Texas prison system bursting at the seams; many prisoners paroled ne day last week, a juror leaving the courthouse after serving in a rob-bery trial asked a prosecutor, "Why couldn't you tell us how much of a sentence he would actually have to serve?"

"That's a good question," the attorney replied. But he explained that one reason juries are not allowed to speculate or be told parole regulations is that several factors enter into how much "pen time" the felon serves after he goes to the penitentiary.

The facts are that every inmate in the Texas Department of Corrections system is eligible for release after earning credit for a third of his sentence, and the State Board of Pardons and Paroles is releasing everyone it can because the prison system is bursting at the seams with 25,000 inmates.

If a prison is a "Class 1" or well-behaved inmate who is not in jail for an assaultive crime, he is given credit for 50 days for every 30 days that he serves, which means that most of those who go to Huntsville with a five-year sentence

Prisoners who misbehave may be reduced to "Class 2," which means they are credited for 40 days for every 30, or or "Class 3," which means they serve straight time or 30 for 30.

All inmates were under the credit system until a new state law last year pu hose in on crimes in which a deadly weapon was used on str An armed robber with a 15-year sentence, then, would years to become eligible for release. Certain inmates who are in for especially aggravated crishistories of violent behavior are frequently denied parole in

Edward Barkley, regional supervisor for the Texas Division of Parole St vision, said every inmate is reviewed at least once a year after become ble, however.

An additional wrinkle in the already beavily wrinkled system is that there really no such thing as a 99-year sentence or a life senter

Under state law, 99 years or life or anything over 60 years, in fact, is co as a 60-year sentence. In other words, a convicted murderer with a life ence becomes eligible for release after 20 years.

Penitentiary inmates usually are given credit under whatever classification for which they qualify for time served in county jail.

And if they can make trusty, they earn 60 days' credit for every 30 they olice were kept busy this week with numerous persons who had literal "run-ins" with the law An 18-year-old man, who allegedly pulled a gun on a cab driver about 2:50 a.m. Monday, was arrested after a brief foot race with a city policeman

Billie Mullen Draper, 48, told police the man got into his cab in the 1700block of Parkway Drive and asked to be driven to a residence in the 2300-block of

The man allegedly threatened to pistol-whip Draper after the cab driver requested a deposit on the fare. Reports indicate Draper ordered the suspect out

The man, according to reports, got out of the vehicle and pulled a revolver just as a police patrol car drove up.

The suspect reportedly ran but was caught by the officer in a nearby vacant field. He was transported to the county iail and later released on bail.

However, a 14-year-old boy provided a more difficult challenge to an officer

noon when a vehicle which appeared to be lacking a driver pulled up beside his patrol car

The seemingly driverless car, however. turned out to be commandeered by the 4-foot,6-inch youngster, who had sneaked the car keys from his father's pocket and decided to go joy riding.

In his report, the baffled officer said he was at Fourth Street and Zenith Avenue when the car pulled up. "I couldn't see any driver, but I did observe several small children in the vehicle," he wrote. The passengers in the car were later learned to be two girls, ages 10 and 13, and two 7-month-old babies

The officer said that shortly after observing the oddity, he stopped the car and was getting out of his patrol unit to talk with the diminutive driver, who was walking toward him. But the youth apparently decided not to give up so easily

Before I could get out of my vehicle (the youngster) turned and ran back to his car and locked the doors," the frustrated officer reported. The chase was just beginning when the boy sped off on East Fourth Street, the officer trailing

The joy ride seemed to be at an end when the juvenile failed to negotiate a turn at East 16th Street and Quirt Avenue and ran into a stop sign.

However, the boy jumped out of the car and and ran away. "The officers could not catch him," a report states. But after questioning the young girls in the car, officers learned the name of the elusive driver. They contacted the boy's mother, who brought her son to the police station. Police gave the youth's father a citation for allowing a minor to drive an automobile Earlier Sunday, officers were engaged in another high-speed chase that began just east of the Texas Tech University campus and ended in an alley in the 1900-block of 16th Street. According to reports, city officers joined Tech police units in pursuit of the vehicle which was eastbound on Main Street about 1:30 a.m. Sunday. The pursuit included several alleged illegal turns, including one through a service station in the 2400-block of 15th Street which resulted in two gasoline pumps being damaged. The 21-year-old driver of the pickup truck was finally caught when a headlight on his truck failed, forcing him to

Group awakening helps learning-disabled kids

hildren with learning disabilities live in a topsy-turvy world: b's may look like d's, pet, pot and pit may sound the same; the difference between right and left or under and over may suddenly blur.

Lubbock, Texas

They want to learn - intelligence isn't the problem - but things don't come easily. They fidget and forget a lot. They need extra help in school

Parents are trying to revive an organization to work with the Lubbock Independent School District in meeting the special needs of such kids, whose condition often is described in technical jargon as minimal brain dysfunction, perceptualmotor handicap or dyslexia

ALTHOUGH THE DISTRICT currently provides assistance to students with learning disabilities, there may be ways to strengthen the school system's efforts, especially at the secondary level, said Rhoda Cummings, a mother and former teacher

Also, she said, the group would be a vehicle for parents to air their frustrations and discuss ideas for helping youngsters

About 25 parents attended an organizational meeting last week. In a letter to his teachers, here's now two local parents describe their son Paul (not his real name)

'Paul is not dumb, he is not retarded — he has never been a behavior problem until this year. He is, as he says, 'a little confused' right now. He has been thrust from an elementary experience of a highly individualized program into a secondary experience where there is no individual help at all. There has been no gradual adjustment for him.

Seventh grade is a critical time for any child, but for our child it has been particularly difficult.

"He no longer has the security of the same teacher and the same classroom all day long; he is now supposed to be able to listen attentively and organize what he hears into notes for future study, although he still has a short attention span and intellectual disorganization. He has to remember what books to take where; he has to remember to write down each class assignment in a small notebook, but cannot keep up with the notebook; and he carries all of his books to every class because he cannot conceive of how much time five minutes is and he is afraid that he will be late to class if he goes to his locker.

LIKE OTHER LEARNING-DISABLED children, Paul is impulsive - he frequently interrupts in class. He's easily distracted and often daydreams. At times he seems unaware of how his behavior - say, his manners, or (due to difficulty in judging space) his tendency to stand too close to people affects those around him.

Junior high students can be cruel. Youngsters like Paul are teased and lonely, parents say. Added Paul's parents:

He is our child and we love him very much. We feel that it is our responsibility to support him and to protect him while at the same time attempt to ease him into independence in a world where he will most likely always march to the beat of a different drum.

Lubbock used to have a chapter of the Association for Children with Learning Disabilities, to help deal with the academic and social frustrations created by such problems, Mrs. Cummings said.

THE ORGANIZATION WAS strong here for two decades, until about three years ago, she said. Since then, the chapter has been dormant

Dr. Cecil Green, the school district's director of special ed ucation, said he welcomes the awakening of the group. "I feel strongly that parental involvement is important in the education of all children - especially children in special ed." Green said. He said he is "not aware of any real gaps or weaknes in services for local students with learning disabilities. But, he added. "There's always room for improvement Some parents are concerned that secondary schools don't have enough special education teachers for learning-disabled children. Green himself said, "Some junior highs and high schools could be helped by additional personnel" - but doing so would require spending local tax monies, or reducing the number of special education teachers at the elemen-

PARENTS ALSO WORRY about the "mainstreaming" of their children into regular classes. They say teachers must be prepared to understand and help the child with a learning disability

Learning-disabled children in the Lubbock schools generally receive help from a resource teacher for an hour a day. and spend the rest of their time in regular classes

Mrs Cummings said parents of children with learning disabilities are planning a second meeting April 30. The location has not vet been decided Parents wanting more information may call Mrs. Cummings at 792-1256.

They were with such inportant companies as Morgan Guaranty Trust, Mellon Bank, Northern Trust Company, Paine Webber, Jackson & Curtis, Lehman Brothers Kuhn Loeb, and General Reinsurance. Each analyst was asked how high and how low each stock would go during the next six

Analysts forecast that American Sterilizer Company and General Medical Corp. will rise by 40 percent in the next six months. Narco Scientific was expected to rise by 38 percent, Radiation Dynamics by 33 percent, and Abbott Laboratories by 25

On the other hand, analysts also felt that radiation Dynamics could drop by 28 percent: American Sterilization by 18 percent; and General Medical Corp. by 17 percent. However, Narco Scientific and Abbott Laboratories were only expected to drop by 9 percent. This means that analysts expect Narco Scientific to have the best chance of a gain with the least downside risk

Analysts believe that American Sterilizer would have the best chance of a rise in price because it has recently discontinued a number of its losing operations. General Medical Corp. was expected to rise because of its specialization in disposable items which are increasingly being used in hospitals.

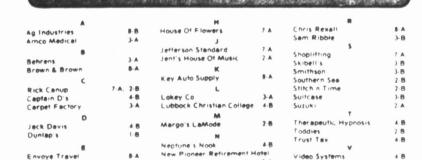

Analysts liked Narco Scientific because of its concentration in the health care field and in communications systems. Radiation Dynamics manufactures high energy particle accelerators which are used in medical plastics, rubber and chemical industries. Analysts said that the strength of Abbott Laboratories earnings growth had been un-

Upjohn and Rorer were expected to fall by about as much as they would rise (17 percent and 19 percent versus 21 percent and 20 percent.)

Analysts did not expect any other drug stocks that we have surveyed to rise by 7 percent more than they would fall. There stocks, Merck and Company, SmithKline Corp., and Medtronic, Inc., were expected to drop by more than they would rise. Overall, analysts were optimistic about the drug industry and did not expect the

Time is not of the essence

FEW AMERICANS are likely to argue with Winston Churchill's assessment of democracy as "the worst system (except) for all the others." But it's difficult for anyone over the age of puberty to accept with equanimity the notion that no real improvement is possible in the vice presidential selection process.

The twin disasters of Spiro Agnew and Thomas Eagleton simply are too fresh in our memories to inspire much confidence in a system that depends almost exclusively on the judgment of one exhausted nominee and his equally frazzled close advisers.

In 1976, both parties were lucky. Ex-President Ford, for example, had reasonable assurance of winning the nomination and had undertaken investigations of a half-dozen or so potential running mates long before he landed in Kansas City.

BUT THERE'S no guarantee that the parties-or the country-will be so fortunate in the future

A closely contested convention battle, where the choice of a presidential nominee goes right down to the wire, could still result in a hasty selection of a vice presidential candidate who had received no prior screening by anyone—a la Agnew and Eagleton.

President Carter already has said that Walter Mondale will be his running mate again next year, but it's always possible that someone other than Carter could wind up as the presidential nominee

A special panel of the Republican National Committee is on record opposing proposed changes in the selection process, such as leaving the choice of a vice presidential nominee to the convention itself, or postponing the selection until days or weeks after the presidential nominee has been chosen.

POSTPONING THE decision for days or weeks, they said, not only delays the start of the fall campaign but also deprives the duly elected national convention delegates of a formal vote on the presidential candidate's choice of a running mate.

Their objections are virtually identical to those that discouraged the Democrats from any reform a couple of years back

As a practical matter, conventions always bow to the wishes of their presidential nominee when it comes to choosing a vice president. Awarding the VP nomination to the runner-up or leaving the choice to the convention runs the risk that the nominee might be stuck with a running mate who is incompatible personally or philosophically.

So why go through the motions? The country would be better served if presidential nominees got some sleep, undertook thorough investigations and interviews of prospective running mates and then made the choice-a week or even a month later

The only ones who care whether the general election campaign is delayed a few days are the politicians.

The DWI-STEP is implemented by regular police officers who work on their days off. The program is funded by a grant from the Texas Office of Traffic Safety. Since the program began, these officers have made 103 DWI arrests, as compared with 153 DWI arrests for the entire year of 1977.

Most of the arrests occur in the areas of 4th Street, Avenue A. Avenue H and 19th Street, Stevens said.

The DWI-STEP officers have also made 57 other arrests in the course of their duty. These include arrests for burglary, theft and possession of drugs.

Borrowing Tips help tell if you can afford home

Update Staff Writer

To own a home is one of the fondest of

Despite spiraling prices for real estate. many Americans today retain this idvllic dream, but the harsh realities of the mortgage loan market can have a sudden sobering effect.

Simply wanting a home and promising to pay for it will not convince many mortgage lending institutions - which include commercial banks, savings banks, savings and loan associations, mortgage bankers and insurance companies - that you can afford one.

Lenders must be persuaded. The prospective borrower will undergo a credit evaluation that will likely include an xamination of the person's past credit rating, his sources and uses of income and his future earning potential.

Before approaching the mortgage lenders, those desiring a place of their own are well advised to try a little home arithmetic. Minimum-wage earners obviously can not afford swanky mansions, but can the individual or couple who have been working for several years finance a moderately priced home?

The "Wise Home Buying" booklet published by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development provides two simple formulas for computing the affordability of a new home:

•The price should not exceed two to two-and-one-half times your annual family income. The young couple should be conservative with this estimate the incomes and solid future job prospects can use the more liberal vardstick. The homeowner should not pay more than 25 percent income for monthly housing expenses, which include the booklet says, while persons substantial monthly loan payment, utility expenses and repair and maintenance. The booklet also advises the prospective borrower to possess the cash necessary for the downpayment on the loan and other expenses at the time the loan is processed At this point the future homeowner should be wary. Different mortgage lenders will require different downpayment percentages on the price of a home depending on the offered interest rate and the term (length) of the loan.

Charles Perry, president of West Texas Savings Association in Lubbock, says 'probably more than one-half' of Lubbock mortgage lenders currently are requiring a 20 percent downpayment, with the remainder demanding a lesser payment, some as little as 10 percent.

For the person or couple strapped for cash, the mortgage lender asking only the 10 percent downpayment will likely be preferable, though the interest rate charged the borrower will be higher to compensate.

Perry says that a typical mortgage loan with a 20 percent downpayment under current market conditions may have a 93/4 percent interest rate. In contrast. he says the same mortgage loan with a 10 percent downpayment may have a 9% percent rate. An alternative to the private mortgage lender loan is the Federal Housing Administration (FHA)-insured mortgage

Currently offered with interest rate of 91/2 percent, requiring a downpayment of no more than 5 percent o the price of the home, and affording a 30-year term of repayment, the FHA-insured loan can be an attractive package, particularly to the less wealthy segments of society. Gene Whitney, deputy director of the FHA (which is a part of HUD) in Lubbock, stresses that the above provisions, while in effect today, could change in the future. Still, he says the FHA has historically been a leader in lower downpayments and longer terms and adds that he expects the organization to continue to provide mortgage loans to a of society than private lenders.

According to Whitney, the FHA-insured loans require a 3 percent downpayment on loans up to $25,000 and a 5 percent payment on loans from $25,000 up to the $60,000 limit under the pro-

The FHA does not lend money to homebuyers, Whitney stresses. Rather the government agency provides a guaranty for private institution loans under the program.

For private mortgage loans up to $25,-000, approved under the program, the FHA will guarantee 97 percent of the Whitney says the FHA will guarantee 95 ercent of the loan.

Whitney says most of the Lubbock private mortgage loan lenders offer the FHA-insured those interested in the lesser downpayment and the assurance of a 30-year term, this may be an important consideration in choosing a financing in-

How Banks Make Money

Banks store money in vaults with doors that can be 2 feet thick. The doors have combination locks that will not open until a special time.

Money, money, money. Banks use money to make money. Instead of selling skateboards or TV sets, banks sell money services.

When people put (or deposit) money in a bank, it doesn't just sit there like it does in your piggy bank. It is used to make more money.

Loans

Banks are in the money-renting business. Just as your parents might pay to rent an apartment, they also pay rent on borrowed money.

Banks make money by charging for the money they lend. When customers borrow, they pay back the full amount, plus some more for using (or renting) the money. This extra money is called interest.

For example: Pretend that you borrow $1.00. The bank might charge you 10 cents interest. You would pay back a total of $1.10.

The people who handle most of the bank's customers are called tellers. Each teller has a cash drawer and must keep track of every penny.

One type of check and stub.

Checking Accounts

Most people have a checking account at a bank. They put money in and then write checks. The checks are written orders telling banks to pay a certain person or business. This keeps the bank customer from going from place to place paying bills with cash. Sometimes banks charge for these checks. Checking accounts don't usually earn interest. Banks use these accounts to attract saving and loan customers.

An open and empty box.

Safety Deposit Boxes

Banks make money by charging for safety deposit boxes. People rent them to store important papers and things of value such as jewelry. The boxes are located in the bank's vaults.

Savings Accounts

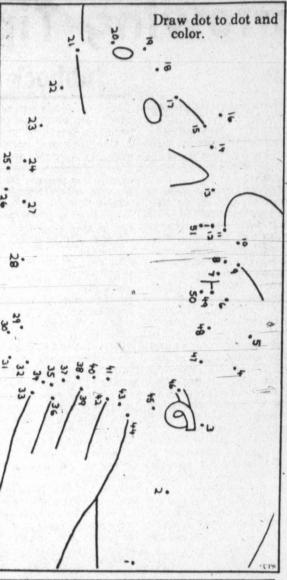

Banks are also in the moneyborrowing business.

When people put their money in special savings accounts, the bank uses this money to make loans. However, it pays the savers for the use of their money.

For example: Pretend that you put $1.00 in savings. The bank might pay you 7 cents interest. You would get back $1.07.

So banks serve both borrowers and savers.

All banks must go by strict laws saying how they must be properly run.

Hemphill-Wells gears its business toward customer satisfaction

ly Ray Westbrook Update Staff Writer

Hemphill-Wells, as a corporation, will be 56 years old April 23, according to B.E. Rushing Jr., vice president and secretary of the firm. Its president, Bill E. Collins, has been with the company for 50 of those years.

Throughout half a century the company has exerted a major impact on the marketing scene of both Lubbock and San Angelo

Currently operating two specialty department stores in each of those cities, Hemphill-Wells has been a significant force in forging a standard for the marketing of quality merchandise in West

The marketing philosophy which Hemphill-Wells has evolved from weathering such economic storms as the depression of the 1930s and the continuing inflationary period of the 1970s, involves quality in merchandise and service.

The company also has concentrated its efforts in those areas in a relatively small number of stores.

"We try to operate the best store in town wherever we operate, and you can't maintain the quality of operation which we try to do with a whole bunch of stores. It's a slow evolution," an official of the company said.

The firm has an unusual track record of keeping veteran personnel. A recent compilation from the personnel office shows 132 people out of a total employment of 800 have been with the company for over 10 years.

An official said the company's business is built on "good-quality, mediumprice merchandise. We don't try to sell cheaper than anybody else. We don't try to wrestle for the bottom dollar with the

"We constantly seek to train our people to an attitude that our business is built on the confidence of our customers, that the customer has first place in our business. We spend a great deal of money inviting people into our store, and when they come to our store they are guests - invited guests.

Every person in our organization who at any time has any contact with the customer: across the counter, across the desk, over the telephone, is a personal ambassador for this company, and re-flects for good or bad on the attitude of the public toward Hemphill-Wells."

Employees at Hemphill-Wells are considered an important factor in the company's operation, and corporate policy toward personnel reflects that attitude. An official explains that Hemphill-Wells' ability to attract and retain its ployee ownership of the company and promotion from withiz its ranks.

Hemphill-Wells is primarily employeeowned. While employees do not own the greater portion of stock, for many years no stock has been available to anyone except employees.

A spokesman for the firm noted that when the company calls a shareholders meeting, it is simply a get-together of employees from Lubbock and San Angelo, including a good many people who have retired on the firm's retirement plan, which is paid entirely by the com-

In referring to the policy of promotion from within, the spokesman said, "Most of our buyers came up through the ranks. Many of them started out as sales people on the floor. Mr. Collins, the company president, began as a part-time shoe salesman while he was in Texas Tech University. Mr. Rushing, vice president, began as cashier and package wrapper.

He added, "Whenever we have a position in the store as a section head, a department head, a buyer, a divisional merchandise manager, we look first in our own organization. Every executive in our company is trying to train the people under him, because he can't move up unless his people are prepared to move up.

The company classifies its operations as a "specialty department store." It stocks clothing, home furnishings and shoes for every member of the family. Sections include ladies ready to wear junior fashions, sportswear, lingerie and foundations, children's departments, boys, girls, young men, and a VIP section (at the Mall).

"We give a lot of emphasis in our stores to accessories which include costume jewelry, hosiery, handbags, scarves and cosmetics.

In addition, Hemphill-Wells markets housewares, gifts, china, silver and crystal. The firm does a large volume of business in gifts. "We try to be a gift center," according to the company.

A portion of the stock includes linens, bedding and furnishing accessories.

Unable to find a satisfactory location in Plainview, the two businessmen found a building on the square in Lubbock which was immediately available. They contracted to open the store at the corner of Broadway and Texas Avenue, where the Federal Building now stands.

M. L. PRICE was sent from San Angelo as vice president and manager, with Wells as corporate secretary. The business was called Hemphill-Price at first, even though Wells had the same financial interest in the firm as Price.

Price soon moved to California because of poor health, and Wells was designated store manager.

The company's history relates, "After two years in the Broadway location, the store was moved into a 50-foot building on Avenue J where a part of the downtown store is now situated. This was considered a 'suburban location' at that time, as it was completely outside the business district. There were no business buildings on the south side of 13th Street, nor west of Avenue J. HEMPHILL-WELLS recalls the philosophy of one of its businessmen ancestors. John D. Baker of Granbury, who bought into a store partnership in 1874. (Heirs of the forerunner stores still own stock in the present company.)

He recognized the responsibility of any business to be a good citizen, and was himself active in civic affairs. He felt that "whatever helps our town or our area, helps our store.

John Henson is in a pretty good position to hear criticism about television.

As station manager for KTXT-TV, Lubbock's university-owned public television station, he hears comments on both sides of the spectrum — both public and commercial television.

Most viewers are probably aware that KTXT-TV, as most public television stations, gets a large chunk of funds from an annual fund-raising campaign called "Festival." What viewers may not know is that public television really is public— that is, it is supported by tax dollars as well.

The Corporation for Public Broadcast-ing was established by Congress for the distribution of federal money. First amendment enthusiasts and grudging tax-payers alike have questioned the prac-tice of any television stations accepting

"Obviously there can be some strings attached," Henson said of the government support. "But I really don't think we're under any pressure from the federal government to run certain pro-

According to Henson, public television is regulated by the FCC under the same circumstances as commercial television stations. The Corporation for Public Broadcasting (CPB) does offer some guidelines for broadcasters, he said, such as minimum air time and requirements for a certain number of staff

But above all, the government requires that a station obtain at least 50 percent of its funding from sources oth-

But he said he stays in public television because he enjoys it. He first started working in commercial television as a producer, but eased into public television on a part-time basis at KTXT-TV when he was working on a graduate degree at Tech.

Part-time work turned into full-time responsibilities and Henson has been station manager for KTXT-TV for 11 years now. Not liking to make predictions, he couldn't say if he would stay with public television but said he would probably never return to commercial television.

Rugged Rodeo clown plays each fight by ear

By Gerry Burton Update Staff Writer

A cowboy lies still in the dust, easy prey for the stomping hooves and hook-ing horns of rodeo's raging "ton of fu-

Suddenly, the bare inches between are filled with a racing figure. A rodeo clown slaps the bull between the horns and dashes to the side, dancing back and forth to draw danger from the helpless

Horns held low and ready, the bull paws arena dust in challenge to its new target. Instantly, the man drops to all fours, pawing dust and pushing his face close to that of the bull.

Silence holds. Then, to the amazed gasps of spectators, the bull turns and stalks away, seeming a bit miffed at it all and wanting only the pens.

It happened in Lubbock Municipal Coliseum, a part of thrills punctuating the 37th annual ABC Rodeo.

And, it happens all the time, at rodeos all over the country for the Bull Dancer, Bob Romer, who calls Canyon home, but gets there from rodeo work only about 45 days out of the year.

Sometimes, protecting a cowboy gets worse - when the cowboy "hangs up" in the rigging — his hand bound to a bull fighting hard to knock him loose.

Romer, who loves to fight bulls and loves to dance all night afterward to live up to his nickname, plays each fight by ear as it happens.

If one thing doesn't work, he has a dozen more tricks to throw at the bull to draw him from the cowboy jerking helplessly around the arena in time to the bucking jolts of a bull.

Then, when the bull is gone, Romer often is the first man to help the cowboy, make sure he is all right until other When that cowboy is out of the arena, PHILADELPHIA (Special) - Mrs. M. Joyce Richards, formerly of Lubbock, has been named assistant cashier in the Community Banking Group of Central Penn National Bank, Philadelphia, Pa. Mrs. Richards joined Central Penn, subsidiary of Central Penn National Corp., in 1966. She is assigned to a branch office in Philadelphia.

BUNNY LEFT FOR

The real thing

To rodeo clown Bob Romer, who protected Rick Presley from the bull's horns and hooves when the singer made his first ride at the 37th annual ABC Rodeo, working bulls is a blast, even when he gets tossed skyward. But, Presley, shown before the ride, was a bit concerned about it all looking over the Bull Dancer's picture the next cowboy that may need his help. "If I think about what he did, I could get another guy hurt. I have to forget about him and think of the nine still coming out (of the chute on a bull)."

Romer, a regular at Texas Tech intercollegiate rodeos for years, had a special charge at the ABC 1979 event, a rider completely inexperienced to care for when Rick Presley made his one "and only" bullride.

Luckily, Romer had been there before with other novice riders not in the great physical shape of the star entertainer of the ABC Rodeo.

In Colorado he pulled off a "professors' bullriding" for a college where none had ridden and only one man, the rodeo coach, was injured slightly.

"I leave my fate in Bob's hands," Presley said while planning the feat. "He will have it after I fall off. He will keep the bull away. I just have to stay on as long as I can and then let Rob do

Presley volunteered for the ride like he does for any adventure to help promote events at which he is appearing car racing, hang gliding, surfing, deep sea diving, snowmobiling, ice skating,

He put his safety in Romer's hands as do hundreds of professional rodeo cowboys around the nation on a full annual schedule. When he's passing by and not clowning at a rodeo, Romer does a little bull riding himself.

chose in preference to using his ag sciences nutrition degree from Oklahoma State University.

"I love it, I wouldn't do anything else," Romer grinned. He takes the action like the cowboys he frees from a bull and, patched up at the nearest hospital, heads for the next rodeo with a big rin and a lot of confidence.

At rodeo dances, Romer says, he does 'the Texas two-step in double time." When he is in the arena, where he has been a dozen years and hopes for that many more, he does a two-step in whatever speed necessary to run interference for a cowboy with the bucking bulls.

After the Presley-Romer bull riding effort, the clown had a few days rest before the Rodeo Superstars Championship in Fort Worth.

Presley, who admitted living for the challenges of each day as it comes, left for a tour of Japan and Australia, where undoubtedly, the native Texan will find many occasions to tell the crowds about his first bull ride and the Bull Dancer that helped him pull it off to brag about.

the accident and has not yet decided what to do about it.

At Texas Tech University, students were asked how they feel this accident will affect plants that are still in the planning stages and whether they think the incident will slow down the building of plants across the country.

Dianne Sykora feels that it should affect the public's concern about the

"Nobody is going to want to have one built where they live," David Madden said.

said.

Carolyn Harris did not know very much about the accident, though she feels that it will alter the public's views on building more plants.

"Yes, I do think it will make a difference in other plants, because people are afraid of them. They don't think they are safe. With that movie coming out, there will just be so much controversy that it will be a while before they build any more plants," according to Robert Floan.

Cindy Gordon also thinks that it would make a difference in nuclear plants. "I think it (nuclear power) is too big a haz-ard to take a chance on. Maybe they should spend the money on solar energy

Twenty Texas Tech University students participating in the internship program for home economics majors honored their supervisors at a breakfast recently in the University Center.

Moss said.

"Yes, this accident is going to stop them a little bit. They have got to step back and take a look at it, and see what they have done wrong and in my opinion, change something. I think that nuclear energy is good, but something has got to be changed before we can use it to its full potential," according to Greg.

Peggy Ricketts thinks that this accident will make a difference, "I hope so. I think it would be hazardous to open

One thought that may have come to many people's minds was expressed by Cindy Gordon. "If man keeps goofing around with stuff that has to do with wiping out people with radiation, they are going to do it."

The majority of the internships are a cooperative with the program of the Small Business Administration. Businessmen making their firms available to interns include: Lee D. Hearty hors d'oeuvres add spice to occasions

By Jeanne Lively Update Staff Writer

As her contribution to the recent ent Rewards for College Scientists (ARCS) auction, Mrs. Don Haragan contributed two sets each of four jars of peno jelly and four dozen chicken almond puffs. Crackers and cream cheese were included to serve with the jalapeno elly. No doubt because of her known itness with hors d'oeuvres, all items were speedily bid upon and carried away by two lucky winners!

Mrs. Haragan's family consists of husband Don — a professor of atmospheric sciences at Texas Tech University — and daughters, Shannon (10) and Shelley (almost eight).

Because of the family's busy and somewhat hectic schedule, the evening meal - a time when all of the family can sit down and eat together - is the main one of the day

Friends of Mrs. Haragan say that she will not admit that there is anything spe-cial about most of her foods, but her d'oeuvres.

Mrs. Haragan comments that one of her favorite ways to entertain guests is to invite people in for liquid refreshment and several kinds of hors J'oeuvres, including some of the more hearty variety. For dinner parties, however, she limits hors d'oeuvres to perhaps one or two choices.

The Haragans belong to a bridge group which alternates meeting at members' homes, and on these occasions, Mrs. Haragan says she enjoys serving some of the following recipes.

CRABMEAT SPREAD

Spread 1 8-oz. package of cream cheese not quite to edge of dinner-sized plate. Cover with chili sauce (or seafood caocktail sauce) - about 4 cup. Sprinkle 6-8 oz. of crabmeat on top (be sure to remove the cartilage). Spread on crack-

HOT PEPPER JELLY 1/4 cup hot green peppers

% cup bell peppers Remove seeds from above. Grind or chop fine.

In large saucepan combine peppers with 1 ½ cup apple cider vinegar and 6-½ cups sugar. Boil 10 minutes. Remove from heat and add 1 bottle of Certo. Stir well. Add a few drops of green food coloring. Cool slightly and put in glass jars. Seal with paraffin. For hors d'oeuvres, spread cream cheese on a cracker and top with jelly. Also good served with pork or ham. (If you like it hotter, add a few dashes of tabasco sauce.)

Cricket's terminology is a little more sophisticated than what you will find in baseball. The bowler is cricket's equivalent to a pitcher. The batsman strikes the ball. The wicket keeper catches it.

Ponkshe, a graduate student in mass communications at Texas Tech, learned how to play cricket in Bombay, India. Most of the local players hail from India, Pakistan and the West Indies. Coincidentally, those are three of the countries where some of the world's better cricket is played. There are no Americans among the local players. "We always ask people standing around if they would like to play," Ponkshe said. "Some of them have played; it's an easy game to learn and fun to play. But we usually play in different parks at different times, so we haven't had any Americans play with us more than once."

COLUMN TO THE PROPERTY OF THE PARTY OF THE P

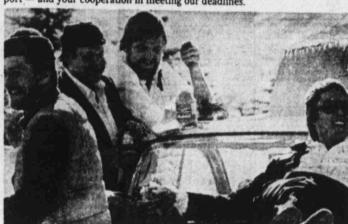

By William D. Kerns Update Entertainment Editor

Two new plays open this weekend, and no less than four outstanding movies are currently on Lubbock's movie screens. So surely you can find something to do this weekend. There's also a lot of good music at the local watering holes for those who find it rough to sit down without a drink or decibels for company.

Lubbock Christian College is staging a dinner theater production of Neil Simon's "Star Spangled Girl" tonight and Saturday. And the Texas Tech University Theater will premiere an original play called "Pancho!" at 8:15 p.m. today, with the opening performance a benefit in which profits are earmarked for a scholarship fund in the memory of late Tech theater student Charles Kerr. "Pancho!" will also be staged at the same time nightly through Wednesday.

The excellent new movies in town include "The Deer Hunter," "Hair,"
"The China Syndrome" and "Norma Rae." But don't forget great re-issues like "Midnight Express" at the Backstage and "Heaven Can Wait." at Show-place are also available.

Once again, if anyone is not yet included in the Take Your Pick listings and would like to be, that person or organization should call 762-8844 or write Update, Box 491, Lubbock, Texas 79408. We both need and appreciate your support — and your cooperation in meeting our deadlines.

on screen

Backstage i — "Midnight Express." No matter how many Academy Award nominations this powerful and gripping motion picture has earned, it remains a travesty that the performance of star Brad Davis was ignored. The film is one of five current candidates for Best Picture Of The Year honors. Davis plays Billy Hayes, a young American to foolishly tries to smuggle hashish out of Turkey, gets caught and sentenced to a punishment much too severe to even come close to fitting the crime. "Midnight Express" is a film which gets beneath the viewer's skin. It is horrifyingly powerful. And it should not be missed by anyone with a strong heart.

Backstage II - "Naughty Freshmen." X-rated material.

Cinematheque — Each Wednesday evening, the Cinematheque Film Society presents classic films on the Texas Tech University campus. Tickets may be purchased by both Tech students and the general public. This week's offering is Ingmar Bergman's 1967 film "Persona," starring Liv Ullmann as a stage actress who suffers a nervous breakdown and seeks recovery on an isolated island. The film will be screened at 8 p.m. in the University Center theater, with the admission price set at $1.

Cinema West — "Hair." Director Milos Forman has taken a dated musical piece and emerged with one of the best films released thus far this year. He has kept most of the Broadway stageplay's songs, added a good storyline as transition, colored things up with Twyla Tharp's amazing choreography and emerged with a bit of musical history which can both send chills up our spines and still make us want to sing and dance. Forman has given us great pictures like "Taking Off" and "One Flew Over The Cuckoo's Nest" in the past, but "Hair" may be his finest hour.

Fine Arts Drive-In - "Lips And McCain" and "Country Doc." X-rated material.

Fox I — "Every Which Way But Loose." Now in its fourth profitable month in Lubbock, it doesn't appear this garbage will ever leave town. Clint Eastwood stars with an orangutan named Clyde, but only Clyde has any excuse for making this nauseating piece of trash. After all, he (it?) couldn't read the script. Laced with country music, this picture is an insult to liberals, conservatives, rednecks, music lovers, animal lovers and anybody who prefers movies offering entertainment. But don't ever make the mistake of thinking a critic makes or breaks a movie, since "Every Which Way But Loose" has already earned a lot more money than any other Clint Eastwood movie released to date.

Fox II — "Keep It Up, Jack" and "If You Don't Stop It, You'll Go Blind." Both are R-rated and deal with sexual innuendo and humor. There are too many good movies in town to bother with this sort.

Fox III — "The Warriors" and "Hardcore." Both features can now be seen for the same admission price. "The Warriors" is a fine gang movie which takes a simple chase motif and transforms it into sheer cinema action. Though controversial (the film has been accused of instigating violence, though nothing has been proven), the picture is never boring. It deserves its R rating (mostly for language) but, ironically, never makes use of gratuitous violence. A rough movie, it is well directed by Walter Hill and extremely entertaining.

In "Hardcore," George C. Scott gives a rugged, powerful performance as a Midwestern businessman who seeks his runaway 16-year-old daughter amidst the seedy, sick porn parlors of southern California. But though the movie may match the intensity at times, it does not match the consistency of director Paul Schrader's previous effort, "Blue Collar." His "Hardcore" is a tough story with an unacceptable soft ending, a conclusion which just doesn't live up to any semblance of reality. All in all, it remains a movie worth seeing, a movie with an impact — but a movie with definite script problems all the same.

Fox IV — "The China Syndrome." Starring Jack Lemmon, Jane Fonda and Michael Douglas (and certain to win the former two Academy Award nominations next year), this film manages to be both exciting and topical. It is also, without a doubt, the most important film yet released in 1979. The plot concerns itself with an accident at a nuclear power plant, but even those who don't care for the political implications will be kept on the edge of their seats by the thriller's tension. The entire cast is superb, but Jack Lemmon stands out more than any other as the power plant employee who must come to grips with his own conscience. Though the filmmakers insist it was not intentional, there is also a highway murder scene which brings to mind the Karen Silkwood case.

Golden Horseshoe Drive-In, Front and Back Screens — Closed for extensive remodeling. Management indicates a grand opening will be held either April 13 or April 20.

Home Box Office — This pay television station offers movies and specials not presently on Lubbock's big screens. Premieres are held on HBO each weekend evening, and then repeated throughout the month. Tonight will see HBO premiere "Rabbit Test," a humorous Joan Rivers comedy about the first pregnant man which managed to offend just about everybody. On Saturday, Jimmy Osmond leaves Donny and Marie behind and stars in his very own movie called "The Great Brain." And on Sunday, there's not a bummer in the bunch. Movie fans could just sit and watch HBO all day as Sunday's attractions include "Islands In The Stream," "The Turning Point," "House Calls," "The Goodbye Girl." "Coma" and "Julia." What a lineup.

"The Goodbye Girl," "Coma" and "Julia." What a lineup.

HBO will also air such films as "Blue Collar," my pick for the Best Film Of 1978, and Clint Eastwood's original "Dirty Harry" later this month.

Showplace 1 — "Buck Rogers." Inspired by the amazing success of "Star Wars." this is a new feature-length production about the legendary comic book hero Buck Rogers. The special effects promise to be a hearty selling point. Not screened at press time.

Showplace H — "Heaven Can Wait." Though it's a shame Charles Grodin could not be honored as well, this film is a sheer pleasure and deserved the brunt of its Oscar nominations. Lubbock no doubt approved, as city movie-goers picked "Heaven Can Wait" in an Avalanche-Journal poll as their choice for Best Picture of 1978. Warren Beatty is spiendid as the football player called to his Maker too soon, and Dyan Cannon, Grodin and Jack Warden are all fine and funny in supporting roles. One of the most charming and popular films of the '70s.

Showplace III — "Boulevard Nights." Hardly a gang movie, this film takes a look at the Chicano sub-culture in east Los Angeles and comes away with both a statement of pride and an honest love story. Danny De La Paz makes a stunning debut as the younger brother who seeks to express his manhood through macho camaraderie. The scene in which the low-riders are bumper-to-bumper on the weekend boulevard is also memorable.

Showplace IV — "Superman." The longer this film stays on the market, the more it becomes apparent that it will not stand the test of time. More and more regular film-goers are expressing their disappointment in the lack of cohesion and lackluster special effects. Christopher Reeve's performance in the title role was the only aspect of the film which pleased me, but rest assured there have been a few folks writing and calling in to express their admiration for the film. It is a movie which hasn't completely alienated the critics or completely captured the public. So don't believe your friends — you'll just have to see it for yourself and form your own opinion.

Shewplace V "The Silent Partner." Though you may question your own taste a bit later, this film is going to entertain you. The language is raw, the nudity gratuitous and the violence borders on the sickening (at least in one memorably cutting scene), but we end up involved and rooting for bank teller Elliott Gould to foil sadistic crook Christopher Plummer and get away with his clever robbery. One occasionally wonders why we're asked to root for crooks so much lately, especially after "The Great Train Robbery" and "The Brink's Job," but it still does not diminish the entertainment value.

Showplace VI — "The North Avenue Irregulars." For the most part, this picture offers little more than formula Disney gags and a predictable script. But it's worth seeing just for the wonderful performances offered by Barbara Harris, one of film's best and most underrated comediennes, and Cloris Leachman. The slapstick and car crashes should be enough to keep the kiddos entertained, and the wit of Miss Harris and Miss Leachman makes sure the adults don't doze off completely, too.

South Plains Cinema I, Mall — "The Deer Hunter." One of the most devestating films ever put on the screen. "The Deer Hunter" is bound to leave every single viewer weak-kneed and slack-jawed as he leaves the theater. The picture deals with the friendship of three men (Robert DeNiro, Christopher Walken and John Savage) in a small steel-working town in Pennsylvania, and the effect Viet Nam has on each of these individuals. Michael Cimino's direction is superb, and the film has indeed earned its nine Oscar nominations. There is no doubt in my mind that Walken, playing the disturbed Nick, will win an Academy Award for his supporting performance. Three hours long, "The Deer Hunter" is a flawed, but totally unforgettable, gem. The Russian roulette scenes alone will leave a lingering feeling of depression and heartache for many nights to come. Not to be missed.

South Plains Cinema II, Mall — "The Promise." Kathleen Quinlan, so effective in "I Never Promised You A Rose Garden." and Stephen Collins star in this love story which takes a bizarre twist. They promised to love each other forever — but when her face is disfigured in a car accident, she leaves the man she loves. And the next time they meet, he falls in love with her without knowing who she really is. Not screened at press

South Plains Cineme III, Mall — "Norma Rae." This picture ranks right up there with "The China Syndrome" as one of the most important films released this year. Certainly it is the best picture dealing with contemporary women since "Alice Doesn't Live Here Anymore." (It can't help but be more universally relevant than "An Unmarried Woman.") Sally Field has the title role, and is nothing short of dynamic as the young widowed mill worker who decides she has both courage and a conscience. Her performance is Oscar caliber, and won't be forgotten. Excellent support is turned in by Ron Leibman and Beau Bridges.

South Plains Cinema IV, Mall — "Same Time, Next Year." Playwright turned screenwriter Bernard Slade has refused to open up his tepid little Neil Simon clone for the screen and, as a result, the film version of his hit play is predictable and yawn inspiring. The whole thing is just too, too stage-y — but luckily for Slade and us, the performers are good enough to keep us from walking out. Alan Alda and Ellen Burstyn work beautifully together: one only wishes they'd opted for stronger material.

Village — "The Cat From Outer Space." Now on its umpteenth run in the city, this 1978 Disney release is humorous enough to entertain both the adults and the kiddos. Despite Sandy Duncan's usual horrid acting. Ken Berry is fine as the human a feline astronaut asks for help, and McLean Stevenson supplies most of the laughs in a supporting role.

Winchester — "The Champ." This is Franco Zeffirelli's remake of the hit Wallace Beery film about a down and out fighter who struggles to make a comeback just so his kid will be proud of him. The new film stars Jon Voight and Faye Dunaway and is said to be a real tearjerker. Not screened at press time.

Midnight Shews — The Fox Fourplex will offer a special midnight showing of "Night Of The Living Dead" tonight and Saturday. Showplace will offer Friday and Saturday late showings of "Up In Smoke," "Heaven Can Wait," "The Silent Partner," "Boulevard Nights" and "Buck Rogers." Check today's A-J movie listings for exact times.
