Parade of Homes Preview

Midland has its share of beautiful homes, reflected in its annual Parade of Homes. A tour of four homes benefits the infant care fund at Midland Memorial Hospital. Sunday's Lifestyle section will offer a preview of the event.

What Dangers Lurk?

What unseen dangers lurk in the oil patch? Gas, for one. A recent near-tragedy in Andrews points up the hazards of oil field gasses such as hydrogen sulfide. In Sunday's Reporter-Telegram, Ed Todd looks at the problem.

Rabies: A Potential Dilemma

Possibilities of a rabies outbreak have haunted Midland County for the past several weeks. Who do you get in touch with if you suspect an animal has the disease? What if it's a stray? Sunday staff writer Richard Mason explores such a potential dilemma.

Nuke experts 'groped' through mishap for days

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nuclear technicians and officials groped through the crisis at Pennsylvania's Three Mile Island atomic powerplant "in the blind" for days, uncertain exactly what was wrong or what to do about it, transcripts of their meetings reveal.

The transcripts of tape recorded meetings, filling more than 700 pages, were made public Thursday.

Two full days after the accident began March 28, Nuclear Regulatory Commission Chairman Joseph M. Hendrie complained, "I don't have the impression that they have a good grip on it. We are operating totally in the blind."

Then, referring to requests from Pennsylvania Gov. Dick Thornburgh for advice about the possibility of a mass evacuation, Hendrie went on: "His information is ambiguous. Mine is nonexistent, and — I don't know — it's like a couple of blind men staggering around, making decisions."

The five-member NRC met with staff members daily to follow developments in the Three Mile Island incident, which they have called the most serious accident in the history of commercial nuclear powerplants in this country.

The transcripts reveal no major information which was not quickly reported to the public at the time, but they convey vividly the worry and frustration of the officials as they tried to make sense out of fragments of information about a kind of accident they had never imagined.

On March 31, Hendrie said it would be "several days out into the next week" before hydrogen gas in the reactor could become flammable and another week before the hydrogen could become explosive.

The transcript from April 1 shows that while President Carter was visiting the crippled facility, NRC officials were still assessing various turns the situation might take — including a hydrogen explosion — and various responses to ensure the safety of persons in the area — including an evacuation.

Discussing the possibility of a hydrogen explosion, Dudley Thompson, an NRC official, said, "Right now we believe it takes 5 percent of oxygen to become flammable, 11 percent to be a detonation mixture. Right now we think we've got 5 percent. ... But so, for all practical purposes, we've got to assume the mixture is flammable, but I don't think anybody is assuming right now that he thinks it's an explosive mixture."

The discussion then turned to other topics, and NRC Commissioner Richard T. Kennedy remarked, "Meanwhile, I'm going to check to see if the president is arriving at the (reactor) site."

There were no suggestions that the hydrogen posed any danger to the president.

In a meeting March 31, Roger J. Mattson, NRC director of systems safety, told the commissioners bluntly, "No plant has ever been in this condition, no plant has ever been tested in this condition, no plant has ever been analyzed in this condition in the history of this program."

Mattson was one of at least three staff members who, on March 30, were urging a precautionary evacuation of the area downwind from Three Mile Island, some 10 miles south of Harrisburg, Pa.

But the commission did not recommend it, partly because the wind was shifting erratically and nobody could be sure which way "downwind" would be when people moved out.

By March 31, Mattson had gained more confidence that the reactor could be controlled, and he changed his mind about evacuation.

Residents mourn friends, relatives in Wichita Falls

WICHITA FALLS, Texas (AP) — This North Texas community's two funeral homes were booked with hourly services today as relatives buried the 44 persons killed by the tornado that wiped out a 12-square-mile area.

One funeral home was so packed it could offer only graveside memorials.

"We feel the people have been through enough," said Bob Mason, funeral director at Owens Brumley Funeral Home. "It just looks like having graveside services would take the pressure off these families."

An estimated 20,000 of this city's 96,000 residents were left homeless by the tornado that raked the Texas-Oklahoma border Tuesday, leaving 15 other persons dead in Lawton, Okla., and Vernon and Harrold, Texas.

President Carter declared Wichita Falls a disaster area Thursday. Federal and state officials planned to open disaster assistance centers in the city Saturday.

American Insurance Association adjusters estimated insured damage at $204 million in Wichita Falls, while losses in Lawton were put at $13 million. Red Cross volunteers predicted 90 percent of the devastated structures were insured.

Richard Balnick, Red Cross director of damage assessments who flew here from California, said the vicious twister destroyed more than 6,400 homes, 150 mobile homes and 1,100 apartment units in Wichita County.

"It is incredible that that many people are homeless," said Balnick. "We kept hearing about it out there (in California) and we just couldn't believe it."

Meanwhile, a new swarm of tornadoes hit widely scattered sections of the country Thursday, bringing high winds and heavy rains to Mississippi, Alabama and Michigan.

Three teen-age sisters were swept to their deaths in Louisville, Miss., when they tried to follow their mother from their flooded home.

In Wichita Falls, a steady rain fell Thursday night on the gaping holes that once were homes.

Workmen restored power to the city Thursday and cloudy brown water began flowing through pipes although residents were warned to boil it.

Throughout Thursday bulldozers scrapped the rubble into heaps and caravans of pickups streamed from the area, loaded with battered furniture, mattresses and clothing.

But by Wednesday afternoon, Balnick said, all survivors had "a place to sleep and three meals a day."

National Guardsmen strictly enforced a 7 p.m. to 6:30 a.m. curfew on the disaster site. Authorities said 20 persons had been arrested for looting since the tornado struck.

Restaurants and convenience stores in the city shutdown early so employees could be off the street by the 9 p.m. curfew in effect for the rest of city.

"Most of the people who come in here are still so stunned they can't even think of what they need," said volunteer Jamie Henderson while sorting

Midland distributors see no letup in gas crunch

By RICHARD MASON

Rising prices and a "tight" supply of gasoline and other fossil fuels are fast becoming economic facts of life.

And about the only thing consumers can do to combat the situation — or live with it — is to conserve energy, say Midland gasoline distributors.

"We're not going to have everything shut down to the level where we run out of gas," said Ken Peeler, president of Midland 66 Co.

But he foresees nothing to check or lower rising fuel prices in these days of limited fuel.

Peeler recommends the mixing of "unnecessary driving" to conserve dwindling energy supplies.

"Most stations are finding they don't have enough gas to meet demand," said Max Nalley, a public information representative with the Exxon Company U.S.A. in Dallas.

Reasons for the "tight" gas supply and rising prices can be traced to the situation in Iran coupled with abnormally high consumption.

Tempting bad luck is not easy

By MIKE SLATON
Staff Writer

The much maligned day of Friday (not just Friday the 13th) has long been on mankind's list of persistent superstitions.

For ages, Fridays have been up there with all the other infamous unfortunates — black cats, spilling salt, walking under ladders and breaking mirrors.

But superstitions are just that, superstitions, and no person of reasonable sanity gives them a second thought unless, of course, there's something to them.

In the interest of clearing up any confusion, I was sent by those in higher places on this newspaper to investigate a few of society's prevalent superstitions.

What better day to do it, they speculated, than Friday the 13th? Go throw yourself in front of the wheels of bad luck, they told me. Knock on wood, I thought.

Black cats represent a long standing staple in the superstition trade. Letting one cross your path is tantamount to disaster, supposedly because of the ebony cat's association with witches.

Tempting fate by way of letting a black cat cross in front of me seemed a relatively good starting point for the "investigation."

That notion looked good on paper, but it failed to give with reality.

Midland doubtless has a large population of black cats, but the number of them shrinks significantly when an enterprising, if vaguely worried, reporter goes looking for them.

Alleys and trash cans yielded cats in abundance — none of them black. Poking under porches did no good. Even a last-ditch effort of hanging around a fish store brought no luck — good or bad.

THERE WAS ONE CAT, probably named Boots, that was all black except for white paws. Boots was rejected, after much soul-searching, because of the possible side effects its white feet might have.

Abandoning felines, this reporter turned next to salt. Salt, it is said, brings bad luck if spilt.

At one time people were convinced that the Devil lurked behind a person's chair at the dinner table with intentions of causing a dispute.

Spilling the salt, for some obscure reason, was said to give the Devil his

Procastinators panic

Income tax day of reckoning is also upon us

It's income tax deadline time again, and, for some, the peace of Easter Sunday may turn into the panic of income tax Monday.

Since the traditional deadline of April 15 falls on a Sunday, the annual day of reckoning has been postponed 24 hours — until midnight Monday.

"You need to have your extension application or return in the mail by midnight (Monday)," Gene McCleskey, director for the Internal Revenue Service in Midland said.

Volunteers will be available for four hours beginning 4:30 p.m. Monday in the lobby of the Main Post Office downtown to answer questions and offer assistance.

The post office has agreed to delay mail pick up at the downtown location until midnight to help last minute filers.

Jo Ann White, manager for H & R Block offices in Odessa, said statistics released earlier in 1979 by the IRS indicate people are waiting longer this year to file.

"At one time, returns in Austin were down, which indicates people are waiting longer to file," she said.

"I just got mine (return) off. Usually, I get it off by the end of February," she added.

She recommended that people using the long form "keep their receipts."

Applications for deadline extensions will be available through volunteers at the post office.

Stacy Dam approval

Tuesday truly was a red-letter day for this section of West Texas ... and it all came about as a result of an announcement concerning a project which would assure this vast region of a more abundant supply of water in the future.

The Texas Water Commission at Austin voted unanimously to issue a permit for the Colorado River Municipal Water District, headquartered at Big Spring, to proceed with its Stacy Dam project.

The decision certainly is just cause for a regional celebration, since the project means so very, very much to the future well-being and development of this particular section.

It was 18 months ago that CRMWD filed application for a permit to build the dam in Runnels, Concho and Coleman counties, 24 miles southeast of Ballinger. It will impound 554,340 acre-feet of water and would serve cities in the western part of the district, including Midland, Stanton, Big Spring, Odessa, Sweetwater, Ballinger, San Angelo and Snyder.

Need for the new dam was urgent when CRMWD filed its original application. It is many times more urgent today.

O.H. Ivie, general manager of CRMWD, has termed the project "essential for the continued growth and prosperity of this area."

Yet opponents of the project, led by the City of Austin and the Lower Colorado River Authority, most likely will take to the courts to again delay the project.

It is said that court litigation could delay the program as long as three years. Hopefully, this will not be the case. Starting promptly, construction would require three or four years to complete.

Flying over the Austin area and seeing all the water backed up in the Highland Lakes system, one wonders why in the world the people in the Austin area would oppose a project which would furnish an additional, much-needed supply of water for West Texas.

The Water Commission's order, incidentally, found that with the Stacy Reservoir in operation, there yet would be sufficient water ... to meet present and future water supplies downstream from Austin.

It also is noted that the project yet needs a federal permit from the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers and a state water quality permit.

Although this may not be the time for widespread rejoicing, approval of the Stacy Dam project by the Texas Water Commission was the high hurdle in the path toward final approval, construction and completion of the dam and reservoir.

The Colorado River Municipal Water District has had the all-out support of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce, the Midland Chamber of Commerce, City and County of Midland as well as other local chambers, cities and counties throughout the region in the Stacy Dam project.

As Manager Ivey said: "This project is more urgent today than when we filed for the permit, and it is encouraging to have it within our grasp."

"Our area must have the water and our area needs the additional electrical power which will come from a proposed plant at the lakesite."

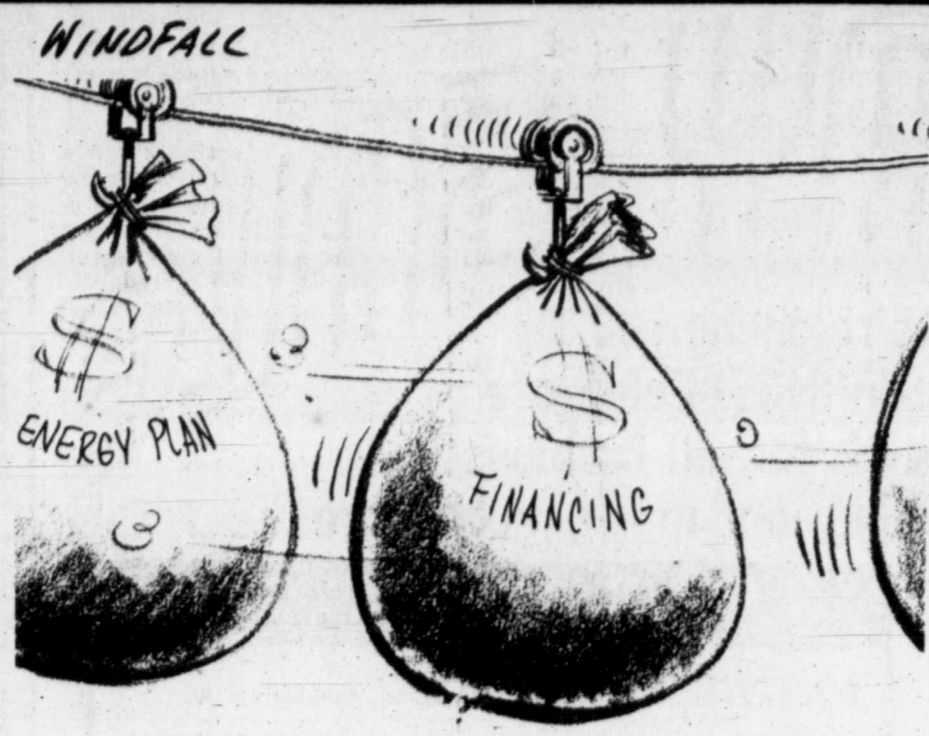

All this, of course, makes it all the more necessary for individuals, business firms and organizations of the region to do everything possible to push the project to a prompt, successful conclusion. It is a project of top priority in West Texas.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Guns, zealots: bad combination

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — Religious zealots have always posed a special problem for law enforcement authorities. Their constitutional protections must be respected, yet the damage even a small band of messianic madmen can wreak on society has been tragically demonstrated in recent years by Charles Manson and the Rev. Jim Jones.

A case being tried in Salt Lake City involves a self-anointed holy man called Stephen Andrews, who was caught trying to steal plastic explosives from Tooele Army Depot in Utah, where he worked as a guard. Our sources say Andrews boasted to other guards that he was a polygamist, that he walked and talked with God, and that he believed he should prepare for any challenges to that authority by stockpiling a private cache of weapons.

The prosecution is leery of the religious motivation behind the Andrews case, and instead is planning to prove that he was planning to sell the stolen explosives to mercenaries.

Andrews is not the first truculent polygamist to give Western lawmen cause for alarm. Consider these recent cases:

— We have already reported on Ervil LeBaron, who is in hiding in Mexico, charged with two murders in Utah and one in California. Police believe his hardcore band of 40 followers has been responsible for the religious assassinations of several others as well — including LeBaron's daughter Rebecca and his brother Joel.

— Authorities are keeping a watchful eye on Alex Joseph, an affable internationally known polygamist and star of his own movie who so far has confined his battles with police and the federal government to the courtroom. But Joseph has an unsettling penchant for religion and revolvers.

A former California policeman and a karate practitioner, Joseph lives in a log fortress in southern Utah with a 24-hour guard posted. His adherents, including teen-agers, are proficient with guns, and openly flaunt their rifles and pistols when visitors come to the community. One member of the group is an expert cutler who turns out superb knives, including a CIA-designed miniature scythe that fits over the hand like brass knuckles.

Perhaps for these reasons, some Utah lawmen have used pictures of Joseph for their daily target practice. — John Singer staved off arrest on several charges by arming himself and his polygamous family, patrolling his Utah mountain hideout and proclaiming on local television that he would shoot any officer who came on his property. Police posing as Los Angeles newspaper reporters succeeded in approaching Singer, but when they tried to make an arrest and a scuffle ensued, Singer got the drop on them and chased them off.

Last Jan. 18, Utah police swooped in on Singer with snow-mobiles. Singer waved his gun around — though he never fired it — and was fatally shot by the police. — The most recent incident was the

Jan. 30 arrest at Tooele Army Depot of Andrews and three fellow guards in the explosives theft. One of the guards was supposedly a party to the crime, but he had tipped off the FBI, and agents were waiting at the depot gate when the four arrived with 36 cases of the explosives.

Sources told our associate Dale Van Atta that what Andrews really was after was a supply of grenades. Alarmed at the Singer shooting less than two weeks earlier, Andrews wanted the grenades to protect himself from a similar police raid. He had already collected a number of M-16 automatic rifles, according to our sources.

What has the FBI and the military particularly uptight is the fact that, if one of the guards hadn't blown the plot, Andrews would certainly have gotten away with the explosives. The four guards constituted the entire night shift at the ultra-sensitive storage area.

Furthermore, the thieves were only a few ammunition bunkers away from several Redeye missiles, secured by the same easy-to-cut locks as the plastic explosives bunker. The missiles have been called the ideal terrorist weapon. They are hand-held, shoulder-fired guns loaded with heat-seeking warheads that can shoot down aircraft several miles high, including passenger airliners.

Most frightening of all, the incident demonstrated once again the sloppy security at Tooele, where the nation's largest supply of nerve gas is stored. The base was already the target of a congressional probe of inadequate security measures and guard selection. Evidence disclosed that several employees tried to cover up an inventory shortage of 24 nerve-gas shells by putting dummy rounds in their place.

Also reported was the still unexplained disappearance of one shell filled with a nerve gas so strong that one-fiftieth of a drop on a person's skin can be fatal.

Footnote: Our sources tell us that other polygamous fanatics have stockpiled weapons in anticipation of moves against them by law enforcement authorities. Though the violence-prone zealots constitute only a small minority of the estimated 30,000 religiously oriented polygamists in the United States, the danger they pose to society is out of all proportion to their numerical strength. They foresee the end of the world as imminent and expect to be called upon by God to eliminate the unworthy before Doomsday comes.

CHARLEY REESE President will need army of thermostat watchers

By CHARLEY REESE Sun Belt Syndicate

Charley Reese

ORLANDO, Fla. — After listening to Jimmy Carter's latest briefing on his war on the energy problem, I'm sure the draft will be restarted. He will need a special army of thermostat watchers to enforce his mandatory settings.

I realize that some people continue to have bottomless faith in our bumpkin of a president, but the fact is he is continuing to play politics instead of formulating a sound energy policy. In this respect, he is no different than his predecessors.

Of course the price of American oil should be deregulated. It should have been deregulated two years ago when Carter opposed deregulation. It should never have been regulated in the first place.

Carter, because he is motivated by politics instead of by an honest desire to actually solve the problem, is going about it in a stupid manner. He pretended in his speech that it was somebody else's fault we had not lifted controls sooner and then he announced a phased deregulation so that the last control won't come off until 1981.

That will be counter-productive since it provides an incentive to wait until 1981 to turn on all the taps. Then, to pacify liberals, he announces that he wants a windfall profits tax. It amazes me how many adjectives political hacks can attach to profits.

There is no special tax on real estate owners whose land suddenly becomes more valuable. There is no special tax on stock which suddenly becomes more valuable. Why should there be an additional tax on oil company profits?

Especially, why should there be an additional tax on oil company profits if the motive of the whole scheme is to provide an incentive to discover and produce more oil? Oil companies pay a corporate tax based on a percentage just like any other corporation and whenever the profits increase, so does the amount of tax revenue. Oil company profits, like other corporate profits, are also taxed twice — once as profits and once as income when they are distributed as dividends.

Besides, it's the oil industry which needs more capital, not the bloated federal government. The annual budget of the Department of Energy far exceeds the combined annual profits of all the oil companies. And the Department of Energy hasn't discovered the first drop of oil.

It seems strange that the world's greatest nation in terms of technology and industry cannot formulate a rational energy policy. You can understand why if you make a simple distinction. The great nation in terms of technology and industrialization is the private sector; the part of the nation in charge of policy is the government.

You can listen to socialist blarney all you want, but the fact remains that despite OPEC, despite ridiculous government controls and excessive taxes, despite screwball environmentalists, American oil companies have managed to find oil, get it out of the ground, transport, refine it, and sell it to us for less cost-per-gallon than the damned government charges to deliver a one-ounce letter special delivery.

Carter and the other two-bit politicians can't formulate an energy policy because they will not admit their own complicity. Therefore they try to blame it on the Arabs and the oil companies.

But it is our government which has clamped price controls on oil and natural gas and thus hindered development; it is our own government which has made it impossible to build pipelines from California to the rest of the nation so we can take advantage of Alaskan oil; it is our own government which has added to the cost and delayed the construction of new refineries; it is our own government which has slowed the exploration of the continental shelf; it is our own government which has fouled up the normal distribution channels; it is our own government which has forced a more expensive unleaded gasoline on American motorists; it is our own government which has taken millions of acres of promising land and banned any oil exploration, and it is our own government which has kow-towed to the OPEC nations instead of breaking up that cartel.

I'm just a working guy and don't own a single share of stock in any oil company, but it's time we Americans woke up and faced the facts. If you want to divide the world into good guys and bad guys in terms of who does the most for the average guy, then private industry, including the big oil companies, get to wear the white hats and politicians like Carter must wear the black ones.

Just check your monthly expenses. Who gets the lion's share of your paycheck? Big bad oil or the federal government? Who caused inflation? The federal government. Who's the least efficient? The government. Who deals with you at gunpoint instead of on a voluntary basis? Government. Who tells the biggest lies? Government. Who has demonstrated the most incompetency? Government.

How anybody could have more faith in the "corporation" which created the Vietnam War and the Post Office than they do in Exxon or Mobil Oil is beyond my comprehension.

INSIDE REPORT:

Miller opposes further tightening of money supply

By ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

Evans Novak

WASHINGTON — In a reversal of the roles normally played in a Democratic administration, Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal is pressing a resistant Federal Reserve Board to tighten the money supply as an anti-inflation weapon.

Blumenthal, who has developed into the most conservative force in the Carter administration, believes the money screws must be considerably tighter before there is any hope of controlling inflation. But William Miller, the Federal Reserve chairman, insists that any further tightening would put fatuous much of a strain on the economy.

In recent Democratic administrations, it has been the Fed leading the way in tightening money while the more liberal Treasury howls in protest. Ironically, when President Carter selected Democrat businessman Miller to succeed the highly conservative Arthur Burns to run the nation's central bank, White House aides forecast he would be much more amenable to the president's wishes.

An added ironic twist is the fact that major opposition to tightening money within the reserve board is centered among conservative followers of Dr. Milton Friedman's monetarist theories. Despite the uncontrolled inflation, they view the present size of the money supply as just about right.

garet Thatcher succeeding Laborite James Callaghan as British Prime Minister as a result of the forthcoming election does not fill President Carter and his top aides with joy.

On her last visit to Washington, Carter did not find time to see Mrs. Thatcher. Her visit with Vice President Walter F. Mondale was much less than satisfactory. Instead, she spent much of her time talking to conservative Republicans.

She is particularly out of step with the Carter administration on economic policy. "I would say she would be a very right-wing Republican in this country," one senior official in the Carter administration told us. She makes no secret of the fact that far and away her favorite U.S. secretary of the treasury was the last Republican to hold that office, the conservative William Simon.

SHADES OF LBJ It was almost as though Lyndon B.

Johnson were back in the White House for the morning of April 3 when President Carter and his senior advisers gathered to put the finishing touches on his energy message.

Bits and pieces of Carter's decontrol of oil prices had been appearing in print for several days (including our column of the previous day), and a fairly definitive version was run in that morning's New York Times. The wailing over the president being upstaged on his own program was worthy of LBJ.

Stuart Eizenstat, the usually calm and unflappable domestic policy chief at the White House, was in a towering rage. Gerald Rafshoon, the chief White House publicist, displayed sarcasm instead of anger. "Why should the president deliver the speech?" asked Rafshoon. "It's already appeared in the paper."

Actually, it would have been surprising if the plan had not leaked out. Over the previous weekend, Eizenstat had briefed about two dozen sub-cabinet-level officials. When that many people know something in Washington, it ceases to be a secret.

KEMP'S CANDIDACY

Rep. Jack Kemp is signalling he may have turned the corner in his own mind about making a long-odds run for president by refusing to take no for an answer in his attempt to become New York's favorite son.

Efforts to put the state's big convention delegation behind Kemp has been pressed by state Republican chairman Bernard Kilbourn but, incredibly, not cleared with influential Republican leaders in the legislature. Senate leader Warren Anderson, no enemy of Kemp but certainly no friend of Kilbourn, vetoed the idea after it appeared in print.

But Kemp has continued to pursue the idea in several telephone conversations with Sen. Anderson and is trying to arrange an appointment with him in Albany. Since the favorite-son role is obviously incompatible with a race for the U.S. Senate next year, Kemp seems to be showing his hand.

Friends of Anderson say he will not consider Kemp as a favorite son unless he actually announces his presidential candidacy. That would confront Kemp with the necessity of finally making a decision on his political future after months of mulling it over.

Names in the news

TORONTO (AP) — Rock guitarist Keith Richards will be accompanied by Mick Jagger and the rest of the Rolling Stones rock group at two benefit concerts for the Canadian National Institute for the Blind in Oshawa, Ont., on April 22, the promoters said.

Richards was convicted last October of heroin possession and received a two-year suspended sentence. He was ordered to perform the concert — with benefits going to the institute — as a condition of his probation.

The federal justice department has said the sentence will be appealed.

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Charlie is losing another one of his angels, but a new one may be waiting in the wings.

Producers for the popular TV series "Charlie's Angels" said Thursday that Kate Jackson will not return next season.

The New York Daily News, meanwhile, said in today's editions that Barbara Bach, who played opposite Roger Moore in "The Spy Who Loved Me," will replace Miss Jackson.

Miss Jackson's agent and ABC refused to comment.

Miss Jackson played Sabrina Duncan, one of the show's trio of female detectives. She was with the series when it began three years ago. Farrah Fawcett-Majors left the show after one season.

David Doyle, Cheryl Ladd and Jaclyn Smith, the only original "Angel," will remain.

"It's just that we feel it's best for Kate Jackson and 'Charlie's Angels' to bring in a new angel next year," said Marvin Katz, of Spelling-Goldberg Productions, which makes the show for ABC. "We just didn't exercise her option. Beyond that, we have no comment."

Miss Jackson's press agent, Mark Landia, said his client was not fired. He refused to elaborate, adding only that Miss Jackson was working on a TV movie and that she might be involved in another Spelling-Goldberg television series currently in the works.

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Mikhail Baryshnikov, considered by experts the best dancer of his generation, will dance the title role in the Louisville Ballet's season-opening performance of Igor Stravinsky's "Petroushka" October 18-20.

Alun Jones, artistic director of the Louisville company, made the announcement Thursday. Jones successfully lured Baryshnikov to Louisville last year — the dancer's first appearance with a regional company — to perform the role of the Poet in George Balanchine's "Night Shadow."

Jones said that ever since Baryshnikov's sellout performance here last fall, "people have asked if we'll bring him back. Some even suggested we should get someone else for next season. I'm not sure there is anyone else when you talk about Baryshnikov."

Baryshnikov has performed the role previously only with the American Ballet Theater.

NRC considered causing accident as solution

WASHINGTON (AP) — Frustrated by an accident they weren't sure how to handle, some Nuclear Regulatory Commission officials hoped for, and considered causing, further accidents that would get the stricken Three Mile Island powerplant into the kind of trouble they could control.

In the end, patience prevailed and succeeded; nobody tried anything drastic, and the plant was babied along for two weeks to avoid shocking it into carrying out its early threat of a radioactivity-releasing melt-down.

But transcripts, released Thursday, of NRC meetings from March 30 through April 4 showed the commissioners, their staff experts and company technicians grasping for almost any solution they could think of to solve two nasty and surprising problems.

Safety systems at nuclear plants were designed to cope with the "worst-case" accident of a major break in a reactor cooling system — a "loss of coolant accident" or LOCA, in which emergency cooling systems could rush to the rescue.

But at Three Mile Island, a combination of malfunctions and mistakes threatened to melt down the reactor without the imagined LOCA, and neither the systems nor the standard procedures were designed to cope with this unexpected type of accident.

The second big surprise was the development of a hydrogen bubble that threatened to hamper the precariously maintained flow of cooling water after the accident and bring on overheating and possible melt-down.

There was no remote-controlled vent to get rid of the unexpected gas bubble.

In a long March 30 meeting, Roger J. Mattson, director of the NRC division of systems safety, described a possible solution — "one we thought of and one that B and W (plant designer Babcock and Wilcox) kind of likes, but it doesn't have a lot of promise."

He went on to describe it anyway: "Start up all reactor coolant pumps, burn them out, blow the seals and hope they cause a loss of coolant accident that way, which would depressurize the system rapidly."

"Then we get into a mode for which all of these systems were designed and we could cope with."

Unfortunately, Mattson added, it probably wouldn't work — the blowouts might not create big enough leaks.

A few hours later, NRC Chairman Joseph M. Hendrie began a comment: "You know, what we need at the moment ..."

"Is a good pipe break," chimed in Commissioner Peter Bradford.

But Hendrie finished it his own way: "Is if one of the control rod drives would just fall off of the head of the damn vessel and give us a nice six-inch-diameter small break loss-of-coolant accident. That vents the hydrogen ... and then the pressure drops, the water rushes in."

South Carolina battles nuclear waste

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — While a state health official renewed his pledge that no highly radioactive waste from the Three Mile Island nuclear plant will be allowed in South Carolina, federal officials have refused to say whether some of that waste may end up at the Savannah River Plant.

Heyward G. Shealy of the state Department of Health and Environmental Control, who turned back two truckloads of waste from Three Mile Island earlier in the week, said Thursday no more shipments would be allowed in the state without "written confirmation" of their contents.

Shealy said any firm bringing wastes from the Harrisburg, Pa., plant must first give assurances that it is low-level radioactive material.

Spokesmen for the Department of Energy and Nuclear Regulatory Commission refused to comment on whether some high-level waste from the accident site might end up at the Savannah River Plant near Aiken.

David Peek, a DOE spokesman at the Savannah River Plant, said the facility is the only site on the East Coast that has the capability to handle high-level radioactive waste.

The other sites that could handle the high level waste from Three Mile Island are in Washington, Nevada and Idaho.

Frank Inghram of the NRC would not rule out the possibility of sending the waste to Savannah River.

Inspection of reactor's core will be delayed

MIDDLETOWN, Pa. (AP) — Technicians at the crippled Three Mile Island nuclear plant will not be able to examine the reactor's core for several months to confirm tests showing that an "insignificant" amount of uranium melted, Nuclear Regulatory Commission officials say.

NRC officials said Thursday a test on a sample of the reactor's cooling water revealed there had been less damage to the core than previously feared.

"It indicated that no fuel melting occurred or, if it did, it was exceedingly small ... That is great news," said NRC spokesman Jim Hanchett.

But he said the actual extent of core damage won't be known until the reactor can be physically inspected.

If any of the 100 tons of uranium pellets in the core had melted or were otherwise damaged, it could have meant serious radiation contamination of the coolant water.

The NRC also said plant technicians had successfully completed a project to remove dissolved gases from the cooling water by slowly lowering pressure to about 300 pounds per square inch.

That means that perhaps only one step — getting another sample of coolant — remains before the plant can be switched to a safe cooling system and final shutdown.

Residents have been reassured by reports that conditions at the plant are steadily improving and by examinations of more than 200 persons whose bodies show no unusual radiation.

Radiation levels in the area Thursday remained approximately as low as normal levels. The highest ground radiation reading announced Thursday was one-tenth of a millirem per hour, a measure of the amount of radiation energy absorbed by the body. After the accident there were readings of 50 millirems per hour.

Readings taken from the air above the plant reached 1,200 millirems shortly after the March 28 accident; they have now dropped to less than three-hundredths of a millirem.

Meanwhile, signs that things are getting back to normal around the damaged Three Mile Island nuclear power plant are nowhere more apparent than at the Bainbridge Elementary School.

NTSU, ex-president investigated for alleged mishandling of funds

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A few hours after resigning as president of North Texas State University, C.C. "Jitter" Nolen appeared Thursday before a House committee investigating alleged mishandling of funds at the Denton campus.

The House General Investigating Committee heard testimony in closed session on the school's relationship to the NTSU Education Foundation, Inc., a private fundraising organization.

Subpoenaed with Nolen were James A. Reid, foundation executive director; Jane G. Smith, university vice president for student affairs; and university regent E.E. Stuessy of Austin.

Earlier in the day, the regents accepted Nolen's resignation in an emergency meeting here. John L. Carter, vice president for fiscal affairs, was named acting president.

Nolen became NTSU president in 1971 and promised to increase private contributions to the fourth-largest state-supported university. The foundation was chartered in 1972 and contributions have risen from about $85,000 that year to $700,000 in 1978.

"My intention always has been to serve the university to the best of my ability and with the best interest of the university in mind," Nolen said after resigning. "It is unfortunate when innocent individuals are involved needlessly when their only desire is to serve the university." Carter has said that checks originally made out to the university have been altered to make them payable to the foundation. Reid says the donors agreed to the change, but Carter disputes that.

Rep. Richard Slack, chairman of the investigating committee, did not say when it would issue a report on the North Texas State situation.

Slack, D-Pecos, said the committee has been studying the situation for two weeks with information coming from several sources. Rep. Frank Gaston, R-Dallas, started an independent probe and has cooperated with the committee, Slack added.

Speaker Bill Clayton said he did not know if other witnesses would be subpoenaed.

Clayton earlier admonished the five committee members about the seriousness of the investigation.

"This university does not need a black mark or anything that would be a discredit to the people of the state or the students at the university or the employees," Clayton said.

Any evidence of criminal activity should be turned over to the Travis County district attorney, he added.

"We don't want a whitewash, but at the same time we're not on a witch hunt," Clayton added.

Before the meeting, Clayton said, "I think they're going to turn up a lot more than we think."

Another official of Carter administration hits at tighter money

WASHINGTON (AP) — Commerce Secretary Juanita M. Kreps is the second major Carter administration official this week to hint the nation may see tighter monetary policies.

Mrs. Kreps said Thursday a "modest tightening" of credit might be needed to help cool the overheated industrial sector of the economy. She added that current economic indicators are presenting "a somewhat mixed picture" of what is occurring.

"For that reason I would say modest tightening, yes, but I think we should be cautious with additional measures," she said.

Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal said in the text of a speech delivered Wednesday in Dallas that "the inflation problem won't be solved unless we persevere with our policies of fiscal and monetary restraint."

Blumenthal added, "We therefore must take the risks entailed in maintaining and, if necessary, intensifying our anti-inflation measures."

The 12-member Federal Open Market Committee, which includes the Federal Reserve Board members and presidents of five Federal Reserve banks, is responsible for interest rate decisions. It is scheduled to meet Tuesday though the decisions made at the closed meeting will not be announced until mid-May.

During a press briefing Thursday following the close of trade talks between the United States and Korea, Mrs. Kreps echoed other administration officials by predicting next week's report on the economy's first quarter could show real economic growth at an annual rate of 2 percent to 2.5 percent, compared to the 6.9 percent pace of the fourth quarter of 1978.

Since late last year, the Federal Reserve has tried to slow inflation and strengthen the dollar, pushing interest rates to record highs.

The higher interest rates are aimed at slowing the borrowing which some administration officials say contributes to high corporate investment spending and the building of inventories.

But the number of housing starts is down now, and consumer spending has slowed, showing that earlier monetary actions may be taking hold.

Most states, cities agree to comply

WASHINGTON (AP) — Forty-eight states and 35 large cities are agreeing to comply with the nation's anti-inflation program, the Council on Wage and Price Stability says.

But the states of Maryland and Louisiana and the cities of Cincinnati and San Diego have not yet come aboard, the council said Thursday. Officials in those two local governments indicated they may not.

The guidelines for state and local governments are the same as for businesses and unions — employee wage increases of no more than 7 percent this year and prices held a half a percentage point below the average of the last two years.

All local governments have been asked to comply, but the council late last year asked the states and those cities and counties with 5,000 employees or more to promise that compliance in writing.

In Louisiana, Jane Laborde, press secretary for Gov. Edwin Edwards, said "he is not planning to comply with the guidelines."

In fact, she said, Edwards will continue to champion a 10 percent pay raise for the state's civil servants, teachers and retired people, despite criticism from the council. The state Civil Service Commission has approved the action, Ms. Laborde said, and the Legislature takes the matter up next week.

Edwards wrote the council last month that he was pressing for wages beyond the guidelines because the state has a surplus of money and its employees' buying power is being eroded by inflation.

Maryland, meanwhile, has asked for an extension while it considers a council ruling on how the wage guideline applies to so-called step increases in employee pay scales, said council spokesman Joseph Carter.

The cities had other reasons for not pledging compliance, and both involved paperwork.

Otto Bos, press aide to San Diego Mayor Pete Wilson, insisted that "we have taken steps we think are frugal and cost conscious" in the wake of California's tax-cutting Proposition 13 vote last year.

But, he added: "The area where we have fallen down with the federal government is that we haven't processed all the paperwork. It doesn't have the highest priority right now. We will get to it — in due time."

Harbingers of bad luck cannot harm Midlander

By RICHARD MASON Staff Writer

Black cats, broken mirrors and the harmful effects of Friday the 13th cannot harm Mrs. Richard Bius of 2601 N. A St.

The Midland housewife is protected by a special charm.

She spends a fair amount of time looking over her collection of four- and five-leaf clovers, and the sight of the rare grasses is meaningful to her.

A native of Chihuahua, Mex., Mrs. Bius had only heard of things like four-leaf clovers before coming to the U.S.

But the stories intrigued her, and she vowed that someday she would find one of her own.

She did. And two five-leaf clovers at that, which is the reason for her excitement.

The unusual plants with their heart-shaped leaves came from places as farflung as Fort Jennings, Ga., and Karlsruhe-Heide in West Germany.

Reminiscing about the finds leaves her momentarily speechless. She fought for the proper words in English to describe her luck.

"I have eagle eyes for spotting the clovers," she says thrusting a finger into the air for emphasis.

How does she do it? Mostly through concentration. In fact, she insists she deals with clover on a personal basis.

Her first five-leaf clover was found, she said, on a wintry day in Georgia when she went outside to seek the warmth of the sun.

She was standing between two patches of clover, ready to give up her search for the legendary luck charm when she had a change of mind, she recalled.

"I will get you," she announced in a fit of optimism to one of the patches, "but you must be a five-leaf clover." Actually finding it excited her so much she didn't know what to do.

"I just jump," she said. Mrs. Bius, who is taking classes at Midland College, insists clover hunting is her main hobby.

"I don't know if they bring you luck," she said, "but they bring you something. Like peace."

Tapping the side of her head with her fingers, she smiles. "It's in your head."

House reverses itself on banking proposal

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The House has reversed itself and defeated, 75-48, a bill opponents called an attempt by bankers and savings and loan associations to head off minority competition.

Thursday's vote meant two dozen representatives had changed their minds since the bill won tentative approval the day before, 79-49.

A black legislator called the bill the most "despicable" thing he had seen in more than six years in the House.

The measure would have prohibited ownership of bank or savings and loan stock by non-profit organizations that receive state or federal money.

"The bill is just saying you can't go to the federal government and get your dollars and my dollars and invest them for this particular purpose," said Rep. Bill Presnal, D-Bryan, the sponsor.

Rep. John Wilson, D-LaGrange, observed that the only witness for the bill when it was heard in committee was from the Texas Savings and Loan League.

"We don't have to compete with those folks' is what they are really thinking," said Wilson, a moderate to conservative legislator.

"It's all right to talk about job opportunities as long as it's job opportunities with a shovel. ... But God forbid they would own a bank," Wilson said.

Rep. Matt Garcia, D-San Antonio, said the bill would prevent organizations from using economic development money from the U.S. Community Services Administration to buy banks.

Rep. Froy Salinas, D-Lubbock, said such a bank might make home improvement loans in rundown neighborhoods that other lending institutions have "redlined."

Salinas said he thought a group of blacks in Lubbock was trying to obtain a federal grant to start a savings and loan association.

Presnal said he knew of no groups that have used federal grants to buy bank or savings and loan stock so far, "and I hope they never do."

"I don't want anybody using federal money to buy a bank. They can get out and work for a living just like I do," said Rep. Bill Hollowell, D-Grand Saline.

"You are not stopping the grants, Mr. Hollowell, but you are stopping the opportunity of people to make it in this world. ... I have been in the House six years and I have never seen anything as despicable as this," said Rep. Craig Washington, D-Houston.

Both chambers of the Legislature were off today, and only the House worked on Thursday. The Senate began its Easter break a day earlier than the House.

Representatives passed and sent to the Senate, 118-9, a bill restoring the traditional two-semester school year that was replaced in 1972 by the present three-quarter academic year.

A message scribed on the garage door of a Wichita Falls home damaged by Tuesday's tornado lets those concerned know that the former residents are safe. Forty-four people were killed and more than 500 injured when the storm cut a path through Wichita Falls. (AP Laserphoto)

Huge amount of food dumped after tornado

WICHITA FALLS, Texas (AP) — "Hundreds of thousands of pounds" of possibly contaminated food were reluctantly hauled to the city dump after a mammoth killer tornado chewed up one of Wichita Falls' busiest retail areas earlier this week.

"There were 50 to 100 food facilities in there, maybe more," sighed Tom Edmonson, chief sanitarian of the city's health department, as dozens of huge grocery trucks rolled to the sanitary land fill Thursday. "There will be quite a few truck loads of meat (destroyed)."

Some of the food had tiny shards of glass embedded in it after the funnel exploded the huge front windows of the supermarkets. Some was contaminated by polluted water. Frozen food thawed and refrigerated meat spoiled after power was knocked out.

Some canned goods were ruined because the high pressure of the tornado destroyed their vacuum seals, Edmonson explained. Bottles of soft drinks have been found with the lids intact but with tiny particles of dirt, glass, and debris inexplicably inside.

Much of the food health officials merely suspected of being contaminated also had to be buried at the dump. Edmonson said he didn't know who much food was ruined, "but I'm sure it will be hundreds of thousands of pounds."

ditional help from the state. Edmonson said city and county officials are racing to keep any salvaged food out of the local market place. Such food is not allowed to be sold in Wichita County. Salvage companies (from outside the county) will try to haul the food out and it will wind up back in the food chain, said Edmonson.

"They're not here yet. But believe me, they will be," he said. Edmonson said his office cannot take responsibility, however, if state officials allow truck loads of salvaged food believed to be safe to leave the county for other areas. "Someone else will take that responsibility," he added.

Mr. and Mrs. Conway Prince of the Tulsa suburb of Bixby, Okla., found a personal check written on a Wichita Falls, Texas, bank in their front yard Thursday. The check was found two days after the deadly tornado ripped through Wichita Falls, which is 150 miles southwest of Tulsa. Another Wichita Falls check was found Thursday west of Tulsa. Wichita Falls residents had 50 minute warning

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — The National Weather Service in Oklahoma City said Thursday that Wichita Falls residents were warned about 50 minutes before a killer tornado struck that city Tuesday afternoon.

The weather service said the time was determined by a review of the series of disastrous tornados that struck north Texas and southwestern Oklahoma Tuesday afternoon.

At 5:08 p.m., the National Weather Service issued a tornado warning for Wichita County and advised residents to seek shelter immediately.

The service said conditions at the time were being monitored by the weather service radar and was aided by volunteer storm spotters.

It said the warning was provided to Wichita Falls radio and television stations and local civil defense and was disseminated widely.

Earlier at 4:40 p.m. Tuesday, radar indicated severe thunderstorms in Baylor County and a tornado sighting was confirmed a few minutes later by the sheriff's office at Seymour.

That tornado was moving toward the northeast. In its preliminary review, the weather service regional headquarters at Fort Worth noted the Wichita Falls Civil Defense made extensive use of its sirens to attract public attention to the tornado threat.

In advance of the warning, the National Severe Storms Forecast Center in Kansas City posted a watch at 2 p.m. for portions of north Texas and Oklahoma, including the Wichita Falls, Vernon and Lawton areas. The watch indicated conditions would be favorable for severe local storms from 2 p.m. until 7 p.m.

No progress reported in talks with striking Boston University professors

BOSTON (AP) — Many Boston University students packed their bags for a long weekend as striking professors faced another day on the picket lines and negotiators reported no progress during all-night talks.

"We've seen no movement so far but things could change at any minute," said BU spokesman Bob Manning hours after negotiators sat down with a federal mediator Thursday.

With the strike and Passover and Easter holidays, some students already had left the campus by Thursday night and more were expected to leave today, Manning said.

The break may be the last until summer for the university's 25,000 students, who face final exams in only three weeks.

"I think it's going to be a tough time once this ordeal is over," said liberal arts freshman Anna Schneider, 19. "I think everybody's going to have to cram to fill in the gaps that have been caused by the strike."

"A lot of people are getting bored, a lot are getting angry, a lot are just floating around," added the student.

About 420 unionized professors have refused to conduct classes since April 5 in a protest over stalled contract negotiations at BU, the nation's fourth largest private school.

Bullock will waive penalty

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — State Comptroller Bob Bullock said Thursday he will waive any penalty or interest on late payment of taxes by businesses and individuals affected by the recent tornados in Texas.

Bullock also advised residents in Wichita Falls and Vernon to disregard computerized tax delinquency notices for the time being.

"The last thing someone who lost a home or a loved one needs now is a due notice from the tax collector," Bullock said in a statement. "These folks deserve the biggest break they can get and I'm going to give it to them."

Bullock said a preliminary survey by his office showed more than 300 businesses were destroyed or severely damaged in Wichita Falls, including approximately 60 in one shopping center.

He said a special task force from his office to help tornado victims on tax-related problems will be in Wichita Falls and Vernon in the coming weeks.

Nkomo enclave razed

LUSAKA, Zambia (AP) — Rhodesian commandos in a daring two-hour raid inside Zambia's capital destroyed the office-residence of guerrilla leader Joshua Nkomo and two other guerrilla headquarters before dawn today.

Nkomo, co-leader of the Patriotic Front guerrilla alliance fighting the white-dominated Rhodesian government, was not in the building at the time, Western diplomatic sources said. He was reported safe and somewhere in Lusaka.

In Salisbury, the Rhodesian capital, the Rhodesian military command confirmed the raid by its ground forces but gave no details. A brief communique said:

"Combined Operations Headquarters confirms international news reports that Rhodesian ground forces have carried out attacks against Zimbabwe Peoples Revolutionary Army targets in Lusaka. These are complementary to the air raids launched on terrorist bases in Zambia."

Diplomatic sources said the raiders covered the 60 miles from the Rhodesian border to Lusaka overland by motor and no planes were used.

A Zambian government spokesman said there were "a few casualties" resulting from the raid. But there was no indication that any of them were Rhodesians.

The Zambia Mail newspaper said a car in which a civilian family was trying to escape the explosions and gunfire was hit and all the occupants were killed. The paper did not give the size of the family.

The raid began at 3 a.m. and ended at 5 a.m. Only the smoking walls of Nkomo's office-residence, a sprawling mansion in the tree-lined suburb of Woodlands near a local golf-course, remained standing after dawn.

Residents said the attack also destroyed Zimbabwe House, the main offices of Nkomo's Zimbabwe African People's Union, located in the suburb of Emmasdale, and Liberation Center, in the suburb of Kawala. That building housed offices of ZAPU, the South-West Africa People's Organization and the African National Congress.

SWAPO is waging guerrilla war in Namibia, also called South-West Africa, against South African troops in the South African-controlled territory. SWAPO's military bases are in Angola.

The African National Congress is a black militant organization banned in South Africa, which has sent in blacks with Soviet arms to fight the white minority regime in South Africa. But its activities have been sporadic because of tight South African security.

Persons living near Nkomo's office-residence said an abandoned four-wheel drive military vehicle was found burning in the street not far away from the ruins. They said it might have been used by the Rhodesian commandos and abandoned.

Other residents said they saw black troops in the area and thought they might have been Zambian soldiers. But some 80 percent of Rhodesia's armed forces are black, and many of them are in Rhodesian commando units.

Residents also reported that Zambian authorities had detained an unknown number of whites and blacks for questioning after the raid, the fifth into Zambia this week.

Nkomo and Patriotic Front co-leader Robert Mugabe have vowed to sabotage Rhodesia's national elections next week, and Rhodesia's biracial transition government has been bombing Zambian guerrilla camps to immobilize the terrorists.

The elections will install Rhodesia's first black-majority government. The guerrillas oppose the election on grounds whites will continue to dominate Rhodesia because of constitutional checks.

The provisions give whites, who make up less than 4 percent of Rhodesia's 6.7 million population, control of the military and judiciary and guarantee them 28 of Parliament's 100 seats, enough to block constitutional changes.

U.S. hedges spy charge reply

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — The U.S. government hedged in its first response to South Africa's expulsion of three members of the U.S. Embassy's military staff and their plane on charges of aerial spying.

The embassy refused to comment. But a State Department official in Washington admitted the plane, a twin-engine C-12A, was equipped with a camera and took aerial photographs. However, he said he would not call the photography espionage.

The State Department refused to comment on the substance of the charges.

Prime Minister Pieter W. Botha leveled the surprise spy charges on the 8 p.m. TV news Thursday. He charged that the plane was Ambassador William P. Edmondson's private aircraft and that it "was converted for use as a spy plane by the installation of an aerial survey camera under the seat of the co-pilot."

"In flight, the device enabled the camera to take pictures of the ground below," Botha continued. "Photographs in our possession reveal that the embassy aircraft was engaged in a systematic program of photography of vast areas of South Africa, including some of our most sensitive installations."

He gave no details but said, "we have the necessary exhibits and will show them if need be."

Botha said it was the kind of conduct that could be expected from the Soviet Union. He demanded an official apology from the Carter administration.

The prime minister did not say how many Americans were ordered out of the country or identify them. But the State Department said three men were given a week to leave: Col. Alvin M. Crews, a defense attache; Maj. Bernd McConnell, an assistant air attache, and Master Sgt. Horace E. Wyatt Jr., crew chief of the plane.

Botha said permission for the embassy to use the plane had been "summarily terminated" and the aircraft must leave the country after South African technicians ensure "all photographic equipment has been removed," so no pictures could be taken on its flight out.

State Department spokesman Hodding Carter said the plane was assigned to Crews, not to the ambassador.

Sources close to the embassy said the plane had "gone everywhere" on official business, including to other African countries.

Relations between the Carter administration and South Africa's white-minority government already were at a low point because of American opposition to South Africa's apartheid policy of racial repression and the U.S. administration's support of black nationalist movements in Southern Africa.

"It is particularly unfortunate," said Hodding Carter, "that the South African government chose to act as it did at a time when we are engaged with it in seeking solutions to the problems in Namibia (South-West Africa) and elsewhere in Southern Africa."

In South-West Africa, which South Africa continues to control in defiance of the United Nations, the United States is backing a U.N. plan for independence which the South African government thinks is weighted in favor of the leftist South-West Africa Peoples Organization, a guerrilla movement.

Uganda's invaders hunt Amin

KAMPALA, Uganda (AP) — Uganda's Tanzanian invaders said today they were sending out commandos to hunt down Idi Amin, but the invasion force of Tanzanians and Ugandan exiles made no move to pursue the remnants of Amin's shattered army as they fled eastward toward the Kenyan border.

Tanzanian military source said commandos were being sent east and north from Kampala, Uganda's occupied capital, into areas still theoretically under Amin's control.

An official of the new provisional government said Amin would be tried for murder and treason if caught. Radio Kampala, in the hands of the invaders, said he "deserves the gallows."

"Amin has killed hundreds of our brothers and sisters," the broadcast said. "All Ugandans who love their motherland must from now on help find Idi Amin wherever he is."

The onetime strongman, last reported at Jinja, 50 miles east of Kampala, replied in broadcasts transmitted from Soroti, 200 miles northeast of Kampala, near the Kenya border.

"We have got our soldiers controlling the country," he asserted.

Amin's troops were reported streaming east toward the Kenyan border in a chaotic rout. Residents of towns along the way said they were looting.

Iran executes more supporters of shah

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Firing squads executed seven more of the shah's men today, including the general in charge of political prisoners at Tehran's Qasr Prison and the chief of air force counter-intelligence. Revolutionary courts also sent five policemen to jail and freed one.

The latest deaths, announced by the state radio, raised to 116 the number of confirmed executions since the forces of Shiite Moslem leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini ousted the last royal government of Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi two months ago.

The Qasr Prison official was Gen. Bijan Yahyal, who was tried by a revolutionary court in the prison. In an emotion-packed trial, former prisoners and their relatives told of torture at the prison during the monarchy.

harassing residents at gunpoint and stealing cars as they fled.

The new government ordered them to surrender themselves and turn in their weapons "or be dealt with accordingly."

The Kenyan government was reported moving military reinforcements to the border, apparently to prevent an exodus of Amin's troops. One traveler who reached Nairobi today said he saw a Kenyan convoy of about 300 trucks and armored personnel carriers moving toward the frontier.

Yussufu Lule, Uganda's new provisional president, was expected to arrive in Kampala today for the capital's second anti-Amin political rally in as many days. Lule had planned to fly in Thursday but was grounded by bad weather in Dar es Salaam, the Tanzanian capital.

Tanzanian President Julius Nyerere's troops and Ugandan exiles fighting alongside them overran Kampala Wednesday after a slow march up through southwest Uganda, setting off frenzied celebrations and looting.

Looting continued in residential areas today, and Radio Kampala urged the looters to return what they had taken.

Four African governments recognized Lule's provisional government on Thursday. Nyerere, who is sponsoring the new cabinet of anti-Amin exiles, was the first, but within hours his allies ruling Zambia, Botswana and Mozambique endorsed the new regime.

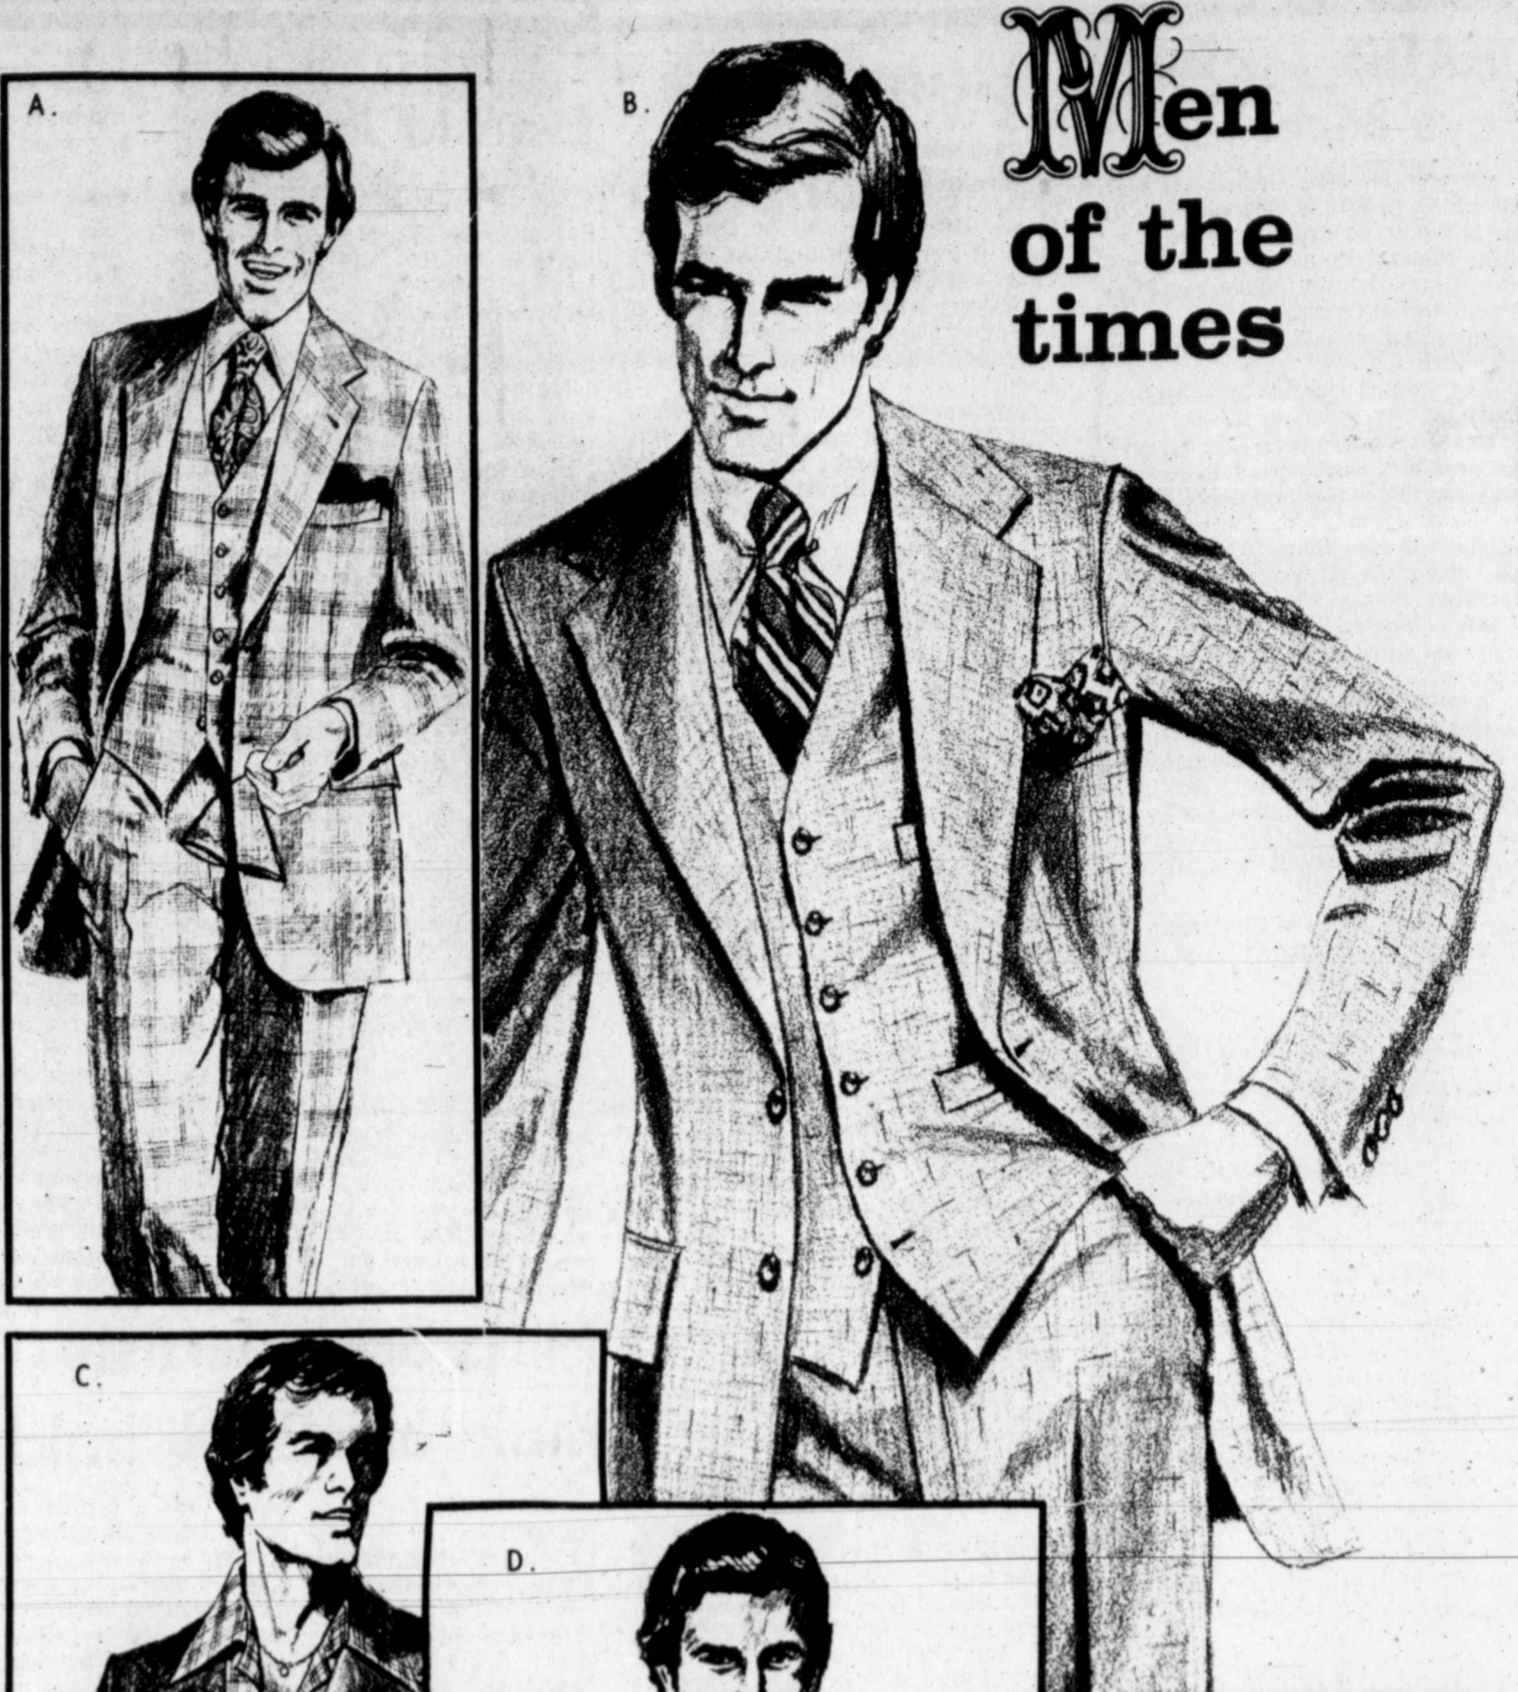

Nyerere in a broadcast Thursday night from Dar es Salaam said he ordered the invasion of Uganda to punish Amin for his seizure of 710 square miles of Tanzanian territory last October, not to overthrow him.

"Tanzania reserves the right to punish the aggressor who had earlier made a bragging and naked invasion of our territory," he said.

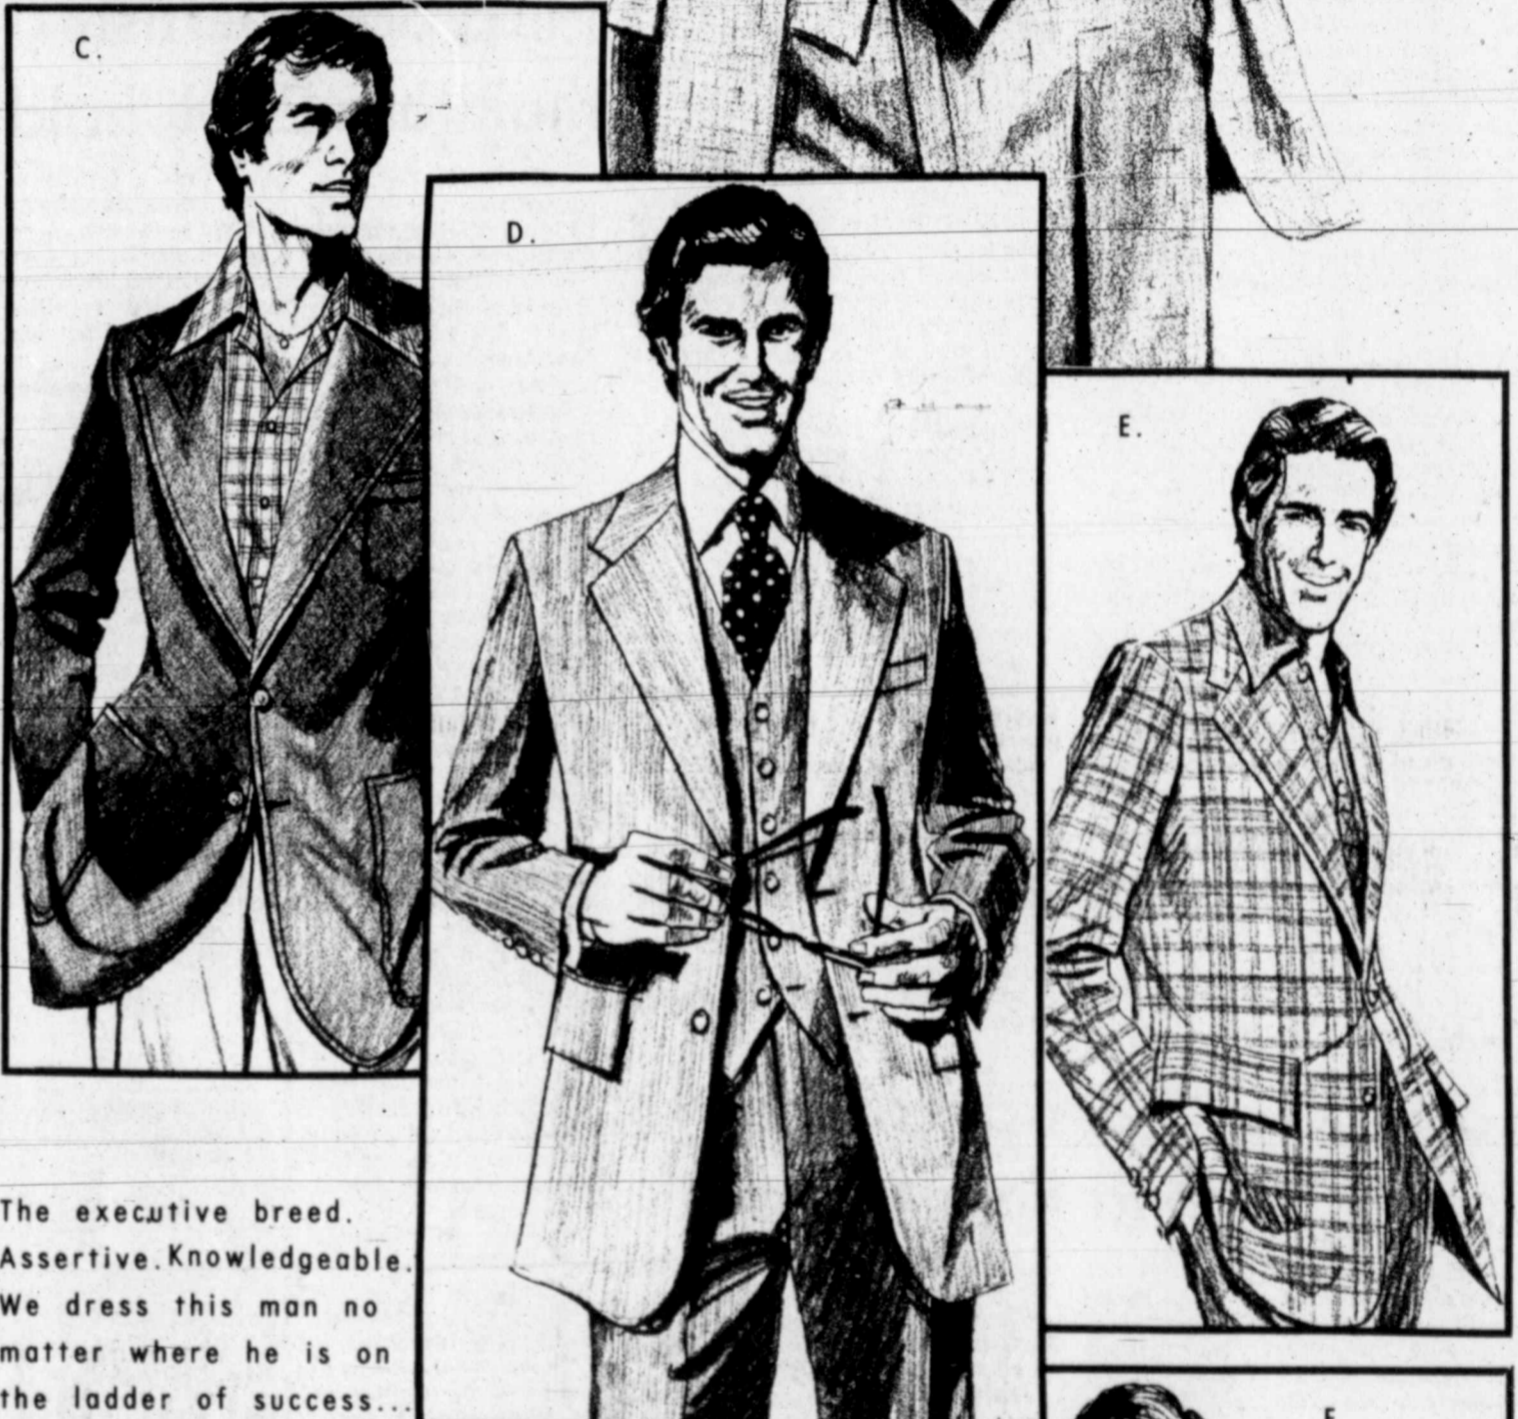

"The work of removing dictator Idi Amin from power is the work of Ugandans and not of Tanzanians."

The Tanzanian Foreign Ministry accused Amin of "unparalleled barbarism" during the Ugandan occupation of Tanzanian territory. Amin's "troops massacred thousands of Tanzanians, committed untold atrocities and perpetrated wanton destruction of our property," it said.

Nyerere said he was keeping his troops in Uganda at the request of Lule's government and they would remain until all is calm. "But if the new government requests us to withdraw tomorrow, we will do so," he said.

AT WIT'S END

On volunteers...

By ERMA BOMBECK
Volunteers are like yachts. No matter where they are, they arouse your curiosity. Who are they? Where do they come from? Why are they here? They could stay moored where it's safe and still justify their being, but they choose to cut through the rough waters, ride out storms and take chances.

They have style. They're fiercely independent. If you have to ask how much they cost, you can't afford them.

Volunteers and yachts have a lot more in common these days. They're both a part of an aristocratic era that is disappearing from the American scene. They're both a luxury in a world that has become very practical.

Day by day, the number of volunteers decreases in this country as more and more of them equate their worth in terms of dollars and cents.

Three years ago, I did a column on volunteers in an effort to point out that they don't contribute to our civilization. They ARE civilization—at least the only part worth talking about.

They are the only human beings on the face of this earth who reflect this nation's compassion, unselfishness, caring, patience, need and just plain loving one another. Their very presence transcends politics, religion, ethnic background, marital status, sexism, even smokers vs. non-smokers.

Maybe, like the yacht, the volunteer was a luxury. And luxuries are too often taken for granted.

One has to wonder. Did we, as a nation, remember to say to the volunteers, "Thank you for our symphony hall. Thank you for the six dialysis machines. Thank you for sitting up with a 16-year-old who overdosed and begged to die. Thank you for the hot chocolate at the scout meeting."

En Amie meets for book review

Mrs. Clyde Angel of Big Spring presented a review of the book, "I Came to Love You Late" by Joyce Landford for the En Amie Review Club luncheon.

The event was held in the Midland Woman's Club. Mrs. R. H. Davis presided.

Guests introduced were Mrs. C. O. Nolley and Mrs. Ralph Stripling of Big Spring; Mrs. Ed Wilson, Mrs. Larry Beck, Mrs. Hasting Cooper, Mrs. Marion Holmes, Mrs. Stanley Weiner, Mrs. Phil Adams, Mrs. Chester Tyra, Mrs. Ralph Berry, Mrs. Arlow Forrest, Mrs. David May, Mrs. Joe Burrell, Mrs. Frank Stubbleman and Mrs. R. B. McClure.

Hostesses were Mrs. Durwood Goolsby, Mrs. Harry A. Smith, Mrs. John Milan, Mrs. Hal Dean and Mrs. Edwin Unger.

Program at the May 9 meeting will be presented by the Children's Theatre, which is under the direction of Debbie Wadill.

Thanks for reading to the blind. Thanks for using your station wagon to transport a group of strangers to a ballgame. Thanks for knocking on doors in the rain. Thanks for hugging the winners of the Special Olympics. Thanks for pushing the wheelchair into the sun. Thanks for being. Did the media stand behind them when they needed a boost? Did the professionals make it a point to tell them they did a good job? Did the recipients of their time and talent ever express their gratitude? It frightens me, somehow, to imagine what the world will be like without them.

Enforcement of chemical waste laws receives little government support

By GRAYSON MITCHELL
The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — Laws designed to protect the public from toxic chemicals and other potentially dangerous wastes are virtually unenforced because of budget restraints and a shortage of investigators, a top Department of Justice official said this week.

"It's sad but true," James W. Moorman, assistant attorney general for land and natural resources, told the Senate Judiciary Committee.

"What we're talking about is the poisoning of our air and water supplies by toxic waste, and I can't think of anything more important," he said. "But we don't have the people and resources needed to do the job."

Both the Department of Justice and the Environmental Protection Agency, whose responsibility it is to enforce toxic pesticide statutes, have been hamstrung by the Carter administration's decision to limit federal spending and government hiring, Moorman said.

The Senate committee is studying the enforcement of laws enacted to protect the environment. Last summer 239 families were evacuated from the Love Canal waste dump in Niagara Falls, N.Y., after studies revealed major health problems among residents who had been exposed to toxic pollutants.

The Love Canal is only one of approximately 800 chemical disposal sites around the country that contain toxic wastes posing a health hazard, according to the EPA.

Considering the magnitude of the waste problem, Moorman said, the government is not committing a commensurate amount of resources to enforcement.

He said his own department, which works with the Environmental Protection Agency to enforce anti-pollution laws, has one lawyer working full time on toxic hazards and two more working part-time.

A spokesman for the EPA said the agency currently has 1,742 persons in its enforcement division, but of this number only 34 work in the toxic chemical area.

Moorman told the committee these 34 EPA employees were lawyers and general staff personnel, rather than trained law-enforcement investigators. He estimated that "several hundred" investigators were needed to check chemical disposal practices and to conduct research necessary for the prosecution of offenders.

As for the administration's budget decisions, Moorman said, "There has been a general decision made not to approve any individual budget increases, regardless of the merit. When you make a big decision like that, there are always going to be some injustices that don't get corrected."

As a result, he said, the federal government cannot crack down on chemical companies that surreptitiously dump toxic wastes in rivers, marshes and city sewers.

"One of our real problems is that we don't know where all this poison is going," he said. "We need to find out."

Moorman said sometimes containers of poisoned chemicals are left in abandoned trucks along public roadways. He also said that "fly-by-night corporations" leave behind huge plots of land covered with rusting barrels of toxic substances.

Plans by the Department of Justice and the EPA to bring suit against companies involved in the disposal of hazardous waste also have hit a legal snag.

EPA officials are uncertain whether they can prosecute violating companies under the 1976 Resource Conservation and Recovery Act.

They are also uncertain whether the lawsuits could be made to apply retroactively.

Sanding isn't always groovy

By AL CARRELL
Sanding is often a critical part of a paint or finishing job. It's particularly important to do it right in furniture refinishing. One of the spots where you may be prone to skip is around the turnings on furniture legs or chair backs. You can get the round part, but down in the cracks and crevices is a different story. However, if you fold the piece of sandpaper a couple of times (don't crease it), you'll end up with an easy to handle "V"-shaped sander that will get into cracks. When you use steel wool instead of a paper type abrasive, wrap the wool around a piece of string and pull it back and forth in the crevice. Basically, sanding is hard work, but don't tackle it with too much gusto because the idea is to smooth—not to wear out the wood.

pencil instead of a dowel for this. — B.R.

Dear Al:
I economize by buying large sheets of sandpaper and tearing them into usable sizes for both hand and power sanding. The quick way to tear is to place the sheet under a saw blade that is held flat on the table. The saw teeth let you rip away and make a straight tear. — S.B.S.

A SUPER HINT — One of the bad things about sanding is that you create all that dust. As a final step before applying a finish, you should go over the surface of a piece of furniture with a tack rag. You can buy these at a paint or hardware store, or you can make one. Start with a well-washed, lint-free cotton cloth (a diaper is great). Dip the rag in warm water and wring it out. Next, dip it in turpentine and wring until it's drip-free. Now lay the cloth out flat and drip varnish until it looks like it has the measles. Fold the cloth and squeeze it and wring it and roll it until the varnish is evenly spread over the entire surface. The cloth should be tacky and sticky so it will pick up the dust, but not leave any of the stickiness on the surface. Store your tack rag in a sealed jar and keep it "in tack" by occasionally adding drops of water and turp.

Dear Al:
When using steel wool for smoothing, there are liable to be tiny metal slivers left in the surface. I keep a small magnet around to run over the furniture, and this picks up all the slivers. — S.A.

Dear Super:
I have a clever way to keep track of all the various grits of sandpaper. I have stapled large brown envelopes to the back of the door to my paint cabinet. These will hold full-sized sheets of sandpaper as well as small scraps. I mark the grit numbers on the envelope so I have a holder for each. This also prevents the sheets from curling up, which happens if they are left in a drawer. — J.W.

SHOP TALK — Using the right grade of sandpaper is very important. If you'd like to know a bit more about sandpapers and abrasives, I have a FREE chart you can have for the asking. Just include a self-addressed, stamped envelope along newspaper.

Expert tells why children kill

By KEN MIMMS
Copley News Service

Killers may be found among children who have lost contact with reality; are basically insecure and have the ability to "dehumanize" others, says a clinical psychologist.

Children in each of these categories have special needs, according to the Oakland-based psychologist.

"The psychotic needs intensive psychotherapy for past painful experiences; the insecure child needs to feel safer in the world and the non-empathic child needs to learn to identify with other people," said James M. Sorrells of the Alameda County Mental Health Service.

"Mental health programs are needed, after the fact, for these youngsters and, if they are not treated, those in the first two categories will kill again."

Although psychotic and insecure children can be prevented from repeat killings through psychiatric treatment, those unable to identify others as human beings "kill out of desperation" and longer treatment is required before positive results are realized, Sorrells said.

As an example, he cited the case of a 15-year-old boy who beat to death a 6-year-old girl. After his arrest, the youth commented: "Why should I feel anything? I didn't even know her."

In an interview, Sorrells said the single common factor among children who kill is that most grow up in chaotic families.

"It is at home that they witness frequent acts of violence," he said, "and, in the process of dealing with this problem, we also must pay attention to communities where there are signs of social disorder, such as high incidents of violence, poverty and high infant mortality rates."

"If a neighborhood is good, it will counterbalance the home life, but where they are an extension of the violence, neighborhoods tend to support violent acts."

Flowers topic of talk

Mildred Farris of Mildred's Flowers presented a program on spring flower arrangements and house plants at a recent meeting of the Childbirth Without Pain Education League.

The group met for their April luncheon at Eden's Restaurant. Tables were decorated in an Easter theme. Approximately 40 persons attended, with 12 guests and two new members.

Next month's meeting will be a combined luncheon and style show at the Midland Country Club.

By ABIGAIL...
DEAR... divorced...
SATURDAY...
DOWNTOWN 215 W. W. MON. SAT.

DEAR ABBY:

Misery wants company—the guy she divorced

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN Even though I was the one who asked for the divorce, it was a terrible mistake.

DEAR ABBY: I'm divorced and miserable. I know there must be thousands of divorced people (men as well as women) who would give anything to get back with No. 1 but they don't know how to go about it. Abby, will you please ask readers who were divorced, "gretted it and got back with No. 1 again to write and tell you how they accomplished it?" I'll do anything! — SORRY IN ST. JO, MO.

DEAR SORRY: All right. Readers? And please let me know how it was the second time around with No. 1. DEAR ABBY: Our 18-year-old daughter has graduated from high school and has steady employment, so now she says she can do as she pleases. She is living at home (free), but she doesn't care what anybody thinks about her actions. Her "old-fashioned" parents want to know if we have the right to set some rules for her. We have asked her to be home by 1 a.m. when she goes out on a date. (She's been coming home anywhere from 2 a.m. to 4:30.) When we object to her going to her boyfriend's apartment to watch TV for an evening she says we have "dirty minds."

She tells us if we don't "get off her back" she will move out and rent with girlfriends. Of course she is trying to assert her independence, but we think she's overdoing it. Please give us bewildered parents some guidelines. — BEWILDERED DEAR BEWILDERED: Tell your daughter to sit down with a pencil and paper and figure out exactly how "independent" she is. Advise her that when she is able to support herself entirely—and that means pay for room, board, clothes, transportation, entertainment, travel, doctor, dentist, and insurance, then she may live where she chooses, and by her own rules. But as long as she lives with you, she will have to live by yours.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Esther Novak, director of the Hispanic Arts Program at Rutgers University, has been named director of the National Endowment for the Arts' Office of Special Projects.

The Upper Room luncheon consisted of a pageant of song and a tableau of three women at the foot of Christ's cross. The narration related to events in the last week of Jesus' life, and the meal consisted of food which might have been consumed then.

The Rev. Steve Church was soloist. The three women who spoke in answer to the song "Were You There When They Crucified Our Lord?" were Mrs. McHargue, who played Mary, the mother of Jesus; Twana

Jim G. Tucker named director

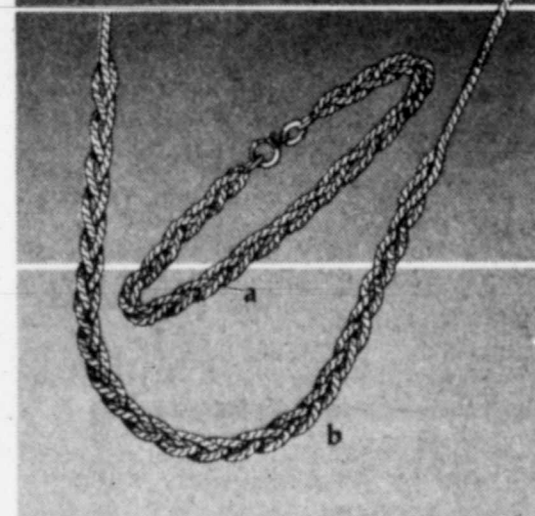

By MICHAEL PUTZEL Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON (AP) — White House officials have picked a former Democratic congressman from Arkansas to run the oft-delayed and sometimes-controversial White House Conference on Families, informed sources say. Former Rep. Jim Tucker Jr. was chosen by White House political advisers, sources in and out of government said Wednesday. The selection of Tucker, who served one term in the House before losing a race for the Senate last year, follows the resignations of the original executive director and chairman, and the withdrawal of one-time presidential candidate Sargent Shriver after he was offered the job late last year.

Convening the Conference on Families was one of President Carter's early and often-repeated campaign promises, but the various problems of the American family and disputes about who should head the conference have proved more complex than originally envisioned. The conference, first scheduled to be held this year, has been put off at least until 1981 by Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr., who was Carter's first adviser on families and was in charge of organizing the meeting.

Ironically, Califano's own marriage has broken up since he joined the administration. The conference was put off earlier this year after Patsy Fleming, a black divorcee who served as its first director, resigned rather than accept appointment of a white, Catholic male from an "intact" family as a co-director. The proposed co-director was never officially named. Following Ms. Fleming's departure, former HEW Secretary Wilbur Cohen resigned the conference chairmanship, a part-time policy-making post, citing health reasons. Cohen's health has since improved, and he now is devoting full time to fighting the Carter administration's proposed cuts in Social Security benefits. It was understood that Shriver, who also could be described as a white, Catholic male from an intact family, was offered the chairman's post by Califano, who has often worked with Shriver's wife, Eunice Kennedy Shriver, on issues affecting pregnant teenagers, the mentally ill and the disadvantaged. Former Rep. Tucker, 35, is from a politically prominent Little Rock family, and his older sister, Carol Tucker Foreman, is an assistant secretary of agriculture.

UT students studying only child

AUSTIN—What's it worth to be an only child? At The University of Texas, the going rate is $3.

That amount is being offered as an incentive for students without brothers or sisters to participate in a study of varying family configurations and their effects on child development.

The two-year study funded by a $70,000 grant from the National Institute of Child Health and Human Development is under the direction of Dr. Toni Falbo, assistant professor of educational psychology.

Dr. Falbo and the graduate students in educational psychology working with her have offered the nominal fee as an inducement to UT-Austin students to answer a questionnaire from which their findings will be gleaned.

Dr. Falbo is a specialist in population psychology, and her research has done much to abolish myths surrounding "onlies" in our society.

"Only children do fairly well for themselves," Dr. Falbo says modestly, being an only child herself.

She has found that onlies are less affiliative and less likely to join groups. But if they do, they are more likely to become leaders. They are more autonomous, less likely to follow the crowd. They are more cooperative and are generous, in contrast with the picture of greediness given in the only-child stereotype.

The current study will be comparing the significance of numerous influences on children, rather than just birth order, which Dr. Falbo says is somewhat akin to forecasting with astrology. She will be taking into account the significance of sex of the children and economic effects, family education, and the like in "investigating consequences of growing up with siblings," she says.

Consider R-Value in buying insulation

COLLEGE STATION—Always compare and buy insulation by R-value, a housing and home furnishing specialist, Pat Seaman, stresses.

R-value stands for the resistance of heat moving through insulation, she says.

Mrs. Seaman is with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

Heat always moves to cold.

During cold weather, insulation keeps warm air inside the house, and in hot weather insulation keeps warm air outside.

R-value actually measures the number of hours it takes one BTU of heat to travel through a certain thickness of insulation.

So for insulation with an R-11 rating, it takes 11 hours.

The higher the R-value, the longer it takes for heat loss or gain to occur through the insulation.

It is important to compare and buy insulation by R-value, not inches.

All products do not have the same R-value per inch.

Different composition and density of materials result in different R-values per inch.

Grandfather's advice saves youth's life

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Eight-year-old Willie Jenkins, who cannot swim, clung to a cushion for 12 hours, splashing to scare away alligators as he floated down a river after a nighttime boating accident.

Before the accident, Willie's grandfather had told him what to do in just such a case.

"He said his Poppy had told him before that if anything ever happened, to always hold on to a life preserver until help came," said the boy's uncle, Claude Watson.

Police rescued Willie Tuesday morning. Drifting 200 yards away was the body of his grandfather, Robert Watson, 56. He apparently drowned when their fishing boat turned over.

Jefferson County Sheriff James Scott said the youngster apparently was not injured.

"He was not suffering much from exposure, but he was very shook up when we told him about his grandfather," the sheriff said.

Scott said Watson, his wife, Eloise, and their grandson camped at the head of the Wacissa River in northern Florida Monday night. Willie and Watson went fishing for catfish, returned to camp, then set out again.

Mrs. Watson reported the two missing at 9:49 a.m. Tuesday, police said. Willie was hauled from the river at about 30 minutes later, ending a 12-hour ordeal.

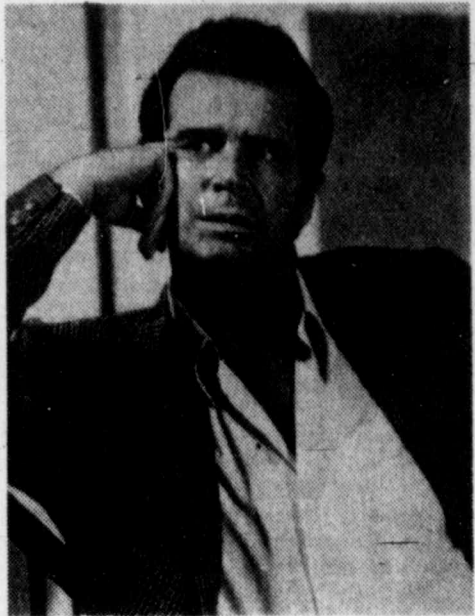

"When we found him he was about one mile down the river, 200 yards from where his grandfather's body was," said Ricky Andrews, a Wacissa resident who helped police in their search.

"He said there had been alligators swimming all around him during the night," said Andrews. The boy said he had scared the reptiles away by splashing in the water, Andrews said.

"That little boy will never forget that night as long as he lives," Andrews said.

Can nuclear industry survive Harrisburg?

EDITOR'S NOTE — A lot of things are bound to change for the nuclear industry in the wake of the Three Mile Island accident. Investigations, reappraisals, and reassessments are already under way, and they're likely to touch every major aspect of energy policy and energy technology.

By ANDREW SCHNEIDER

WASHINGTON (AP) — The scientist who wrote the textbook on risks of nuclear power says the nation will "learn more from the study of this one event at Three Mile Island than from 10 years of reactor experiments."

"Until now," said Dr. Norman Rasmussen of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, "we've only had hypothetical cases to deal with. Now we have the real thing."

Rasmussen is author of the "Rasmussen report," long considered the industry bible on reactor safety.

The accident at the atomic power plant near Harrisburg, Pa., has generated an intense review of the entire nuclear industry, its technology, safety, and future.

Within a week of the start of the nation's worst commercial nuclear accident, nine congressional inquiries were ordered. More have been scheduled, and a presidential commission will conduct an investigation.

"IT'S TIME TO STOP for a moment, find out how we got to where we are and determine if it's where we want to be," said Arizona Rep. Morris Udall, chairman of the House Interior Committee energy subcommittee. "If we don't do this now we may never get another chance."

The cry for a halt was picked up and echoed by hundreds of anti-nuclear groups throughout the country.

Several state officials also demanded a pause.

—In New York, Gov. Hugh Carey said he didn't think there would be any nuclear plants in New York's future "for many years."

—In South Carolina, Gov. Dick Riley said he would oppose any future nuclear energy facilities.

—In Oregon, on orders of the governor, the agency charged with approving new nuclear plants reopened hearings on a proposed twin-reactor unit along the Columbia River.

—IN MASSACHUSETTS, lawmakers voted 151-1 for a resolution urging Congress to halt the licensing of all new nuclear plants.

But other state leaders thought no action should be taken. One, Texas Gov. William Clements, even said, "There are four plants under construction. I wish we had eight."

Critics of nuclear programs said indications of human error and the failure of six safety systems at Harrisburg prove that atomic plants are unsafe.

Yet, industry spokesmen use the same data to argue that elaborate, duplicated safety systems eventually worked and prevented a catastrophe.

Rasmussen said the statistical analysis in his report envisioned a "a possible scenario of system failures" like those at the Pennsylvania plant.

"We knew it could happen some day, but we didn't expect it to happen now," Rasmussen said. "Our figures indicated that a series of problems such as reported at Three Mile Island could occur once in 20,000 reactor years. It happened in the first 500 years of operation and that was unexpected.

"It's like playing poker. You know that sooner or later you'll draw four aces. It could happen the first deal of the game or after playing for 25 years."

RASMUSSEN SAID HE remains confident of the safety of reactors but plans to reevaluate his statistical probabilities. "Harrisburg will be a learning experience, he said, adding, "Oh man, have we learned."

While technical experts debate the mechanical problems, government and industry leaders are agonizing over another critical problem raised by Harrisburg — public reaction.

—From Maine to California, anti-nuclear groups took to the streets with banners saying "No Nukes" and "No More Harrisburgs."

—In the state of Washington, a judge dismissed trespassing charges against 148 anti-nuclear demonstrators arrested last year for occupying the construction site of the Satsop nuclear power plant. The Gray Harbor, Wash., county attorney requested the charges be dropped because he said the Three Mile Island incident would make it impossible to find six impartial jurors.

"All the talk about radiation dangers may serve to regenerate the public's persistent belief that anything nuclear can produce a mushroom-shaped cloud," said Dr. Robert Taylor.

TAYLOR, FORMER DIRECTOR of the National Council on Radiation Protection, has been involved with the nation's atomic activities since the early 1930s.

"We started off with the bomb and that set a bad image," Taylor said. "If the first use of electricity had been the electric chair we'd still be fighting for the light bulb today."

The nuclear power industry was in trouble long before the Three Mile Island accident. Utilities, wary of the rising costs and regulatory problems, have for the past several years canceled more nuclear plant orders than they have placed. Last year saw 12 cancellations and only two orders.

The four makers of nuclear plants were hoping Congress would act this year to shorten the long period — now up to 12 years — between the time a utility decides to build a nuclear plant and the time it begins operation.

Industry leaders said President Carter, in his latest energy message, had planned to press for a law to gradually shorten that period to six years. They said the president would have pointed to nuclear power's good safety record.

INSTEAD, AFTER Three Mile Island, Carter announced appointment of a panel to recommend improving the safety of nuclear plants.

Energy Secretary James Schlesinger said the administration will submit a bill to shorten regulatory delays, but its chances of passage seem slight.

For all the problems, some utilities remain devoted to nuclear power. "The way I see it, the country has absolutely no alternative," said O.J. Peterson III, the treasurer of Virginia Electric & Power Co., which is building three nuclear plants. "If they can't develop nuclear, they won't have enough energy."

Reason for climbing? The mountain is there

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — Gaurishankar is there — and that's reason enough for John Roskelley to want to do something about it.

The 30-year-old mountaineer left recently for an assault on the 23,000-foot virgin peak in Nepal. And after that joint American-Nepalese project is completed, Roskelley said he plans to lead an expedition to the top of the 20,000-foot Uli Biaho Tower in the Karakoram range in Pakistan.

"It's compulsive. It's not something I want to go out and do every day, but it sits in the back of my mind and I have to go," he explained before leaving for Nepal. "I don't think many athletes can tell you why they do what they do. They know they are drawn, but not why."

"In my sport, if you don't prepare for it every day, you are not ready for it mentally, and you aren't as willing or as well equipped to risk your neck."

A mountaineer can handle only about two major climbs a year, he said. The average international climb takes about two months.

A veteran Himalayan climber, Roskelley has scaled two of the 10 highest peaks in the world, but he's still plagued by the question, "When are you going to climb Everest?"

"Everest is not the hardest, it's the highest," said Roskelley, a graduate of Washington State University. "There have been more people on top of Everest than almost any mountain around."

But unclimbed mountains offer no more challenge to Roskelley than those ascended many times by other climbers, he said, and he looks forward to each new climb as though it were his first. "I know I'm very good at it, but I still get this queasy feeling."

Few adventurers are paid for climbing mountains, but the best often receive, without charge, the gear they use and promote. And Roskelley's peak-top photography and country-wide lectures are beginning to pay off — or at least foot the bill to the next peak.

Leaving his wife, Joyce, and their daughter, Dawn, 12, for extended periods is not easy. "It tears me up, especially the first few hours," he said. But he said his wife understands. He met her climbing, though she has since given up the sport.

An ideal climber is competitive but cautious, pleasant, patient and hard-working with a sense of humor, Roskelley said.

"Climbing a mountain is only 25 percent of the job," he said. "You spend your time in freezing weather, making or breaking camp, putting on or taking off soggy, bulky clothes (which can take an hour), and getting the cramps out of your legs."

"You spend night after night in the same sleeping bag, and the snow never packs under your hips so they fit."

A climber never knows when he'll get hit by a rock or buried alive in an avalanche, but often mishaps are more the fault of the man than the mountain, Roskelley said.

The alpinist remembers only too well those expeditions which claimed the lives of fellow climbers.

"In 1974, we were on a slope on Peak 19 in the Russian Pamirs (a then unclimbed face). It was our last camp before the summit."

While heavy winds slammed into falling snow, the four Americans on the expedition set up two tents and made camp. At 2 a.m., an avalanche buried one tent and inundated the other. Roskelley and his partner rescued one climber, but another died.

Roskelley said the exhilaration felt on the way up a mountain can turn to depression on the way down. "The joy is in the achievement and returning to the humdrum business of mowing lawns and washing dishes is kind of a let down," he said. "And realizing you have to wait six months to go after another peak doesn't help."

Saccharin should be phased out, panel says

WASHINGTON (AP) — The artificial sweetener saccharin should be phased out of the marketplace over three years, says the head of a scientific panel studying the sugar substitute's health risks.

Dr. Frederick Robbins, head of the National Academy of Sciences' panel, called for the slow withdrawal of saccharin in testimony Wednesday before a House health subcommittee.

"We don't have to be panicky about it," he said.

Robbins, a pediatrician, is dean of Case Western Reserve University's School of Medicine.

Saccharin is popularly used in diet drinks and low-calorie processed foods.

Concern about the sweetener stems from research tests linking it with bladder cancer in male rats.

Based on the tests, the Food and Drug Administration proposed a ban on the chemical as a food additive in 1977. But Congress placed an 18-month moratorium on the proposed ban and asked for a National Academy of Sciences study.

The moratorium expires May 24, unless Congress extends it.

Last month, the academy's 37-member panel of scientists, lawyers and public policy experts reported that saccharin must be viewed as a potential cancer-causing substance in humans.

Business Mirror Project ICONE will benefit small businesses

NEW YORK (AP) — In a period of just five days in Manila, said William McCrea, the executive of a small business "can accomplish more than he could in two years running around the world."

During those few days in the Philippines, from June 24 to June 29, hundreds of entrepreneurs, bankers, advisers from large corporations, government officials and others will gather for Project ICONE.

The acronym, and the name — The International Congress on New Enterprise — might disconcert people into thinking it governmental. It is, to an extent, but its spirit is private sector.

Out of it, says McCrea, its chairman, small businesses from both emerging and developed nations might find profitable alliances in each other's countries. It will be catalytic, he says. A first ever.

Businesses in emerging nations can benefit from the know-how of foreign companies. That is understood. But McCrea explains that small concerns in developed nations also need contacts in emerging nations.

The latter point is often ignored, says McCrea. But, in dealing with business worldwide, he finds such contacts are mutually beneficial.

Beneficial, that is, if such barriers as inability to identify and evaluate opportunities, costs concerns and worries about the mechanics of foreign trade can be pushed aside. And that's the reason for ICONE.

Supported by the Philippines, the U.S. Commerce Department, the U.S. Agency for International Development, Control Data Corp., the World Bank and others, ICONE will assemble those who can break the barriers.

McCrea, whose idea it is, promises "it will be a concentrated, practical program for those looking for ventures with a partner in other countries," with benefits accruing to those from both industrial and emerging nations.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market recorded a slight loss Thursday in a quiet pre-holiday season. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial slipped 1.21 to 870.50, concluding the week with a net loss of 5.19 points.

That ended a string of five consecutive weekly gains for the average, during which it climbed almost 60 points. New York Stock Exchange volume slowed to a 2 1/2-week low of 26.78 million shares, against 32.90 million Wednesday.

One notable exception to the generally sluggish trend was Cyprus Mines, a producer of copper, lead and zinc, which jumped 9 3/4% to 36 3/4, a 4 p.m. close in New York.

The Jewish observance of Passover began Wednesday at sundown, and the markets will be closed for Good Friday.

F.W. Woolworth led the active list, off 1/4 at 29 1/2. Bally Manufacturing rose 1 3/4 in active trading. Declines outnumbered advances by slightly more than a 4-3 margin in the daily tally on the NYSE, and the exchange's composite index dropped .12 to 57.53.

Standard & Poor's index of 400 industrial lost .38 to 1137.2, and S&P's 500-stock composite index was down .31 to 102.00.

Ford Motor gained 1 to 44 1/2. Halliburton fell 4 3/4 to 66 1/2.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index slipped 10 to 180.32. The NAS-DAQ composite index over the counter market closed at 133.54, off .03.

Lottie's happy, despite limited income, mobility

EDITOR'S NOTE: Senior citizens lead diverse lives, with a few common problems but many differences in the way they live. This is the sixth of a seven-part series on Midland's elderly. The final part, to be published Saturday, will include an overview of services Midland provides for its older population.

By LINDA HILL
Staff Writer

Living on Supplemental Security Income — $187 a month — for Lottie Raphe means buying second-hand clothes and trying unsuccessfully for two years to save enough money for a fence around the house.

The 77-year-old woman spent her working years as a maid and taking care of children.

"I never did like cooking too much because I never made a very good cook," she said.

Miss Raphe was born in Pittsburg, Texas, in 1902. She moved as an adult to California.

She never married. "I wanted to kind of look around," she explained, adding that she was afraid a husband would leave her with children to raise by herself.

Moving to Midland to be close to a sister, Miss Raphe purchased the small frame house where she lives for $500, so she doesn't have to pay rent.

Over a two-year period, Christmas in April, a local house-repairing program, has done some "fixing up" on her house. But the painting isn't finished, and the bathroom still needs working on, she said.

One air conditioning window unit from her Chihuahua, Sandy, which, she explained, is her "partner."

But something has always come up to take the money she's saved for that purpose.

She has a television set, but said she is afraid to watch it much because the wiring in her house is faulty. Instead, she reads, writes a lot of letters and sews some.

And, she said, she visits with her neighbors and her sister, who lives close by.

Her trips from the house are limited by her not having her own transportation. She likes to walk, when her foot isn't hurting her, but must rely on others to get past easy walking distance.

The Midland Community Action Agency takes her to the doctor when she needs to go, but that's the only provides cooling. Carpet given her by a neighbor brightens the living room.

Miss Raphe used to get food stamps and still is eligible, but she said it's too much trouble to get someone to take her to get the stamps. Groceries cost her "$60 a month or more."

Utilities aren't too much of a problem, Miss Raphe contended, with her highest gas bill last year about $30.

Medicare and Medicaid take care of her doctor and medication bills, she said, so that doesn't have to come out of the check.

But, all the same, there isn't much for extras.

The $42 price tag on special shoes she had to get after foot surgery was enough to be a significant burden.

She buys clothes second-hand. "You get some pretty good clothes, too," she said, pointing to a fur-collared coat she bought for $4.

"I needed one (a coat) because I didn't have one."

Miss Raphe would like to have a fence built to keep other dogs away organized transportation system she uses.

"I have such a wonderful neighbor. She takes me everywhere," Miss Raphe said.

In a typical week, she will leave her house perhaps three times — once to go to the grocery store or the laundry and twice to church activities.

The literature scattered around the small living room bears testimony to Miss Raphe's interest in her church, Jehovah's Witness.

Miss Raphe's parents belonged to the Holiness Church, a fact that she said has contributed to her longevity and relative good health.

"It was a sin to do everything (unhealthy)...That was a big help," she explained.

She doesn't like being limited in how far she walks, and worries about falling. A brother stays with her from time to time, but doesn't live there because "I'm too strict."

All in all, Miss Raphe said she is happy, despite her limited income and limited mobility.

GOP hopefuls top $4 million

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — With 19 months remaining before the election, Republican presidential hopefuls have already raised more than $4 million for the 1980 campaign, according to financial reports made public this week.

For sheer fund-raising speed, however, none of the Republicans was a match for President Carter, who has taken in $305,000 since he formally launched his re-election campaign just two weeks ago.

Reports filed by Carter and several of his GOP challengers show that the oil and gas industry has been particularly generous, with major oil contributions going to Carter and two Texas Republicans, John Connally and George Bush.

The reports also show that individual contributors run the gamut from captains of industry and political appointees to some Chinese waiters in Chicago who are backing Carter — and a high school boy in Dallas who is listed as contributing $1,000 to Bush.

The leader in the campaign finance sweepstakes so far is Republican Philip Crane, the conservative Illinois congressman, who has used a polished direct-mail effort to raise about $1.7 million over the past eight months.

Crane, a former Treasury secretary and once governor of Texas, has raised $1.2 million since he declared his candidacy 2 1/2 months ago. Bush, a former U.N. ambassador and ex-CIA director, reported receipts of $663,000, former California Gov. Ronald Reagan $527,000, Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., $48,000 and Sen. Howard Baker, R-Tenn., $45,000.

Other Republican hopefuls have not yet compiled totals.

Most of the candidates have raised the bulk of their money from large contributors — those giving more than $100 — but Crane is an exception to this rule. About 83 percent of his funds have come in smaller checks from some 70,000 respondents to the flood of fundraising letters he has sent out to selected mailing lists around the nation.

Crane has spent nearly $1 million on fund raising, most of it in fees to his direct-mail wizard, Richard A. Viguerie, of Falls Church, Va. The Crane effort has also run up enormous postage bills, and a debt of $92,000 just for envelopes in the first three months of this year.

But, while Crane has spent more money than other candidates on fund raising, he has provided the sloppiest reporting of any of the hopefuls.

TIA hikes its offer

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas International Airlines has increased its merger offer to National Airlines in its attempt to gain control of the carrier.

A Texas International spokesman said Thursday the new offer consists of $15 cash and $35 principal amount of an 11 1/2 percent senior sinking fund debenture.

High interest rates will lead to crunch

The Los Angeles Times

WESTWOOD, Calif. — Interest rates will rise again this year, leading to "an economic semi-crunch, which is precisely what we need," the head of the nation's second largest bank contends.

Walter B. Wriston, chairman of New York-based Citibank, told a Dean's Forum audience at University of California at Los Angeles that tightening monetary policy is one of the hopeful signs in the fight against inflation.

The nation is beginning to face up to the political decisions necessary to halt inflation, he said, but "until we get our arms around the money creation machinery we are in trouble."

The speech was sponsored by the UCLA Graduate School of Management.

Wriston said that voluntary wage and price guidelines will not do the job of halting inflation. "In my opinion, they are a denial of the process of human freedom because they keep people from selling goods or labor for fair market value," he said.

The way to stop inflation is to control federal deficit spending, Wriston said, but that entails difficult political choices.

"We won't stop inflation until more people are hurt by it then benefit from it, and believe me, inflation benefits many people," he said.

Clinic offers peace of mind

CINCINNATI (AP) — Warning! Dieting can be hazardous to your health.

That's the label three psychologists have put on what they feel is one of America's most dangerous myths.

"Dieting often does as much good as holding your breath," said Wayne Wooley. "It's contrary to what the body is geared to do."

"Whole lives can be controlled by feelings of fatness," added Wooley's associate, Susan Dyrenforth. "It's a myth we all participate in. What we ask is that people quit living in a myth of self-hatred and start living in the real world."

What Wooley, Ms. Dyrenforth and Wooley's wife, Susan, offer is a unique concept.

For five years, their Clinic for Eating Disorders has been trying to get people used to the reality of their weight.

They offer no magic diets, no promise of weight loss. In fact, after 15 weeks of going to weekly clinics, most people show an average weight loss of four pounds.

The cost of treatment at the clinic, which is part of the department of psychiatry at the University of Cincinnati College of Medicine, is $45 a week for either a two-hour group session or a one-hour individual session.

What the clinic does offer is peace of mind. The clinic's message is simple: If it feels good to eat that hamburger, maybe it would be better to go ahead and eat it instead of trying to starve.

In fact, the three psychologists have found that dieting seldom does any good in the long run for many of their clients.

"Being hungry sets off an evolutionary alarm, a panic reaction far stronger, because it is more fundamental than any motivation to become thin," Ms. Dyrenforth said. "I'm going to starve!" the alarm says. The body fights back. It wants to live."

All of the 200 patients the three have seen in the past five years have something in common. All have spent years trying to lose weight. And they all have run the dietary gauntlet while trying to achieve the ideal of the slim American. In fact, no one can enroll in the clinic until they have tried a reputable diet program.

"Using the breath image again, we try to get them to breathe a little less each time until it becomes a habit," said Ms. Dyrenforth. "They learn to control their intake and boost their self-esteem."

When a typical clinic group of a half-dozen people — mostly women — gathers at weekly meetings, they discuss the detailed records they've kept during the week. The records show when a food was eaten and where it was eaten. The patient also rates, on a scale of one to five, how pleasurable it was to eat each food item.

"We want to get the pleasure rating up as high as possible," said Wooley. "One of the problems of overweight people is their ideal is not eating — the feeling that when you're eating, you're bad."

Lietzke leading Masters

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Bruce Lietzke was amazed. "It's very surprising," he said Thursday after becoming a reluctant leader in the opening round of the 43rd Masters Golf Tournament with a 5-under-par 67. "I don't have the confidence in my shots to win the tournament," Lietzke said. "I don't know where the shots came from today, but maybe it's the start of the confidence I need."

The 27-year-old Tucson Open winner confessed to being in a trance when he put together four straight birdies on the back side of the picturesque 7,040-yard, par-72 Augusta National Golf Club course to forge ahead of the select international field of 72 players.

"I was in a trance until the 17th hole," he said. "I had a 5-foot putt there to break it. If I had made it, I very well could have birdied the 18th."

Instead, he settled for a par at 17 and then got his only bogey of the day at 18. It left him little daylight, looking over his shoulder at two of the top shot-makers in the game — Tom Watson, the favorite and Player of the Year in 1977 and 1978, and Jack Nicklaus, showing signs of overcoming perhaps the worst slump of his career.

Watson, leading money winner this season, was tied at 68 with three unexpected first-round contenders — Leonard Thompson, Joe Inman and Ed Sneed.

Despite ideal weather, Nicklaus, who had a 69, labeled it "the kind of course you could not take a run at" because of difficult pin placements.

"There were seven holes today where if you put the ball on the wrong side of the hole, you could putt it right off the green," the five-time Masters champion said. "My putting was okay, I just didn't make much."

"You always breathe a sigh of relief when you have a good round... especially when you are not sure what you might shoot when you start out," Nicklaus added, after only his second subpar round in the 15 he has played so far this season.

"I'm very satisfied with the round," he said. "It puts a lot of confidence back in my head."

The 69 left Nicklaus in a tie with former U.S. Open winner Lou Graham, young pros Andy Bean and Craig Stadler and the 1970 Masters champ, Billy Casper, who at 47 said he "struck a blow for the old folks."

Veteran Rod Funseth, who surprisingly tied for second here last year, and Ray Floyd, winner of last week's Greater Greensboro Open, were in a group at 70. South African Gary Player, the defending champion, was one of eight players in at 1-under 71.

ale Irwin, often a contender but never a winner in the Masters, had a 72, while Tom Weiskopf, Lee Trevino, Ben Crenshaw and Lanny Wadkins were in a large group at 73.

Wadkins, only two-time winner on tour this year, appeared to have his game going again when he toured the front side in 4-under.

Then, disaster struck. Wadkins went double bogey-bogey-double bogey around Augusta National's "Amen Corner" to open the back nine and took another bogey at No. 14 for a fat 41.

Arnold Palmer, a four-time Masters champion who used this tournament to become the game's most popular player, recovered from a double bogey and three bogeys on the first five holes to record a 74.

Lietzke, appearing in only his second Masters, said it "was an easy stroll in the park. I never was in trouble. It could have been a course record if I had putted well. I had it in there close a number of times."

The former University of Houston golfer 2-putted eight times from 15 feet or less.

"If this had been any other tournament than the Masters, I'd probably be home fishing right now," Lietzke said.

Watson, who won here two years ago and finished second last year, said he played at ease through the tough stretch — Nos. 10, 11 and 12 — with a pair of birdies and a par.

"You feel like when you play those holes in even par, you're getting away with murder," Watson said.

He reached 5-under for the day on the long par-5 13th, but then took a bogey-6 at No. 15, another of the prime birdie holes at Augusta, missing an opportunity to at least share the first-round lead.

Umps gain more support for strike

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The six-week-old major league umpires strike is gaining support and sympathizers, says veteran umpire Doug Harvey.

"The thing is starting to swing our way," said Harvey, optimistic after amateur umpire associations in Cleveland and San Diego voted to honor the strike.

Harvey, a veteran National League umpire, said the ball players are already putting pressure to have the amateur umpires removed.

"The situation with the amateur umpires is getting worse," he said.

He praised the San Diego County Umpires Association Thursday for unanimously voting not to work this weekend's games between the San Diego Padres and the Cincinnati Reds.

Harvey, a resident of San Diego, thanked his former colleagues for "standing up — which is American — to keep us from being stomped into the ground."

He said the players can no longer tolerate the missed calls, adding that three veteran members of the Los Angeles Dodgers have called for getting the regular umpires back.

Cincinnati catcher Johnny Bench, asked how long he could accept working with amateurs, said: "My acceptance has ended."

"In my estimation," said Harvey, "at least 15 hit-by-pitches occurred in one day. Another thing, balks and half-swings are not being called. I called five balks watching television the other day. Balks have to be called early in the spring to let the pitcher know he can't get away with them."

Pickets manned by striking major league umpires, their wives and children will be in front of San Diego Stadium tonight, he said.

The Padres announced they have "some other guys ready to work," adding that "a number of amateur umpires came in this morning offering their services."

Lee nabs 10-8 baseball win field by Robert Perez that enabled two runs to score on a fly ball which was misplayed.

Lee cut the 7-3 lead to 7-5 in the fourth inning by scoring two runs. Tyler Alcorn singled, Lee Johnson was hit by a pitch and Perez was safe on an infield single and error. Calhoun walked with the bases loaded to force in the other run of the inning.

Then in the sixth, Lee took the lead for good with a three-run outburst and an 8-7 lead. Wade Cartwright's two-run single was the big blow and Willis also knocked in another run with his third hit of the game.

IN THE SEVENTH, Lee added two more runs on walks to Danny Rabb and Gary Wood along with White ramming a long double to the fence in left for a 10-7 advantage.

Cartwright, who came in to relieve Alan Koonce in the third inning, picked up the win with some relief help from Willis who pitched the final two innings.

Odessa staged a mild rally in the bottom of the seventh inning by scoring a run off Willis on base hits by Mario Alvarado and Andy Been along with an error by Wood at second, giving the Bronchos their eighth unearned run on a platter.

Lee is now 15-9 on the year and 1-0 in the second half while OHS is 5-17 and 0-1.

Not to be outdone, Odessa tallied four runs in the third inning on only two hits as the Rebs committed two more errors. The big one was in right

Cubs, Diablos try to open season

The Texas League moved into its third day today and the standings for the West Division show High Winds two wins and no losses and Midland-El Paso 0-2.

The Cubs and Diablos, after being blow out of the tub the first two nights, will try again tonight at 7:30 in Cubs Stadium and at this stage of the game managers Randy Hundley of Midland and Moose Stubing of El Paso "may not care who wins or loses, just so long as we play a game."

Henry Mack, Midland's starting pitcher, and his El Paso counterpart Ken Schrom have been waiting around so long they are developing an armed-service complex, you know, "hurry-up and wait and wait and wait."

There have been so many first-week postponements, the rumor is circulating that this year's Texas League season is a figment of the imagination, but President Carl Sawatski assures, "reports of the Texas League's death are greatly exaggerated." Just a few technical difficulties and once adjusted the league will be back on the air. He adds, "It may not be evident at this time, but there is a Texas League and it is alive, but not visible at this stage of the season."

Actually, the wind-buffed Tall City is counting its blessings in view of the havoc wrought in tornado decimated North Central Texas and gladly settles for the alternative.

The Cubs will play at 7:30 p.m. today with games scheduled through Monday. General Manager Bill Rigney, Jr., has not announced if he plans to reschedule any of the blown-out games as doubleheaders in this series or wait until the next time the Diablos come to Midland.

Cubs Stadium ticket prices are $2.50 Nor box seats, $2 for general admission, $1.50 for senior citizens and students and $1 for children, which rank as the most reasonable in the Texas League.

CUB TRACKS—Midland and El Paso ranked one-two in team hitting last year with the Diablos leading the league with a .289 mark and Midland had a .283 team average...El Paso hit 165 homes to 84 for the Cubs, but the Cubs stole 182 bases to 91 for the Diablos, ranking second only to San Antonio, which stole 204 bases...

Bulldogs rally to topple Odessa Permian, 4-3

By RICHARD VINCENT Sports Writer

The Midland High Bulldogs may have been temporarily down, but ladies and gentlemen, they sure weren't out.

Thursday afternoon at Memorial Stadium diamond, the Purple Pack roared back from a three-run deficit with four runs in the fifth inning and held on to defeat Odessa Permian, 4-3, in a District 5-4A baseball game.

The victory gives the Bulldogs a 1-0 mark for the second half of district and a 12-5 ledger overall. Mojo went to 0-1 and 13-7, respectively.

BULLDOG COACH Larry Peel was a bit surprised with his team's late inning intensity. "After the two hard losses to Cooper and Lee, I didn't think we'd be mentally at our peak and we were a little more down than I thought," he said. "We woke up just in time to win."

Peel added that the win came at the right time. "This one here is extra big because we had lost two straight," he said. "We can't lose any games this half."

Kelly Lilly, who relieved starter Archie Booth in the fifth and completed the game, recorded the triumph as he held Mojo hitless. Peel said he went with Lilly against the fast ball hitting Panthers because of the senior's good curve ball.

"I had to hook on him about three times," said a smiling Peel of Lilly, who got into a couple of jams because of walks.

Midland High stranded seven runners in the contest while Mojo left 11 on base, including twice with the sacks packed.

In the second, the Bulldogs had the bases jammed but couldn't tally. Sam Driskill reached on a fielders choice and when Booth made second on an error and bad throw, the Packs designated hitter hustled to third. Paul Cox was then hit by a pitch. But Bobby Stovall grounded to pitcher Kenny Holden, who forced Driskill at the plate. Then Booth was forced at home when catcher Doak Huddleston dropped a third strike and tossed to Holden, who was covering, ending the uprising.

MOJO GOT its only runs of the game in the third inning when they put together four of the five hits they had for the day. Gary Smith hit into a force out and went to second when Holden grounded out. Vic Vines then unloaded a sharp single to left that chased in Smith. Roger Lightfoot blooped a single to shallow left that moved Vines to second. Huddleston then walked, loading them up for Scott Wynne, who lashed a base hit to center, scoring Vines and Lightfoot.

Booth had trouble in the fourth, but averted disaster. With two down, he hit Smith with a pitch before Holden reached on an error and Vines walked. Lightfoot, however, popped out to Tracy Gann.

Then in the fifth, Huddleston opened with a double. Peel immediately brought in Lilly, who walked the next two batters before eventually whiffing Danny Herrera and getting Terry Brown to ground out.

BUT THE BIG play in the fifth, and of the game according to Peel, was a pitchout when Mojo tried to suicide squeeze Huddleston from third. Bulldog catcher Tommy Munoz ran down Huddleston and tagged him out while the Panthers watched in stunned disbelief.

It was the second straight game that the Bulldogs have sensed the suicide squeeze coming and pitched out. Peel said the play is a "read-between the pitcher and catcher."

And the Pack had another super defensive play earlier when center-fielder Gann, on the first play of the game, went backwards to grab Holden's shot at the fence.

Midland High's offense was mostly confined to the fifth frame. With one away, Michael Feldt pounded a double through the gap. He scored when Munoz ripped a ground rule double.

Next, Jimmy Zachry walked and Holden was removed for Conley Crawford. It didn't make much difference to the Pack, though. Gann hammered a base hit that sent Munoz home and then Zachry tallied on Driskill's base hit to left. Cox knocked in the winning run when he singled crisply up the middle, scoring Gann from the keystone.

Permian appeared in good scoring shape in the sixth. Two walks got things going for Mojo before Bulldog second baseman David Zarate slipped trying to force Holden at second enabling Vines to reach, and loading the bases.

Lilly did his thing, however, and fanned two in a row before Wynne popped out. And in the seventh, Lilly put the Panthers down in order.

The Bulldogs will now take a well-deserved Easter vacation before facing Big Spring Tuesday at Memorial Stadium field.

Milner, Robinson pace Pittsburgh over Cards

By The Associated Press
For Don Robinson, it's a matter of control. For John Milner, it's a matter of self-control.
Robinson, whose wildness cost him a chance at a victory last weekend, was razor sharp on the mound for Pittsburgh Thursday night.
And Milner, once an unhappy starter on the mediocre New York Mets but now a satisfied reserve with the Pirates, made the most of a rare opportunity.
Those two performances helped the Pirates halt a three-game tailspin and turn back the previously unbeaten St. Louis Cardinals 3-1.
In the rest of the National League, the Mets shaded Philadelphia 3-2, Atlanta clobbered Los Angeles 10-2 and San Francisco edged San Diego 4-3.
"Giving up no walks is a lot more gratifying than getting nine strikeouts," said Robinson, who did both against the Cards. "I gave up seven hits and if I walked a couple it would have been like giving them nine."

Milner, who usually rides the bench, got his shot when starting first baseman Willie Stargell sat down with a bruised hip. "I know what my job is here," he said. "I have to be ready to go when they need me."
He was, getting three of Pittsburgh's 10 hits. In the sixth inning, after Omar Moreno walked and Dave Parker tripled to tie it 1-1, Milner pulled a double down the right field to put the Pirates ahead to stay.
Mets 3, Phillies 2
The Phils had plenty of punch against Pat Zachry, but not when it counted. The Mets' slender right-hander survived a 12-hit barrage by squeezing out of one jam after another. His biggest feat was getting Pete Rose out four times with Phils in scoring position.

"I have no special feelings about Pete Rose. I was just out there trying to get him out," said Zachry.
Last year he showed more than enough feeling. When he gave up a single during Rose's hitting streak, he took out his frustration by kicking a dugout step and kicking himself right out of the second half of the season with a broken bone in his right foot.
The most damaging hit off Zachry was Garry Maddox's home run. The most damaging off loser Randy Lerch was Lee Mazzilli's fifth-inning double. Mazzilli stole third and came home with the winning run on Kelvin Chapman's sacrifice fly.
Braves 10, Dodgers 2
Four runs batted in by Barry Bonnell and the four-hit pitching of Larry McWilliams carried the Braves past Los Angeles, which lost for the third straight time after winning four in a row.
Bonnell hit his third homer, a two-run shot, off Andy Messersmith in the second inning and ripped a two-run double in the ninth. Dale Murphy also homered for Atlanta.
Giants 4, Padres 3
San Diego pitcher Eric Rasmussen breezed through the first seven hitters he faced, then ran headlong into trouble. Before he got out of it he'd given up a San Francisco run in the third and three in the fourth, two on Darrell Evans' homer.
Dave Winfield hit a two-run homer for the Padres.

Harrah's error helps Rangers

By The Associated Press
There was Toby Harrah playing third base for the Cleveland Indians ... and there was Buddy Bell at bat wearing the red, white and blue of the Texas Rangers.
And then there was Harrah later wearing a red face.
"You can see why I'm glad to be out of Dallas," said Harrah after being charged with a costly error that handed the Rangers a 5-3 victory over his Indians Thursday night. "I don't know who the scorer was — but he missed the play. The ball hit the heel of my glove. It was a hit, not an error."
A once-popular figure with the Rangers, Harrah's latter years in Texas were not the happiest of his professional life. He had an especially tough time with the press because of his erratic fielding. And, it seems, he's still carrying a grudge against the Texas writers.
"The writers forget that I only made 11 errors last year," said Harrah with a trace of bitterness in his voice. "And I played about 50 of the games at shortstop."
Ironically, Harrah's bases-loaded error in the third inning that opened the gates for three Cleveland runs was made off a ground ball hit by Bell, the very player that he was traded for.
"I thought I hit the ball pretty good," said Bell, perhaps trying to lift the goat's mantle off Harrah's shoulders. "You have to have some sympathy for any player who makes an error. Toby's a good player, though. It won't affect him."
In other American League games, the California Angels stopped the Minnesota Twins 7-1; the New York Yankees beat the Baltimore Orioles 5-0; the Boston Red Sox stopped the Milwaukee Brewers 12-10; the Toronto Blue Jays outscored the Chicago White Sox 9-7 and the Seattle Mariners edged the Oakland A's 4-3.
The Rangers loaded the bases in the third on walks to Bump Wills and Billy Sample and an infield single by Al Oliver. Then Harrah let Bell's grounder roll through his legs, scoring two runs.
John Ellis followed with an RBI single for Texas' final run of the inning. Sample drilled an RBI single in the fourth for the final run off starter and loser Rick Waits. Texas scored an insurance run in the eighth on a home run by Oscar Gamble off reliever Victor Cruz.
Angels 7, Twins 1
Willie Mays Aikens drove in three runs with a homer and a sacrifice fly, and Chris Knapp scattered four hits to lead California over Minnesota.
In the second inning, Don Baylor doubled and was caught in a rundown on Joe Rudi's fielder's choice grounder before Aikens hit his first major league homer, a blast over the right field fence off Roger Erikson. In the fourth, Aikens doubled and scored on a double by Bobby Grich. And in the fifth, after former Twin Rod Carew drew a walk and took third on another double by Baylor, Aikens hit a sacrifice fly off reliever Jeff Holly.

Yankees 5, Orioles 0
Graig Nettles and Chris Chambliss cracked successive home runs to ignite a five-run New York burst in the second inning and Tommy John pitched a three-hitter as the Yankees defeated Baltimore.
Nettles, who went 6-for-13 in the three-game series at Baltimore with six RBI, connected off Mike Flanagan after a leadoff single by Reggie Jackson. Two pitches later Chambliss homered.
John allowed only one hit after easing out of a bases-loaded jam in the first inning and recorded 18 outs on grounders.
John's superb performance had the Orioles continuously checking the ball for scuff marks.
"When you get a lot of outs on grounders," John said, "all of a sudden they say you're doing something to the ball or throwing a spitter."
Red Sox 12, Brewers 10
Jim Dwyer's first American League hit, a two-run pinch single with two outs in the ninth inning, led Boston over Milwaukee. Loser Reggie Cleveland walked Jim Rice to start the ninth and Carl Yastrzemski, who hit a grand slam homer in the seventh, followed with a single off Jerry Augustine.
George Scott then bunted past pitcher Bill Castro and beat it out to load the bases with none out. Jack Brohamer then grounded to Castro, who started a double play by way of home plate. Dwight Evans was walked intentionally to reload the bases, and Dwyer followed with a line single to left.
Blue Jays 9, White Sox 6
Rick Cerone's three-run homer capped a six-run, eighth-inning rally to lead Toronto over Chicago. A leadoff homer by Rico Carty and a two-run single by Roy Howell preceded Cerone's big hit.
"I'm not a home-run hitter and I wasn't thinking of home runs when I got up there," said Cerone. "In fact, I didn't think it was going out, but the wind helped it a little. I did know it was deep enough to score the tying run from third."
Mariners 4, A's 3
Pinch-runner Joe Simpson scored on a passed ball in the eighth inning as Seattle rallied to edge Oakland. Simpson ran for Bruce Bochte, who reached on first baseman Jeff Newman's error which let Seattle's Dan Meyer score the tying run.
Simpson was sacrificed to second, took third after walks to Ruppert Jones and Bill Stein and scored the winning run on a passed ball by catcher Jim Essian.

Women scribes to wait

CINCINNATI (AP) — Women sports writers who want to interview any of the Cincinnati Reds after a home baseball game will have to wait for the players to be brought to an interview room in the team clubhouse.
That's the way it is at most other major league ballparks, although some teams do allow women in the players' locker room.
The restrictions infuriate some women writers. Most players don't care if the women are in or out, according to an informal sampling.
"I have no opinion on that. I don't want to get involved in that," said second baseman Joe Morgan, who usually takes a more definitive stand on issues. "They can do whatever they want. I let you guys (male sports writers) in here. Might as well let them in."
Johnny Bench heard Morgan begging off. "If Joe wants 'em in, it's fine with me," Bench needed.
"Bleep the bleeping bleepers," added Tom Seaver, supplying his own bleeps.
The subject clearly was a yawn to the veterans, but the presence of two women reporters created a scene in the Atlanta Braves' clubhouse during a series with the Reds earlier this week in Atlanta.
Braves officials gave the women, who were covering the game, permission to go into the clubhouse. That caught some of the Braves by surprise, however.
Outfielder Barry Bonnell, a Milford, Ohio, native, was in his underwear and ordered the women to leave.
"I wouldn't have been a man if I hadn't said something about it," Bonnell said. "I would have been betraying my (Mormon) beliefs. This kind of thing is not right. Obviously, women do not belong here."
After that, women were barred from the Atlanta clubhouse until the team buys robes so players can cover up.
Bench was sympathetic with problems women reporters face because they're barred from some dressing rooms, but ace reliever Doug Bair took a more traditional view.
"From their standpoint, they're coming in to get a story. They're not looking for pin-up stories," Bench said.
"If they're legitimate (reporters) they should be allowed in," pitcher Bill Bonham agreed.
"I don't approve of it," countered Bair. "It's going to cause too many problems. I have no feeling as far as all that baloney about women's lib — that's great if they want to do that — but it would be a lot simpler if they didn't make an appearance (in the clubhouse)."

Bird may trade sneakers for baseball spikes soon

TERRE HAUTE, Ind. (AP) — Larry Bird may trade his sneakers in for a pair of spikes later this month.
The All-America basketball player may play for Indiana State's baseball team in a varsity double-header against Butler on April 29. He probably would be used as a designated hitter or at first base.
"It's a promotional vehicle, which Larry was interested in pursuing," says Indiana State's assistant sports information director, Craig McKee.
"And of course, the baseball coach was interested in getting as many people as possible to show up for the game to see Larry play."
"We're trying to arrange it for the 29th," he added. "Nothing has been confirmed yet, although it looks very positive."
The 6-foot-9 Bird, who led the Syracuse's to the nation's No. 1 ranking and 33 straight victories before losing to Michigan State in the championship game of the NCAA tournament, has not played baseball since high school.
But he has played slow-pitch softball in a city league, and last year had 12 home runs and 48 RBI in 20 games, playing the outfield and first base.

Elgin Baylor fired by Jazz

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Whether or not the New Orleans Jazz gets out of the Superdome, one thing is sure — it will have a new coach at the start of next National Basketball Association season.
The team announced Thursday that Elgin Baylor was fired, putting the formal stamp on a personnel decision made weeks ago. The team finished at the bottom of the league this season with a 26-55 record.
"Many of the ballclub's problems had nothing to do with Elgin's ability as a coach, but it is our feeling that a change is needed at this time to benefit all involved," Larry Hatfield of Los Angeles, managing partner of the team, said Thursday.
Baylor was not available for comment, but had said privately in the final weeks of the season that he understood he was not going to be kept with the team, despite a two-year extension given in November as a vote of confidence from the owners.
Hatfield said the team would honor those two years.

Pacer claims win
LEBANON, Ohio (AP) — Irish Rainmaker, a 10-year-old pacer, claimed a U.S. Trotting Association record Thursday night at Lebanon Raceway for aged pacers, running 9-16th of a mile on a half-mile track in 1:05.5.
The pacer, owned by Bill Johnson of Waynesville and driven by Tom Tharp, set the record while winning the fifth race.

Nehemiah tops field

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — Hurdle sensation Renaldo Nehemiah, distance great Henry Rono and a host of Olympic medalists head the entrants in Saturday's first Bruce Jenner Classic track meet.

Another Terrapin, Dennis Ivory, is scheduled to battle world class triple jumpers James Butts, Ron Livers and Willie Banks.

Connors posts win. TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Jimmy Connors dispatched John Sadri 7-5, 6-1 Thursday night in a $50,000 Grand Prix tennis tournament.

Connors trailed 3-2 in the first set before edging Sadri, of Charlotte, N.C., then went out front 4-0 in the second set and coasted to his second victory of the tourney.

Connors, the No. 1 seed in the tournament at Shadow Mountain Racquet Club, was scheduled to meet No. 5 seed Tim Wilkison of Shelby, N.C., Friday evening in a quarter-final singles match.

No. 2 seed Eddie Dibbs, the defending tournament champion, was scheduled to meet Jamie Filol of Chile late Friday.

Other Friday matches had No. 4 seed Butch Walts of San Jose, Calif., against Billy Martin of Palos Verdes, Calif. and No. 3 seed Elliot Teltcher of Palos Verdes against No. 6 seed Tom Gorman of Seattle.

Indy 500 finally gets entry list

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Championship Auto Racing Teams submitted 44 entries for the Indianapolis 500-mile race, Speedway vice president Al Bloemker said Thursday, apparently averting a threatened boycott of the 500 by most of auto racing's top drivers.

The entries were delivered by Jim Melvin, president of Michigan International Speedway and executive director of CART.

Pat Patrick, president of CART, said the entries were submitted only to meet the technical requirements of the Speedway entry blanks. But he said CART and its members would not give up in their battle against USAC, which he claimed is "manipulating the boost pressure formula at Indianapolis to the detriment of IndyCar racing as a whole and CART members in particular."

USAC recently lowered the allowable manifold pressure for all turbocharged engines to make them more equivalent to each other and to the stock block engines. Maximum pressures were pegged at 50 inches for 8-cylinder turbocharged engines, 55 inches for 4-cylinder engines and 58 inches for the stock blocks.

The deadline for entering the 500 is midnight Sunday. Patrick said he decided to submit the entry forms on time in order to prevent a technical disqualification.

"In the meantime, I have instructed our attorney to advise us on our options in the event that our differences with USAC and the Speedway are not satisfactorily resolved. "In the entry blank, the Speedway has reserved the sole right to change the USAC turbocharger boost pressure rule. I hope to convince them to exercise that right. We find ourselves in the unique position of trying to save them from themselves."

The 44 entries, plus 11 others received Thursday from non-CART, pushed the entry list to 83. The 44 CART entries were: Alex Morales, 3; All-American Racers, 2; Cannon Racing Team, 1; Chaparral Racing Ltd. of Midland's Jim Hall, 2; Conquest Racing Team, 2; Fletcher Racing Team, 3; Frantz Auto Body 1; Gehlhausen-Reath Racing, 2; Hoffmann Auto Racing, 3; Interscope Racing Corp., 3; Jerry O'Connell Racing Inc., 3; Longhorn Racing Team of Midland's Bobby Hillin, 2; McLaren Engines, Inc., 3; Patrick Racing Team, Inc., 4; Penske Racing Inc., 5; S&M Electric Co., Inc., 1; Walmore Inc., 2; Wasp Racing, 2.

tion of the turbocharger rule change uniquely disadvantages the members of CART," Patrick's announcement continued.

"The revised boost pressure formula may, in effect, disqualify the racing teams associated with CART, notwithstanding that such cars would traditionally be in the norm for the Indianapolis 500-mile race."

"The CART teams feel very strongly that such maneuvering by USAC is the result of unlawful, arbitrary and malicious motivation. The timing of the rule change uniquely and adversely affects the CART teams, while not reasonably calculated to enhance the sport of championship auto racing."

The deadline for entering the 500 is midnight Sunday. Patrick said he decided to submit the entry forms on time in order to prevent a technical disqualification.

Hurley gets heart attack in new CBS docu-drama

By JERRY BUCK

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — John Hurley worked frantically for a piece of the "American Dream," but what he got was a heart attack.

Kevin Dobson plays Hurley in the CBS movie "Transplant" with a fierce intensity, a man who thrived on pressures and problems, too many cigarettes and too many martinis. When the crisis came, he didn't want to let go.

The two-hour movie, which airs Saturday on CBS, is in essence a docu-drama based on an actual case. It is a taut story, written for the screen by John Gay from the book by Phillip Dossick, and directed by William A. Graham.

The film also stars Melinda Dillon, Granville Van Dusen, Ronny Cox and Bibi Besch.

Dobson, once an aspiring baseball player, most recently played Detective Bobby Crocker in "Kojak." He still sees things in sports terms.

"I have no regrets I didn't stay in sports," he says. "I just realized that the thing I was looking for I found in acting — confidence. I thought I was a good ball player, but I realized through acting that the No. 1 thing is confidence. That's what I had missed in playing ball."

"In acting you're constantly exposing yourself and finding new areas. It's a challenge — I was going to say battle. Obtaining the true values within a scene is like hitting a home run with the bases loaded. With Melinda Dillon it was a great team. It was a team effort."

Dobson spent several years struggling to make it as an actor. In New York, he worked as a ticket-taker for the Long Island Railroad, and even after coming to Hollywood he was a fireman for the Santa Fe railroad on its Los Angeles to San Diego run.

"I look at my career like a ball-player looks at his," he says. "You want to get into the major leagues, then on the all star team, and you want to play regular. It can be done with a lot of hard work, a lot of drive. The thing is to achieve goals for yourself, not to give up."

Did he see landing a regular part on "Kojak" as the big leagues?

"I knew I was on a winning team," he says. "I wanted to do the best I could, to prove myself. I was a supporting player. I respected that. I didn't want to go beyond it. I wasn't after Telly Savalas' job. If it had run for 20 years I would have done it. It was right for me. It was a training ground. Telly Savalas became an international star, and I was five feet away studying him."

"I knew if I did my job the best I could I'd get an opportunity. Like 'Transplant.' If you want something bad enough you'll get it. You have to be ready. It doesn't come around that often."

All of which makes Kevin Dobson sound like John Hurley.

"I guess I'm an A-type person," he says. "I recognize it in me. I want to control it more. I want to relax. You never know when it's coming, so I'm going to live my life as best I can. I care for my family and I'm open to the needs of other people."

Though a stage and movie veteran, Dobson, 35, says he considers "Transplant" his first starring role.

Actually, a pilot called "Stranded" holds that distinction, but Dobson would like to forget that one.

"They kept offering it to me and I kept saying no," he says. "My agent said it would be good for me. I said I wasn't trying to build up a reputation as an actor to do something like that. Finally my agent persuaded me to take it. It turned out to be a dramatic 'Gilligan's Island.' Still, it was worth the experience."

"I think of 'Transplant' as my first starring role," he says. "It's more involved. It's more a stretch of more character. It's more creative. Maybe I feel now that I'm heading to take on a leading role in a series."

Dobson is working with a writer on a possible series for CBS. He doesn't want to reveal too much, saying only, "It's a cross between 'The Fugitive' and 'Dirty Harry.'"

Kimberly Davis gets scholarship

Lee High School senior Kimberly A. Davis has been chosen as one of some 1,450 high school students in the nation to receive a corporate-sponsored four-year Merit Scholarship.

Miss Davis has received three academic letters and three academic PTA awards. She is a member of the National Honor Society and the Rebelette's Honor Squad.

She has been a member of the French Club two years and has served as treasurer of the group. The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Davis, she plans to study computer science in college.

The scholarship received by Miss Davis is sponsored by Texaco, Inc. The oil company awards the scholarships to sons or daughters of all current, retired or deceased Texaco employees who are National Merit Scholarship finalists.

Only 11 other students are receiving the Texaco scholarships this year.

Corporate-sponsored Merit Scholarships generally range from $1,000 to $6,000.

Student dies in Dallas accident

DALLAS (AP) — A 16-year-old high school sophomore died Thursday in Dallas when the school bus on which she was riding brushed against a utility pole while she had her head out the window.

Officials said Debra Lynn Tramel suffered a broken neck and died instantly.

Similar shows share quality

By PETER J. BOYER

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It's no shock when two or more networks come up with programs that are similar, sometimes very, very similar.

It is unusual, though, to find high quality in each of the like products. Remember the three networks' versions of "Animal House"? None was exactly art. CBS yanked its copy after a solitary showing. NBC's just bit the dust, and ABC's version isn't carrying the network.

But here's a new twist in the art of creative coincidence — a pair of look-alikes that are good, each packing its own share of inspiration and integrity, in spite of sharing a unique theme.

A few weeks ago, CBS aired a TV movie called "No Other Love," a story about a marginally retarded couple who fell in love and wanted to get married. They fought the objections of family and friends, and overcame.

Tonight, ABC offers a story about a young retarded couple who fall in love, want to get married, then overcome the objections of family and friends. The appearance of both movies in a period of just a few weeks has prompted cries of "Ripoff!" and "Can't Hollywood ever do something original?"

Joanna Lee, who wrote ABC's version, "Like Normal People," is angry because she feels CBS borrowed from her idea.

"I don't think it's just a coincidence," she says, "my lawyers don't think so, either."

CBS' movie chief, William Self, says that the CBS property was in existence for several years, even before Lee got started on hers. "My impression," he said, "is that she didn't rip us off, and we certainly didn't rip her off. It's just one of those things."

House fails to grant Good Friday day off

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — If state employees get any time off Good Friday, it is through their bosses' good graces, not those of the Texas House.

Senators quickly adopted a resolution Wednesday authorizing the time off but the House failed to suspend its rules so Rep. Mary Jane Bode, D-Austin, could obtain final approval.

Rep. Bill Ceverha, R-Dallas, contended the half day off would cost $3.75 million in lost working time and deny the people of Texas government services for which they had paid.

Gossett to star

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Louis Gossett Jr. stars as a minister who becomes the first black candidate for sheriff in Alabama in the NBC movie "Lawman Without a Gun," airing Monday, April 23.

Game show host Richard Dawson will make his first appearance as host of NBC's "Tonight" show on Friday, April 20.

Stuart Whitman, Brian Keith, Ross Martin and Ed Harris join the cast of "The Seekers" for Operation Prime Time.

Gore Vidal will write the screenplay of "Dress Gray," the novel by Lucian Truscott IV, for Paramount Pictures.

Bostonians who want to keep these Gilbert Stuart portraits of George and Martha Washington in their city, where they have been since 1875 have begun a campaign to keep them from going to the National Portrait Gallery in Washington, D.C. The portraits are owned by the Boston Athenaeum. (AP Laserphoto)

Portraits stir controversy

By DANIEL Q. HANEY

BOSTON (AP) — For most of the last century, while George and Martha Washington hung sedately in the back hall of the Museum of Fine Arts, the Athenaeum sat in quiet obscurity as a last toehold of the proper Bostonian.

Now, George and Martha are the center of a spirited brouhaha over where they will reside for the next century or so, and the Boston Athenaeum is suddenly in the undignified position of having its finances aired in public.

The paintings were done by Gilbert Stuart, and the one of George is among the most familiar in existence. Because the left side and the bottom are unfinished, it looks as though the somber-faced president is rising from a cloud. Copies of the portrait hang in classrooms across America.

The Athenaeum loaned the pair to the museum in 1876. For the first 100 years, they hung in a hallway until the museum moved them to a more prominent spot upstairs during the Bicentennial.

Last week, both the paintings and the Athenaeum emerged from the shadows when word leaked out that the private library on Beacon Hill was selling the portraits to the National Portrait Gallery of the Smithsonian Institution in Washington for $5 million.

On Wednesday, four politicians and two newspaper publishers stood beneath George's picture in the mural-covered rotunda of the museum.

As five television cameras rolled, 10 newspaper photographers snapped and 40 reporters scribbled, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., stepped to a microphone and announced "the SOS campaign — Save Our Stuarts."

Mayor Kevin H. White added it would be a big public fund-raising drive to keep the pictures in Boston. He said he wanted the Athenaeum and the Smithsonian to hold off on the deal for six months.

All of this is painful for the Athenaeum, a dignified place that takes pride in its tranquility and reserved ambience of old Boston. The private library is one of the few in the country that is supported only by the donations of its 1,049 members. These people, called proprietors, own shares of Athenaeum stock, and they, their guests and outside scholars are the only people allowed to use the library.

The shares cost $300, but they are passed from father to son like family heirlooms and rarely come up for sale. In what's left of Boston's old-guard society, owning one is as important as going to the symphony, having a Harvard degree or being able to talk about jibs and spinnakers.

The Athenaeum, founded in 1807, was once Boston's major art museum and only library. When the Museum of Fine Arts was started, the library loaned it some of its best paintings and sculpture.

But inflation has eaten into the library's income, and it was discovered that its 130-year-old building needed about $1 million worth of repairs. And the library needed cash.

"The majority of people who use the Athenaeum are outside scholars," said Rodney Armstrong, the library's director. "We have our little family of members, but that's a very limited group to appeal to for funds."

So the Athenaeum's trustees, whose names read like a roll call of Brahmin Boston, voted to sell the art on loan to the museum.

The museum got first pick, and it purchased nine works for $1,225,000. But, according to Armstrong, it said it was not interested in the Washington portraits. He strongly denies reports that the museum offered $1 million for the pictures.

The Athenaeum delayed selling George and Martha, because the trustees hoped the other art would bring in enough money. But it didn't, and last year, the library had a deficit of $147,000.

So the trustees accepted the Smithsonian's offer. "We really have no alternative," said Armstrong. "It's a very sad thing. It's painful to everybody."

Gardner revises earlier comedy

By JAY SHARBUTT

NEW YORK (AP) — Herb Gardner, playwright by trade, paused a minute when asked his age. "Forty-four," he finally said. Another pause. "Geez, I ought to get a job or something."

Actually, the noted author of the noted "A Thousand Clowns" has been working. And next Tuesday, the new, improved version of his 1968 comedy, "The Goodbye People," starts a preview run here.

It's set on Coney Island. It's about an old man who once ran a hot dog stand there. The sign on the stand said, "Max's Hawaiian Ecstasies — 'Without a little ecstasy, what good is life?'"

Version No. 1 had a short run. "About 20 minutes," Gardner said. He decided to rewrite, revise and try it again four years ago when a book publisher asked to publish it.

The play has a new director. "I was the director 10 years ago," Herb sighed. "That turned out to be a real bad idea. The director couldn't get the writer to rewrite."

"As I understand, they saw very little of each other."

This may sound strange. But Gardner, a man medium of height and deadpan manner, has the kind of mind that makes him grouse in this manner about flying into sprawling Los Angeles.

"Look out the window. You'll see they've perfected transportation to the elimination of all destinations."

It's the kind of mind that once helped him get unemployment pay after he was hired by the Bliss Display Co. to sculpt Nativity scenes: "Lost the job when I started doing cross-eyed Wise Men."

It may have begun in his early days in drama, when he and a high school pal, Dom DeLuise, hawked orange drinks at the Cort Theater here in the style of each play being performed.

"For 'Camino Real,' we went up and down the aisle shouting, 'Fulfill your strange desires!'"

But that's Gardner, born in the shadow of Coney Island. He set out to be a sculptor, paused to create a cartoon strip, "The Nebbishes," then turned left at the typewriter and set up shop.

He wrote his first novel, "A Piece of the Action," at 22, then short stories. One, about a songwriter named Harry Kellerman, became a film starring Dustin Hoffman. Gardner wrote the screenplay.

He also did the film adaptation of his Broadway hit, "Thieves," likewise that of "Clowns." He still keeps in touch with Jason Robards, who starred in the stage and film version of "Clowns."

CB radio interest grows

By JOHN D. McCLAIN

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than 100,000 persons a month continue to apply for CB radio licenses, the government says, and an industry spokesman suggests interest may grow even more if gasoline shortages develop.

While the licensing rate is far from the nearly 1 million applications in January 1977 — the peak of the CB boom — it appears to show a continuing interest in this mode of personal radio communication.

In fact, most personal radio services continue to grow, according to Federal Communications Commission figures. Amateur, or ham radio, for instance, posted a high growth rate last year for the third year in a row.

The FCC reports CB licenses totaled more than 14.3 million as 1979 began, an increase of 16 percent over the 1977 total of 12.2 million.

The number of ham licenses rose 8 percent, the FCC says, from 328,648 at the end of 1977 to 356,336 at the end of last year. The commission describes many of the new hams as CBers "who wanted more sophistication in their radio communications."

But in many areas, CB itself is becoming more sophisticated. During the peak years of 1975-1977, communications often were difficult because of channels overcrowded by idle chit-chat.

Now, with the addition of 17 more channels, many of them often remain unusually quiet.

"CB radio has matured," suggests Mark V. Rosenker, a spokesman for the Electronic Industries Association which represents CB manufacturers.

Most state police departments, and many local ones, also are involved in programs using CB as a motorist aid.

"People no longer are buying CBs because of their novelty," Rosenker says, "but rather for their utility."

Rick James' album cover depicts fantasies

By YARDENA ARAR

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — For more than 10 years, Rick James struggled vainly in a hostile Canadian music market while his friends and one-time colleagues boarded the rock-star gravy train in the United States.

So now that he's a chart-buster himself, you can hardly blame him for choosing to act out a few fantasies. Like the cover of his second album, "Bustin' Out of L. Seven."

In gaudy, movie-poster art endowing him with an Arnold Schwarzenegger physique, James is depicted charging through a stone wall with a guitar in one hand and three scantily-clad Wonder Women in his wake.

He's wearing a skin-tight jumpsuit decorated with lightening bolts and a winged heart. In person, James is quite a bit smaller than the album cover would lead you to expect, but he poses for publicity photos in that same costume and plans to perform in it as well.

"The lightening bolts are the energy," explains James, who looked more down-to-earth in a recent interview at his rambling Coldwater Canyon mansion.

"The heart is the heart — there's a lot of love and a lot of sensitivity in the music as well as a lot of energy," he says. "The wings are flight and freedom, that kind of thing."

Well, why not? The Captain Marvel getup does look like fun. Its comic book overtones also are probably ideally suited to the fans who made James' first album, "Come and Get It," a two-million seller last year without ever having seen him and his Stone City Band tour. To hear James talk, very few of those fans could legally walk into a voting booth.

"I don't want my age printed," pleads the self-styled king of "punk funk." "There's too many little girls out there that write me all these fan letters — I can't break their hearts. They all think I'm 19."

James actually isn't all that old. But he is old enough to have met a then-unknown Neil Young at a Toronto coffeehouse and put him in his band, the Mynah Birds.

Fans of Neil Young may have trouble picturing their folk-country-rock hero playing and writing with a rhythm and blues type whose biggest single has been a disco number, "You and I."

"Neil's very melodic and I'm very melodic, so to conceive of us together writing is really very possible if you understand where we both are, or where we were at the time," James says. "Our music was like a folk-rock, rhythm and blues type of thing. ... It was a nice mixture."

The Mynah Birds were offered a contract by Motown Records, but they broke up because of James' troubles with the U.S. military, which had prompted him to leave his native Buffalo, N.Y., for Canada in the first place.

"I joined the Navy Reserves and then decided I didn't like it," he explains succinctly. He was underage at the time, and the problem was eventually worked out, but by then Young and Mynah Birds bass player Bill Palmer had long since left for Los Angeles, fame and fortune.

Remake of classic 'Champ' recalls Hollywood's past glory

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Recently MGM gave an invitational preview for its remake of "The Champ," replete with searchlights, champagne and hoopla that recalled the studio's old glories. The guests included Cary Grant, Louise Fletcher, Rock Hudson, Jacqueline Bisset, Peter Falk, Jackie Cooper and King Vidor.

The presence of the latter pair was significant. Vidor directed the 1931 original that starred Cooper as the boy and Wallace Beery as the down-and-out prizefighter who stages a come-back to vindicate himself in his son's eyes. Franco Zeffirelli directed the 1979 version with Jon Voight, Faye Dunaway and Ricky Schroder.

After the preview I asked Vidor for his reaction.

"It took a lot of courage to remake a classic," said the vigorous, 85-year-old director, who received a special Academy Award on April 9. "I think they did a good job. To me, Wally Beery was more convincing as a derelict than Jon Voight, but Voight worked into the role."

"I think the new picture is beautifully done," commented Cooper, himself a director as well as an actor. "Like most movies nowadays, I think it's too long. Two hours is a long time to sit through a movie; 100 minutes is about right."

Both Vidor and Cooper agreed that 8-year-old Ricky Schroder was terrific.

Said Cooper: "Obviously, the kid had the same feeling about Zeffirelli that I had about Vidor. A kid that age is only as good as his director. It was obvious that Ricky and Jon had something going between them too. I never had that with Beery; he wouldn't let anyone get close to him."

Schroder came to town for the preview, traveling from his Staten Island home with his mother, teacher (he must have three hours of schooling daily) and sister Dawn, 10, an actress and model. The boy is as bright and natural as he appears in "The Champ." Mike Douglas was so impressed with an interview on his talk show that he asked Ricky if he could return and co-host for a week.

"I will if I'm not being punished," Ricky answered. His mother commented: "I have no discipline problem with either child."

BRIDGE

Play for both suits whenever possible

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD
 Never underestimate a bridge player's sense of humor. When South failed to make today's slam his partner laughed so hard you could have heard a pin drop.
 East took the ace of spades and returned a spade. South won, cashed the queen of diamonds and led a diamond to the king.
 East discarded a club, and South couldn't develop a heart when that suit failed to break 3-3.

START WITH HEARTS
 South should try the hearts first. If both opponents follow suit, he can ruff hearts twice and get back to dummy for the fifth heart as his 12th trick.
 If hearts break badly, South can get a diamond trick if that suit breaks either 4-2 or 3-3.
 South can play for both suits if he starts with the hearts. He can play for only one suit if he starts with the diamonds.

DAILY QUESTION
 Partner opens with one club, and the next player passes. You hold: S-76; H-83; D-J10873; C-AQ105. What

Spare the rod or cop a plea

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN

NEW YORK (AP) — In Sweden, in this the Year of the Child, the hand that rocks the cradle and makes the peanut butter sandwiches had better keep her hands to herself.

If mama paddles the posterior of little Ingmar for leaving footprints in the smorgasbord or setting fire to the cat, he'll scream for the coppers. If Papa slaps the wrist of the Little Match girl for playing with matches again, she'll shriek for her lawyer like Jenny Lind hitting a high note.

Children's Lib has scored a great victory in the legendary land of the Goths and the Wends, the Svears, the Vikings and the Volvo.

By a vote of 25-6, the Rikstag, the Swedish Parliament, has passed a law that starting July 1 parents may not strike their children or treat them in any humiliating way.

Spanking is against the law, even a whack or a slap. So, too, is sending little Birgit to bed without supper, dusting the rompers of darling Dag, cutting off Olaf's TV rights, confining Pia to her bedroom and similar humiliations against impending posterity.

Mom and Dad could wind up in family court by way of the police station for opening little Gustav's mail and getting an advance peek at his porno publications. The law prescribes no specific penalties for parents caught red-handed assaulting the sensibilities of the new untouchable generation, but complaints will be handled by police and social workers with referrals to family court.

Parents better keep a civil tongue in their heads while Junior is out plowing up the petunia bed with his 10-speed bike and Gerta is spiking the blue cheese dressing with marijuana or they'll wind up on the business side of a subpoena or at best the sharp side of a social worker's tongue.

Apparently the gloomy Goths, who already have the most permissive society and the highest suicide rate in Europe, are willing to sacrifice the sanity of this generation of parents to bring sweetness and light to a future pedagogical paradise, a "look, Ma, no hands" tomorrow of perpetual Midnight Sun in the rumpus room. Aquavit sales should soar.

attitudes about child raising, heightened public consciousness to the innate rights of the child, rather than slap a lot of bellowing Archie Bunker-type with summonses.

Toward this end, the Ministry of Justice is planning a big public relations campaign that will include videotapes for children, informing them of their legal rights, and brochures for parents detailing their obligations, with chapter headings like: "Can You Bring Up a Child Without Slapping Him?" and "Of Course You Have the Right as a Parent to Get Angry and Show It."

The latter chapter, by the way, is still on the drawing board so there is much speculation in the streets and abandoned woodsheds of Stockholm, Goteborg and Malmo on just how far a parent can go in showing anger without running afoul of the law. Mabe cutting off a kid's legal allowance or bad-mouthing him in front of his mouthpiece. Refusing to talk to him is out, however, even if what you say may be held against you.

The next Ingmar Bergman movie no doubt will be a brooding courtroom drama in which 5-year-old Sven will rat-fink on his father for switching on the soccer game during the Children's Legal Air hour on the tube, while his mother was off serving 5-to-10 for humiliating little Pia by shooting her an angry look during Lutheran services when tiny Greta got tossed out of the choir loft.

Or maybe they will re-do August Strindberg's moody masterpiece, "The Father," as a prime time sitcom with Dad — no longer the menacing father figure — cast as a famous children's rights lawyer who is brought into family court as a secret spanker, a closet disciplinarian, but is defended by his own lovable urchins who are all masochists and think life is just a kick in the pants.

Anyhow, Sweden's next Parent of the Year should automatically win the Nobel Peace Prize.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Ulcer treatment has changed

Dear Dr. Solomon: I can recall when my father had an ulcer, many years ago, he was put on a rigid diet that was practically tasteless. He had to eat often and drink lots of milk (which he hated but forced down). Now my brother has been told that he has a duodenal ulcer. His diet in no way resembles the one I remember, yet he says he is following doctor's orders. Can this be so, or is he kidding himself?—Jan

Dear Jan: The treatment of duodenal ulcers, including the bland diet you refer to, has undergone marked change. Ulcer patients used to be told to eat often during the day, to increase their milk consumption, and to stick to a bland diet. This regimen has not been shown to be the most effective in the treatment of ulcers. That is why your brother's diet differs in so many ways from the one your father was subjected to.

A strictly bland diet is not likely to be followed over an extended period of time. Frequent eating by day leads to increased acid production at night, and an increased consumption of milk often causes other problems.

As a result, a more normal diet—excluding alcohol, caffeine, and other foods that are known to aggravate the patient's symptoms—is now being prescribed. The patient should eat three regular meals at the same time daily, and follow his physician's recommendations in the use of antacids. This is essential in order to neutralize stimulated acid and promote healing. A recent study revealed that large doses of antacids, administered properly, were highly effective in healing ulcers.

So don't be alarmed because your brother's ulcer diet differs so greatly from the one you recall. He is merely benefiting from newer concepts of treatment.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I am a 26-year-old woman and have had diabetes since I was 14. My only child was born four years ago by cesarean section, and I'm wondering about the advisability of another pregnancy. I would like to have another child, but my husband thinks I shouldn't risk it. What do you think?—Denise

Dear Denise: I'm afraid I have to side with your husband in questioning the wisdom of chancing another pregnancy in your case. In view of your history of juvenile-onset diabetes and the fact that your child was born by cesarean section, another pregnancy could pose serious medical problems. I do not want to alarm you unnecessarily, but, in the event you become pregnant again, you would have to be considered at high risk of very serious complications. I think you should talk this out in detail with your physician.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My doctor told me I need a cataract operation. What kind of operation would be best for me?—Mr. E.M.

Dear Mr. E.M.: There are variety of ways at your surgeon's disposal to remove your cataract. Your case will be thoroughly evaluated before the type of surgical technique is decided upon. This decision will be based on your doctor's judgment and requires your trust in that judgment. Good luck.

Treatment for psoriasis increases risk of cancer

BOSTON (AP) — Doctors have found that an experimental treatment for psoriasis increases the risk of a mild form of skin cancer, but they say most sufferers will probably be willing to take this chance to clear up the common skin disease.

In a new study, researchers found that people who received the treatment, called photochemotherapy, are between two and three times more likely than normal to have skin cancer.

The treatment, first reported in 1974, is the most effective method ever found for clearing up the disfiguring and sometimes disabling red blotches of severe psoriasis. Though it is still considered to be experimental, the treatment was used on 35,000 Americans last year.

About 2 percent of all Americans have psoriasis, a genetic disease whose name is derived from the Greek word for itching.

Robert S. Stern, who directed the review at Beth Israel Hospital, said the patients' skin cancer is mild and usually curable.

"I don't think these findings represent a setback," he said. "I'd much rather have one of these cancers than psoriasis."

A report on the research was published today in the New England Journal of Medicine.

The treatment consists of doses of ultraviolet light and psoralens, medicine derived from a plant that grows along the Nile.

Stern said the treatment probably will not be cleared by the Food and Drug Administration for widespread use until doctors have finished several more years of follow-up study.

Skin cancer is also caused by sunlight, and Stern said, "An American moving to Australia and becoming a fisherman is much more likely to develop a skin cancer than someone remaining in the United States and having this psoriasis therapy."

For two years, the researchers looked for side effects in 1,373 patients at 16 medical centers. They found that 30 of them, or about 2 percent, got skin cancer.

However, the cancer was most prevalent in people who had received radiation, once a common treatment for severe psoriasis, or had had earlier bouts with skin cancer.

The cancer rate was almost four times higher in people who had been exposed to radiation and 10 times higher in those who had suffered earlier skin cancers.

Because of this rate, the study said, these people should receive the treatment "only if they understand the risks and have disabling psoriasis untreatable by other means."

Stern added, "For patients who have severe psoriasis, compared with the alternatives, this treatment is still the therapy of choice."
