

Some City Gas Pumps Ignore Federal Listings

By JOHNNY HOLMES
Avalanche-Journal Staff

IF A RANDOM sampling of service stations recently in Lubbock is an accurate indicator, nearly half the gasoline pumps in use are in apparent violation of federal regulations concerning the retail sale of gasoline.

The Avalanche-Journal canvassed 20 stations with 125 total pumps for compliance with U. S. Department of Energy rules requiring station operators to display on each pump the maximum price at which they legally can sell gasoline.

Failure to display these prices, or charging more, can cost the operator up to $2,500 per day in civil penalties, and up to $10,000 per day if the violation is willful.

Of the 125 pumps checked, 66 were in complete compliance, while 59 were in apparent violation.

Twenty-six of the 59 pumps had stickers where the ceiling prices could be posted, but the numbers were missing or illegible. Nineteen pumps dispensed gas at prices exceeding that posted on them, and 14 had no maximum price posted.

The survey included stations affiliated with Texaco, Fina, Conoco, Exxon, Chevron, Phillips, Shell, Gulf and Mars.

Most of the dealers who were asked about the possible violations said they were aware of the regulations, but several admitted to being confused as to exactly what they were supposed to be doing. "I don't know if I'm legal or not," admitted one Exxon dealer who had three pumps properly marked, four with no stickers at all, and another selling gas for more than the marked price.

Some dealers said they simply couldn't keep up with the frequent changes, explaining that their prices were rising with nearly every new shipment they received. Others said the numbers had washed off their pumps and they hadn't bothered to update them. Many were reluctant to discuss the matter.

"I just want people to know that the oil companies get all this extra money, not the retailers. My profit margin has stayed the same," said one very frustrated Shell dealer.

Oil industry and government officials agree gas prices will continue their march upward rather ceaselessly in the coming months, and in some cases, they may rise a little more than they should. And should that happen, the consumer now has some recourse, other than getting a horse. The Department of Energy has instituted a hotline for motorists who feel certain stations are overcharging for gas or breaking other gas-related rules.

Since its inception in early January, the DOE hotline, a tollfree 800-424-9246, has been rung more than 3,000 times with complaints about possible overcharging.

Lubbock motorists have yet another alternative. The Texas Department of Agriculture office here, at 747-1856, also investigates gasoline-related gripes at the rate of about 15 per month.

But before rushing to the phone, DOE spokesman Bill Webb advises consumers to be aware of certain facts affecting service stations and heating oil dealers: "Most price increases are legitimate. Selling gas, like any other business, is competitive, and price-gouging is the exception rather than the rule.

"In any case, prices will change frequently during these unstable times, and sometimes there will be wide variations between stations of the same affiliation or in close proximity.

"The maximum price for each station is different, as it is based on the price each station charged May 15, 1973, adjusted for several cost increases. As cost adjustments are made, dealers are required to change their posted ceiling prices.

"Stations opening since that date are given a base price by the DOE based on the average price in the area at the time the station opens. "The only way to be absolutely certain a dealer is violating ceiling price regulations is to audit his books.

"Few people seem to be aware of the ceiling prices, or the requirement saying they must be posted on the pumps," said Jack Vandenberg, another DOE spokesman. "When you become aware the prices are supposed to be there on the pumps, you'll start noticing them. Of course, even some dealers don't know they're supposed to be posted."

The three most likely violations are failure to post ceiling prices, charging prices higher than the ceiling, and excessive ceilings and prices, Vandenberg said. All the stations in the survey were checked for the first two of these violations since determining excess ceilings. See SOME STATIONS Page 14

Homeowner Insurance Rates Cut

AUSTIN (AP) — The State Insurance Board slashed property insurance rates Thursday by a 4.1 percent statewide average, but homeowners' premiums will rise in five of the six largest cities.

New rates will take effect July 1. The decision — probably the last important one involving veteran member Ned Price — means Texans will pay an estimated $38 million less for property coverage in the 12 months starting July 1.

Actual premiums paid by a property owner will vary according to location, coverage and type of construction.

The average cost of homeowners policies, which account for more than half the property insurance premiums paid by Texans, will drop 2.3 percent.

Homeowners in 14 coastal counties and in Northwest Texas will enjoy even bigger reductions.

Despite the overall reduction, homeowners in the Central rating territory, which includes Dallas, Fort Worth, Austin, San Antonio and El Paso, will pay 3.3 percent more.

Homeowners rates will drop 7.5 percent in the Seacoast territory, which includes Houston, Beaumont, Port Arthur. See HOMEOWNERS' Page 14

TREE TROUBLE — While Thursday's high winds were simply a source of minor irritation for most Lubbock residents, the 40 mph gusts caused even more trouble for Becky and Bobby White of 2217 27th St. The wind apparently blew over a neighbor's tree, which landed on the hood of White's new Ford Granada about 10 a.m. But that's when the Whites' trouble really began. Public Works employees, who were called to remove the 30-foot tree, told White he had to move his car before they could move the tree. And White told city workers that he couldn't move his car until the tree was lifted from his hood. White said that a public works supervisor told him that moving the tree while the car was still under it would cause even more damage to the vehicle. Finally, about 3 p.m., using a lot of muscle and a car jack, White was able to lift the tree enough to rescue his car, and spent the rest of the afternoon getting repair estimates. ## Signing Set Monday In Washington

By The Associated Press
ARMED WITH broad political support at home, the leaders of Israel and Egypt prepared Thursday for their historic journey to Washington to sign a treaty ending 30 years of hostilities between their nations. But a furious Palestinian leader vowed an all-out drive to scuttle the "defeatist, separatist" treaty.

Mahmoud Labadi of the Marxist Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine said in Beirut, Lebanon, that his group, a branch of the Palestine Liberation Organization, would "spare no effort to undermine U.S. interests in the Arab world."

"Deterrent Action" Seen
The Egyptian regime has chosen the enemy camp, and we will deal with (President Anwar) Sadat's government the same way we deal with the Israelis and the imperialist Americans," he said. "Deterrent action is inevitable."

At the United Nations, the Security Council passed a resolution Thursday that called Israeli settlements in occupied Arab territory an obstruction to peace, and set up a commission to study them. The resolution passed the council 12-0 after eight days of debate. The United States, Britain and Norway abstained. The Israeli mission said in a statement it would bar the study commission from occupied territories.

Pact Signing Monday
The Israeli Parliament, or Knesset, after a 28-hour debate, endorsed the treaty by a vote of 95-18 early Thursday. The English version is to be signed by Sadat and Prime Minister Menachem Begin at 1 p.m. CST Monday on the north lawn of the White House.

In Cairo, Sadat called the Knesset approval "marvelous" and said there was "still a possibility" signing ceremonies for the Arabic and Hebrew versions could be conducted in Cairo and Jerusalem.

Begin favors the separate signings. But Sadat said he still prefers a single ceremony. "Why not sign the three copies there (in Washington) because the man See BEGIN Page 14

Home For EMS Sparks Debate

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
AVALANCHE-JOURNAL STAFF
A SUGGESTION that city fire stations be used as Emergency Medical Services substations sparked heated debate at Thursday's city council meeting with Mayor Dirk West labeling it a "completely unworkable idea."

Clements' Appointee Rejected By Senate

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements felt the sting of defeat Thursday as the Senate, for the first time, rejected one of his appointments — W.B. "Monk" Edwards as a Houston district judge. "I thought that we might win it," said Clements. "We counted noses, and there were some question marks, and it turned out they fell out on the wrong side, and I am disappointed."

Needing 21 votes for confirmation, Edwards fell two short, 19-12. "It was awfully close," Clements told reporters. "It was unfortunate."
Moments before the Edwards vote, the Senate confirmed the appointment of William Daves Jr., a Dallas bank executive, to the State Insurance Board. The vote was 29-0.

Sen. Chet Brooks said "unbelievable pressure" had been applied by the governor's office to confirm Edwards, a former Gulf Oil lawyer, and Clements was asked about implied political and financial threats.

"I think that is nothing more than political baloney," said Clements. "I know of no such threats, and I think that is nothing more than political rhetoric."
Clements said he had talked with a few senators, but the conversations were "friendly. There was an honest difference of opinion. We were in every instance agreeable. I didn't have any bad conversations with anybody."

Asked what the disagreement focused on, Clements said the senators felt it was "not good" that Edwards had no court experience, that he was not a trial lawyer. "No pressure was applied," Clements said. Brooks, D-Pasadena, said he gave Edwards an extra two weeks to withdraw, "and at one point I was told he would, but they've double backed on it. The governor's office has applied unbelievable pressure on members of the Senate. Please help me defeat this sorry appointment."

The governor's assistant for appointments, Tobin Armstrong, said after the vote. "We ran the traps and our numbers were such that it was so close we couldn't withdraw. He's a quality appointment — we still think that."
Armstrong said the last count showed nine Senators solidly against Edwards, two leaning that way and one who said he would go with the governor but went the other way.

Asked about pressure, Armstrong said: "I don't imagine that's the first time that statement's been made. If we go to bat and defend our nominations and get criticized for it, then that's an odd approach to government."
He said it would probably be the end of the week before another appointment would be submitted.
A judicial candidate should be the "epitome of integrity, impartial and fair, not connected with any scandal," Brooks said.

This was in apparent reference to Edwards' testimony that years ago he had delivered a sealed envelope from Gulf's Washington lobbyist, Claude Wild Jr., to former Gov. Preston Smith. Edwards said he assumed the envelope contained cash, and it was later disclosed that the amount was $300.
Gulf acknowledged later that money from an illegal slush fund had been given to numerous political candidates. Ed- See SENATE Page 14

IRS Told To Pay Rent Or Get Out

NEW YORK (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service has been told to pay up or get out.
Government lawyers said that IRS headquarters in Manhattan could be closed by its landlord, who is seeking higher rent. They sought an order in U.S. District Court in Manhattan Thursday to block the landlord.
In its plea, the government complained that owners of the 21-story building have threatened to halt utility service and close the building by 6 p.m. today unless more rent is paid.
A government spokesman said rent now is $185,000 a month.

Diminishing Winds In Area's Forecast

STRONG WINDS and blowing dust will bother South Plains residents again today, but winds should be somewhat diminished from the 40 mph gusts that whipped the area Thursday.
Winds will be northwesterly at 15 to 25 mph today, gusting to 30 mph, and become light and variable by tonight. Wind warnings will be in effect for area lakes.
No precipitation is forecast through Saturday.
Winds will gradually diminish as a deep low pressure system, centered in south central Kansas late Thursday, moves eastward today.
Skies will be fair today, with the high expected in the mid 60s and the low tonight in the low 30s.

The National Weather Service recorded more than five hours of continuous blowing dust for Lubbock Thursday afternoon and reported 44 mph winds — the highest velocity for the day — at 2:08 p.m. at Lubbock International Airport.
Stronger winds were reported in the Panhandle. At 4 p.m., gusts up to 70 mph were reported near Grover in the northern Panhandle and 50 mph winds were occurring at Amarillo International Airport.
In Post, when a West Texas breeze from the northwest rippled across an Indian ceremonial ground early Thursday, it indicated area farmers could expect a fair crop.
According to a Plains Indian legend, the season's agricultural crop can be predicted each March 22 based on the wind's direction. The wind must blow from the east or northeast to indicate a bumper year, according to legend.
For the eighth year, "Chief" Frank A. Runkles, wearing his fringed and beaded buckskin suit and a twin-tailed war bonnet, rose before sunrise Thursday to observe the Tabana Yuane (Comanche for wind-sun) ceremony.
Records kept over 73 years show the ceremony has a 94 percent accuracy rate. Assisted by his grandson, granddaughter and a teenage student of Indian lore from Kress, Runkles rubbed the traditional yucca sticks together and produced a small fire he fueled with a handful of prairie grass.
A retired scoutmaster and non-Indian, Runkles has studied and taught Indian lore for more than 60 years.
Each year he shakes a rawhide rattle, bobs up and down and dances a serpentine pattern from near the small fire to the edge of the "council ring" before making his crop prediction.
This year, about 200 persons were on hand to hear Runkles' prophecy.
"I find it kind of interesting," Runkles said, "that we have these farmers and ranchers using the most scientific methods known and yet they're out here helping us pray to the Great Father."

Companies Get Notification Of Guideline Violations

WASHINGTON (AP) — Administration inflation-fighters have told four unidentified companies they apparently are violating President Carter's voluntary price standards, presidential adviser Alfred Kahn said Thursday.

Kahn told a Senate banking subcommittee the four have been sent notices of non-compliance and if officials are "not satisfied with the replies, we will make them (the names) public."

The disclosure came as Kahn, chairman of the Council on Wage and Price Stability and Carter's top inflation adviser, said organized labor and the nation's 500 largest corporations appear to be complying for the most part with the president's anti-inflation guidelines.

But, he added, "When you get down to anything below the top 500 ... I think you have to believe that there is widespread non-compliance."

Robert Russell, a top assistant to Kahn, added, "I expect that weekly we'll be coming up with new cases of non-compliance."

Administration officials have said previously they intend to make public the names of violators of Carter's voluntary standards. The administration's program seeks to restrain price increases to 0.5 percent below the average price boost of the previous two years. In general, it also asks for wage increases to be held below 7.5 percent.

Kahn said officials of the government's inflation-monitoring agency started contacted about 120 firms last month to request price information.

Economists subsequently determined that about two-thirds of the companies, or 80 of them, are in compliance with the guidelines. The government has asked for more information from about three dozen firms, and has already determined that four apparently are violating the voluntary standards Carter set down last October.

in the fourth quarter of 1978 when compared with the same period of 1977. Profits for calendar 1978 rose by 16.2 percent over calendar 1977.

AFL-CIO President George Meany immediately charged that fourth quarter figures were evidence of "profit-gouging."

Top administration officials at first also expressed dismay, but have been tempering their statements since Monday.

Kahn told the subcommittee that "high profits are not necessarily a sign of non-compliance" with the guidelines, and said there is "every reason for profits to taper off" as the economy cools.

In addition, presidential press secretary Jody Powell told reporters the administration does not intend to set an overall target for corporate earnings.

Powell said the administration is worried that reports of higher profits may undermine public support for the president's inflation-fighting effort. But he said the administration does not want to try to dictate to corporations what level of earnings would be appropriate.

On Thursday, Powell resisted suggestions that the president isn't willing to act to curb corporate profits.

"We are obviously concerned about the situation," he said. "What specific steps we are prepared to take is something I'm not prepared to deal with now."

The Lubbock Avalanche-Journal SHALL NOT BE LIABLE FOR FAILURE TO PUBLISH AN AD OR for a typographic error or errors in publication except to the extent of the cost of the ad for the first day of insertion. Adjustment for errors is limited to the cost of that portion of the ad wherein the error occurred.

In addition to declining to identify the firms by name, Kahn turned aside a request by Sen. Donald Riegle, D-Mich., to name the industries the companies are involved in.

"If I were to identify the industries in at least a couple of cases you'd be very close to the companies," he said.

On another subject, Kahn also told the panel that Carter has asked him and other top officials to look into corporate profit figures released earlier in the week by the Commerce Department.

The department reported that corporate profits rose by more than 26 percent

Profit--It's Not A Dirty Word

THE WORD PROFIT to some, apparently, is a dirty six-letter word. "Excess" profit, whatever that actually entails, is plain obscene. At least, those conclusions might be drawn from the anguished cries from some in the administration and among labor leaders in the wake of the latest government figures on corporation earnings and the Gross National Product growth for the past year. Earlier this week, the government said profits of the nation's corporations increased 16.2 percent the past year, the most in almost three decades. Carter administration officials immediately branded the news a "catastrophe" for the nation's anti-inflation program.

OR, PUT ANOTHER way, how are you gonna keep wages down, on the farm and factory, when business is making it big? In making its figures public, the government also noted that the GNP expanded at a 6.9 percent rate the last quarter and an average of four percent for the whole year. The gains in profits and economic growth were both described as disturbingly high and "constituting a setback in the nation's anti-inflation drive."

Alfred E. Kahn, the administration's chief inflation-fighter, said in advance of the report that the boost in profits last year was a "catastrophe" that underscores "a strong belief that the business community has not been doing its share in the anti-inflation" campaign. THE GOVERNMENT'S figures and conclusions were challenged by some financial observers. Some analysts say much of the increase in profits is the result of inventory gains caused by inflation and does not significantly benefit the corporations.

Iran As An Object Lesson

THOSE AMERICANS who sometimes find themselves in sympathy with "the plight of the oppressed and downtrodden" around the world have an object lesson on the subject in Iran today. While reforms and changes were due, and in fact were being implemented under Shah Mohammed Pahlavi, the solution certainly leaves a lot to be desired. So much, in fact, that there is serious question, even in among some in Iran, that what the nation has wound up with is any "solution" at all.

INSTEAD OF a viable economy which was based on oil sales to the West and gas sales to Russia, the nation is now near bankruptcy. Instead of a degree of law and order, even if questionable in certain instances, the nation still has near anarchy in the streets and

Balanced Budget Scale Gives Weight To Fate

WASHINGTON—Cutting taxes and reducing public outlays continue to be the leading issues of our politics, though it is taking Congress a while, as usual, to come up with a firm response. One area in which the lawmakers find their hand is being forced is that of balanced budgets. With relatively little fanfare, a resolution on this subject has been wending its way through the legislatures of the several states.

If adopted by 34 of them, it would require the Congress either to call a constitutional convention to draft a balanced budget amendment to our fundamental law, or write an amendment of its own and start it toward ratification. AT THIS writing, according to the estimates of the National Taxpayers Union, 28 states have adopted valid resolutions on this subject.

THE BALANCING requirement is described as a mechanical straitjacket, while the convention idea is depicted as a Pandora's box permitting wholesale revamping of the Constitution. On the first point, suffice it say that 81 percent of the American people believe a balanced budget is a good idea, and do not consider it an unwarranted straitjacket on government.

Advocates of unrestricted government have launched a vehement attack on the proposal, contesting both the balanced budget idea and the call for a convention. SENS. EDMUND MUSKIE of Maine and Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts have weighed in for the negative, as have President Carter and House Republican leader John Rhodes.

ONE INGENUOUS wrinkle on the balanced budget idea is the proposal of Indiana Sen. Richard Lugar, who attacks the problem from the standpoint of congressional procedure. Lugar suggests requiring a two-thirds vote in each house of Congress to adopt a deficit budget. This has the virtues of simplicity and clarity, since it requires no mathematical calculations of national product or budgetary levels. As Lugar points out, the super-majority concept is used for other issues of importance, and the soundness of our economy and currency is about as important an issue as one is likely to discover.

ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK:

CIA's Dead Arm

WASHINGTON—Although details are veiled in top secret national security files, the State Department recently decided against an extremely important but relatively simple cloak-and-dagger operation in a Southeast Asian country. The reason: the CIA decided it would have to be reported to Congress.

That decision, reached after agonizing deliberations, reflected fear—born of past experience—that the operation would assuredly be leaked by one of the scores of congressmen or their staff aides. Under oversight rules insisted on by Congress in the post-Watergate climate, eight congressional committees must be informed, in secret, about all undercover or clandestine operations to be undertaken by the CIA's once formidable cloak-and-dagger division. Such broadcasting of super-secret operations has played into the hands of the anti-CIA clique on Capitol Hill and encouraged systematic leaking aimed at further discrediting the CIA.

When high officials at State were finally told that the CIA's lawyers had ruled that the operation fell within legal reporting rules, it was immediately cancelled. Risks of disclosure and subsequent political embarrassment, it was felt, outweighed the value of the operation.

DEFENSE-ORIENTED Republicans can abandon hope that Sen. Howard Baker of Tennessee will be replaced by Sen. John Tower of Texas as Senate minority leader in time for the SALT II debate. Baker previously had promised he would "step aside" as floor leader when his campaign for the Republican presidential nomination got going.

That spawned hope among hard-liners that Tower, chairman of the Senate Republican Policy Committee, would defeat Sen. Ted Stevens of Alaska, assistant floor leader, as Baker's replacement. Tower would provide a more partisan Republican voice on the strategic arms limitation treaty (SALT). But Baker is in no hurry to leave. "It was too hard to win the job in the first place for him to go quickly," one Senate insider explained to us.

In particular, he wants to be at the helm for the SALT debate. Therefore, Baker may stay as leader for a while after announcing his presidential candidacy—perhaps keeping the job for the rest of the year. Moreover, to step aside does not necessarily mean to resign, in Baker's opinion. He may merely take a leave of absence from the leadership, during which Stevens—not Tower—would automatically succeed him.

A HINT OF how ill-prepared Rep. Jack Kemp is for the presidential race he is contemplating was his abysmal performance at the Midwestern Republican Conference in Indianapolis. Along with five other Republicans entered in the presidential "cattle show" at the conference, Kemp was allotted 8 to 10 minutes. Unlike the others, Kemp had prepared no special material. His staff simply was not equipped for the task.

What's more, just as he began to speak, he was disconcerted as questionnaires for a CBS presidential preference poll were passed through the audience. THE USUALLY dynamic Kemp wandered listlessly through 25 minutes of disconnected fragments from his regular speeches. The CBS poll put Kemp dead last in all categories—including best speaker, where he barely nosed out George Bush for the booby prize.

A footnote: Bush's performance was not helped by granny glasses that make him look faintly professorial and absent-minded. But he is about to discard them for proper spectacles. Bush is also taking lessons to unlearn what he learned in earlier exercises about how to make a long, serious speech; now he is undergoing a cram course in stump-speaking and crowd-pleasing rhetoric.

SUPREME NATO commander Alexander Haig, who gives up his four stars in June for a possible new political career, was the star performer at an off-the-record breakfast with a dozen Republican senators on Capitol Hill. In uniform and saying nothing that could be interpreted as political in any partisan sense, Haig nevertheless delivered one of the "strongest addresses on America's world problems" that one senator had ever heard. The outgoing commander of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization discussed the new strategic arms limitation talks with the Soviet Union, but a careful reading between the lines was necessary to hear his warning.

HAIK'S VOICE IS expected to weigh heavily against the new SALT treaty, unless the text is drastically modified by Senate amendment. But while in uniform, mum's the word. Haig's political ambitions range from the Republican presidential nomination, the vice presidential nomination if he cannot win the top spot, or the U.S. Senate seat in Pennsylvania now held by retiring GOP Sen. Richard Schweiker. Politicians give him almost no chance for the 1980 presidential nomination, but larger prospects for either the vice presidential spot or the Senate. Continuing decline of the U.S. in the world and more defeats such as the anti-American crusade in Iran could change that and make Haig a real 1980 factor.

JAY HARRIS:

A Life In Pastels...

LISBON, Portugal—After a few days in Madeira and Portugal, we were beginning to wonder if anyone ever died. After all, we had seen only one tiny graveyard. It hung precariously on an oceanside cliff on the north side of Madeira.

Then, on the last day of our visit to Portugal itself, during a stop at a small castle overlooking the quaint fishing village of Sesimbra, we came upon one of the most unique and attractive grave sites we have seen anywhere. In an oblong area within the walled grounds were the final resting places of perhaps 200 or more persons, each with small marble headstones, each with a metal or protected photo of the deceased, each with vital data, each covered with beautiful flowers. Far below, a verdant valley with stair-stepped houses, hotels, roads, Sesimbra itself, shimmered in the noonday sun. It was a most unusual and haunting setting to say the least.

SESIMBRA CASTLE was originally a Moorish stronghold. The castle was rebuilt after the devastating 1755 earthquake, but since has fallen into disrepair, although the quaint graveyard hasn't. It is the stuff of which days of yore are relived. Below, the steep and narrow winding streets of Sesimbra lead to the well-protected bay, busy with boats, fishing gear and fishermen bringing in their catches from near and far. Gray, plastic baskets of fish of almost every description are stacked inside a nearby metal building, weighed, leed down and made ready for the daily auction. Buyers come from as far as Lisbon. The brightly painted boats, against a backdrop of golden sand and green hills, offer perfect subjects for photos or paint and brush. The nearby Hotel do Mar not only offers a majestic view and fine accommodations, but food to match.

WE STARTED our journey to Sesimbra and the larger port of Setubal via a ferry ride across the broad Tagus River.

Boarding the boat, along with a number of Portuguese going to the south shore to work or after shopping, we could look back on one of the oldest sections of Lisbon, the Alfama. It was here and at this point that some of the nation's explorers set forth and later returned with riches to delight a King and enthrall an empire. Here, history has etched its memories. Across the river, sometimes called "the Sea of Straw," because of its calm waters and reflection from a golden sun, the ferry approaches the Lisnave drydocks, reputed to be the world's largest. A short distance away is the huge 25th of April bridge, a red suspension copy of San Francisco's Golden Gate.

After a short drive, one comes upon the center of one of Portugal's major industries, the making of wine. In an ancient setting and an ultra-modern one, the finest grapes in all the land are processed, stored in huge mahogany and oak casks, some 250 years old, and allowed to age properly. One, a popular brand in America, is aged in the casks three to four years, then placed in bottles in underground "caves" another two years.

HERE AT THE sprawling and ultra clean J. M. da Fonseca complex, both Lancers and Mateus, as well as other wines become reality. The two widely known labels go all over the world, but in especially large quantities to the U.S. and Britain. In the case of Lancers, we watched as green glass containers received a "spray paint" job to give them the earthen look of the past. The British, we were told, still demand their Lancers in the real thing, although the company for all practical purposes dropped the stone bottles 14 years ago.

Export of wine to the U.S., in the millions of cases, helps keep Portugal's precarious balance of payments from being in worse shape. And consumption of Portuguese and Madeira wines is going up, those who know say. Actually, both Portugal and Madeira make many wines, several of which are savored by connoisseurs as much as the more widely known brands. And here, wine comes as naturally as does water on the table in the states.

AFTER A LUNCH stop at Sesimbra and a look at the startlingly blue Atlantic, one of the breathtaking drives of Portugal is only a mountain or two away. Winding into the hills along the coast, one can travel along the "road of the Golden Stones," built at great cost in the past century, to dizzying heights. Here in the Serra da Arrabida, a mountain range which borders the Atlantic, may be found one of the beauty spots of Portugal. Unusual grottoes, wild Mediterranean-type vegetation, palm trees and an ancient monastery mark the path of today's traveler.

At one point, on the crest of the mountains, one can see for miles, valleys and rivers and on a clear day Lisbon in the distance. In the opposite direction are the vast expanses of the Atlantic. SETUBAL IS one of Portugal's ancient cities and one of its largest. It is here, with archaeological finds nearby, that craftsmen build fine fishing boats and sardines are canned. Late in the day, local residents and tourists share a brief moment at a sidewalk cafe. A horse-drawn carriage races through the streets to the accompaniment of a bugle and leaflets announcing a Sunday bull fight.

As the sun bathes the countryside, the drive heads along a broad highway, past the towering Monument to Christ overlooking the Tagus and Lisbon, then across the crowded bridge. Here again is Lisbon, a panorama in pastels. Glory and tragedy have stalked this proud city in equal measure through its history. Lisbon can be both sad and gay, and she sometimes weeps for her past and laughs for today in the haunting songs of the "fado," the songs of fate. It is a refrain one can never forget...

L.M. BOYD: ...Pass It On

THE TV networks killed off 20 programs between September of 1978 and January of 1979. Biggest wipeout in TV history. I would like to put a sincere query to you. Are some of us just getting more selective or are the television networks turning out siller shows with each successive year?

The French phrase "hors d'oeuvre" means "outside the main works."

Driver Leads Law Merry Chase

An 18-year-old Lubbock man remained in the county jail Thursday night after he led police on a chase exceeding 100 mph at one point from the 2600-block of Avenue A to the 200-block of 34th Street and allegedly wrecked seven cars, including his own, in the process.

Officer Tim Smith reported that he spotted the man driving a 1970 Chevrolet sedan at a high rate of speed in the 2600-block of Avenue A and began pursuit.

Smith said in his report that the suspect ignored the police car's siren and flashing lights and headed south along Avenue A, changing lanes of traffic without warning.

The suspect finally slowed his car, Smith said, and attempted to change lanes to turn west, but instead lost control of the vehicle and struck a parked car in the 3100-block of Avenue A. The suspect then continued south, and hit another parked vehicle in the next block before turning west onto 34th Street, where he struck a third car and kept driving.

In the 200-block of 34th Street, the suspect hit another parked car, forcing it to collide with a fifth vehicle, according to Smith's report.

The man hit still another car, Smith said, before turning and driving down the railroad tracks west of Avenue A with the officer still in pursuit.

Smith said the suspect's vehicle finally stopped at 31st Street and Avenue B, the man jumped from the vehicle and the officer finally caught him in the 200-block of 31st Street.

After a struggle, which resulted in Smith's uniform being ripped in several places, the suspect was arrested on suspicion of driving while intoxicated and issued 27 traffic citations.

In other activity, police are investigating the latest outbreak of burglaries.

Albert Lee Williams said the back door of his 2917 E. Baylor St. residence was pried Thursday morning, the house ransacked and $2,000 worth of property, including two televisions, four guns, clothing, stereo equipment and tools, stolen.

Roy Neil Stringer said that more than $1,800 in goods were stolen from his 2115-B 51st St. home Thursday morning. Stringer said a door at his residence was pried and the burglars took a television, guitar, diamond stickpin, .38-caliber pistol, tools, clothing and a camera.

About $2,000 worth of hearing aid equipment was reported stolen from Meinard Mier's 1974 Chevrolet sedan while it was parked outside his 2317 Baylor St., No. 11, home Wednesday night.

Charles A. Britt, an employee of W.W. Steel at 2221 Erskine St., told police burglars made off with $700 of the company's tools Wednesday night. The intruders apparently opened an unlocked sliding door and then crawled under a wire gate to get to the storage area, Britt said.

Wreck Fatal To City Man

Bobby Joe Givens, 22, was killed Thursday afternoon when the car he was driving was struck broadside by a pickup truck.

The collision occurred on FM 835 1.6 miles east of Lubbock after Givens apparently made a U-turn to go back and check on a friend who was riding a motorcycle.

Givens, of 2301 50th St., was dead on arrival at Methodist Hospital following the 1:30 p.m. collision. Thursday's death was the fifth traffic fatality recorded in Lubbock County this year.

Five other Lubbock residents also were injured, two seriously, in the collision.

Bobby Rosenbrook, 19, of 6801 W. 19th St. said he was following Givens' 1973 Chevrolet sedan, which was headed east on the farm road, when he got sand in his eyes and pulled his motorcycle onto the roadway's shoulder.

Rosenbrook said Givens apparently thought the cyclist was having trouble, and turned around to check on him when the collision occurred.

Two passengers in Givens' car, 18-year-old Laura Mayhugh and Kim Peek, 19, suffered internal injuries in the wreck, according to the Department of Public Safety.

Miss Mayhugh, of 5508 36th St., was in critical condition Thursday at Health Sciences Center Hospital and Miss Peek, of 709 Ave. R, was in serious, but stable, condition at Methodist Hospital.

The driver of the pickup truck received minor injuries and was treated at HSC and released. Two passengers in the pickup, Dewey Gleghorn, 14, and Tommy Gleghorn, 10, both of Route 10, Lubbock, also were treated and released from HSC.

Services for Givens are pending with Sanders Funeral Home.

Health Proposals To Be Limited to Catastrophic Health Costs

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration says it will limit its national health insurance proposal this year to a $10 billion to $15 billion program to protect all Americans against catastrophic health costs and expand some benefits for the aged and the poor.

No substantial amount of money would be spent on the program for more than three years, and even the limited plan would be contingent on enactment of effective hospital cost containment legislation, HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. said Thursday.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, sponsor of a labor-backed comprehensive health insurance bill, rejected President Carter's approach as wasteful and told an impromptu Capitol Hill news conference, "I couldn't support this program."

Kennedy said, "I share the serious disappointment of the millions of Americans who deserve a better health care system and who have relied in good faith on the administration's long-standing commitment to development of an effective program for the nation."

Kennedy said next month he will propose his own health care reform legislation. "It will cost less in the aggregate than the administration's plan," he said. Califano announced the president's decision at a speech in New York and White House officials said many details of the plan still have to be worked out. But they said the new money in "phase one" would be spent primarily to insure everyone against the costs of catastrophic illness and expand the eligibility and benefit provisions of Medicare and Medicaid.

The two principal health care plans already in existence cost the federal treasury about $60 billion a year.

Califano insisted that "the president remains committed to the goal of providing every American with coverage for basic health services" and would outline a comprehensive national health plan in a message to Congress in the next few months.

But he said specific legislation will be limited to a first phase which he described as all Congress can digest at this time and the most the country can afford given present economic considerations.

At the White House, Press Secretary Jody Powell denied that Carter had abandoned his campaign promise to press for comprehensive national health insurance.

Asked to respond to Kennedy's criticisms, Powell said, "I don't know what the senator said, but it's a free country."

Powell said advocates of broader health insurance plans are free to submit them to Congress "and see what happens."

Kennedy met privately with Carter on Wednesday. Stuart Eizenstat, the president's chief domestic counselor, said he expected such talks to continue in an attempt to make the president's long-range plan coincide as much as possible with Kennedy's. But the Massachusetts Democrat offered little encouragement Thursday.

U.S. Marine May Face Charges Upon Return To United States

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — U.S. Marine Robert R. Garwood flew out of Vietnam and headed home Thursday after 13 years behind a curtain of secrecy in that war-torn land. He may face charges of collaboration with the enemy in the United States.

Pfc. Garwood, 33, of Greensburg, Ind., refused to talk to reporters on arrival at Bangkok airport on a regularly scheduled Air France flight from Ho Chi Minh City, formerly Saigon. He later was flown aboard a U.S. military transport to Okinawa, where he is to remain for a few days.

In Washington, Marine spokesman Lt. Col. Art Brill said allegations against Garwood are being studied to determine whether there should be a court martial. He said the allegations include soliciting American combat forces to throw down their weapons and refuse to fight; attempting to cause insubordination; disloyalty and refusal of duty among fellow prisoners of war; suspicion of desertion in time of war; unlawful dealings with the enemy; and misbehavior while a prisoner of war.

If tried and convicted of all charges,

Brill said, Garwood could be sentenced to death. But he noted there have been no executions of Marines since before the turn of the century. He said Garwood was advised of the allegations and his rights.

There was no elaboration on the allegations, but the Marine Corps said some former POWs are among the sources of information.

In New York, a lawyer who said he has been hired by Garwood's family objected to the length of time Garwood will be in Okinawa, on grounds his client would be tempted during that period to tell his side of the story in ways that could damage him.

The attorney, Dermot G. Foley, also said the Marines had ignored requests to release funds from Garwood's back pay account to finance the presence of a civilian lawyer in Bangkok when he was released.

"I don't believe it's necessary to keep anybody three to five days to give him a physical examination," Foley said, calling the examination "part of the pressure-cooker atmosphere that they're building to get Garwood as deeply in trouble as they can."

Garwood, thin and about six feet tall, wore sunglasses and had a flower in the buttonhole of his sports shirt as he got off the commercial jetliner here and was escorted through the crowd of reporters by U.S. Consul Andrew Antipapas.

The official later told reporters, "I told him that his lawyer doesn't want him to talk."

The Marine Corps said investigation into the allegations will follow medical processing at Kuwae U.S. Naval Hospital on Okinawa and that "a debriefing is also planned after Garwood returns to the continental United States" some time next week.

Garwood, who reportedly has $146,000 in back pay coming, is still listed as a prisoner of war, but has been accused by some of having collaborated with the communist side during the war in exchange for his release in 1966.

He denies that, but he reportedly stayed in Vietnam voluntarily after his release.

There have been unconfirmed allegations that Garwood participated in Viet Cong patrols against U.S. troops, and

Rep. G.V. "Sonny" Montgomery, D-Miss., has said that Garwood "should be put in jail."

In an interview in Hanoi on Wednesday televised by NBC News, Garwood said, "I did not betray the United States, but I betrayed the involvement of the U.S. government in Vietnam.

"I don't know if you consider me as a peace fighter or not, but ... I was not in collaboration with the Vietnamese ... I was in collaboration with the people of the United States against involvement of the United States government in Vietnam."

He said he wanted to return home "because I am an American, not a Vietnamese."

Shooting Reported Stopped In Northwestern Iran

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — The shooting stopped Thursday in Sanandaj, scene of heavy fighting this week between insurgent Kurdish tribesmen demanding self rule and troops loyal to the new Islamic government.

More than 500 persons reportedly have been killed in four days of clashes between Kurdish rebels who seized the northwestern city and besieged army troops inside their military headquarters.

In Shiraz, in southern Iran, a revolutionary court Thursday sentenced two police officials to death for killing a clergyman in the first such verdict to be announced since Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini banned summary trials last Friday.

Unlike previous trials, however, execution of the sentences were postponed until they could be confirmed by the provincial prosecutor — apparently a process ordered by Khomeini.

The Ayatollah Beheshti, a Khomeini aide who flew to Sanandaj Wednesday in an attempt to settle the Kurdish dispute, said "complete understanding" prevailed between the two sides. Talks were continuing.

News from Sanandaj were sketchy since Thursday was the beginning of Iran's Nowroz new year holiday. But reports telephoned to Tehran said the shooting in Sanandaj stopped after Iranian troops fired salvos of mortar and machine gun bullets at the Kurds surrounding them.

A group of Kurdish tribesmen reportedly marched on the besieged army headquarters after the shooting stopped, to demand the release of between 150 and 180 fellow tribesmen being held hostage. They were fired upon by troops inside the base and at least four men were reported killed.

Mahmoud Taleghani, Khomeini's closest aide, headed the government team negotiating with the Kurdish tribesmen, who were represented by chieftains and clergymen from major towns of the restive region.

Reports reaching Tehran said the going was difficult as the Kurds presented stiff demands for self-rule and elections, rather than appointments, of governors and other officials.

Some food shops in the city reopened Thursday as the fighting subsided.

In Tehran, the government ordered the deputy chief of Afghanistan's diplomatic mission to leave the country within 48 hours in apparent retaliation for Kabul's expulsion of an Iranian consul.

Revival Atmosphere Brought To State Capitol By Jackson

AUSTIN (AP) — The Rev. Jesse Jackson brought all the fervor of a traveling salvation show to the state capitol Thursday as he called for legislators to perform their duties with a higher moral vision.

"I am somebody," an overflow crowd of legislators and gallery spectators chanted as Jackson returned for an encore after a 45-minute speech in the House chamber.

"Respect me; protect me; never neglect me," the black leader exhorted the crowd to repeat. "My mind is a pearl. I can learn anything in the world."

Jackson, founder of a "Push for Excellence" education program, told the joint House and Senate session he was happy to be in the spot where the late President Lyndon B. Johnson received his training.

"Lyndon B. Johnson was one of the great visionaries of the 20th century, perhaps one of the greatest visionaries of our times," Jackson said. "He rose above the trees to see the forest."

President Carter started as a visionary but has since developed cataracts, the Baptist clergyman quipped.

Jackson said the South should rise again "in the spirit of redemption in the community to lift this nation out of its social morass."

He chided the new conservative trend in the nation.

"We must solve these great problems of this day not only with a legal mind, a technical mind, but with a compassionate heart," he said. "As our hearts lock up, so do our minds."

He said social programs are not causing an increasing burden for the individual taxpayer, nor are affirmative action programs the cause of lost jobs.

Corporations are bearing a decreasing tax share and jobs are going abroad, Jackson said.

"As long as we are polarized racially, we have confusion and impotence. When we are together, we have fusion and power," he said.

"In each other we must trust. Trust must be the foundation, the unseen stone of a great nation. ... Trust cannot be legislated. Trust cannot be demanded. We must earn the trust that people have in us."

His new program, commonly known as Push-Excel, is designed to bring a message of self discipline to the nation's schools.

"We are determined to make education a national priority — in our minds, in our politics and in our budgets," Jackson said.

Findings Show Possible Hike In Leukemia

AUSTIN (AP) — The state health department reported Thursday initial findings in a survey of "leukemia and related conditions" in five Southeast Texas counties "indicate there may be some increased incidence of leukemia in the area."

The counties named were Jefferson, Orange, Chambers, Hardin and Liberty. The department said further study will be made of specific population groups, with the first study group the 1964-1978 graduates of Port Neches High School.

Four deaths from leukemia have been reported in individuals who were graduated in 1964, 1966, 1968 and 1974, and three of these cases have been confirmed, the department said in a statement.

"It must be emphasized," the department added, "that this study is concerned with the incidence of leukemia and related conditions, not the cause."

Department figures show leukemia deaths in the United States in 1950-1969 were 6.77 per 100,000 population. From 1969 through 1977, the leukemia death rate in Jefferson County was 6.82 per 100,000 population, in Chambers 6.96, Hardin 6.65, Liberty 9.63, Orange 6.84 and all of Texas 6.92.

A Port Arthur man, Bodie Pryor, and four other leukemia victims have filed a multi-million dollar lawsuit against B.F. Goodrich Co. and Texas U.S. Chemical Co., which have plants near Port Neches High School, the Austin American-Statesman reported Wednesday.

The story was based on an interview with Pryor, who was a chemical engineer for 20 years at a plant in the area.

Gov. Clements Reveals New Appointments

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements appointed the corporate controller of the King Ranch Thursday to the banking section of the Finance Commission of Texas.

Ronald Lee Kellett, 38, of Kingsville will replace Cam F. Dowell Jr. of Dallas and will serve a six-year term expiring Feb. 1, 1985.

The commission makes policy for and appoints the chief executives of the State Banking Department, the Texas Savings and Loan Department and the Consumer Credit Commission.

Clements also announced these appointments:

— Joe B. Simmons Jr., 52, of Lubbock, to the Texas Board of Private Investigators and Private Security Agencies. Simmons is president and board chairman of Associated Security Industries, Inc.

— David L. Shaw, 48, of Dallas, to the Texas Amusement Machine Commission. Shaw, a graduate of Wiley College, is president of Shawco, Inc., of Texas, a maintenance service corporation.

— George A. McCasne, 64, of Houston, and Ted Schuler Jr., 48, of Amarillo, to the Real Estate Research Advisory Committee. McCasne is senior vice-president of Wilhelm, Leyendecker, Morrison and McCasne, Inc., a commercial, industrial and investment property firm. Schuler is vice-president of Security Federal Savings and Loan Association.

Montford Plans To Get Tough On Bingo Games

Criminal District Attorney John T. Montford this week sent warning letters to 20 groups and organizations conducting possibly illegal bingo games.

"We realize that the enforcement of all laws is not popular with many persons, but such legislation is passed in Austin, not Lubbock County," Montford wrote. "Therefore, we will file all such violations of the penal code presented for prosecution by law enforcement agencies. This is the only notice you will receive from this office."

He said his office "has received many inquiries regarding the legality of 'bingo games' and other activities that may constitute a violation of the Penal Code of Texas" and has advised all concerned groups to consult an attorney.

"It is the intention of this office to prosecute all violations of the gambling statutes, especially where there is promotion of such activities for gain or indications of any organized crime or professional gambling activity," Montford said. "Too, we will not ignore such activities merely because the latter elements are not present."

He said in the letter that his office is not authorized to give advisory opinions on such activities.

Arbitration Seen On Health Department Rules

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The Texas Attorney General or a state District Court will have to arbitrate a dispute between the City of Lubbock and the Texas Department of Health over the effect of state agency regulations, City Attorney John Ross told the Lubbock City Council Thursday.

Following an Austin meeting earlier this week with TDH attorneys, Ross said there was agreement between the parties on the seriousness of the problem but no agreement on a solution to it.

When the city council began considering a new food sanitation ordinance, Ross said TDH passed rules its officials said had the effect of state statutes.

If the regulations have the "force and effect of statutes," it would be "futile" for the council to adopt a new food ordinance since it would have to duplicate the state rules, Ross said.

The position of TDH on the effect of the regulations was "very disquieting," Ross said, since it raised a constitutional question on the powers of home-rule municipal governments such as the City of Lubbock.

The Texas Constitution gives home-rule cities the authority to pass ordinances so long as they are not in conflict with the constitution or state legislation.

"Rules by agencies are not general laws passed by the legislature of Texas," Ross said, adding that he interprets the legislative intent to mean the state health board has the authority in general law cities, but home-rule cities are free to pass ordinances suited to their individual problems.

"I consider it a serious constitutional question with ramifications throughout the state," Ross said. "We need to have it laid to rest."

If the position of the health department is upheld, Ross said it constitutes an "erosion of power" from Texas home-rule cities.

To determine who's position is legally correct, Ross said the city and health department can either seek an attorney general's opinion or "enter into a friendly suit for a declaratory judgment to resolve this particular issue."

Meanwhile, Ross said the city has a "fairly comprehensive (food sanitation) ordinance at present, adequate to do the job in the interim."

"Lubbock is not going unprotected," he said.

Also at Thursday's meeting, council members voted to retain the one percent sales tax on electric and gas utility bills which generates about $600,000 a year for Lubbock.

The legislature abolished the state sales tax on utilities during last summer's special session and required Texas cities to take action to continue the tax before May 29 or lose the revenue.

The council took no action on the proposed sale of $8.82 million in general obligation bonds on May 22, pending completion of financial projections indicating the city's ability to retire the bonds.

City Manager Larry Cunningham said he hopes to have the financial report ready by the April 12 council meeting.

The bonds would finance water, street and fire protection improvements, but questions have been raised concerning the city's ability to pay off the bonds in light of last year's reduction in the city property tax rate and action by the state legislature to exempt from taxation property now on the city's tax roll.

There also are questions concerning the effect of a tax limitation petition being circulated by the Lubbock Property Owners Association on the city's bond rating.

The council authorized formation of an advisory group representing Lubbock's senior citizens to work with the Parks and Recreation Board on facilities to be included when Goedeke Branch Library is renovated to become a senior citizens center. Goedeke will be converted following the construction of a branch library in Southwest Lubbock.

The council discussed, but took no action on, the city's prime sponsorship and participation in a manpower consortium to deliver programs funded through the Comprehensive Education and Training Act.

Council members authorized the use of $45,000 in federal Community Development funds to continue providing the same number of meals per day in a senior citizens nutrition program.

The city has funds for 265 meals a day, but has been providing an average of 200. The additional $45,000, needed also because of increased costs in the program, will continue the present number of meals from June 1 through May 31, 1980.

While approving the additional funds for the program, council members noted their objection to a recent change in federal guidelines stating donations from the program participants only can be used for additional meals.

Previously the $18-20,000 each year had been used to defray all program costs.

not simply meal costs. "The guidelines are stupid," Councilwoman Carolyn Jordan said and asked that a letter be sent to the federal government noting the council's displeasure.

Councilman Bill McAllister praised the program but cautioned it "is going to get costlier and it might get out of hand."

McAllister urged the staff to investigate other sources of funds for the program to defray the rising expense.

The community development funds will be used to pay personnel costs in the program.

Ironically, City Manager Larry Cunningham noted, it is the success of the program which has caused the funding problems.

Tongsun Park Subpoenaed By Defense

MONROE, La. (AP) — Tongsun Park, the prosecution's star witness in the bribery trial of former congressman Otto Passman, was handed a subpoena on the witness stand Thursday to appear as a defense witness.

Just as Park finished eight days of interrogation — the last five by the defense — and was about to step down, defense lawyer Camille Gravel said, "There is one more thing," and handed him the subpoena.

As unruffled as ever, the South Korean businessman accepted the paper, which commands his presence March 29, and continued out the door, headed for a plane back to Washington.

Passman, 78, was expressionless and quiet, as he has been from the start of his federal court trial on charges of taking $193,000 in bribes from Park during the early 1970s.

Following Park on the witness stand was Gregory Leets of Dallas, an Internal Revenue Service agent once stationed in Washington. He testified that a ledger and a 1973 diary found when Park's Washington home was seized in a tax case on March 7, 1977, listed the names of congressmen who had received money from him.

As the trial neared the end of its third week, Gravel charged that Park is so anxious to avoid prosecution he would say anything the Department of Justice wants him to.

"He is a pawn in the hands of the prosecution," Gravel said. Jurors were out of the courtroom at the time.

The lawyers were squabbling over a defense effort to introduce as evidence several documents, including a letter from President Carter to the speaker of the House urging action in the investigation of congressman who allegedly took money from Park.

Scores of congressmen reportedly took money from Park, a lavish host and free-handed pal, but the upshot of the House investigation was that three representatives were "reprimanded."

Judge Earl Veron rejected Gravel's claim that the documents were essential to back up his claim that Park agreed to return to the United States from South Korea to testify only because of pressure so intense he feared for his life if he refused.

Veron agreed with the prosecution that the documents had nothing to do with whether Passman is guilty or innocent of charges that he took $193,000 in bribes from Park from 1972 through 1975 in connection with South Korean purchases of U.S. rice.

At that time, Park was South Korea's sole agent for U.S. rice deals, earning $9 million in commissions, and Passman was chairman of a House subcommittee with power over foreign aid programs.

Passman also was charged with conspiring with Park, accepting illegal gratuities, and evading income taxes.

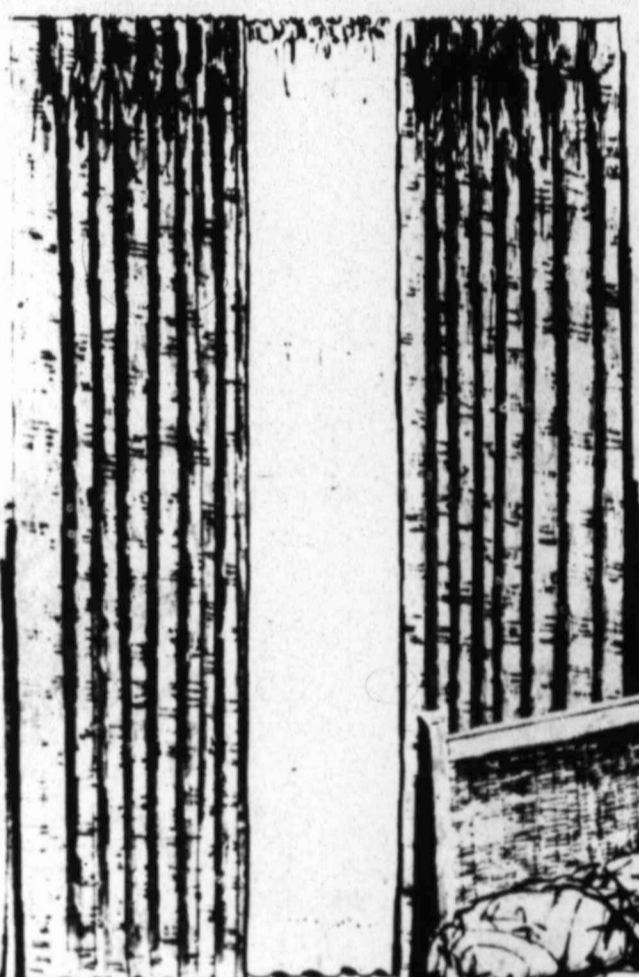

In 1834, Horace Greeley founded the New Yorker, a weekly literary newspaper.

Odyssey Of U.S. Space Shuttle Interrupted By 'Lousy' Weather

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Bad weather on Thursday continued to plague the odyssey of the American space shuttle Columbia, bolted to the back of a jumbo jet, on its way to Florida.

The odd coupling landed here for refueling, after an unscheduled two-day stopover in El Paso, and officials said poor weather ahead would keep the mission grounded in San Antonio at least overnight.

Youngster Amazed By Shuttle

SAN ANTONIO (UPI) — Twelve-year-old Gary Dominguez was playing tennis at a nearby high school when he saw a mammoth 747 jumbo jet, the space shuttle Columbia perched on top of it, circling Kelly Air Force Base.

"It was beautiful. It was shining when the sunlight hit it," said Dominguez, who persuaded his mother to take him to the base for a closer view. "It was so clear that we could see it from Jefferson High School."

The Dominguez family was in a throng estimated at 20,000 that jammed nearby roads and lined both sides of the runway Thursday to cheer and applaud the Columbia — which had been scheduled to arrive four times before during the past 13 days — when it finally landed Friday at 10:39 a.m. in springlike weather.

Thousands of others in this city, which contains the largest contingent of Air Force personnel in the nation, were expected to view the space craft before its scheduled departure for Florida at 1 p.m. Friday.

"I just came out to see what my tax money is being used for," said one unidentified man. "I'm impressed."

Paula Bonner and Rose Flores, Air Force wives who live on the base, brought their two children who were born in 1969 when American astronauts first walked on the moon.

"We watched the news for a week waiting for it, then we walked over," Mrs. Bonner said.

"This is something educational for the kids. It's part of history," Mrs. Flores added.

"I think it's the next era we're getting into to relieve people and things from space," said Laverne Sullivan.

Paul Torres, 14, and Robert Martinez, 15, on their spring break from high school, also rushed to the base when they heard the shuttle was finally coming for sure. "Say, it's all right," said Martinez, beaming as he stared through a storm fence at the shuttle.

Astronaut Deke Slayton, in charge of Security police at Kelly Air Force Base estimated more than 10,000 people were on hand to see the spacecraft, which is riding atop a Boeing 747 jumbo jet.

The shuttle is being flown to its launch facility at Cape Canaveral, Fla.

Astronaut Deke Slayton, commander of the cross-country mission, said the weather between San Antonio and Florida was "lousy."

"We'll just sit tight. We'll wait until we get good enough weather to go," he added.

NASA officials will attempt again Friday to complete the trip to launch facilities in Florida. They have tentatively scheduled a 1 p.m. CST takeoff time from Kelly Air Force Base here.

It was cloudless in San Antonio on Thursday, but the National Weather Service said severe weather, including thunderstorms, stretched from east Texas to Florida.

Fitzhugh Fulton Jr., a civilian test pilot who is flying the jumbo jet, said the flight from El Paso to San Antonio "was the nicest leg we've had. It was nice and smooth with clear weather all the way from El Paso."

The shuttle made a two-day, unscheduled stopover at Biggs Field at Fort Bliss near El Paso because of bad weather in southern and western Texas.

The flight of the orbiter started Tuesday at Edwards Air Force Base in California. The first leg of the trip was delayed from March 9 because of troubles with the shuttle itself.

Tuesday, the hump-backed craft was supposed to fly direct to Kelly Air Force Base, but the weather forced an overnight stay in El Paso.

The 75-ton shuttle is half plane and half rocket and is designed to make 100 round trips into space, leaving Earth like a rocket and gliding back like an airplane.

NASA officials had originally wanted to fly the shuttle from California to Kelly on March 9, stay overnight at Kelly and then proceed to Florida the next day.

Kelly spokesman Harry Nixon said officials at the base had prepared for 100,000 spectators March 9. Several dozen spectators showed up each of the numerous times over the past two weeks that the shuttle was scheduled to land at Kelly, only to see it postponed.

The repeated delays made the landing at Kelly a matter of public relations as much as anything, said one Kelly official who asked to remain unidentified.

Slayton, who was following the jumbo jet in one of two T-38 chase planes, said he was pleasantly surprised by the large crowd Thursday.

"We couldn't believe it when we flew over on the first pass. The ground was solid people," said the astronaut, who wore a pair of cowboy boots with his blue NASA flight suit.

Bill McGinnis, a Southwest Research Institute physicist, brought his three young children to view the shuttle's landing. "I pulled my kids out of school for them to see this," he said.

Claude Nichols pulled his seventh-grade son, Mark, out of school to see the landing. "This is probably the only time he'll get a shot at seeing it," he said. "Allowing him miss school was my idea.

He'll learn more out here."

Thomas Smith carried his 3-year-old son, Steve, on his shoulders so the child could see over the crowd. "The little one is really excited about this. He keeps saying he wants to see the space riders."

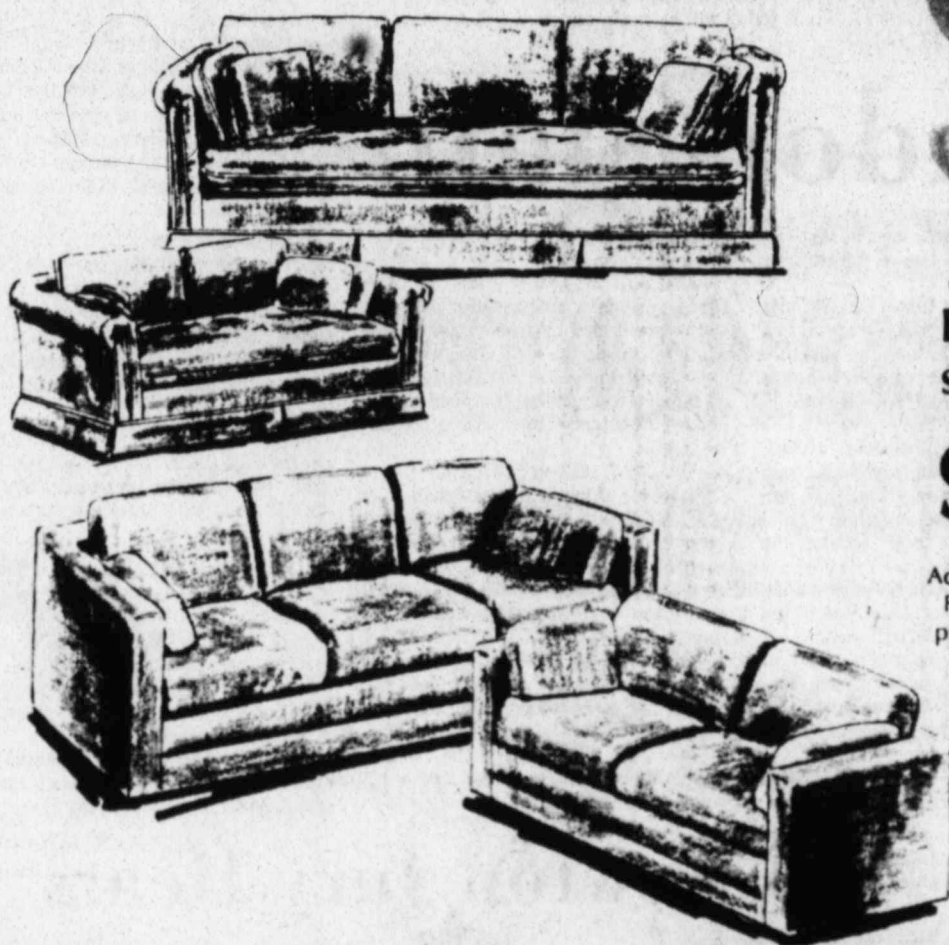

"I just want to see what the tax money I've been paying is being spent for," he added.

The trip was delayed the first day because of problems in bolting the shuttle atop the jet. Further delays were caused when a number of temporary tiles fell off the shuttle during a test flight.

Researcher Asserts Blacks Entitled To Compensation

HOUSTON (UPI) — Every black American is entitled to more than $86,000 — or $2.16 trillion total — for the unpaid labors of their slave ancestors, a college sociologist said Thursday.

L. Alex Swan, chairman of the Texas Southern University sociology department, suggested the settlement figure in a report offered at the annual meeting of the Association of Social and Behavioral Scientists in Washington.

Swan based his calculations on 15-hour work days, six-day work weeks, 20 years labor and wages of $1 per hour for one great-great grandparent of every black in the nation today.

Swan said he was not advocating such payments be made, but said blacks were "entitled" to monetary restitution.

"Because this slave labor was the basis for the economic development of America, and since the millions of dollars made as a result of the labor of black people were never shared with blacks as partners or skilled workers, the charge for such labor per hour is a minimum of $1," he said.

Short's Med School, Drug Abuse Bills Cleared By Senate

AUSTIN — Two bills by Tahoka Sen. E.L. Short breezed through the Senate Thursday as senators considered 27 bills on an uncontested calendar.

SB 214 by Short allows the Texas Tech University School of Medicine and the Texas College of Osteopathic Medicine to purchase or establish a self-insurance fund to provide medical staff and students with malpractice coverage.

The University of Texas and Texas A & M medical schools already have similar authority.

The other Short bill approved by senators, SB 421, allows judges to require enrollment in an alcohol or drug abuse program as a condition of probation, and corrects a legal quirk.

Under the existing statute, a judge can probate prison time and still assess a fine. However, if a jury is rendering the verdict it must either assess both prison time and a fine or probate both.

Short's bill allows juries to probate prison time, but still requires payment of a fine.

British Ambassador Slain

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (AP) — A two-man murder squad striking with lightning speed assassinated the British ambassador to the Netherlands in a hail of bullets outside his home Thursday. The envoy's Dutch valet also was killed. Dutch and British authorities said they did not know the motive for the slayings. No one claimed responsibility.

Police said the gunmen slipped down a back alley and rushed Sykes' Rolls-Royce in the rear driveway of his stately mansion just as he was entering it for the drive to his office. They fired from a range of between eight and 15 yards and then ran back through the alley and melted into crowds of morning rush-hour commuters and shoppers, police said. Sykes and the valet, Karel Straub, 20, died at a nearby hospital a short time later. Jan Warmenhoven told police he saw the attack from his antique shop opposite the courtyard at the rear of the embassy residence. "The valet was hit first," he said. "He dropped down and was lying on the ground. After that, I think the ambassador was shot four times through the car window. The chauffeur took off immediately. The ambassador's chauffeur, unhurt, drove his wounded employer to a hospital only 500 yards away, taking with him Alison Bailes, a Foreign Office official from London who was visiting the Hague. Miss Bailes, an overnight guest at the residence, told reporters she was in the Rolls when the firing started. "I instinctively raised my handbag in front of my head to protect myself from the flying glass and so saw nothing at all of what was happening. It was only when the chauffeur drove out into the street that I realized the ambassador had been shot and was unconscious. I was not injured myself."

The valet was standing beside the Rolls, having just helped Sykes inside and closed the door. Witnesses said as many as six shots were fired. Both the British Embassy here and the British Foreign Office in London said there were no claims of responsibility for the attack. Irish Republican Army guerrillas, fighting to drive the British from Northern Ireland, have staged attacks on British diplomats in the past. In 1976 the British government sent Sykes to Dublin to investigate the killing of British Ambassador Christopher Ewart-Biggs by a land mine at the entrance to the grounds of the embassy residence. The IRA claimed responsibility for that assassination. Sykes became Britain's ambassador to Holland in June, 1977 after filling diplomatic posts in Washington, Havana, Athens, Peking and Santiago, Chile. He and his wife had three children — two sons and a daughter all in their 20s and studying in Britain. There have been numerous attacks on diplomats and diplomatic-associated personnel in Western Europe in recent years. Some of the more recent attacks include: —In Paris last Aug. 3, two Arab gunmen assassinated Ezzidine Kalak, the Paris representative of the Palestine Lib-

Some Stations Ignore Federal Price Listings

A consumer calling either the DOE hotline in Washington or the state agriculture number in Lubbock will be asked to give the station's name, address, and if possible, phone number, as well as the posted ceiling price if there is one, and the amount paid for gas. He is not required to give his name.

After receiving the complaint, the DOE will check with the station operator to see how he arrived at his prices, or send an adjuster out to check the station, Webb said. The state ag force, upon receiving a complaint, checks the station and works with the dealer to correct the problem, said Walter Gilbert of that office.

The local agency works differently from the DOE in that, while the DOE checks prices and pumps, the agriculture department only checks pumps for quantity and price. The two agencies never overlap.

Dealers Contacted

"Of the 3,000 or so calls we've received so far, we've contacted about 300 dealers about possible problems," Webb said. "We send them a letter asking them to explain their situation and why they have a problem. Then, based on their reply, we investigate further. If there still seems to be something wrong, we send out a notice of probable violation and we can audit them."

As of March 7, the last day complete figures were available, the DOE had completed three audits, begun eight more and targeted 52 other dealers for audits. "So far, we haven't had to prosecute anyone, but we've only been open two months and really haven't had time to," Webb said.

The Texas Department of Agriculture checks each station once a year, Gilbert said. "But we spotcheck on a random basis a lot. And we'll check any station we get a request to."

"If we get a complaint about a pump, we'll fill a five-gallon container from it and measure the total amount of cubic inches," explained Wayne Cure, the agriculture department supervisor in the Lubbock office. "Five gallons contains 1,155 cubic inches, and we allow a leeway of seven cubic inches, so we keep them under pretty tight control. If a pump exceeds those standards, we place it out of order and work it out with the dealer."

"We're concerned only with the amount of gas a pump puts out," said Gilbert. "The DOE handles all the price ceilings and controls."

"Complaints come from all over," Webb said, referring to a recent DOE regional breakdown. "No area in the country stands out. Some are worse than others on certain things, like the Northeast complains more about heating oil than you in Texas, but that's to be expected."

The DOE hotline will remain open "as long as we keep receiving complaints, and we've had a steady stream so far," Webb said, mentioning he expects to get even more as gas prices escalate into the summer months.

The state ag department office here is always open to complaints and inquiries, Gilbert said. "Usually if it's an error in gas prices, the station owner will correct it. If we get a complaint that pans out and the owner won't cooperate, we can enforce several state laws. But we just try to use common sense."

EMS Home Plan Hits Early Snag

Jordan viewed it as a ploy to get the city to pay part of the cost for the tax-subsidized ambulance service.

"In five years it would be: you're housing them, they're yours, now pay for them," she said.

Double Taxation Feared

If the city contributed financially to EMS operations, she said it would amount to double taxation for city residents for the same service, since they are taxed as hospital district residents and residents of the city.

When the city parted company with Lubbock County Commissioners and the hospital district over operation of the EMS system, Mrs. Jordan said "they wanted our money with no voice on how it was going to be spent."

"They wanted it their way and wanted to do it first class. Now their budget is sky high and out of control," she said. City Manager Larry Cunningham questioned why "everyone who runs into financial or building needs comes to the city."

"Why do they always feel like they ought to come to the city council?" he asked.

Instead, he said, they ought to "reassess their priorities or come up with the money."

County Building Nearby

Cunningham noted the county owns a building close to the 50th Street and Utica Avenue fire station the hospital district would like to use and asked why the county building wasn't being considered.

"What we said would happen has happened," Mrs. Jordan said. "Their budget has gone sky high, now they're looking for someone to pick up the tab."

"Space is not all they want — they want the city back involved," she said. However, West noted, "We've got enough money problems without getting involved with EMS."

Senate Hands First Loss To Clements

wards testified, however, he was "as startled as anyone" that the fund existed.

Armstrong said the governor's office "had no indication" that the appointment would be controversial, and "we didn't find about it until it had been signed and sent to the Senate."

Sen. Lloyd Doggett, D-Austin, looked at Brooks and said:

"The governor would be better off checking out his appointees than making slurs and innuendoes against people like you, who stand behind your convictions."

Edwards' chief Senate supporter, Jack Ogg, D-Houston, said, "There was not any misrepresentation, any inconsistencies. There was a possible different phrasing of words about things that occurred 17 years ago."

Ogg said Edwards had not asked if the envelope reportedly given to Smith contained corporate funds. "In retrospect, I'm sure he's thought 1,000 times that he should have asked that question," Ogg said.

He said he had not heard any testimony, nor received any letters or calls saying "they did not think this man was qualified, except what one person said in executive session."

Ogg said Edwards "has been endorsed openly by the Houston Bar Association and by his peers."

Ogg indicated the Senate vote might have been based on political differences, although 15 of the 19 votes Edwards got were from Democrats. Ogg said the appointment "may be contrary to some of our political parties — that's what it all about."

"He (Edwards) has integrity. He is qualified," said Ogg.

After the vote, Brooks said with emotion, "I've never been prouder of this Senate than I am at this moment."

Begin, Sadat Ready Pact-Signing Plans

behind this, the Unknown Soldier, is President Carter." Sadat said. Israeli Knesset members, who heard misgivings about the treaty in the two-day debate, greeted the Knesset action with restraint.

"Yes, there is joy that we have reached this day," Begin told a weary Parliament. "There is worry for the future. There is trembling in our hearts — it is perfectly natural."

Opposition politicians in Cairo warned in parliamentary hearings that the treaty would isolate Egypt from the rest of the Arab world. But Sadat's party controls 312 of the 360 seats, so ratification is assured. Sadat is expected to submit the document to Parliament immediately after his return from Washington.

Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan arrived in Washington on Thursday to continue negotiations with the United States on a memorandum of understanding that will cover American involvement in putting the treaty into effect. It designates the United States as a third party to the treaty.

Defense Minister Ezer Weizman will go to Washington today to negotiate remaining problems on a timetable for Israeli evacuation of Sinai oil fields.

Egypt wants Israel to stop pumping oil from the fields immediately and withdraw from them within six months. Israelis want to continue pumping from the fields, which they developed, until the scheduled pullout nine months after the signing.

Israeli officials have said repeatedly the oil issue will not delay a signing, although the Jerusalem Post claims the problem is a difficult one.

Egypt agreed in the treaty to sell surplus Sinai oil to Israel at market rates, and the United States is supporting an Israeli request to buy North Sea oil from Norway. The Foreign Ministry in Oslo confirmed it is studying Israel's request but would not say on what level the United States is involved. Washington has guaranteed Israel's energy needs for the next 15 years.

Israel lost the source of much of its oil from a revolutionary Islamic government took over Iran earlier this year and said it would stop sales to Israel.

Arabs and Palestinians, who see the treaty as a separate peace with Israel and a sellout of the Palestinian campaign for an independent state on the West Bank of the Jordan River and in the Gaza Strip, have not said what steps they will take if a treaty is signed.

Egypt said Thursday it plans to send a delegation to the West Bank and Gaza after the signing to try to persuade Palestinians to go along with the Palestinian autonomy plan in the treaty. Negotiations to set up the autonomous government are to start a month after the treaty is signed.

As the Arab League is preparing to discuss the treaty, its secretary general, Mahmoud Riad, resigned because of the current split in Arab ranks, the semi-official Egyptian newspaper Al Ahran reported today.

Riad, 61 and a former Egyptian foreign minister, was not available for comment, but his wife confirmed the resignation in a telephone conversation. He opposed Egypt's peace initiative with Israel on grounds Sadat made a unilateral move that caused a rift in the Arab world. Riad has held his post with the league since 1972.

A conference of league foreign ministers is tentatively set for Tuesday in Baghdad, Iraq, to decide on a course of action.

There also are reports the league may assemble in Somalia on Saturday.

Labadi said the PLO, an Arab League member, would urge united Arab action at the meeting.

The sanctions, which have not been made public, are believed to include an economic boycott of Egypt and a cutoff of aid to Egypt's troubled economy. It is not known whether Saudi Arabia, which supplies about $2 billion a year in aid to Egypt, will cut off its financial support.

Homeowners' Insurance Rates Cut

Galveston, Corpus Christi and Brownsville.

In the North-Northwest territory, which includes Amarillo, Lubbock, Midland-Odessa, Abilene, Wichita Falls and San Angelo, homeowners coverage will be 5.7 percent cheaper.

The rate decisions mean the cost of insuring a $40,000 brick veneer home will drop $26.70 in Houston, $30.67 in Corpus Christi and $29.07 in Lubbock, Wichita Falls, Amarillo, San Angelo and Midland-Odessa.

The cost of insuring such a house in Dallas and Fort Worth will rise $9.44.

Other rate changes ordered by the board include:

Tenant homeowners — Seacoast down 3 percent, Central up 3.2 percent and North-Northwest down 3.7 percent.

Farm and ranch owners — Seacoast down 13.5 percent, Central down 7.8 percent and North-Northwest down 10.5 percent.

Fire — statewide, dwellings down 1.9 percent, farms up 3.1 percent and "all other" up 3.8 percent.

Extended coverage — Seacoast down 23.4 percent, Central down 8.5 percent and North-Northwest down 6.6 percent.

Price made the motion to approve the rate changes, and all three board members voted for it. The decision came less than an hour before the Senate voted 29-0 to confirm Gov. Bill Clements' appointment of Dallas banker William Daves to replace Price, a board member since 1961.

Thursday's decision means four consecutive years without a statewide increase in homeowners rates.

Board actuaries said the reduction came largely from the use of data the agency has never obtained from insurance companies in the past. The new formula recognizes the fact that companies earn more premiums as homeowners increase their coverage to compensate for inflation.

Newton Jury Hears Recanting Testimony

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — The jury interrupted deliberations in the Huey Newton murder trial Thursday to re-hear a prosecution witness' testimony recanting her statement that Newton shot a 17-year-old prostitute.

Newton, who guided the Black Panthers away from gun-rattling rhetoric and into community service while in jail and exile, is accused of shooting the teen-ager on an Oakland street corner Aug. 6, 1974.

The jury of nine women and three men asked for a reading of the testimony of Michelle Jenkins, a 20-year-old former prostitute and key prosecution witness who recanted earlier testimony that she saw Newton shoot a fellow street walker.

After hearing the testimony, the jury ended its deliberations for the day. After deliberations resume today, the jury will hear another witness' testimony re-read.

In a surprise move Wednesday, prosecutor Tom Orloff asked that Newton be convicted of second-degree murder rather than first-degree. He did not give any reason for asking for conviction on the lesser charge.

Witnesses to the shooting said they saw Newton shoot Kathleen Smith, then get into a car and drive away. Newton testified he was at home writing the night Miss Smith was shot. The alibi was corroborated on the witness stand by author Donald Freed.

Before Miss Smith died weeks later and the charge against Newton was changed to murder, he had jumped bail and fled to Cuba, where he lived until his voluntary return in 1977.

In prison or out, in exile or free, Newton has vowed to continue fighting his beliefs. "When the running stops, life is over," he has said.

Newton has been a lightning rod of controversy for more than a dozen years. He and Bobby Seale founded the Black Panther Party in Oakland in 1966 and their fiery speeches and street rallies sent fear rippling through the community.

The late FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover called the Panthers the most dangerous group in the nation and blamed them for most of the terrorism in American cities and on college campuses in the late 1960s.

There were violent confrontations with the Oakland Police Department.

Miami Police Discover Grisly Voodoo Altar In Chicken Yard

MIAMI (AP) — The discovery of a voodoo-type altar complete with scorched animal remains, religious symbols and a human skull prompted officials on Thursday to reopen an investigation of grave robberies.

"It's a religion," police Sgt. Ben Lombardi said of the macabre discovery, "but with the skull, that makes it different. We want to know whose it is, where it came from and what it's doing here."

Officials said the altar, set in a filthy chicken yard strewn with animal carcasses, was found Wednesday by humane society officers responding to an anonymous call.

The human skull had been placed atop the scorched head of a goat and the head of a freshly killed chicken was atop the skull. The body of the chicken was laid on a plywood sheet decorated with chalked religious symbols.

A cauldron containing dirt and a blackened doll was nearby, as were several swords, knives and machetes and a deer head with antlers. Candles were burning in front of the altar and small plastic skeletons were scattered about the area.

Officials said they believed the site was related to the practice of Santeria, an Afro-Cuban religion akin to voodoo that is sometimes called Cuban white magic. Some of its practitioners claim to be able to communicate with the dead and their spirits.

Allen Foust, owner of the property, said the lot was rented by a man who was several months behind in the rent.

"I told him I would take a bulldozer to it unless he (paid)," said Foust. "Then (Tuesday) night, I found this on my front porch."

He displayed a decapitated chicken, halved coconut, cloth and some pennies.

Dr. Charles Wetli of the Dade County medical examiner's office said the skull appears to be consistent with that of a black man, probably in his 40s. "But we really won't know until we get a good look at it," he said.

"Where they're getting the skulls is the question though. They don't appear as though they have come through legitimate sources such as a medical supply house. My guess is that they come from Haiti."

But police officers said they would reopen their investigations into a series of grave robberies in Dade County a few months ago.

"The graves would be opened and bones were taken," said Wetli. "The bones would show up again smeared with chicken blood."

Strikebound Coal Mine Opens After 15 Months

HARLAN, Ky. (AP) — A state police helicopter hovered overhead and non-union coal miners rode to work in make-shift armored vehicles Thursday as the Jericol mine opened for the first time since a worker was killed from ambush a week ago.

State police cars directly preceded and followed the convoy along 20 miles of Kentucky 38 from Everts, near Harlan, to Jericol Mining Inc.'s Glenbrook operation near the Virginia border, strikebound for 15 months.

Officers reported an incident-free trip.

The armored vehicles are two old school buses protected by steel plating and two coal trucks on which miners ride inside boxes made of half-inch thick steel.

State police Capt. Marion Campbell said he believes the miners will be safe in the vehicles, but he feared for the safety of his men accompanying the convoy.

No arrests have been made in the March 15 shooting. Odus Griffith Jr., 23-year-old father of infant twin sons, was killed, and two other men were wounded when gunshots pierced a Jericol bus as it carried 35 non-union miners home from work at the Glenbrook mine.

Jericol has repainted its buses, one green and another brown, under an agreement approved in Harlan Circuit Court. They were yellow until last weekend, but area parents picketed in protest, saying a school bus could be mistaken for a mine bus and become the target of strike-related violence.

Jericol planned to operate Thursday and Friday and then go on a four-day-a-week schedule, with hours from 7 a.m. to 5 p.m., to keep the mine vehicles off the road when school buses travel.

The strike, by about 100 United Mine Workers union members, began with the national UMW strike in December 1977, and continued when Jericol, not a member of the Bituminous Coal Operators Association, did not accept terms of the national UMW agreement with the coal operators.

Incidents of violence have included gunfire, a firebombing at the UMW hall and explosions that damaged railroad tracks leading to the mine. Griffith was the first person killed.

Luke 12:18-29, The Living Bible

19 And I'll sit back and say to myself, "Friend, you have enough stored away for years to come. Now take it easy! Wine, women and song for you!"

20 But God said to him, "Fool! Tonight you die. Then who will get it all?"

21 Yes, every man is a fool who gets rich on earth but not in heaven."

22 Then turning to His disciples He said, "Don't worry about whether you have enough food to eat or clothes to wear.

23 For life consists of far more than food and clothes.

24 Look at the ravens — they don't plant or harvest or have barns to store away their food, and yet they get along all right — for God feeds them. And you are far more valuable to Him than birds!

25 And besides, what's the use of worrying? What good does it do? Will it add a single day to your life? Of course not.

26 And if it can't even do little things like that, what's the use of worrying over bigger things?

27 Look at the lilies! They don't toil and spin, and yet Solomon in all his glory was not robed as well as they are.

28 And if God provides clothing for the flowers that are here today and gone tomorrow — don't you suppose He will provide clothing for you, you doubters?

29 And don't worry about food — what to eat and drink; don't worry at all that God will provide it for you.

Angry Judge Threatens To Move Divorce Trial

BRYAN (UPI) — A district judge — angry about an intrusion by the Tarrant County district attorney's office into his courtroom affairs — Thursday said he might move the divorce case of Texas millionaire T. Cullen Davis and his socialite wife, Priscilla, from Fort Worth to his central Texas hometown.

Meeting with Davis's battery of attorneys and reporters in the front room of his Bryan home, District Judge John M. Barron also said he would not tolerate any more "interference" from either a special Tarrant County grand jury investigating Davis's financial dealings or members of the district attorney's office. Barron then signed a restraining order barring the district attorney's office "or anyone else from interfering with this trial" and indicated he would move the bitter, long-running case to Bryan if both parties agreed to the change and if a courtroom could be found in the Brazos County courthouse.

But Mrs. Davis's attorney, contacted in Fort Worth, said there was "no way" he would agree to the trial move. And even Barron admitted there was little possibility of finding an available courtroom. After signing the injunction, Barron told reporters: "Goodbye, I'm going rabbit hunting."

The divorce trial was thrown into an immediate recess Thursday when the retired judge, appointed as presiding judge after Fort Worth Judge Joe Eidson withdrew from the bitter 6-year case, failed to appear in court.

"I'm not going to put up with this," the normally good-humored judge told reporters after Assistant District Attorney Jack Strickland subpoenaed thousands of pages of records of the divorce trial Wednesday.

At one point, Barron said he was going to declare a mistrial, but that threat subsided with his failure to appear court.

Barron's courtroom humor had been one of the few bright spots in the five weeks of tedious proceedings in the case reportedly involving millions of dollars in community property. But the witticism turned to criticism when Strickland appeared in court saying he needed the financial records for a Wednesday afternoon meeting of a special grand jury.

The subpoena said the information was sought in connection with the murder-for-hire charge against Davis.

Davis, who was acquitted of murder two years, was tried earlier this year for soliciting the death of the previous divorce court judge, Eidson, but that trial ended with a deadlocked jury.

Barron, who said he would have gladly turned over the divorce trial records once the trial was over, apparently was offended by the intrusion and later called Strickland "that little squirt" and "a wet-earred fool prosecutor having no respect for anyone."

"He could have worked it out with me very well that after I'd made a decision in the case I'd have give him the whole record," Barron told a reporter Wednesday. "But he comes up there and just kicks us around like we were a bunch of dogs."

The reaction in the Priscilla and Cullen Davis camps was one of surprise.

"I did not know it was going to happen," said Ronald Aultman, Mrs. Davis's attorney. Aultman said "as a matter of ethics" he preferred to withhold further comment until "I know what the judge is going to do."

But one of Davis's attorneys, Cecil Munn, presented motions to Administrative Judge Charles Murray Thursday asking that the divorce trial be moved to Bryan and that the district attorney "and everyone else" be enjoined from interrupting the case "for whatever reason."

Munn and two other attorneys then drove to Barron's house and reporters were called to witness Barron's signing of the injunction.

"I don't know what his (Strickland's) motive was, but it was extremely abusive to the judicial process," Munn said. "This stunt that Jack Strickland pulled was about the most stupid thing I've ever seen a so-called responsible lawyer do."

Munn also claimed the district attorney's office was trying to sabotage the divorce case.

Strickland told reporters Wednesday he asked for the records because he felt there was a "significant" chance not all the information would be available if he waited until after the trial ended.

"I was very respectful to that judge, as I would be to any judge," he said. "I don't have anything against the judge, personally."

Judge Murray said he had contacted Barron and that the Bryan judge indicated he was willing to resume the case Monday morning.

Russians Impugn Motives For Peace Corps Work

MOSCOW (AP) — The official Soviet news agency Tass charged Thursday that the United States intends to continue what Tass said is wide use of the Peace Corps for ideological penetration of developing countries.

The agency was commenting on President Carter's request to Congress for $105.4 million for the organization in the next fiscal year, an increase of 9 percent over the current year.

Tass contended that the Peace Corps was established in the 1960s to spread American values in the guise of selfless assistance to Third World countries. It charged that the Peace Corps was a branch of the CIA and volunteers were agents in disguise.

At one point, Barron said he was going to declare a mistrial, but that threat subsided with his failure to appear court.

Kidney Transplant Program Gathers Momentum

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff
Five years ago, when the site of the Health Sciences Center Hospital was just a "hole in the ground," the thought of establishing a kidney transplant program in Lubbock was "quite remote," says Dr. Glen Stanbaugh.

Thursday, Stanbaugh found himself joining Dr. Richard Lawton in a news conference in the year-old teaching hospital, hailing the apparent success of the area's first kidney transplant.

The two doctors were part of a team that Wednesday removed a kidney from a healthy mother and implanted the vital organ in her 11-year-old son.

Stanbaugh and Lawton said the operation soon will become commonplace at the Lubbock County Hospital District-Texas Tech University School of Medicine complex, which has been designated a regional transplant center by the National Kidney Foundation.

Already 10 kidney patients are lined up for transplants, the physicians said. And many more of the approximately 350 South Plains residents on dialysis also will be candidates.

Stanbaugh, who founded the South Plains Dialysis Center, said his dream has been to "provide all types of care for patients with kidney failure, and to provide it locally."

He now sees his dream coming true. The young Lubbock boy who was operated on Wednesday had been on dialysis, a mechanical means of removing fluids collected in the body, for about three years. He required three treatments a week, each treatment lasting four to six hours.

Doctors hope the transplant will relieve the boy's dependence on dialysis, allowing him — and in the future, hundreds of other local kidney patients — to live a more normal lifestyle.

The youth presently is "doing fine, putting out adequate amounts of urine from the new kidney," said Lawton, vice chairman of the medical school's surgery department and a transplant specialist.

"The last couple of days are the culmination of activities of many people over the past two years," Lawton, who has participated in more than 300 kidney transplants elsewhere, said.

He said the operation required the expertise and cooperation of nearly every department of the hospital.

B METRO
Lubbock Avalanche-Journal
Friday, March 23, 1979

So far, the young boy's body appears to have accepted the transplanted kidney, Lawton said. He said the boy is receiving some of the most sophisticated anti-rejection medications developed.

Lawton estimates an 80 percent chance that the kidney will continue to function in the recipient for at least five years.

If the Health Sciences Center Hospital did not have a kidney transplant program, the nearest hospital for the operation would have been Dallas or Denver, Stanbaugh said.

A local program is crucial, he added. Many dialysis patients here are "critically in need" of a transplant operation, he said.

The operation, which with one year's follow-up care runs about $20,000, is paid for through Medicare, hospital officials said.

The mother who served as the donor in Wednesday's operation "was a brave and heroic person who volunteered to give a kidney to her son," Lawton said.

A transplant operation between two living relatives works best, he said, but such a match is not always possible. Lawton said the hospital eventually will perform transplants using kidneys "harvested" from cadavers.

The hospital is part of a nationwide network which coordinates the harvesting, matching and exchange of kidneys. Often kidneys are transported for use elsewhere.

Persons who are willing to assign their kidneys for such donation upon their death can secure donor cards through the South Plains Kidney Dialysis or South Plains Dialysis Center.

Two medical groups performed Wednesday's surgery. One operated on the donor, and the other, in a separate room, performed the transplant on the recipient.

The donor team was headed by Dr. Odys Avant, assisted by Dr. C.R.F. Baker. Lawton headed the transplant team, assisted by Stanbaugh and Dr. David Beesinger.

Mike Rosson, R.N., was in charge of "keeping alive" the donated kidney between operations by supplying it with nutrients and oxygen and lowering the organ's temperature.

Southwest Continues Boardings Dominance

Southwest Airlines continued its domination of the Lubbock commercial air market in February, boasting a 52 percent increase in the number of passengers flown over February 1978.

With the exception of Continental Airlines, which has reduced its flight schedule in the city, every air carrier serving Lubbock registered an increase in business from the previous year.

Southwest led the monthly numbers by more than 10,000 passengers, flying 17,811 persons from Lubbock last month. Braniff, carrying 7,772 passengers, was second, posting an increase of 16.7 percent over the 6,662 persons it boarded in February 1978.

Texas International flew out 3,230 persons for the month, an increase of 9.3

percent over the 2,955 persons it departed in February 1978, and tiny Crown Aviation recorded an increase of 18.7 percent — carrying 117 persons to Clovis in February, as compared to the 41 it flew there last February.

The only loser was Continental, which dipped to 6,505 departures, a decline of some 26.7 percent from its February 1978 figure of 8,877 departures.

The five carriers together flew out 35,435 persons during February, establishing a record for the month. The figure is a 17.1 percent increase over the previous February's 30,252.

So far in 1979, Lubbock International Airport has departed 69,511 persons, an 11.1 percent increase over the January-February record of 62,590, also established in 1978.

Officials Pleased That Gas Rate Authority Still Theirs

City officials expressed relief Thursday upon learning that a Senate committee rejected a bill which would have transferred gas rate-making authority from cities to the state railroad commission.

The Senate Economic Development Committee voted 5-2 against the bill. The same panel had voted 5-2 Monday in support of a similar bill affecting electric rate-making authority.

Gas companies come under the jurisdiction of local governments but may appeal local decisions to the railroad commission.

"That is good news," City Manager Larry Cunningham said after hearing the result of the vote. The city council has expressed support of home-rule regulation of gas rates.

"There are probably a lot of people who don't realize their rates would go up on a statewide basis," Cunningham added. "It (the bill's failure) really won't change our present situation at all."

Councilwoman Carolyn Jordan agreed with Cunningham, saying "I know I'm pleased and I'm sure the other council members will be too."

Council members had feared that gas rates would go up as did phone rates, which came under statewide regulation of the Public Utilities Commission under similar circumstances.

Pioneer consistently has spoken in favor of doing business with local governments. Public Relations Director Bob Mills said the gas company feels it is worth the extra money to make rate presentations before individual governments.

"We just like the relationships with the cities in this area," he added.

Pioneer Natural Gas Co. serves approximately 85 cities and incorporated communities.

According to Cunningham, the similar bill affecting electric rates was probably passed through committee under pressure from the electric companies.

"I have a feeling the electric companies were just more aggressive," Cunningham said. Consumers are more prone to complain about high electric rates because electric service remains relatively constant the year around. Gas bills typically run higher in the winter, he said.

Municipally-owned Lubbock Power and Light Co. would not be affected by passage of the electric rate regulation bill. It is uncertain how competing Southwestern Public Service Co. would be affected but, according to Mrs. Jordan, the company obviously would have to remain competitive to stay in business.

LP&L and Southwestern rates are virtually identical.

Final Arguments Made In Council Question

By BOB CAMPBELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Opposing attorneys in the federal district court suit contesting the city's at-large method of electing city councilmen Friday disagreed in final arguments on the importance of the intent behind the present system.

Plaintiffs' attorneys in the class-action suit claimed the effects of an at-large voting system and not its intent should be the primary consideration. Attorneys for the city argued before U.S. District Court Judge Halbert O. Woodward that the plaintiffs should be required to show racially discriminatory intent.

"The present system has been invidiously cancelling out the voting strength of minorities," Daniel Benson, one of five plaintiffs' attorneys, said in arguments beginning at 9:30 a.m. Friday. "We're not saying they had the intent, but that's not crucial to this case."

Attorney Tomas Garza claimed the City of Lubbock is racially discriminatory, citing statistics that the heavy majority of its minority employees are in service and maintenance.

Garza said that of the 721 city workers earning more than $13,000 per year, only 12 are Mexican-American and only six are black.

He said that almost 40 percent of the Lubbock school enrollment is Mexican-American and black, but that a minority group member has never been elected to the city council.

Also arguing for the plaintiffs was Lane Arthur, who said minorities have been hurt most by inadequate city health department programs, and Mark Hall, who said the unsuccessful candidacy of minority candidate Maria Mercado in the past city election, "shows that a black or Mexican-American cannot get elected" to the

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann: I'd like to say a word to the girl whose boyfriend laid a sloppy, wet goodnight kiss on her. She signed her letter "Turned Off." Maybe this letter will help her as well as other young girls. They need to understand a few basic things about life, and maybe I can help.

When I was 16, I was terribly shy, but more of a man physically than a boy. I was awfully crazy about a certain girl and I had been dying to kiss her for three months before I finally got up enough nerve to try. It was a beautiful moonlit night and I was driving her home from a party. When I walked her to the door, I lingered a while making small talk. Finally I said good night. She turned her face up and closed her eyes. I read this as the invitation I'd been waiting for. When I bent down for my first romantic kiss, my nose hit her nose, my front tooth bumped her lip and I bit her.

Thank the good Lord she had a wonderful sense of humor. She also knew I was embarrassed to death. The dear girl started to laugh and so did I. At that moment I was so grateful for her compassion and understanding that she endeared herself to me forever. Eight years later we were married.

When I read the letter in your column from the girl who complained because the guy's first kiss was like amateur night, I knew I had to write in defense of every shy, awkward Romeo in the world. — Constant Reader

Dear Reader: What a heartwarmer! And now if anyone else has a first-kiss story with a moral, let's have it.

Dear Ann Landers: That letter signed the "Other Woman" reminded me of the hell I went through for seven years. My case was a little different, however. The Other Woman was my mother-in-law.

Harry and his mother discussed everything. The only way I could learn about our evening or weekend plans was to listen to Harry talk to his mother on the telephone. Strangely enough, she was not a widow. Her husband was alive and well — and living with her.

Every time we had an argument, Harry would get mad and move back to his mother's place. This happened so many times I lost count. Whenever he left, the children and I would go into a panic and we felt helpless and abandoned.

Two years ago, I got so sick and tired of his moods and his constant running home to Mama. I packed the rest of his clothes, dropped them off at his mother's house and told him to stay there.

The following year, I met a wonderful man. We are going to be married in May and I am happy for the first time in several years. P.S. HIS mother lives in Australia. — A New Me

Dear New You: At the risk of being a bore, I will repeat myself. Men who are hopelessly hung up on their moms are easy to spot. How come you women don't notice the signs before marriage? Congratulations on your second choice. A guy who puts that many miles between himself and his mother doesn't have the problem.

At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK

When my son moved out of his house and into his own apartment, I tried very hard to hold back the tears. The nest was empty.

I bit my lip as I thought, goodbye Linda Ronstadt and Billy Joel.

Goodbye pure, organic, honey-herbal-scented shampoo that cost $1.50 an ounce and lays on its side without a cap running down the drain.

Goodbye empty milk cartons in the refrigerator and dried-out lunch meat. Goodbye labels that read, "Hand wash only."

Goodbye porch light that has been burning day and night for three years.

Goodbye mildewed towels and empty ice cube trays. Goodbye one ski glove, parking tickets for bookmarks and boxes of newspaper tagged, "HANDS OFF!"

So long three-hour showers, shared razor blades, and unopened mail with Municipal Court, Division of Traffic in the upper left-hand corner.

I could stand it no longer. I rushed to the door, threw it open and yelled, "Mother's Day is Over!"

My husband was in the process of changing the locks when I said, "Don't take on so. After all, you haven't lost a son, you've gained a tire jack for your car."

It was tough, but we said hello to pastel towels and a little shell to hold the soap.

Hello to olives that you could leave in plain sight in the refrigerator.

Hello hair dryer. Hello dinner whenever we wanted it.

Hello turned off garden hose. Hello to cheese that didn't have to be cut in half to get rid of the exposed part.

Hello family car that we used any time we want. Hello grocery shopping once a week. Hello telephone calls that are for us.

Hello dinner parties without the fruit plate half gone. Hello soft music and conversation. Hello pencil by the phone and Hello leftovers.

This week, he moved back. We should have moved the nest while we had the chance.

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

DR. PAUL E. RUBLE

Dear Dr. Ruble: I have started taking two charcoal tablets after each main meal for stomach gas. They seem to be helping get rid of the gas, but I am concerned about any other effects. Will this affect absorption of things like vitamins or minerals from my food? — J.S.

Charcoal is an interesting medical substance and has been used for at least 150 years in one form or another. In its activated form it has great absorption powers, especially of poisonous substances. A famous use during World War I was in gas masks (to absorb poison gas). Its chief use today is to absorb poison accidentally taken or in overdoses of certain medicines. The poison molecules are bound to the charcoal and removed from the body. It is used for overdoses of drugs such as tranquilizers, sedatives, anti-depressants, antibiotics and aspirin, and for insecticide poisoning. It is particularly effective if given 30 minutes after the overdose or poisoning.

So what about charcoal and your gas-ousness? I doubt it helps, although it cannot hurt you in the amount you are using. Used medically (as in poisonings) the dosage has to be many times the amount of the poisonous substance taken in.

It is used in combination with other medicines (relaxers, for example) to combat excessive gaseousness, but the effectiveness has not really been proven. The charcoal won't bind mineral acids or drugs that can't be dissolved in water and acid. It might be best to take it about an hour after your meals to allow normal absorption of nutrients to get a start.

I hesitate to tell you to discontinue a practice that seems effective and which cannot do any harm. I see no harm in your charcoal use. If it seems to help, continue it.

The old remedy of using burnt toast as a form of charcoal to treat poisoning is discredited. That kind of charcoal is not activated. Hope I haven't told you more about charcoal than you "cared to know"

Dear Dr. Ruble: Please explain how a spinal tap is done. I have heard it is very painful. If this is so, why aren't anesthetics given? Is there much risk involved in this procedure? I know it is used to diagnose spinal meningitis. Can this be done from person to person? — A.J.

The spinal tap is also known as a lumbar puncture. The doctor inserts a special needle into the spinal canal in the lower (lumbar) area to obtain some of the canal fluid. This is examined for a number of substances, including the organism causing inflammation of the meninges, which is the membrane covering the brain or spinal cord — meningitis. It is necessary and essential so that the right medicine can be selected to combat whatever organism is causing inflammation. Some types of meningitis are contagious and are spread by droplet infection (from the nose or mouth areas). In such cases close contacts are also treated with antibiotics.

The test is done with the patient lying on one side. A local anesthetic eliminates most of the pain, although the patient may have headache for a short period afterward.

Although it sounds scary, the risks in lumbar puncture are quite small. Perfection of this technique and in laboratory methods to examine the minute fluid removed has resulted in saving thousands of lives.

Dear Dr. Ruble: I am 57 and stopped having periods about three years ago. Last month I had one, much to my surprise. What would cause this? — J.A.

I doubt this was a period and suggest you be examined promptly. Any bleeding after menopause should be investigated.

Dear Dr. Ruble: Is it possible that a person could be fed rectally? — H.

Yes. In rare situations nutrients (glucose, for example) can be introduced into the system rectally. It is practically never required and would be done only if other methods are impossible, as when intravenous feeding equipment is not available. The intravenous method is preferred because of better control of the fluids given and better absorption of them.

Dr. Ruble welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

Help! I have a 2-year-old of my own and during the winter I baby-sit two other pre-school age children.

What I need are some ideas on games or projects that my kids can do indoors. And I need them fast!

So I thought with all the parents that read your column, either you or they could give me some ideas.

If you can, I'd really appreciate it and thank you for your time. — Denise Mitchell

Oh, wow! You've really put me to the test this time. What may entertain one child for hours on end, another child couldn't care less about — and to have three of them to entertain is more than a challenge!

Nevertheless, here are a few ideas that may spark you to greater heights of ingenuity. Though some of them may be geared to older children, you could adapt them to suit your particular needs. That old standby, the general merchandise mail order catalogue, has numerous possibilities, from cutting out (with blunt scissors) and pasting to making collages or furnishing "paper-drawn" houses.

How about providing the children with paper, colors and cookie cutters and letting them trace the shapes and then color.

Mix up a batch of bread dough and let them "sculpt" creations of their own that can then be baked and eaten.

Playing "hide-and-seek" with some object (too large to be put into the mouth) can be fun. Of course, you would want to hide the object in a place that's not too hard to find.

If you happen to have any old scraps of material, little hands can sew pieces together and think they've accomplished quite a task. Better yet, draw simple pictures on cardboard (the kind packaged with panty hose and shirts), then poke holes around the lines with an icpick, and give them a long piece of yarn (the tip stiffened with a piece of tape) or a shoelace, and let them stitch around the picture.

As a final end-of-your-rope suggestion, make an indoor sandbox with aquarium gravel or oatmeal poured into an old dishpan or box. Place some little trucks and cars in it. That should entertain them for hours, and hopefully the mess will be worth the time given you for other tasks.

God bless you and those precious little ones. — Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

This is a hint for the ladies who love taking oil baths, but hate the mess oil leaves in the tub afterwards.

I keep a container of dishwashing liquid in the bathroom. After my bath, I pour a little of the liquid into the bath water, swirl it around a bit, then let the water drain out taking the oily film with it. — Dene Standefer

THIS COLUMN is written for you...the homemaker. If you have a hint or a problem write to Heloise, 235 E. 45th St., New York, N.Y., 10017. Because of the tremendous volume of mail, Heloise is unable to answer individual letters. She will, however, answer your questions in her column whenever possible.

Elite Bachelors Still Available

By PAUL STEINER

Women's News Service
NEW YORK (WNS)—Banks and the stock exchanges were open, mail was delivered as usual, but a few knights errant raised a glass February 28 in honor of Bachelor's Day.

Since last Bachelor's Day, several formerly single men have marched, stumbled, or been dragged to the altar. Among them: Henry ("The Fonz") Winkler. Still left are Prince Charles, 30, New York City's Mayor Ed Koch, and quite a few others.

As a tribute to Bachelor's Day, here is a brief list of solitary males for doubles-minded females, some well-known, others little-known, except for their accomplishments. All belong to that rare species, the never-married man.

•EDMUND G. BROWN, 39: Governor of California. Despite his long friendship with rock star Linda Ronstadt, he hasn't been nailed down, may yet wind up president of the United States.

•STEVE RUBELL, 33: He's the undisputed czar of Studio 54, New York's leading disco, where any night you're apt to run into the likes of Lillian Carter, Jackie O., Halston, Liza Minnelli, Barbra Streisand, Mick Jagger, Egon von Furstenberg.

•STEPHEN SPIELBERG, 31: Boy Wonder director of such gigantic film successes as "Jaws" and "Close Encounters of the Third Kind."

•MARVIN HAMLISCH, 34: This conductor and leading ASCAP composer won two Oscars in one night (for "The Sting" and "The Way We Were"). His current Broadway hit: "They're Playing Our Song."

•DR. ROBERT BISHOP, 40: A former dancer and now director of New York's Museum of American Folk Art, he is a leading expert on this long-neglected collecting field; also writes and lectures nationally on folk art.

•ELLIOT FELD, 36: Master choreographer and head of his own ballet company, recent recipient of a Brandeis University creative achievement award.

•MAXIMILIAN SCHELL, 51: The world-famous actor-director, brother of actress Maria Schell, commutes between Europe and the States, won high praise for his role in "Julia," the film based on a Lillian Hellman biography.

•STANLEY SIEGEL, 42: TV-host of a CBS interview show, is largely known for his uninhibited questions and on-screen confessions to his analyst.

•KRESKIN, 46: Billed as The Amazing Kreskin, he holds TV and live audiences spellbound while demonstrating his ESP and magic, the handsome showman authored "Kreskin's Mind Power Book" (McGraw-Hill) which reveals how you can develop such powers.

•LANFORD WILSON, 39: Missouri-born, Studio One-bred, one of our brightest new playwrights, can often be found at Circle Repertory Theater, probably New York's best off-off Broadway company.

•MICHAEL BARYSHNIKOV, 29: The New York City Ballet star, who electrifies audiences wherever he appears with his acting skills and gravity-defying jumps, reached wider audiences as a lead in the movie, "Turning Point."

•MICHAEL CHRISTOPHER, 32: This New Jerseyite won the Pulitzer Prize for his hit play "Shadow Box" starring Geraldine Fitzgerald. He is also active as an actor, has several more plays ready.

•MARK SIMONE, 24: This handsome New York DJ, heard on WPIX-FM from 6 to 10 p.m., logs 500-600 phone calls a night, mostly from females, many of whom propose marriage, sight unseen, because of his sexy voice.

•RICHARD CHAMBERLAIN, 44: The ex-Dr. Kildare, who admits getting close to marriage three times, but only close, starred in "The Last Wave" and the disaster film, "Swarm." Most talented and obliging, he'll do almost anything, from starring in a Chekhov play on Broadway to helping light the Rockefeller Center Christmas tree.

•RICHARD SILLS, 32: This idealistic Park Avenue-Southampton, Long Island, N.Y., socialite, educator, civic leader, author of the inspirational adventure book, "The Tale of Johnny the Jester," is now engaged in a national campaign to try a two-year moratorium on violence for TV and movies.

•MICHAEL SALEM, 37: Known as New York's Panty-Hose King, silk hose supplier to the likes of Ann-Margaret, is a talk-show regular and lingerie designer who has authored books on the history and significance of male and female underwear.

•DAVID FROST, 48: The thrice-engaged millionaire TV host and Nixon interrogator would make a superb catch, personally assured this writer that presently he is neither engaged nor "engaged to be engaged."

Oops! Almost forgot the ageless, ever-boish Warren Beatty, 41, of whom his sister, Shirley MacLaine says, "I doubt he'll ever marry. He likes to do his own shirts."

Gerontology Conference: Alcoholism Problem In Elderly Not Recognized By Community

By CONNIE CHAPMAN
Family News Staff

All too often, counselors are reluctant to spend the time and effort required to help with the rehabilitation of elderly persons with alcohol problems. More frequently, their efforts are directed only toward those who are in the mainstream of the job scene.

The team which serves as the staff for the West Texas Regional Alcoholism Training Program thinks that this approach is a mistake.

The team discussed the implications of alcoholism and the aging as part of a recent Issues in Gerontology Seminar at Texas Tech University. Panel members were Tom Irons, director of the program; Dr. Jane Winer of the Tech psychology department and graduate students Carolyn Reed and Joan Cesari.

Miss Reed emphasized that society's attitudes toward both aging and alcoholism make getting these persons into a rehabilitation program difficult. They are more likely to isolate themselves and be unwilling to admit to having a problem because of the judgement of society. She said both chronic alcohol abusers and those for whom alcoholism has become a problem in later life can benefit from getting into such treatment.

Dr. Winer suggested several ways counselors can use the unique resources of the elderly to help them deal with the alcoholism problem. For example, what some call pointless reminiscing she calls "life review," and said it is a helpful process in counseling. She urged counselors to make a special effort to assess the capabilities of the elderly, particularly sensory loss and memory loss.

She pointed out that for many elderly persons the whole issue of alcoholism is colored by moral values. Since this generation lived through the Prohibition era, it is often difficult for them to see alcoholism as a clinical problem apart from its moral implications.

Irons cited some other problems of the elderly which intensify with the presence of alcoholism. He said that obtaining services which are really designed for younger people is often very difficult. Isolation is heightened by transportation problems and declining mobility. He suggested that rehabilitation of the elderly

Professor took dummy's king; came to his hand with a trump; discarded one of dummy's hearts on his last high diamond and led his queen of hearts.

West had to take his ace and was then forced either to lead a spade up to the ace-queen or a diamond or heart to allow a ruff in dummy and the discard of that spade queen from his own hand.

West opened the ace of diamonds and continued the suit after East followed with the 10.

The Professor who was declarer said to his partner (the student), "You should have bid two hearts to suggest a notrump contract. Three notrump would have been a cinch, I have to work to make five clubs."

It wasn't really hard work for the Professor. He made the key play by discarding a spade from dummy at trick two so as to keep all three hearts there. Next came two rounds of trumps to take care of possible ruffs followed by the lead of the three of hearts toward dummy.

West was faced with a Hobson's choice. He could rise with the ace of hearts which would eventually allow South to take his queen of hearts and then discard the queen of spades on dummy's heart king; or he could duck.

He elected to duck. The

Schwartz Mastered Portraiture In Brief Career

By IRVING DESFOR
Associated Press Writer

"Contemporary Portraiture by Bern and Ronny Schwartz" is listed on the current lecture program at the International Center of Photography in New York City for March 29. The name of Bern Schwartz was about to become better known in his native America after his fame had soared to meteoric heights particularly in England, and in Europe and Israel.

But Schwartz will not be at the ICP podium that night with his wife and partner, Ronny. In his place, instead, will be his teacher and friend, Philippe Halsman, for Bern's rising career has terminated suddenly. On the eve of New Year's Day 1979, Schwartz died, a victim of inoperable cancer at age 64.

A moving memorial service for this man, whose career in photography only started as he neared 60 years of age, was held at ICP in mid-February. There, I saw some of his outstanding portraits of prominent people and learned of his short but incredible life in portraiture from Cornell Capa, director of ICP, and his friend, Halsman, one of the world's best known portrait craftsmen.

In the brief span of four years, Bern had mastered the art of portraiture: photographed an astounding range of prominent personalities; had memorable exhibitions in Jerusalem and in London's prestigious Colnaghi Gallery; and was acclaimed at a Covent Garden Opera House reception on the publication of a book of his color portraits.

Also, by mid-November 1978, many of his portraits had been selected by their subjects for use as record-album covers, book jackets and as official portraits by politicians and Pope Paul VI. In addition, on hand was an invitation to Buckingham Palace and another from the Vatican to make the first official portrait of Pope John Paul II.

"I was proud of my talented disciple," Halsman said, "and vicariously enjoyed his achievements. I saw the path of his successes steadily mounting and limitless possibilities lay ahead of him."

But that mid-November also brought a medical diagnosis that Schwartz had only a few more weeks to live.

In photography, Bern had learned to slice time into fractions of a second and produce portraits that would live forever. With terminal cancer, he now learned a new dimension of time — that it was limited and must be utilized to make every second count. He faced the issue squarely and together with his wife and three children made plans. They lived each second fully and found joy in being together to the end.

Let's focus a bit on this man's background and see how he came to photography so late in life but did so much in so short a time.

Bernard Lee Schwartz, born in 1914, grew up in Pennsylvania. When his father died, he had to leave Lehigh University at age 18 to make his own way. Within five years, he started his own business in display advertising, went into electronics and then established a world-wide trading company. Each was highly successful. At age 40, he bought a company and developed the first successful synthetic woven fabrics for the tufted carpet industry. It made possible the indoor-outdoor carpet and other applications. He sold the company in 1968.

In 1960, Bern had acquired a chain of retail music stores on the West Coast. When he moved his family and home to La Jolla, Calif., in 1969, the link to his second career in photography was forged. He became friends with one of his neighbors, Anthony di Gesu, a portrait photographer. Bern's early interest in photography was rekindled and a specific fascination for portraiture developed as Di Gesu guided him in the basics.

Following an old business principle of seeking out the best authority in any field, Bern came to New York in 1975 for a Philippe Halsman lecture on portraiture at ICP. It was the beginning of a relationship that went from master and pupil to warm, personal friendship. Soon Halsman acknowledged that his dedicated pupil had absorbed all he could teach him and had now become a "gifted colleague." It was the highest-possible tribute that Bern could conceive.

On trips to London, between lessons, Bern started putting his instructions into practice. One of his first subjects was a personal friend, Maurice Edelman, a member of Parliament. The results were so highly regarded that it led to a series of sittings with other members of Parliament and high British officials.

Early in 1977, an influential friend proposed the idea of a Bern Schwartz exhibition at London's Colnaghi Gallery with all proceeds going to the Queen's Silver Jubilee Appeal Fund. With the idea approved, Bern accomplished the phenomenal job of photographing more than 80 portraits in four months.

"We didn't know it at the time," his wife, Ronny, recalled, "but there was a hidden feeling of urgency. It just had to be done at once — and it was. And the subjects became our friends — prime ministers, statesmen, scholars, artists, writers, religious leaders, stars of the stage, dance and opera."

"Bern accomplished all he set out to do in life," Ronny summed up, "and he did it all with characteristic integrity and fine style."

West German Commemorative Hails European Parliament

By SYD KRONISH
Associated Press Writer

The printing presses that produce the postage stamps of West Germany and Berlin have been very busy. Four commemorative and two definitive have been issued by West Germany while one commemorative and one single definitive have been released by Berlin.

The Federal Republic of Germany's first commemorative hails the European Parliament which consists of nine countries. It marks the first year of direct elections to that body. The 50-pfennig stamp depicts stylized Parliament benches in nine segments with the colors of the flags of the various countries represented. Another adhesive salutes the work of the "Rescue Services on the Road" and is also a 50-pfennig. The stamp bears the emblems of six major rescue organizations involved in aiding road-accident victims.

The West German Short Film Festival to be held in Oberhausen for the 25th year, April 23-28, receives its philatelic accolades via a 50-pfennig stamp, according to the World Wide Philatelic Agency. Featured is a roll of film. The fourth commemorative honors the 100th anniversary of the birth of Agnes Miegel, East Prussian poet, ballad and narrative writer. The 60-pfennig stamp has a portrait of her in her early years.

Berlin's new 60-pfennig commemorative stamp illustrates the recently completed International Congress Center.

The three new definitives are additions to the "Castles" series started in 1977. Each stamp shows fine line drawings of a picturesque German castle.

All these new stamps are available at your local dealer or stamp department.

A pair of 21-cent international air-mail stamps is being issued by the U.S. Postal Service in honor of Octave Chanute and will have first-day release in Chanute, Kan. — the city named after the American aviation pioneer.

Although Chanute is hailed in the aviation world because of his great influence on aeronautics, he initially specialized as a consulting engineer in the building of railroads and railroad bridges. His major impact on aviation came in 1896 when he designed his famous biplane hang-glider, which became a standard for future glider design.

The stamps honoring Chanute are the second in the new Pioneer Aviation Series of international airmail stamps. The vertically positioned stamps feature vignettes of Chanute and in-flight views of his hang-glider. In four lines at the top of each stamp is "Octave Chanute Aviation Pioneer." Across the bottom in one line is "USAirmail 21c."

To order your first-day cancellations you may use either of the two standard procedures.

If you prefer to affix your stamps purchased at your local post office, you must address the envelope and attach peelable address labels. Stamps must be affixed in the upper right corner, return addresses on the right side, at least 5/8ths of an inch from the bottom. Forward the envelope to "First Day Cancellations, Postmaster, Chanute, Kan. 66720" before April 13.

For the Postal Service to affix the stamps, use the same procedure for addressing and send to: "Octave Chanute Stamps, Postmaster, Chanute, Kan. 66720." The cost is 21 cents per stamp. Send a money order, but not cash. Orders must be postmarked no later than April 13.

Chart Shows Buyer Affordable Houses

By ANDY LANG
Associated Press Writer

About once a year, something sets me off on the subject of determining how much a family can afford to spend on a house.

The trigger this time is a new chart said to pinpoint more accurately the cost range of homes you might realistically consider buying. It doesn't fall into that old trap that you can afford a house two and a-half times your annual gross income. Instead, it bases its estimates mostly on your income, the amount of the monthly payments you should be able to handle and the size of the generally required down payment.

As an example, the chart says that if your family income is $25,000, you should be able to handle monthly payments of $520, you will need to put up $11,400 as a down payment and you can afford a house between $54,000 and $60,000. All this is based on the general average of a down payment of 25 percent of the purchase price, a mortgage loan of 30 years and the fact that most lenders advise spending not more than 25 percent of your monthly gross income on mortgage payments, including principal, interest, property taxes and insurance.

But, as I have been contending in print for many years, the most important factors in determining how much you can afford to spend for a house are the state of your finances — entirely aside from your income — and the number and ages of your family members.

Let's suppose, in relation to that $25,000 income example in the chart, that family A consists of a couple between 30 and 40 years of age, with three children aged 13, 15 and 17, the latter on the verge of entering college. The family has about $2,000 in the bank. The down payment of $11,400 will come from the cash they will receive from the sale of their present home. They still have $2,000 remaining on an automobile loan and they have several hundred dollars to pay on credit card accounts.

Family B is a couple in their early 50s. Both of their children are married, living away and doing well. The prospective house purchasers have $80,000 in assets, not including their present home, on which they have a very small mortgage and which will bring them $40,000 in cash when sold. Their two cars are paid for and they have only two or three very small debts.

Can these two couples afford houses costing equal amounts?

Threaded Nails Solve Wall Problem

By The Associated Press

Q — A few years ago, I finished our attic. I used some kind of wallboard. I don't remember now what kind, except that it wasn't regular gypsum board. Some of the nails have started to come out, not very much, just enough so that you can see they are there. I hammered some of them back, very gently, then covered them with a patching plaster that matched the white finish of the wallboard very well. Now the same thing is happening again. Is there some way I can hammer back these nails so that they do not keep coming out?

A — Yes. First, go out and buy some threaded nails. Hammer back the old nails once again, then drive in a threaded nail close to each nail that was loose. Using a nailset, recess the old nails that were coming out as well as the new threaded nails. Fill these holes with patching plaster, leaving the patches slightly above the surface to allow for shrinkage. A day or two later, sand down the surfaces and, where necessary, apply a very thin coat of the patching material. Be prepared for the possibility that some of the old nails which haven't popped yet may do so at a later time.

A — The bottom half of our bathroom walls is covered with ceramic tile. The top half is painted. We intend to repaint the top half soon. When we do, we would like to clean the tile to make it sparkle again like it did when it was new. How can these tiles be cleaned without damaging the surfaces?

A — The tiles may merely be dusty. If so, wiping with a damp cloth or sponge may be all that is necessary. If some of the dirt resists, use a soapless detergent. Still heavier accumulations may require a stiff bristle brush along with the detergent, brushing away the dirt and grease after soaking the tiles well. If these methods still do not accomplish the desired result, scrub lightly with a household cleaning powder. In that event, be extra sure that the tiles are rinsed thoroughly with clear, warm water and dried with an old towel.

Q — I plan to build an inside fireplace.

BIG HAND
CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Some art lovers might like to give a big hand to an unidentified Massachusetts Institute of Technology student. The student, with the owner's permission, has carved a 15-foot-tall tree stump in a backyard here into a huge hand, with the fingers opening toward the sky.

Can it be faced with ceramic tile? Is it fireproof?

A — Yes to both your questions. You can make the fireplace really elegant by using ceramic tile for the hearth as well.

(Complete details about ceramic tile, including installation materials and methods, are included in Andy Lang's booklet, "All About Ceramic Tile," available by sending 35 cents PLUS a long, stamped self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, N.Y. 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column, but individual correspondence cannot be undertaken.)

Cattle Futures Closed Mixed Under Heavy Trade Pressure

By Reuters
CHICAGO — Cattle futures closed 106 points higher to 102 points lower in heavy trade of 31,308 cars Thursday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange. April posted a new historic high at 76.10, rebounding 256 from the low. All contracts fell the limit of 150 before rallying.
 Nearby contracts came back on aggressive buying by a cash connected commission house after one-month lows on selling following the bearish pig crop report. Late support came despite weaker cash cattle and beef.
 Wholesale beef was off 4 to 4 1/2 cents at 105 to 105 1/2 cents a pound, f.o.b. river points. Cash cattle were steady to off $1.50 with the best top $78.50 for export, which is a new record high. The domestic top was $75. Slaughter was 127,000 head. About 3,900 head are expected today at the major markets.
 Feeder cattle futures closed 120 lower to 30 higher on 4,561 contracts. November was the weakest with only April higher. All contracts tumbled the 150 limit level to two-week lows before stiffening.
 Early selling followed the bearish pig crop report and easy trend to cash cattle and beef. Prices came off lows when live cattle futures rallied to a new historic high in the April contract.
 There have been 579 deliveries thus far. Cash feeder cattle were steady with the best top $115 per hundredweight at Oklahoma City. Receipts at the major terminals are expected to total 2,100 head today.

Hog futures closed the daily limit level of 150 lower with sellers over across the board. Volume was a meager 496 cars with thousands of unsold offerings. Prices were locked limit level down from the start.
 Pressure came from the bearish pig crop report which noted percent more hogs in the 14 states on March 1 with breeding hogs up 20 percent and market hogs up 12 percent. Traders ignored the late cattle futures rally.
 Wholesale hams were up 1 to 1 1/2 cent at 81 to 92 cents a pound, f.o.b. river. Cash hogs were up 75 to off 25 cents with the best top $50.25 per hundred-weight at Omaha. Kill was 315,000. The major terminals are expecting 21,800 head today.

 Pork belly (bacon) futures closed the 200 limit lower with sellers over across the board. Volume was held to 197 cars with thousands of unsold offerings.
 Prices were down from the start on selling triggered by the bearish pig crop report with 13 percent more hogs on March 1. Limit level losses in the hog futures and sharp markdowns in cash bellies also brought pressure.
 Deliveries total 57 thus far. Wholesale bacon was unchanged to off 3 cents at 50 to 53 1/2 cents a pound, f.o.b. river.

Additional Russian Purchase Of Corn From U.S. Disclosed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union has bought an additional 315,000 metric tons of U.S. corn, the Agriculture Department said.
 Counting earlier contracts, U.S. sales of wheat and corn now total about 6.2 million metric tons for delivery through Sept. 30, the end of the third year of an agreement calling for Russia to buy minimum amounts of the grain.
 The minimum is 6 million metric tons annually, but the agreement also specifies that it should consist equally of wheat and corn.
 Officials say the Soviet Union's purchases currently consist of about 1.75 million metric tons of wheat and 4.45 million of corn.

 Thus, the Soviets are expected to buy at least 1.25 million metric tons of wheat to meet the terms of the agreement, and possibly more.
 Department experts and trade sources have indicated the Soviets may end up buying 8 million to 10 million metric tons of the two grains combined for 1978-79.
 Last year they bought about 14.8 million metric tons, and U.S. officials told the Soviets last fall that they could buy up to 15 million metric tons in 1978-79 if they chose.

Bill To Alter Gas Rate Authority Pushed Aside

AUSTIN (AP)—After hearing conflicting views from natural gas companies, a Senate committee voted Thursday to continue letting cities have first crack at proposed gas rate hikes.

"We think the consumers of this state benefit more by having rate authority in local elected officials rather than in a regulatory body in Austin," Saunders Gregg, vice president of Entex Inc., told the Senate Economic Development Committee.

The committee voted 5-2 against a bill (SB243) by Sen. Bill Moore, D-Bryan, that would have transferred original jurisdiction over natural gas rates to the Texas Railroad Commission.

It was a turnaround from Monday, when the committee approved a similar bill to take away local jurisdiction in electric rate cases and give it to the Public Utility Commission.

Gas companies may appeal local rate decisions to the Railroad Commission, but original jurisdiction rests with local governments.

Opponents of Moore's measure said it would further hamper consumer attempts to control rising utility costs.

Mayor A.L. Mangham of Nacogdoches said cities would have a hard time being heard if they intervened in a Railroad Commission hearing.

"You just try to talk to these people," Mangham said. "You've got to be a cousin to the pope to get in."

Lone Star Gas Co. of Dallas, serving 1.1 million customers in more than 400 cities, was the only utility testifying for Moore's bill, while Entex of Houston and Pioneer Natural Gas Co. of Amarillo opposed it.

"State regulation would significantly reduce the expense of regulation that is borne by ratepayers and taxpayers," said Carol L. Neaves, Lone Star president.

Since 1975, Neaves said his company has had over 500 appeals from municipal decisions before the Railroad Commission.

But Gregg and Pioneer representatives said they prefer doing business with local governments.

"It's been only three times in 45 years that Entex and cities have not resolved issues on a local level," said Gregg. Entex serves 2.5 million customers in 325 cities.

"We feel by involving cities in the rate-making business, it gives them a much better appreciation of our problems," said W.M. Lampe, Pioneer vice president.

Don Butler, a rate consultant, said Lone Star favored the bill because of its poor track record in local rate cases compared to other companies.

"Lone Star seems unable to deal with cities on a collective basis," said the Austin attorney. "They deal on a divide and conquer basis."

SEC Announces Rule On New Securities

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Securities and Exchange Commission announced plans Thursday for a new rule that could exempt newly listed securities from stock exchange rules that require trading on the exchange floor.

SEC Chairman Harold M. Williams told a news conference that he expected the rulemaking proceedings to begin "before summer."

The announcement was part of a status report released by the commission on the establishment of a national market system.

"The commission intends promptly to initiate rulemaking proceedings to consider redefinition of the trading environment for securities now traded exclusively over-the-counter when those securities become listed or admitted to unlisted trading privileges on an exchange for the first time," the SEC said.

It added that "in areas involving potentially profound market-structure change, such as the elimination of remaining off-board trading restrictions, use of controlled, limited experiments may be both prudent and instructive."

The SEC said in its report that "significant steps" taken toward creation of a national market system in 1978 included implementation of a new rule to require firm quotation information and the start of two experimental programs to route sale and purchase orders among exchanges.

The commission noted, however, that both experimental programs have experienced problems.

—The Intermarket Trading System, developed jointly by several exchanges, discourages participation because of "the complexity of order-entry procedures and the two-minute time interval provided for execution or rejection" of a bid.

—The Cincinnati Stock Exchange's so-called multiple-dealer trading facility has drawn little broker interest, although computer terminals are on the floors of the Boston, Midwest and Pacific stock exchanges.

Williams said the commission would continue to encourage more participation in the Cincinnati system, but added "I don't think we can do more" in the way of pushing the industry to use it.

Bidding War Escalates For Oil, Gas Subsidiary

NEW YORK (AP)—The bidding war for International Paper Co.'s oil and gas operations heated up Thursday after a nine-day lull as International Paper announced Mobil Corp. has offered "approximately $765 million for most of the assets of its General Crude Oil division."

International Paper on March 13 said it had agreed in principle to sell General Crude to Tenneco Oil Co. and Southland Royalty Co., two major independent oil and gas producers, for $705 million.

The Tenneco-Southland bid knocked out Gulf Oil Corp.'s tentative plan — announced March 1 — to buy the subsidiary for $650 million.

Mobil's bid, made Wednesday, "differs in a number of respects" from the offer by Tenneco and Southland, International Paper said in a prepared statement.

"I can't give you any details" on the Mobil offer, said International Paper spokesman John Guineven. "It's being evaluated."

In Houston, Tenneco and Southland issued a joint statement saying they "have a written agreement with International Paper Co. providing for the sale of General Crude's Oil and Gas operations."

They added a set of "definitive" sales contracts would be presented to the International Paper board next week.

Tenneco and Southland, in the tentative deal announced last week, said as part of the General Crude purchase they would set up long-term oil or gas exploration and development projects on International Paper properties. Mobil has proposed a similar development program, International Paper said.

General Crude, based in Houston, has oil and gas operations in the United States — largely in Texas, Louisiana and the Gulf of Mexico — and in Canada and Barbados.

Ohio River Gas Explosion Hurts At Least Three

IRONTON, Ohio (AP)—An explosion rocked a Rich Oil Co. distribution terminal Thursday, injuring at least three people and sending flames hundreds of feet into the air, authorities said.

A spokesman for the Lawrence County sheriff's office said it was not immediately known whether the blast occurred in a gasoline storage tank or on a barge on the Ohio River that was pumping fuel at the time.

Paramedics at the scene said three people were taken to Lawrence General Hospital with severe burns.

A hospital spokeswoman said victims were being brought to the emergency room. "I can't tell you how many at this time. They're still coming in," she said.

Police said flames from the explosion threatened a nearby tank which held thousands of gallons of gasoline. Dozens of residents were evacuated from the area as firemen from companies in Ohio and Kentucky fought the flames.

The explosion occurred shortly after 3 p.m.

Frank Mascari, an employee at a clothing store a few blocks from the scene, said it "shook the store and sounded like a sonic boom. And then there was another boom. The sky is black with smoke."

Illinois Considers New Death Mode

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP)—Condemned criminals in Illinois would die by injection of fatal doses of drugs instead of in the electric chair under a measure approved by a state Senate committee.

Calling death by injection more humane, less painful and "my energy conservation bill," Republican Sen. John E. Grotberg, the sponsor, said: "It seems to me we put animals away nice and quietly and we could put people away quietly if the need arises."

The Senate Judiciary Committee approved the measure 4-1 Wednesday and sent it to the Senate floor. Three committee members declined to vote, saying they opposed capital punishment in any form.

West Coast Trio Scores With Coffee

SEATTLE (AP) — Computer worker Jerry Baldwin was left high and dry when Congress shot down the supersonic transport being developed by Boeing Co. in 1970.

Writer Gordon Bowker went off to establish an advertising agency when Seattle Magazine went belly-up in 1970.

Zev Siegl had retired early from work as a junior high school teacher by 1970.

The next year the three friends established Starbucks, now one of the largest dealers of specialty coffees in the West.

"We were all interested in food, coffee and tea, and the idea seemed like it would go," Baldwin said. "Zev did the supplier research, something at which he excels. I did the financial work, and Gordon came up with the name."

Bowker said the name was not chosen by accident.

"We wanted a name that would be relatively free of association and that would come to mean coffee and tea in Seattle," he said.

Running through a list of words beginning with the letters ST, on the theory that they pack punch, Bowker lit on Starbo, an old mining town near Mount Rainier.

"I immediately thought of the Melville character, the first mate on the Pequod in 'Moby Dick,'" he said. And Starbucks was born.

LIQUORED LOBSTER

Tagging lobsters for study is ineffective because the crustaceans shed their shell as they grow. When marine biologists in Canada proposed marking the lobster with numbers, a tattoo artist balked because of their fearsome claws. The lobsters were placed in buckets of water generously laced with alcohol then tattooed before they sobered up.

The first retail store was opened near the historic Pike Place Market. First-year sales, covering nine months of operation in 1971, amounted to $49,000.

Last year, with wholesale business taking 65 percent of the company's roasting production and three retail stores flourishing, sales were $1.8 million. A 50 percent growth is projected for 1979.

So what's the next step? Franchising? Selling out to a major food conglomerate? Going public to raise capital for further expansion by selling stock?

None of the above, says Baldwin, company president.

The money for the first store was scraped together with the help of 10 other friends — "no relatives or couples, married or otherwise," Baldwin said — and the list of investors has remained unchanged.

"We will never go public," he insisted. "Starbucks is a company that would be destroyed by that in immeasurable ways."

However, Starbucks nets 3.2 cents after taxes on each dollar of sales, and "with those (profit) margins it is hard to generate enough capital internally to expand," Baldwin said. The answer is bank loans with interest rates approaching 15 percent.

The trio decided to go into the coffee business after a series of failures in other enterprises, some of which they refuse to identify or discuss.

Baldwin and Siegl, son of the Seattle Symphony's concertmaster, had tried without success to sell radio stations an automated format combining classical music with light educational material.

Bowker and Siegl had written educational screenplays for King Screen Productions, a now-defunct subsidiary of King Broadcasting, which sold the films nationally. Most of the boom for Starbucks has come in wholesale business, with retail customers as far away as Grand Junction, Colo.; Bozeman, Mont., and Dutch Harbor, Alaska.

Up to now, Baldwin says, "mostly we've been passive." Nonetheless, he says, "Our wholesale manager, Jean Mac, can hardly keep up with inquiries, so we've doubled the sales force from one to two people to keep pace."

Sales efforts also are becoming more aggressive. In the past month, Starbucks has participated in gift shows in Seattle, Portland and San Francisco, where suppliers and retailers can talk business.

In the long run, Baldwin wants to open more retail stores, saying they yield higher profits.

But the store will be in the business Starbucks knows best — coffee. The firm's one failure was a store that diversified into cookware. It opened in late 1973 and closed three years later, the victim of slumping sales.

"We decided it was too much to do it all well," Baldwin says.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By BILL DOYLE

Investors, who have become accustomed to the curve balls thrown at them by Washington bureaucrats, were set back on their heels by the latest one-two pitch out of Endsville-on-the-Potomac. These were a pair of "sinkers" which will drastically reduce the yields on new issued six-month savings certificates.

In a surprise joint announcement, the federal regulators of both banks and savings and loan associations hurled two decrees: 1. Interest on six-month certificates can no longer be compounded. 2. S&Ls and savings banks can no longer pay higher interest than commercial banks on newly-issued six-month certificates when the yield on new 26-week U.S. Treasury Bills is at 9 percent or higher.

Stripped of all the gobbledygook, this meant that on Mar. 15 — the date the new regulations went into effect — the maximum annual yield on new six-month certificates dropped by almost 0.9 of 1 percent.

By careful shopping, an investor who put $10,000 — the minimum denomination — into a six-month certificate on Mar. 14 could have done so at an annual yield of up to 10.29 percent. But those yields are now gone forever — unless interest rates zoom up and away.

The basic rate-setting procedure for six-month savings will still be determined by the yield the U.S. Treasury pays at its weekly auction of 26-week T-bills. As long as the T-bill rate is 9 percent or higher, banks and S&Ls will be allowed to pay up to the T-bill rate on new six-month certificates. Until March 15, S&Ls and savings banks had been allowed to pay 0.25 of 1 percent more than commercial banks.

All banks and S&Ls had been allowed to compound the interest on the six-month certificates, either on a daily or continuous basis — adding better than 0.6 of 1 percent to the effective yield. That procedure has been banned by the new regulations.

So, by wiping out the compounding factor and the differential between the "thrifts" and the commercial banks, the federal regulators lowered the maximum yield available on new six-month certificates by close to 0.9 of 1 percent.

That may make some bankers and S&L officials happy. But it seems certain to stir up discontent among savers who seek the highest possible yields.

Q. I live alone but I have some close relatives. Is it possible for me to transfer some of the stocks I own to some young children, with myself as custodian under the gift to minors act of our state? Or is this form restricted to a parent or appointed guardian of each child?

A. There is no restriction of the type you mention. You can give stock under the gift to minors form, to any child you want to — relative or not. And, because you will be making the gift, you can name anyone you want to as custodian.

But, a word of caution. If you — the donor — name yourself as custodian and you die before the child becomes an adult and while the stock is still registered in gift to minors form, the value of the stock will be counted as part of your estate for federal estate tax and state inheritance tax purposes.

That's why it's usually a good move for the donor to name someone else as custodian for stock registered in gift to minors form.

Q. I would like to transfer some stock I own to a church charity. Can I do this by printing the charity's name and address on the back of the stock certificate; have my signature guaranteed by my bank; send the certificate to the company whose stock is involved? Also, how do I report this on my income tax returns?

A. The answer to your first question is "yes." It's done all the time. Just so you won't be surprised, be prepared to pay whatever small transfer tax may be due.

Because the organization to which you plan to give that stock clearly falls within the Internal Revenue Service's guidelines of "organizations that are religious, charitable, educational, scientific or literary in purposes," you can take your gift as a deduction, listing the value of the stock as a charitable contribution on Schedule A of your Form 1040.

DOYLE welcomes written questions, but he will be able to provide answers only through the column.

Bomb Threat Brings Evacuation Of Exchange Floor

NEW YORK (AP) — Trading was halted and 1,500 persons were evacuated from the Commodities Exchange Thursday after the exchange received two telephone calls warning that a bomb would go off.

The caller said the blast would go off at 2 p.m., but 15 minutes after the hour no bomb had been found and there had been no blast.

The exchange occupies the top floor of the eight-story building at No. 4 World Trade Center. The other floors were not evacuated.

A spokesman for the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey, which owns the Trade Center, said a security guard at the exchange received the first bomb threat at 10:50 a.m. from an anonymous caller.

He said the same guard received a followup call 20 minutes later saying that the warning was not a hoax. The caller was described as a male with a Spanish accent.

A reporter who went to the building took an elevator to the eighth floor, but was told a search was underway by the chief of security and was not allowed to stay.

Short Interest Stock Rises For Month

NEW YORK (AP) — New York Stock Exchange short interest rose 11 percent during the four-week period ending March 15, according to the nation's largest securities market.

The total reached 39,926 million shares, an increase of 3,818 shares from mid-February.

At the American Stock Exchange, short interest fell 270,722 shares, or 5 percent, to 5,496 million shares from the revised figure of 5,767 million shares the month earlier.

A short sale is the sale of borrowed stock. The seller expects a price decline that would enable him to purchase an equal number of shares later at a lower price for return to the lender. The short interest is the number of shares that haven't been purchased for return to lenders.

Bond Prices Mixed In Quiet Trading

NEW YORK (AP) — Industrial and utility corporate bond prices were mixed in quiet trading Thursday, with industrials unchanged and utilities up 1/4 point.

Government issues gained 3-52 in intermediate and 3-32 in long maturities. Short-term governments rose 1-32, according to the investment banking firm of Salomon Brothers.

Three-month Treasury bill yields were up 1 basis point to 9.56 percent; six-month bills fell 1 basis point to 9.46 percent, and one-year bills were off 2 basis points to 9.36 percent.

Municipals rose 1/4 point in active trading. Federal funds traded at 10 percent.

Mass Transit System's Leadership To Change

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chief of the federal Urban Mass Transportation Administration will succeed Theodore Lutz as general manager of Washington's Metro bus and rail system, it was disclosed Thursday.

Jerry Moore, Metro board chairman and a District of Columbia councilman, revealed that the board had approved hiring Richard Page during a special executive session.

Page, who managed the Seattle Metro system before taking his federal post in 1977, had been reported earlier this month to be the leading candidate to replace Lutz.

Snow-Bound Indians Said Safe

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Two residents of Pin Valley, cut off by avalanches for three days, hiked 13 miles through deep snow and told state officials Thursday that all 2,000 people of the north Indian valley are safe, a Himachal Pradesh state spokesman reported.

They told Gov. Aminuddin Ahmed Loharu and other officials at Kaza in the nearby Spiti Valley that avalanches destroyed six houses in Tangpi, one of 13 hamlets in Pin Valley, spokesman S.K. Bedi told a reporter.

Bedi said Pin Valley, about 40 miles north of Simla, the state capital, is difficult to reach even in the best of weather since there are no roads or even horse trails to the remote area.

But Indian Air Force helicopters have begun air drops of cooked food, blankets and clothing over Pin Valley and other places hit by heavy snows and avalanches, he said.

The official death toll throughout the affected area has been reduced to 221 with the discovery of nine persons earlier reported killed in snowslides, Bedi said in a telephone interview.

In neighboring Kashmir, a state leader said avalanches this month have claimed 48 lives, the United News of India reported.

Former Policeman Denies Planting Gun

HOUSTON (UPI) — A fired police lieutenant Thursday denied planting a "throw-down" pistol on a dying auto theft suspect to justify the teenager's shooting and said his accusers had poor reputations for truthfulness.

Paul Danford Dillon, 38, testified he did not participate in the planting of false evidence and would not have approved a cover-up even if it had been suggested by other officers — which he said did not occur.

Dillon and fired officers Danny Howard Mays, 32, and Norval Wayne Holloway, 29, are on trial for alleged civil rights violations in the Feb. 8, 1977, shooting death of Randall Alan Webster, 17, of Shreveport, La.

Dillon, the only defendant to testify, said he arrived on the scene after Webster had been shot and talked with other officers.

"They told me he (Webster) had come out of the (stolen) truck with a pistol and Mays shot him," Dillon testified.

The police investigation of the incident supported that account for more than a year. Federal investigators, however, traced the .22-caliber pistol found beside Webster's body to the police property room and records listed it as having been destroyed in 1968.

Another fired officer, William E. Byrd, has testified he supplied the "throw-down" weapon to Holloway, who placed in first in Webster's hand as the youth was dying and then placed it on the pavement beside him.

Fired officer John Thomas Olin has testified Dillon first offered to supply a pistol to conceal Webster died unarmed while being pistol-whipped by Mays. Defense lawyer Allen Isbell asked Dillon if the other patrolmen told him the shooting occurred while Webster was being pistol-whipped or that the teen-ager was unarmed.

"No, they didn't tell me that," Dillon said.

Dillon said he did not know why Olin or other officers would make accusations against him. He said Byrd and Byrd's partner, James Estes, had bad reputations for truthfulness.

Testimony was expected to end this week with 12 hours of final arguments beginning Monday and continuing through Tuesday before the case reaches the jury.

Inmate Credit Card Theft Bared

BLAND, Va. (AP) — Inmates at the Bland Correctional Center stole between $50,000 and $60,000 in a credit card fraud scheme to make their life on the inside a bit easier, State Police investigators say.

For more than a year, the inmates ordered everything from stereos and televisions to exotic foods — including a box of frozen quail — from stores across the country, officials told the Roanoke Times & World News.

The scheme apparently worked for awhile because the state prison camp inmates often disguised their addresses, investigators said.

They made it appear they were attending a community college by listing their address as BCC, Bland, Va., or lived at a country estate called Bland Farm.

State Police began investigating late last year after prison officials started getting suspicious about the merchandise pouring into the prison.

Then early this month, 19 inmates were indicted by a Bland County grand jury on 19 felony and eight misdemeanor charges of credit card fraud.

Three of the inmates charged with misdemeanors have pleaded guilty, but trials for the others are pending.

Bland County Commonwealth's Attorney Willard Lester estimates more than 100 prisoners at the 450-inmate facility participated in the scheme, in which inmates ordered goods through the mail and charged them to either a made-up or real credit card number.

The indictments cover just a few thousand dollars worth of the goods believed to have been obtained through the scheme, an investigator said.

Message To Washington

MESSAGE — I am a sergeant in the Marines and I am having some very difficult problems concerning my pay. I took an advance on my salary just before Christmas, then began taking the advance out of my salary, but they took too much. My last check was more than $100 less than it should have been, even with the deduction for advance pay. This is really hurting, as now I can't even afford to eat. Please help! — J.O. Gleaview, Ill.

SENATOR BENTSEN RESPONDS — Marine Corps officials have audited your pay records and inform me that an emergency payment of $100 will be issued to you immediately. Apparently a bookkeeping error caused your pay advance to be posted twice, causing you to be charged double for it. A spokesman for the Marines advises me that the error has now been corrected and you should receive the proper amount due you on future paydays.

MESSAGE — I understand that the 1980 census will begin soon and I realize this is a big job, requiring a lot of manpower. As I am presently unemployed, I would like to apply for a position as a census taker now. Where and how does one apply for one of these jobs? Any help will be most appreciated. — R.J., Sea-brook SENATOR BENTSEN RESPONDS — Census officials tell me that they will not begin advertising for census takers until January or February of 1980. If you wish to apply before then you may send your application to U.S. Bureau of the Census, Room 3C-54, 1100 Commerce Street, Dallas, Texas 75242. However, the application will not be processed until the Bureau begins actively seeking workers early next year.

Do you have a problem with government? MESSAGE TO WASHINGTON cuts through the red tape to get answers to your questions about Social Security, veterans benefits, immigration matters and other problems you may have run into in your dealings with the Federal Government in Washington. Write MESSAGE TO WASHINGTON, c/o Senator Lloyd Bentsen, U.S. Senate, Washington, D.C. 20510. Step 1: From the year chart, find the numbers corresponding to your year of birth. For instance, if you were born in 1947, your number for Physical would be 21, Emotional 17, Intellectual 19. Note whether your numbers are preceded by an A or B; this will be used for Step 2.

Few Even Attempting, Plan To Conserve Energy

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Most Americans think reports of oil and gasoline shortages are a hoax to get consumers to pay more, an Associated Press-NBC News poll shows.

The poll also indicates that almost one-fifth of the people haven't even tried to cut energy use. And more than one-fourth of those questioned say that even if gasoline hits $1 a gallon, they will drive their cars just as much as they do now.

Separate interviews in addition to the poll found that people who are turning down thermostats, driving less or otherwise cutting back are doing so to save money — not because they are worried about energy supplies.

"I'm a senior citizen and I try to save every damn penny I can," explained Rosselyn Wyman, 76, of South Boston.

Mrs. Ernest Matthews of Boise said: "We ... don't use any more (energy) than we have to. At these prices, you can't afford to."

Is Mrs. Matthews driving less, cutting out non-essential trips as President Carter has suggested? "How can I cut any more?" she replied. "We don't have any money to go on any trips. About the only thing I use the car for is to go shopping and to work."

The 1,600 people interviewed by telephone Monday and Tuesday in the AP-NBC News poll were asked whether they thought the oil shortage was real or a hoax to drive up prices. Sixty-eight percent said they thought it was a hoax; 22 percent said the shortage was real; and 10 percent said they weren't sure. Asked the same question about a gasoline shortage, 70 percent said it was a hoax. Twenty-two percent said the shortage was real and 8 percent were unsure. Asked whether they had cut energy consumption in the past month or two, 19 percent of those questioned said no. Thirty-seven percent said they had turned down the thermostat, 20 percent said they were driving less and 16 percent said they used lights or appliances less.

The AP-NBC News poll also indicated that higher prices for gasoline may not have much effect on driving.

Asked: "If gasoline prices increase to $1 a gallon in the near future, which of the following are you most likely to do?" 26 percent — more than one in four — said they would continue to use their cars as they do now. Forty-four percent said they would drive less; 19 percent said they would buy a smaller, fuel-efficient car; 9 percent said they'd switch to mass transit and 2 percent said they were not sure.

President Carter has appealed to Americans to ease the energy crunch caused by the Iranian revolution by turning down the thermostat, driving less and taking other conservation steps. But Energy Secretary James Schlesinger says the appeals for voluntary savings have not worked; he warns that mandatory measures may be needed.

Informal interviews in random cities produced mixed results. Like Mrs. Matthews in Boise, some of those questioned said they already were doing all they could. Others said they didn't think individual contributions really made much of a difference. And still others said they had indeed made an effort to conserve.

Jaquie Petersen, a waitress in Sacramento, Calif., said, "I'm careful about my driving. I turn down the thermostat. I don't use the lights as much — mostly because I pay the bills."

Mrs. Petersen said she had been keeping an eye on energy use even before Carter appealed for conservation. "I'm concerned about it," she said. "I think we're paying the Arabs too much ... It's just kind of common sense. If we're running low, let's take care of it."

Mrs. John Hendley of Decatur, Ga., said, "I think it would be wonderful if every individual would cooperate. I think that is the only way we're going to solve this problem." She said she and her husband added six inches to the three inches of insulation already in their attic. They installed storm windows and bought a smaller car.

In contrast, Jay Sykes, a professor from Milwaukee, said, "Anything I could do wouldn't make much difference."

The United States uses about 21 million barrels of oil a day. The Treasury Department has estimated that lowering home thermostats three degrees could save the equivalent of 550,000 barrels a day. Reducing the speed limit from 55 mph to 50 mph could save 250,000 barrels daily. Wider use of car pools — increasing the average number of passengers per vehicle from 1.3 to 2.3 — could cut consumption by the equivalent of 780,000 barrels a day.

As with any sample survey, the results of the AP-NBC News poll could differ from the results of interviews with all Americans with telephones because of chance variations in the sample.

For polls with 1,600 interviews, the results should vary no more than three percentage points either way simply because of sample errors. That is, there is only one chance out of 20 that the results of interviews with all American adults would vary from these results by more than three percentage points.

Final Council Question Arguments Made

Lubbock city council under the present at-large system.

Attorney Dennis McGill opened final arguments for the city by saying there are numerous cases showing the at-large system is not unconstitutional.

"A plan that is racially neutral on its face must be shown to be continued with discriminatory intent to be set aside," McGill said.

He said the candidacy of Miss Mercado did not show that a minority candidate

Beat Suspects To Death

DACCA, Bangladesh (AP) — Nine alleged robbers were beaten to death by villagers in Keraniganj, three miles from here, police said Thursday.

When police challenged 12 suspected robbers Wednesday the suspects fired at the officers and took shelter in a house. When the alleged thieves exhausted their ammunition, the villagers beat them to death, police said.

Six died on the spot and three in a hospital. Three were reported captured.

cannot be elected under the present system because she campaigned only in minority areas and did not appeal to the whole electorate.

He also argued that single-member districts "may prevent minorities from ever exerting influence outside their district."

He cited testimony by city Councilwoman Carolyn Jordan that the minority vote was crucial to her election.

City attorney Jim Brewster said extensive evidence entered by the city during two weeks of testimony earlier this year showed that numerous improvement projects have been undertaken by the city over past decades to improve life for Lubbock minorities.

"My purpose is not to defend my grandfather or my father but to defend the system as selected by the voters of this city," Brewster said.

He argued that minorities have had no difficulty getting on the ballot for city elections and that there was no evidence presented that they are treated discourteously or otherwise discriminated against by the city government.

Judge Woodward's decision in the case is not expected for at least two weeks.

MANASSAS, Va. (AP) — They say one picture is worth a thousand words, but to Frank L. Bartosik one newspaper picture turned out to be worth $28 — and a clean driving record.

Earlier this month, Bartosik had been convicted of making a U-turn in a No-U-Turn zone at Manassas Drive and Centreville Road while on his way to work. He was fined $28.

The photo showed that the sign was partially obscured by a utility pole, and thus not clearly visible as required by the Virginia Code.

One reader who noted the photograph with more than ordinary interest was Prince William County General District Court Judge William R. Murphy, who had fined Bartosik.

Murphy ordered a rehearing in the case.

Thursday morning, Bartosik appeared in Murphy's court again, where the judge ordered the case dismissed and the $28 fine returned.

'You Can Go Home Again'

BOSTON (AP) — Boston Symphony Orchestra conductor Seiji Ozawa found that author Thomas Wolfe was wrong. You can go home again.

The orchestra's concert tour in Peking gave the conductor the chance to revisit the boyhood home in Peking that his family left when he was 6.

"The smell is exactly the same," said Ozawa the day he and his mother visited the small, gray house. "Something to do with kitchen. I am like little boy again — the street was so wide then because I was small."

The doorway at No. 35 Hsin Kai Lo was gray-brown, but Ozawa said it used to be red — "they don't paint it any more."

Ozawa was accompanied by two photographers, a press agent, two reporters and a television crew. His comments were reported in Thursday's Boston Globe.

Summing up his feelings about the trip, Ozawa said, "It has been my dream, like it was the dream of my father, to come back here."

Sun To Heat Home In Hell

HELL, Mich. (AP) — It gets so hot in Hell, one resident plans to cash in on the local resources to trim his utility bill.

John Lake is putting a solar heating device in his house.

Actually, he plans to become the first and only solar heating dealer in Hell.

"For my house, I can cut my heating bill by about 50 percent," said Lake, a laid-off Chrysler Corp. foreman. "I've been looking at solar heat for about a year and a half."

The solar heating panel sits 22 feet high in Lake's yard, is 8 feet long and 8 feet wide, according to George Schnelle of nearby Dexter, distributor of the device.

"Is there enough sunlight in Hell?"

"Sure," said Schnelle. "The only survey we had to make was to find out if any trees would block the light."

Weightlifters Unneeded

ROME (UPI) — The Italian state printing works Wednesday was forced to retract an earlier ruling that 60 young women applying for jobs were unsuitable because they could not lift 220-pound weights.

About 5,000 employees walked off the job in demanding that the girls be considered eligible for employment because their duties would only entail wrapping printed bundles.

The woman were asked to lift the 220-pound dumbbells during a medical examination. None was able to budge them.

Escapee Flags Wrong Driver

CARROLLTON, Miss. (AP) — Escaped Carroll County prisoner John Tiller couldn't have made a worse choice Thursday when he tried to thumb a ride with a Mississippi Highway Patrol trooper's wife.

Carroll County Sheriff C.D. Whitfield said Mrs. Jerry Hall notified authorities after Tiller tried to flag down her car about six miles east of here.

Whitfield said Tiller, who escaped Wednesday afternoon, surrendered without resistance about 10 minutes after he was seen by Mrs. Hall.

Tiller, 25, of Memphis, Tenn., escaped Wednesday from a doctor's office, where he had been taken after complaining of feeling ill. Whitfield said Tiller was being held on charges of possession of controlled substances and armed robbery when he escaped.

Rogers Returns To U.S.

HEIDELBERG, West Germany (AP) — Gen. Bernard W. Rogers, U.S. Army chief of staff and newly designated commander of U.S. Forces, Europe, returned to the United States on Thursday after a three-day tour of units in West Germany.

Rogers departed by plane after watching troops of the 8th Infantry Division train at Baumholder.

His visit included stops at the north German town of Garlstedt, new home of the 2nd Armored Division (Forward), and in Bonn, where he met his West German counterpart, Lt. Gen. Horst Hildebrandt.

President Carter tapped Rogers earlier this year to succeed Gen. Alexander M. Haig Jr., as commander of U.S. Forces, Europe. Haig, former White House chief of staff under President Nixon, plans to retire.

Since the NATO alliance was founded, the commander of U.S. Forces, Europe, has served as Supreme Commander Allied Forces, Europe.

Unknowns Eye Elvis Role

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "At least I had my shot at it," said Roger Dennis, a Chicago furniture mover who was one of more than 100 men who auditioned for the lead role in a planned $10 million film biography of Elvis Presley.

"If I don't get the part, I'll just go back to Chicago and move furniture again," the 37-year-old Dennis, owner of a small moving company, said Wednesday.

"I heard on the radio about how they were looking for somebody to play Elvis, and I said to my wife: 'That's my meat.'"

After practicing in his living room in front of neighbors, Dennis sang "How Great Thou Art" at the audition conducted by three film producers.

"We don't need a big name," said co-producer Pete Bennett, who conducted the tryouts with his partners Saul Swimmer and William Cash. "We've decided to go with an unknown, because the part itself is so strong."

A previous audition held in New York attracted 230 men hoping to land the Elvis part in the film, "The King of Rock 'n' Roll." Another audition may be held in London before the start of filming, which the producers hope can begin as early as May.

Baron Receives Threats

PARIS (AP) — Baron Edouard-Jean Empain, the Franco-Belgian tycoon kidnapped and held hooded and chained for 63 days last year, has received new telephoned threats, informed sources said Thursday.

Empain, reported currently on a business trip in Morocco, did not take the threats seriously and did not inform police, according to the sources who asked not to be identified.

During the kidnapping, the gang cut off the tip of one of Empain's fingers and sent it to his family.

The sources said a caller told the baron, 41, that unless he paid a ransom of about $10 million that was promised during his captivity, "we will carry out a plan that will make you regret not paying."

The call came within days of the first anniversary of a shoot-out in which police, waiting in ambush at a ransom payment point, killed one suspected gang member and captured another.

Two days later, Empain was released after the captured gangster, Alain Caillot, made a telephoned plea to his gang.

CHEMICALS EXPLODE — Fire and smoke rise from burning drums of phosphorus on a tractor-trailer rig after they exploded on a downtown Gettysburg, Pa., street early Thursday. Occupants of nearby homes were evacuated, schools were closed and firemen became ill from fumes inhaled as they fought the blaze. There were, however, no serious injuries. (AP Laserphoto)

Phosphorus Fire Injures 60 Firemen Near Historic Site

GETTYSBURG, Pa. (AP) — At least 60 firemen were sent to the hospital Thursday after battling flames and explosions from a burning truckload of 20 tons of phosphorus. The fire could be seen for 20 miles around the historic Gettysburg Civil War battlefield.

The firemen were admitted to Annie Warner Hospital for observation after their exposure to the burning, poisonous substance, officials said.

Nursing supervisor Judith Kalbaugh said many of the firemen were exhibiting such symptoms as eye irritation, abdominal pain, vomiting, confusion, dizziness, coughing and abnormal thirst.

"They're being monitored very carefully," Mrs. Kalbaugh said. "We just have to wait and treat the symptoms."

The early-morning fire broke out on U.S. Route 30 in downtown Gettysburg when a truck carrying 42,186 pounds of crude red and yellow phosphorus in 89 drums stopped at a red light.

The truck was en route from the Electro Phosphorus Co. in Mulberry, Fla., to Metallurgical Products Co. in West Chester, Met.

Truck driver Scott Merryman of Falling Waters, W. Va., said that while he was stopped at the light he noticed a set of brakes on his rig had caught fire. By the time firefighters arrived, the flames had spread to his cargo.

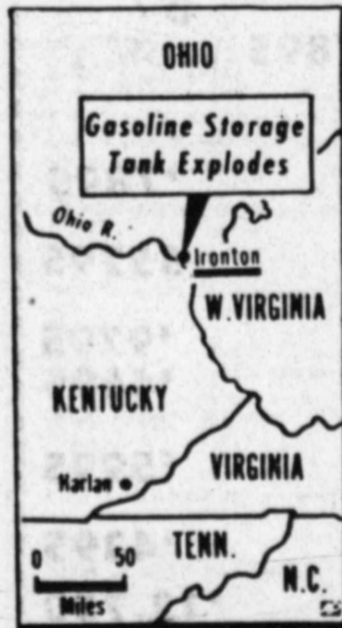

Public schools were closed and U.S. Route 30 was shut down while about 100 firefighters from Gettysburg and surrounding communities battled the blaze for about an hour.

One house was damaged by the fire and the explosions hurled one of the drums two blocks, police said.

The flames and smoke could be seen for 20 miles, authorities said.

Meanwhile, a second phosphorus-related accident was reported by Conrail officials at Easton, where eight cars in a 141-car freight train derailed. Only one of the cars toppled over, but it was a tank car containing phosphorus residue diluted with water. Fire crews were standing by.

The train was en route from Albany, N.Y. to Harrisburg when the accident occurred. Easton Fire Chief Earl Brotzman said a small fire broke out at the rear of the tanker, but it was quickly extinguished. Phosphorus oxidizes rapidly in air and has to be kept under water. It burns at room temperature, giving off dense white smoke which absorbs moisture from the air to form deadly phosphoric acid.

Muleshoe Girl Wins Essay Contest

SAN ANTONIO (Special) — Julia Shane, a Muleshoe High School senior, will be honored for an award-winning essay during the spring quarterly meeting in Austin of the Air Force Association of Texas.

Miss Shain, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter C. Shain of Muleshoe, will receive an Air Force Association-Texas plaque, plus a $1,000 check for having won the 1978 AFA Texas/Earl North Parker Scholarship contest.

The honors will be given at a banquet that concludes the two-day meeting in Austin.

All entrants were required to submit an essay of 500 to 600 words on the topic, "The U.S. Air Force — A National Resource."

Left-Wing Leader Assassinated By Several Gunmen

GUATEMALA CITY, Guatemala (AP) — Several men firing machine guns killed Manuel Colon Argueta, a leading leftist politician who was expected to run for president, and two of his bodyguards Thursday, police reported.

They said witnesses reported Colon Argueta and his bodyguards were driving in two cars to Guatemala University, where he was to lecture, when three cars and two motorcycles blocked the street.

Colon Argueta was driving alone in the second car and sped away when the shooting began. The bodyguards, who were in the first car, were not able to flee.

The attackers chased the politician. He was killed when one of the motorcycles overtook his car a few blocks away.

Colon Argueta, 43, was mayor of Guatemala City in 1970-74. He was leader of the United Revolutionary Front Party. Presidential elections are scheduled for 1982.

A police spokesman said he counted 40 wounds in Colon Argueta's body. He said there were no clues to the killers' identities.

Nixon Gate Crasher Taken Before Court

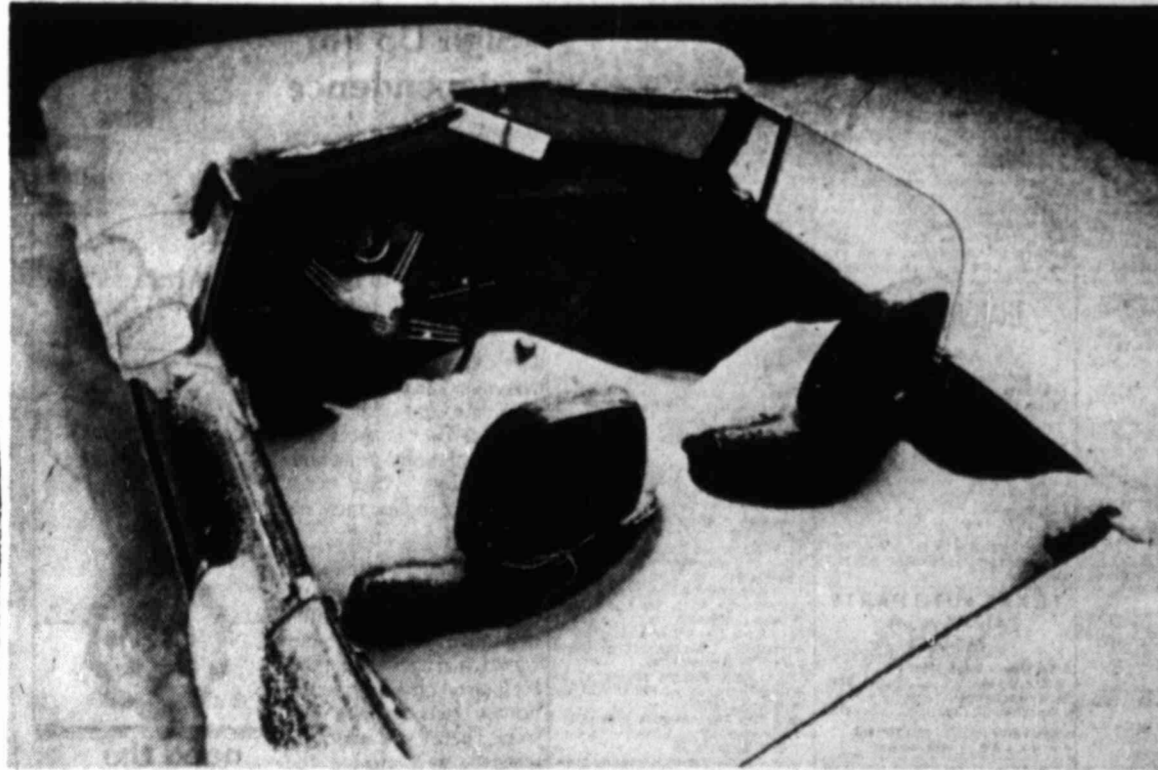

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A 33-year-old man accused of assaulting a Secret Service agent after he rammed his car through a gate at the estate of former President Richard Nixon has been arraigned before a federal magistrate.

A U.S. attorney's spokeswoman said Don J. Collinge of Newport Beach was formally charged Wednesday before a federal magistrate with one count of assault on a federal officer.

Collinge was then released in the custody of his mother on the condition that he seek psychiatric care pending his trial.

The charge contends Collinge crashed his car through the gate of Nixon's San Clemente estate Monday and told a guard he was "God's disciple and had come to pick up Nixon." He then rammed his car into a vehicle driven by a Secret Service agent, the charge claimed.

The Nixon family was not home at the time, the U.S. attorney's office said.

Cunningham Calls It Quits

UP FOR GRABS — UCLA basketball coach Gary Cunningham is shown at a press conference Thursday at the University as he announced his resignation. Cunningham said he has been thinking of resigning since last fall because he wanted a different lifestyle, including spending more time with his family. (AP Laserphoto)

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Gary Cunningham, a winning coach at his alma mater UCLA the past two seasons, quit Thursday, saying he "wanted a different lifestyle, to pursue personal interests and do things with my family."

Cunningham, 39, said there had not been great pressure on him to win at the school where the legendary John Wooden coached 10 national championship teams in a dozen years before retiring in 1975.

"But I had only five weekends free out of 52 in the year," he told a news conference.

Cunningham, whose clubs posted a 50-8 record, said he had no misconceptions of the job's requirements when he decided to seek the job after Gene Bartow quit two years ago, but said there has been a change in coaching stress with more all-star games, summer leagues and recruiting.

Cunningham had been top assistant to Wooden four years but had decided not to seek the head job after the retirement of "the Wizard of Westwood." Two years later, he changed his mind, saying he missed coaching.

Cunningham is expected to stay at UCLA, but not in the athletic department. He said, "I am considering accepting an important administrative position and an announcement about this should be forthcoming next week. Until then, I am sworn to secrecy."

Also in the future is the naming of a successor, but this is expected prior to April 11 when letters-of-intent are due from graduating high school stars.

Larry Brown, former head coach of the Denver Nuggets of the National Basketball Association, and Larry Farmer, a UCLA assistant, have been mentioned. Two days ago, another UCLA assistant, Jim Harrick, quit to become head coach at nearby Pepperdine.

Cunningham, who has two young daughters, said he began thinking about quitting last fall after working all summer. He said he talked with Athletic Director J. D. Morgan and it was decided no coaching change would be made until after the 1978-79 season when the coach would make his decision.

"I made it last Monday," Cunningham said. Asked about the pressures of the job, he answered:

"It depends on the individual. I have not felt pressure in winning at UCLA. I have never felt this was a high pressure job. I had the support of the people that count."

Cunningham did say he frequently worked 25 to 28 days without a day off. "I've worked hard all my life and that doesn't scare me," said the man who lettered three years playing under Wooden in 1960-62. "But I'd like to have a day off now and then."

Cunningham said he did not know whether he would have a voice in naming his successor.

Assistant Athletic Director Robert A. Fischer attended the news conference representing Morgan, who is recuperating from open heart surgery, complicated by pneumonia.

"J. D. told me to tell you the decision on a new coach will be made as rapidly as possible," Fischer said.

Zarley Nabs TPC Lead

Nicklaus Fires 67

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Kermit Zarley ripped defenseless Sawgrass with a pace-setting, 6-under-par 66 and a 1-stroke lead over delighted Jack Nicklaus in first round of the $440,000 Tournament Players Championship Thursday.

"How about that?" Nicklaus asked in mock surprise after posting his no-bogey 67, his best round of the year. It was the first in three weeks Nicklaus had broken par.

"I started thinking a little better and I was able to hold the round together," said Nicklaus, who came into this event as the defending champion but struggling through one of the slowest starts of his unmatched career.

"This will help," said Nicklaus, who has won this title three of the five years it has been in existence as the annual championship of golf's touring pros.

He shared the No. 2 spot with U.S. Open champion Andy North and Lanny Wadkins, who won the Los Angeles Open earlier in the season.

The playing conditions were near-perfect: warm, sunny and with just a hint of a breeze — a sharp departure from the gale-force winds that often rake this course.

The result was the lowest scoring tough Sawgrass has permitted. In addition to Zarley's course-record matching effort, and the three men at 67, Gil Morgan, Ron Streck, slow-moving veteran Don January and Jim Nelford, a left-handed putter from Canada were at 68.

By way of contrast, in the entire, 72-hole tournament last year, there were only 25 subpar rounds recorded and only one round below 70.

On this day, however, with the winds barely fluttering the flags, more than 50 men broke par on the 7,063 yards of marsh, sand and piney woods.

Some, however, had their difficulties. South African Gary Player opened his American campaign with a 73. And Spain's spectacular Seve Ballesteros blew to a 76. He played his last five holes 7 over par. Johnny Miller shot 74.

Arnold Palmer, at 49 the oldest man in the select field, matched par 72. Lee Trevino and Tom Watson each shot 70.

Zarley, a 37-year-old veteran of 16 years on the tour, had a remarkable putting round, holing five putts in the 15-18 foot range. He didn't make a bogey and was in danger only one the last two holes. Those were the only greens he missed and he saved par on each with a six-foot putt.

Nicklaus also escaped without a bogey, and one excellent save was a key to his round.

He pulled his drive to within inches of the marsh on the 17th and had to stand with both feet in the water to hit his second shot, which he was able to move only about 80 yards. But he got his third on the green and holed a seven-foot putt for par.

"All of a sudden I had the confidence I could make some putts," said Nicklaus, who is playing in his fourth consecutive tournament. "Obviously I played well. I'm delighted to be back."

Merger Favored By NHL

CHICAGO (AP) — The National Hockey League's Board of Governors Thursday voted in favor of a proposal offering membership to four cities currently occupied by World Hockey Association franchises.

Though, they had voted against taking such action four times in the past, Thursday's vote presented a 14-3 majority in favor of the expansion — the first step towards ending the war that has marred the sport's activities virtually since the WHA's inception seven seasons ago.

NHL President John Ziegler, announcing the outcome of nearly three hours of debate, said the next step would be to meet with the interested parties from the WHA. Those would include representatives of the New England Whalers, Quebec Nordiques, Winnipeg Jets and Edmonton Oilers along with WHA president Howard Baldwin.

Ziegler said, "The meeting would begin as soon as possible." — probably later Thursday.

The WHA directorate had assembled at another hotel here in case the NHL reversed its long-time stance on the hotly debated issue.

The expansion would be effective next season.

It remained to be seen, of course, whether the WHA clubs would agree to abide by the tenets of the NHL offer. Acceptance of the terms would force the Birmingham Bulls and the Cincinnati Stingers out of operation and end the short-lived history of the WHA, which began competition in 1972-73 amidst player raids on NHL talent and shaky financial structure.

Don Henry ... Of Rings And Returnees

WHEN TIME AND space run short... This group of Aussie baseball coaches came to the U.S. recently and wanted to study the best. So, on the recommendation of Yankee batting coach Charlie Lau, the group chose Texas Rangers catcher Jim Sundberg as the object of their study of his position. Mark it up to the weather: SMU already has lost an entire week of football spring training to the rain.

The suspension at LSU of basketballer DeWayne Scales (for allegedly listening to advice from a pro agent) brought to mind a series of stories of when the talented forward was in high school at Dallas. Recalled one coach last week: "Here they were playing, and Scales got a loose ball. He was all by himself, not soul between him and the goal. But, instead of taking it to the goal for an easy layup, he pulls up 30 feet from the goal and throws up a jumper. He misses, and his coach jumps up and hollers. 'Scales, I told you to follow your shot.'"

For a time, folks laughed at Hubert Green's slightly unorthodox golf swing. Later, Ben Hogan saw it and liked the looks of it. Says Green: "I went from having a funny swing to a classical one."

RETURNEES IN THE Southwest Conference will be in a majority next winter. The league returns 32 basketball starters, and only Texas (with four) lost as many as three starters. All this means the league could be stronger; it has some room for improvement, as the 38-34 record against major competition was the tenth best among NCAA conferences.

Ranger Junior College has signed Dimmitt footballer Randy Roberts for next season.

If you're mixed up about whether schoolboy track races should be metered or yarded, you're not alone. In Texas now, it's an either-or situation. Down to the state meet, districts and regions can run most races by the yardstick or meter distance, using which measurement they desire. But, at the state meet, the girls will run all metric distances except the 100-yard dash, mile and 80-yard hurdles, the boys all except the 100-yard dash and the mile.

Dale Conder, a linebacker at Lubbock Christian last fall, will be playing football next year for Abilene Christian. It's all in the family, though, as father Don and brother David ran track at the Abilene school.

WHEN THE LONGHORNS start looking for basketball replacements (four graduated starters), they will find one already on campus. Ken Montgomery, a 6-6er, spent a freshman year at North Carolina State after playing high school ball in Indianapolis. But, he transferred and sat out last season. Think the Rangers can win the American League West? Their preseason prospects are rated 20-1. Rod Carew has made the California Angels a better choice, at 4-1.

The NCAA may be trying to decide if there is any connection, but last fall saw more teams displayed on its football telecasts but fewer people watching. In '78, a total of 76 different teams made TV appearances, as against 55 in 1977. But, the ratings for college football dropped 10 percent from 1977 to last fall.

Nothing is safe. This week, Tech track coach Corky Oglesby left a pair of stopwatches and his '73 SWC basketball championship ring in his auto. Thirty minutes later, they were gone. Didn't even find a thank-you note.

Couple On 'Fishy' Honeymoon

PAGE, Ariz. (AP) — Randy Fite, a 25-year-old bass guide, from Conroe Texas, is spending his honeymoon on Lake Powell and spending it well.

Fite leads in the running for the $10,580 first prize in the Arizona Invitational Bass Tournament with a two-day catch of 40 pounds, 4 ounces.

Fite and his wife, Cathy, were married Friday, then spent three of the first four days of their honeymoon practicing for the Bass Anglers Sportsman Society contest.

Hayes Slapped With Jail Term

DALLAS (AP) — "Bullet" Bob Hayes, a former Olympic hero and All-Pro receiver for the Dallas Cowboys, was sentenced to five years' imprisonment Thursday for selling cocaine to an undercover agent.

Hayes, 36, pleaded guilty a week ago and State District Judge Richard Mays made his decision after listening to a parade of character witnesses in a defense attempt to win probation.

Mays gave Hayes five years on each of two counts of selling cocaine with the sentences to run concurrently. Hayes was assessed seven years deferred probation — to be served after he gets out of prison — for selling methamphetamine. Assistant District Attorney Richard Zidina — who said in final arguments, "It is sad to see what Bob Hayes has done" — estimated Hayes could be free on good behavior in 10 months.

Hayes sat stunned after the verdict was read, then left with his wife, Janice without comment. He was allowed to remain free on $30,000 bond until formal sentencing, expected sometime next week.

Hayes, dubbed the "world's fastest human" after winning two gold medals in the 1964 Olympics at Tokyo, took the stand Thursday, admitting "I'm not the smartest guy in the world. If I was, I wouldn't be up here."

"I'm guilty. I was wrong. I've paid the price in my image and my respect. People see me as Bob Hayes, dope dealer, not Bob Hayes, the citizen. It hurts."

Since his arrest in March, 1978, Hayes added: "I have hit rock bottom financially. I'm broke."

He said he had lost untold commercial chances, including one with a credit card company on the upcoming 1980 Olympics.

Hayes, who said he had smoked marijuana and used quaaludes for headaches, said his biggest crime was "I have a tendency to say 'Yes' to people."

In 10 seasons with the Cowboys of the National Football League, Hayes became the all-time team leader in scoring 75 touchdowns, receiving and punt returns.

Defense attorney Phil Burleson said:

BOB HAYES

"I thought Bob would get probation. But Judge Mays is a fair judge."

In final arguments, Hayes' other defense attorney, Mike Gibson, said: "We don't ask that Bob Hayes get special treatment and he should not be punished any harsher for who he is."

Gibson said undercover officer Dennis Kelly "was pursuing Bob Hayes — his quarry. He constantly said 'I'll call you.' And Bob Hayes is a person who can't say no."

Zidina claimed in his final argument that the defense was "asking for special treatment." Zidina brought up the case of former Southern Methodist track star Rufus Shaw, who got a 15-year sentence in Dallas County from a jury on a similar charge.

"If it is good enough for him (Shaw) it is good enough for Hayes," argued Zidina, who added he was "concerned about the influence Hayes has on the young people of this state, county and nation."

"What would Mr. Average think if Hayes got probation?" Zidina asked.

Orioles Handle Rangers

POMPANO BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Pat Kelly's sacrifice fly to deep center scored Doug DeCinces from third base in the 10th inning Thursday and the Baltimore Orioles went on to defeat the Texas Rangers 6-4 in an exhibition baseball game.

Kelly's drive gave Baltimore the lead and the Orioles added another run off loser Larry McCall when catcher Rick Dempsey doubled and scored on shortstop Mark Belanger's third hit of the game.

DeCinces had opened the inning with a double and went to third on an infield out.

It was the second time in the game Baltimore came from behind. The Rangers led 3-2 going into the ninth, but the Orioles scored twice in the top of the inning to take the lead.

Raiders Take On Ponies

DALLAS (Special) — After a week of waiting, stretching a few muscles and then waiting some more, Texas Tech's baseballers will be hoping for good weather today in efforts of getting in a game.

The Raiders, rained out of five games with Texas-Arlington earlier this week, will open a Southwest Conference series with SMU tonight at 7:30. It will be the Raiders' first night game since nipping Oral Roberts University 2-1 in a game at Tulsa last season.

It has been a frustrating week for the Raiders, and the host Mustangs haven't had it much better this week. Tech had five games scheduled Monday through Wednesday with UTA but did not get to play a game.

Tech was able to work out in a gymnasium Tuesday and on a softball diamond Wednesday. "That's all we've been able to do, because they've had so much rain in this area," reported Tech coach Kal Segrist.

Segrist was hoping for some work for his troops this week, during spring break. And pitching experience for his staff was one of the objectives.

The Raiders' bats have been making mighty noises, a la drumsticks, this season, but the pitching has not been as impressive.

Although center fielder Randy Newton's SWC average is .405, that's good for only seventh in the league. But on all other hitting categories except homers, the Raiders are either leading or in second among SWC players.

Hits — Newton leads with 15, followed by teammate Larry Selby with 14.

Doubles — Newton is tied for first with TCU's Trey Brooks with four.

Triples — Raiders Mike Farmer and John Keller are tied for the lead with two each.

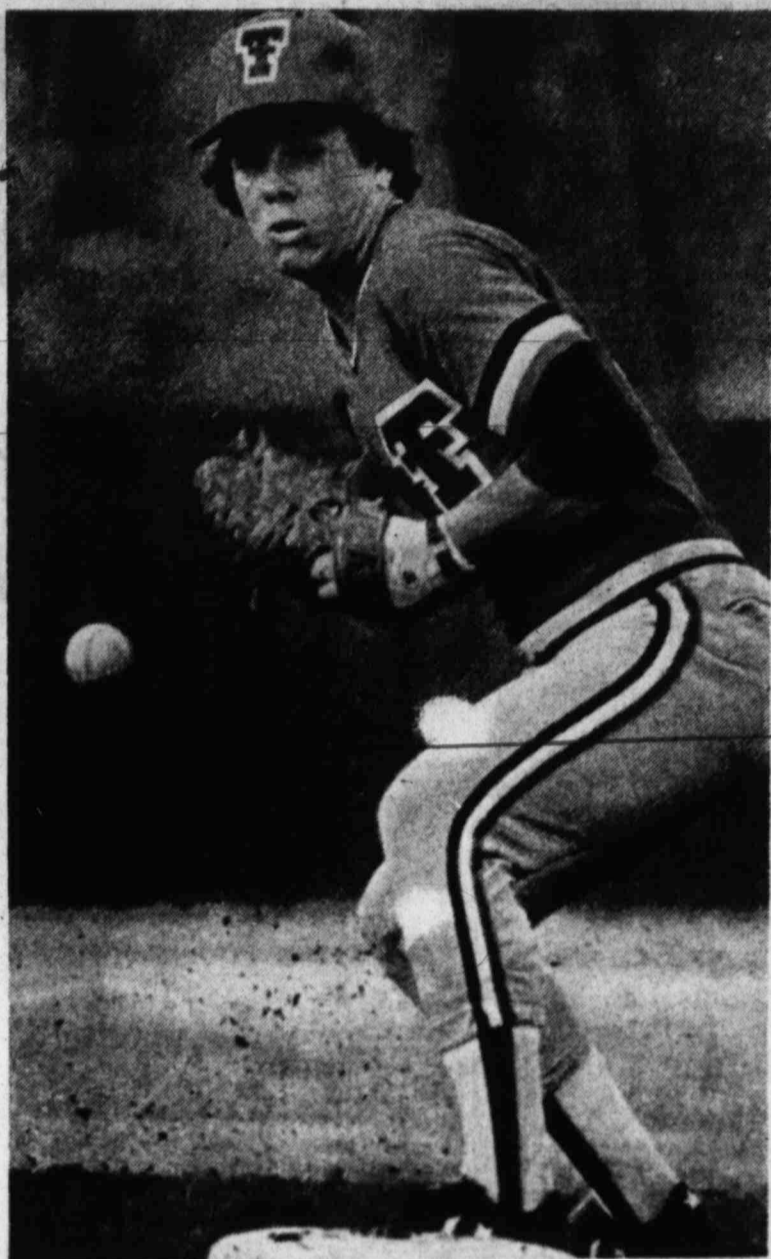

Runs-batted-in — Keller is tops with 12.

Runs — Newton is No. 1 with 10, and Stolen bases — Selby has the leadership with five.

With all this hitting, the Raiders have been able to accumulate only four wins in nine SWC games, good for sixth in the league. For the year, the Raiders will enter tonight's game with a 9-8 record.

SMU is 1-4 in conference, 12-11 for the season. Weather has plagued Mustangs in their other SWC series.

Segrist is expected to use James Miller as tonight's pitcher. Miller is 1-1 for the year. In Saturday's doubleheader, scheduled to begin at 1 p.m., the Raider coach could use Mark Johnston (3-0) and Steve Ibarquien (1-3).

Boston Gives Yaz Contract Extension

WINTER HAVEN, FLA. (AP) — Carl Yastrzemski, claiming he never meant a threat to quit the Boston Red Sox, received a contract extension through Thursday, guaranteeing he will finish his major league career where he started 19 years ago.

The veteran slugger, who will be 40 in August, also received an increase in his reported $275,000 a season pay in the two-year extension. The Red Sox probably dug deep to put Yaz in what General Manager Haywood Sullivan called "the right frame of mind."

"I would be less than candid if I said there was not an increase," Sullivan said. "Frankly, it would have been insulting to him if we didn't give an increase."

"I'm happy and very satisfied," said Yastrzemski, who needs only 131 hits and 17 home runs to become the first American League player ever to reach 3,000 hits and 400 homers. "I started in Boston in 1961 and plan on finishing my career here."

Apparently upset, like other Boston players, over the new seven-year, $4.9 million contract given teammate Jim Rice, Yastrzemski threatened in mid-February to set out the 1979 season and become a free agent.

However, he had a change of heart, even reporting to spring training one day early. Without an agent, he personally conducted negotiations with Sullivan.

"I never really thought about not playing," Yaz said. "I love the game and I love Boston. This is where I belong. At no time did I ever talk with any other club."

"Reaching 3,000 hits or other personal goals never entered my mind. Bringing a World Series championship to Boston is still my No. 1 goal."

"Negotiations have been going on at a rapid pace," Sullivan said. "The club is happy to have this thing settled so Carl can go out and play in the right frame of mind. We're happy to have him play here as long as he possibly can."

Yastrzemski said that despite his threat last month, "there was no way I would leave Boston. Sully knew it, and I knew it."

Yastrzemski and Sullivan agreed that the most difficult part of their talks was their long personal friendship. Sullivan said, "It was very difficult at times to sit across the table and separate emotions resulting from the business end and friendship."

"We have been through an awful lot of rhetoric, lots of pros and cons, but we both knew it was going to come to this (extension)," Sullivan said. "At no time were we mad at each other, and I don't think we were very far apart at any time."

Holmes Puts Belt On Line

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Larry Holmes will defend his share of the heavyweight championship while Ken Norton and Earnie Shavers will fight for the right to meet Holmes tonight in a $2 million boxing package of youth and experience.

No surprises — at least no shocks like the one Leon Spinks sprang on Muhammad Ali — are expected in the nationally televised package.

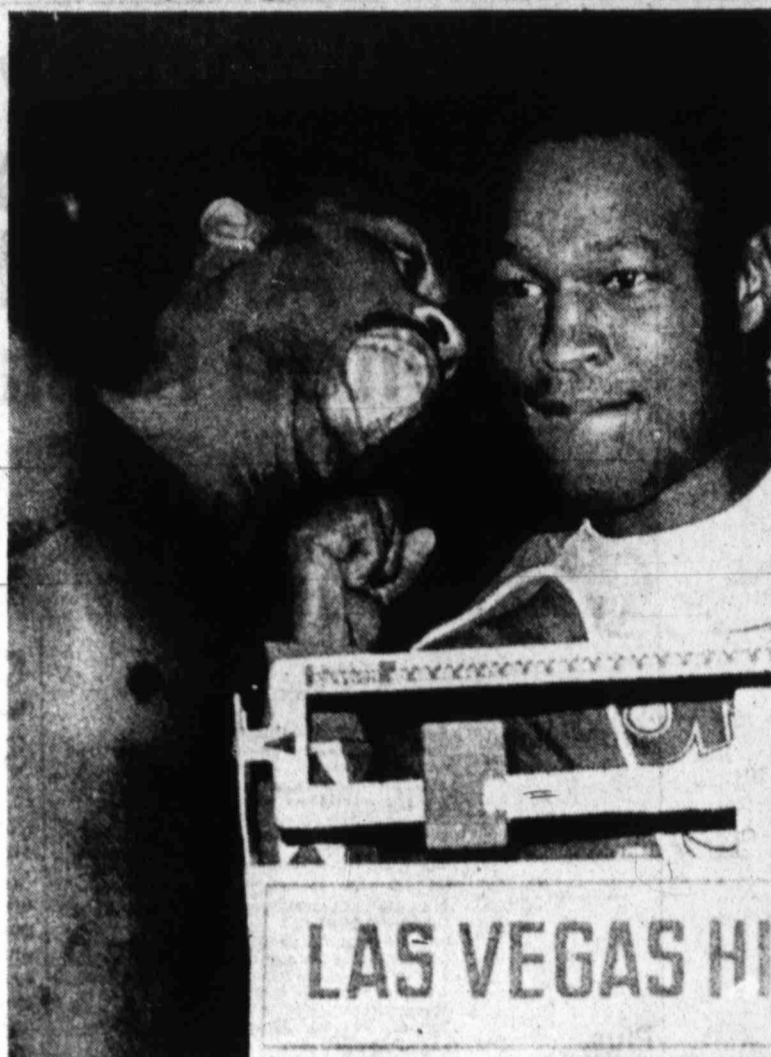

The unbeaten Holmes is a prohibitive favorite to retain the World Boxing Council title against 23-year-old Ossie Ocasio at the Las Vegas Hilton, which was the site of Spinks' upset of Ali Feb. 15, 1978. Ali regained the World Boxing Association's share of the championship by outpointing Spinks last Sept. 15 in New Orleans.

"I'm not Ali. I don't play," said the 29-year-old Holmes, who claims he is not underestimating the Puerto Rican challenger despite the fact that the title bid will be only his 14th pro fight.

Spinks won the title in only his eighth fight but he had far more amateur experience than Ocasio and was fighting a fading Ali while Holmes appears at the top of his game. An Ocasio victory would have to rank as one of boxing's greatest upsets.

Norton, who is 33, is an 11-5 favorite over the 34-year-old Shavers. The winner will be in line for a shot at Holmes in September. The loser's boxing future will be dim as far as ever fighting for the title is concerned.

Holmes, who is getting $1.2 million, will be making the second defense of the title he won on a split decision here last June 9. It also will be his fifth straight fight in Las Vegas. He knocked out Young Sanford in seven rounds and Ibar Arrington in 10 in the fall of 1977, scored a one-sided 12-round decision over Shavers March 25, 1978, beat Norton and knocked out Alfredo Evangelista in the seventh round of a title defense Nov. 10.

The victory over Evangelista made Holmes' record 29-0 with 20 knockouts in a pro career which began in 1973.

Ocasio, 13-0, with nine knockouts, first gained national attention when he upset highly ranked Jimmy Young on a split 10-round decision in a preliminary to the Holmes-Norton fight. He gained his No. 3 WBC ranking and his title shot worth $250,000 by scoring a unanimous 10-round decision over Young in San Juan last Jan. 27.

Norton is getting $750,000 and Shavers $250,000.

Carner Grabs Lead At LPGA Tourney

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — JoAnne Carner took a big step toward her second consecutive Ladies Professional Golf Association victory Thursday with a course record 7-under-par 64 in the opening round of the $100,000 Sahara National Pro-Am.

The 39-year-old native of Kirklind, Wash., chain-smoked her way to a 2-shot lead over Donna Young at the rain-soaked 6,108-yard Sahara Country Club course in a round that lasted nearly six hours.

Still tired from her 3-stroke victory in last week's San Diego tournament, Carner drove the ball well and missed only one green.

Burroughs Swings For Fence

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Jeff Burroughs says he didn't hit with enough power for the Atlanta Braves last year.

This year, "I would probably sacrifice some batting average to hit with more power. Getting runs home is the main thing. That's what wins games," said Burroughs.

The 6-foot-2, 200-pounder has been known as a power hitter since coming up with the Washington Senators in 1970.

In 1977, his first year with Atlanta, he hit 41 home runs and drove in 114 runs.

Last year, his home run production fell to 23, with 77 runs batted in, but his batting average soared to .301.

He hit over .400 for the first month of the season.

"I've always gotten off to fast starts — always," said Burroughs. "That one was something different, of course. It was one of those times when nothing goes wrong. Everything falls in. Everything seems to go your way. You hit everything solidly."

The outfielder said he doesn't expect another .400 start, but feels this season will be better than last year.

"The reason I think that is not because of me, but because of the other players on the team," he said.

"The people who will hit around me in the batting order have another year's experience now, and experience is all they were lacking last year," Burroughs said.

Baseball Heads Want Action Against Umps

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Lawyers for baseball called on a federal judge Thursday to find major league umpires in violation of a court order preventing a work stoppage, and to fine them $10,000 for every day they continue to remain off the job.

"If the umpires are allowed to continue on strike, there always is the chance other unions will conduct sympathy walk-outs, shutting down the ballparks," argued Theodore Martineau, an attorney representing both the American and National Leagues. "This season the 51 umpires in our opinion have collectively refused to honor their contracts and have refused to work."

The umpires, who contend their salaries are well below those of other officials in pro sports like basketball and football, have turned their contract negotiations over to Philadelphia lawyer Richie Phillips. Talks between Phillips and both leagues are at a standstill.

Substitute umpers from the minors and college ranks have been officiating games during spring training while the legal ruckus is fought in the Philadelphia courtroom of U.S. District Court Judge Joseph L. McGlynn Jr.

Thursday's hearing, which was continued after six hour of testimony, revolved around a preliminary injunction Judge McGlynn issued last Sept. 25 preventing a work stoppage pending resolution of the dispute.

Major league baseball contends the umpires are in violation of that injunction for failing to sign their contracts and report to spring training; lawyers for the umpires argue the injunction should be dissolved because it no longer is applicable.

"It was issued on the brink of the playoffs when experienced umpires were needed and tough decisions on a play could (if faulty) cause irreparable harm to the league and the players," argued Patrick Ryan.

Muppet Garners Oscar Support

CINCINNATI (UPI) — A couple of Cincinnati business executives will squeal with delight if they succeed in getting the actress of their dreams nominated for an Oscar.

Their heroine is Miss Piggy. James C. Hall, 45, and Bruce E. Collin, 22, are so taken with the puppet star of television's "Muppet Show" that they have formed an organization with the sole purpose of having Miss Piggy nominated for a 1980 Academy Award for best actress.

"We're serious," said Hall. "We don't want her nominated for some special effects award. We think she deserves best actress."

The two discovered a few months ago that each was a fan of Miss Piggy, a character who is the very definition of the word "conceit."

When they heard Miss Piggy would be featured in a movie later this year they joked about her winning an Oscar for best actress. "Then," said Hall, "we got to wondering just how far we could take something like this. People need light-hearted things to keep them going, so we decided to try to make this a nation-wide campaign."

Hall and Collin named their drive, "The Committee to Award Miss Piggy the Oscar" (CAMPO) and rented a postal box (CAMPO, P.O. Box 3311, Cincinnati, Ohio).

The two already have been in touch with the academy about their effort, and received this response from Martin M. Cooper, a vice president of the academy's public relations firm:

"While the academy does not participate in the pork-barrel campaigns which are an unfortunate part of the annual Oscar campaign, we do wish you appropriate success with your commendable support of such a worthy candidate for academy honors."

A state somewhere between fantasy and reality.

Director Taps Little-Explored Period For TV

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — When Mel Stuart was asked to direct his initial Western, "The Chisholms," the first thing he did was look at the classic films of John Ford.

"But everything he did was post-Civil War," said Stuart, who directed "The Triangle Factory Fire Scandal" and "Ruby and Oswald" for television.

"This is the story of a family moving west in 1843. This is the West before the cavalry, when the Indians were not yet hostile, and virtually all the land was unsettled west of the Mississippi River. This is a whole period virtually untapped by films."

The early period of Western development has largely been ignored by filmmakers in favor of the more colorful events after the Civil War. "How the West Was Won" touched on it briefly, and "Centennial" on NBC devoted several chapters to trappers and early settlers. "The Chisholms," a six-hour miniseries told in four parts on CBS, follows one family from Virginia westward across the Old Oregon Trail to Fort Laramie, Wyo. It airs on four consecutive Thursdays, beginning March 29.

Robert Preston, in a rare TV appearance, stars as Hadley Chisholm, a proud, pious and independent farmer who loses his land in Virginia in a strange twist of fate that involves his brother and the woman he left at the altar 35 years earlier.

"I'm a farmer, and I ain't got nothing to farm," says Chisholm, who loads his wife and five children into a blue covered wagon.

Rosemary Harris is his wife, Minerva, a woman the equal of her man.

Preston infuses Hadley Chisholm with a wonderful spirit and a refreshing streak of eccentricity. A newly arrived Yankee preacher's eulogy at his daughter-in-law's funeral so infuriates him — "How dare he speak of her as though he knew her!" — that he corners the minister with a rattlesnake he often totes around in a gunny sack.

Anthony Zerbe has a great scene-stealing cameo role as a scallawag riverboat pilot who has a lustful eye for Minerva on the trip down the Ohio River. He meets his match in Miss Harris' Minerva.

Evan Hunter wrote the screenplay from an idea by producer David Dortort. It was also the first Western for Hunter, author of "The Blackboard Jungle" and creator of "The 87th Precinct."

Elmer Benstein composed and conducted the score, adapted from Aaron Copland's "Appalachian Spring." "Billy the Kid" and "Rodeo."

"Hunter had never done a Western, and he wanted to do one as I wanted to do one," said Stuart. "Everyone in the film business wants to do one Western. You have such freedom in shooting. It's an open world of the Great Plains and Colorado.

"The trouble is it's so far to find a place outside the national parks that's still wide open."

"One of the things that intrigued me," said Stuart, "was the look of the people. They wore heavy wool clothes and their hats had wide brims and crowns that were round like a bowler. We shot everything on location and we found those hats were better protection against the rain than anything you can buy today."

"But the key to success, as always, is the script. Evan Hunter spent a year researching the period. I was stunned by the authenticity of the speech. I liked him for being so careful in following the speech patterns of the Scotch-Irish settlers."

The film was shot in Illinois, Missouri, Nebraska and Colorado.

Stuart said the production company moved cross-country in a caravan as the early settlers did. They had to carry everything with them, including wagons and authentic costumes for 100 Indians.

Unlike some Westerns where all Indians are alike, Stuart said he used the Indians of each location, with correct costumes, headdress, and language. Subtitles are used to translate their language.

"The story ends at Fort Laramie," said Stuart. "That means if the people like it we can come back with a sequel."

Zeuxis, a 5th-century B.C. Greek painter, laughed so hard at his own painting of an old hag that he broke a blood vessel and died.

Jane Fonda Wins Award For 'Julia'

LONDON (AP) — Jane Fonda won the British Film and Television Academy's best actress award Thursday night for her role as an anti-Nazi activist in "Julia," the movie based on playwright Lillian Hellman's life in pre-war Germany.

The movie also won the best film, and took the best screenplay prize for Alvin Sargent and the best cinematography award for Douglas Slocombe. Richard Dreyfuss won the best actor award for his role in "The Goodbye Girl." British star John Hurt won the best supporting actor award for his performance in "Midnight Express," the British production which also earned Alan Parker the best direction prize and Gerry Hambling the best film editing award.

Christopher Reeve took the most promising newcomer award for his role as Superman in the Hollywood blockbuster of the same name.

The movie took the Michael Balcon Award for the outstanding British contribution to the cinema, with six British technicians cited for devising special effects "never before attempted."

Their citation said: "The spectacular results have enhanced the reputation of the British film industry."

The special effects and large segments of the movie were shot in British studios. "Star Wars" won the Anthony Asquith Award, named after the British movie director, for original film music by John Williams. It also took the best soundtrack award, shared by an unprecedented 12 persons.

Joe Alves took the best production design and art direction award for "Close Encounters of the Third Kind."

The awards were presented by Princess Anne, daughter of Queen Elizabeth II.

Ex-Waltons Figure Gets Role In Film About Retarded

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Richard Thomas went after the role in "No Other Love" because it was unlike any part he'd had in the past.

"The character has certain tough qualities I've never played before," said Thomas, formerly of "The Waltons." "He's street wise, he curses, he steals a little, and he's sexually aggressive."

"It was so different from John-Boy," he said, referring to the character he played in "The Waltons." "Can you see Richard Thomas playing this kind of tough role?"

Thomas sheds his John-Boy image completely in "No Other Love," which airs Saturday on CBS. He plays a young man who is slightly retarded yet totally self-reliant. He falls in love with an introverted retarded girl, played by Julie Kavner, and helps lead her out of her shell.

It is a fine, sensitive film that is saved from sentimentality by a healthy dose of humor.

Thomas originally was offered a role in a similar movie on ABC, "Like Normal People."

"That role was too much of a nice guy," he said. "It was too close to what I'd played before. The script for 'No Other Love' has been around longer. It was originally to be a feature film. It was a smaller role, but the guy had a hard edge about him that I liked."

"Like Normal People," starring Shaun Cassidy and Linda Purl, airs on ABC April 13.

Thomas left "The Waltons" in 1976 after five years on the hit family series. Earlier this year on "Roots: The Next Generations," he played a young Southern aristocrat who married a black school teacher and was disowned by his family.

"I'm just pleased that 'No Other Love' and 'Roots' are so close together, because of the variety," he said.

"No Other Love," written by Edwin Francis Kaplan and directed by Richard Pearce, is based on a true incident.

Before playing the role, Thomas met with a number of retarded people, attended social events, dances, and arts and crafts shows.

"I was astonished at how exciting and involved and aggressive they are," he said. "I thought I would be depressed and sad. We work at less than our peak, but these people work at 100 per cent of their capacity. So they have a lot of energy. I was constantly surprised at how unretarded these retarded people are."

"I wanted to create a person who, if you saw him, you wouldn't know he was retarded at first," he said. "Because I myself have so much energy I wanted something to slow him down. So I created a person whose mind raced faster than he could verbalize. He would sometimes stumble over his words. I wouldn't plan it, it would just happen."

Thomas said he had wanted to play the lead in Lorimar Productions' "Studs Lonigan," an NBC miniseries based on James T. Farrell's novel.

"I think they felt I couldn't play that toughness. I went after that role, and one reason I did guest shots on 'The Waltons' was to get a crack at it. Lorimar of all people should know that I had an image created by a role."

"I'm trying to break away from it. To give the public something different. That's why I look for a role like this, or like 'Studs Lonigan,' so you can create a variety for the public."

Thomas has been an actor for 21 of his 27 years. "I'm lucky," he said. "I've worked a long time. I think people understand my goal as an actor is to be around for a long time and do a lot of different things."

"No one thought 'The Waltons' would be a success. It was new and different. Then, with success, the whole point of view changes. You become just another series actor. Then leaving a series is a challenge. People immediately forget everything you've done before. It's a real problem."

Plea Entered In Cocaine Case

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Actress Linda Blair and an ex-boyfriend pleaded innocent Thursday to federal charges of conspiracy to distribute cocaine.

Miss Blair, 20, and Ted Hartlett, 21, each were released on $5,000 unsecured bond.

Miss Blair was one of 30 persons charged with drug conspiracy in state court in December 1977, but she successfully fought extradition from Connecticut, where she lives in Wilton. Hartlett, of Stamford, Conn., was not indicted on the state charge.

The federal charges against the pair, involving a separate incident from the state charges, were made recently. They are accused of conspiring with George Man-gum and Cheryl Anderson, both of Jacksonville, to have about 1½ ounces of cocaine delivered to them.

Mangum has been described by police as a wholesaler of cocaine. He already has been sentenced to 25 years in prison by a state court.

The federal indictment says that on Nov. 5, 1977, there was a series of telephone calls between Hartlett and Mangum and that Miss Blair and Hartlett traveled from Connecticut to Jacksonville Nov. 8.

Police here said that Miss Blair participated in a drug deal in October 1977 when she was in Jacksonville to attend the funeral of a member of the Lynryd Skynyrd band killed in a plane crash.

'Silent Partner' Rewarding Despite Fundamental Flaws

By WILLIAM D. KERNS
A-J Entertainment Editor

The story is implausible, the nudity is gratuitous, the theme is irresponsible and the violence at one point borders on the unbearable. But there's no denying the entertainment value of "The Silent Partner," a low-budget thriller filmed in Canada and currently enjoying large crowds at Showplace Six. Call it a flawed gem, because the talented cast overcomes its sloppy screenplay and provides quite an entertaining assortment of shocks and laughs.

A-J
FILM
REVIEW

The foundation, though, reverts back to the age-old tradition of relying on the audience to root for the underdog. As the film opens, we meet bank teller Elliott Gould: a wimpy sort of intellectual who collects fish and plays chess. Through a combination of Sherlockian deduction and no small amount of luck, he learns the bank is about to be robbed by a shopping mall Santa Claus. And, in an inspired moment of thievery, he manages to slip most of the cash into his lunch pail and let the red-suited crook get away and take the blame. Ah, but this is no ordinary bank robber. This guy is a real sadist and he doesn't like being ripped off by some amateur.

after all, he's still robbing his employer. But by pitting him against such a formidable opponent as an experienced crook, a sadist who would go so far as to behead his victim just for the joy of laughing about it afterwards, director Gary Duke has us in Gould's corner all the way. The constant confrontations by way of the telephone are ingenious in their appeal, and the snazzy surprise Duke leaves for the ending is bound to have everyone leaving the theater with a feeling of satisfaction.

If there is a standout in the film, it is Christopher Plummer, who is frighteningly believable as the insane crook equally at home killing and stalking. Newcomer Celine Lomez also impresses, not so much for her physical attributes (which are well displayed) but instead for the manner in which she takes a cliched role and turns it into a likeable, believable character. Susannah York, currently on screen as Marlon Brando's silent wife in "Superman," is even more thoroughly wasted here as the bank employee who sleeps around. Her character is so vague we never really come to understand her.

All in all, there's much too much emphasis placed on sexual innuendo and nudity in this thriller. It's just not necessary. And the murder of Miss Lomez is of the memorably cutting type which may turn some viewers' stomachs. But the battle of wits between Gould and Plummer make the movie very much worth seeing, regardless.

I've still got my notes from the UFO concert Tuesday night at the Municipal Auditorium, and the first line on the headliner's page reads: "Where is Schenker?"

Lead guitarist Michael Schenker had been a standout with the band for the past several years; a bit kooky at times (he had a tendency to just up and disappear), but a super talented musician all the same. And this man playing lead guitar Tuesday looked from my somewhat dubious vantage point (of standing on a seat trying to keep my balance, take notes and see over the heads of the crowd standing on seats in front of me) to be a bit better than I remembered. He was also much more mobile. I mean, when UFO played the Auditorium in 1977, Schenker hardly moved and this guitarist was prancing and adding all sorts of visual excitement by playing off bassist Pete Way.

UFO's PAUL CHAPMAN
He replaced Michael Schenker

But I'd received no word from Chrysalis Records regarding any personnel changes within UFO. And, just to be on the safe side, I called one of my more reliable music sources the next morning to double check. I was told, hey, that really was Schenker. I bought it and Thursday morning's review spoke of Schenker's continued guitar mastery, and added that the man had apparently ridden himself of his shyness, come out of his shell and learned how to romp on stage. But it just happened to be that rare moment when the backups failed me.

Did I call that source "reliable" a moment ago? Please scratch that comment.

I've since been told by a local radio station employee that the reason Schenker didn't look like Schenker was because he wasn't Schenker. That is, German guitarist Michael Schenker reportedly left the band earlier this year and the man playing guitar on stage Tuesday — and the man deserving of the praise lavished on the long-gone Schenker in the review — was former Lone Star member Paul Chapman, who formerly sat in on some UFO sessions and is now a permanent fixture in the band.

So for those of you wondering how I managed to flub that portion of the review, well, now you know. It wasn't hard. My apologies.

Texas Movie Industry Growing Fast

DALLAS (AP) — Texas has been raising cows and cactus and movie stars for generations, and now, it seems, films are taking their place alongside petroleum as one of the state's chief exports.

The film industry has grown so much in the past 15 years in Texas that the state now is third behind California and New York as a major spawning ground of film producers, technicians and actors.

Texas is where it all began for such stars as Mary Martin, Debbie Reynolds, Sandy Duncan, the late Linda Darnell, and the late Joan Crawford — not to mention Jaclyn Smith and Farrah Fawcett-Majors. It is the home now of such past screen luminaries as Greer Garson and Pola Negri.

Dallas — known for its banking, insurance and fashions — is rapidly becoming the Hollywood of Texas.

The growth in film production here has created several new businesses, as well as part-time jobs for hundreds of would-be Robert Redfords and Farrah Fawcetts.

In fact, about 900 people and a few dogs, cats and chimps list themselves as models or actors looking for work in the comprehensive Whitmark Directory published here. Some do more looking than acting, and most are full-time housewives, grandmothers, writers, policemen or businessmen — and only part-time celebrities.

It costs only $75 to launch a career in show business by buying space in the directory, which was started in 1967 by two women who correctly predicted the industry would explode in Dallas. Each aspirant in the book is pictured in two different poses alongside a list of his or her talents. But some of the veterans in the directory warn of low pay, frustration, intense competition and battered egos from repeated rejection.

So why do they do it?

"I just like being with a totally different set of people," said actor-narrator-model Dave Beidelman of the Dallas Police Department. "They are fun people to be around."

"Everybody thinks of us (policemen) as the macho type. Sometimes people look on us in a negative light. Working with these people is a very positive thing. I like accentuating the positive."

GRIN AND BEAR IT

Europe will make only limited employment gains in 1979 because of low rates of investment, sluggish increases in trade and the effect of inflation on public spending. The Conference Board reports. While unemployment is high, public reaction has been muted so far. The reason: most Europeans have adequate unemployment compensation and many families have more than one member employed.

Most say they are definitely not trying to get rich.

"Money is about fifth down on the priority list," said actress Bernice Cruden, who recently got $130 for appearing in a TV spot for the Union Bank in Little Rock, Ark.

Yet there is big money involved. Film production was a $75 million industry in Texas last year, estimated Texas Film Commission director Pat Wolfe, who conceded No. 1 to California with $375 million and No. 2 to New York, at $180 million.

"But the work is here and more is coming here," she said. "We've attracted $34.2 million in productions in the first quarter of this year. It could be a banner year for us."

Filming the novel "North Dallas 40" began in Houston last month and Miss Wolfe listed three other feature-length motion pictures slated for filming in Texas during the first four months of the year.

They are Paramount's "Urban Cowboy" with John Travolta, to be filmed mainly at Gilley's dance hall in Pasadena; Universal's "Resurrection," starring Ellen Burstyn, to be shot near Shiner, San Marcos and El Paso, and "The Labyrinth of Heaven," a science fiction film for public television, to be shot in the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

"Dallas is becoming the center. It has all of the film-related services, the labs, the talent pools," said Miss Wolfe, 33, who earns just under $25,000 as head of the commission created by the legislature in 1971 to promote the film industry in Texas.

Street Mime Unusual Kind Of Artist

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Life on the streets can be bitter. But to Hinton, a mime eking out a living with impromptu performances to bustling urban throngs, the streets provide artistic fulfillment and a potential ticket to stardom.

"You put your life on the line until you become attuned to your surroundings — you have to maintain this balance between the lights, the traffic, the pedestrians, the noise. It's incredible," Hinton says.

Hinton is a lanky 32-year-old with spindly fingers and mobile features, a kind of red-haired jackknife which unfolds on street corners into an almost infinite variety of characterizations. Although he balks at the comparison, he may be following the footsteps of Shields and Yarnell, street mimes from San Francisco who went on to their own television series — albeit shortlived — and national acclaim.

"My objective is totally different from theirs. It's like they look alike, think alike. They're in unison, in syncopation — the timing of the team is such that they are two people who have come together," Hinton says.

A former clown with the Ringling Bros., Barnum & Bailey Circus, Hinton took up mime with the Street Mime Touring Co., a small group he put together in Portland, Me. The troupe traveled throughout New England, performing before children and adults.

A native of Baltimore, Hinton came to San Francisco several years ago, "roaming the streets, staging shows ... until the city accepted me as an artist."

"The street is my set — it's not really all mine because I share it with a lot of other people — but I perform in it and I utilize the space."

"I've always been animated, always had a lot of energy," he says. "As a kid, I'd see a show on television and then go out and re-enact it in the street."

Unlike Shields and Yarnell, who now tour nationally with a full backup orchestra, Hinton is strictly solo.

"I rely on my own resources, my own energies. A mime is an imitator of all things — and that's what I am. I'm committed to creating," he says. "There are no limitations to this, no restrictions. The characterizations are part of my own personality."

In conversation, Hinton's body supplies the punctuation. His arms and hands, clearly strong and supple despite his slender physique, wave and drift with varying intensity; his face, instantly responsive to

Arabs Plan To Buy Baltimore Hilton

BALTIMORE (AP) — The way has been cleared for a group of Arab investors to buy the financially ailing Baltimore Hilton.

The city Board of Estimates approved a plan Wednesday night to rearrange municipal loans on the downtown property. The new owners, including the Abu Ghazaleh family and a second, unidentified Kuwaiti group, would assume repayment of a $900,000 city loan and spend at least $1.3 million to refurbish the hotel, under the agreement.

The hotel's owner, William L. Siskind, is at least $650,000 behind on the loan used to help buy land for the Hilton, according to the city.

Solons Hear Testimony In Chemical Dump Case

WASHINGTON (AP) — "I just don't understand why my child is so sick," said Eileen Jasper, cradling her blue-eyed 2-year-old daughter, Susie, as she testified before a congressional subcommittee.

He said Susie Jasper has been hospitalized three times with pneumonia. An uncle to Susie, Wayne Armogast, suffers serious lung problems and has been forced to quit his job, Dunlop said.

The reason, according to Susie's doctor, is almost certainly thousands of tons of poisonous chemical wastes dumped just below the surface within a few miles of the child's home in Niagara Falls, N.Y.

Four Armogast grandchildren who do not live near the creek have suffered no similar difficulties, Dunlop said.

A House investigations subcommittee opened hearings Wednesday on the risks from hundreds of waste sites around the country which are believed to be causing illnesses, some fatal, among people who live nearby.

In the area where the Armogast family lives, Dunlop said, "There are a lot of health problems which just can't be explained."

One subcommittee member, Rep. Albert Gore, D-Tenn., said hazardous waste disposal "is the most significant environmental health problem of this decade."

The doctor said he provides adrenaline shots and other remedial treatment but can find no cure to the health problems of the family members and other neighbors he has treated for similar illnesses.

The Environmental Protection Agency, Gore said, "has been dragging its feet" in finding ways to clean up existing dumps and prevent creation of new ones.

Fred Armogast said he has taken an informal survey of his neighbors and found that among 14 young women reared in the area, 13 had miscarriages. There is also a high incidence of chronic respiratory disease and heart disease.

In Wednesday's hearing, the House Commerce Committee's subcommittee on oversight and investigations focused on the effects of the pesticide mirex and thousands of pounds of the toxic chemical dioxin dumped between 1953 and the mid 1960s by the Hooker Chemical Corp. at the Hyde Park landfill in Niagara Falls.

In one family, a teen-age son and his younger sister both went into convulsions shortly after moving to the area.

Gore said the site "may be the most perilous yet discovered."

Asked if he believed the illnesses were the result of the polluted creek, Dunlop replied, "Yes, I do."

Hooker is the same firm which dumped chemicals in the Love Canal in Niagara Falls, a dumping ground which gained notoriety earlier when nearby residents reported serious health problems.

Many of the drums have split open, allowing the contents to drain into the creek.

Among those testifying Wednesday were Dr. James A. Dunlop; Fred Armogast of Niagara Falls; and his daughter, Mrs. Jasper, who appeared holding her own daughter, Susie.

Gore said he has visited similar sites in a number of other states, including Kentucky, Tennessee and New Jersey.

Dunlop said since 1975 he has treated six of Armogast's grandchildren, all of whom live near Bloody Creek, a waterway which drains from the Hyde Park dumping site and runs through several residential areas.

The doctor, a pediatrician, said all six children suffer from repeated illnesses of the upper respiratory system, and often have trouble breathing.

The mandolin, a stringed instrument similar to the lute, usually has four pairs of strings, although the rarer Milanesse model comes with five.
