into a recession.

Court Of Record Bill By NANCY ALLEN

Avalanche-Journal Staff Incensed that Lubbock's bad drivers are able to "beat" their tickets for speeding and moving violations, Citizens Traffic Commission members Tuesday voted to endorse the "Court of Record" bill sponsored in Texas Legislature by Sen. E.L. Short.

The bill, if passed, would eliminate the process of appealing a ticket to the county level after an original plea of "guilty" or "no contest" had been entered in municipal court.

Because of the backlog in the county courts, this legal ploy usually results in the ticket being, in effect, forgotten. No fine is paid by the offender, and his insurance premiums and driving record are

"If someone gets a ticket in Lubbock, he probably deserves it," said commission member Mike King, "and we should be doing everything we can to keep hazardous drivers off the roads."

Although the bill is endorsed by Lubbock Criminal District Attorney John Montford and the Lubbock Bar Association, some 70 local attorneys have voiced next "induce these attorneys to withdraw their opposition to the bill." Commission members also elected to recommend to the city council installation of a traffic light at the corner of 13th Street and Slide Road, and removal of the school crossing at 11th Street and Slide Road.

City Traffic Engineer Bill McDaniel reported that 90 percent of the traffic demand required for a light already flows through that intersection, and he anticipates more as Lubbock's population Concerned parents from Mackenzie Junior High last month requested a light be installed to prevent tragedies from occurring at that intersection.

Another of the solutions proposed last month by the commission also met with apparent success. McDaniel reported the timing of a traffic light located at 22nd Street and University Avenue was modified to accommodate a blind family of four who need to cross there.

Roger Smith and his family were notified of the change and were requested to call if the change proves insufficient. McDaniel said he had not heard from them and assumed "everything is all

Gambling Charges Filed Against Men

Four Lubbock men Tuesday were charged with felony operation of a gambling place in connection with a Sunday raid on an illegal cockfight.

They are Cruz Tijerina. 43. of 605 Ze-Hooper, 29, of 416 Idalou Road: Larry Mitchell, 24, of 1912 E. 19th St.: and Alberto Gonzales, 36, of 2917 Parkway Drive.

They were among 24 men arrested by law enforcement officers at the cocktight two miles east of Lubbock city limits near U.S. 62-82.

Other charges filed Tuesday include one against Lester E. Young. 33. of 2801 Juniper Ave.. No. 14, for aggravated assault in connection with the Saturday shooting of a 48-year-old man at the Juniper Avenue apartment complex.

Bernardo Barrera Jr., 19. of 2721 Auburn St. and Rachel Martinez, 17, address unavailable, were charged with burglary of a habitation in the reported Feb. 28 burglary of a home in the 2800block of First Street in which a radio and some jewelry were stolen.

JURY EMPANELED

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) - A jury of four men and two women was empaneled Tuesday night in the Karen Silkwood nuclear contamination case after the judge threatened to keep the court in session until midnight to pick a jury.

Affairs Committee voted unanimously Tuesday to aid the situation.

On a 6-0 vote, the committee approved legislation (SB 436) by Sen. E.L. Short, Tahoka, which would allow Lubbock. and all cities in Texas of 80,000 population greater flexibility in awarding con-

Blagg was the only witness to testify saying it costs the City of Lubbock $125 to draw up bid specifications, plus an additional $75 if the contract is to be advertised in local newspapers.

Currently, under state law, bids must be bought by counties and cities if the project is estimated to cost over $3,000. I hat provision would remain for cities of under 80,000 population and all counties,

According to Short and Blagg, the ceiling for taking competitive bids has been at $3,000 since 1973.

If for no other reason than inflation," Blagg urged the lawmakers to approve the bill. It is expected to receive uncontested floor action by the full Senate in the coming weeks

Hospital Bill Clears Education Committee

A bill that could mean "the difference between life and death" for the Health Sciences Center Hospital here has cleared the House Higher Education Committee.

The panel has endorsed legislation authorizing state aid to hospitals that serve as the primary training ground for Texas' eight medical schools. The proposal now will be considered by the full House.

A similar proposal also is awaiting floor action in the Senate. That chamber's Human Resources Committee recommended approval of the legislation weeks ago.

Among the beneficiaries would be the Lubbock County Hospital District's fledgling Health Sciences Center Hospital, the primary teaching facility of the Texas Tech University School of Medicine. This legislation is almost the difference between life and death for us," Jack Strong, chairman of the hospital district's board of managers, said today upon hearing of the House committee's action.

It would mean about $1.5 million a year in state aid to our hospital. That could make the difference between going in the hole and breaking even," Strong said.

The bill recommended to the House would allow the state to reimburse teaching hospitals for part of their costs of training medical students.

Such reimbursement could total up to $15,000 per year toward the salary of each intern and resident physician on the hospital staffs.

The bill would not guarantee the funds would be made available this year, but it would serve as enabling legislation for state appropriation.

Firing Of Aide Traced Through Tape To Nixon

blower, A. Ernest Fitzgerald, say a newly released White House tape shows that former President Richard M. Nixon personally ordered Fitzgerald's firing.

"I said get rid of that son of a ---," one transcript quotes Nixon as saying during a conversation with former White House aide Charles Colson on Jan. 31, 1973.

Government lawyers contend the tapes only reveal that the president was aware of the Fitzgerald matter, and not that he approved of Fitzgerald's termination." The government said Nixon was really thinking of another case when he made comments that appeared to reflect his role in the Fitzgerald matter.

Fitzgerald was fired as a Pentagon cost analyst in 1969 after telling Congress the C-5A transport plane would cost $2 billion more than originally estimated. He was ordered reinstated with back pay in

The transcripts of the taped conversations of Nixon and former aides Colson. John Ehrlichman and Ron Ziegler took on told a Jan. 31 news conference that he ordered Fitzgerald fired. Ziegler, Nixon's press secretary, later told reporters that the president made a verbal slip, possibly arising from Nixon's confusion of Fitzgerald with another unnamed person.

Fitzgerald has filed a $3.5 million damage suit against Nixon and three former aides - Alexander P. Butterfield, H.R. Haldeman and Bryce Harlow. Fitzgerald is alleging that the four caused irreparable harm to his career by their parts in his improper firing.

The transcripts were ordered released Tuesday by U.S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell. They show that during the Jan. 31 meeting between Nixon and former aide John Ehrlichman, Ehrlichman said Fitzgerald "was a thorn in everybody's Nixon responded, "Yeah, well, the point was not that he was complain about the overruns, but that he was doing

According to Fitzgerald's attorneys, the

and former Air Force Secretary Robert
C. Seamans improperly invoked executive privilege to conceal the White House involvement in Fitzgerald's firing.

Ehrlichman told Nixon in one trans-script. "Okay, it's okay, we're covering his tracks. Seamans was wrong, he had no right to invoke it, but you backed him up and we can put it, we can put it to-gether in such a way that everything's okay, and uh, don't worry about it." Fitzgerald's lawyers said that during the same conversation, Nixon directed Ehrlichman to conceal Seamans' abuse of executive privilege when the president told Ehrlichman: "I think I've handled it in a way that probably is a good thing for us to do. You should have the most god-awful gobbledygook answer prepared. Just put it out on executive privilege. Something that will allow us to do everything that we want."

Fitzgerald's attorneys say the order to Ehrlichman was carried out the next day. Feb. 1, 1973, when Ziegler provided an explanation of Seamans' use of executive privilege.

Nixon and his former aides are being represented by Justice Department attor-neys under guidelines which permit such representation for former officials sued for acts undertaken in official capacities.

> The warden can delegate the gruesome task to his deputy. Charlie Jones. Or the prison commissioner can assign it to omeone else.

Neither Oliver nor anyone else at Holman has ever taken part in an execution. But John Hale, the prison system's information officer, said a few employees in other penal institutions within the state have had the experience and know what preparations to make.

Evans said in a recent death-cell interview that he is "ecstatic" about the impending execution because "it means getting my freedom." He has instructed his attorney to make no further legal efforts to save him.

Evans and a companion, Wayne Eugene Ritter, were both sentenced to death for the killing of a pawnbroker in Mobile in April 1977 during a threemonth crime rampage which also included 37-robberies, nine kidnappings and two extortions. They were on parole from an Indiana prison killer faces execution under a death penalty law the validity of which has not been decided by the U.S. Supreme Court. The court refused to review Evans's conviction but did not rule on constitutionality of the law enacted in 1975. The state Supreme Court, which affirmed Evans's conviction, has upheld Before the death penalty can be inflicted, Gov. Fob James must sign a death warrant. He could delay the execution or ommute the sentence to life in prison.

Traditionally in Alabama, condemned prisoners are given the chance to face the governor at a clemency hearing and ask for mercy. James has not said whether he will continue that custom.

Mexico Banking On Oil Reserve

er's advisers recommended in a secret memorandum that Washington consider Mexico as a world oil power and not an underdeveloped country, according to Mexico's ambassador to the United Newspapers reported Tuesday that Ambassador Hugo B. Margain gave reporters details of an alleged top secret report preparted for Carter before his Feb. 14-16 state visit to Mexico and talks with President Jose Lopez Portillo.

They said Margain identified the document as MRP-41 and told reporters he obtained a copy in Washington before returning to Mexico for a routine visit.

Margain and Foreign Minister Santiago Roel spoke informally with the journalists following a reception at the Foreign Ministry

According to Margain, the analysis by Carter's advisers "inserts the United States-Mexico position into a world context." He said it suggested Mexico should have a preferential place in Washington's national policies — "a position distinct from the traditional one it was given." deposits have changed its position from one of "relative weakness to one of sufficient strength to influence international relations.

Lopez Portillo has indicated Mexico plans to play an expanded role in world affairs. Presidential sources said he is planning trips to Washington, Israel and some Arab oil-exporting countries this

After Carter's visit last month, Lopez Portillo called for the United Nations to set up a meeting of the world's main oil producing and consuming countries to allocate energy reserves.

In his talks with Carter, Lopez Portillo scolded the United States, saying Mexico should be given "respectful, fair and worthy treatment." He also warned the United States of "sudden deceit," apparently referring to a privately negotiated deal for the sale of Mexican natural gas to U.S. companies that was vetoed by Wash-

Margain said the secret U.S. report listed Mexico's proven oil reserves as 40 billion barrels, compared to the government's conservative estimate of 37 billion barrels. Many oil industry experts say Mexico's oil reserves could exceed 200 billion barrels, topping the estimated 150 billion-barrel reserves of Saudi Arabia the world's top oil exporter.

The change in the international position of our country comes at a time when it is vital for energy, when energy is scarce both in the world and because of the decline in production in the U.S., which is constantly increasing imports," Margain said.

Roel, commenting on Margain's statements said:

With all the possibilities offered us by our natural resources. Mexico will strive for economic self-sufficiency because we now have moral and physical self-sufficiency. But oil is only a contributor being used by Mexico for development because we also have other resources.

Roel also announced that the presidents of Czecholovakia. Romania and Colombia will visit Mexico later this year. So far this year, major visitors in addition to Carter have included Pope John Paul II and French President Valery Giscard D'Estaing.

Lopez Portillo is expected to seek support for his proposed world energy con-ference during his trips abroad. A presidential spokesman said no date has been suggested for the meeting. Mexico sells much of its oil to the United States, but also exports to Israel, Canada. France. Brazil and other countries.

Pemex, the government oil monopoly, has announced production will be increased to 2.5 million barrels daily with half of that amount to be exported. That production goal could be achieved early next year, it said. The country's daily production now averages 1.5 million barrels, with about a third of that exported.

Lopez Portillo has said Mexico will hold daily production around the 2.5 million-barrel level to avoid a flood of petrodollars that could increase inflation and stir political instability

Nurse Charge In Patients' Death Cited

BALTIMORE (AP) - Nurse Mary Rose Robaczynski, on trial on a charge of murder, once told her supervisors that she was not the only nurse at Maryland General Hospital to disconnect comatose patients from respirators, a fellow nurse testified Tuesday

Peggy Ryan. a registered hurse and patient care coordinator at Maryland General, testified she was part of a conference with Mrs. Robaczynski last March 17 at which the defendant was asked about allegations that she had turned off life-support systems.

"I wasn't the only one." Mrs. Ryan quoted Mrs. Robaczynski as saying.

Mrs. Ryan said Mrs. Robaczynski was crying and very upset, and that she had finally blurted out: "It doesn't matter. She doesn't work here anymore

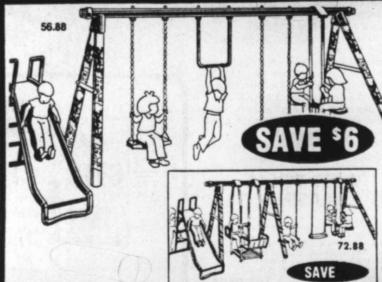

Mrs. Robaczynski, 24, of Pasadena, Md. is charged with killing Harry Gessner. 48. of Baltimore, by unplugging his respirator in the critical care unit of Maryland General last March 8.

A grand jury indicted her on murder charges in the deaths of four comatose Maryland General patients. She has been granted separate trials on the four cases, and Gessner's death is the first one to reach court.

Prosecutors have said that evidence will show Mrs. Robaczynski killed Gessner, who was hospitalized for bladder cancer, double pneumonia, liver cirrhosis, hepatitis and alcoholism, by unplugging the life-support system
