Khomeini puts stiffer limits on executions

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini put a new restriction on his Islamic revolutionary courts, decreeing execution only for persons who killed people or ordered them killed.

Pars, the official news agency, announced the execution of the 205th man to die before Khomeini's firing squads. And the ayatollah heading Tehran's revolutionary court appealed to supporters abroad to assassinate Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi, his wife, mother-in-law and sister, and several of his close advisers, including the former ambassador to the United States, Ardeshir Zahedi.

Khomeini, Iran's Shiite Moslem patriarch and the leader of the revolution that ousted the shah, said in a communique Sunday death sentences would be limited to those "proven to have killed people" and to "any person who has issued orders for the killing of people or who has committed torture resulting in death."

"No court has the right to issue death sentences, and no person should be executed except under the above two conditions. Violation of this order is an offense and liable to punishment," the communique said.

There was speculation that the order was in response to fears of the Iranian Jewish community and foreign criticism resulting from the execution last Wednesday of millionaire Jewish businessman Habib Elghanian. He was convicted of sending Israel funds that the court said were used to finance the killing of Palestinians.

It was the second restriction placed by Khomeini on the revolutionary courts, which are answerable only to him and his secret revolutionary council. Last month he decreed that soldiers and policemen who committed minor offenses during the shah's time were not liable to prosecution.

The latest victim of the firing squads was Parviz Torabi Marashi, the former governor of the city of Behbahan, in southwest Iran, the Pars agency reported. It said he was executed early today for killing, torture and destruction of property.

Ayatollah Sadeq Khalkhali, the chief of the Tehran revolutionary court, issued a list of most-wanted members of the royal regime and told a news conference: "Anyone who wants to assassinate these people in Iran or outside would be carrying out the orders of the court. They cannot be arrested by any foreign government as a terrorist because they will be carrying out the orders of Iran's Islamic revolutionary court."

His hit list included the shah, his wife, Empress Farah Diba, and her mother; Princess Ashraf, a sister of the shah; the last three royal prime ministers, Jaafar Sharif-Emamy, Gholam-Reza Azhari and Shahpour Bakhtiar; the former martial law administrator of Tehran, Gen. Gholam Ali Oveisi, and Zahedi.

However, Khalkhali indicated those he listed had not been formally tried in absentia by the revolutionary courts.

"The people of Iran have already condemned them," he said. "Their guilt is proven already."

The ayatollah defended the revolutionary courts and their procedures and said they were comparable to the Nuremberg trials of Nazi leaders after World War II.

"Those who fought with God on earth or with his prophets, or who spread corruption on earth must be killed, or hanged after they are killed to show their bodies to the people, or their hands and feet must be cut off so they cannot move around, or else they must be banished," he said.

"We do not believe in Western law. Islamic law prohibits defense lawyers unless the defendant is dumb and cannot talk. Those who have been on trial — you can ask them yourselves — haven't been tortured so they can speak freely."

So far, the revolutionary courts have only passed sentences of death and imprisonment. No hands or feet have been cut off, and there have been no banishments. And although photographs of the bodies of those executed have been published, there has been no public display of the bodies.

Stanley, a 225-pound Saint Bernard, wears the look of a dog searching for someone to play with. The 14-month-old animal belongs to Ben Raulston of Midland. Raulston said although the dog now has no trouble getting its chin up on his 5½-foot high fence, Stanley still has some weight to gain before being considered fully mature. ## SALT faces 'risk', Vance says

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate runs the "grave risk" of killing the new strategic arms limitation treaty with the Soviet Union if it tries to amend it, Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance says.

And he warns that if the Senate fails to ratify the pact, it could cause "some unraveling in the NATO alliance."

Vance, who last week wrapped up lengthy negotiations with the Soviets on a new arms pact, argued the administration's case for treaty ratification Sunday on NBC's "Meet the Press." He was joined by Defense Secretary Harold Brown.

"This treaty is a very carefully drafted document, drafted over a period of almost seven years," Vance said. "It is interrelated and intertwined, and various parts of it bear upon other parts. Therefore, to amend any part runs a grave risk of killing the treaty completely."

He added that he could "think of no real substantive change in terms of an amendment that wouldn't jeopardize the existence of the treaty."

However, Sen. Howard Baker, the Senate's minority leader and a candidate for the 1980 Republican presidential nomination, said Sunday he thought it was "very unlikely" the Senate would approve the treaty as is.

Two-thirds of the Senate must ratify any treaty for it to go into effect.

Opponents of the pact argue the United States would not be able to determine adequately whether the Soviets were cheating on terms of the treaty because of the recent loss of intelligence monitoring stations in Iran.

President Carter and Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev are scheduled to sign the treaty at a summit meeting next month in Vienna, Austria.

Baker, who says he has not made a final decision on whether to support the pact, suggested that the Senate might ask Carter to take the treaty back to the Soviets to renegotiate parts of it. The Tennessee lawmaker made his remarks on ABC's "Issues and Answers."

Another senator expected to be influential in the upcoming Senate debate, Sam Nunn, predicted the administration would have an "uphill fight" in winning approval but said ratification was possible.

The Georgia Democrat, in an interview on CBS' "Face the Nation," also said there was "validity to the argument of the administration, when they say that significant amendments could, in effect, be tantamount to defeating the treaty."

"But if I decide I cannot support the treaty as it now stands, yes, I will support amendments, and I will have to let the chips fall where they may, as far as the Russian interpretation of that," said Nunn, who chairs the Senate subcommittee on military manpower.

The Soviet press has run commentaries the last few days expressing the Kremlin's concern about Senate ratification.

In Sunday's editions, Pravda charged that American military-industrial circles opposed to the treaty are conducting a "hysterical" campaign in a last-ditch bid to scuttle it.

The Communist Party newspaper said, "Politicians in the United States who raise obstacles to the agreement assume grave responsibility to their own people" and the rest of the world.

Carter, in an interview Friday with out-of-town editors, again warned about the effect of a Senate rejection.

"Rejection of the treaty will have the most devastating consequences to our country and, I think, to world peace," he said. "It will sever, to a substantial degree, the workable relationship between ourselves and the Soviets."

Vance, arguing for ratification, also ticked off the possible consequences of a Senate defeat: fueling the nuclear arms race, causing "grave concern" among NATO members and maybe even "some unraveling" in that alliance, and straining severely U.S.-Soviet relations.

He said rejection could hinder U.S. efforts to stem the flow of nuclear weapons to countries which do not have them.

Defense Secretary Brown said the treaty would enhance the nation's security and the United States would be able to verify its terms.

"There is no doubt in my mind that the world would be safer with the SALT agreement than without it," he said.

Terry County man jailed in shootings of Lamesa pair

LAMESA — A 78-year-old man is dead and his 22-year-old son was in serious condition today after a shooting incident here about 11:25 p.m. Sunday, according to a spokesman for the Lamesa Police Department.

A 44-year-old Terry County man was in Lamesa City Jail today in connection with the incident, said Capt. Gary Brown. Bond was set early today at $100,000, he added.

Dead is Vincent Vasquez Sr. According to officials, he died from a gunshot wound to the chest.

Admitted to Lubbock Methodist Hospital Sunday was Vincent Vasquez

Jr., being treated for gunshot wounds to his left wrist, right hand and groin area, according to Brown.

The officer said he was told a man walked into the Vasquez residence on the east side of town and questioned the residents about another shooting incident which took place a month ago.

The man then pulled out a .22-caliber pistol and began firing, according to the police spokesman.

A Terry County man was arrested about 1:15 a.m. today 11 miles south of Brownfield by Terry County and Lamesa officers, said Brown.

Odessa police hold suspect in death of hitchhiker, 22

ODESSA — A 22-year-old hitchhiker was dead on arrival at Medical Center Hospital at 8:30 p.m. Sunday after a fight with a motorist, police officials said.

The name of the victim was being withheld by police today pending notification of next of kin.

The man apparently was sprayed in the face with a type of ether alcohol used for starting diesel engines, Peace Justice Jimmy Harris said.

Harris later this morning announced that autopsy results had shown the man died of asphyxiation

"caused by gastric contents, probably caused by the ether."

A suspect in the death was in custody early today, police said.

The incident took place near the intersection of West County Road and 42nd Street, officials said.

According to Harris, a witness told authorities the victim fell to the ground after he was sprayed with the ether.

He was kicked after he fell to the ground, the witness told police.

Police today declined to comment on how many people were involved in the altercation.

'Even in Midland,' financing a home getting difficult

EDITOR'S NOTE: Obtaining housing in Midland, whether it be buying a home or renting an apartment, is becoming an increasingly complex problem and one that will not be easily solved. This is the second in a seven part series examining the issue.

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

"You will never see an 8 percent loan again, just as you will never see a $10 pair of shoes or a $20 dress again."

A Midland loan officer

People are making more money today than they ever have in their lives, or even in the history of the United States. But, these same people are finding it harder and harder to make ends meet.

Even in Midland, which ranks among the top metropolitan areas in the state in the amount of money in bank deposits, people are discovering that saving for a down payment on a house is becoming more difficult.

And when a person finally makes it to that magic number for a down payment and he qualifies for a loan, there is no guarantee a money institution can fulfill his needs.

Inflation is working like a two-edged sword for potential homeowners and the bank or savings institution.

In Texas, especially, where the interest rate cannot rise above 10 percent, savings and loan associations are finding themselves on the short end of the money line.

INTEREST RATES in Midland are hovering around 9.85 percent, barely under the limit. But loan institutions are complaining that because they cannot charge a higher interest rate, they are losing money on the loans.

Mike Nance, vice president in charge of loans at Citizens Savings & Loan Association, said loan associations in Texas are having problems selling loans and making enough of a profit to lend out more money.

He explained that banks compile about a $500,000 package of loans they have made to people in the community. This package is sold for a 90 percent participation to a second buyer, and the association retains 10 percent of it.

"We sell about $450,000 to a mortgage corporation, and this money then can be lent out for more loans," Nance said.

The problem recently has been that local savings and loan institutions have been paying the mortgage corporation 10.4 percent interest when they obtain money to loan to people. But, the bank itself can only charge 9.875 percent interest, "meaning the bank winds up with a loss," Nance said.

To put it in simple terms, the savings and loan people buy their funds for home loans. If there is not enough of a spread between what they pay for the money and what they get back on it as a loan, they can't afford to loan the money.

TO EASE THE situation, the S&L people are charging discount points to the seller. "This raises the yield on our loan so we can afford to sell it,"

Nance said. Each discount point is one-half of 1 percent of the total selling price of the house. The extra money makes up for what the loan institution is losing on the money.

Nance explained that about a year ago, the interest rate was 9¼ to 9½ percent, and the secondary market rate was about the same. "We could sell loans and make money off them," he said.

The limit on interest rate is cutting out more secondary buyers, according to Joan Ramey, president of the Midland Board of Realtors.

"In Texas, 65 percent of our mortgage money is imported, or comes from out-of-state investors. With the 10 percent ceiling in Texas, investors have been putting their money in other states where the interest rate is higher," she said.

"This means a cutback on available funds to loan out."

THIS LEADS to another price squeeze in which the savings and loan people are borrowing money from their customers who take out eight-year certificates of deposit (CDs) and then lending it for a 30-year period, Nance said.

In the last six months there has been an increase of money in the money institutions, and this came with the $10,000 six-month CDs which yield slightly more than 9 percent interest, he said.

The current shortage of home loans seems to run in cycles, according to Nance. There was a period in 1973-74 and another in 1968-69. "The government needs money to cover its debts, and it holds back on home loan money. Then when the debt is covered, they come out with government subsidized house loans," the banker explained.

Mrs. Ramey said there have been more Federal Housing Administration and Veterans Administration housing loans made recently in Midland.

A USURY BILL before the state Legislature in Austin would increase the interest rate on loans to 12 percent, but it has been the subject of controversy. There has been an amendment attached to it, Mrs. Ramey said, which would alleviate the fear that future homeowners would get caught with a 12 percent loan if the rates went down. The person could renegotiate his loan with the bank, she said.

And even if the interest rates go up, economists believe a house is one of the best investments.

Michael Sumichrast, chief economist of the National Association of Home Builders, and Lew Sichelman, real estate editor for The Washington Star, wrote recently that, considering the consumer price index goes up 12 percent this year, a 10 percent loan would be beating that rate by 2 percent.

"And because inflation is bound to continue, you'll be paying off that loan with cheaper and cheaper dollars," they wrote.

THE FIRST FEW years will be harder to make the payments, they agree. "But they (house payments) won't look nearly so large when your income increases a few thousand dollars more and the share of your income you pay toward the house declines."

In Midland, Nance said the biggest

Dole announces his candidacy

RUSSELL, Kan. (AP) — Sen. Bob Dole, shedding his gut-fighting image of the 1976 campaign, today announced his candidacy for the 1980 GOP presidential nomination and declared "I will neither attack my opponents in the Republican Party nor the incumbent president."

Dole made the announcement at a city hall news conference in Russell, his hometown.

The Kansas senator, whose hard-hitting style drew criticism as the GOP vice presidential candidate in 1976, said in this campaign, "I will be speaking with our friends in the Democratic Party as well as Republicans and independents, believing that neither party has a corner on wisdom."

"We seek not a Democratic approach or a Republican approach to the nation's future, but we seek the correct approach and it will combine the best thinking and best efforts of all."

Dole also said he "will offer no slogans...I intend to promise only the possible, so that when I am successful in my aims I shall not disappoint you."

He called for a reduction of the role of government but added that "I do not intend to campaign against those who serve in government... Those who serve in government reflect the nation: human, with human strengths and human failings."

Dole said the belief that the federal government has "magical powers" to solve society's problems "ignores the fact that there is no power on earth greater than that of the individual in a free society."

This western Kansas community of 6,000 declared today "Bob Dole Day." Most businesses delayed opening an hour for Dole's announcement and schools were closed for the morning.

"It's history," said Mayor Roger Williams. Dole's 76-year-old mother Bina said, before the announcement, she had "mixed feelings" about the campaign ahead.

"I just feel that there's no thanks for what he's going to do," she said.

His declaration isn't likely to surprise many people, least of all his rivals for the nomination.

Dole kept right on campaigning after the votes were counted in November 1976, and it was clear that the Ford-Dole ticket had lost the presidential election to the Democratic slate of Jimmy Carter and Walter Mondale.

Dole has been to all sections of the country, addressing groups large and small. In 1978, he campaigned for any Republican who hinted he'd like Dole's help.

Despite all the travel, Dole still doesn't rank among the front-runners for nomination in any of the polls.

As the vice presidential candidate in 1976, he earned a reputation as a gut-fighting campaigner.

As he explains it now, that was his role in the campaign and he doesn't regret it.

"In this campaign, we'll be setting the tone," he said in a pre-announcement interview. "I'll be the candidate."

Dole describes himself as a political conservative, but he quickly adds that he has been a strong supporter of civil rights legislation and the food stamp program, as well as aid to the handicapped.

He says the Republican Party must change its image "that we're sort of an anti-people party and don't care about the poor, the handicapped or whatever."

Like most aspirants for the Republican nomination, Dole concedes that Ronald Reagan is the front-runner.

"I think we all must think there's going to be some erosion in the Reagan camp or we wouldn't be doing this," he says when asked if he thinks the former California governor is losing ground.

Reagan hasn't announced his candidacy yet, but a committee is hard at work on his behalf.

Senate Republican leader Howard H. Baker Jr. of Tennessee is running hard and telling anyone who asks that he wants to be president.

Those who have taken the step of calling a news conference to declare that they are candidates are Rep. Philip Crane of Illinois; Benjamin Fernandez, a Los Angeles businessman; Harold Stassen, who has been after the presidency since the 1940s; former Texas Gov. John B. Connally; Sen. Lowell Weicker Jr. of Connecticut, and George Bush, a former CIA director.

Rep. John Anderson of Illinois, chairman of the House Republican Conference, is expected to announce his candidacy June 8.

Crane said over the weekend that he was shifting more of the responsibility for running his campaign to the field.

His remarks followed 10 days of political turmoil that included mass resignations among his staff and persistent speculation he intends to drop out of the race for the nomination.

Crane acknowledged that he called FBI agents to his headquarters after resigning staff members received $21,500 in expenses and the master list of campaign contributors was reported missing. The expenses later were found to be in order and the list proved not to be missing.

Vandals do $1,000 damage, pastor reports

Vandals broke into Fannin Terrace Baptist Church at 2800 Mogford St. late Friday night or early Saturday and did approximately $1,000 in damage, the church's pastor, the Rev. Ben Walker, told Midland police Saturday.

The "heavy vandalism" included the kicking in of a door and the breaking of a dead bolt, the breaking of a mirror, the kicking in of an amplifier and the breaking of brass musical bells.

Midland police officer Tommy Jones, who investigated the case, said entry was gained through a westside window.

In another incident, Gordon E. Bowley of 4245 Siesta Lane, said a 12-piece china setting and antique dishes valued at $1,100 were stolen from an unlocked wooden utility room in the rear of his residence either late Friday night or early Saturday.

Federal forgery trial to begin today for former Estes secretary

DALLAS (AP) — Sue Goolsby, formerly Billie Sol Estes' secretary, goes to trial today on federal charges she helped the paroled swindler forge documents used later as collateral for loans.

Miss Goolsby is the first of four persons including Estes who were indicted last February and accused of various roles in an alleged plot to raise funds using non-existent oilfield cleaning equipment as collateral.

Miss Goolsby and Estes are both accused of forging the signature of Tyler businessman Billy D. Pyron on several documents used to secure two personal loans totaling $50,000.

The loans were made by Abilene used car dealer J.H. Burkett, who said he had met Estes in church. Burkett has filed civil lawsuits to try to get his money back.

Estes' trial is scheduled to begin June 11.

Britain's Thatcher

Britain's general election was nothing if not a referendum on Margaret Thatcher's bold claim that her country's descent into socialism can and should be not merely slowed, or even halted, but reversed.

That this utterly sensible view could cast Britain's new prime minister as something of a radical speaks volumes about how far Britons have drifted down the socialist road.

In the election, Mrs. Thatcher's Conservative party won a comfortable majority in the House of Commons and so she should rule for the full five-year life of the new Parliament. And surely Mrs. Thatcher's margin of victory over the opposition Labor party will do nothing to dilute her determination to cut taxes, restore a greater measure of freedom to the economy, rein a meddlesome bureaucracy, halt the deterioration in Britain's military strength, and, most radical of all, whittle down the power of the unruly trade unions.

A lesser leader would shrink from the enormity of the task. Mrs. Thatcher is not one to shrink. After hearing of her views on the need to measure up to the challenge of Soviet militarism, the Russians dubbed her "the Iron Lady." It's a "title" in which she takes perverse, and justifiable, pride.

The fact is that Margaret Thatcher possesses the purest conservative principles of any Tory leader in at least 20 years. By all appearances, she will need both the principles and the toughness required to stand by them in the difficult years ahead.

Certainly, Mrs. Thatcher's diagnosis of Britain's decline is correct. Too much government, too much taxation, and the arrogant power of the irresponsible trade unions have combined to sap the vitality of Britain's economy. The predictable result is that Britain, a country which must export, has seen its industries grow less and less competitive with her rivals in Western Europe, Japan and the United States.

Economic growth has been reduced to less than 1 percent a year and the sluggish rate of capital formation promises continued stagnation.

Mrs. Thatcher's straightforward prescription for reviving Britain is as correct in theory as her grasp of the country's underlying ills.

Yet the great question mark even now hanging over the new prime minister and her government is whether fundamental reforms can be implemented without plunging Britain into new bouts of social, labor, and economic turmoil.

Notwithstanding Mrs. Thatcher's margin in Commons, the trade unions must be seduced, not coerced, into accepting new policies which ultimately will benefit all Britons.

As every recent British prime minister can attest, this is no easy chore.

But Mrs. Thatcher most certainly intends to give it a real try.

She has stated frankly that she will strengthen the economy and reduce personal income taxes. And perhaps most encouraging of all, she is pledged to breathe new life into the free enterprise system.

"Overtaxation," she reportedly said in her campaign speeches, "is transparently foolish."

She has said also that most Britons are willing to work for their families and neighbors, but not for the chancellor of the exchequer.

"In a free country, people will work hard if it pays them, to do so," she said.

The hope now is that Mrs. Thatcher's shrewdly practical instincts will temper her policies just enough to move Britain in the right direction without triggering a destructive all-out war with the unions.

If Margaret Thatcher can accomplish this, and here's hoping that she can, she will stand an excellent chance of keeping her party in power long enough to propel Britain into a new and more promising era.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

N.S.A. spying on U.S. citizens

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — A secret congressional report bears directly on the current debate over the limits that should be set on operations of U.S. intelligence agencies in this country and overseas. The verdict: Uncle Sam is still intercepting private conversations.

The report, prepared by the House Subcommittee on Government Information and Individual Rights, deals with the key issue: Should government-paid spies be allowed to spy on American citizens and corporations, and if so, under what circumstances?

Titled "Interception of International Telecommunications by the National Security Agency," the secret report details some of the shadier workings of this little known intelligence agency.

"It has become apparent that the activities of the NSA have had, and continue to have, an adverse impact upon the rights and privacy of American citizens," the report declares. "Enough has appeared on the public record, and been conveyed to this committee, to indicate NSA's enormous potential to silently violate the rights of Americans on an intense scale."

In the wake of Watergate-era disclosures about illegal wiretaps, burglaries and spying on politically suspect Americans, the NSA announced that it no longer "targets" U.S. citizens by name for any purpose. But the House subcommittee spotted a loophole in this assurance.

— An American businessman selling commercial building products to an Arab sheikdom reported that, soon after his first international communication regarding such a sale, he and his wife were visited by federal intelligence agents who knew details of the proposed transaction.

— A Washington, D.C., lawyer whose client was involved in international trade reported that in litigation with the Justice Department, the government presented evidence it could have obtained only by intercepting his client's international communications.

— A senior official of a large multinational corporation told the committee he knew that NSA was intercepting the firm's communications. Though the company sent its international messages in code, government regulations forbid the code to be so sophisticated that the NSA can't decipher it.

Although the NSA no longer sends its messengers to the offices of international telegraph carriers every morning for copies of its wireless messages, it still intercepts international communications "just as effectively and just as indiscriminately," the report states.

"In fact, the international communications of Americans are presumably being intercepted today in a significantly greater volume than was ever available (before). Moreover, the ability of NSA to sort such great volumes of material has undoubtedly improved with advances in computer technology."

The report concludes on this somber note: "Apart from a fundamental concern for the privacy of one's communications, these practices, unavoidably bring other possibilities to mind."

"Could the government be using information gleaned from such communications to influence or disrupt international business transactions? Could it provide NSA or executive branch employees with 'insider' information which might give them a competitive advantage in some economic venture? Could such information be used to blackmail or threaten some individual or business? Could this information be turned over to a federal agency... in pursuit of its administrative responsibilities? Would information relating to a potential civil disturbance or forthcoming political rally be turned over...?"

CHARLEY REESE Is Carter too timid to discipline his son Jeff?

By CHARLEY REESE
Sun Belt Syndicate

Charley Reese

ORLANDO, Fla. — The Secret Service, according to the Washington Post, wants to install special equipment in an Arlington, Va., home so agents can protect Mr. and Mrs. Jeff Carter when they visit the home while the agents remain outside in a van.

Why do the agents want to stay outside? Because, according to the Post's sources, some of the agents feel uncomfortable being in a house when marijuana is being smoked in violation of the laws.

I will not rant about this absurdity. I will merely point out that the President of the United States has two alternatives to the unnecessary expenditure of thousands of dollars.

One is simply to tell son Jeff not to visit a home that is filled with the smoke of funny cigarettes. Little Jeff is 26 years old but little Jeff and his wife do live in the White House. My own father used to invoke an argument with irrefutable logic which was that as long as I slept under his roof and ate his food, I would obey his rules.

I realize that President Carter is afraid of the Russians and afraid of the Chinese and afraid even of the Ayatollah Khomeini but it seems that he should not be afraid of Jeff. It seems he could tell Jeff to halt forthwith or pack his bags and find his own rental house.

Even that, however, is not the only solution available to the chief executive of the second most powerful nation in the world. The Arlington home is rented to an employee of the White House. Employees of the White House are employees of the president and if the president is too timid to discipline his son, he could at least ask one of his aides to discipline the employee.

The situation is so absurd it is almost beyond comment. You might expect this kind of behavior in a Middle Eastern dictatorship where everyone kowtows not only to the ruler but to the ruler's concubine's third cousin, but in the American Republic it is frankly un-American to treat the family of the president as a royal household.

We do not elect people in order for them to move half their family tree into the White House and on to the public payroll. It was never our tradition until relatively recently to provide a small army of courtiers for the whole presidential family.

Carter, of course, has abused this recent weakness more so than any other president. For the Carter family, the presidency has become a booming business running ahead of Watergate as a source of income for the participants.

All of this merely reminds us that P.T. Barnum was so right when he remarked that there was a sucker born every minute. And I'm sure that if the Carter family had a family crest, it would say in Latin, "You all never give a sucker an even break." They all haven't and this episode is only the latest outrageous example.

Those who are familiar with the novels of William Faulkner can best understand the Carters. They are, in Faulknerian terms, the Snopes Family — the new rich of the post Civil War South whose chief characteristics are excessive ambition, an abiding inferiority complex (well-grounded, I might add), greed, shrewdness, deceitfulness, tastelessness, lack of class, the total absence of morality, and above all, pure brass.

That enough people could fall for Carter's hypocritical front as a man of sincerity and Christian virtues only proves how naive people are. That the South voted solidly for Carter only proves that many Southerners still harbor a grudge against the Union and have belatedly sought revenge for the Confederacy's defeat. Personally, I think they went too far.

I am not at all sure the Union will survive the Carter presidency, though in true Snopes fashion, the Carters will survive the union, being possessed of a certain noxious buoyancy.

The Carters should make even the most devout fervently hope that there really is no such thing as divine justice. We couldn't stand what we deserve for elevating this man to the White House.

INSIDE REPORT:

Chilling questions from Cuba must be answered now

By ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

Evans Novak

WASHINGTON — The appearance of a second Soviet submarine in Cuban waters has been definitively established by U.S. intelligence within the last two weeks, raising the question of just what the Soviet Union intends to do with its growing military power 90 miles off the coast of Florida.

With agreement on the new strategic arms limitation treaty (SALT II) having just been announced, Carter administration strategists are maintaining sealed-lip silence to avoid any new U.S.-Soviet hassle. But at high levels of the Pentagon, this question is being asked: Is Moscow just "paying off" Fidel Castro for his expeditionary corps in Africa and elsewhere, or is Cuba being surreptitiously converted into a Soviet base for future operations in Latin America?

Submarine No. 1, a diesel-powered Foxtrot model, was delivered to Cienfuegos Feb. 7, along with two hydrofoil patrol boats. U.S. specialists believe the sub will be used to train Cuban submarine crews.

Submarine No. 2, tentatively identified as a W-3 ("Whiskey Two"), is also a diesel-powered boat with conventional torpedo tubes and no nuclear weapons. Although its precise purpose is a mystery, the proven existence of another lethal, snorkel-equipped sub in U.S.-controlled Caribbean waters may force the Pentagon into analytical studies that are dangerously overdue.

Surprisingly until now neither the Navy nor the Air Force has been asked to produce contingency planning for neutralizing Cuba in the event of any future war. The "consolidated guidance" which, under top secret cover, is sent to the services each year from the office of the secretary of defense has utterly ignored the future possibility that Cuba might pose a threat.

Some responsible and skeptical specialists think they know the reason for this: If Secretary of Defense Harold Brown ordered up contingency plans on how to deal with hostile Cuba in a global conflict, hard answers would be absolutely essential to questions now being ducked.

Among these questions: What conceivable purpose does Moscow have in supplying Castro with submarines, no matter if they are new or old, powered by nuclear or conventional engines and possessing nuclear or conventional armaments? What purpose do the Soviets have in supplying Cuba with a squadron — or possibly more — of MIG-23 late-model attack aircraft, whether or not armed with nuclear weapons? Does the Soviet Union plan to support Cuban forces, armed with those Soviet weapons, for future Africa-style exercises in Latin America?

These are real questions, not to be ducked any longer. There is solid new evidence, for example, that Soviet fishing fleets will soon make their first appearance on the Balboa or Pacific Ocean side of the Panama Canal. Their presence will enhance Soviet intelligence-gathering just as the U.S. begins to phase out total control of the canal under the new U.S.-Panama treaties.

We reported last Nov. 15 about Brown's private warning to President Carter that MIG-23s being delivered to Cuba posed a problem of "high political sensitivity." Brown was reminding Carter of the Soviet pledge to President Kennedy during the 1962 Cuban missile crisis not to send offensive weapons to Cuba. Carter's response, never publicly explained, was that the MIG-23s were not offensive weapons and therefore violated no Soviet pledge.

Submarines now have been added to the list of weapons being supplied to Cuba, for a purpose never made clear to Congress or the American people. The administration appears to have decided the submarines are not "offensive" within the meaning of the 1962 Soviet promise.

Yet, even old submarines pose grave dangers to the security of U.S.-controlled sea lanes into and around the Caribbean, particularly if the Cubans do today what the U.S. was strong enough to forbid them from doing almost 10 years ago. In 1970, the U.S. successfully delivered what amounted to an ultimatum against Soviet-Cuban construction of submarine pens equipped to service nuclear Soviet submarines.

The preponderant nuclear margin the U.S. then held over the Soviet Union has vanished. A similar ultimatum today would be horse-laughed out of the Kremlin. Nothing at all is being said about Cuba's two submarines or about the strong probability that some kind of sub base is being built for them.

To Moscow, that might look like appeasement and an invitation to continue what one eminent U.S. naval authority privately told us was "the creeping escalation of Soviet power in the Caribbean using the Cuban proxy." The real Cuba story may be switching from the jungles and deserts of Africa and Yemen to the backyard of America. That would be a chilling change of climate.

Midlander details crash of light plane

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — A Midland woman, who along with her husband and two Levelland residents, survived a light plane crash here Sunday, said today, "It's just a miracle we're alive."

Patricia Johnson, 43, of 2817 Haynes Drive in Midland was speaking from Albuquerque's St. Joseph Hospital, where her husband, Eugene C. Johnson, 48, remains in serious condition in the intensive care unit. She said her husband is "holding his own."

According to Mrs. Johnson, the group of six had just filled the plane with fuel at Albuquerque International Airport Sunday afternoon and departed for Midland when one of the Piper Arrow Navaho's two engines "went out" and the plane began to lose power.

She said Jerry Roberts of Levelland, pilot of the plane, was attempting to return to the airport, but that the plane crashed in some sandhills in Northwest Albuquerque.

Killed in the crash were Roberts and Michael Wayne Boyd, 28, of Levelland. Boyd's wife, Nancy, 25; Roberts' wife, Zelda, 36, and Mrs. Johnson were treated at St. Joseph Hospital and released.

Boyd was pronounced dead at the scene, but Roberts was taken to Presbyterian Hospital in Albuquerque, where he died at 7:30 p.m. Sunday from injuries received in the crash.

According to Capt. John Sands of the Bernalillo County Sheriff's Office, the airplane was some eight miles from the airport when Roberts radioed in and said he was having engine problems. It crashed into the West Mesa area of Albuquerque about 5 p.m. (MDT).

Mrs. Johnson said Monday officials still had not determined what caused the engine problem experienced by the plane.

Impact of the crash tore loose both engines and scattered other parts of the aircraft over a large area, according to Sands.

He said the fuselage was found on a road some distance away.

Sadat hopes to solve East Jerusalem dispute

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — President Anwar Sadat said today he has a plan for solving the dispute over which nation should control Israeli-occupied, and predominantly Arab, East Jerusalem and predicted a settlement by year's end.

He did not say what the plan was, claiming it would be revealed at an Islamic conference he would convene in December.

Arab Jerusalem was captured from Jordanian control by the Israelis in the 1967 six-day war and later annexed. Egypt maintains it is part of the West Bank of the Jordan River and should be returned to Arab control in accordance with the Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty.

Fire destroys vacant house

An early morning fire today destroyed a vacant house in the 500 block of North Main Street, Midland Fire Department officials said.

Reports indicated the blaze, which occurred about 1:51 a.m., may have been set.

Fire officials said the house was a "total loss."

Silkwood verdict expected this week

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Lawyers for both sides in the $11.5 million Karen Silkwood trial make their last attempts today to convince jurors in the lengthy nuclear contamination suit.

For the last 10 weeks, evidence and testimony has been presented in U.S. District Court before Judge Frank G. Theis on the suit filed by her family. Closing arguments begin today and a verdict is expected this week.

Miss Silkwood's survivors are suing the Kerr-McGee Corp., claiming negligence in connection with her contamination with plutonium. The company alleges she contaminated herself, possibly while spiking her urine samples with plutonium she stole from its Crescent, Okla., nuclear fuel plant.

The suit filed by her survivors claims Kerr-McGee was negligent in allowing Miss Silkwood to become contaminated. One of the biggest disagreements between opposing attorneys in the case is its precedent-setting potential.

Kerr-McGee argues the trial deals with whether it is liable for Miss Silkwood's plutonium contamination and whether she was damaged by the exposure.

Silkwood estate lawyers attach a far broader significance to the case. They say it is the first attempt to hold a company accountable for radioactive contamination outside its facilities. Attorney Gerry Spence has said several times the trial may decide "the very survival of mankind."

"This may be the only chance these jurors have to say to the nuclear industry and government 'You better tell the truth. If you don't tell the truth, it's going to cost you...'"

When she died in a 1974 auto crash, Miss Silkwood was a lab technician at the Kerr-McGee's Crescent nuclear fuel plant. An Atomic Workers union official and Miss Silkwood's boyfriend examined the crash scene on a desolate stretch of highway near the Crescent plant, where she worked as a lab technician.

They had been waiting for Miss Silkwood, along with a New York Times reporter, in nearby Oklahoma City. The union official, Steve Wodka, said Miss Silkwood was bringing documentation of her claims that Kerr-McGee was falsifying quality control reports on critical welds.

DEAR ABBY

Joggers, no! Jigglers, yes!

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: KEEPING FIT IN SAN MATEO asked why so many motorists are abusive to joggers. (Someone yelled at him: "Hey, you jerk, get off the street — what are ya' trying to prove?")

You should have mentioned that most joggers jog down the center of the street, paying no attention to traffic signals and behaving in general as though they owned the street!

If a passing motorist honks his horn and signals for the jogger to move over to the side of the road, the jogger pays no attention whatsoever.

My sympathy is with the motorist — not the jogger! — KANSAS

DEAR KANSAS: My mail has been running 50 to 1 in favor of the motorist. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: Thanks for a chance to sound off about joggers. They are a terrible nuisance. Why must they use the streets to jog? What's wrong with jogging in parks? Or on a football field? Joggers not only endanger their own lives, but they cause motorists to swerve to avoid hitting their endangering others.

Joggers run down the middle of the road, darting in front of oncoming cars so they don't have to break their stride or slacken their pace. They are a hazard to all motorists. Why can't they run on sidewalks and obey the traffic rules like pedestrians? Better yet, why don't they do as I do and jog at home (in place) in my living room? I'm as health-conscious as the next guy, but I'm no exhibitionist. — STUDIO CITY HEALTH NUT to look at female joggers. They turn him on! He gets so excited when he sees a woman jogging he can hardly keep his car under control. He says there is something about the rhythm of the female body bobbing up and down that excites him. So far, he hasn't run off the road or hit another car or a pedestrian, but I'm afraid his luck will run out soon.

DEAR ABBY: My husband LOVES

He can hardly wait for summer —

when joggers wear less and show more.

Me? I wish they'd outlaw all jogging on city streets! — ANTI-JOGGERS

DEAR ABBY: I'd like to get in my two cents' worth about runners and joggers. If it's exercise they want, why don't they go to a gym or exercise at home? It's a lot healthier. Those half-naked show-offs run on heavily traveled streets under the pretense of "keeping fit," while they fill their lungs with exhaust from cars and buses. Not to mention the punishment they give their feet, ankles, knees and hips. I've had it with those exhibitionistic idiots! — KEEPING FIT IN PRIVATE

DEAR ABBY: I'll tell you why I hate joggers. Because they ignore traffic signals, run in front of cars and create a real traffic hazard for motorists. Many times I have had to slam on my brakes to avoid hitting a jogger. I've also had to quickly swerve, nearly hitting another car. Joggers do not belong on the streets with automobiles. And the same goes for bicycles. Motorcyclists at least operate at the same speed as automobiles. Bicycles and joggers do not. — MAD IN WESTMINSTER

Give car quick check for safer driving

NEW YORK (AP) — While the outside of your car may look fit enough for all the hazards of the road, that doesn't mean the inside is, warns Joseph W. James, who spent 20 years as an engineer with a major automobile manufacturer.

He suggests a five-minute internal check. First, sit in the driver's seat and make sure it's adjusted to your normal driving position, says James, now president of National Car Rental System. Take a look around for any cracks in the windshield or anything blocking your vision. Adjust your rear-view and side-view mirrors.

Next, check the seat belts. Do they fit properly? The seat-belt retractor should take up the slack in the belt. Look for possible frayed spots the belt might have developed from catching on a door or seat back — a weak spot on a seat belt could fail in an accident.

Turn the ignition switch on, but don't start the car. Grab the steering wheel with both hands and turn the wheel left and right gently. There should be very little free "lay" in the wheel.

Tuscaloosa city employees obey court order to return to work

By The Associated Press

Striking Tuscaloosa, Ala., city employees, responding to a court order, returned to work today rather than see their union fined and union leaders jailed.

turned to work in time to meet the 7 a.m. deadline. In other municipal disputes, city workers were to vote on a contract today in Worcester, Mass., and police in Cookeville, Tenn., continued a 6-day-old walkout.

Jones Calhoun would begin five-day jail terms today if the workers were not back on their jobs. And he said the local would be fined $500 a day until the walkout ended.

Tennessee Circuit Judge Jerome Baird issued the back-to-work order Friday, ruling that the 211 strikers had disobeyed an earlier order which banned picketing.

Tuscaloosa's strike began Tuesday when waterworks, streets and sanitation department employees walked off their jobs in an apparent dispute over Brown's job status with the city.

Lester Flatt returning 'home'

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Grand Ole Opry star Lester Flatt, whose nasal-voiced singing and peppy guitar style epitomized the pulsating spirit of bluegrass music for nearly 40 years, is returning home for the final time.

Following a second funeral service today, Flatt will be buried in Sparta, where he grew up about 80 miles east of Nashville. The singer died Friday at age 64.

On Sunday, about 250 mourners, mostly fellow entertainers, gathered at a funeral home chapel in Hendersonville, a Nashville suburb, for a memorial service.

Among those attending were the Roy Acuff, the King of Country Music; Ernest Tubbs, and Grandpa and Ramona Jones.

Midland High School senior Carrick Eggleston was named recipient of the bronze Bausch and Lomb Science Award for outstanding achievement in science.

Eggleston is the son of Mr. and Mrs. David Eggleston. The honor student is a member of the National Honor Society and the Junior Engineering Technical Society. (Staff Photo)

Unser, Bagley put Midland back in 500

Al Unser, driving last year's Indy 500 winner, has again put Midland's Jim Hall back in the national spotlight with a front row qualifying berth. The car shown above has been replaced by a revolutionary "ground effects" machine designed by Hall in Midland.

Rick Mears wins pole on last run of the day

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Al Unser and Tom Bagley have put Midland owners back in the Indianapolis 500 while Rick Mears proved last year was no fluke.

Unser, driving the new "ground effects" car designed and owned by Midland's Jim Hall, earned a front row berth on the starting grid Sunday in the first day of Indy qualifying while Bagley, driving the Penske PC-6 of Midland's Bobby Hillin, earned a fifth row spot with an average lap speed of 185.414 mph.

Last year when Unser brought Hall and Midland an Indy title, he started in the second row. Hillin failed to get an entry qualified for last year's event, but now is insured of a good starting spot for his second Indy run. Hillin had two cars in the 1977 Indy race. So, both Hall and Hillin will be making their second Indy starts in two weeks.

Mears, an easy-going 27-year-old desert racing specialist from Bakersfield, Calif., showed the veterans a faster way around Indianapolis Motor Speedway Sunday and won the pole position for the May 27 Indianapolis 500.

Mears started on the front row in his debut here a year ago, the first and only rookie to qualify at 200 mph. He ran in the top five most of the race before mechanical trouble sidelined him, and he was named co-rookie of the year.

"He didn't look like a rookie today," said 44-year-old A.J. Foyt, whose disappointing run put him only sixth on the grid in quest of an unprecedented fifth Indy victory. "He's one of those guys who will be the Foyts and Unsers of the 1980s."

Mears' qualifying speed of 193.736 mph — more than 6 mph slower than last year because of new power restrictions — ruined Tom Sneva's bid for an unprecedented third straight start on the prestigious Indy pole. And Mears did it with the final run of the first day.

Two days of qualifying were sandwiched into one because of a total rainout Saturday. "I thought that would be too good to be true — to be the last guy out and win the pole. I figured that only happens in the movies," Mears said.

Sneva had averaged 192.998 mph on a surprisingly strong run a few minutes earlier. Early qualifier Al Unser held the pole most of the day with his speed of 192.503 mph, which ultimately was good for third best.

After that trio, there was a decisive dropoff in speed to Bobby Unser's 189.913, Gordon Johncock's 189.753 mph and Foyt's 189.613. Six of the top eight qualifiers were members of the dissident Championship Auto Racing Teams group whose entries were rejected by the sanctioning U.S. Auto Club, then reinstated by a court decision 10 days ago. CART drivers took 13 of the top 18 spots.

Hillin and Hall are both members of CART. Hall is on the board of directors.

"I think that's significant," Mears said. "It shows the differences in the level of competition between CART and USAC."

Mears felt it was also significant that the CART entries did so well using USAC rules. CART racing permits higher power settings.

"We beat them on their own terms," he said. USAC tightened the rules on power settings for qualifying early Saturday, hoping to cut down on anticipated cheating. A number of teams were quite upset by the 11th-hour changes. "It really didn't hurt us any because we told everyone all along we were running legal. They just didn't believe us. I think they realize now they should have listened to us," Mears said.

Mears said he elected to use his 1978 model Penske chassis in this race, rather than the 1979 model his teammate Bobby Unser chose.

"I felt more comfortable in the old car, although the new Penske is just as good, if not better," Mears said.

Unser said the 1979 Penske "is the car of the future. It's a good design. I used it because the crew and I have been working on it since December. I think it will be a good car for 500 miles."

Although he was more comfortable in the older model, Mears said his pole run was not a comfortable one.

"On the first lap, going into the third turn, I thought I was going into the wall. I put a little more distance between me and concrete on the next three laps, but on the whole run I ran closer to the fence than I ever have here before," he said.

Missing from the weekend's qualifiers was speedster Danny Ongais, one of the prequalifying favorites. Ongais escaped serious injury in a pulverizing practice crash late Saturday.

Ongais was due to be released today from an Indianapolis hospital, where he had been held for observation. Doctors said Ongais suffered a concussion, whiplash and bruises, but no broken bones.

He is expected back in competition in time to qualify next weekend for the $1 million race.

Bullets rain on San Antonio Spurs

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — Kevin Grevey and Tommy Henderson say they believe the defending champion Washington Bullets will apply the pressure needed against San Antonio to force the National Basketball Association Eastern Conference finals to seven games.

"I think we're going to play them awfully even," said Grevey, who scored 23 points as the Bullets defeated San Antonio 107-103 Sunday to send the best-of-seven series to Game 6 with the Spurs up 3-2. "We're not going to blow them out. They have too much offense to do that. But there will be a lot of pressure on them."

Henderson, the Bullets' other starting guard, who scored 16 and had nine assists, said, "There will be a lot of pressure on them. We want to bring it back here. We're about ready for a win down there."

Game 6 will be played Wednesday night in San Antonio. If Game 7 is necessary, it will be played here at the Capital Centre Friday night.

Only two teams in the history of the NBA playoffs have come back from a 3-1 deficit to win three straight and a series — the Boston Celtics in 1968 and the Los Angeles Lakers in 1970.

The NBA championship series will begin Sunday between the winners in the East and the Phoenix-Seattle series in the West.

Although Elvin Hayes scored 24 points and 22 rebounds to lead the Bullets statistically, Washington Coach Dick Motta said it was the play of the guards, Grevey and Henderson, that keyed the victory. He said the guards were able to drive the middle while containing the Spurs' guards, George Gervin and James Silas.

"Probably the most discouraging aspect of the series is that they (the Bullets) can get that layup anytime they want," said Motta. "If they (the Spurs) continue to double, we can get the slice."

He meant that if the Spurs continue to cover Hayes and Bob Dandridge with two men, as they have during the series, the Bullets guards should be able to break up the middle for layups.

San Antonio Coach Doug Moe said he was satisfied with the way his team played.

"We shot poorly but we played tough," he said. "You can't expect to beat this team every time. The key for us was that the effort was there. Now we just go home and try to convert that effort into victory."

Moe also conceded, however, "We weren't active defensively and they were able to get layups on us. We had guys standing around and that hurt us."

It also hurt the Spurs that Gervin, the NBA's top scorer for the past two years who sank 42 points Friday night, got only 28 points, going nearly 28 minutes at one point without a field goal. He got 17 of his points in the fourth period.

"They weren't falling but I wasn't about to stop shooting... that's my game," said Gervin. "This ballgame is behind us. We just have to be ready to play Wednesday."

Watson takes Nelson title

DALLAS (AP) — Tom Watson pocketed the $54,000 check that went with his third tour victory of 1979 and squirmed uncomfortably when asked if runnerup Bill Rogers was right in calling him the greatest player in the game.

"When I'm striking the ball well, I feel I can win any tournament I play," said 29-year-old Watson, who shot even par Sunday to turn back the challenge of Rogers, Larry Nelson and Jerry Pate to win the Byron Nelson Golf Classic at 275, five under par.

Rogers, a 27-year-old former University of Houston All-America golfer, hit the pin with "the best 3-iron I ever hit" on the 18th hole and tapped in a birdie putt to tie Watson and send the tournament into sudden death.

Then Rogers chipped his third shot against the pin on No. 15, on the first hole of the playoff. Watson had an uphill lie in a bunker, 90 feet from the pin on the 568-yard, par-5 hole, but he'd birdied the hole from almost the same position in regulation play a while earlier.

After Rogers' shot, Watson shook his head, grinned at his rival, then grabbed a sand wedge and stepped into the trap.

"It was either do or die. You either had to do it or you don't. There were no in-between thoughts," Watson confessed later. He blasted straight at the hole and watched as his ball died only 10 inches from the pin. He knocked in his putt, Rogers missed his four-foot birdie try, and the victory was Watson's. To Rogers went the $32,400 check for second place.

Nelson, despite two late birdies, finished third at 276, four under par and 1 shot off the pace. Pate, who was tied for the lead until he bogeyed No. 14, bogeyed the last hole and finished 2-over-par for the day and 278 for the tourney, all alone in fourth place.

Jerry McGee, Mike Brannan, Calvin Peete and Morris Hatafsky were at 279.

A few years ago, said Watson, "I had the reputation as a choker," but he two-putted from 70 feet on the 18th hole to preserve his playoff spot, after Rogers' late birdie. Then Watson came through when it counted from the bunker in sudden death.

Sandra Post captures LPGA title with 69

ATLANTA (AP) — Canadian Sandra Post slushed over a rain-soaked course with a 4-under par 69 for a 210 total and a 2-shot victory over Pat Bradley in a $100,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association tournament.

Bradley, who shot a final round of 70, was followed by a trio of Pam Higgins, Clifford Ann Creed and Dot Germain, who tied for third place at 215. Creed and Germain both had a closing 73, while Higgins finished with a 75.

Jack Sikma puts Seattle past Phoenix, 106-105

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — When Jack Sikma plays well, the Seattle SuperSonics fare well. It's as simple as that, says teammate Fred Brown.

Sikma was in the midst of his worst shooting slump of the season and the SuperSonics had dropped three straight games to the Phoenix Suns and faced a do-or-die situation in Sunday's Game 6.

The 6-foot-11 center, who had hit only 25 percent of his shots in the four previous playoff games against the Suns, broke loose for 21 points Sunday, hitting seven of 11 attempts from the field and going seven for eight at the free throw line.

At the same time, Seattle came up with 54 percent shooting from the field, walloping the Suns on the boards, 43-27, and picking up a 106-105 victory before a stunned sellout crowd of 12,660 at Veterans Memorial Coliseum.

The victory noted the best-of-seven, National Basketball Association Western Conference championship series at 3-3 and sends the two teams back to Seattle's Kingdome for the finale Thursday night. The victor will meet the winner of the San Antonio-Washington Eastern Conference title series for the NBA crown.

"We were going right at them," said Brown, who had 15 points. "We wanted to take the game right to them, and that's what we did. "Whenever we get a big game out of EL PASO — The El Paso Diablos put a crimp in the Midland Cubs' runaway machine in the Texas League West here Sunday with a doubleheader win over the Cubs.

Unbelievable Rangers defeat Montreal, 4-1

MONTREAL (AP) — The New York Rangers had watched the Montreal Canadiens rally from a 3-1 deficit to beat the Boston Bruins in overtime and enter the finals of the National Hockey League's playoffs last week. It taught the Rangers a lesson that served them well.

In the opener of the best-of-seven final Sunday, the upstart Rangers barged out to a 3-1 lead against the defending Stanley Cup champions. And then, recalled New York right wing Pierre Plante, "We said, 'It won't happen here.'"

There was no comeback for Montreal this time; the Rangers wouldn't permit one. Playing the same way they did in their first three playoff rounds, working just as hard, checking just as well and showing the poise that has been their strength in the playoffs, the Rangers turned back the challenge and finished with a 4-1 triumph.

"That's what you want to do," said Plante, "put them down, leave them there and — if you have a chance — kick them."

The last goal was the kicker, since New York defenseman Dave Maloney scored at 12:32 of the second period while teammate Mike McEwen was in the penalty box. The Rangers' sixth shorthanded goal of the playoffs, a postseason record, cemented New York's fourth consecutive pictory at the historic Montreal Forum and ended at 10 games the home playoff winning streak of the three-time defending champions.

The Rangers turned three bad Canadiens passes into goals by Steve Vickers, Phil Esposito and Ron Greschner. They knocked Montreal goalie Ken Dryden out of the contest.

Sadat says sale of fighters to Saudi Arabia is 'shaky'

By The Associated Press

Egyptian President Anwar Sadat says he no longer expects Saudi Arabia to buy 50 F-5E jet fighters for his air force.

"It seems from what is going on these days that the Saudis are trying to withdraw from their commitment," Sadat told a university group Sunday on a tour of construction projects 50 miles north of Cairo.

"The contract is shaky."

The Saudis have broken diplomatic ties with Egypt over the peace treaty with Israel, and Sadat said last month he would not be surprised if the Saudis canceled plans to pay $525 million for the F-5Es which Congress agreed to sell Egypt last spring.

The New York Times reported Sunday that Sadat said he would appeal to the American people for donations to pay for the F-5Es if the Saudis reneged.

Sadat also said he will use $1.5 billion in U.S. military assistance credits to buy Phantoms and that the jet fighters will be flying over Egypt by October.

The United States has promised Israel $3 billion in loans and grants over the next three years, but the cost of Israeli withdrawal from Sinai is $4 billion and the Israeli government must finance the rest from an already strained economy.

Israeli Finance Minister Simha Ehrlich introduced a five-year economic plan Sunday to help pay for the Sinai withdrawal and also stem inflation. He said the plan involves reshuffling funds from other departments to the Defense Ministry and drawing $200 million from foreign currency reserves.

Money matters dominate as Legislature nears close

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Three-pronged negotiations on money for schools, state agencies and — possibly — taxpayers are warming up as the legislative session enters its final two weeks.

Conference committees on the state budget, school finance and tax relief must make joint decisions because all three bills dip into the same pot of state money.

House members and senators have passed their own versions of the bills, and three 10-member conference committees will try to compromise the differences.

The 140-day regular legislative session must end, constitutionally, at midnight on Monday, May 28.

Conferees on the general appropriation bill held a preliminary session Friday toward resolving differences between the $20.67 billion House bill and the $20.79 billion Senate bill.

Passage of a bill financing state operations the next two years is considered the primary duty of the Legislature.

Gov. Bill Clements has threatened to use his line veto power to assure a budget leaving a surplus that could be returned to the taxpayers through the school aid system for property tax relief.

But Clements has done less saber-rattling in recent weeks, and both houses have passed budget and school finance bills that spend nearly every cent of anticipated state revenue.

Clements said Friday he was optimistic that the conference committees would trim spending enough to provide about $500 million for tax cuts.

The budget must be approved in time for state agencies and departments to begin operations of the new fiscal period on Sept. 1.

Who would receive tour groups at 1:45 a.m.? Other insomniacs!

By NANCY KERCHEVAL

BALTIMORE (AP) — Audree Verguin was standing in the misting rain alongside the grave of Edgar Allan Poe. It was 4:30 a.m. and she was celebrating Mother's Day — one of 120 persons taking a six-hour Insomniac Tour of Baltimore, an all-night sojourn for tourists who can't sleep.

"This is my Mother's Day present," said Mrs. Verguin who with her husband, Elwood, of Toms River, N.J., were among the tourists who paid $25 each to tour the city in the predawn hours.

The Insomniac Tour, created by Ruth Fader and Roxy Lipsitz, was started in November 1977. The two women operate Baltimore Rent A Tour, a business that offers daylight tours, too.

Three buses left the Maryland Science Center in downtown Baltimore promptly at 1:30 a.m. Saturday. "Hi, I'm Ruth and I'm going to spend the night with you," said Mrs. Fader, the tour guide on the first bus.

The first stop was Barre Street where the tourists tromped through three renovated rowhouses. Why anybody would open their homes to a group of strangers at 1:45 a.m. was anybody's guess. But Quinn Peitz, one of the homeowners, explained, "The honest answer is — I get to go on the Insomniac Tour."

"You see all the cars on the street?" Mrs. Fader asked. "There really are an awful lot of night people in Baltimore."

The sounds of an organ filled the Mount Vernon Methodist Church, the next stop on the trip. The Rev. Kenneth Jones had found someone willing to come out at 3:30 a.m. and play for the insomniacs as they sat in the church fry of the Iselves and listening to his "sermon" — a history of the 107-year-old church.

"We made plans to come to this before we planned to get married," said Paul Newbury of Pittsburgh, honeymooning with his wife, Nancy. "We're on our way to the Virgin Islands."

Mrs. Newbury called the trip "a real memory."

Across the street from the church, Mrs. Fader pointed to a pink sandstone building with Tiffany windows that happened to be "the longest rowhouse in Baltimore." At the turn of the century, Mrs. William Garrett Jacobs spent $6 million to renovate the house, now the home of the city's Engineering Society.

Later, clustered around Poe's grave, everything seemed to darken as the rain fell and one of the tourists read a few lines from Poe's "Annabel Lee" and another placed some tulips at the base of the grave marker.

The bracing aroma of the city's wholesale fish market perked up several tourists starting to nod. "Sure smells like a fish market," said Noel Bauto, 39, of Baltimore, looking at the dead fish being scaled at the world's third-largest seafood market.

The tour ended at the Pimlico Race Course, home of next Saturday's Preakness, with breakfast and an early morning look at the horses working out on the track. The sun was just beginning to come up as Preakness entry, General Assembly, treated everyone to his slow gait around the track in the wrong direction.

The story of dedicated parents who helped their then-infant son out of the isolated world of autism are portrayed by James Farentino, young Michael Adams and Kathryn Harrold in "Son-Rise: A Miracle of Love," the NBC Theater special to be presented Monday, May 14.

The NBC film is based on the real life experience of Barry and Suzy Kaufman and their son, Raun. For approximately 9,700 hours over a three-year period, they worked in a parental therapy project. Despite gloomy medical prognoses, the Kaufmans succeeded in bringing Raun to reality.

Kaufman disturbed by society's reaction to tonight's TV special

By TOM JORY

NEW YORK (AP) — Barry and Suzy Kaufman wanted their young son, Raun, to have an alternative to conventional therapy for autistic children. They spent three years, Kaufman says, "in Raun's world," gradually pulling the child into their own.

Now, as the Kaufmans' story is about to be broadcast for the first time, the couple has become embroiled in a dispute with the National Society for Autistic Children.

"We're extremely concerned," says Kaufman, "because they've attacked the program and us personally."

"We did something very special, something nobody else had tried to do. We tried to parallel his world in such a way as to create bridges with him, so he would understand us."

"Attack" is, perhaps, too strong a word, though the society most certainly has suggested to local chapters that letters of protest be directed to the Kaufmans.

Autism is defined as "a severely incapacitating life-long developmental disability." The society says there are 108,000 people in America with autism.

In Raun Kaufmans' case, he seemed locked in his own world, unresponsive to verbal or other stimulation. He was diagnosed as an infant as autistic, but the Kaufmans were told treatment could not begin until he was at least 3 years old.

The Roslyn Heights, N.Y., couple truly attempted to enter the child's world. They mimicked his characteristic rocking, arm-flapping movement, spending 9,700 hours with the child over three years.

The effort was a success; the child — now 6 — is normal in appearance and action, far above average in intelligence, and attending school with youngsters his own age.

The controversy — stirred initially by Kaufman's book, "Son Rise," published three years ago, and intensified many times over by the film to be broadcast by NBC at 8 p.m. today — is hardly clearcut.

Indeed, the society, representing about 6,500 parents and professionals, describes "Son Rise: A Miracle of Love," as a "beautifully done movie" that "will give the American public a view of autism that it has never had before."

Yet it suggests a grave reservation: "It will cause many parents of children with autism deep and unnecessary feelings of guilt."

Says Robert J. Griggs, the society's executive director, "The movie is telling some parents their kid didn't get well like Raun because they didn't love him enough."

Kaufman, to that point, suggests at the outset of the film, "It concerns an alternative created and chosen by our family, which in no way is meant to be a commentary on others who may have found themselves in similar circumstances." He calls "Son Rise" an "expression of hope and possibility."

Griggs, asked about the suggestion that parents critical of the film write the Kaufmans directly, said: "Some people may take exception to implications of the book and movie, some may take exception to the portrayal of behavior modification."

In fact, the Kaufmans' approach was in a sense in reaction to "behavior modification," as one conventional method of therapy is called. The society says the view of behavior modification in "Son Rise" is "grossly unfair."

"Most treatment programs are based on disapproval of the child's behavior," says Kaufman, "and we felt the underlying point of view was that all professionals we talked with felt that being autistic was a tragedy."

"We tried to say to Raun, 'Hey, it's OK where you are. We love you the way you are, and want to be with you.'"

The society, in sum, declares: "A child with autism and his parents are fairly portrayed in this movie until this business of love and acceptance overcoming a neurological disorder takes over."

"It's a story of loving and accepting someone," says Kaufman, clearly disturbed by the controversy. "The society is supposed to be neutral, but they support programs for behavior modification and won't accept the way we did it."
