Elusive Dozen Halt State Senate Work

AUSTIN (AP) — Twelve state senators eluded Texas Rangers and state troopers sent to arrest them Friday but said from an undisclosed hiding place they were trying to save Texans $5 million.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby ordered the absentees arrested after they failed to show up for a Senate session at 9:30 a.m.

"We are absent today because this is our only available positive way to defeat a proposed law which would create a rigged, presidential primary which the people of Texas do not want, did not ask for and which would cost the Texas citizens $5 million of hard-earned tax money," the senators said in a statement issued at 4:15 p.m. from one of their offices.

Oppose Primary Bill

"If we had not taken this step, to absent ourselves, the Senate was destined to take up a bill which is only being used as a vehicle to accomplish this purpose because the presidential primary bill, Senate Bill 602, does not have sufficient votes in the Senate to pass as an issue standing on its own merits," continued the message distributed by employees of Sen. Gene Jones, D-Houston, one of the missing senators.

One of Jones' aides said the message was received by phone.

Steve Oaks, former secretary of state and now a lobbyist for the city of Houston, acted as an intermediary between Hobby and the absent senators.

"I've only spoken to Senator Jones," said Oaks, who once was Hobby's campaign manager. "I've talked to Governor Hobby two or three times."

Contacted By Jones

Oaks said Jones contacted him about being a negotiator.

"I told him, 'I don't want to know where you are or your phone number,'" Oaks said. "Any information I've been asked to convey, I've conveyed," he added without giving negotiation details.

Hobby told reporters he will wait all weekend and possibly until the session's end in 10 days for officers to find the missing members.

"I don't have anything else to do," he said.

Hobby invoked a procedure last used in 1969 by Lt. Gov. Ben Barnes to hunt down absent senators. By "putting a call on the Senate," members present cannot leave without Hobby's written permission and those missing are ordered arrested.

Two-Thirds Needed

The Senate needs two-thirds of its 31 members, or 21 senators, to conduct business. By staying away, the 12 absentees deprive the chamber of a quorum.

"I don't think anybody is legitimately gone, except (Raul) Longoria," said Hobby.

Longoria, D-Edinburg, told Senate workers earlier he would be in federal court out-of-town.

Other missing senators — all Democrats — were Chet Brooks of Pasadena, Ron Clower of Garland, Lloyd Doggett of Austin, Jones, Glenn Kothmann of San Antonio, Oscar Mauzy of Dallas, Bill Patman of Ganado, Carl Parker of Port Arthur, A.R. "Babe" Schwartz of Galveston, Carlos Truan of Corpus Christi and Bob Vale of San Antonio.

After waiting 30 minutes for a quorum, Hobby directed Kelly Arnold, Senate sergeant-at-arms, to find the 12 at 10 a.m.

"Check every office in the Senate," Arnold told his assistant sergeants. "We'll discharge the DPS and Texas Rangers to get those members that are outside the Capitol."

Each absentee has taken part in or supported various filibusters this session. The group unofficially has been dubbed "The Killer Bees."

The Hobby primary bill would allow conservative Democrats to vote in the Republican presidential contest but vote in a separate Democratic general primary several months later.

Critics say the bill would help John Connally's campaign for the Republican presidential nomination.

Both the Republican and Democratic state chairmen want to hold a 1980 presidential primary on the same day as

Corporate Profits Show Decline After Inflation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Corporate profits rose moderately in the first three months of 1979, but after adjustment for inflation showed the first decline in a year, the government said Friday.

Meanwhile, the Commerce Department revised its growth rate on the nation's economic output in the first quarter downward, from 0.7 percent to 0.4 percent.

The reduction in the gross national product reading, which measures the value of the nation's goods and services, adds further evidence that the economy is cooling. This, economists say, could help reduce inflation in the future.

The corporate profit figures are important because they help determine how much business has available for future investments and how much it can pay in dividends to attract capital.

Profits in the first quarter totaled a record $226.9 billion on an annual basis, up 0.9 percent from the $224.9 billion in the fourth quarter of 1978.

And the first quarter figure, which measures profits before taxes, was $54.8 billion, or 32 percent, above the weather- and strike-depressed annual rate of the first quarter of 1978.

But Commerce Department officials and the leaders of major business organizations were quick to point out that the apparent profit gain was illusory.

When adjusted for the effect of inflation on inventories and capital investments, profits actually showed a drop of 6 percent from an annual rate of $176.6 billion in the fourth quarter of 1978 to $166.0 billion in the first quarter this year.

With both inventory and tax adjustments, first quarter profits were at an annual $76.9 billion, down 6.4 percent from the previous quarter.

"The whole matter might be placed in more neutral perspective by comparing last quarter's profits with those for the full year 1977," said a statement from Jerry J. Jasinowski, an assistant commerce secretary.

"From that level they have risen by 6.5 percent. If we correct for inflation... after-tax profits from current production has declined by about 5 percent since 1977."

George Hagedorn, chief economist of the National Association of Manufacturers, agreed. "Business corporations are among the victims, rather than among the causes, of our current high inflation rates," he said.

Added Jack Carlson, chief economist for the U.S. Chamber of Commerce: "The Commerce Department's profits data show that profits are too slow, which has caused inadequate investment in modern equipment and structures, resulting in slower growth of the output of 100 million workers and business people, resulting in slower growth in people's incomes and resulting in 1.5 percent to 2 percent higher inflation rates each year."

Rain Chance To Continue

A SLIGHT chance for rain and cooler temperatures is forecast for the Lubbock vicinity by tonight.

Weathermen expect temperatures near 90 today before a weak frontal system pulls the mercury down to the upper 50s and brings a 20 percent chance for thunderstorms to the area tonight.

Winds should be southerly at 15 to 20 mph through today.

Temperatures should climb into the lower 80s on Sunday and forecasters say afternoons should continue to be warm until midweek, when another slight cooling trend should begin.

The lows should continue to fall near 60.

In Lubbock Friday, the mercury hit 95 after a morning low of 54 as southerly winds reached 15 mph.

Morning fog in central Texas yielded to bright sunshine.

A waterspout appeared off Port Arthur, about 15 miles from the city, and a warning was issued for area boaters.

While the forecast for West Texas is calling for a chance of scattered showers, residents in the rest of the state are expecting clear to partly cloudy skies and continued warm temperatures.

Art Thefts Not Altering Tech Security

By RUTHANNE BROCKWAY
Avalanche-Journal Staff

THE OWNERS of the Currier & Ives exhibit on display at the Texas Tech Museum say that despite the theft of two prints from the museum there are no plans to change security procedures for traveling exhibits.

"I don't know what else we could do," said Liz Sothe of Chicago's Esmarck Corp., which purchased 650 Currier & Ives prints from a private collector in August 1975 and sponsored traveling exhibits of the art work for four years without suffering any thefts.

She explained that the company has an "elaborate contract" requiring a certificate of insurance and at least one security guard to be on duty at all times the exhibit is open to the public. In addition, an institution showing the exhibit must provide either a night watchman or a security alarm system. The Tech Museum has the latter.

The two rare 19th century prints were on display at 10 a.m. May 12 when the museum opened, but were missing at noon that day, museum director Dr. Leslie Drew said.

University police were investigating a new lead in the case Friday involving an "art type package" mailed from the campus. Police also said they may question persons who either collect or are interested in owning Currier & Ives prints.

Drew said the museum will alter security arrangements for future special exhibits.

"Sunlight, The Castle," valued at $500, and "Fawn's Leap, Catskills," valued at $150, are missing from the exhibit, which included 125 prints and is insured for $185,450.

Although this was the first theft of Currier & Ives prints exhibited by Esmarck, another Currier & Ives exhibitor suffered a larger loss 3 1/2 years ago in an incident at another Texas university.

Twenty-two prints owned by Travelers Insurance Co. were on exhibit at North Texas State University in Denton in November 1975, when two men wearing ski masks stole 16 of the prints, valued at $8,000 to $10,000, just three days before the exhibit was to close.

Ken Havis, director of NTSU's Art Gallery, said the men, who gagged and bound the student attendant on duty near the 9 p.m. closing time, "knew what they were doing."

He said the six prints left behind had identifying marks or

U.S. Farm Exports Estimated To Reach Record $32 Billion

WASHINGTON (AP) — Higher prices and a larger volume of shipments will push U.S. exports of farm commodities to an estimated record value of $32 billion this fiscal year, up 17.2 percent from last season, the Agriculture Department said Friday.

The new estimate was $1.7 billion more than officials had predicted three months ago for the fiscal year that will end on Sept. 30. Exports in 1977-78 period totaled a record then of $27.3 billion.

Officials said the volume of commodities is expected to reach a record of 126.8 million metric tons, up 4 percent from 121.7 million last fiscal year, the previous high. In February, volume was projected at 121.9 million metric tons, only slightly more than last year.

A metric ton is about 2,205 pounds.

The department's outlook board said in its report that "most of the anticipated growth is due to higher unit values" of many commodities, including wheat, soybean meal, meat, tallow, soybeans, corn, tobacco and cotton.

Significant gains in tonnage from last year were reported for soybeans, grain, tobacco and rice.

Although exports are up more than had been expected, so are imports. The report said those are estimated at $16 billion this fiscal year, up from $13.9 billion in 1977-78 and a value of $14.8 billion projected three months ago.

That will mean a U.S. farm trade balance of $16 billion this fiscal year, the difference between exports and imports.

Last year's plus was about $13.3 billion, and the February projection for this fiscal year was $15.5 billion.

Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland said in a statement issued in Crookston, Minn., and by his office here that the $16 billion balance "will be earned by agricultural trade to be applied to the purchase of oil and the other imports this industrial society needs" and predicted that it "will be good for the dollar in the international market."

Castro Excoriates 15-Year U.S. Boycott

COZUMEL, Mexico (AP) — Fidel Castro called the 15-year U.S. economic blockade of Cuba "grotesque" and "miserable" and said it was not in line with President Carter's policy of human rights.

Referring to the blockade at a two-hour news conference that continued until 1 a.m. Friday, the Cuban president said, "President Carter's preachings about human rights do not even leave us the opportunity to buy an aspirin for a toothache."

"I think one of the most grotesque and miserable things is to deny a country even the right to obtain medicines. I ask myself how can the blockade against Cuba be reconciled with these preachings about human rights," the bearded revolutionary leader said.

In Washington, State Department sources confirmed the embargo against Cuba includes medicines, but said that in 1978 the United States offered to exempt certain rare medicines and got no response.

Castro, visiting Mexico for the first time since he launched his revolution 23 years ago, said the "fundamental obstacles" to better relations with the United States were the economic boycott and the U.S. naval base at Guantanamo, which the United States has refused to vacate.

At the urging of the United States, the Organization of American States imposed an economic blockade against Cuba in 1964, coupled with severance of diplomatic relations with Castro's communist regime.

The sanctions were lifted by all OAS members five years ago except for the United States. Mexico had ignored the boycott and continued trade and diplomatic ties with Cuba.

Castro was up before dawn and donned a black diver's suit for four hours of spearfishing in the clear waters that abound with lobsters, sea-snails and fish around on this resort island off the Yucatan coast.

Nikita Khrushchev was born in 1894.

Iranian Jews Fear Wave Of Repression

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Iranian Jews are leaving this newly-declared Islamic republic, fearful that anti-Zionist statements may lead to a wave of repression.

"We are a worried people," said a Jewish merchant in Tehran. "We fear what may be coming."

Jewish sources in this capital said about 15,000 of the nation's 80,000 Jews have left the country in the last six months, joining friends and relatives in Europe, Israel and the United States. The sources said thousands of Jews are preparing to obtain passports to emigrate abroad.

As cries against Zionism and "free Jerusalem from the Jewish occupiers" echoed through the capital following the Islamic revolution in February, many Jews became concerned. There is a feeling that worse times are ahead for this once vibrant Jewish community, despite a long history of tolerance toward Jews by Moslem regimes of past centuries.

The nation's religious leader, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, who engineered the overthrow of Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi earlier this year, has pledged freedom for all of the nation's minority groups. But he also has railed against Zionism and condemned the Israeli-Egyptian peace accord, while embracing the Palestine Liberation Organization and its leader, Yasser Arafat.

Arafat was one of the first official visitors to meet with Khomeini here after the February revolution. A permanent PLO representative, Hani al Hassan, quickly followed, setting up his headquarters in the former Israeli delegation offices. He has been a prominent speaker at many of the demonstrations against Zionism.

The Islamic government has no diplomatic relations with Israel.

The majority of Iranian Jews are merchants, while some run foreign exchange establishments in Tehran. Many of their families have been here for centuries. Their general uneasiness became more substantial after a member of their community, millionaire Jewish industrialist Habib Elghanian, was executed on May 9 by an Islamic revolutionary firing squad. Elghanian, 69, former head of the Tehran Jewish Central Committee, was charged by a revolutionary committee with corruption, collecting funds for Israel and close links with Zionism.

"We hope this Elghanian's death is an isolated case," said a Tehran rabbi, who asked not to be identified.

Jewish sources said 10 other Jews are known to be among the several thousand prisoners of the Islamic regime. Israeli radio, which strongly condemned Elghanian's execution, said 100 Jews are held in prisons in various parts of Iran. Western diplomats were unable to confirm the number.

Jewish leaders, in an attempt to head off trouble for their community, have pledged their loyalty to the new Islamic regime.

A delegation of Jewish intellectuals journeyed to the holy city of Qom this week to visit Khomeini, expressing regrets over the "plots of Zionism."

Jews have a long history in this part of the world, dating back 2,500 years. They first settled in what is known today as Isfahan, central Iran, carrying with them soil from the Holy Land to mix in with the earth of their new-found home.

Isfahan was at one time the center of the Jewish communities in Iran. More than 15,000 lived there in 1948. Jewish leaders report that less than 4,000 remain, most having gone abroad or moved to Tehran.

Most of the Iranian Jews here either have relatives in Israel or have visited the Jewish state in the past 20 years. But they generally have felt secure, especially under the shah who derived much of his support from the Iranian minorities.

One Jewish merchant, a rug dealer on Ferdowsi Street, said Jews can take part of the blame for anti-Jewish sentiment in Iran.

"Look down this street," he said. "Ninety percent of the rug shops and money changing bureaus belong to Jews."

"Like most minorities, we're a close-knit society," the merchant said. "We don't let strangers enter our circle easily. This has apparently created some ill feelings and distance with Iranian Moslems."

Iranian Marauders Strike Revolutionary Policemen

KHORRAMSHARR, Iran (AP) — Fighting broke out Friday in the eastern part of Iran's oil-rich Khuzestan province between revolutionary guardsmen and marauders who attacked a police station, state radio said. Meanwhile, militant Arabs in the province defied a government order to turn in their weapons.

The developments followed armed incidents last Sunday and Monday in Khuzestan, the center of Iran's critical oil industry. There have been no reports of disruption to oilfield operations as a result of the disturbances.

State radio said the fighting Friday broke out in the eastern Khuzestan city of Masjed-e-Soleiman, an industrial center surrounded by 3,000-year-old archaeological sites. The radio said "counter-revolutionaries" whom it did not identify further, attacked the police station but were driven off by revolutionary guardsmen.

It said the attackers had been ordered to surrender their arms. In a later dispatch, the radio said the city's "Islamic justice department" had ordered that "no one, no matter what position they hold," was empowered to make arrests or enter houses in the city without department permission.

The wording suggested that rival guardsmen or guardsman impostors might be involved in the fighting.

There was no word on possible injuries.

Meanwhile on Friday, the "political organization of the Arab people of Khuzestan" — a body that has been pressing for local autonomy for the province's Arabs — said in a statement that its members would not put down their weapons until their "legitimate and legal demands are realized."

Admiral Ahmad Madani, the province's governor-general, had declared the week starting Friday a time for all people to turn in their weapons.

The speed of sound generally is placed at 1,008 feet per second at sea level at 32 degrees Fahrenheit.

Measure To Protect Beaches From Pets

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas legislators have passed and sent to the governor a bill enabling coastal counties to keep dogs off beaches.
 House passage completed legislative action on the measures.
 Counties could regulate not only possession of animals on beaches but swimming in passes leading to the Gulf of Mexico.
 The House also passed a bill giving county commissioners or the commissioner of the General Land Office the power to draw a "dune protection line." No construction or other activity that could harm a dune or its plant life could be performed without a permit.
 The bill returns to the Senate for approval of changes made by the House.

AN EDITORIAL:

Citibus--Going Whose Way?

CITIBUS SERVICE in Lubbock is at an awkward stage: Too little used for the expense it is and too much in demand potentially not to be nursed along.

As fears grow that gasoline shortages will become chronic, Mayor Dirk West correctly has come "full circle" to the point of belief that an improved transit system is in the public interest.

Whether he's right in believing "we need to get into mass transit as quickly as possible" remains to be seen. Citibus service is too expensive to jump into it with all four feet without a great deal of careful thought.

WITH NEW 21-PASSENGER buses and revised schedules, the municipally subsidized transit system here is well positioned to take care of growing demand.

The trouble is that demand has not grown. The convenience of the private car, coupled with the fact that destination points in Lubbock are so scattered, has made local residents reluctant to take the bus.

Even when riding the bus might be more economical, the problem of matching personal schedules with the transit schedules and of having to "get out in the weather" and walk to the nearest bus stop is a tremendous barrier for most people.

With periodic promotion and new buses, the system has increased its ridership but has only scratched the surface.

"Despite good efforts, we've got a rinky-dink bus system which has been promoted poorly and not made an impression," the mayor says.

A discussion of ways to improve the situation is scheduled next Thursday.

WEST ADVOCATES phasing out the 21-passenger buses and replacing them with large-capacity diesel buses "as rapidly as possible."

It might be better to first develop a program for increasing the number of passengers that will be on those large-capacity buses.

One possibility would be for larger businesses and industries to participate by offering employees free Citibus rides to and from work. Those 21-passenger buses also lend themselves to capacity usage if driven by parttime drivers operating them only during the morning and evening rush hours.

What's needed, in short, is an imaginative approach to ways in which buses might be used as a substitute for one car in two-car families.

And, while we're on the subject: Since the school district is wasting thousands of gallons of gasoline monthly operating buses to comply with court-ordered integration, is there not some way those buses can be used to pick up students at home instead of letting them drive or be driven to school?

High school students driving to school, to lunch, back home and around town every day burn a lot of fuel.

AN EDITORIAL:

The Birds And Bees And Oil

SO YOU THINK President Carter and Congress really are sincere about trying to boost supplies of domestically produced oil and gas, right? Wrong!

With the President's ardent support, the House of Representatives has passed a bill that would set aside 1 million acres of Alaska land for national parks, preserves, wild river areas and wilderness.

Exploration for oil, gas and other minerals on this vast acreage—doubling the size of the National Park System all in one whack—would be barred.

oment at all. The vote was a resounding 360-85 and came on the same day that Gov. Jerry Brown was in town to complain because a gasoline shortage has caused long lines at California service stations.

Rep. Kent Hance of Lubbock was in the minority opposing the President and Udall in their refusal to put human welfare at least on a par with that of the caribou.

Hance supported, instead, the reasonable approach suggested by the oil and timber companies.

PRESERVATION of scenic treasures and of wildlife refuges certainly is in the public interest, but 110 million acres—an area larger than Arkansas and Tennessee combined—in one wad? You gotta be kidding.

This nation became the strongest on earth because it had—and developed—natural resources yielded by God's great earth.

Pulling in our horns, protecting and conserving everything we have instead of using it as God intended, is a terrible waste.

But that's what you get when a Jimmy Carter is calling the shots.

ART BUCHWALD:

All People Can't Be Fueled All The Time

WASHINGTON—Somebody it will be known as the "Gas Crunch of '79." It all started when the Ayatollah Khomeini said, "I'm sick and tired of French food. I want to go home to Qum."

Word was passed in Iran, and much to the surprise of the CIA, there were millions of Iranians in the streets shouting "Down with the Shah." The oil fields were shut down and one of the major sources of fuel in the Western world was shut off.

This called for a meeting of the other oil-producing states who said, "Thanks be to God, the Iranians are not pumping any oil. We owe it to ourselves to raise our prices at this time because you never know when another shah will fall again."

WHEN THE news reached the oil company executives at the Petroleum Club, they all said "OPEC has done a terrible thing by raising its oil prices, therefore we owe it to ourselves and our stockholders to raise our prices as well. We may not see a windfall like this again for a long time."

President Carter then went on the air and said that, because of the expected gasoline shortages brought about by a lack of conservation, he was decontrolling the price of oil in order to discourage Americans from wasting it.

He promised that any excessive profits the oil companies made from decontrol would go to poor people.

The oil companies reacted strongly to this proposal, saying they would rather take the windfall profits and look for more oil which they were certain they could find if the price was right.

SEN. KENNEDY said President Carter had bowed to pressure from the oil companies for decontrol.

President Carter replied, "Baloney." Strangely enough, this did not resolve the situation.

By this time the media played its usual helpful

John Wooden always taught his UCLA soccer to nod, wink or wave to the teammate who made the pass to him or got the rebound. "What if he's not looking?" asked a player. "He will be," said the coach. "If he's not, I will be."

role in contributing to the crisis. TV stations all over the country sent out mobile crews to film gas stations that were closed on Sundays.

The public was suddenly thrown into a panic and everybody got in their cars and drove to the nearest pump to fill up their tanks.

People who used to be happy with a quarter or half a tank of gas weren't satisfied until they had a full one. So there was twice as much gas in everyone's tank than before the panic.

THE PRICE of fuel did not deter people from buying it. The higher it got the more, desperate car owners became to find it.

Husbands came home at night and berated their wives if they didn't find a full tank in their cars. Unleaded gas sold at a premium because Detroit had forgotten to tell Houston how many new cars with catalytic converters would be on the road.

Gas station owners discovered that their previous monthly allotments would not last for more than three weeks.

Long lines formed at stations and while people waited anxiously to get to the pumps, they burned up more gasoline than the entire Iranian shutdown had cut off.

The Department of Energy was not asleep. It set up a hotline that consumers could call when they thought they were being gouged. Twenty-two gas stations were caught and severely punished.

IN THE meantime, the DOE announced that the major oil companies had overcharged their customers an estimated $1.7 billion. The DOE said there was nothing criminal about this, but it would be nice if the oil companies gave back the money to their consumers.

This made many Americans mad, and they decided that the oil companies had created the crisis to make more money. They all drove onto the highways, rolled down their windows and shouted "We're damn mad and we're not going to take it any more."

The Ayatollah Khomeini is now back in Qum, oblivious to the fact that he originated the "Gas Crunch of '79." One of the main reasons is that he doesn't own a car.

'He Never Heard Of Voluntary Control'

GEORGE F. WILL:

Young On Rhodesia

WASHINGTON—Immediately after the election in Rhodesia, Andrew Young said on television that the elections were "stolen" before they occurred, "when the Constitution was drawn up."

Young, the U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations, said this in the presence of Bayard Rustin, a black civil rights leader who had been in Rhodesia to observe the elections.

Rustin said in Young's remark the implication (which is the position of the "Patriotic Front") that the black leaders who participated in the election are, at best, Uncle Toms, or, at worst, collaborators.

Rustin pounced on Young, denouncing the "supreme arrogance" of assuming that the black leaders, "many of whom have served up to 10, 12 years in prison," cannot be trusted to judge their people's interests.

It is true that the constitutional formula for allocating power today gives whites disproportionate advantages. But the formula is explicitly transitional.

And complaints about deviations from "one man, one vote" should not issue from the United States where, under permanent constitutional provisions, 14 states with 47 percent of today's population have 28 percent of the Senate seats.

Rhodesia has done what the American Founding Fathers did when they resolved the dispute between the big and little states at the Constitutional Convention in 1787. That is, Rhodesia has accommodated constitutional arrangements to powerful interests.

ANDREW TULLY:

Sabotage At 3-MI?

WASHINGTON—Bear with me. This is a column about a column I wrote a few days after the nuclear "accident" at Three Mile Island on March 28—a column I didn't file.

But the cat is out of the bag. The FBI is investigating an attempt to sabotage $30 million worth of atomic fuel supplies at a Virginia Electric and Power Co. nuclear generating plant in southeast Virginia.

Power company inspectors discovered that a corrosive white crystalline substance had been dumped into 63 or 64 fresh, unirradiated nuclear fuel elements stored in one of the plant's buildings.

Preliminary findings showed the substance had not damaged the fuel, and company officials said there was "no effect on the health or safety of the general public or VEPCO employees."

NOW TO back-pedal. After the Three Mile Island "accident," I asked sources in the American intelligence community about the possibility of sabotage. Yes, that had been discussed.

And yes, there was a possibility that terrorists and foreign espionage agents would find other nuclear plants tempting targets.

But the contacts emphasized that no indications had been uncovered that would suggest any such subversive operations. Moreover, they strongly urged that the subject not be mentioned in print.

"...any public discussion might cause public panic. Sabotage of a nuclear plant could be as frightful as dropping an atomic bomb."

So after writing the column, I put it on the shelf. Who wouldn't?

BUT IT HAS happened at that VEPCO plant in Virginia. The dumping of crystalline substance clearly was an act of sabotage. And as VEPCO Vice President C. M. Stallings said, "Whoever got in there knew what he was doing."

I went back to a book I wrote in 1962—"CIA: The Inside Story." There, as memory had suggested, I found a section on a modus operandi much fancied by espionage shops world-wide.

It involves the establishment "in place" of a secret agent in a foreign country. The agent may be either a native-born citizen of that country or one who has lived there, say, 25 or 30 years.

His orders are to engage in no subversive acts until so directed by his "Control."

ONE EXAMPLE: The British hired an agent in Germany just after World War I. He lived as a respectable citizen and commendable worker until one day in 1946.

On that day he finished a complicated electronic eavesdropping system that enabled British intelligence to listen in on communications between Moscow and East Berlin for more than a year.

American intelligence must assume there are such agents "in place" in this country. Some may be respected workers in nuclear plants, while secretly enrolled in terrorist groups.

AND THE United States should not be snifty about nations that expand democracy step-by-step through constitutional evolution. In 1790, suffrage in America was, primarily, the right of wealthy white males; and not until 1964 did all blacks have an effective right to vote.

There was pressure on all Rhodesians to participate in the elections. But the terrorists used bombings and killings to discourage voting, which they called a "war crime."

About 60 percent of the eligible electorate voted anyway. (In 1978, in Andrew Young's Georgia, the figure was 18.6 percent.)

Rustin was struck by the "fantastic enthusiasm" of the voters. As for one loser's charge of election irregularities (a charge made the day the votes were counted, after five days of voting), Rustin says:

"I'LL GIVE you the timing. At 11 o'clock in the morning he said the elections were perfectly fair. At 2 o'clock in the afternoon it appeared that he had lost. At 4 o'clock he called a press conference to denounce it."

In 1978, Congress stipulated that, in order to decide whether to lift sanctions against Rhodesia, the President must decide whether a government has been chosen by free elections.

So, having eschewed the "arrogance of power" that (allegedly) made the United States the "policeman of the world," the United States seems prepared to become the "policewatcher of the world." But in Rhodesia the administration refused to watch.

It refused to send observers, and, as the Washington Star says, it seems to regard as an "embarrassment" the modest victory for democracy in Rhodesia. This is not only because the administration underestimated the potential for a peaceful transfer of power to the black majority.

IT ALSO IS because evidence of that potential is, the Star says, "inconvenient." The administration seems to regard as moral equals the black leaders within Rhodesia who have helped to plant the seedling of majority rule, and the terrorists based outside Rhodesia who vow to uproot it.

That, at any rate, is the logic of Young's position, and the Secretary of State either cannot or will not control his propagandizing subordinate.

The "front line" African countries attacking Rhodesia's internal settlement are not famous for civil liberties.

Regarding those and other critics of the settlement, the Washington Post says, there is something "unattractive in this spectacle of people playing at concern for free elections."

"AND THIS is especially true when it is inconceivable that the United States would expect the Patriotic Front, if it won the war, to hold elections of any kind.

"By any international standard of democratic practice you care to invoke, the Rhodesians did pretty well."

The grand fact is that Rhodesia now has an elected black prime minister. But critics like Young judge every Rhodesian development by the standard of whether it will "end the war."

VIRGINIA PAYETTE:

A Fan Of Hee Haw

BY NOW, everybody with a television set knows about the terrible things men do to baby seals, but nobody spends too many sleepless nights over donkeys.

Except a lady in Sidmouth, England, who is convinced they are an endangered species and who has set up an international program to rescue every mistreated donkey in the world.

She's Elisabeth Svensen, a blue-eyed blonde dynamo who has personally adopted 647 donkeys who were ill-fed, beaten and overworked. She had to sell her home to do it, too.

Fortunately for the donkeys, Mrs. Svensen has a patient husband who runs the Best Western Salston Hotel in Ottery St. Mary and who doesn't mind being known as the man who's married to "that crazy donkey lady."

"THAT'S WHAT they used to call me," Mrs. Svensen laughed. "But the more people learn about donkeys and the cruel way some owners treat them, the less crazy I get."

Mrs. Svensen travels the world, especially to underdeveloped countries, to set up morning centers and to hold free classes on the feeding and treatment of donkeys. She also lectures owners on the dangers of overloading their work animals.

"You wouldn't believe how they abuse them," she said. "They beat them, neglect them, let them starve, and keep them out in the worst weather. Then it's off to the slaughter house, where they're butchered for salami."

In the past 11 years, her save-the-donkeys campaign has caught the imagination of thousands of British.

THERE'VE BEEN two TV specials on her donkey sanctuary; she's written four children's books and signed to do three more; she's set up an international donkey protection trust; and she's sparked breeding societies and other sanctuaries all across England.

There's even a rest home for 300 aging donkeys in Surrey.

And it all started with one sick donkey. "Lucky Lady" was brought to the Svensen home in 1968 after suffering a heart attack from overwork. Mrs. Svensen nursed her back to health and word got around. People began alerting her to other mistreated donkeys.

Before she knew it, she was running a hospital for 35 four-legged patients, and vet bills and barn mash were getting to be expensive.

"THAT'S WHEN I realized I'd better become a registered charity, keep books, solicit funds, that sort of thing. Donkeys can live to be 50 years old, and I couldn't afford to look after all of them that long without help. I needed donations and a board of trustees."

Then, in 1974, another donkey lover died and willed Mrs. Svensen 204 donkeys from her own sanctuary. That's when the Svensens called a family conference and decided to sell their home and buy a farm to hold her "legacy."

Since then, they've bought two more. Now there's a staff of 28, including a full-time vet, several stables and farm buildings. What Mrs. Svensen wants next is a new hospital.

SHE'LL PROBABLY get it, too. British families look upon donkeys as pets, and children grow up riding them on beaches, at country fairs and in "donkey derbies." (These animals used to be overworked, too, but Mrs. Svensen's efforts have resulted in stricter laws for owners.)

Because of this national affection for donkeys, Mrs. Svensen's postman has a heavy load. She gets 600 letters a day, and 90 percent contain money.

More than 34,000 people donate regularly, including a lady in Scotland who contributes $2,000 every year. And children from 22,000 schools send in their pennies.

But perhaps Mrs. Svensen's proudest achievement is the Slade Center, a program that brings handicapped children and gentle donkeys together.

"THE IDEA came to me one morning at 3 a.m.," she said. "It was something for the donkeys to do. They're very intelligent and they get bored easily, you know."

"So I rang up a nearby school—and the results were shattering. We lifted the severely disabled children up for rides and gave them a chance to cuddle something warm and alive. And something wonderful happened."

"Tim, who is spastic, learned to sit up, although doctors had said he never could. James, who is blind and glum, learned to laugh. Steven, an autistic child who lives in a world of his own, began to relate to others."

School officials were so excited about the results that Mrs. Svensen started her fund-raising drive for $200,000 to build a special center with an indoor riding ring, petting stables, tack and feed rooms and two instructors. That opened last December.

SHE NEEDED an ambulance bus. She got that with a check from a charitable trust. And now she has an outdoor track where donkey carts can be driven from wheelchairs.

"The secret," she explains, "is that, to a handicapped child, a donkey is a handicapped horse. Some people think a donkey is a ridiculous fellow, but he is totally acceptable to a handicapped child."

So be it. I hereby promise never to laugh at a donkey again. I don't think I'll ever be able to eat salami, either.

Liz Ray Hits Club Circuit

McKEESPORT, Pa. (AP) — Elizabeth Ray, billed as "The Famous Washington D.C. Secretary," has opened a nightclub act in this steel town south of Pittsburgh and says she is working on a typing book for Capitol Hill secretaries.

The onetime secretary of ex-Congressman Wayne Hays was wrapped in a sexy electric blue tube dress slit to the thigh Thursday night. But the presence of reporters apparently unnerved her.

After singing only two songs in a quivering voice, she called it a night. About 75 people in the lounge at the ELIZABETH RAY Sheraton Hotel clapped politely.

In an interview, Miss Ray reluctantly answered questions about her well-publicized tryst with Hays, and warded off allusions to her stage career.

"I'm working on an 'Elizabeth Ray Typing Techniques' book," she said. "It should be a fun-type book, a novelty."

The 35-year-old blonde entered the national spotlight in 1976 after disclosing she could neither type nor file and kept her $14,000-a-year salary as a member of Hays' staff by providing sexual favors.

Hays, who admitted having a "personal relationship" with Miss Ray, served in the House nearly 30 years before quitting in 1976. Last November, the 67-year-old Ohio Democrat won a seat in the state Legislature.

Man Heads Women Voters

NEW BEDFORD, Mass. (AP) — The new co-president of the New Bedford chapter of the League of Women Voters is a first for the state — a man.

Robert Burgess of Dartmouth, a semi-retired social service consultant and part-time farmer, is serving with Lenore Piper, also of Dartmouth.

Burgess, elected last week, is a former executive director of the Council for Community Services in Rhode Island. Mrs. Piper is a citizens advocacy coordinator for the Center for Retarded Citizens in New Bedford.

An official in the predominantly female league's Washington headquarters said Burgess is a first for Massachusetts. Some men serve in elected positions elsewhere, but they are "fairly rare," the spokeswoman said.

The league, formed in 1920 as an outgrowth of the women's suffrage movement, has 125,000 members in 1,450 chapters in the United States.

Heath Refuses Envoy Post

LONDON (AP) — Former Prime Minister Edward Heath doesn't want a job as Britain's ambassador to the United States, a London newspaper says.

The London Evening Standard on Friday said Heath rejected an offer from Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher to go to Washington.

Reporter David Skan said that Heath, who was beaten by Mrs. Thatcher in a Conservative Party power struggle in 1975, stood firm against the attempt to "ease him out of political life."

Heath also said he is not interested in an alternative job: secretary-general of the NATO alliance in succession to Dutchman Joseph Luns, Skan reported.

In taking the Washington post, Heath would have followed Peter Jay, son-in-law of Labor Party premier James Callaghan, who lost the May 3 national election to Mrs. Thatcher's Conservatives. Jay is being recalled from the post.

Sheriff 'Neighs' Judge

ROXBORO, N.C. (AP) — The sheriff of Franklin County told a judge "neigh" after he was told to haul a horse into court.

Sheriff William T. DeMent sent the message to District Judge Larry Senter Thursday after receiving a subpoena to bring the chestnut quarterhorse to court in Roxboro.

The mare was to be evidence in a horse-theft charge brought by William Edward Parker Jr. of Roxboro against Robert Newcomb of Oxford. A hearing was to be held to see if there was enough evidence to prosecute.

Both men contend they have papers claiming ownership of the animal, said Parker's lawyer, James E. Ramsey. The papers describe the mare's appearance, so Senter wanted to see the animal to decide which description was the better fit.

But DeMent sent word that he had no money in his budget to transport the horse, which has been quartered in a pasture near Bunn.

"I told them I wanted to get my money before I started hauling a horse," the sheriff said.

With the horse absent, "the evidence wasn't here," said Ramsey, and Senter dismissed the case.

Chip Sees Brown Challenge

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — President Carter's son, Chip, says he is sure that California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. will challenge his father next year in the Democratic presidential primaries, but that doesn't worry him.

"I don't believe the 'fresh face' syndrome that helped Dad get going (in the 1976 election) will follow Jerry in this election," the younger Carter said in an interview Thursday. "I don't think people in this country consider him a new face anymore."

Chip Carter appeared at an Asian-American fund-raising dinner along with Evan Dobelle, director of Carter's fund-raising campaign. The two men also met with Mayor Dianne Feinstein, a strong Carter supporter.

Taking notice of long lines at gasoline stations in California, Carter said his father is suffering some short-run political damage as a result.

"Once the people decided there is a shortage of gasoline and it isn't contrived," he said, "I don't think they'll blame dad for it."

Grad Seeks Career Advice

MANHATTAN, Kan. (AP) — Patty Pinar says she can't decide what to do with her life when she graduates from Kansas State University on Saturday, so she has asked 500 strangers for advice.

Mrs. Pinar, 29, an art major, said she set up a card table in front of the student union and passed out 500 questionnaires to bystanders.

"I did it because I don't know what to do after I graduate and neither do many of my friends. I thought maybe I could get some suggestions from the general public," she said.

Among the 292 suggestions she received: — Shoot herself for majoring in art. — Invent a new color. — Try working for a paint company. — Join the Navy.

"Someone told me to find a new major and start over," said Mrs. Pinar, wife of a Junction City lawyer. "I told the person art was my third major. I have degrees in English and French and have taught both."

City Police Still Searching For Person, Weapon That Killed Jose Villarreal

Police detectives continued searching Friday for persons who might know where a 52-year-old Lubbock man received a head injury that may have caused his death in the Lubbock County Jail Thursday.

The man was arrested outside a Lubbock nightclub about 1:15 a.m. Thursday by police and taken to the county jail. About 5 a.m., the man was found dead in his bunk in the jail's second floor "drunk tank."

The dead man is identified on his death certificate as Jose Villarreal Infante. A check by police of the man's fingerprints revealed his identity as Jose A. Villarreal.

Police and the sheriff's department have been given three different addresses for the victim. The address given by Villarreal's family to the local funeral home arranging his funeral is 1217 Ave. F.

While police and sheriff's deputies continued their investigation, Criminal District Attorney John Montford said he would present the case to a grand jury scheduled to meet the last week in May or the first week in June.

Police Det. Jose Nevarez said Friday that he and Det. Ted Daniels are trying to locate and interview the 10 to 12 persons who were in El Monte Carlo Lounge at 355 Ave. H. at the same time as Villarreal.

Chief Deputy Albert Smith said Friday that a deputy talked to a man who had known Villarreal who said the victim had been robbed recently by a female at his apartment.

Nevarez, however, said he could not find a report of the dead man ever being a robbery victim. He added that he had contacted Villarreal's guardian, who said he had given the victim $100 Thursday to pay part of his apartment rent.

When Villarreal was taken to the jail by police, he had no money on him, Nevarez said.

Police said Villarreal was unconscious when they found him in the nightclub parking lot, and they could not arouse him.

Four hours after Villarreal was taken to the jail, a jailer discovered the man dead. Justice of the Peace Wayne LeCroy said he did not expect to finish his investigation of the death and make a ruling until at least Wednesday.

LeCroy said a preliminary autopsy report revealed Villarreal died from a blow near the right temple. Authorities first speculated that the man died of natural causes in the cell he shared with several other prisoners.

Det. Ted Daniels said Sgt. James Little received a call early Thursday morning of a disturbance at the club that resulted in a patron being thrown out. The report, called in by the club's bartender, resulted in the arrest of Villarreal on suspicion of public intoxication.

However, the bartender later told police that Villarreal did not cause a disturbance and walked out of the club on his own, Daniels said.

Services for Villarreal will be at 2 p.m. Monday at St. Joseph's Catholic Church with the Rev. Mike McCormick, pastor, officiating.

Burial will be in Peaceful Gardens Cemetery under the direction of Henderson Funeral Directors. Rosary will be said at 8 p.m. Sunday at Henderson Funeral Chapel. Villarreal was a veteran of World War II.

Survivors include his father, Julio Villarreal Sr., of Raymon, Mexico; five brothers, Mike of Lubbock, Javier, Julio Jr., Mundo and Pete, all of Raymon; six sisters, Maria Rita of Westaco; Rosalita Quintana of Lansing, Mich.; Ornela Loaysa of Westaco; and Virginia Villarreal, Maria Villarreal and San Juan Villarreal, all of Raymon.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I plan to retire soon and currently have $50,000 in a credit union, at 7 percent annual interest. We are considering putting this money in either six-month savings certificates or a money market mutual fund.

A. In the immediate two or three months ahead, there's little doubt that a well-managed money market mutual fund such as the one you named in your letter provides better yields than newly-issued six-month savings certificates.

The maximum interest banks and savings and loan associations are now allowed to pay on the insured six-month savings certificates they offer every Thursday through the following Wednesday is equal to the average yield on the 26-week U.S. Treasury bills auctioned off the previous Monday.

A money market mutual fund invests in many different kinds of "short-term money market instruments" — Treasury bills and other U.S. government and agency short-term issues, bank certificates of deposit, bankers acceptances, letters of credit, repurchase agreements and such.

Most of these other short-term issues now pay higher interest than T-bills. So, after collecting that interest and deducting its management fee, a money market mutual fund currently is able to pay dividends higher than the yield on T-bills.

As I put this through the typewriter, the difference is about six-tenths of 1 percent — on an annual basis. This can change, of course, because money market yields can take sudden and sizable swings. But, for now and into the near future, money market funds have the edge. Past the next few months, my crystal ball shatters.

Technically, an investment in a money market fund is not as secure as money put into an insured savings certificate. Nonetheless, a money market fund should be counted as having very little risk.

Q. Two years ago when I retired, I "rolled over" $18,000 from my pension into an individual retirement account (IRA) run by an insurance company which promised a 7% percent return.

A. You're not locked into that insurance company IRA for the rest of your life. But transferring from one IRA plan to another is often a complicated matter. You'll have to study your present IRA contract to learn what limitations that insurance company has on a transfer.

You may very well find that there will be a cash penalty deducted from your account, if you transfer. Frankly, you should have looked into these things — before you signed up for that particular IRA.

I suggest you look at other IRAs, sponsored by such organizations as banks, savings and loan associations and mutual funds. Put some time and effort into learning about IRA plans. When you have picked one you feel is right for you, explain your problem to the people who will handle your new IRA. To get your account, they should be only too happy to take care of the details of transferring your old account.

You can make your first IRA transfer at almost any time. But, once you have transferred from one IRA sponsor to another, you must wait at least three years before making a transfer to still another organization.

Q. My sister works for a company that awards employees with 25 years service $1,000. Must she pay taxes on this?

A. Yes, she must. It's compensation — earned income — and must be reported as such on her income tax return.

Doyle welcomes written questions, but he will be able to provide answers only through the column.

Conferees Set Federal Budget Target

WASHINGTON (AP) — House and Senate negotiators agreed Friday on a 1980 target budget that would cut the federal deficit to $23 billion — $5.4 billion below President Carter's goal and the lowest deficit figure since 1974.

The House-Senate conferees also projected a budget surplus of between $2.1 billion and $5.6 billion in 1981.

The target budget, which still must be approved by the full House and Senate, calls for $532 billion in spending in fiscal 1980, which starts Oct. 1, with revenues of $509 billion during the year.

The president had proposed a $532.3 billion spending level on revenues of $503.9 billion for a deficit of $28.4 billion.

The House-Senate conferees reached compromises on their major differences over defense spending and job programs late Friday afternoon when the House negotiators largely accepted the Senate's higher level of defense spending.

The conference approved $124.2 billion for defense, just slightly below the Senate's figure of $124.3 billion. The House had favored spending $123.5 billion on defense.

The House conferees also reduced their demand for education and job money by $300 million while the Senate increased its figure for that budget function by $600 million.

The conferees also compromised on revenue sharing, approving funds for state general revenue sharing, which was opposed by the House, as part of an agreement to allot money for Carter's targeted fiscal assistance to cities, a program opposed by the Senate.

The projected $23 billion deficit for fiscal 1980 is more than $10 billion below Congress' estimated $33.4 billion deficit for fiscal 1979. Carter proposed a $28.4 billion deficit in his 1980 budget. The 1974 deficit was $4.6 billion.

Much of the difference in the congressional deficit figure comes from increased revenue estimates that reflect the higher-than-expected rate of inflation and the deletion of the president's "real wage insurance" program, a part of Carter's campaign against inflation.

That program, which would have partly protected the pay of workers who cooperated with the president's 7 percent wage hike guidelines, would have cost at least $2.5 billion, according to the administration.

The House and Senate also projected budget surpluses for fiscal 1981, which starts Oct. 1, 1980, and fiscal 1982. However, they disagreed on precisely how much of a surplus would result. The House conferees predicted a $2.1 billion surplus in fiscal 1981 while the Senate put its surplus estimate at $5.6 billion. The Senate also foresaw a tax cut in fiscal 1982 and a surplus of $4.1 billion. The House, not including a tax cut, set its projected 1982 surplus at $32.6 billion.

The target budget sets spending goals for broad categories of government programs. After it is adopted, congressional committees use the target amounts in determining appropriations for specific programs.

Late in the summer, Congress will review the target figures, revise them and make them the permanent spending levels just before the new fiscal year begins on Oct. 1.

In its tentative 1980 budget, the House excluded all $2.3 billion requested for state revenue sharing in a show of resentment against state demands for a balanced federal budget. The Senate included the entire amount.

The House, however, proposed spending $200 million for the president's targeted fiscal assistance plan in a supplemental budget for the current fiscal year and $150 million in fiscal 1980. The Senate opposed funding the program at all.

The compromise called for providing $150 million in targeted aid in the 1979 supplemental budget and allotting a total of $1.9 billion for general revenue sharing and targeted assistance in fiscal 1980.

If $150 million is spent for aid to cities with high unemployment, that would leave $1.75 billion for state revenue sharing, 24 percent less than the $2.3 billion that the states got this year.

U.S. Dollar Continues Making Gains

NEW YORK (AP) — The U.S. dollar made solid gains against all major currencies in New York and abroad Friday, pushed up for the fourth straight day by fears of rising oil prices that will be paid for in the U.S. currency.

The price of gold fell back on Europe's main bullion markets from record highs set Thursday. But dealers said the decrease was mainly due to profit-taking and reaction by a nervous market to bullion's big gains this week.

Gold bullion closed in Zurich, Europe's main center, at $256.625 an ounce, 25 cents off Thursday's record closing high of $256.875. In earlier trading, gold peaked at $257.875.

In London, gold closed at $256.375, down from Thursday's record closing high of $256.90.

In Frankfurt, the U.S. currency peaked at 1.9230 West German marks, its best showing since early December, before easing to 1.9201 marks in late trading, compared with Thursday's 1.9120 marks.

In New York, the dollar traded at 1.9215 marks late Friday, up from 1.9140 Thursday.

Dealers reported the dollar climbed despite strong intervention by the Bundesbank, West Germany's central bank, to bolster the mark. The dealers said the bank sold off at least $122 million to keep the U.S. currency's rate down and protect the mark. In New York, dealers said the Federal Reserve also sold off dollars to slow the mark's appreciation but its activity was described as "minimal" compared with the Bundesbank.

In New York the dollar was near the 220 yen level for the first time in three weeks after the Japanese government's move to aggressively support its currency because it felt it was undervalued.

The dollar traded at 219.30 Japanese yen near the close in New York, up sharply from 217.60 Thursday. In the Tokyo market, where trading closes before Europe opens, the dollar traded at 217.25 yen, compared with 215.125 yen Thursday.

Some brokers commented that the dollar is expected to remain strong due to a big demand for the U.S. currency and because European central banks are likely to moderate their intervention to prop up their domestic currencies, which suffer when the dollar booms.

The thinking appears to be that the United States will be able to ride out any oil crisis better than other nations heavily dependent on oil, such as Japan and West Germany.

Other late dollar rates in New York included: 4.4388 French francs, up sharply from 4.4190 on Thursday and 1.7413 Swiss francs up from 1.7345. The dollar also rose against the Canadian dollar and the British pound sterling. The Canadian dollar cost 86.48 U.S. cents, less than 86.55 Thursday. The pound cost $2.0510, less than Thursday's $2.0550 rate.

In London, the dollar gained against the pound sterling. It cost $2.04695 to buy one pound Friday against $2.05805 Thursday.

Here's how the dollar fared in other key European money markets in late trading Friday compared with Thursday's closing rates: Paris — 4.4410 French francs, up from 4.4155; Zurich — 1.7394 Swiss francs, up from 1.7322; Amsterdam — 2.0923 guilders, up from 2.0815.

In Milan, the dollar rose sharply to 856.20 lire, its highest rate since June last year. It posted a late rate of 855.15 lire, nearly four lire up from Thursday's 851.30 lire.

Fed Proposes New Bank Card Rules

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Reserve Board proposed Friday to tighten protections for consumers who have cards that allow them to use 24-hour bank teller machines.

Under the proposed change, a consumer would have two days to mail a notice to his bank when his card is lost or stolen. The current rule is that the notification must be received by the bank in two days.

The proposed change comes under pressure from Rep. Frank Annunzio, D-Ill., chairman of a House Banking subcommittee. Annunzio said two days is not a reasonable time limit for notification.

After the two days, a $50 limit on losses goes up to $500. There is no limit on losses 60 days after the bank sends a statement telling of unauthorized use of a card.

Annunzio contends the current rule does not follow the intent of Congress in a bill he sponsored to give safeguards for users of the 24-hour teller machines. The law was intended to give holders of the bank cards safeguards similar to those enacted a decade ago for credit card users.

Connally Suggests Energy Common Mart

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican presidential candidate John Connally called Friday for a North American common market on energy to cut down dependence on the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

Connally said in a news conference here that if he were president he would begin talks quickly with Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau and Mexican President Jose Lopez Portillo to work out such a plan.

"I would be working with Premier Trudeau and President Lopez Portillo to see if we can't form a northern hemisphere common market on energy, to see if we can't combine the resources of the three countries, to become more self sufficient in this part of the world in energy," he said.

Connally also said he would reopen negotiations with Mexico toward getting natural gas from that country. Mexican gas purchases were rejected by the Carter administration because of a disagreement about price.

The former Treasury secretary and Texas governor said President Carter has failed to convince the public that the energy crisis is real and accused Congress of adding to the problem by making it "a political football."

He said as early as two years ago, when Carter sent his energy plan to Congress, "We should have been able to convince the American people that we were indeed going to be a hostage nation to the OPEC countries, that we had to become more self-sufficient in energy."

"We've done nothing about it, frankly, because we've been misled by the political leaders of this country, particularly in the Congress of the United States, who have made a political football out of the energy crisis in America," he said.

"And because of that, they've confused the American people, who ... believe an energy crisis does not exist but only that it's a sham and an excuse for the major oil companies of this country to gouge you and to cheat the American consumer," Connally said.

"But that just doesn't happen to be the truth," he said, saying events have proved "beyond any question of a doubt that a handful of nations called OPEC can hold this nation and the whole industrial world in the palm of its hand and the future prosperity of this nation in abeyance."

Nevada Eyes Plan To Hike Fuel Supply

CARSON CITY, Nev. (AP) — A Nevada legislative committee — alarmed by sagging tourism in the gambling state — endorsed a plan Friday to buy up to $10 million of gasoline on the world market should the shortage become critical.

The action appeared to be the first time a state has considered such a move.

The Assembly Ways and Means Committee sent the proposal to the Assembly floor, while a similar plan remained under discussion in the Senate Finance Committee.

Under either plan, Nevada's tourist-dependent casinos could count on the state to turn to international oil brokers for up to $10 million worth of gasoline if severe shortages develop.

The money would come from the state's general fund, which some lawmakers are concerned would cause spending cutbacks in other necessary areas.

The plan was outlined to a joint session of the Legislature last week by U.S.

Sen. Paul Laxalt. While it moved quickly through the Assembly committee, some skepticism was voiced on its merits in the Senate money panel.

State Sen. Cliff McCorkle said the fuel purchases should be started only after this gambling state "is at the brink of economic catastrophe" and an economic downturn has begun.

But Sen. Thomas Wilson said the state should be able to predict a catastrophe and buy gasoline to prevent it.

Gov. Robert List warned the state's casino operators earlier this week that Nevada was teetering between survival and chaos in its tourism business — the state's No. 1 industry.

While the long lines which plagued southern Nevada motorists the past three weeks are easing, List noted "the cruel irony of that is that it was due in some part to the lessening of tourist traffic."

He said estimates were that the number of out-of-state tourists in the Las Vegas area last week was down 45 percent from normal, due to a combination of the gasoline shortage and the United Airlines strike.

Most major Las Vegas resorts report occupancy rates are near normal, but smaller motels say the drop in visitors is cutting sharply into their business.

Las Vegas relies heavily on motorists from southern California, while Reno draws much of its business from the San Francisco and Sacramento areas in northern California. Reno has not been as severely affected as Las Vegas by the gasoline shortage.

Both cities launched advertising campaigns aimed at the California market earlier this month. Las Vegas promoted an adequate gasoline supply, but quickly scuttled the ads when long lines formed at the few stations which were open the weekend after the campaign began. Reno advertised that it was "only a handful away" from San Francisco and Sacramento, but halted the promotion when tanklines became harder to get in northern California.

Several hotel-casinos in Reno and Las Vegas are offering their guests free gasoline. The Grand Flamingo hotel in Las Vegas bought its own gas station south of the city about six months ago and is offering guests up to 10 free gallons.

Service Station Bill Runs Out Of Gas

AUSTIN (AP) — A bill that would have required gasoline stations to remain open on weekends failed to get enough House votes Friday to be considered.

The measure, sponsored by Rep. Ron Wilson, D-Houston, died on a 71-65 vote, far short of the four-fifths vote needed to introduce a bill after the 60th day of the legislative session.

Gasoline stations would have been required to remain open for four hours each day on alternating weekends under the measure.

Unveiling the bill Tuesday, Wilson said most station operators close on Saturday and Sunday because "they want the weekend off."

Wilson told the House Friday that the measure would insure that families have enough gasoline "to go to church on Sunday" and compared the bill to the state's Sunday closing law.

Wilson said station operators close on Saturday and Sunday because "they want the weekend off."

BLAZING THE TRAIL — These runners are getting the feel of the path they may follow today at Maxey Park while participating in National Run For Life Day. About 600 runners and walkers ranging from the very old to very young are expected to travel up to 10 miles in the park beginning at 9:30 a.m. to collect at least 50 cents for each mile from sponsors pledging money for the American Heart Association. 'Run For Life' Participants Planning Maxey Park Fundraiser Fun, T-shirts, a 10-speed bicycle and pledges to fight heart disease are expected to draw about 600 participants of National Run For Life Day to Maxey Park at 9:30 a.m. today, according to officials.

Runners and walkers ranging from the very old to the very young will travel up to 10 miles this morning to collect at least 50 cents for each mile from sponsors.

More than 400 already have registered for the event sponsored by the American Heart Association and Connecticut Mutual Life, according to Jim McWhorter, co-chairman of the fundraising project. McWhorter said he expects 200 more runners to begin signing up by 8:30 a.m. today at the park. More than 60 other cities in the nation also will be observing the event, said McWhorter. All participants will receive National Run For Life T-shirts and the runner collecting the most pledges will be awarded a 10-speed bicycle.

"This is the world's largest running event," said McWhorter, "its bigger than the Boston Marathon, and we have some people running in this that have been in that marathon."

RECESSION PREDICTED
BALTIMORE (AP) — The president of a large economic and consulting firm says there will be a mild recession followed by slow growth over the next three years with prices rising by at least 8 percent a year and energy costs jumping by 17 percent to 18 percent annually. "We don't envisage any way it can get significantly better although we do envisage several ways it can get significantly worse," said Otto Eckstein, a professor of economics at Harvard University and the founder and president of Data Resources Inc., during a seminar with business executives here Thursday.

Navy Sub Veteran Asserts Safety Of Nuclear Power

By GERRY BURTON
Avalanche Journal Staff

"There's nothing unsafe with nuclear power; it is very safe, very efficient."

Training and regulation beginning with the construction of a plant, is the answer to safety with nuclear power use, Chief Petty Officer Tom Donnellan believes. He spent five years aboard a nuclear submarine.

Donnellan, who now heads Navy recruiting efforts in Lubbock, touched on the current hot topic while describing submarine life during Armed Forces Week, which ends today.

"The Navy has never had a nuclear accident and operates over 200 nuclear reactors right now."

The nuclear submarine, Donnellan emphasized, is the "best built, safest ship the Navy has."

Safety, he said, is in the backup systems, alarm systems and sensing systems plus a two-year nuclear power school for all personnel.

In addition, a worker always is with another person on critical systems as a double check.

"I can appreciate the concern over nuclear power," the electronics and navigation specialist said, stressing again that nuclear power, itself, is no hazard if handled with respect.

Training for work with nuclear power for civilian use should start with the building of a site.

That's the way Donnellan's association with it began after a two-year course of study. He was part of the submarine's pre-commissioning crew that worked alongside the construction crew from the time the hull was laid for the USS Archerfish (SSN678).

It was 300 feet long and carried a crew of 114 for its primary mission of anti-submarine warfare as a "hunter-killer" type submarine and its secondary mission of "intelligence gathering."

Fleet ballistic missile type nuclear submarines, he added, are "the biggest deterrent right now" to war.

With a minimum of 16 missile tubes and the capability of hitting a target anywhere in the world from the middle of the ocean, the war machine's mission is to "run around the ocean undetected to be ready in case war starts."

Life in the submarine today is nothing like that portrayed in movies, Donnellan noted.

Persons who aren't fitted for submarine work are weeded out in a six-week submarine pressure training involving a psychiatric profile and compatibility check along with escape training, a special physical and special security check.

A survey conducted several years ago showed that persons on submarines had the least psychiatric problems of any Navy group, due, probably, to the testing procedure.

There is no time to get bored during training or actual deployment for getting intelligence data, working with other navies and with other U.S. ships on tactical maneuvers.

Small items can be taken aboard to supplement the sub's entertainment system for relaxation time.

Most popular carry-on is fishing gear, which breaks out for fun and a change in diet every time the submarine touches a pier anywhere in the world.

Fresh food runs out the first few weeks of a cruise, then it's powdered eggs and powdered milk to go with frozen meats and canned vegetables.

"I've gotten down to peanut butter and homemade bread," Donnellan recalled of a longer than usual cruise. His record out is 73 days. He may top that when he returns to the fleet after his recruiting duties.

The greatest luxury after a cruise is a tub bath. Aboard the submarine, 30 seconds are allowed for getting wet in a shower, then, after soaping, there are 30 seconds of water to get the soap off.

The ship creates its own air and water, but not enough water for long showers for 114 men.

For his Lubbock work, Donnellan has to look more for quality in recruits than quantity since technical advances require skills up to nuclear power which has just been opened to women.

"They still don't allow women on ships that might be drawn into combat," the Waco native said.

Injures City Resident

A 19-year-old Lubbock man received serious head injuries Friday afternoon when the motorcycle he was riding and a car collided at the intersection of 28th Street and Avenue Q.

Rocky Ferrell, 19, of 6520 Ave. T No. 8 was listed in critical condition late Friday at Methodist Hospital.

Police said Ferrell was traveling north on Avenue Q. Ferrell and a car driven by James A. Burns, 67, of Rockwood, Tenn. collided when Burns, who was traveling south on Avenue Q, attempted a left turn onto 28th Street.

Burns was not injured in the accident.

Ninety percent of the United States' total uranium reserve is locked in the Rocky Mountain region, as are reserves of oil, gas, low-sulfur coal and shale oil that form perhaps the greatest concentration of hydrocarbons in the world, according to the National Geographic Society.

Chicago Has To Borrow $64 Million To Pay Bills

CHICAGO (AP) — The city plans to borrow $64 million to get past a cash crunch, but a representative of the business community says Chicago's fiscal standing won't suffer much, if at all.

Mayor Jane Byrne, saying the city faced a budget deficit of up to $150 million, told a news conference Thursday the city planned to raise the cash from a consortium of downtown banks. John M. Coulter, director of economic research and statistics for the Chicago Association of Commerce and Industry, said the rating of city bond issues probably would not be affected.

Police Car, Auto Crash During Chase

A policeman and a 50-year-old Lubbock man were injured Friday when their vehicles collided while the officer was chasing two attempted theft suspects.

The accident occurred about 3:15 p.m. at the intersection of 34th Street and Quaker Avenue.

Cpl. Tom Smallwood had responded to a call of an auto theft in progress at 4241 34th St. A woman and a man were reported trying to load a Lincoln Continental onto a red transport truck, reports said.

But police said the couple left without taking the car, she in a van and he in the transport truck. Smallwood chased the two vehicles west on 34th Street.

Smallwood had both his flashing lights and siren on as he chased the vehicles. After the van ran the light at 34th and Quaker, Smallwood followed through the intersection and collided with a car traveling south on 34th Street.

Smallwood received bruises to the left arm, and the driver of the other car, Karl A. Robinson of 5409 40th St., suffered a dislocated shoulder.

Police apprehended the couple suspected of the attempted auto theft in the 8000-block of Brownfield highway. The couple, a 23-year-old woman and a 29-year-old man were both from New Mexico. Both were questioned by police and released.

The McCloud family appeared shaken, according to reports, when officers arrived at their 1721 E. First Place residence and were told a man shot at their front door about 11:30 p.m. Thursday.

Martha McCloud, 40, said the man, armed with a pistol, fired the weapon several times at the front entrance. No one was hit by the bullets, according to reports.

The suspect was described as a black man, "very tall," between 26 and 35 years old, and clad in a white shirt and maroon pants.

Police this morning were investigating a report of vandalism at the Beta Theta Pi Fraternity house at 2409 Broadway.

Reports show $1,000 worth of windows were broken at the house between 2 a.m. and 2:40 a.m. Friday. A nearby resident told police he heard the glass shattering and went outside to see a young white man run from the house and jump into a car before it sped off.

The neighbor said he got into his car and chased the vehicle, which was occupied by two men, described as tall, thin and between 18 and 25 years old.

The witness lost the other car, but got the license plate number, which was traced back to a Texas Tech University student belonging to another fraternity.

In burglaries reported recently by Lubbock residents, Doug Jarvis of 2202 Main St., Apt. 131, said he came home about 3:45 a.m. Friday to find his place broken into and a television and stereo, totaling more than $700, stolen.

Kerry Rubin Gandy of 1503 24th Place told police his residence was burglarized shortly before 11 p.m. Thursday, resulting in the loss of his TV set, camera and rifle.

Ledia Brinoes of 3107 Jarvis St. told police she arrived home shortly after 11 p.m. Thursday and scared off three burglars in her home. However, before fleeing, the suspects were able to rip off more than a $1,000 in property, including stereo equipment, a .22-caliber pistol, jewelry and groceries.

Police followed footprints from the victim's home to a nearby residence. No arrests had been made by early today.

Slaton Chief Says Shooting Was Justified

SLATON (Special) — Slaton's police chief said Friday that Lt. Jerry Eaton was justified in shooting a Lubbock man during an incident Wednesday.

"After talking with Lt. Eaton and the two other officers involved, I'm convinced he was justified in what he did," said Chief Jim Estes.

The shooting occurred after Eaton and two other officers had gone to a trailer house near the intersection of Tahoka Highway and FM 1585 to serve a warrant to Doyle S. Suttie, 52.

The trailer house is located behind J.C. Roberts Package Store. While the other two policemen waited in front of the store, Eaton approached the trailer house.

Estes said Eaton was confronted outside the trailer house by a man who fit Suttie's description. Eaton said the man asked him, "What are you doing here?"

Eaton, who is a plain clothes officer, told the man, "I'm a police officer." Then Eaton asked the man to take his hand out of his pocket. The man then pulled a gun out of his pocket and fired twice at Eaton, the police chief said.

Eaton returned six shots, hitting the other man once in each hand.

Eaton was involved in another shooting incident June 14, 1978, when a prisoner at the city jail shot him in the left chest.

Charged with aggravated assault on a peace officer in connection with Wednesday's shooting incident was Harrell Edward Qualls, 48, of Rt. 6, Box 744.

Shortly after the shooting, the man Eaton originally was looking for at the trailer house turned himself in to sheriff's deputies. Suttie has been charged with attempted murder.

Burial will be in Plainview Memorial Park under direction of Wood-Dunning Funeral Home.

No Verdict Reached During Theft Case, Retrial Probable

A 237th District Court jury Friday failed to reach a verdict in a theft case against Marlin Ray Sasser, 46, of Slaton, who was charged in the theft of about $40,000 in merchandise from Sears, Roebuck and Co.

Jurors said afterwards they had deadlocked at nine in favor of a guilty verdict and three for acquittal.

Jim Darnell, first assistant criminal district attorney, said the case probably will be retried.

A co-defendant in the case, Jose Jesus (Jesse) Reyna III, 25, of 1516 42nd St., testified during the two-day trial that he and Sasser conspired to steal appliances from Sears warehouses while Reyna was a Sears employee through the fall and early winter of 1977.

Reyna pleaded guilty to theft in the case and last Dec. 19 was given a 10-year probation sentence and ordered to pay $7,500 in restitution.

Sasser did not testify in his own defense, but defense attorney Dale Jones put on two witnesses who said they bought Sears merchandise from Reyna without knowing it had been stolen.

The jury deliberated three hours before Judge John R. McFall declared a mistrial at mid-afternoon Friday.

Wyoming Governor Kills Slurry Pipeline Idea

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) — Gov. Ed Herschler has rejected a company's proposal to pipe crushed coal from the Powder River Basin of Wyoming and Montana to the Texas Gulf Coast.

The governor issued a statement Friday morning disclosing his decision about the controversial proposal of Texas Eastern Transmission Co.

The state Legislature earlier this year authorized Herschler to decide whether to enter into a contract with Texas Eastern.

"The primary reason for my decision," the statement said, "is that there are too many questions which must be answered before I am convinced that the proposed coal slurry pipeline would serve the best interests of the state.

"I believe that the legislation put the cart before the horse," the statement continued. "The review process which I was required to pursue should have been accomplished prior to the passage of this legislation. Careful consideration should be given to any piece of legislation on water issues before it becomes law."

The statement said the 90 days the Legislature allowed Herschler to decide whether to authorize the pipeline "was not sufficient to seek full resolution" of several issues.

It said Herschler was concerned about the export of Wyoming's "precious water resources to Texas" and was uncertain how much water from the project would be available for other uses in Wyoming. Texas Eastern said more than 40,000 acre-feet of water from the Little Bighorn River would be included in the project and less than half the water would be used in the pipeline. Herschler said only 7,500 acre-feet of the total would be available for the state.

The governor's statement also expressed concern about the project's side effects, whether the Crow Indian tribe would settle a dispute over water rights to the river and how the Interstate Commerce Commission would regard the project. There were suggestions during the legislative debate the water would definitely be regarded as an interstate transportation medium.

Herschler met with Texas Eastern officials Thursday after indicating he would make his decision early next week. He had until May 23 to decide.

The governor's top aide, C. Richard Skinner, said two hours before the statement was released that Herschler was not in Cheyenne and no statement was expected Friday. Skinner said he didn't know where Herschler was.

The state Democratic Central Committee in April urged Herschler to reject the proposal.

Rocky Flats Products Renamed 'Fuel Cans'

DENVER (AP) — A nuclear weapons engineer has offered what may be the clearest explanation yet made public of the work done at the Rocky Flats nuclear weapons plant.

Rocky Flats officials periodically have advised reporters and the general public that the weapon components produced at Rocky Flats could most accurately be described as "nuclear triggers."

"It's ludicrous to call it a trigger," Larry McGrew, a nuclear weapons engineer now working at Rocky Flats, said Thursday night. "We're not making triggers. We're making fuel cans."

McGrew said "fuel cans" are actually two or more subcritical masses of fissionable material processed into a classified configuration. That configuration, he said, allows them to be triggered into a nuclear explosion by being violently shoved together to form a critical mass.

Felix Owen, director of information services for Rockwell International, which operates Rocky Flats for the federal government, said today that McGrew's statements were essentially accurate.

"That is what we do. We manufacture the fissionable material components — primarily that is plutonium — and the things that go with that to make the nuclear part of the weapon," said Owen.

"I don't know where that term came from," Owen said of the phrase "nuclear trigger." "Probably our own people started using it years ago."

Rocky Flats, 16 miles northwest of Denver between Golden and Boulder, is the nation's only facility for producing the plutonium components essential to modern nuclear weapons.

McGrew is on loan to Rockwell from the University of California nuclear design facility at Livermore, Calif. He made his comments about the work done at Rocky Flats at a meeting of the Skyline Optimist Club in Denver.

McGrew said the explosive charge that causes the shoving together of the subcritical masses in the "fuel cans" is not produced at Rocky Flats. The detonator that touches off the explosive, the actual trigger in a nuclear weapon, is made at still a different location, he said.

Only at a couple of military installations do the detonators, explosive charge and "fuel cans" ever come together, he said.

Owen said the materials manufactured at Rocky Flats, the high explosive charge and the detonation system are assembled at the Pantex plant owned by the federal government in Amarillo, Texas.

The high explosive charge and the detonation system are manufactured elsewhere and shipped to Amarillo, he said.

While McGrew said the components come together at only a few military installations, Owen said that work usually is done in Amarillo. "In some weapons system," he added, "the detonation system goes in on the sight."

The fissionable components produced at Rocky Flats primarily are made of plutonium "with other things added sometimes to make them work," Owen said.

McGrew spoke of the "fuel cans" containing two or more pieces of subcritical material. Owen said he would not be able to answer for security reasons whether any of the "fuel cans" in fact contained only a single piece of fissionable material.

Pneumonia Varieties Resist Penicillin

ATLANTA (AP) — Strains of pneumonia partially resistant to penicillin are becoming increasingly common in the United States, the national Center for Disease Control reported Friday.

The CDC, in its Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report released Friday, told of a 15-month-old child who had a case of pneumonia that resisted penicillin for several weeks last year. She finally was cured after high-dose penicillin therapy.

In another case, in 1977, the CDC said, a 5-year-old girl had a blood stream infection with pneumonia which was effectively resistant to penicillin.

"The individual had frequent bacterial infections and was on chronic penicillin treatment," said Dr. Jeffrey Band of the center's special pathogens branch. "This is a setting one always will worry about, someone constantly exposed to penicillin. The organism exposed will become resistant."

The CDC is coordinating a national study of penicillin's effectiveness against pneumonia at selected hospitals. Cases of pneumonia resistant to penicillin also have been found in South Africa and Canada, CDC said.

And, the report said, "Reports of pneumococci with intermediate or partial resistance to penicillin have appeared with increasing frequency in this country."

Pneumococci are bacteria that cause pneumonia and certain other diseases.

More cases of resistant pneumonia have not been uncovered, he said, because penicillin has been uniformly effective in treatment.

"It is not until someone actively looks into it, that we see the cases. Now, we have documented problems in other countries, as well," he said.

But he said the few isolated cases will not change the recommended treatment for the illness.

Band said examples of other ailments that have become resistant to penicillin are staph infections and a certain strain of gonorrhea.

Pope Commemorates Polish Deaths In World War II Battle

MONTE CASSINO, Italy (AP) — Pope John Paul II prayed that the world be spared the destruction of war Friday as he walked amid the graves of more than 1,000 Polish soldiers killed in the Allied assault on this hilltop Benedictine abbey during World War II.

The Polish-born pontiff said Mass at a permanent altar erected near the Monte Cassino Abbey to mark the 35th anniversary of the battle, scene of some of the war's fiercest fighting. Polish forces stormed the abbey and cleared the way for an advance to Nazi-occupied Rome.

"Let's pray, keeping in mind that it is no longer a question of swords or spears but of nuclear arms, of means of destruction that are capable of reducing to nothing the land inhabited by men," the pontiff declared.

The pontiff, speaking in both Italian and Polish, said war produced both "the face of heroism and human cruelty."

He warned that the destruction and loss of life from World War II would only be multiplied with the use of nuclear weapons.

In a reference to Nazism and Fascism, the pope denounced governments that produce cruelty adding, "we are now threatened by other systems where violence is held up as a legal method."

Friday was the pope's 59th birthday and the crowd of 10,000 — which included 6,000 Poles who gathered for the ceremonies — chanted a greeting of "Sto lat! Sto lat!" a Polish expression for "May you live 100 years."

Former members of the Free Polish Forces and their families came from Poland, western Europe and north America to place rosaries or flowers in the red and white colors of the Polish flag on the graves. Many wept.

"After 1,000 years the Polish people finally have a pope," said Karol Tomaszewski of Buffalo, N.Y., one of 200 Americans who flew in for the ceremonies.

The Polish government was represented by a deputy defense minister.

When the smiling pontiff entered the cemetery, a cheer erupted from the crowd, and many waved streamers and Polish flags.

In his address, the Pope noted the sacrifice of the Poles, as well as the dead in nearby German, British, Italian and French military cemeteries. Thousands of American war dead are buried in the Anzio-Nettuno military cemetery at the historic beachhead west of the area.

The pontiff said his prayers went out for all who died in defense of their country, those who "did not die in vain and shed their blood to help unite all men."

Later, the pope preached and spent the afternoon at the sixth century abbey, a treasure of ancient Christendom. The abbey was rebuilt after being destroyed in a controversial Allied bombing in February 1944. The original abbey was founded in 529 by St. Benedict, whose tomb was untouched in the bombing.

The Allies ordered the bombing because they believed the abbey was a Nazi stronghold and strategic lookout. Those who survived the bombing said the Germans were not inside the abbey. The dead included about 250 Italian civilians who took refuge inside the church, thinking it would be spared an attack.

Church Slates Summer School

First Christian Church, 2323 Broadway, is sponsoring a special eight-week summer school for under-achievers.

Parent information sessions will be held May 26 and June 2, from 9 a.m. to noon both days.

Designed for students ages nine to 15 years old, the "School of Successful Learning (S.O.S.)" will begin classes June 11 and will be conducted at the church from 8:30 a.m. until noon, five days a week.

The parent information sessions May 26 and June 2 also will have testing for prospective students.

The school will be under the direction of Mrs. Georgia Barham and Mrs. Marlene Moore and will provide basic studies in reading, creative writing and math, modeled after the University of California at Los Angeles Learning Lab.

It will be a program of accelerated learning, conducted with a pleasant, positive approach with no criticism, according to a church spokesman. It is planned to help discouraged under-achievers find that they can learn and achieve, he added.

Testing will be employed both at the beginning and end of school to prove results, the spokesman said. Weekly achievement certificates, as well as end-term report cards, will be given.

A fee schedule based on the family's ability to pay has been designed with fees ranging from 50 cents to $6 per pupil per day.

Additional information on the school may be obtained by calling the church office at 763-1996 or Mrs. Barham at 792-9527 after 5 p.m.

American Bible Society Issues 'Common Bible' For All Church Groups

By GEORGE CORNELL

NEW YORK (AP) — A "common Bible," something a divided Christianity didn't possess for more than four centuries, nowadays is an increasingly common achievement.

Another new one, endorsed by both Protestants and Roman Catholics, came out this spring, the work of the interdenominationally supported American Bible Society.

The event was only part of a growing world-wide network in which the different churches work closely together on their shared basic charter — the Bible.

The Rev. Dr. Eugene Nida, head of the Bible society's translation department, notes that Protestants and Catholics now are cooperating around the globe to produce Scriptures in 136 languages.

Still, a "common Bible" in English is a relatively new milestone, first fully accomplished only in 1977, so the latest jointly endorsed one adds a further stride.

It came with the issuance of the "Good News Bible with Deuterocanonicals-Apocrypha," including books which Catholicism considers inspired and Protestantism regards only as instructive.

Catholic Archbishop John F. Whealon of Hartford, Conn., who put his church's imprimatur of approval on the new book, says it makes "possible the common use of one Bible by all Christians."

The translation is based on the society's "Today's English" or "Good News" translation, designed to put Scriptures in easily understandable English, a version first completed in 1978.

A similar translation of 15 additional, inter-testamental books made for the mutual acceptability. Protestants regard them as useful but not inspired and call them "apocryphal." Catholics regard 12 of them as inspired and call them "deuterocanonical," meaning late additions to the primary books, considered canonical by all Christians.

The subtle differentiation stems from early Christian uncertainties over the particular books. The Catholic view never spelled out until the 16th century Protestant Reformation took its position about them.

Martin Luther said they are "not to be regarded on the same level as Holy Scripture, yet they are useful and good for reading." The Catholic Council of Trent in 1546 responded by saying they are to be accepted "with equal devotion and reverence" as Scripture.

Scholars say Protestant appreciation for the books has grown in recent times, both for their historical and spiritual value.

Besides the new "common Bible" in the "Good News" version, the Protestant-produced Revised Standard version also was issued in "common Bible" form in 1973.

However, it did not include certain other books considered canonical by Eastern Orthodox, but these later were added to an edition of the Revised Standard Version published in 1977, making it the first inclusively accepted "common Bible."

It has been approved for formal church liturgical services of Catholics, Protestants and Eastern Orthodox, as well as for private reading, study classes and ecumenical gatherings, and has become the most widely used version.

However, because of the easy-reading appeal of the "Good News" translation, requests for a "common Bible" edition of it came from English-speaking mission areas as well as from the Vatican and the Episcopal Church.

In producing it, the 162-year-old Bible society displayed its widened ecumenical scope. Long an inter-Protestant organization, it now includes Catholic Bible scholars, and Archbishop Whealon has been on its board of governors for the past three years.

Although its new "common Bible" has not yet been approved for use in the Catholic Mass, he said that may come later.

The everyday-English "Good News" translation has become widely popular, with 30 million copies of its New Testament, completed in 1966, now in circulation, along with 7 million copies of its full "Good News Bible," completed in 1976.

The late Cardinal Richard Cushing of Boston called that one a "gem" and gave it his imprimatur, making it also a "common Bible." But the new one, with the added books, is more so.

Solon Reveals Financial Holdings

WASHINGTON (AP) Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, had assets worth a minimum of $5.1 million last year without counting a share of his mother's $3.4 million estate still in probate, a financial disclosure report released Friday showed.

The maximum worth of the senator's assets would be $11.6 million.

Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, had requested a 15-day extension for filing his report past the May 15 deadline.

The biggest chunk of Bentsen's assets came as between $2 million and $5 million worth of Tide Products, Inc., stock. The Edinburg, Texas, company's business is based on agricultural supplies.

The disclosure reports do not require precise amounts but list values by dollar categories.

Bentsen's transactions last year included purchase of a 130-acre Virginia farm worth between $250,000 and $500,000.

He listed residences as a condominium apartment in Washington's fashionable Kalorama section worth between $250,000 and $500,000 when purchased in 1977 and the Round River Ranch in Brazoria County, Texas, valued in the same price range in 1967.

Bentsen's liabilities totaled between $790,000 and $1.8 million. The largest was a 9 1/4 percent mortgage paid monthly to the Bank of Virginia in Falls Church with a value between $250,000 and $500,000.

American Federal Savings and Loan of Washington held a 9 percent mortgage payable monthly worth between $100,000 and $250,000.

The senator's personal property included between $1 million and $2 million in First National Bank of McAllen stock and between $250,000 and $500,000 in stock of another South Texas bank, First National Bank of Mission.

He owned between $1 million and $2 million worth of Texas Commerce Bancshares National Corp. stock.

Among the other companies listed in Bentsen's stock portfolio were Allied Chemical, DuPont, Colgate Palmolive, IBM, Halliburton and Procter and Gamble.

Dallas Sheriff Refuses Claim For Payment Of Parking Fee

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas County's five-star sheriff says he doesn't have to pay tolls to go anywhere in his county, apparently including fees at the gates to the Dallas-Fort Worth Regional Airport — in Tarrant County.

Carl Thomas, who sometimes sports a uniform with five stars and has been carrying on a local feud with the news media, made headlines again Friday over a wrangle with airport officials over a parking fee.

The scenario, according to the Dallas Morning News, went like this:

Late last Saturday, Thomas' chauffeur and deputy, Jim White, went to the airport to pick up his boss, who was returning from "a couple of days off."

White flashed his badge and declined to take a parking ticket to gain access to the airport. Drivers entering the huge facility normally take a ticket upon entering, then pay a parking fee when leaving based on the amount of time spent at the airport.

Airport official Len Limmer said he has a letter from Thomas acknowledging a new airport policy on parking for law officers. Limmer said the new policy requires officers not on duty or in an unmarked vehicle to take a ticket and pay for it, to be reimbursed later if a department head verifies the trip was on official business. Access decals are provided unmarked cars, but Limmer said White's vehicle bore no such decal, although Thomas was provided seven of them.

The newspaper quoted airport officials as saying White told a gate attendant he was on official business to "pick up a prisoner." He was driving an unmarked sheriff's vehicle.

"He (White) became obnoxious, threatened to arrest the girl and said she was disobeying the law and could be put in jail. He threatened to drive through and break the gate," said airport information officer James Street.

White called an airport security officer and the young woman called her supervisor.

White finally accepted the ticket and entered the airport to pick up Thomas, who said, "I just took a couple of days off, out of town."

Upon leaving, another gate scene ensued, but Thomas denied he was in the car at the time.

But Street said Thomas and White left without paying a parking fee, instead signing an "uncollected ticket sheet."

Thomas said he would pay a bill for the ticket, "but it's all a little stupid."

Warning up, Thomas added: "It's ridiculous. I'm not sure it's (collection of parking fees from him) legal."

"You tell those people at the airport that I am the sheriff of Dallas County, and I've got the prerogative to go anywhere I want to in this county without paying a toll. If they don't like it, I will put them in jail."

Thomas failed to return telephone calls to The Associated Press Friday.

Tarrant County Sheriff Lon Evans said his officers routinely accept the parking tickets and pay the fees if there is any confusion over the new parking policy.

Limmer paid Thomas $1.50 parking fee.

'Brother Roloff' Bill Postponed, Possibly For Good, In House

AUSTIN (AP) — The "Brother Roloff" bill, exempting child care institutions from state regulation if children are placed in their custody by court order, received a possibly fatal blow Friday in the Texas House.

Representatives voted 78-59 to postpone the bill to May 26, two days before the regular legislative session ends.

"I want to kill it!" said Rep. Froy Salinas, D-Lubbock, who made the motion.

Under House rules, no bill may be brought up on second reading — the status of the Roloff Bill — in the final 72 hours of the session, which ends at midnight May 28.

Rep. Mike Ezzell, D-Snyder, a sponsor of the bill (HB554), said an attempt to persuade representatives to reconsider their decision to postpone the bill was "a possibility."

He also said there was a chance senators might pass and send over a similar bill by Sen. Walter Mengden, R-Houston.

The measure that reached the House floor would have exempted from state licensing and inspection any child care institution serving children "who are in the owner's or operator's custody by virtue of a court-authorized conservatorship or guardianship."

A number of children in evangelist Lester Roloff's institutions have been placed there by order of district judges.

Rep. Dave Allred, D-Wichita Falls, said sponsors of the bill apparently wanted to put Roloff "above the law." He said Roloff's homes were under investigation by the FBI and the Nueces County grand jury.

He said he had just received a report that one Roloff home held a 33-year-old man against his will until a deputy sheriff rescued him because "he wasn't saved yet."

Rep. Tom Uher, D-Bay City, urged the House to debate the bill, not postpone it, because a family in the gallery had waited five days to "see what happens."

He said a member of the family had been in one of Roloff's institutions after having problems with drugs.

"This family has experienced a great deal of heartache. There was no place they could turn to but one place," said Uher.

Speaker Bill Clayton reportedly favored the bill, and Ezzell said he doubted the bill would have reached the House calendar by jumping over many other bills without Clayton's support.

Clayton told a Roloff rally in March that he was proud to have cast the tie-breaking vote two years ago for a bill that would have exempted Roloff's institutions from regulation.

Roloff has steadfastly resisted the law requiring all child care institutions to obtain licenses from the Texas Department of Human Resources and submit to periodic inspections.

He maintains this would violate the constitutional guarantee of church-state separation.

Only Thursday, Roloff flew into Austin, paid a two-year-old contempt of court judgment totaling $33,146, and flew back to Corpus Christi.

Roloff had appealed all the way to the State Supreme Court from the human resources department's licensing orders, lost his case, yet continued to operate without a license.

State inspectors recently were turned away again from Roloff's Rebekah Home for Girls near Corpus Christi, Anchor Home for Boys in Zapata and Lighthouse Home in Kleberg County.

There was House floor talk that some Democratic legislators would vote against the Roloff bill because of Roloff's campaign efforts on behalf of Gov. Bill Clements.

Clements also was at the Roloff rally in March and said he was going to support legislation exempting the evangelist's institutions from licensing.

Rep. Matt Garcia, D-San Antonio, cited Roloff's legal troubles as a reason for voting to kill the bill and said Roloff had not come to the Legislature "with clean hands."

"I resent a person flaunting (sic) the order of the supreme court, putting himself above the law, then coming here and asking us to exempt him from a law he has refused to comply with," Garcia said.

Rep. Buck Florence, D-Hughes Springs, said neither the human resources department nor the Texas Youth Council have been as effective in helping troubled young people as Roloff.

"Basically, this man, whether we like him or don't like him, has produced a valuable service for the people of Texas. ... We should at least show him the dignity of addressing this bill," Florence said.

FIND STRENGTH FOR YOUR LIFE — ATTEND CHURCH

A man alone in a field . . . making the field ready for spring planting . . . perhaps is closer to God than he realizes.

The field didn't "just happen." The earth didn't "just happen." Those fruit trees, laden with blossoms, didn't choose to bloom just because they wanted to look pretty.

Stop and think about it. In the natural order of life, little is left to chance. There is a precision about the very rotation of the earth itself. There is a miracle embedded in each blade of grass.

All about us is the unmistakable evidence of Creation, by a Master Hand. The man in the field is, in some ways, closer to this creation than many of us, yet he too may very well be unaware of it. We can all capture or recapture this awareness by going to church regularly.

Israeli Troops Hit Palestinian Guerrillas On Lebanese Coast

Training Base Raid Retaliates For Terrorist Bombing

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Israel renewed its war against Palestinian guerrillas Friday, attacking a training base on the Lebanese coast 60 hours after a terrorist bomb killed two Israelis in the resort town of Tiberias.

Reports from Lebanon said the base was demolished by the attack, but no one was killed.

Israeli troops stormed ashore near Adloun, 21 miles north of the Israel-Lebanon border, and destroyed a base belonging to the Syrian-backed Saiga guerrilla organization, the Israeli military command reported.

The army spokesman gave few details of the pre-dawn operation, but said the Israelis took the camp by surprise, destroying two buildings and ammunition dumps. An unspecified number of guerrillas were killed, while there were no Israeli casualties, the army said.

"The raid was a good, precise action," Israeli Defense Minister Ezer Weizman told the Maariv newspaper. "We are adhering to a continuing policy of striking terrorists at every opportunity...We are trying not to hurt civilians."

Guerrilla spokesmen in Lebanon said Israeli attacked schools and the outskirts of the town of Insariyeh, an allegation denied by Israel.

"The targets were military," the Israeli spokesman said. "There were no civilians." Civilian residents in Adloun and Insariyeh said their towns suffered no shelling or damage because the fighting was limited to the base.

Guerrilla commanders said more than 150 Israeli commandos stormed ashore, firing machine guns, grenades and armor-piercing rockets. They said a Palestinian and a Lebanese were wounded in a two-hour battle, and said "many" Israelis were killed or wounded and evacuated by helicopter.

They said there were shootouts between the landing party and guerrilla defenders in the lemon and orange groves surrounding a two-story house used by guerrillas. The house, midway between the towns of Insariyeh and Adloun, was flattened.

The Lebanese army, meanwhile, arranged a cease-fire to end a fresh outbreak of hostilities between the nation's leftist and rightist militias in the mountains overlooking Beirut. Police reported two persons were killed and 22 were wounded in the 24-hour flare-up.

The Israeli spokesman did not say the commando operation was in retaliation for Tuesday's bombing in Tiberias that killed two teenage boys and wounded 32 others. But military action against Lebanese-based Palestinians had been expected after the bomb exploded in a downtown street of the resort town on the Sea of Galilee.

Art Security Policy Unchanged At Tech

flaws which made them easily traceable. The 16 stolen prints were not marked.

Havis added that some collectors feel marking art with an identification system lowers its value and many do not mark their property. But if art is not marked, Havis said, it is difficult to prove ownership. This especially is true in the case of Currier & Ives prints, of which many copies of the same scene may be in existence.

Drew earlier this week expressed concern that the Tech theft might affect the museum's ability to secure future exhibits.

But Havis said NTSU's art theft in 1975 "has not really had that effect."

However, the school did change some of its exhibiting policies after the incident. "We stopped exhibiting after 5 p.m. and on weekends," Havis said.

NTSU Police Chief Robby Robinson also said the university now urges all exhibitors to exhibit only prints bearing some type of identification.

None of the 16 prints has been recovered, despite involvement of the Federal Bureau of Investigation in the case.

Dr. Edward Mattil, who was chairman of the NTSU art department at the time of the theft, said there haven't been any "appreciable" changes in the school's art security policy because, "We had a good security system — no external doors from the building out of the art gallery and always a sitter on duty. But this was a holdup."

The art theft at NTSU was the first at that university and only the second for the exhibit owner, J.A. Smythe of Travelers said the company has exhibited between 350 and 400 prints for the past 20 to 25 years and the only other theft occurred several years ago and involved only one print.

When Esmarck Corp. and Travelers Insurance Co. were contacted by The Avalanche-Journal, each company believed it was the only company sponsoring traveling exhibits of Currier & Ives prints.

After the companies learned of one another's existence, however, both expressed an interest in comparing notes on the Tech and NTSU thefts.

"We have not marked our prints," Smythe said. He believes it lowers the value of the art, although he noted that ultraviolet inks have been discussed as a possible identification procedure.

Miss Sode, in charge of booking traveling exhibits for Esmarck, said she did not know if the Esmarck prints had been marked.

Repeatedly expressing surprise over the Tech theft, she said "These prints have toured for years all over the world and we've never had any stolen."

Because the prints taken were valued at less than some of the other works in the exhibit, she speculated that the size of the two stolen prints may have been a factor.

"They were two of our smallest pieces," she said. The missing prints measured 9 by 6 inches — about the size of a book. Police said they were small enough to be carried out of the museum in a woman's purse.

But Havis said NTSU's art theft in 1975 "has not really had that effect."

California Gasoline Lines Still Long; Irritated Pro Gridder Buys Station

LOS ANGELES (AP) — California drivers perked up slightly Friday when they were told a little relief would come this weekend in the gasoline drought, but lines were still blocks long at many stations.

The state has ordered more service stations to keep pumping today and Sunday, and refiners were told to make more gasoline available, but many motorists think it will be only a drop in the bucket.

And drivers were still frustrated.

with lines up to four blocks long in parts of Los Angeles.

In San Diego, Johnny Rodgers, wide receiver for the Chargers professional football team, got so upset at waiting in line in his Rolls Royce that he bought a gas station.

"I bought it for my friends' convenience too," Rodgers said.

State Energy Commission Chairman Richard Maulin ordered nine oil refiners in the state to provide an additional 1.6 million gallons of gasoline to stations that still open the next two weekends.

Although it's a small percentage of the total gasoline used in the state, Energy Commission spokeswoman Nikki Case said the additional gallons — 40 percent for this weekend and 60 percent for next weekend — could allow some stations to remain open this weekend.

Last weekend, about 66 percent of the stations in California's major cities were closed Saturday and 92 percent were shut on Sunday.

"I got an extra load of gasoline for this weekend," said C. J. Wesley, owner of a San Fernando Valley of Los Angeles gasoline station, which unlike the past weekends will be open at least four hours a day both today and Sunday.

Will Be Pumping

"I'll be pumping," Wesley said. "All pumps are go!"

Earlier this week Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. ordered all stations that sold at least 750,000 gallons last year to remain open either Saturday or Sunday, and police in Los Angeles will be out checking to make sure they are.

"We have a sergeant in each area who has been appointed energy czar and he has little 'czardines' out helping him," said Police spokesman Lt. Dan Cooke. "Any stations not open when they are supposed to be will be written up and the city attorney will be notified."

But many station owners have said they don't care what the governor ordered, they don't have the gas and they aren't staying open.

"I'm not afraid of prosecution," one owner said. "Mr. Brown can come here and try to do a better job."

Meanwhile, lines Friday were long as usual as motorists with even-numbered license plates figured they couldn't get gasoline Sunday and their next chance would be Tuesday.

Most of the state's drivers have been under odd-even rationing for 10 days.

Absent Dozen Block Senate

general party primary elections.

Hobby plans to use a relatively unimportant bill affecting party county chairmen as vehicle for the separate primary provisions. If the bill passes the Senate, he said an amendment would be attached in the House to set up a March presidential primary.

(Speaker Bill) Clayton has okayed the approach," the lieutenant governor told reporters. "I don't know if he has actually seen the amendment."

After waiting all day, Hobby dismissed the 19 senators who showed up but told them to be available if the others were found. Shortly after 6 p.m., he said the state police were issuing an all-points bulletin for the absent members.

Before going home, the senators in attendance reconvened and took some verbal pot-shots at their "lardy brethren," as one said.

"You play within the rules," said Sen. Jack Ogg, D-Houston, sponsor of the presidential primary bill. "You don't get out in that gray twilight and not know victory or defeat. The system is not to hide out to be a fugitive from the law."

The missing members are shirking their constitutional duties, several said.

"It's an embarrassment," said Sen. Grani Jones, D-Abilene.

Sen. Betty Andujar, R-Fort Worth, asked Hobby what the "Killer Ees" had accomplished.

"They've accomplished wasting three or four very crucial days for transaction of a lot of business that has to be transacted between now and May 28 to operate this state," Hobby said.

Last Cult Bodies Leave Delaware

DOVER AIR FORCE BASE, Del. (AP) — The last 46 bodies of Peoples Temple members were unceremoniously hoisted onto a commercial moving truck Friday for a four-day trip to California.

Despite the initial local uproar last November when a total of 913 bodies were brought here, there was no one to see them off Friday.

Appeal Vowed In Huge Silkwood Case Award

$10.5 Million For 'Contamination'

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — A federal jury awarded the three children of the late Karen Silkwood $10.5 million Friday, finding that the Kerr-McGee Corp. was negligent in its operation of a nuclear fuel plant where she worked when she became contaminated with plutonium.

It is the first time a U.S. nuclear products firm has been held liable for radioactive contamination that occurred outside its plant.

Several organizations hailed the verdict as a victory for workers' rights and women's rights and said it will set a precedent for other radiation contamination cases.

"We will definitely, absolutely appeal," said Bill Paul, Kerr-McGee's chief counsel.

Miss Silkwood, 28, was a lab technician at Kerr-McGee's fuel processing plant at Crescent, Okla., when she died in a Nov. 13, 1974, single-car crash, the week after she and her apartment were found to have been contaminated with radioactive plutonium.

The three-man, three-woman jury that returned the verdict of $10 million in punitive damages and $505,000 in actual damages rejected the company's claim that Miss Silkwood stole plutonium and took it to her Edmond apartment to spike her urine samples. The company claimed she did this to back her claims of unsafe working conditions.

Amid loud applause from one side of the courtroom when the verdict was announced at 10:40 a.m., Silkwood lawyer Gerry Spence blew kisses to the jurors, who had spent 50 days hearing testimony.

Miss Silkwood's parents, Bill and Merle Silkwood, fought back tears.

"I just think it's wonderful and I'm finally glad they've got Karen's name cleared," said a sobbing Mrs. Silkwood. "She was only trying to help those people get a clean plant. She was just trying to help."

Except for attorney fees, the money from the judgment is expected to go to the Silkwood estate. The sole heirs are Miss Silkwood's three children, Beverly Meadows, 12; Dawn Meadows, 8; and Michael Meadows, 10. The administrator of the estate is Miss Silkwood's father.

Miss Silkwood was divorced from Bill Meadows in 1972 and had her maiden name restored.

An active member of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers union, she and two coworkers had filed 39 health and safety allegations against Kerr-McGee.

Kerr-McGee had attempted to show it operated a safe plant and had complied with all government standards, especially the radiation exposure limits set by federal regulatory agencies.

"Those standards go in the trash can now," said Danny Sheehan, chief counsel for the Silkwood estate. "They are just inoperative. They have now been negated."

U.S. District Judge Frank G. This granted Kerr-McGee's request for a delay in making his formal judgment to allow lawyers to file a number of routine post-trial motions, including a motion for a new trial. He indicated in chambers several times he is not likely to set aside the jury's verdict.

In his instructions, This told jurors they might consider the federal regulations in attempting to decide whether Kerr-McGee was negligent but that they were not bound by the standards.

Sheehan urged residents in the vicinity of the Three Mile Island nuclear power plant in Pennsylvania to "go like gangbusters" in filing suits against the plant's owner in connection with the recent accident there.

Paul estimated it would be six or seven months before the 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals hears oral arguments on the case.

The night Miss Silkwood died, she was en route to meet a union official and a New York Times reporter to turn over alleged documentation of her claims Kerr-McGee was falsifying its nuclear fuel rod quality reports.

The notebooks and other materials were never found and This prevented Silkwood lawyers from introducing evidence they say shows Kerr-McGee officials stole the documents from Miss Silkwood's wrecked auto. This also prevented Kerr-McGee attorneys from arguing that there were no documents.

Federal court rules allow judges the discretion to bar evidence when they feel its prejudicial character far outweighs its value in deciding a case. This used that rule to block Kerr-McGee attempts to introduce testimony dealing with Miss Silkwood's sex life and alleged drug use.

The verdict drew applause from the National Organization for Women, which took up the Silkwood cause as a symbol of feminist concerns about health and safety in the work place.

"Whether you call it killing the messenger or blaming the victim, both in life and death Karen Silkwood was castigated because she dared to point out the questionable practices of her employer," said Eleanor Smeal, president of NOW.

Schlesinger Accuses Kennedy Of Energy 'Pie In Sky' Views

NEW YORK (AP) — Energy Secretary James Schlesinger accused Sen. Edward M. Kennedy Friday of seeing "pie in the sky" for the energy future of the United States and telling Americans only what they want to hear about oil supply problems.

Asked on ABC's "World News Tonight" about the Massachusetts Democrat's persistent criticism of President Carter's energy plans, Schlesinger said, "Sen. Kennedy tends to see pie in the sky. There is no great supply of oil out there."

He added, "The problem of this society is that there is very limited capacity to produce additional oil, and that of course is an unpalatable thing for him to accept for the society to accept."

"It is far better to tell people what they want to hear, that there is no problem, that (it) is all the fault of the companies or the fault of government policy, it is not a natural phenomenon."

Last week, Kennedy criticized Carter proposals to decontrol prices of domestically produced oil and to levy a "windfall-profits" tax on oil companies. The first proposal would be too hard on the poor and the second would be too lenient on the oil companies, he said.

Kennedy asserted, "We need not resort to desperate measures like decontrol or fight the dubious battle for a dubious windfall-profits tax."

Earlier Friday, Schlesinger said California could reduce its long lines at the gas pumps by enforcing the 55-mph speed limit and changing its strict pollution controls.

He said the rest of the country can avoid that state's predicament if it avoids California's excesses and if increased supplies of crude that he forecast for the near future come through.

"There are special circumstances in California. If the public generally understands the need not to run and top tanks, as they have been doing in California, we should avoid those long lines," he said in an interview on NBC-TV's "Today" show.

On the 55 mph speed limit, he said, "California is the only state, I believe in the union, without mobile radar in order to enforce traffic speed limits."

California would save as much as "25,000 barrels of oil a day by enforcing the 55-mile limit. If they adjust environmental standards, they'd save the same thing."

He said if California "avoids the toping of tanks, if there is a greater degree of calm, if there is a return to more conservative driving habits, I think those lines will diminish."

Despite what he called "misleading" comments by California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., Schlesinger said allocations in California "are not being increased, save to the extent that there are new filling stations or larger sales at existing filling stations."

In San Francisco, Brown denied making any misleading statements and said the energy secretary's comments were "another piece of evidence that Mr. Schlesinger is desperate."

"Mr. Schlesinger is engaging in rhetorical obfuscation, if not outright deception, to try to shift blame for the bankruptcy of his own policies."

Farm Export Record Seen

report said exports to Western Europe are expected to total $9.5 billion this year, up from about $8.7 billion in 1977-78.

Sales to Eastern Europe were put at $1.4 billion, up from about $1.1 billion last year. Purchases by the Soviet Union, which have included recent quantities of corn and wheat, were put at $2 billion, up from about $1.9 billion last year.

Asia, collectively, is the largest U.S. farm market, forecast at $11.9 billion, compared to less than $9.5 billion last year. China's purchases were estimated at $1 billion, up from $368 million in 1977-78.

Japan continues as the largest single-country foreign market for American farmers, with sales to that nation estimated at $4.8 billion, up from $4.2 billion last year, the report showed.

Other areas included: Canada $1.8 billion this fiscal year and less than $1.6 billion last year; North Africa $1 billion and $965 million; other African countries $700 million and $655 million; Latin America $3.2 billion and $2.76 billion; and Oceania $100 million and $149 million.

Florida Governor Signs Execution Warrants

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP)—Florida Gov. Bob Graham signed death warrants Friday for convicted murderers John A. Spenkelink and Willie Jasper Darden, and a prison official scheduled their electrocutions for next Wednesday at 7 a.m.

The executions would be the first in the United States since January 1977, when Gary Mark Gilmore refused to fight his execution by a Utah firing squad. Spenkelink and Darden would be the first prisoners to be executed unwillingly in this country since 1967. Florida's last execution was in 1964.

Attorneys for Spenkelink immediately announced plans to ask the Florida Supreme Court to stay his execution until the court rules on an earlier petition to vacate Spenkelink's death sentence.

Darden's attorney also said he would appeal.

Andrew Graham of Cocoa, one of Spenkelink's attorneys, said Friday afternoon that the motion for a stay would be filed Saturday morning. Supreme Court Justice Ben Overton said the court would give the request high priority. Jack Boger of the NAACP Legal Defense Fund, which also is representing Spenkelink, said that if the state Supreme Court denies the stay, appeals will be taken to the federal courts.

Death penalty opponents immediately promised to mount demonstrations and vigils to protest the executions, which they fear will trigger additional executions in Florida and the nation. Many foes of capital punishment say they believe it is used most often against convicts who are poor or members of minority groups.

Darden has several avenues of appeal open to him, but Spenkelink's case appears to have almost no room for further delays. He has an appeal pending with the state Supreme Court, asking that his sentence be vacated, but the court has not stayed his execution.

Florida has 131 men and one woman under death sentences, the largest number of condemned persons of any state in the nation. A majority of those on Death Row are white.

Spenkelink, 30, who is white, was convicted of the Feb. 4, 1973, shooting death of a traveling companion, Joseph Szymankiewicz, at a Tallahassee motel.

Darden, 45, who is black, was convicted of the Sept. 8, 1973, murder of Lakeland, Fla., furniture store owner James Turman.

D.H. Brierton, superintendent at the Florida State Prison in Starke, about 40 miles southwest of Jacksonville, was notified of the warrant signings at 8 a.m. and immediately told Spenkelink and Darden, according to Graham's legal counsel, Robin Gibson.

Brierton set the executions for 7 a.m. on May 23 but did not say which condemned man would go to the electric chair first.

Gibson said Graham would not comment on why he picked Spenkelink and Darden. "The governor has asked me to be his spokesman and any comments regarding his thought processes would be inappropriate and serve no useful purposes," Gibson told reporters. "I know this was a concern for the governor during the campaign and I know he has given it complete and thorough thought." Graham supported the death penalty in his campaign for governor last year.

Under Florida law, the governor must decide whether or not to recommend clemency in capital cases. If he decides in favor of clemency, he must convince three members of the Cabinet to join him. But if he chooses to sign a death warrant instead, he specifies the week in which the execution is to occur. In this case, the week began at noon Friday.

Spenkelink's conviction was upheld by the Florida Supreme Court in 1975 and the the U.S. Supreme Court first declined to hear the case in July 1976.

Former Gov. Reubin Askew and the Florida Cabinet, sitting as the Board of Executive Clemency, reviewed his clemency appeal in March 1977 and Askew signed a warrant on Sept. 12, 1977. A federal judge in Tallahassee stayed the execution three days before it was to occur and Spenkelink pursued an appeal though the federal courts. The U.S. Supreme Court refused for the fourth time in March to hear his appeal. Graham subsequently ordered a second clemency hearing, which was held in April.

Running Regimen Starts Slow With Easy Warm-Up Exercise

By BARBARA McDOWELL

NEW YORK (NEA) — Are you still treating running as a spectator sport?

Provided you are in reasonably good health, you can be running 30 minutes at a stretch within three months, says marathoner Bob Glover, who has taught more than 10,000 people to run in the past eight years.

Glover, co-author of "The Runner's Handbook," has developed a 12-week running course that he hopes will spread to 100 U.S. cities by late 1980 via the "Run For Life" program of Connecticut Mutual Life.

In his office near the New York runner's mecca of Central Park, Glover recently described his course, the basics of which can be used to launch an individual running program.

Glover first explains how not to begin: "The typical person puts on an old pair of tennis shoes, goes out the door, starts running and runs until he stops. Then he sits down, takes a drink and maybe walks back home. That's not the way to do it!"

Get your doctor's approval before running one step, he advises. A check-up — plus blood and stress tests — is vital if you are over 35, overweight, a heavy smoker or a victim of hypertension.

Then decide upon your goals. Glover helps his students set objectives for running distance or duration, flexibility and weight loss. ("But you're not going to lose weight if you don't diet also," he notes.)

Next comes a shopping trip to select a pair of running shoes.

Glover says a good running shoe has three characteristics: cushioning (to help absorb the stress of hitting the ground at a force three times your body weight), flexibility (so that you can push off properly with your toes) and support around the side of the foot.

"Take three or four or five models and try them on," he suggests. "See what feels best on you."

You don't need a flashy warm-up suit, he adds. Wear just enough to keep you cool but decent in summer and warm in winter. He recommends loose-fitting garments that can be removed as you heat up.

When the day of your first run arrives, don't just begin pounding the pavement.

"We always start off with relaxation exercises — slow head rolls, deep breathing and things of that nature," Glover explains. "We tell them to unscrew their hurry heads and put on leisure heads."

Next are 15 minutes of slow stretching exercises to loosen the muscles.

Glover describes one such exercise: "Sit down (on the floor) with your feet in front of you. Reach your fingertips toward your toes as far as you can comfortably and hold. Don't force it. Don't jerk."

"You're stretching the muscles out at the backs of the legs," he explains. "Those are the muscles you're going to work when you're running, so you want to prepare them for that activity."

The final preparation is five minutes or more of walking to bring your heart rate slowly up to what Glover calls the "exercise level."

He recommends running at a heart rate of between 70 and 85 percent of your maximum. (You can approximate your maximum by subtracting your age from 220.) As a double check, he advises running a pace that permits you to talk.

"In the first class, we start a person running one minute and walking two for a total of 20 minutes," says Glover of the core of his program.

The second week, students alternate one minute of walking. By the eighth week, they are running for the full 20 minutes.

Glover stresses the "three r's" of running: Run tall. Run relaxed. Run naturally.

"What I look for is that the person is comfortable and running safely, not absolute perfect form," he says. That means running erect, carrying your arms easily between your chest and waist with your hands loosely cupped.

"Land lightly on the heel — almost flat-footed — to absorb the shock," he adds. "Then roll of the ball of the foot. Landing on the toes causes a lot of stress to the lower leg."

Glover concedes that many people are capable of more running in the early weeks than his program calls for. He has two reasons for his go-slow approach — to minimize risks to the body and to foster a greater sense of achievement.

He theorizes that the "high" of steady improvement can motivate you to continue running through the difficult early weeks until it becomes a habit.

Glover assigns homework. Students must run on their own at least twice during the week and record their progress on a diary. (He says three 20- to 30-minute runs are the minimum needed weekly for fitness.)

"It's dangerous just to sit down after running," says Glover. So, a run should be followed by a cool-down — "a warm-up reverse," he explains — of slow walking, stretching and relaxation exercises.

"At the end of the class, people are almost asleep, lying on the floor with their eyes shut," Glover says. "They feel refreshed. They feel up."

"Some amazing things happen," he says. "Like the guy who said, 'I felt so good after class that I called up my ex-wife and took her out to dinner.'"

The "three r's" of running: Run tall. Run relaxed. Run natural.

Shy Rattler, 'Wired For Sound,' Reveals Mysterious Information

By BARBARA S. MOFFET

National Geographic News Service
TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — When Dr. Bruce Means wants to find a snake, he listens for a beep instead of a rattle.

And when he hears the beep, he heads out into the woods until he finds his rattlesnake, usually coiled up snoozing in a hole in the ground or in an old tree stump. Means records the snake's whereabouts and then gets on his way — often on motorcycle — to find another snake.

The animals don't beep on their own, of course. They beep because Means has forced them battery-powered transmitters. By following their signals with an antenna and receiver, Means is learning the secrets of an often misunderstood snake — its eating and breeding habits and its uncanny ability to find its prey and a mate.

"What was previously known about reptiles could be dropped into a thimble," Means said. There are about 70 species and subspecies of rattlers alone, he said, but their shy ways and natural disguise make them hard to study.

The eastern diamondback rattler — the light and dark diamond-patterned snake Means is concentrating on — blends so well with its surroundings that even after telemetry has led him to the place a snake is hiding, it can take several minutes for him to spot it.

Means, a 38-year-old ecologist, is director of Tall Timbers Research Station, a private organization for ecological studies.

A lush former plantation on the Florida-Georgia border, Tall Timbers is an ideal location to track the eastern diamondback, whose range spans the open, piney forests from coastal North Carolina to eastern Louisiana.

Growing to an average length of five feet and an average weight of six or seven pounds, the eastern diamondback is the longest, heaviest poisonous snake in the country. It can weigh as much as 16 pounds.

It is also the most dangerous snake, releasing a very large and unusually toxic dose of venom when it strikes. More deaths result from the bite of the eastern diamondback, a pit viper, than of any other snake in the United States.

"Like most poisonous snakes, the eastern diamondback has a Dr. Jekyll-Mr. Hyde personality," Means said. "They are usually very shy and docile, but when trod upon, they become frightened and go into an aggressive defense behavior. They coil up, begin to rattle, and strike."

So why get cozy with rattlesnakes? Means came to study them by way of the salamander.

"I'm very much in love with a certain kind of salamander," he said. But difficulty in marking it for identification defeated his attempts to study that animal. Rattlesnakes, reptiles scientists knew even less about, took its place. Means' study, which is more than three years old, is partly funded by the National Geographic Society.

He soon found that snakes have a reputation not wholly deserved. Their image as a fierce aggressor probably is a holdover from man's tribal days, the scientist suggested, when people generalized about dangers to protect themselves. The use of snakes as a symbol of evil in religion and mythology hasn't helped.

"I find beauty in them as part of nature," he said.

Swallowing prejudices about snakes wasn't difficult for Means. Designing a transmitter small enough for a snake to swallow was.

His technique now is to anesthetize each snake, mark it for identification, and then, using forceps, slide the paraffin-coated transmitter down the animal's throat and into its stomach, where it is held in place by muscles. After the snake is released, it can be tracked for about six months before the transmitter is passed out of its body or regurgitated.

So far he has followed 75 snakes, 28 of them with telemetry.

He'll never forget a 3 1/2-foot eastern diamondback he was working with in September 1976 in the days before he used anesthetic to calm his snake. As he tried to measure the snake in the laboratory, Means was bitten on the finger. He collapsed within five minutes and soon lost temporary control of his legs and arms.

After he had 30 units of antivenin at a hospital, nine days of hospital treatment, and several months of convalescence, he recovered. He says snakes

Rattlesnake Scientist Debunks Some Myths About Dangers

National Geographic News Service

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — What they told you about snakes at summer camp probably wasn't very scientific. It might not even be true.

Dr. Bruce Means, who has become an authority on the eastern diamondback rattlesnake and other snakes, responds to some myths.

Myth: Outrunning a snake is impossible. When you meet a snake, it is better to freeze rather than attempt to flee.

"Preposterous," Means says. It would be better to quickly get out of the way of the snake before it has a chance to strike.

Myth: A snake won't strike a slowly moving object.

False. A snake strikes if it perceives you as a threat. Your speed has little to do with its decision.

Myth: Rattlesnakes always rattle before striking.

Some strike without ever sounding a rattle, the scientist says. However, if a rattlesnake does rattle, chances are it's about to strike. The rattle probably developed long ago as a defense mechanism to scare predators and other animals threatening to trample snakes.

Myth: A rattlesnake can strike several times the length of its body.

No, it can't even strike the full length of its body.

'Immortality' Dying Of Terminal Apathy

BERKELEY, Calif. (NEA) — In 1964 physicist Robert Ettinger startled the nation by suggesting in a book that graveyards would one day become obsolete. In "The Prospects of Immortality," Ettinger wrote that people who die should be frozen rather than buried and then brought back to life in the future.

Ettinger's idea was rooted in the notion that science and technology will eventually find solutions to the disease and deteriorations which provoke death. And so if a man dies of, say, hypertension, he should be kept on ice until a cure is conceived, and ultimately rejuvenated by surgery and care.

Not surprisingly, Ettinger's book stirred quick imagination and imitation.

Suddenly, many thousands became true believers in the new science of cryonics, the ultimate survival. The media rushed in, so did many medical professionals. And in 1967 the first person was frozen in a space age cemetery.

Today, however, 15 years later, the thrill associated with the prospects of immortality seems to be waning. Indeed, cryonics, or solid state hypothermia, is suffering from a disabling disease on which the immortalists never figured: widespread apathy. Almost no one is willing to try to live forever.

Since 1964 fewer than a dozen people have been frozen away in a whole or part. There is a continuing rumor that Walt Disney may be suspended somewhere, on the chance he has not yet drawn his last mouse ears; but the rest of the deceased housed anonymously in insulation, and little remembered.

Baby Elephants Jet To New Homes

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Fifteen screeching baby pachyderms were loaded on a jumbo jet here Friday for a transcontinental hop to new homes in Europe and the United States.

Howling with hunger and poking inquisitive trunks between the boards of their specially constructed wooden crates, the elephants arrived at Jan Smuts airport after a 9 1/2-hour drive from their home in Kruger National Park.

Each crate was marked with a name, a biological symbol for the elephant's sex and a picture of a bottle or a bucket, depending whether the youngster had been weaned.

Wolfgang Delfs, the South-West African trapper and exporter handling the sale of the animals, helped his assistants open special feeding portals in the crates and showed gallon-sized feeding bottles with footlong nipples under the waving trunks.

The formula "is a special mixture of milk, charcoal, rice, mineral supplements and glucose," Delfs said. The charcoal is used to settle the animals' stomachs for the 13-hour-flight to Frankfurt, West Germany, he explained.

The pungent aroma in the big trailer-trucks and the slosh on the floor suggested that stomach-settling was definitely in order. Feeding was no problem, as the little elephants sucked in the grayish mixture as fast as it was prepared.

The elephants, aged six months to 2 1/2 years and weighing up to 1,100 pounds, are the first batch of 25 spared from culling at Kruger Park. They were sold by Delfs to various zoos and game parks.

In the first shipment, 12 elephants are destined for the wildlife Safari Park in Portland, Ore., and three others are headed for zoos in Sweden and Britain.

The elephants are flying, naturally, in a Boeing 747 "Jumbo" jet. Lufthansa airlines is charging roughly $2,366 apiece, compared to the $755 charge paid by the 240 human passengers up front in the same plane.

The jet is a special "combi" plane that carries passengers and cargo.

The 12 elephants bound for Portland will stay overnight in Frankfurt before catching a connecting flight to New York. There, another convoy of trucks will carry them across the continent.

The second shipment of 10 elephants, all bound for the United States, will be flown out sometime next week.

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY
DR. PAUL E. RUBLE

Dear Dr. Ruble: Our baby (16 months old) was born premature. The doctor told us one of his suture lines had grown together. The surgeon removed a piece of bone from the head to correct it. He will be X-rayed again this year. Can you explain? What causes this birth defect? Would tests beforehand have shown this? I am 33 and have a perfectly normal 14-year-old child. Will further surgery be needed? What about future children? — Mrs. D.M.

The condition is called craniosynostosis. The word "suture" in this case doesn't refer to surgical stitches. These are tiny normal separations in skull structure which allow for further brain growth. Most of that occurs in the first year, after which the sutures fuse together completely with time. Premature fusing may cause dangerous brain pressure as well as a misshapen head. We're not sure what causes the problem.

Your youngster got excellent and prompt attention and seems to be doing well with the substitute suture line the surgeon made. X-rays will tell the full story. Sometimes further surgery is needed if the line begins to fuse again.

While the odds of future birth defects is increased in mothers who have had previous ones, the chances are much better that you will have a normal child. Women who have hypertension and fluid retention are at a slightly greater risk, but not usually significant enough to forego pregnancy. Prenatal tests (such as amniocentesis) would not have detected your baby's problem. They are helpful chiefly in detecting chromosome abnormalities, as with Down's syndrome or in defects in which spinal fluid leaks into the fetal sac.

Dear Dr. Ruble: If a man had cancer of the prostate, would there be a gnawing sensation or a similar feeling in that area? — C.J.

Usually not. Early cancer of the prostate doesn't often give symptoms. Enlargement is easily confirmed by a simple finger examination via the rectum. I don't mean your symptoms can be ignored. In fact, they are important to report. Various rectal problems, more likely the cause of your discomfort, can be checked easily.

Fortunately, the prostate, which is a major source of problems in men, is one of the more accessible internal human structures. For this reason allowing problems there to accumulate is inexcusable. My feeling is that a physical examination is incomplete without a check of the prostate, especially after age 35. For more detailed discussion of the gland, see my booklet, "The Pesky Prostate." For a copy, send 35 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to me, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill., 60611. From my mail it seems to be the one publication that has sent most men in for prompt treatment of prostate disturbance.

Dear Dr. Ruble: My husband and I are planning on starting a family, and we have been hearing so many things about choosing the sex of a baby. Could you tell me when it is best to try for a boy, and when it is best to try for a girl? I menstruate on the 28th of the month.

every 30 days, for three to five days. — M.K.

The odds are about 50-50 no matter when you try or when you're menstruation falls.

Dear Dr. Ruble: I want to read up on head lice. What name should I look up in a medical book at school to find it? — Mrs. Y.G.

Most medical books found in school libraries aren't that fancy, so you'd probably find it listed under lice, and various categories. If not, try "pediculosis."

Dear Dr. Ruble: Please send me your booklet, "Stroke Recovery — Hope and Help." I had a stroke a couple of months ago and completely recovered. I am so thankful I didn't have the crippling kind. — J.B.

I'm glad to get a letter like yours — for two reasons. First, you emerged from your stroke in fine shape. Secondly, you have the good sense to want to look to the future. I've spoken of little stroke warnings. Yours was a big warning and there are things you must consider for the future. Your booklet's on the way.

der for the future. Your booklet's on the way.

Dear Dr. Ruble: Isn't exercise supposed to be done after a mastectomy? — N.N.

Yes, when the doctor gives the go ahead. It's important to regain use of shoulder muscles. There are callisthenics the doctor can outline for the post-mastectomy patient when it is time. The Reach for Recovery program may be a help. Ask your physician about this.

Did you know that 80 percent of stroke victims resume to some degree their former lives? The booklet "Stroke Recovery — Hope and Help" describes the causes and treatment of stroke. For a copy write Dr. Ruble, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill., 60611, enclosing 35 cents and a long, stamped and self-addressed envelope.

Dr. Ruble welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

THOUGHTS ON WOMEN

In my view, the content of feminist art, and its deepest meaning, is consciousness: a woman's full awareness of herself as an entity, including her sensations, her emotions, and her thoughts — mind in its broadest sense.

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

One of the classic old stories concerned the expert in finding lost horses who said "I just try to decide where I would go if I were a horse." South plays a low spade from dummy at trick one. East plays the 10. South wins and promptly loses the diamond finesse. East returns a club to West's ace and now West leads the jack of spades. South knows West is smart enough to lead the jack from king-jack and it is up to South to decide just what he has done. If West started with five spades to the jack, a duck will hold the defense to four tricks. If he started with four to the jack, the hand is hopeless. If West had led from king-jack the play of the queen will let South make 11 tricks. The play of a low spade will lead to loss of game and rubber. Percentage favors rising with the queen, but let's go back to the story about the horse. South thinks like East. If East had not been dealt the king of spades, he would surely have led back a spade when he got in with the king of diamonds. His play of the club just had to be an effort to get his partner on lead. So thinker South ducks the spade and makes his contract.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann: My husband committed suicide and the children are becoming very cynical about life. Also, they cannot accept my new marriage. Please help me reach out to them by printing this letter.

Dear Children: I am writing to you because you want an explanation of why you are on earth. When I was your age I wanted my parents to answer the same question for me. Well — there is no answer. I'm just a small cog in this huge universe and I believe a greater force decided I should be here. When I was in my teens I didn't have YOUR problems, but I had my own. Granted, those were different times but my problems were just as hard for me as yours are for you.

You ask, "What is the truth about Dad?" I wish I knew. I was closer to him than anyone else, yet I can only guess. I had known for a long time that he was unstable and had frequent bouts of depression. That is all I can tell you. When I married again you thought it was wrong. But I have my needs as you have yours. I hope this letter will help you be more compassionate. My life has not been easy and your attitude hasn't helped much. Try to understand — please. —Your Mother

Dear Mother: Here's your letter and I pray it helps. Life is for the living and I, for one, am glad you are getting on with it. Don't be downhearted if it takes a while for the children to accept your marriage. Time is your best ally, dear. I'm betting your children will come 'round.

Dear Ann: Last night I attended a party. I'm an OK-lookin lady and had lots of men around me. A woman (I'll call her Pearl) wanted desperately to be included in the conversation. I tried my darnedest to give her openings but nothing worked. She fell flat and left the party early looking depressed. Maybe if you print this letter, she and five million other "Pearls" will get the message. "Dear Pearl: Let your hair go back to its natural color and get it cut in a fresh wash-and-wear style. Wear skirts that aren't so short and tight. Use eye makeup in natural earth tones, not blue, green or lavender. If you must wear rouge, blend it in so it doesn't look like some kid's rag doll. And please — don't look like such a loser, when you beg with your eyes to be included, it turns people off." Thanks, Ann. — A.G.

Dear A.G.: Most "Pearls" out there need more than a haircut and earth-tone eye shadow. (I rather like blue, myself.) The women you describe need to memorize some key questions to get people talking about themselves. (a) How did you get started in your work? (b) Who in all the world would you change places with if you had the chance? A smiling face plus my suggestions will help the Pearls of the world a great deal more than the superficialities you mention.

Do you feel awkward, self-conscious — lonely? Welcome to the club. There's help for you in Ann Landers' booklet, "The Key to Popularity." Send 50 cents with your request and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P. O. Box 11996, Chicago, Ill., 60611.

Banker Named Chairman Of Cancer Society's '79 Bike-A-Thon

Bob "B.C." Hamilton has been named this year's American Cancer Society's Bike-A-Thon chairman, crusade chairman Dr. Preston W. DeShan announced Friday.

Hamilton will head a group of 40 volunteers who will produce the Bike-A-Thon, set for 9 a.m., June 2, on the Texas Tech University campus. Registration will be at 8:30 a.m. in the Science Building parking lot.

The goal for the Bike-A-Thon is $10,000.

The course is 3 1/2 miles long and riders are encouraged to complete a 20-mile ride or form a relay team to ride 20 miles, Hamilton said.

Funds are raised through the race by riders' soliciting sponsors to pledge money for each mile completed by the rider.

The Bike-A-Thon is sponsored by the Texas Tech University Saddle Tramps, who were instrumental in securing the Tech site for the program, and by the Theta Chi chapter of Beta Sigma Phi.

"The effort provided the American Cancer Society by the Tech Saddle Tramps, especially their president Wes Huff, and Sharilyn Bigham and Theta Chi are most beneficial. Without them, the job would be most difficult. With them, everything is working very well," Hamilton said.

"I feel a need for the Bike-A-Thon to support the local cancer society. I'm doing this to help the organization to further research. I've been associated with people who have died of cancer. A close personal friend of mine died of the disease. I feel that research could prevent some deaths in the future if we continue to make the strides that we are now doing. I find the work on the Bike-A-Thon very rewarding," he said.

The cancer society will be offering prizes for special achievements at the event.

HAMILTON

Hamilton said that he hopes local businesses will begin to challenge each other to raise money for the Bike-A-Thon and enter teams in the event.

Entry blanks and pledge forms may be obtained at the information booth near the fountain at South Plains Mall from May 21-24. Also, they are at First Federal Savings and Loan, Plains National Bank, all bicycle and bicycle repair shops and at some convenience stores in Lubbock. In addition, entry forms have been distributed to schools in the Lubbock Independent School District. For further information call the American Cancer Society at 762-0825. Contributions may be forwarded to the American Cancer Society by the Area One Office, 1902 Ave. M, Room 101, Lubbock, Texas 79405.

Lamesa Songstress Sets Nashville Bid

The 1975 Lamesa High School graduate also will be practicing with the Barbara Mandrell baseball team which will play the first week in June at Fanfare.

Miss Warren has released "One Man's Woman," and "I'll Love You Leaving Away."

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Warren of Lamesa.

Unusual Opening Begins London Play

By GREGORY JENSEN
LONDON (UPI) — All around you come gasps of surprise from audiences fooled by the most startling opening of a play on the current London stage.

They're settling into the Royal Shakespeare Company's London theater to watch a Shakespeare play and are admiring the grandiose Italian street scene on stage. Suddenly an altercation breaks out in the aisles.

Ushers break off showing people to their seats and grapple with a shabby, unshaven drunk. He argues, pushes, shouts — and suddenly he's on stage, pulling over pillars, flinging baskets of flowers like missiles.

Stage hands dash about, but the drunk's chaos is unstoppable. Scenery walls collapse, a statue is ripped in half, electric circuits sputter and shower-sparks, an arch falls, and amid the carnage the drunk whips a scarlet drape around himself and passes out.

Then the play begins — on a stark stage.

When the RSC first used this stunning opening for Michael Bogdanov's modern-dress production of "The Taming of the Shrew" at Stratford-upon-Avon, some playgoers walked out and others demanded the police. Audiences are wiser now that the brilliant, hilarious production has transferred to London. But the violent savagery of the opening still shocks.

And it has a point.

Red-coated huntsmen appear and address the passed-out drunk as Christopher Sly, the tinker in Shakespeare's sketchy framework to "The Shrew."

Sly then slides into becoming an unshaven Petruchio, ripping into the play proper with undiminished violence, taming the shrewish Kate with heartless maltreatment.

This story line usually sets feminists' teeth on edge. This time they have reason to cheer.

For the violence of that preliminary scene never lets up in Jonathan Pryce's pyrotechnic performance, focusing attention onto his boorish, sordid attitudes. His wooing becomes a hunt, echoing the first scene's huntsmen, though who is hunting whom soon blurs.

This "Shrew's" violence is cloaked by a stream of gimmicks. Petruchio roars up on a motorcycle. Guests huddle under umbrellas in the rain to wait for his ghastly wedding. Bianca's business-suited father totes up her suitors' dowry offers on a calculator.

Laughter is non-stop. Like Pryce's maniacal Petruchio, the production teeters dangerously on the brink of excess but never topples over.

Shakespeare's play ends with Katherine's groveling, humiliating speech of submission. Here, though, Paola Dionisotti speaks it with such irony, such double edged malice, that it is clear Petruchio is the tamed one, or soon will be.

This kind of subtlety in performance is typical of the RSC's Stratford transfers — Productions it polishes and perfects for a year at Stratford before moving them to London for another season.

Two other equally magical examples are now in London — An autumnal "Love's Labor's Lost," cast and played with deliberate plainness to set off its high-flown language, and a chamber version of "The Merchant of Venice" at the RSC's studio theater, the Warehouse.

"The Merchant" is another problem play for today. How can we stomach its rabid anti-Semitism?

Director John Barton's smallscale, modern dress version makes the pill palatable by treating the play almost as a comedy. Patrick Stewart plays Shylock not as a tragic hero or a victim of persecution but as a grasping, monomaniacal hypocrite, more to be laughed at than pitied.

It is a consummate performance. And it shifts the play's focus to the happy lyrical scenes at Belmont, to its half comic love stories, to Lisa Harrow as a Portia whose beauty can pierce the heart.

Auto Dealer Advertises 'Meltdown' Sale

BRANFORD, Conn. (AP) — A meltdown may be the ultimate disaster in the vernacular of the nuclear power business, but one auto dealer here thinks it's a good catchword for an advertising campaign.

"Edward Chevrolet Ordered to Melt Down. ... Over 250 cars and trucks to be sold at 'melt down' liquidation process," says an ad placed by that auto dealer in local papers this week.

The ads depict — in red ink — the familiar shapes of three cooling towers, parts of many nuclear energy plants. From the pictured towers are puffs of gases, one of them promising: "Red hot discount prices."

The Etruscan shrew, only three inches in length, is the smallest adult mammal in nature.

The ad terms the sale "an honest, but safe, meltdown."

"It's a success," said Dick Caruso, manager of the dealership. "We've sold 80 or 85 cars this week, and I'd say that that's 80 percent more than we've sold in recent weeks. The market's been pretty bad."

He does not see anything wrong in capitalizing on the idiom of nuclear catastrophe. Nor does his boss, owner Edward Walmsley, who said they'd received only a couple of complaints about the ad.

"After all, the idea is to get people to come to the showroom," said Walmsley. "Chevrolet isn't really melting down."

"You watch, this will go all over the country, and dealers all over the country will pick up on it," he said.

"This is probably the most successful sale we've ever run."

Mondale Meets Reporters From Children's Express

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President Walter F. Mondale thought the question was very funny.

In fact, he nearly lost his balance in laughter when he heard that a journalist, all of 10 years old, had asked Nelson A. Rockefeller in 1976 "Why are you supporting President Ford when he dumped you?"

Mondale met that reporter, Jeremy Engle, and about a dozen others who work for the "Children's Express," at a White House ceremony Thursday marking the fourth anniversary of the journal prepared by and for children.

The vice president has more than a passing interest in the New York-based group of youngsters running the magazine. They claim — and no one has disputed them — that they were the first to report that then-candidate Jimmy Carter had picked Mondale as his vice presidential running-mate in 1976.

The children, with press cards dangling from strings around their necks, gathered in the Roosevelt Room, a White House conference room between President Carter's Oval Office and the office assigned to Mondale.

During the ceremony, Javier Corral-Jurado, a 12-year-old orphan from Ciudad Juarez, Mexico, was given the first "Children's Express" journalism award. He is the founder, editor and publisher of his own newspaper, El Chisme (The Gossip).

Firm Found Guilty In Traffic Deaths

HOUSTON (AP) — A jury has found a corporation guilty of negligent homicide in the November traffic deaths of two Texas A&M students.

The Thursday verdict could lead to a fine of up to $10,000 against Vaughn and Sons Inc. of Houston.

County Criminal Court-at-Law Judge Neel Richardson said in so far as he and lawyers involved in the case can determine it is the first time a Texas corporation has been found guilty on such a charge. Richardson said such cases normally are handled in civil courts.

Paul Krenzke, 22, and Geina Rena Wall, 19, were killed when their car crashed into a truck owned by the corporation.

Prosecutor Lewis Dickson III said the truck had been stalled in the left lane of the Northwest Freeway six hours at the time of the accident and the company had not responded to three telephone calls from the driver asking that the truck be moved.

Richardson said he will sentence the corporation later this month.

Second Opinion Urged In Cases Of Non-Emergency Surgery

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Is this operation really necessary? Consumers are being urged to ask questions and seek a second opinion when it comes to non-emergency surgery and the government has some advice for people who don't know where to go for help.

"Doctors, like all people, sometimes disagree," says an inflation-fighting guide from the federal Office of Consumer Affairs. "Most often, surgery is not an emergency. You can choose when you want to have it and even if you want to have it. ... Although it is not usually possible to avoid surgery, there sometimes are other satisfactory methods of treatment."

Listing tonsillectomies, hysterectomies and gall-bladder operations as common types of surgery most often performed on a non-emergency basis, the office recommends that prospective patients: "Stop before having the surgery. Look for a specialist. And listen to a second opinion."

The Department of Health, Education and Welfare set up a toll-free telephone number — 800-325-6400 — last year to help people find help. Callers are referred to local medical societies or other organizations that have lists of specialists in a particular area. (There is a separate number for Missouri residents — 800-342-6600.)

You can also ask your doctor to recommend a specialist. And if you are covered by Medicare, you can call your local Social Security office for advice.

You do not have to tell the first doctor that you plan to seek a second opinion.

ion. Candor can have its benefits, however. You can ask the first doctor to forward your records, X-rays, etc., saving time and money that could be involved if additional tests are needed.

When you visit the second doctor, explain what type of surgical procedure has been recommended and tell him or her what diagnostic tests you have already undergone.

If the second doctor agrees with the first, he or she probably will send you back to the initial physician to work out details of the operation. If the two doctors disagree, you will have to decide which opinion you want to accept. You may decide to seek help from a third source, but you should not use a second — or third — opinion as an excuse to put off necessary surgery, going from doctor to doctor until you find one who tells you what you want to hear.

Many health insurance companies are encouraging policyholders to get a second opinion and, in many cases, they will pay the extra costs.

More than 90 percent of all Americans are covered by some type of health insurance, either private or public, according to government studies. Many self-employed people lack coverage, however, and many of those who do have health policies do not have the protection they need.

Costs and services vary widely and HEW's Public Health Service advises consumers to shop around. If the group plan you belong to is inadequate, you can work to get it changed.

Before you buy, ask these questions: —What services does the policy cover? If benefits are expressed in specific dollar amounts, make sure the figures are realistic in terms of today's prices.

—How many days of coverage do you get on your hospitalization policy? Does the limit apply to how many days in a row you can be hospitalized or does it apply to the number of days in the year?

—Are there deductibles? How much are they?

—What are the exclusions, and how long are the waiting periods before the policy becomes effective?

—Can the company cancel the policy, because you've had too many claims, for example? You could be left without protection just when you need it most.

—What is the insurance company's record for paying claims fairly and promptly? Your state Insurance Department should be able to provide information on past practices. And you can check out a company's financial standing in Best's Insurance Reports, a standard reference usually available in public libraries.

Amateur-Designed Nuclear Weapons Not Uncommon, Scientist Asserts

By ROBERT LOCKE

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Back in World War II, it took years for some of the world's leading scientists, working in strict secrecy, to design the first atomic bomb. Now, college kids are drawing A-bomb designs for term papers.

"This happens about once a week at some college campus," physicist Gerald Pomraning of UCLA said with only slight exaggeration. "Sometimes they get picked up in the media and sometimes they don't."

Many such plans are accurate in a general way: The basic design of a simple nuclear weapon can be found in almost any good encyclopedia.

But the amateur plans are usually — though not always — so oversimplified and general as to be hopelessly unworkable, according to scientists.

It's like drawing wings, a tail and a fuselage and saying you've designed an airplane, said physicist Harold Lewis of the University of California-Santa Barbara.

"There is a very long distance between drawing a diagram and actually making a bomb," he said in an interview.

The U.S. Department of Energy, which designs and builds the United States' nuclear weapons, says almost 50 nuclear threats have been received by U.S. governments and industries. The threats often include a drawing and FBI investigations "usually find them to be not credible," DOE spokesman Jim Cannon said.

The proliferation of amateur A-bomb designs seems unrelated to the current controversy over The Progressive magazine's article on the hydrogen bomb. A federal judge on March 26 prohibited publication of the article, which the Madison, Wis., magazine says was written entirely from public sources and interviews.

The government contends the story includes secret details and would make it easier for other nations to build the hydrogen bomb, a much more powerful and complicated weapon than an atomic bomb. An atomic explosion is used to detonate the superbomb.

Both Lewis and Pomraning examined atomic bomb designs drawn recently by a 24-year-old political science student at Cal State-Long Beach.

Melvin Tooker said in a term paper that since he was able to "understand and research the basic principles involved in nuclear bomb construction, isn't it conceivable a well-organized and more sophisticated group may also have the capacity for understanding the principles involved?"

Does Tooker know how build a bomb?

"Of course not," said Lewis. "It's a very basic set of pictures this kid drew. He got most of his information out of an encyclopedia and then added some particularly silly things on his own."

Pomraning described the Tooker plans as "well-known stuff, sort of generalities. The problem in building one of these things is an engineering problem. I don't think it's easy to do."

But much more sophisticated information is available from a number of sources. They include nuclear engineering texts, specialized journals and once-classified government publications.

Since 1975, several college students with some science background have used public information to develop detailed atomic bomb plans that experts have described as frighteningly plausible.

There is no evidence any amateur A-bomb has ever been built. But Lewis notes, "History shows us that any country that can get their hands on enough plutonium can build themselves an atomic bomb."

The first of the student designers to receive wide publicity was an unidentified MIT chemistry major who, for a television program, spent five weeks designing an 800-pound nuclear bomb.

A nuclear physicist said a bomb built from the design might not go off, although "there is also a chance that it would."

A year later, Princeton University senior John Phillips, then 21, designed a weapon that would be "pretty much guaranteed to go off," according to nuclear weapons expert Frank Chilton.

Harvard economics student Dimitri Rotow, 22, hit the headlines last year after telling a congressional subcommittee he designed a nuclear weapon that could destroy the U.S. Capitol.

Princeton Professor Theodore Taylor, once a bomb designer at the government's nuclear weapons laboratory in Los Alamos, N.M., said then that Rotow's 400-page report was "the most extensive and detailed exposition that I have seen outside the classified literature."

"Taylor for years argued for tighter security to protect bomb materials. He contends a crude, but lethal, nuclear weapon could be built in a basement workshop."

"There is nothing secret about the general principles of building an atomic bomb," said Lewis. "A reasonably intelligent and educated person certainly could figure out how to draw the diagram for it."

"But to go from that to actually doing the calculations on how to make the explosives work ... is a much more difficult problem. It's not easy."

"How much knowledge and time would be needed for those calculations is a subject of debate. 'It's a difficult technology,' Lewis said, "but people differ on just how difficult it is."

Cannon, describing the DOE as "concerned" about the bomb designs, said the agency would look at any design it came across to determine whether it contained secret information.

Pomraning, meanwhile, worries that even if a homemade bomb didn't go off in the conventional atomic sense, "it could spread crud all over the landscape."

That "crud" might include highly toxic plutonium and other radioactive debris.

PARIS (AP) — The chief of the Mauritanian office of the French news agency Agence France Presse, Jean-Eudes Barbier, was expelled from that West African nation, the agency announced Friday. STILL SLEUTHING — After a couple of series each, during which they prowled around for their paychecks, Robert Wagner and Stefanie Powers will be pecking into TV keyholes again next year. In ABC's new series, "Hart to Hart," the two will play a rich, sophisticated couple who offset their champagne drinking with detective work. It's not "The Thin Man," but then what is these days?

What's up in boats?

You boat may look like a disaster after being buried in six feet of snow or three feet of mud this winter. But chances are that its fiber glass hull is as seaworthy as ever.

Here are some tips on preparing the craft for the boating season from Don Miller, marine-market manager for Owens-Corning Fiberglass.

1. Wash the hull with a good household detergent. Use enough to rough it up for better paint adherence. Then apply anti-fouling paint.
2. To remove hairline cracks that appear on the outer surface of the hull below the waterline, use anti-fouling paint. Cracks above the waterline need a new gel coating to maintain uniform appearance.
3. A scratch above the waterline can be removed with polish — and plenty of elbow grease.
4. If the hull has been damaged, a full patch is needed. Use the same resin and fiber glass used to make the hull. Your boat dealer should be able to give you the specifications. The dealer or a marine-supply store can supply the materials.

University Accused Of Cheating Artist Out Of Portrait Payment

WASHINGTON (AP) — Artist Charles Merrill Mount hurled a paintpot of insults Thursday at the art patrons he said cheated him of his rightful fee for painting two portraits of former Sen. James O. Eastland, D-Miss.

Mount stood on a table in the hearing room of the Senate Judiciary Committee, gestured at the Eastland portrait and worked himself into what he called "a Shakespearean wrath, a great and searing moral indignation."

"The full measure of disapproval must fall on the University of Mississippi Foundation, which, by a confidence game, by blackmail and by fraud took from me not only this portrait, but also a second of Sen. Eastland, without making payment for either," Mount said.

Mount is suing the foundation for $13,500, an amount he says is a fair market value of the two portraits and their English frames. The second, smaller Eastland portrait is to hang in the University of Mississippi Law School.

Mount said he is refusing to accept the $3,000 "pittance" which he said Eastland's friends collected and gave to the foundation for the portraits.

Rufus T. Jones, the university's director of development, said Mount has been paid "every cent that was collected by the senator's friends."

As Mount tells the story, he delivered the second portrait only after he was told that the question of payment for the larger painting would be made easier if the second was given to the foundation as a gift.

He now claims this was "blackmail." Mount said he did what was requested but was not paid.

He said he submitted a bill for $13,450 and eventually agreed to accept $5,000.

"And still they did not pay me," he said.

Mount said he finally was offered a $3,000 check and told that if he cashed it, payment would be made in full, and that the portraits would become the foundation's property "absolutely."

"In my view this was not just sharp practice. This was a squalid and dishonorable effort ... to force an artist to accept 20 percent of the fair market value of his work," Mount said.

There was no immediate comment from the university.

Agency Receives Reports About Murdered Youths

PARIS (AP) — Amnesty International headquarters has received information backing up earlier reports that up to 100 children were murdered in the Central African Empire following student riots, the human rights organization's French chapter said Friday.

The latest statement from Amnesty International followed a strong denial of the report by Emperor Jean Bokassa I, self-crowned monarch of the Central African Empire.

Bokassa told foreign diplomats Thursday in Bangui, the capital, that 140 children had fled to neighboring Zaire following the riots a month ago, and that these were the children Amnesty claims were murdered by Bokassa's forces.

He said about 50 children were arrested following the riots against a government order obliging students to wear school uniforms, but denied any were killed.

The Paris branch of Amnesty International, whose human rights work won it the 1977 Nobel Peace Prize, said that since it published its report this week, its headquarters in London "has received additional information confirming the murder."

It denied the Empire government's charge that it refused an invitation last March to send investigators to the Empire, which has been repeatedly accused of human rights violations.

The communique said Amnesty was planning to send such a mission when it received word of the murders.

The White House was designed by James Hoban, an Irish-born architect, in a competition that paid $500.

TABLETOP COMMENT — Artist Charles Merrill Mount stands on a table in Washington Thursday as he gestures toward his portrait of Sen. James O. Eastland. Mount says he has been cheated out of his fee for painting this portrait and a smaller one of the former chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee. (AP Laserphoto)

Orchestra String Section Dons Earplugs To Play Loud Piece

TOO MUCH PERCUSSION — A violinist in the Philadelphia Orchestra wears ear protectors at a recent rehearsal of George Crumb's 'Child Star' to protest the use of too much percussion in the work. (AP Laserphoto)

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — When 40 Philadelphia Orchestra string players donned earplugs during rehearsals of George Crumb's cantata "Star Child," it wasn't that they didn't like the music. They just thought it was too loud.

"It is a pollution problem, and a potential health hazard," said orchestra personnel manager Mason Jones. The players said they took the unusual step to protect themselves from a thunderous five-minute stint by the expanded percussion section and resounding trumpets. For Crumb's composition, the strings have been moved from their usual place downstage to a spot at the rear between the percussion section and the pipes of an organ.

"This is the first time I've remembered the musicians doing this," orchestra manager Joseph Santarlasci said Thursday of the ear protectors, which resemble headsets worn by airport ground crews. "The strings generally sit down front — they're not accustomed to this sort of thing."

Santarlasci said he expected some of the players would wear the ear protectors during the performances, scheduled for Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights.

"For some parts of the piece, it's quite likely," Santarlasci said. "We handed them out because some of the strings are sitting right next to the battery (percussion) section. There's a loud period during about four or five minutes of the piece."

"The rest of it, some of it, is rather quiet, but there is ... this apocalypse, with the battery section going full blast.

They wear the earplugs during that section, when they don't play."

Jones said the musicians were not staging an official protest, but he said the musician's union might eventually ask for protection under federal occupational health and safety regulations.

The contemporary piece by Crumb, a Pulitzer Prize-winning composer, has required considerable rearranging of the performers on the stage of the Academy of Music.

The strings, about half the orchestra's usual string section, have been moved to the rear of the stage shell. Facing the back, they've been squeezed between the pipes of an organ and a percussion section that includes drums, gongs, large sheets of metal and other noise-makers. A chorus will be in front, along with the winds and brass. At one point, two musicians will play from the audience.

Members of the brass section, usually situated in front of percussion, are blase about the ear problems encountered by the strings. "It gets loud there, but you get used to it," one said.

Four conductors will coordinate the piece. One of them, Richard Wernick, himself a Pulitzer Prize-winning composer, was untroubled by the string players' method of self-defense.

"I think some of that is psychological," he said. "When I was in Chicago, I realized that anytime you ask players to change positions or move, they are bothered."

Female-Owned Businesses Boosted By Federal Government

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, saying government should set an example in aiding women-owned businesses, signed an executive order Friday directing government agencies to take "affirmative action" to buy more from them.

In a ceremony in the White House Rose Garden, the president said discrimination against businesswomen is sometimes deliberate and that government too often mirrors this.

"Government can set an example," Carter said. "Unfortunately, it hasn't in the past."

The order sets up a new federal "Interagency Committee on Women's Business Enterprise," made up mainly of women in key posts in federal agencies. And it directs government agencies to take positive action to assist women business owners through training, financial assistance and procurement.

The order was immediately praised by Dona O'Bannon, president of the National Association of Women Business Owners.

She said it is "a major step forward" and added: "Women entrepreneurs mean business for America. Their success will contribute to the economic health and well-being of this country."

Police Call Church 'A Fraud,' Based On Pyramid System

By TOM TIEDE

OAKLAND, Calif. (NEA) — The Rev. Hakeem Abdul Rasheed is not your ordinary hard-to-mouth minister. He swaggers around this city in exotic fur coats, for one thing, and in a 27-foot Cadillac Brougham equipped with a television and a wet bar. And, oh yes, he once owned a $2.5 million yacht.

The reverend did not go to divinity school. He studied psychology at Purdue University, where, incidentally, he was dropped from the football team for using karate. Rev. Rasheed, the former Clifford Jones, received his ministry credentials from a mail order firm that sells them for $10 apiece.

As for the reverend's church, it is likewise outside of custom. The "Church of Hakeem," named for its flamboyant founder, is located in a swank Oakland office building and is not open on Sundays. Police here say it should not be open ever; they believe it's merely a symbol of an immense fraud.

Police say the alleged fraud began in 1977 when Rev. Rasheed opened the Church of Hakeem by announcing a curiously revived Christian gospel. Hakeem said he was not so much interested in saving souls as enriching them. He said the goal of his church would be to create 10,000 millionaires.

It was the kind of religious notion that had certain appeal, to say the least, and the reverend quickly attracted a large number of followers. The believers even paid for the privilege of joining Rasheed's flock; police say the church of Hakeem sold thousands of memberships at a unit rate of $500.

WHEELER DEALER'S WHEELS — Bay area police have started to move in on the Church of Hakeem. Labelling it a pyramid scheme, they say its founder, Rev. Hakeem Abdul Rasheed, has taken in as much as $375,000 per night at "rallies for riches." Back taxes have claimed Rasheed's $1.5 million yacht, but he still has his 27-foot limousine.

Once initiated into the faith, the members were encouraged to give more money. Police say some people donated as much as $20,000 at a time to the enterprising church. Lt. Harold Mijanovich, of Oakland's Criminal Investigations Division, says a few mortgaged their homes for the purpose.

"The deal has this," Mijanovich explains. "Rasheed told them that if they gave money it would please God, and He would reward them handsomely. If a person donated, say, $10,000, he was supposed to get back as much as $40,000 in a few months time; that would be God's thanks for being a good Christian."

Lt. Mijanovich says the activity was purely and simply a "pyramid scheme." He says a few investors were paid off, so that others would be encouraged to join. "It was greed," Mijanovich adds, "everybody was out for a fast buck. But the fellow who really profited was Rev. Hakeem Abdul Rasheed."

And did he profit? Police say Rasheed took in as much as $375,000 a night a periodic "rallies for riches," and, in all, may have collected more than $20 million in donations. He was so successful in fact, that he created branches of the Church of Hakeem throughout California and in other states.

Then, late last year, authorities began to move in on the reverend's operation. Ironically, Rasheed precipitated the inquiry. He complained to police that he had been robbed on his 102-foot yacht, and that gave the law a foot in his door. Search warrants and document confiscations followed.

Soon the federal government determined that Rev. Rasheed owed $1.5 million on back taxes, so it attached his yacht against the debt. That incident prompted area newspapers to join the official investigation of the Church of Hakeem, and police cooperated in the exposure of the pyramid suspicions.

The publicity had a rapid and negative effect on the church. Money stopped coming in, and past donors began to demand their promised rewards. Eventually, according to Lt. Mijanovich, Rev. Rasheed was forced to cut back the scope of his activity: "He's still in business, but he is very quiet."

Police say the reverend is quiet because he knows he's in trouble. Local, state and federal officials say they are committed to putting him away. The Oakland police department alone has, at times, assigned as many as 30 men to gather the data officers say will be used to crush the Church of Hakeem.

Lt. Mijanovich says he has not seen anything like the Hakeem probe in 31 years on the force. Computers are being employed, a Ph.D. in mathematics has been hired, and three certified public accountants are working on the case. When stacked, the documents in this matter are said to be 3 1/2 feet tall.

Oakland police expect the first arrest to be made in the case this month. Meantime the Church of Hakeem is not promising money from God anymore. Police say the church is on the slide — Rev. Rasheed calls it "a pause for the cause" and no member has received an interest reward since December.

Some of the trappings of the church remain, however. Rev. H.A. Rasheed still has his long Cadillac, for instance, with golden wine goblets on its bar. Police believe the reverend will soon be driving the fancy automobile to court, and after that, they earnestly hope, to San Quentin prison.

Meditation Set To Shift Skylab Orbit

BROOKLINE, Mass. (AP) — Perhaps Chicken Little should have tried meditation. It might have kept the sky from falling on the worried little storybook character.

Meditation is what the Brookline Psychoenergetics Institute is suggesting to keep the 85-ton Skylab, now orbiting the earth, from falling.

Its five members are organizing a mass meditation session next Friday at 1 p.m. EDT, which they hope will boost the giant, floating space station higher in the atmosphere.

"Our experiment is to see if the powers of the mind are strong enough to raise Skylab in its orbit. This is a bona fide scientific experiment," said institute spokesman Chris Kilham.

Skylab is expected to fall apart and plunge to earth in hundreds of pieces about July 2, according to the latest revised estimate from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

Kilham said the experiment is an attempt to prove psychokinesis works, and also to keep the satellite from crashing since it could cause "a lot of damage."

"We want people to visualize Skylab in their minds and then visualize sending their mental energy up to it and see that mental energy put it (Skylab) into a higher orbit," said Kilham.

In Houston, NASA spokesman Charles Harlan said, "I hope they can help us out." However, he said, the discipline of psychokinesis "is not part of our approach to science." Psychokinesis is the apparent ability to move physical objects through mental processes.

To bolster the meditation effort, the institute enlisted help from Fort Lauderdale, Fla., radio station WFTL-AM, which is hooking up a "meditation" broadcast with at least 40 other stations across the country.

The station invited psychics Uri Geller and Page Bryant to lead the meditation.

"They're going to ask people at 1:05 p.m. to stop what they're doing for five minutes and concentrate their mental energies and thoughts on boosting Skylab to a higher orbit," said station program director Mike Harvey.

He said the broadcast would begin at 1 p.m. Harvey said the British Broadcasting Corp. and the Australian Broadcasting Co. have expressed interest in linking up with the station's program, Harvey said.

"It started as a 'tongue-in-cheek promotion,'" said Harvey, "but there have been some very respectable people who have told us that with this many people participating, anything could happen. "It appears there will be literally millions of people participating in this," he added.

Skylab, sent aloft May 14, 1973, already has entered the Earth's thin upper atmosphere, according to NASA.

NASA says most of the satellite pieces will burn up from friction during their plunge through the atmosphere, but about 400 pieces will not, and will scatter over land and water along a path 4,000 miles long and 100 miles wide.

Kilham says people interested in meditating can sit in "any comfortable position," preferably with their eyes closed.

Bureaucratic Bog Slows Correction Of Utah Radiation Problem

By TOM TIEDE
SALT LAKE CITY (NEA) — The ordeal began last spring for the men and women of Salt Lake County's fire department headquarters. That's when they learned their station was resting atop a radioactive ground fill, and they — as occupants of the building — were being bombarded with high levels of radiation.

A local newspaper made the startling announcement. It discovered that the station, built in 1956, had been erected over land reclaimed from a vacated uranium processing plant. The reclaimed earth was contaminated with toxic wastes and the poisons were leaching upwards into the brick station house.

Utah health officials soon confirmed the bad news. They said the uranium pollution was breaking down into radon gas, a substance known to cause cancer, and firehouse people were in danger. Tests indicated the employees were receiving levels thought safe for the general population.

Naturally, fire department personnel were alarmed. And so were public observers all the way from the state house to Washington. Editorialists said the mephitic station should be closed. Local health officers concurred. Even the governor told the fire employees they should abandon their headquarters.

As for Washington, officials there moved quickly in reaction to the hazard. Noting that the Salt Lake problem was indicative of a larger national worry (there are thousands of radon-contaminated structures in the country), Congress allocated $150 million to help clean up and dispose of the impurities.

RADIOACTIVE FIREMEN — Public outrage about a Salt Lake County, Utah, firehouse has been loud since it was learned that the station is built on a radioactive land fill. Everyone agrees that the contaminated station should be destroyed and personnel relocated, but the case has been bogged down in bureaucratic confusion for more than a year. (NEA Photo)

Indeed, public outrage was loud, and official concern was blunt and progressive. But today, one year later, the firehouse employees are wondering if the widespread fussing did any good. The radioactive station continues to stand, and the people who work in it remain subject to the radon gas.

County Fire Chief Dave Barrett says everybody still agrees the station should be destroyed, and fire personnel should be relocated, but the matter has become bogged down in bureaucratic confusion. The county and state are waiting for Washington, and Washington waits for final decisions.

The principal hangup is money. Barrett says a new cost of $2 million, but neither county nor state officials are willing to raise the funds. Their position is that the money will eventually come from Capitol Hill, by way of the new cleanup law, hence the firepeople must wait.

Meantime, Washington authorities say the wait may be prolonged. Congress has given the regulators one year to decide how best to attack the contamination sites. Then federal servants must get permission from the states to proceed. Therefore, no money may be available until at least next winter.

In the interim, Chief Barrett says he has considered relocating his people on a temporary basis. But he finds he cannot. There are buildings available, he explains, but they would require abundant remodeling. Remodeling is expensive, of course, and here again no one is willing to put up the cash.

Local governments even refused to pay for an air purification system at the station house. Barrett says the department used $40,000 of its own budget to install the filters. If it weren't for that sacrifice, Barrett sighs, the contamination situation would not have changed at all in the past year.

The filters have significantly lowered toxicity. When radiation readings were made in 1978, the station house was seven times hotter than the legal limits of a uranium mine. Now authorities insist the radon gases are being maintained at what the U.S. government believes to be safe concentrations.

Yet the purification system hasn't mollified the people who inhabit the building. Fifty employees have worked at the station for five years or more, and a half dozen have been employed for 15 years or more, and a couple of the veterans have been here for 22 years. Filters aside, human distress is still deep.

The employees are most concerned about the long-term effects of the radon. When the physical examinations were given to 10-year personnel last summer, no radiation related abnormalities were noticed. But Olivia Ogas, the department business manager, says at least two retired firemen now have cancer.

No one here is panicking, it should be said. No one has requested a transfer, and the fire workers union has been exceptionally patient. Actually, what with warm weather approaching, many employees say the immediate worry is over: when the doors are opened in summer, radiation blows away.

But what about next winter, when the doors close? Or the winter after that? Even if the bureaucracy took heart, even if money were available now, Chief Barrett says a new station would not be ready until 1981. And, he adds, that's a long time to expect people to live with something that may be killing them.

Old Coin Seen As Murder Clue

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) — A University of Iowa anthropologist says she thinks the famous Norse Penny, the oldest documented coin ever found in America, may be linked to a 900-year-old murder.

The penny was found 18 years ago in an ancient Indian shell heap in Maine.

"I suspect that about the only way a Norseman would give up a penny like that would be if he were killed or something," said Marshall McKusick.

"That is, coins were so scarce on Greenland (where there were many Scandinavian settlements) that not one

Living Screen Expands Space In Yard Area

Families today are expanding their concept of living space from the walls of their home to include the entire property area. They are creating outdoor rooms similar to the use areas in their homes.

According to the American Association of Nurserymen, it increases the usefulness, enjoyment and beauty of the yard. It often is responsible for converting a large grass area into several well-landscaped interest areas which are not only eye appealing, but also increase the value of the home. A place that says welcome, an area for entertaining, one for recreation, another for relaxation, and one for creativity: all play a practical and beautiful role in today's home landscape.

In certain spots, such as your place to relax, you will probably want privacy and quiet as well as beauty. The best way to achieve this, says AAN, is to create a living screen. Screens can be grown from many different types of plants, but evergreens seem to be the most satisfying, particularly for privacy. Hemlocks, for example, are almost impossible to see through in winter or summer. Their height and width are easily controlled by shearing. In fact, hemlocks are one of the few evergreens which actually grow thicker when sheared.

Whatever you choose, it is always wise to check first with your local nursery garden center to find what will best suit your specific conditions of soil, water and shade. In some cases your nursery specialist might recommend a deciduous hedge advantages as fall color, fruit and flowers.

If you want the advantages of both evergreens and deciduous plants — try mixing the two. One of the most beautiful and pleasing sights is created with a backdrop of lush evergreens against a foreground of flowering deciduous plants.

According to the national nursery association, what counts is to make the determination to move your interest areas into your yard. Then contact your neighborhood nursery garden center for professional assistance on how to go about it and what to plant. There are so many varieties of trees, shrubs and plants to choose from that you will have no trouble finding just the plant to fit your idea of how your special interest area should look.

Extending the walls of your home through creative landscaping is another expression of Green Survival... a series of small steps each of us can take to improve the quality of our lives."

Harvard Faculty Protests South Africa Investments

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Faculty members from Harvard and Tufts have joined student activists in protesting the universities' South African stock holdings because of that country's racial policies.

A letter signed by about 140 Harvard faculty members was delivered to Harvard President Derek C. Bok Thursday, calling on the school to take a more activist role in presiding over its holdings in companies doing business in South Africa. A petition signed by 121 faculty members asked Tufts' trustees to divest of all of the university's holdings in firms doing business in South Africa.

Texas Navy Loses Historical Task

AUSTIN (AP) — The House has sent the Senate a Sunset bill repealing the law authorizing the Texas Navy, Inc., a private organization, to maintain documents related to the history of the navy of the Republic of Texas.

Representatives passed the bill on a calendar of uncontested bills on Friday.

The bill directs the organization to turn its historical artifacts and documents over to the Texas Historical Commission.

Texas Navy, Inc., was on the list of agencies and quasi-agencies that would go out of existence in 1980 under the Sunset Act unless the Legislature voted to extend their lives.

It can remain in operation as a private organization but without any state authority.

'La Mere Bell' Stifles Phone Romances

PARIS (AP) — The telephone company has squelched a do-it-yourself electronic dating service for French lonely hearts, stamping out what it called "unofficial exploitation of the telephone system."

A whining sound has been installed on a telephone circuit that gives the exact time every 10 seconds. The whine prevents hundreds of people from shouting their names and phone numbers to each other in the silence between each recorded announcement.

According to officials of Postes et Telecommunications, the state-run post office and telephone company, subscribers calling for the right time often would hear a babble of voices on the line. What they heard went something like this:

"It is 23 hours, 12 minutes and 20 seconds...hello out there, this is Francois. I'm lonely, any feminine voices on the line?...It is 23 hours, 12 minutes and 40 seconds...Veronique here, Francois, call me at 326 91 93...it is 23 hours and 13 minutes...Got it. Hang up Veronique, I'm dialing you now...it is 23 hours, 13 minutes and 20 seconds..."

The clandestine dial-a-date network became so well known in Paris that Frenchmen refer to it simply as "Le Réseau" — "The Network." Such Networks have operated since the dawn of the telephone age in France, but none was more popular than "L'Horloge Parlante" — "The Speaking Clock."

One hundred persons were able to dial Te Speaking Clock simultaneously, and sometimes the network would draw up to a dozen people into group discussions.

Telephone company officials say they decided to correct what they call "this telephonic imperfection" after receiving "complaints from subscribers," some of whom claimed they heard lewd talk on the line.

While determined to stop the unauthorized calls, the state-owned telephone company has taken a step toward institutionalizing the dating service by establishing official dating lines in two outlying areas of France.

For the price of a normal call — about 11 cents — a caller can get on the line and make friends.

The company says these "experiments in conviviality" are operating only in remote, underpopulated areas where loneliness is a serious problem and no dating agencies exist.

Phone technicians have already knocked out another dial-a-date method, which used disconnected numbers. That network allowed strangers to make electronic connections between recorded announcements that "the number you have dialed is out of service."

The Paris newspaper Liberation reports the network that operated via disconnected numbers a few years ago became so well organized that its regular users formed a sort of club, giving each other code names and meeting occasionally in a Paris coffee shop.

Racial Life Expectancies Grow Closer In U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The gap in life expectancy between whites and blacks has narrowed from seven years to five years in the last decade, the government said Friday.

The life expectancy at birth for whites reached 73.8 years in 1977, compared with 68.8 years for blacks and other races, the National Center for Health Statistics reported.

That represents a 2.7-year gain in life expectancy for whites since 1968 and a 4.7-year gain for blacks and others, the center said in its final report on deaths in 1977.

The nation's overall life expectancy reached a record high of 73.2 years in 1977, and the death rate of 8.8 deaths per 1,000 persons was a new low. The infant mortality rate also fell to a new low of 14.1 deaths per 1,000 live births.

Women still outlive men by nearly eight years — 77.1 years to 69.3. In fact, more men die at every age from infancy through age 79. Women form a large majority of those who live to their 80s or older.

The center said 1.9 million deaths were recorded in the United States in 1977, down almost 10,000 from 1976. There were 3.3 million live births in the year.

Heart disease remains America's leading killer, claiming 719,000 lives and accounting for nearly four of every 10 deaths. Cancer is the second leading cause of death at 20 percent, stroke and related diseases are third at 10 percent, and deaths from accidents fourth at 5.4 percent.

Suicide is still the ninth leading cause of death. Some 28,681 persons took their own lives in 1977, or 8,700 more than those who died as victims of homicides.

The center noted that the death rates for most leading causes have dropped since 1968. Heart disease deaths are down 22 percent, stroke deaths off 32 percent and deaths from accidents down 20 percent. But cancer deaths rose during the decade by three percent.

CHILI RELATIONS

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — South Koreans like their chilis hot. When they got 15,000 tons of them from India that were soggy and inedible, it became a matter of diplomatic discussion. Ambassador Bum Suk Lee said Friday that he had spoken to the Indian commerce ministry about the $2.5 million shipment and had received assurances that future supplies would meet necessary standards.

Hikers Want More U.S. Trails Protected

By LEE MITGANG
NEW YORK (AP) — Most people who enjoy very, very long walks — a hundred miles or more at a shot — are also the kind of folk who generally enjoy the natural beauty and seclusion of a hiking trail.

They're not necessarily anti-social. But they do want more trails in the United States to go around for the increasing millions of people who enjoy hiking each year.

According to a recent survey by the American Forest Institute in Washington, about one of every five Americans hiked on accessible trails last year. That ranks hiking well ahead of other current physical fitness fads like jogging and tennis.

And increasingly, hikers have been willing to fight in Congress with some success to have more trails protected from commercial development under the National Trails Systems Act of 1968.

The dream, according to Craig Evans, editor of Backpacker Magazine and an avid hiker himself, is to have a nationwide trail system, protected from spoilage and change the way other historical monuments are.

"We want to extend the number of trails that can be walked. In comparison to Europe we have a tremendous lack of trails," he says.

A group with which Evans is affiliated, the American Hiking Society, put out a newsletter in April detailing the progress made in translating ideas for trails into reality.

According to Evans, the Appalachian Trail, which spans 2,035 miles from Maine to Georgia, is the most heavily protected under federal law, and among the most heavily trafficked.

Since 1968, two other trails have received National Scenic Trail designation under the 1968 act: the Pacific Crest Trail, running 2,350 miles through rugged mountain country from Mexico to Canada, and last year, the Continental Divide Trail, which meanders 3,100 miles from New Mexico to Montana.

Also last year, four trails were designated as National Historic Trails: the Lewis & Clark Trail, the Oregon Trail, the Mormon Trail, and the Iditarod Trail, a gold rush path in Alaska.

And legislation is currently pending in Congress to have the 3,246-mile North Country Trail that runs from Maine to North Dakota designated a National Scenic Trail.

According to U.S. Park Service estimates, the nation currently has 97,000 miles of trail, but only about 15,000 miles are for the exclusive use of hikers.

Evans says that much smaller countries like England and Germany have more miles of trail than the United States, despite the boom in hiking activity in the past decade.

Teamsters Pension Fraud

Alleged In Detroit Area

DETROIT (AP) — Two Oakland County real estate developers have been charged with defrauding the Teamsters Central States, Southeast and Southwest Areas Pension Fund of $7 million.

The 10-count indictment handed down Thursday by a federal grand jury accuses Mayer Morganroth, 48, an attorney from West Bloomfield Township, and Martin Kopitz, 44, a contractor from Walled Lake, of misrepresenting the financial condition of Indico Corp., a development firm, in an application for a Teamsters loan. The two also were charged with mail fraud in connection with some $50 million in construction and mortgage loans from the North American Mortgage Investors Trust.

Napoleon Bonaparte went into exile on the island of Elba in 1814 following his disastrous Russian campaign, escaped 10 months later and was received enthusiastically in France, where he assumed power.

made him a little nervous for a while, but he got over it.
"My love for snakes did not change," he said. "I knew it was a hazard of the job."
There have been other troubles. Foul-ups with batteries not powerful enough to transmit a wandering snake's signals have forced Means to search days for a single snake. Recently he lost track of three of 12 of his animals in the field, apparently because of battery failure. Other snakes, such as No. 39, have been more reliable.

"No. 39 is my sweetheart," he said. "I know everything she's done in the last year." Numbers 38 and 69 have provided some good data, too. They each gave birth last year, and Means was on hand to observe and photograph it.

The scientist has discovered that instead of breeding in the spring, as had been believed, the eastern diamondback breeds in late summer, the season it bears young. An average of 14 babies are born alive.

The eastern diamondback apparently has a keen memory and sense of navigation, Means has found. A snake might travel as far as a mile from its "home base" and then return, often by a round-about route.

Means also has found that the snakes overwinter at the same site from year to year, usually in a stump hole or burrow of a tortoise. There they spend November through February, without eating.

"A rattlesnake could coast a year on its fat reserve," he said.

When they do eat, they choose their meals from the rat, mouse, rabbit, and squirrel populations. Waiting until its prey is within striking distance, the snake stabs it with its needle-like fangs and injects venom, which comes from a gland behind the eye. The prey dies quickly and is swallowed whole.

What fascinates Means and other scientists at Tall Timbers is how a rattlesnake finds its prey, a mate, or anything else it wants. To study this, the researchers have erected a snake pen deep in the woods, where they watch the snakes kill and devour rats.

After a rat is struck, the researchers have observed, it scurries to a distant corner of the pen and dies. Several minutes later the snake unerringly follows the precise path of the rat, even crossing fresher trails of other rats to get its meal.

One hypothesis is that the snake is "sniffing out" the rat with its tongue, which catches odor particles on the ground. After picking up a particle, the snake slides its tongue into a small receptacle on the roof of its mouth to identify the odor. Means believes this tracking ability might also help rattlesnakes find mates.

Right First Aid Critical For Snakebite Victims

National Geographic News Service

Poisonous snakes don't go around looking for people to bite, but when approached too closely, a snake will defend itself. A master of camouflage, a snake can strike before its victim ever sees it.

About 45,000 snakebites are reported a year in the United States, one-fifth of them poisonous. Although only about 12 of these are fatal, chances of disfigurement and crippling are high if the proper treatment is not followed.

Most poisonous snakebites are made by rattlesnakes, water moccasins and copperheads. A few are made by the fourth major poisonous snake in the country — the coral snake — found in the Southern states. More than half of all venomous bite cases occur in Texas, North Carolina, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, and Arkansas.

First aid for snakebites is changing. The once-recommended cold therapy, using cold compresses, ice, or spray refrigerants, is no longer advised. Dr. Charles H. Watt Jr. of Thomasville, Ga., a surgeon who has extensively studied snakebite treatment, reports that cold treatment actually may increase the likelihood of disfigurement or amputation. The American Red Cross and the American Medical Association now also discourage cold therapy.

What should be done in the field for a snakebite victim? According to Dr. Watt: 1. Get him to a hospital immediately.

Meanwhile, keep the victim calm, preferably lying down with the bitten extremity at or below heart level. If the snake can be killed without risk of another bite, it should be brought along to the hospital for identification.

2. Apply a constricting band two to four inches above the bite but not around a joint (elbow, knee, wrist, or ankle) and not around the head, neck, or trunk. The band should be three-fourths to 1 1/2 inches wide, and snug, but loose enough to slip a finger underneath.

3. If the victim is more than 1 1/2 hours from medical help or if a dangerous snake, such as a rattler, is the offender, immediately use incision and suction. As much as half of the venom can be removed if this is done. It is of no value, however, after 30 minutes.

The cut should extend over the fang marks and should be about one-eighth inch deep and no longer than one-fourth inch. The cut should be made along the long axis of the limb and should not be made on the head, neck or trunk.

Suction should be applied with a suction cup for 30 minutes, or if a suction cut is not available, with the mouth. The venom should not be swallowed and the mouth should be rinsed afterward.

Do not give the victim alcohol, sedatives, aspirin, or other medication.

Seven Bodies Stay Frozen In Cryonics Lab

in capsules in a San Francisco Bay laboratory. Four of the corpses are kept whole, which adherents believe is the best way. The others are kept in part; there are two frozen heads in the laboratory, and there is the frozen brain of a 16-year-old girl.

The brain belongs to Luna Wilson, daughter of science writer Robert Anton Wilson. She was murdered in a grocery store robbery, and Wilson could not bear to see her life end absolutely. He had her brain frozen in the hope that some day science will be able to clone a new woman from the matter.

The laboratory here is, of course, bizarre, and that is one reason few are clamoring to be a part of cryonics "immortality." Art Quafe, who runs the lab, says only 80 believers have signed up for capsule space. "It's very hard," he adds, "to convince people their lives are worth saving."

Quafe is director of Berkeley's Trans Time Inc., one of two firms in the nation which specialize in cryonics suspension. Business is not good for either. The last customer to be suspended here was in January; this year Quafe will be the only person on Trans Time's staff to receive a salary.

The problem, Quafe says, is obvious: not enough people believe solid state hypothermia will work. The truth is that cryonics is far from being medically accepted, and that as of now it is essentially an experiment. Even immortalists admit there are no assurances in cryonics, merely potentialities.

The potentials, however, may be even more encouraging. Quafe says even now frozen sperm can be used to make cattle and babies, and human organs can be frozen for future transplants. In one experiment in the Trans Time laboratory, he says a dead dog was frozen, then thawed, and lived afterward for 17 hours.

Anyway, Quafe says it's nonsense to argue whether cryonics does or does not work. If it doesn't work now, he says, it may work tomorrow, and even if it doesn't work then what's wrong with trying?

"I admit we're not sure a frozen body can be brought back — but we know it can't if it's not frozen."

So it is that at least some people continue to support cryonics. The seven in Trans Time's laboratory, for example. They repose in silver caskets, their blood replaced with an antifreeze, their bodies or parts wrapped in layers of foil and Fiberglas. They're frozen to minus 320 degrees — solid.

The subject's containers are tagged with the data of tombstones. They are promised care in perpetuity, if it's necessary. If Trans Time goes bankrupt, the area's cryonics society says it will find someone else to tend the bodies, because money will always be available to pay for the services.

The money comes from the subjects, of course. Most of them paid a Trans Time membership fee of $1,000, plus $250 a year dues. Then, upon death, they left a $50,000 life insurance policy or equivalent, with Trans Time as the beneficiary. The money buys $1,800 a year maintenance.

Expensive? Yes. But Art Quafe says it may only be for the short term. He says a subject's $50,000, less processing and keep, is placed in an interest drawing account, and if the subject is brought back he gets the accumulated amount. In other words, it may be possible to take it with you after all.

Bill Provides Protection On Funerals

AUSTIN (AP) — A consumer protection bill for bereaved relatives, which also continues state regulation of undertakers, won final House approval Friday, 136-0.

The bill, preserving the State Board of Morticians and compelling undertakers to obey two dozen consumer protection rules, returns to the Senate for action on changes made by the House.

House members also passed and returned to the Senate four other bills resulting from the Sunset process, which extinguishes 24 state agencies unless the Legislature extends their lives.

The bills would:

- Retain the State Bar of Texas as a state agency. All lawyers still would have to be members of the bar to practice law. Six non-lawyers would be added to the bar's 36-member board of directors. All doubts as to the bar's ownership of its Texas Law Center and the legality of its debt to build the $6 million building would be resolved in the bar's favor. The Texas Supreme Court would have to approve the bar's budget, and the bar would have to hold annual public hearings on it.

- Continue the State Board of Private Accountancy.

- Extend the life of the Texas Cosmetology Commission but bar it from prohibiting cosmetologists from working in barber shops.
- Merge the State Board of Registration for Public Surveyors and the Board of Examiners of Licensed State Land Surveyors into a single Texas Board of Land Surveying.

The morticians' board was re-created but told it had to sever its close connection with the Texas Funeral Directors Association. It no longer can, for instance, hire the association's lobbyist as its general counsel.

Four of the nine members on the board must be consumers instead of undertakers.

The bill provides penalties of up to a $1,000 fine and 180 days in jail — not to mention loss of their licenses — for morticians who fail to provide itemized lists of services and their prices.

The idea is to give bereaved families a chance to receive and pay for only those services they want and to reject others that commonly are included in single-price funerals.

Federal Rule Aids Farm Diesel Users, E. L. Short Says

A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Adoption of a special new federal rule will make it easier for agricultural users of diesel fuel to obtain the fuel when it is available, Sen. E. L. Short, Tahoka, disclosed.

Short, chairman of the Special Subcommittee on Diesel Fuel Shortages in Agriculture, said he has been notified by Nick Murphy of the Governor's Fuel Allocation Office that a rule adopted May 10 by the Economic Regulatory Administration, U.S. Department of Energy, will allow agricultural users to receive allocations "without the formal application required prior to the rule."

"Any supplier will be required to supply any farmer, upon either oral or written certification by the farmer, the gallons of fuel needed for 100 per cent agricultural use," Short said.

Refineries supplying wholesale distributors will, under the new rule, be required to replenish distributors on a gallon-for-gallon basis, thus freeing up the set-aside allocation for non-agricultural use, Short said.

That set-aside allocation amounts to four percent of the diesel fuel brought into Texas, Murphy said earlier.

He said that requests for the reserves, however, have been running as much as six times the amount available, with the High Plains and West Texas particularly in need.

Heavy equipment employed in clean-up and reconstruction work in the wake of last month's tornado in Wichita Falls also is a critical area, Murphy said.

Two Authors Win Paisano Awards

AUSTIN (AP) — William C. Martin of Houston and Chip Hannay of Iowa City, Iowa, will spend six months each at Paisano, the ranch of the late J. Frank Dobie west of Austin.

The 1979-80 Paisano Fellowships were announced by the University of Texas and the Texas Institute of Letters, which sponsor the fellowships. There were 77 applicants.

Hannay will live at the ranch from Sept. 1, 1979, to Feb. 29, 1980. He plans to complete a novel set in Texas. A native of Austin, Hannay is a graduate of UT-Austin and now is a fellow in fine arts at the University of Iowa.

Martin, who will be at the ranch from March 1 to Aug. 31, 1980, is an associate professor of sociology at Rice University. While at the ranch he plans to write a book on criminal defense as practiced by Richard "Racehorse" Haynes.

Woman Gets Two Degrees In One Week

Ruby M. Jackson of 1517 90th St. will have graduated from not one but two colleges in a week's time by 11 a.m. Saturday.

Mrs. Jackson, a 25-year veteran with the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation's Lubbock office, received her associate of applied science degree in mid-management May 11 from South Plains College.

At 10 a.m. Saturday at Harrel Memorial Auditorium on the campus of Wayland Baptist College in Plainview she'll receive a bachelor of science degree in occupational education.

Yet she never set foot on either campus for courses. She took all her classes either at SPC's extension campus in Lubbock or at Reese Air Force Base through an extension program sponsored by SPC's Division of Continuing Education.

"I had not intended at first to get a degree, but I was just taking a course to see if I could study again, and I enrolled in a personnel mid-management class taught at Reese by Sybil Lattimore," Mrs. Jackson explained. She is now executive secretary to the district engineer at the highway department in Lubbock.

"I talked with Mrs. Lattimore about the possibility of getting credit for the Certified Professional Secretaries examination, and she told me about the B.S.O.E. (bachelor of science in occupational education) degree program offered through Wayland Baptist College at Plainview."

Through the educational program, Mrs. Jackson was able to get college credit for her experience with the highway department.

About that time, she also began serving on SPC's business advisory committee and began communicating with college faculty who are teaching courses on trends and changes in the business world.

"In talking with Frank Hunt, dean of SPC's technical-vocational-occupational division, about the advisory committee work, he said, 'you've done such a good job for us, what can we do for you?'" Mrs. Jackson recalled.

"I said that I would like a degree from South Plains. I found that I had taken enough courses to qualify for a degree from SPC."

"It just happened that the graduation exercises were at about the same time, for I had finished my work for the Wayland degree last November," Wayland only has one graduation exercise which is held in the spring.

"I wanted to be in graduation exercises from both colleges; it was really a great experience, and I was very proud to be in the group from South Plains," Mrs. Jackson said.

The course is designed for ambulance attendants, nurses, firemen, law enforcement personnel and anyone else seeking to become certified as an Emergency Medical Technician.

Eight clock hours will be in the classroom and 40 clock hours in the hospital. All persons who satisfactorily complete the course and pass the final exam will be State Certified Emergency Medical Technicians.

Cost is $120 plus books, which will cost about $30. Liability insurance is included in the $120 fee.

Instructor will be Jewel Arnold, L.V.N., and certified EMT instructor.

For more information or to pre-register, contact the SPC Division of Continuing Education at 804-9611, ext. 242.

Big Spring Utility Seeks Rate Hike

A-J Correspondent

BIG SPRING — Texas Electric Service Company (TESCO) filed a request Thursday for a 16.1 percent system wide increase in revenues.

The request filed by TESCO with the city and the Public Utility Commission in Austin would provide an additional $86 million annually in revenue.

The increase is necessary to cover inflated operations costs, including its program to build new generating plants that use lignite coal and nuclear fuels, according to Jack Redding, TESCO manager in Big Spring.

"We must continue our program to reduce our dependence on natural gas and oil as fuels to generate electricity," said Redding.

TESCO can no longer obtain low cost, long range gas contracts, and the government has required utilities to help the nation save oil by using other kinds of fuels to generate electricity, Redding said.

Young Opposes Lifting Rhodesian Sanctions

HOUSTON (AP)— United Nations Ambassador Andrew Young said Friday the lifting of economic sanctions against Rhodesia would "almost guarantee a military solution" rather than a peaceful one to the problems in the African nation.

Young also said that once sanctions were removed, "The United States will be unable to help find a political solution. We should not do anything to contribute to the escalation of the military situation."

At a news conference following a speech at the opening session of an African-American Institute regional conference, Young said he didn't know what action President Carter may take on Rhodesia, "but I trust his judgment and I realize it is a difficult decision."

Asked if he would resign if the president approves removal of the economic sanctions, Young said, "As long as I have a fighting chance to influence politics of the administration, I will stay there. If I couldn't fight for certain policies within the administration, I would do so outside.

"But this issue is in no way a test of my support for President Carter. It alone would not influence me to resign," he said.

The Senate has voted to ask President Carter to lift the sanctions following the Rhodesia election that placed black Bishop Abel T. Muzorewa as head of the country's first black-majority legislature.

Young said that even now the "people of Rhodesia have never had a free decision on what they want, and this includes a white minority group. Ian Smith (long the white Rhodesian premier) has so controlled the press the people didn't know. This election is an Ian Smith project. Ian Smith has been wrong.

Texas Archaeology Discovery Evaluated By Scientists

LEWISVILLE (AP) — Evidence found at an archaeological site at Lake Lewisville won't push human occupation of this continent as far back as 40,000 years as some had hoped, scientists say.

But test results released this week and new evidence indicate the site is still a major archaeological find.

Th results sent to the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers have added to the theory of some archaeologists working at site since last fall that it once was a "Clovis" camp, only the second one ever found.

The first evidence of man's early occupation on this continent was found near Clovis, New Mexico. That was a killsite, where early man made his weapons to kill large animals for food. The only other known campsite similar to Lake Lewisville's is in Murray Springs, Ariz.

What has surprised scientists the most about the site is that the humans — who probably lived there 11,000 to 12,000 years ago, burned lignite coal in their hearths, said Larry Banks, Corps of Engineers division archaeologist.

The coal deposits which scientists had taken from the hearths and thought were simply burned wood apparently "contaminated" the site when testing was first done in 1956, Banks said.

The coal, formed as long as 80 million years ago, may have been mixed with fresh wood when the fires were built in the hearths. Because of that, test results indicated the samples may have been 40,000 years old.

Banks emphasized that not all test results are in yet, but said findings of a University of Illinois scientist that the samples sent from Lewisville were actually lignite coal make other evidence fall into place.

Several months ago scientists discovered a piece of bone apparently shaped by a human into some type of tool. If tests had proved the site to be as old as 40,000 years, the altered piece of bone could have been strong evidence that humans were on this continent about 30,000 years earlier than current evidence shows.

Banks and other archaeologists, including some from the Smithsonian Institution, began to have strong doubts about the 40,000-year dating in recent months when they found flint flakes encrusted in caliche, a hardened mineral deposit formed over years in alternating wet and dry layers. The flint flakes, obviously chipped from a larger stone, amazed scientists even more when they found some of the chips were made from same material of a spear point found at the site in 1956, Banks said.

Since the 1956 find some have speculated that the spear points identified as made during the Clovis era had been purposely placed at the site.

But the fact that chips were encrusted in caliche support the original find. The caliche could not have formed since the lake was built, Banks said. The 1956 excavations were made while the lake was under construction and the site had been under water since last summer's drought.

Spring rains have covered the site again.

The find of the flakes by Banks and Fort Worth Corps of Engineers District Archaeologist Bob Burton provided another unusual twist to the story.

"I woke up in the middle of the night one night after dreaming about the flint flakes being encrusted in caliche," Banks said.

"I talked to Bob Burton and Dennis Stanford (with the Smithsonian) about the possibility of acidizing the caliche to see if there were any flakes. The tests produced six or eight pressure flakes of flint. That meant the site could not be 40,000 years old and the only explanation could be contamination of the charcoal. Test results on the lignite coal confirmed the theory.

"Whether (Clovis humans) picked it (coal) up accidentally or intentionally, nobody knows but the fact is that stuff is burned lignite."

Banks said he is still excited by the results.

All other evidence of Clovis man has been found only at killsites where camels, horses, bison and elephants living then were killed for food.

"Other results are not in yet but unless something happens to refute (this evidence) it resolves one of the most controversial problems (in archaeology) in this country," Banks said.

Burglary Charges Name City Men

Burglary charges were filed Friday by the criminal district attorney's office against four Lubbock men.

Bret William Kulick, 21, of 3333 Toledo Ave. No. 21, was charged with burglary of a habitation in an April 23 home burglary here in which about $36,000 in cash, jewelry and other items were stolen.

Kulick is accused of burglarizing the 2103 62nd Street home of James Earl Jeffreys. The criminal district attorney's office is recommending he be jailed in lieu of $50,000 bond.

Samuel Deary, 28, of 1805 E. Second St. was charged with burglary in an April 10 break-in at Arrow Pawn at 719 Broadway Ave. in which some rings were stolen.

Raymond Prado Gonzales, 18, of 1916 14th St. and Gregorio Contreras, 22, of 810 Fir Ave. were charged with burglary in Thursday break-ins at Alderson Junior High School and Wright Elementary School in which coin-operated vending machines were broken into.

Tommy Lee Westbrook, 24, of 5525 W. Fourth St., No. 48-E, was charged with two counts of forgery in the reported issuance of fraudulent $975 and $400 checks to a Lubbock woman.

Roger C. Hall, 21, of 3718 47th St., was charged with forgery in the reported May 4 passing of a fraudulent $197 check at a 2017 Fourth St. supermarket.

ANOTHER SPANISH MURDER MADRID, Spain (AP) — Two masked gunmen killed a Basque bar owner in a barrage of sub-machine gun fire in Spain's 49th political killing of the year, police reported Friday. Police said the bar owner, 48-year-old Antonio Perez Garcia, was shot and killed late Thursday night.

Senators Delay Vote On Gadfly's Post

DALLAS (AP) — Eddie Chiles is not mad at sensitive state senators who are balking at confirming his nomination as regent of North Texas State University. He doesn't care whether they confirm him or not.

Chiles, the conservative boss of The Western Co. in Fort Worth, regularly tweaks politicians through a series of radio spots that urge voters to "fire" lawmakers who fail to perform according to the standards of those voters. The spots often begin with an announcer asking, "Who are you mad at today, Eddie Chiles?"

When Gov. Bill Clements nominated him to the board of regents, Chiles' spots quickly came into play, and at least one senator got mad.

"He (Chiles) doesn't have the ability to guide the minds of our youth," Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, said.

Right on, Chiles said in a telephone interview Friday.

"No, I don't think I have the ability to guide the minds of our youth," the 69-year-old Chiles said. "But I would try to help organize the university so it would be a place where that could be done by the proper people."

"His (Chiles') ads cast a slur on almost every elected official in the nation," Parker charged.

Aw, come on, Chiles said. "I have no intention of doing that.... If it's interpreted that way, it's accidental. I don't think I ever singled out any party or any particular group of people. It's just the liberal-socialist philosophy against the conservative philosophy. I do hit at big spenders and high taxes.

"If that's what he's talking about, I do that of course."

Chiles said he doesn't know Parker, and would not use the series of accusations as the basis for another series of radio spots. "I'm not vindictive," Chiles said. "I wouldn't start a fight with the Texas Senate or anybody in it."

Neither is he poor. The Western Co. is a basic biggie in the oilfield business, which prompts Chiles to point out that he didn't seek the appointment and wouldn't particularly relish it. "I don't need another job," he said.

Senators indicated they want to read transcripts of Chiles' spots before acting on his nomination.

That's fine with Chiles, but he said no one from the Senate has asked for such a transcript or the tapes.

"We did get a call from Austin a few days ago from somebody that wanted us to send a copy of the tapes," Chiles said. "They didn't say who they were and wouldn't tell us why they wanted them, so we didn't send them."

"If the Senate wants the tapes, sure I'll supply them. Nobody's asked for them."

Chiles does have at least one strong supporter in Austin. Clements said he admires the man and "in many ways I agree with him."

Actor Creates Lincoln Magic For Audiences

PACIFIC, Mo. (UPI) — Elvis Presley imitators may be more popular and make more money, but Richard Blake portrays Abraham Lincoln because he feels the former president got a raw deal in the history books and movies.

Blake, who has portrayed Lincoln more than 2,000 times in 13 years, said too many people have the wrong image of Lincoln.

"They think he was a gangly man, bumbling around and talking in a deep voice," he said. "But he was a charming man, a man with charisma."

"Most historians agree that he was the type of man who, when he walked into a room, you knew he was there. If I had to choose a modern celebrity to compare him to in that respect, it would have to be John Wayne."

Blake, a slim 6-foot-4 actor complete with beard, top hat and wax mole on his cheek, portrays Lincoln as a serious man, torn by the conflict of the Civil War, but still folksy and quick with a story to illustrate any situation.

Blake toured several school districts this week with a special show billed as "A Day with President Lincoln."

The appearances featured parades, speeches and mock news conferences with students posing as reporters questioning the president the day after his re-election in 1864.

Blake's appearance at Agee Junior High School was a major event. Students and teachers turned out in stovepipe hats, hoop skirts and fake beards, and the halls were plastered with signs proclaiming the virtues that should win Abe's re-election.

"Start Thinkin' — Vote For Lincoln." "Roses Are Red, Violets Are Blue. Abe Is Honest, And You Should Be Too." "Vote For Lincoln — He'll Keep Your Heart From Sinkin'."

Blake arrived in a horse-drawn carriage and pressed the flesh like any politician, then addressed an assembly in the school gym.

Lincoln's speech was peppered with anecdotes, including the time he vowed to shoot any man he found who was uglier than he was. When he found such a man and explained what he was doing, the man reportedly answered:

"Fire away, then. Any man who is uglier than you are doesn't deserve to live."

Gas Expense Still Cheaper Than Horses

MACKINAC ISLAND, Mich. (UPI) — The high price of gasoline might frustrate most Americans, but bringing back the horse and buggy could cause transportation expenses to gallop out of hand.

Abandoning automobiles for horse travel would cost the average driver about $10,000 for the initial investment and as much as $15,000 a year to ride in style, veterinarian Bill Chambers says.

The doctor operates horse and buggy tours on this tourist island where autos are banned.

Chambers says it costs at least $1,500 for a current-model horse, broken and ready to hitch, $300 per harness and $100 for stable equipment.

Carriage prices range from $2,500 for a basic four-seat model to about $10,000 for a 16-passenger job, he said. As a compromise, one might opt for a "spiffy," a vehicle in which the four passengers sit face-to-face.

Don't expect to find showrooms abounding, however. One of the few places carriages are now being produced is in the Amish community in Shipawan, Ind.

There are many other hidden costs, Chambers said.

For instance, someone reverting to horse transportation would have to install a wooden floor in his garage complete with stall and drainage at an expense of several thousand dollars.

Then there's the cost of a stable hand for grooming the horse, unless you want to do it yourself. The going rate is $3.75 per hour.

Coachmen to drive you to the office or theater and watch the horse while you're gone are paid salaries ranging from $8,000 to $10,000 annually, Chambers said.

To make sure they are properly attired, they will need red jackets costing about $200, a black top hat at about $60, special pants costing $80 and another $80 for boots and other accessories.

Repairs are costly and inconvenient. If the carriage throws a tire, for instance, the owner will have to send it back to Shipawan to get it fixed and face about $50 in basic labor charges.

Then there's the overhead. Chambers estimated the cost of food for the horse, veterinary service, horseshoeing and a salt block for the horse to lick at about $2,000 a year.

In addition, he said, the horse produces far more manure for fertilizing any one yard or even those of friends. So someone has to be hired to haul it away.

"Don't step in the exhaust," is a common quip heard around the island.

TAX EVADER EXTRADITED

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — John H. Meier, accused of filing false documents in a court battle against the Howard Hughes empire, has been returned to Utah from Canada where he's evaded tax charges since 1973. It was a year ago Thursday that Meier, 46, was indicted on two charges of obstruction of justice by a federal grand jury in Salt Lake. The charges stem from a 12 civil suit Meier was fighting against the Hughes Tool Co., when he introduced documents the government says he knew to be false.

Jackson's Double Sparks Yankees Past Red Sox

By The Associated Press
Reggie Jackson capped a three-run fifth inning with a bases-loaded, ground-rule double and the New York Yankees went on to a 10-0 victory over the Boston Red Sox in their first meeting since last fall's dramatic American League East playoff.

Right-hander Jim Beattie, a winner for the Yankees in the World Series last October but shipped back to minors for the start of this season, fired a four-hitter for his third victory in four decisions since his recall.

Former Yankee Mike Torrez, the loser in last year's 5-4 playoff defeat to New York, was cuffed around once again by his old teammates. Torrez, 42, was tagged for 10 hits before being replaced in the eighth, when the Yankees scored four insurance runs.

New York scored all the runs they needed with three in the fifth, Torrez contributing to his own downfall by making a late throw to second on an attempted force play.

inning gave Cincinnati a 7-6 victory over Los Angeles handing the Dodgers their third straight loss.

Joe Morgan led off the ninth with a single off Jerry Reuss, 1-3, and was bunted to second by Paul Blair before Driessen hit a soft liner to left field. Dusty Baker, charging in, failed to hold the ball when he apparently lost it in the lights. Pedro Borbon, 2-0, got the victory.

ASTROS 3, PADRES 2

Joe Niekro tossed a four-hitter and Jose Cruz broke an eighth-inning tie with a bloop single to center field as the Houston Astros defeated the San Diego Padres 3-2.

Cruz's hit followed a single and stolen base by Craig Reynolds and Enos Cabell's two-out infield single off Rollie Fingers, 2-3, and snapped the Astros' three-game losing streak.

Sports Notes

Amarillo Dragway Hosts Races

AMARILLO (Special) — The fourth race of the South Central regional of the National Hot Rod Association Winston World Championship Series will begin at 9 a.m. today at the Amarillo Dragway and continue through Sunday.

More than 300 drivers will be competing for $40,000 in prize money. All eight NHRA categories, including the three pro divisions and the four E.T. Bracket classes will be in action.

The Bracket elimination will begin at 5 p.m. today. Final qualifications for the Funny Car and Double A Fuelers divisions start at 7 p.m.

On Sunday, the gates will open at 9 a.m., and the final elimination in the World Championship Series division will begin at 1 p.m.

Bob Noice of Van Nuys, Calif., who drives the Brisette and Drake dragster which took Kelly Brown to the Winston World Championship in 1978 will be competing. Noice recently captured the Division 4 points event at Ft. Worth, and is currently second in the regional standings and third in the world standings.

Billy Meyer, a 24-year old veteran from Waco who recently won in the Funny Car Category in Ft. Worth, will be going for his second consecutive title.

In Pro Stock, defending Division 4 champion Lee Shepherd of Arlington will be shooting for his fourth consecutive regional win.

Link Events Abound On South Plains

If they were all competing in the same place the scene would look like something out of the musical "Oklahoma!"

But fortunately South Plains golfers competing in today's partnership tournaments are going to be spread out over at least five different sites.

Action begins this morning in the Plainview, Morton, Farwell and Gaines County (Seminole) men's partnership tournaments. In addition to that, the Pan American Golf Association will also host a partnership at the Meadowbrook today.

Action in all of the tourneys is slated to begin with 9 a.m. and 2 p.m. tee-offs today and Sunday.

At least 60 teams are competing in each tourney — which means a total of more than 600 golfers will be trying to drop that elusive putt in different courses across West Texas today.

Competition is being offered in the championship through Flights 5 in most of the tournaments.

LCHS Gridders Sign With Chaps

Lubbock Christian College signed its first ever two high school football recruits Friday afternoon.

The two players to sign Texas Intercollegiate Athletic Association letters-of-intent were linebacker Tim Howell and quarterback Kent Allison.

Both players finished their schoolboys careers at Lubbock Christian High School last year.

Howell, 6-1, 185-pounds, had 12 tackles and rushed for 263 yards in a part-time fullback role.

Allison, 6-0, 165-pounds, was 72-135 passes for 13 touchdowns and also rushed for 270 yards and scored three times.

Both players were named to the All-City team and named honorable mention on the Texas Association of Private Schools All-State team.

Biletnikoff's Future Unknown

OAKLAND — Is Fred Biletnikoff, the man who made the sideline catch a work of art, nearing the end of his career with the Oakland Raiders?

The Raiders normally carry four wide receivers. Currently there are five on the roster, including Biletnikoff — Cliff Branch, Morris Bradshaw, Rich Martini and Joe Stewart.

All are younger than Biletnikoff's 36 years.

"We have to decide if he's in our future plans, and whether he feels that way," said Oakland coach Tom Flores.

"Fred doesn't want to retire," Flores added. "He wants to play another year or two. It's just whether it would be better for him to play here or somewhere else."

Affirmed Enters Californian Stakes

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — Affirmed, the 1978 Triple Crown winner, drew the number two post position Friday for the $272,400 Californian Stakes Sunday at Hollywood Park.

Affirmed, 1978 Horse of the Year after winning the three gems of Thoroughbred racing, will carry high weight of 130 pounds, four more than top challenger Sensitive Prince and 18 more than the horse with the lightest impost, Synopate.

Laffit Pincay, the nation's leading jockey this year in both victories and earnings, will be aboard Affirmed.

Cowboys Ink Third-Round Draft Pick

DALLAS — Santa Clara tight end Doug Cossie, the Dallas Cowboys' No. 3 draft choice, has signed a multi-year contract, the National Football League club announced Friday.

Also signed to multi-year pacts for undisclosed sums were the Cowboys' No. 7 choice, Youngstown State linebacker Greg Fitzpatrick, and its No. 9 pick, Southern Cal linebacker Garry Cobb.

Umpires Return To Work

New York by the two league presidents, Phillips, and Ron Luciano and Paul Runge, president and vice president, respectively, of the Major League Umpires Association. AL umpire Richie Garcia also was present at the signing.

Under the agreement, the umpires received substantial increases in salary, per diem allowance, in-season vacations and pensions.

"In general, we basically got what we went in to get," Phillips said.

"We are glad this situation is resolved after many 'good-faith' bargaining sessions with Mr. Phillips," MacPhail and Feeney said in a joint statement.

"We are appreciative of the generally fine job that the substitute umpires did in most areas around the country and we are pleased with the new young umpires we have brought up to our staff during this period," they added.

"But, of course, we are happy to have our regular umpires back. They are the best around and we know they will resume doing their conscientious job on the field as our pennant races heat up in mid-season."

The substitute umpires — many of them college and sandlot officials — had been filling in for the regulars since the start of spring training.

The major difference in the old and new contracts — the new one carries through the 1981 season — provides for fixed salaries based on individual service. Previously, umpires signed individual contracts within the parameters of salary minimums in the various years of service categories.

Salaries, based on service, will commence with $22,000 for a second-year umpire and reach $50,000 for an umpire with 20 or more years service. The umpires' salary will rise to $28,000 after the fifth year, to $38,000 after 10 years and to $45,000 after 15 years.

Per diem pay was increased from $53 per day to $67 this year, and will rise to $72 in 1980 and $77 in 1981.

The umpires will receive one week's vacation during their first year and two weeks after one year. Vacation time will be within the authority of the league presidents, with an effort made to schedule the vacations for umpires with at least four years experience during the period of June 1-Labor Day.

The umpires' pension plan will carry over until 1982. From now until then, the umpires will not be required to make contributions to it.

The umpires' pay will be retroactive to May 11 — "the day we feel substantial progress (in the negotiations) was made and we reached agreement on a lot of issues," said MacPhail.

Bid Goes After Preakness Title

BALTIMORE (AP) — Spectacular Bid, patron of the arts, honorary citizen of Baltimore and Kentucky Derby winner, goes after a victory today in the Preakness before what could be a record turnout at Pimlico.

This 104th Preakness has an unusual strong Maryland connection. Trainer Bud Delp, jockey Ronnie Franklin and owners Harry, Teresa and Tom Meyerhoff are Marylanders. Bid was born in Kentucky but he began his spectacular career at Pimlico where he won his first two starts last year.

Pimlico officials are hopeful that this local interest and the forecast of no rain will lure a record crowd to watch Bid go after his 12th straight victory when he opposes four other 3-year-olds who he beat in the Derby May 5. The Maryland attendance record is 81,261 set last year when Affirmed outdueled Alydar to win the Preakness.

Those who show up and buy Spectacular Bid T-shirts will be benefiting the Baltimore Opera Company. The Meyerhoffs have an agreement that proceeds from Bid souvenirs go to the opera company, which stamps letters to subscribers with the slogan "Spectacular Bid loves the opera."

"I got the best horse. They know that," trainer Bud Delp said Friday pointing along the barn housing Bid's rivals General Assembly, Flying Paster, Golden Act and Screen King.

"Sometimes the best horse doesn't win," mused Delp, who is outspoken in his praise of Bid. "That's what makes horse racing."

"There's no cinch. I haven't seen one yet," said LeRoy Jolley, trainer of Derby runner-up General Assembly. Jolley was beaten with Preakness favorites Foolish Pleasure in 1975 and Honest Pleasure in 1976.

Cinch or not, Spectacular Bid go off as the overwhelming favorite. Should he win, he could pay as little as $2.10, which is what Citation paid in beating three rivals in 1948. Saturday's field is the smallest for a Preakness since 1948.

The Maryland State Racing Commission announced Friday that because of the small field there will be no show betting. There was win betting only when Citation won.

Post time for the race, which will be worth $235,300 with five starters, is 5:38 p.m. EDT. ABC will televise from 5 p.m. to 6 p.m.

The weather forecast is for cloudy with temperatures in the low to mid-70s. With no rain, the track will be hard and the fast.

Delp blew out Spectacular Bid, who came from off the pace in the Derby, three-eighths of a mile in a snappy 34 seconds Thursday and said he wanted to put speed into the colt in case it was needed. The track and Preakness record was set in 1971 by Canonero II, who completed the 13-16 miles in 1:54.

"These are the five best 3-year-olds in America. I think," said Delp of Bid and his rivals.

Dave Parker of the Pittsburgh Pirates batted .439 against Cincinnati pitching in 1978.

The five have started a total of 63 times and have 36 wins, 15 seconds and seven thirds.

But of the five, only three ran well in the Derby & Bid, Bertram R. Firestone's General Assembly and Golden Act, who is owned by Robert W. Phipps and William H. Odellson. General Assembly, ridden by Laffit Pincay, ran on the lead in the Derby where he was beaten by 2 1/4 lengths on a fast but drying and sticky track. The son of Secretariat is expected to go for the lead at the break in the Preakness.

Sonics Await Playoff Opponent

SEATTLE (AP) — Playing in harmony, the Seattle SuperSonics hope to bring the sweet song of success to the National Basketball Association championship, a goal that eluded the team by six points last year.

"If you have 11 men playing in harmony, you can be successful," said a jubilant Seattle forward John Johnson after the Sonics edged the Phoenix Suns 114-110 Thursday night to win their second Western Conference title in a row.

For the NBA championship, the Sonics will face the winner of Friday night's Eastern Conference game between the defending champion Washington Bullets and the San Antonio Spurs.

Thursday night's contest was Sonic style all the way — close and fast. Not until the final moment was it assured that Seattle had won the title. It took a pair of free throws by Jack Sikma with two seconds remaining to preserve the victory.

"I think we can win the NBA championship," said Sikma. "I thought we could win it last year. I think these last two games may spur us on and carry us over the hump in the finals."

Over 37,000 fans in Seattle's Kingdome — the second largest in playoff history — saw a pudgy 15-point lead all but evaporate in the game's final six minutes. Yet Seattle still led 112-104 with 20 seconds left.

Sonic Coach Lenny Wilkens had funneled his reserves into the game to replace the standouts — but the move came prematurely, as Phoenix nibbled away at the lead.

"You got to believe I'll never do that again," Wilkens said after the game, as a relieved guard, Dennis Johnson, yanked a champagne cork out of a bottle with a "Pop!" in the background.

The victory gave the Sonics a 4-3 edge in the best-of-seven series against Phoenix.

"Wow, what a nightmare that would have been if we lost it," said Sikma, the Sonics' 6-foot-11 second-year center who finished with a game and career-high 33 points and 11 rebounds.

An 8-0 Suns run cut Seattle's lead to 105-101 with 2:07 left. Dennis Johnson followed with seven straight free throws for a 112-104 Sonic cushion with just 20 seconds left.

But Phoenix's Walter Davis hit a basket and then stole the ball from Sonic reserve Joe Hassett and fed Paul Westphal for a jumper with eight seconds left. Another Seattle reserve, Wally Walker, lost the next possession, again to Davis. Westphal scored again to cut the lead to two points and was fouled by Walker.

Westphal had two chances to make one point. He intentionally banged his first shot off the backboard and then threw the second off the rim, hoping a Sun player could grab the rebound. But Sikma came up with it and was fouled by Don Buse.

Sikma, with three chances to make two shots, missed the first but sank the remaining two.

"You're still in the ball game until the game is over," said Phoenix Coach John MacLeod, who last led the Suns into the NBA finals in 1976 when they lost to Boston.

Injured Back Won't Keep Bill Rookie Out Of Camp

BUFFALO N.Y. (AP) — The rookies and free agents attending Saturday's Buffalo Bills mini-camp have been weighed, measured, appraised and timed, but no one really knows how most of them will react under pressure in the National Football League.

Nevertheless, Jim Wagstaff, who coaches Bills defensive backs, has a pretty good idea that 11th-round draft pick Paul Lawler of Colgate won't shy away when he's hurt.

After a skiing accident Jan. 17, 1978, Lawler spent 3½ months immobilized in a body cast, then had only 90 days to regain strength before fall practice. The tumble crushed one vertebra and compressed two others, leading doctors to question whether he would ever walk again. "They said the 12th thoracic vertebra was fractured clean through but the muscles of my back held the bone in place," said Lawler, a native of Oak Lawn, Ill., who passed up two Big Ten Conference schools to study geology at Colgate.

He said he thought of dying while lying in the snow, but decided he would fight off being crippled if he lived.

"There were a lot of people who never thought he would come back," said Kurt VanValkenburgh, Lawler's secondary coach. "There were days when he was sore. Sometimes he was in a great deal of pain."

Lawler, a 198-pound buzzsaw to enemy receivers, led the nation with seven interceptions in 1977 and hoped to be drafted high this year, but he remains undaunted about being a late pick.

DRIVE AWAY THE SUN — The Seattle SuperSonics brought in a secret before their NBA playoff game Thursday with the Phoenix. It was Chief Antelope who did a rain dance to drive away the Sun. It worked as Seattle won 114-110 to win the best-of-seven series 4-3. (AP Laserphoto)

Falcons Counting On 'Incredible Hulk Reject'

SUWANEE, Ga. (AP) — Pat Howell once had a screen test for the starring role in the TV series "The Incredible Hulk," but he didn't get the job. The Atlanta Falcons hope Hollywood's loss will be their gain.

"If this guy plays as good as he looks, we got ourselves a steal," a Falcons assistant coach said Thursday after Howell bench pressed 425 pounds.

Howell, the National Football League team's second-round draft choice from Southern California, stands 6 feet 5 and weighs 255 pounds. He hopes to use his considerable bulk to fill a guard spot on the Falcons' offensive line.

But it wasn't long ago Howell had his sights set on an acting career as "The Incredible Hulk."

"I did the whole shot, the green makeup and everything," Howell said about his screen test. "They put you in a super tight shirt that's just held together with little threads, and as soon as you expand, it rips right out."

The role went to Ted Cassidy, who was Lurch on "The Addams Family." After Cassidy died, Howell was too busy with football to try again. Lou Ferrigno presently plays "The Incredible Hulk" character.

The Falcons made Howell the 21st pick in the second round during the National Football League draft, and Howell says he is still a little stunned he wasn't a first-round choice.

The difference "cost me a lot of money... a lot of money, believe me," he said. Howell guessed that a birth defect which does not allow him to fully extend his left arm was one reason he was bypassed.

"It's never affected my blocking at all," he said, "but from what I understand, pretty soon the rumors started that I was so crippled I couldn't get in stance. That may be one of the reasons, I don't know."

Title Bout Still On, King Says

NEW YORK (AP) — Promoter Don King, saying he has overcome the television snub to a proposed Larry Holmes-Mike Weaver heavyweight championship fight, announced Friday that the bout will come off as scheduled June 22 because Holmes agreed to take a large pay cut.

The fight for Holmes' World Boxing Council crown will be held in Madison Square Garden, the first heavyweight title fight in the historic arena since Muhammad Ali defeated Earnie Shavers on Sept. 29, 1977. It also will be the first heavyweight title fight not on network TV since Ali stopped Joe Frazier in Manila in 1975.

Shavers also will be on the June 22 card, King said, although his opponent has not yet been determined. He also has agreed to a cut in his purse to offset the fact that all three networks, normally the bankrollers of the big-money fights, turned thumbs down on King's June 22 card.

The three TV networks didn't think a title fight with the unheralded Weaver would pay off. ABC, CBS and NBC sources said. ABC is planning to telecast Holmes' Sept. 14 title defense against Shavers.

One victim of the TV snub of King's June 22 card is the welterweight fight between Carlos Palomino and Roberto Duran. King said financial problems have forced a date change for that fight, but he said it will come off.

"Larry's reducing his purse so the fight can be held is a most magnanimous gesture," said King. "It proves he's a people's champion. We've got to recognize that for the business to survive, we must go back to live gates and percentages."

Holmes, 29, is undefeated in his 30 professional bouts, recording 21 knockouts, the last one coming against Ossie Ocasio in Las Vegas March 23. Weaver, 26, ranked eighth by the WBC, has won his last five fights by knockout. His record is 18-8.

Snyder Downs Burkburnett

BURKBURNETT (Special) — The Snyder baseballers had promised their parents to return from Burkburnett in time for supper Friday night, and they made good on their promise.

The Tigers needed only one game to finish off the Burkburnett Bulldogs and clinch a AAA bidistrict championship here Friday. Snyder exploded for 7 runs in the sixth inning to erase all doubts about a third game, defeating the home team 9-1.

Snyder had taken the first game of the best-of-three series Tuesday on its home territory.

Once again it was Sid Everton who proved to be a thorn in the side of the Bulldogs. Everton took the mound in the top of the fourth with Snyder trailing 1-0. But he held the Bulldogs hitless in four innings as Snyder rallied for the win.

The Tigers took a 2-0 lead in the fourth as Everton hit his first home run of the game. Then in the sixth, Snyder sent 11 men to the plate, six of them scoring, and sending Bulldog ace Smokey Burgess to the showers.

Everton hit his second home run of the contest in the wild sixth. Snyder also got doubles from Mitch Mackey (who pitched the first three frames of the game), Toby Neves, Ricky Gamble, Bobby Degrate and — who else — Everton, who batted twice in that inning.

All of those Snyder sluggers scored in that frame as well as Pete Willis, who was hit by a Burgess fastball.

Snyder 9-1
Burkburnett 0-2
Pitching: Sid Everton (4), and Toby Neves. Smokey Burgess, Harris (6) and John Yarmostki WP — Everton, LP — Burgess.

2B — Ted Robertson, BH5: Sid Everton, Mitch Mackey, Toby Neves, Ricky Gamble (3), Bobby Degrate, SHS, 3B — Sullivan, BH5, HR — Everton (2).

Montreal Goalie Confident

NEW YORK (AP) — Ken Dryden was discussing confidence.

"The level of confidence you build up in any given game is just kind of a veneer. You have to build on it and sustain it," said the Montreal Canadiens' net-minder.

"Usually, during part of a season, you go through a period of 15 or 20 games or so where you play basically the way you want to play and you never give the same a second thought. You feel very secure.

"When troubles occur, and for longer periods of time than they should, you really have to build it back. And it does happen after two periods or one game or something like that; it takes time," said Dryden, who appears on the way back to confidence after spending the last week or so in a very unsettled situation.

He did not play well in the semifinal series against the Bruins. He gave up four goals on 13 shots over two periods and was benched for the third Sunday as the Canadiens opened their National Hockey League playoff final with a 4-1 loss to the New York Rangers.

He was to have been "rested" for Game Two Tuesday night, but his replacement, Michel Larocque, was hospitalized after being hit on the forehead with a shot in practice. So Dryden was able to extend his streak of playoff games started to its present 110 over the seven years he has been with the club.

Of those games, 78 have been victories and the last two have come in three days against the Rangers as the Canadiens have taken a 2-1 lead in the best-of-seven series that continues here tonight.

Dryden gave up two goals on three shots Tuesday night before settling down to backstop a 6-2 Montreal triumph. Thursday night, he gave up only a tainted goal by Ron Guay in a 4-1 Canadiens victory.

Thanks largely to Montreal fore-checking which has all but eliminated decent scoring chances for New York, Dryden has permitted just one goal in the last 113 minutes, 39 seconds. And a statistic like that would lift the spirits of just about anyone.

"He looked pretty sure of himself out there," said Montreal Coach Scotty Bowman after the Canadiens had pulled within two victories of their fourth consecutive championship parade.

While Dryden regains his poise slowly but surely, defenseman Larry Robinson still searches his. The man has his name on the Stanley Cup four times, he has won the Norris Trophy as the NHL's top defenseman once and last season he was voted the top performer in the playoffs.

But two of his passes ended up behind Dryden in Game One and the lanky defenseman struggles to erase the memory.

"I feel like the puck weighs 50 pounds every time I touch it," he said then. "I'm just so afraid of going out and making a mistake."

He has improved to former status since, but he remains tentative at times. Robinson admits the puck weighs less now, but only "because it's on my stick less often. Whenever I get it now, I try to get it ahead to the forwards."

"I've basically come to the conclusion that in this series, I'm not going to be able to play the game I'm used to playing," said Robinson. "I'm a defenseman. If I take a chance, or make a blunder, there's no one back there to cover up. So I've decided to give the puck to the forwards and let them take the chances, since if they do, I'm back to cover up."

Frankly, the Montreal forwards haven't been making many blunders the last two games. After the first-game setback, they have pressured the Rangers at every opportunity and have lightened the load on Robinson considerably — to the dismay of New York's players and management.

"Their defensemen haven't been bothered enough," said Rangers assistant coach Mike Nykoluk. "We have to continually force the flow. We have to get on top of them when we throw the puck into the corners, and we haven't done that for two games now."

There is little time for change now. The Rangers have had chances to take the momentum away, and they haven't. They have had chances to test the two key players who are having confidence problems, and they haven't been able to do any damage.

And they're running out of time. "I think it's just a thing that happens," says New York goalie John Davidson. "but it's something we're going to have to snap the heck out of by (Game Four) Saturday night. We do not want to be down 3-1 going back to their pond for Game Five Monday."

Evert Advances

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Chris Evert Lloyd needed only 50 minutes to beat South Africa's Yvonne Vermaak 6-0, 6-4 Friday to gain the semifinals of a $75,000 women's tennis tournament here.

Lloyd's semifinal opponent will be Czechoslovakia's Regina Marsikova, who defeated fourth-seeded Australian Kerry Reid 6-6, 7-6, 6-2 earlier Friday.

The Lloyd-Vermaak match was played mostly from the baselines with Lloyd in no trouble at any time.

The third semifinalist was unseeded Caroline Stoll of the United States, who beat second-seeded Dianne Fromholtz of Australia 6-2, 6-2 Thursday.

Stoll will meet Romania's Virginia Ruzici in the other semifinal match. The Romanian defeated Australian Wendy Turnbull Thursday in the quarter-finals.

The semifinals were scheduled for today.

Dick Van Dyke To Star In Broadway Comedy

Dick Van Dyke will return to Broadway to star in a new comedy by Lawrence Roman, titled "Tragedies/a Comedy," to be produced by The Theatre Guild. Philip Langner, president of The Theatre Guild, announced that the new play will premiere at the National Theatre in Washington in July, prior to its Broadway opening.

Van Dyke last appeared on Broadway in 1960 in "Bye Bye Birdie." Since that time he has become a major star, both on television and in films. His television career is highlighted by his long-running series, "The Dick Van Dyke Show," co-starring Mary Tyler Moore. There also followed "The New Dick Van Dyke Show," and regular appearances on "The Carol Burnett Show." His films include "Mary Poppins," "Bye Bye Birdie," "Chitty Chitty Bang Bang," and "Divorce American Style."

Roman's comedy deals with the renewal of man's hope and spirit when suddenly confronted with a wrecked marriage and a bankrupt business. The reappearance of an old flame helps rekindle his will.

Among Roman's credits are "Under the Yum Yum Tree," which starred Gig Young. Jack Lemmon appeared in the movie version. He also wrote the screenplay for George Plimpton's "Paper Lion."

The Theatre Guild is the oldest continuing theatrical producing organization in the United States. It has produced 228 plays on Broadway, including many of the works of George Bernard Shaw, Eugene O'Neill, Robert Sherwood, Maxwell Anderson, Sidney Howard, William Saroyan and Philip Barry. In the musical field, "Porgy and Bess" was originally produced by the Theatre Guild, as were Rodgers and Hammerstein's memorable "Oklahoma" and "Carousel." The Theatre Guild's last Broadway production was William Gibson's "Golda," starring Anne Bancroft and directed by Arthur Penn.

Electrocution Danger Prompts Study

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Consumer Product Safety Commission is studying ways to protect CB radio operators from possible electrocution while working on base station antennas.

Calling communications antennas "the No. 1 cause of electrocutions among all consumer products," it voted last month to develop a mandatory standard for the industry.

The standard would require manufacturers to insulate or otherwise equip omnidirectional antennas to protect consumers if the antennas were to come in contact with high voltage power lines.

Meanwhile, the Federal Communications Commission amended CB Rules last month to include a power line hazard warning, but rejected a CPSC request to lower the 60-foot ceiling on CB antenna heights.

The CPSC has cited statistics showing that 96 percent of electrical shock accidents involve antennas exceeding 20 feet in height. It estimates that 200 persons are killed annually in such accidents.

The FCC agreed with the CPSC that higher antennas increase the risk of accidents, but said these could be avoided or reduced by consumer awareness of the danger. The CPSC ordered manufacturers last year to attach warning labels to CB antennas.

The FCC said benefits of higher antennas include reduced congestion, improved communications and more efficient use of the CB channels.

The CPSC standards initially would apply only to omnidirectional antennas, those designed to transmit an equal distance in all directions. These comprise 85 percent of the deaths and injuries associated with CB antennas, it said.

But it decided to study whether it is feasible to establish safety requirements later for directional antennas which have additional horizontal and vertical elements designed to transmit signals farther in a single direction.

The CPSC noted that the Electronic Industries Association, a trade group representing many CB manufacturers, is developing its own voluntary standard for omnidirectional antennas and said it would consider adopting it as a mandatory requirement if it proved suitable.

The CPSC estimates that between 50 and 60 firms make CB base station antennas, including one that already produces an insulated one.

"In 1976 and 1977, CPSC conducted 78 in-depth investigations of accidents involving contact of outside communications antennas with overhead power lines," it said in announcing the study.

"Seventy-three of these accidents involved CB antennas, and most of the electrocutions occurred as a result of antenna contact with power lines while antennas were being erected or taken down."

It said the investigation also revealed that "even when injuries are not fatal, they often involve severe burns, prolonged hospitalization, skin grafts, and occasionally result in loss of limbs."

"Many of the accidents involved multiple victims," it added. "In the 78 investigations, 86 deaths and 61 serious injuries were reported."

Fire Destroys Vacant Windsor Hotel

CAPE MAY, N.J. (AP) — The historic Windsor Hotel, a century-old Victorian inn owned by fundamentalist radio preacher Dr. Carl McIntire, was destroyed by fire Friday morning.

Authorities said there were no injuries in the blaze, which was reported about 10 a.m. and was declared under control shortly before noon.

The old hotel had been closed since 1973, when state officials said the building was a fire hazard.

"The Windsor's gone, absolutely gone. The fire was huge and that wood was as dry as can be," said Tom Carroll, a Cape May hotel owner and local historian. "The winds spread the flames very rapidly through the building. Within a half-hour, it was out of control."
