Annual Eastland County Livestock Show Opens Friday

EVENT DRAWS LARGE LIST OF EXHIBITS

With a list of entries larger than has appeared in any previous show, the Eastland County Livestock show will open at 10 o'clock tomorrow in the former Wilkerson Lumber company site and the brick building adjoining.

Judging will start at 10 o'clock when all exhibits are expected to be in place. John Simpson, agricultural agent for the Texas and Pacific railroad, will be the judge.

Livestock is being concentrated at the exposition ground today. Stalls have been arranged in the sheds where lumber was once stored. Although built for a different purpose these sheds, cleaned and remodelled by a corps of workmen during the week, are excellent for the purpose and will show the stock to good advantage.

New Department

A new department has been added to the show this year, showing mules and horses. Prizes of merchandise for winners in this division have been secured. In listing these awards yesterday mention of a prize for the best saddle horse was inadvertently omitted. This award will be $3 in merchandise.

In addition to the exhibits a number of amusement features will add to the attractiveness of the show. These include boxing matches Saturday afternoon and music by both the Lobo band and the American Legion Novelty orchestra Friday afternoon and evening.

"Ducking Stool"

A "ducking stool" concession will be operated by the vocational class of the high school. It was announced by E. H. Varnell Cisco vocational instructor and director of the show. There will also be other concessions to be carried on by the boys during the show.

Another feature will be the district F. F. A. judging contest when boys from 14 schools over an area of several counties will compete under the auspices of the West Texas Vocational Teachers association. Between 100 and 150 boys are due to be here for this which will include five distinct contests as follows:

Dairy cattle; hogs, sheep and beef cattle; plant production; soil conservation; and poultry.

The contest will begin at 8:30 Saturday morning, with the coaches meeting at the chamber of commerce to prepare the questions for contest in each division. Actual judging will start at 10 o'clock at the livestock show where stock on display will be used.

Five students from each school may judge in each division and no student may enter more than one division. Three of the five will be designated a team with the remaining two judging as alternates who may compete for individual honors, according to rules announced by F. E. Tut, of Abilene, president of the association.

Basket Ball Finals

Finals in the basket ball contest conducted among vocational students by the association will be played at the Cisco high school gymnasium during Saturday evening.

New awards secured for distribution among winners at the livestock show were announced today by Mr. Varnell as follows:

Texas company, five gallons of motor oil; Gulf Refining company, five gallons of motor oil; Sinclair company, five gallons of motor oil; Continental Oil company, five gallons of motor oil, and White Star Refining company, 55 gallons of kerosene (winner to bring container).

The proceeds from the operation of the ducking stool will be used to send judging teams of the Cisco vocational classes to the state judging contest at A. & M. college in April, Mr. Varnell said.

The business streets of the city were gay with bunting today in preparation for the show. Given the fair weather that is in prospect, large number of visitors from all over the county and immediate area are expected here for the two days that the exposition will be in progress.

DAILY NEWS REQUESTS FREE SEED FOR NEEDY GARDENERS

The Daily News is making an effort to secure distribution of assortments of free garden seed among farmers and urbanites here this spring. A letter written to Cong. Thomas L. Blanton, by W. H. LaRoque, manager of the paper, requested that he take up this matter and secure quantities of free seed from some source to be sent here for distribution. The News has agreed to undertake the distribution and to give the necessary publicity. It is suggested that about 2,000 assortments would be required to supply those unable otherwise to be provided with the seed.

The Red Cross, which made such a distribution last year, will not do so this year, Cong. Blanton was informed in the letter.

Mr. Blanton has taken the matter up with the Red Cross, with the assurance that he would assist in every way possible. He enclosed a copy of a letter which he wrote to W. M. Baxter, Jr., of the National Red Cross, transmitting Mr. LaRoque's letter and urging that he give the request favorable consideration.

The News has not yet heard from the Red Cross but it is hoping that an appropriation will be made through which those unable to obtain seed this year may be supplied. Such a distribution would do much toward relieving distress by enabling

Texas Independence Celebrated on Spot Where Historic Document Was Written

WASHINGTON, (Washington Co.) Tex., March 2. — On the site where the declaration of Texas Independence was written, a group of Texans gathered today to plan an exposition as a proper and fitting celebration of the centennial of the declaration.

Today's meeting was the first of a series that will be held in each state senatorial district by the Texas centennial committee to carry out its educational and organization plans for the celebration in 1936 of Texas nativity.

More specifically, today's meeting was to dedicate a new auditorium erected on the spot where a group of brave and half-frozen patriots met in open session March 2, 1836, in 39 degrees below zero weather, to defy the Mexican government, to denounce the fall of the Alamo and to declare independence.

BRITAIN OUT OF RACE FOR CISCO MAYOR

The race for the mayorality of Cisco today had narrowed down to three persons. Birt Britain, former county commissioner who announced as a candidate several weeks ago has formally withdrawn from the contest with the announcement that the demands of his farm and other business prevent his making an active campaign.

This leaves in the field only Mayor J. T. Berry, J. B. Blitch and Crigler Paschall.

In a statement to the News this morning Mr. Britain said that the demands of his farm and other personal affairs are occupying so much of his time that he can neither conduct an active campaign nor be assured of giving to the affairs of the city, if elected, the attention that they deserve. He expressed his thanks for the support that has been given him during the period that he has been in the race as well as his regret that he could not continue as a candidate.

Mr. Britain entered the campaign shortly after the first of the year upon the insistence of many of his friends. Prior to that announcement he had served three terms as county commissioner from the fourth precinct, in which Cisco is located.

5-YEAR PLAN HELPS EDUCATE 29 MILLIONS

By EUGENE LYONS

United Press Staff Correspondent

MOSCOW, March 2.—Twenty-nine million Soviet citizens learned to read and write during the four and a quarter years of the first Five Year Plan, bringing the nation's literacy to 90 per cent, where it was only 33 per cent before.

This is cited as one of the outstanding victories on the "cultural front" summarized recently by the Commissar of Education, Andrei Bobov, in an address at the session of the Soviet Znak, or parliament.

Bobov claimed that the cultural phase of the Five Year Plan has been over-fulfilled twice. He based the claim on the fact that expenditures for education and other cultural work scheduled at 7,828,000 rubles, had, in fact, amounted to 15,500,000 rubles.

The excessive investment is not in itself a proof of achievement, since it is in part explained by emergency inflation and high costs. It is a fact, however, that all the quantitative aspects of "culture" exceed original plans.

Where it was planned to make 17,000,000 people literate, some 29,000,000 were reached, he said, and 17,700,000 others, who were semi-literate, improved their writing and reading.

By the beginning of 1933 the Soviet Union, he stated, had 485,000 students in its universities, 913,000 in the so-called workers' faculties, and over 1,500,000 in the factory schools.

15 STATES PUT CHECK ON BANK WITHDRAWALS

By Movement to restrict withdrawals of bank deposits spread rapidly through the south and west during the night and today a total of 15 states operated under emergency decrees for holidays or moratoriums.

Mississippi, Oklahoma and California ordered brief bank holidays to give time for legislatures to draw up legislation limiting withdrawals of deposits. Louisiana went further by ordering a three-day holiday for all business.

Executives announcing the new holidays generally blamed conditions in other states for forcing restrictions.

The states in which banks have been authorized to operate on emergency status were Alabama, Kentucky, Tennessee, Michigan, Nevada, Oregon, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Arkansas, West Virginia and Maryland. In Indiana, Illinois and a few other states some banks operated under restrictions with out formal authorization of the state government.

BOETTCHER IS RELEASED BY HIS KIDNAPERS

DENVER, Colo., March 2.—Harrowing experiences of 16 days in a kidnaper's citadel today gave way to the sleep of exhaustion for Charles Boettcher II, Denver millionaire released after payment of $80,000.

He was set free last night in suburban Denver by two men who seized him from the side of his young wife the night of February 12 and drove all night and all day before placing him in a musty cellar, blindfolded with adhesive tape. His release started an unparalleled search marked by gunfire.

Boettcher was taken home to a joyful family reunion as he embraced his wife, an expectant mother while he told his story of being kept ignorant of the fact that he had been released.

Meantime officers fought and lost a gun battle with two men in a small black sedan of the same description as the car in which Boettcher was kidnaped. Fifteen shots were fired at the machine.

Officers of a dozen Northern Colorado towns were pressed into service immediately. The hunt spread. Denver detectives took machine guns to the center of the search near Eaton, Claude Boettcher, father of the victim, said he would spend his entire vast fortune to capture the abductors.

Randolph Thespians Leave for Contest

Five students who compose the one-act play cast from Randolph college, will leave this afternoon for Wichita Falls where they will compete with Gainesville and Wichita Falls college teams for district honors.

Winners of the district tournaments will enter the state meet to be held at Hillsboro April 28. This one-act play contest is sponsored by the Junior College Public Speaking association of Texas, of which Randolph is a member.

The Randolph play, under direction of Theresa Weddington Mc-Merrill, is entitled "Beside Manners," written by Travis McCarty, who plays the leading role, and Miss Iris Renfro the leading lady. Miss Ethel Bales, Miss Noia Gentry and Roy Jennings complete the cast.

LEGION PLAY OPENS TONIGHT AT HI SCHOOL

Dress rehearsal for "Henry's Wedding" went off last night without a hitch and with encouraging indications for a bang-up performance when the big comedy sensation gets under way for a two-day run this evening at 8 o'clock at the high school auditorium.

The play, employing a cast of 125 persons, is said to be a screen from start to finish. The only public wedding of the season will take place as the final act to an evening of outright fun and the scenes depicting this are worth many times the price of 35 cents to be charged for admission. School children, incidentally, will be admitted for 20 cents.

After tickets are purchased seats may be reserved at the Red Front drug store without additional charge.

The play will be presented this evening and tomorrow evening. It is being sponsored by the American Legion.

ROTARY CLUB HEARS SINGERS FROM COMEDY

Duets from the comedy "Henry's Wedding" which will be first presented tonight at the high school auditorium under the auspices of the American Legion, entertained the Rotary club today noon when Program Chairman R. L. Ponsler presented Mrs. W. W. Wallace and Mrs. A. E. Jamison in negro comedy character makeup.

The two sang popular negro songs to the great delight of the club, members of which encored until the women were forced to refuse in order, as they explained, "to save a part of the numbers for the play."

Mrs. Troy Powell, accompanist for the play was at the piano for the program.

The rest of the program was devoted to an interesting "classification" talk by Dr. J. Stuart Pearce, pastor of the First Presbyterian church and the minister-member of the club.

The program was one of the best that the club has enjoyed in a long while.

President J. J. Collins reported that the club last week had an attendance of 93.05 per cent, which represents a considerable improvement.

DEATH OCCURS ABOARD TRAIN THIS MORNING

ROCKY MOUNT, North Carolina, March 2.—Senator Thomas J. Walsh, 73-year-old political veteran who was attorney-general-designate in the new Roosevelt cabinet, died suddenly aboard an Atlantic coast line train today while en route to Washington with his Cuban bride.

Physicians attributed his death to a "heart condition or a hemorrhage of the brain."

Sen. Walsh was taken ill at Daytona Beach, Fla., night before last when he suffered an attack of indigestion, but his condition had not appeared serious.

Mrs. Walsh awakened about 6:30 a. m. today to find the senator lying on the floor of their drawing room unconscious. He apparently had arisen to take medicine or a drink of orange juice.

Mrs. Walsh called train attendants and stopped the train at Washington, only a few miles away. Physicians boarded the train, but found Sen. Walsh already dead.

Mrs. Walsh, widow of a Cuban sugar magnate, who was married to Sen. Walsh last Saturday, became hysterical. She was given sedatives.

Washington looked upon Walsh as one of the strongest members of the incoming cabinet. As a leading figure in the senate's investigation of the Harding administration oil scandals, the somber Montana senator established a reputation as a relentless prosecutor.

ROOSEVELT SADDENED BY WALSH'S DEATH

NEW YORK, March 2.—President-elect Roosevelt saddened by the loss of one of his strongest cabinet members only two days before he takes office, today described the death of Sen. Thomas Walsh as a grievous loss to the entire country as well as to the new administration.

WALLACE AND THE FARM LEADERS.

Pres-Elect Roosevelt named Henry A. Wallace of Iowa as secretary of agriculture. American farm leaders, with one exception, have declared for Wallace, the young man who is said to face the biggest job in the history of American agriculture. Wallace is a young man. He is the publisher of farm journals. His father before him was a publisher of farm journals and secretary of agriculture in the cabinet of two republican presidents. Indeed, his father, Henry C. Wallace, died in office in 1924. His son was the successor of his sire as editor of farm newspapers and now he is the successor of his father as the head of the federal department of agriculture. Young Wallace broke away from the republican party in 1928. He declined to give his support to Herbert Hoover. He cast his ballot for Alfred E. Smith. In 1932 he was one of the organizers of the republican farmers' revolt and Iowa landed in the Roosevelt column.

John A. Simpson of Oklahoma is president of the Farmers' Union. All the other heads of farmers' organizations gave pledges of unlimited support to the Roosevelt choice. John A. Simpson was a bit caustic. Speaking of Wallace, this is what he said: "I don't know much about him except that he is the publisher of a commercial farm publication that is in receivership." Perhaps Simpson had his lightning rod elevated and F. D. missed the Simpson mark.

Give the young man a chance. He is courageous, able, honest, and he believes in marching ahead even if new trails are necessary. Age makes many men fossils. They never get away from the idea that the world is flat. They think as their grandfathers thought, vote as their grandfathers voted, pray as their grandfathers prayed. Wallace and millions of young men and women of America, born into a new age, refuse to remain in the ruts of a civilization that has passed away.

POTATO GROWERS AND THEIR LOSSES.

The federal department of agriculture has estimated that 1,600,000 bushels of potatoes were left in the field to rot, mostly in Minnesota and North Dakota and to a lesser extent in Western states. According to the department bulletin, 260,000,000 bushels were harvested, of which about one-half had been sold Jan. 1. Think of 1,600,000 bushels of food rotting in the ground and millions of Americans, idle Americans, furnished relief by federal and state governments and the community chests of the cities and towns the nation over. Yes, "there is something wrong somewhere."

PAYS TRIBUTE TO PRINTERS' INK.

Printers ink is the power that rules the business world. Printers ink is largely responsible for the success of wide awake business men the world over. Harvey Firestone is the latest to praise the wonderful drawing as well as educational power of advertisements. He is one of the leading rubber magnates of the world. Speaking of newspaper advertising and curtailment of production cost, he declared it helped him conquer the panic of 1929 and pay off a debt of $45,000,000.

Before the committee of 100 in the city of Miami, Firestone said that he owed that sum to banks when he returned from a trip to Europe in 1929 to find business in a slump. First he told his sales managers to go on a vacation. Then he placed full page newspaper advertisements in every city in the United States. What happened? Within two months he sold 18,000,000 tires and reduced his indebtedness to $32.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

WITH RODNEY DUTCHER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON.—The Washington correspondents will never quite get over the way in which Congress, with lightning-like speed, suddenly grabbed the prohibition repeal amendment and hurried it back to the states. Every last man of the journalistic corps had that repeal issue buried so deep that it couldn't possibly be dug up until Mr. Roosevelt and his new Congress came along and resurrected it. So it is only natural that they should now be feeling a deep distrust of Congress in addition to the contempt with which they ordinarily regard it. When a lame duck Congress is interred as a dead duck Congress, it ought, in all decency, to stay dead.

It required a series of flip-flops and fumbles to turn the trick, but the quick passage in both houses appears to demonstrate with startling conviction that the surge of wet sentiment, temporarily quiescent, is sweeping even more powerfully than had been supposed. The wets have great confidence that they can get the states to ratify repeal in short order.

Meanwhile, the dries appear to be more than ever demoralized and seem to have much less confidence than they had at the first of the year. The repeal resolution writes the provisions of the Webb-Kenyon Act, prohibiting transportation of liquor into dry states, into the Constitution, but that was a mere sop to a few fearful members of Congress and not in any sense a concession to the organized dries.

The dries are going to have a big meeting in a Washington church

early in March and undoubtedly will protest, but that doesn't seem to offer much hope.

Edward B. Dunford, the Anti-Saloon League's attorney and its strongest man who will be in charge of any possible legal moves to block repeal, has issued a flaming statement which merely accuses dries of turning wet and of wets turning wetter than he pretended to be. He promised that the people would defeat "traitorous" politicians.

SOME people are actually blaming Senator Borah of Idaho, who is still dry. Borah voted against the Blaine proposal under which the Constitution would have banned the saloon, and the Blaine resolution lost by one vote. If the no-saloon amendment had gone into the repeal resolution the wets wouldn't have voted for it and there wouldn't have been any chance of repeal at this session.

But they might as well blame Democratic Leader Joe Robinson of Arkansas, who last year was roaring to National Chairman John J. Raskob that he couldn't "nail the skull and crossbones of an outlawed liquor traffic" to the Democratic masthead.

Borah voted against the no-saloon provision because he felt the saloon couldn't be suppressed unless liquor was suppressed. But Robinson suddenly went the whole hog for virtually "naked" repeal.

The section prohibiting transportation into dry states is Robinson's work. He compromised with Speaker Garner, who had promised the House wouldn't consider any repeal not absolutely "naked," but Garner had the better of the compromise.

Ladeez and Gen-tlemen---The Next Big Attraction

SPECTACULAR CHARIOT RACE ACROSS 48 STATES

000,000. Next, he cut his expenses and readjusted business. What happened--again. In less than four years he did not owe the banks anything.

Time, a weekly magazine, referring to the Firestone policy, makes this comment: "Managements throughout the land have been reporting to their stockholders how earnings fared during 1932. In many cases it was a question of how little the corporation had lost, in others big profits compared to much bigger ones in 1931. A few concerns were able to boast that, for them, 1932 had been a better year than 1931."

The magazine, speaking of the General Tire and Rubber company, says the company reported a $202,353 profit for the fiscal year ending Nov. 30; in the previous year it had lost $440,653; this year's profit was after all inventory had been written off and despite a 20 per cent drop in sales to $16,679,000 largely attributed not to a slump in volume of tires sold but to the decline in tire prices.

In addition to all this the company had paid back dividends equal to the amount of capital invested. Indeed, it is said to have paid that sum three times over. Men of vision know the value of advertising. They know the value of quality. They know how to come through in days of depression as well as in periods of prosperity. They know that printers ink is the power that rules in the buying world.

HIGHER RATES CUT P. O. RECEIPTS.

Chmn. Mead of the house post office committee has announced he will ask the next congress to reduce the first class postage rates from three to two cents. There is a reason for it. Chmn. Mead holds that the increase from two to three cents will bring $130,000,000 decrease in postage revenue this fiscal year. Mead is positive. He says this is the verdict of history: "The whole history of the postal service shows that attempts to wipe out or reduce the deficit in the postal revenue through increasing the rate of postage on letters has in every instance produced the exact opposite effect."

Through the Editor's Spectacles

By GEORGE

Cecil Lotief did not introduce the "drug store" bill in the Texas legislature, he writes the Daily News. The story, carried by the press services, was erroneous in attributing authorship of the naive measure to the energetic representative from the 107th district. Lon Alsop, who represents a constituency in the piney woods of East Texas was the solon who viewed with alarm the encroachments of the drug stores upon other fields of business and set about doing something about his views.

The bill would restrict drug stores to business more in keeping with the name. Instead of having a small prescription desk and a large soda fountain and lunch counter, the regulated pharmacy would be returned nearer the ideal of the spatula and pill-rolling days when the druggist, a saloon and grave individual in a white shirt front, manufactured his own pills and concocted fluids according to the Rx of the local physician. In those days most of the medicines that came out of the apothecary's shop were magisterial. They were concocted in the druggist's own laboratory, and for that reason, perhaps, the requirements of space for compounding the various elements overshadowed the ancillary enterprises that have invaded the pharmaceutical atmosphere. Today, however, much of the compounding is carried on by corps of skilled chemists who work in factory laboratories and the local druggist is saved the trouble of making up the standard preparations. It does not mean, of course, that his skill and knowledge in drugs is lessened any, for he may be called upon at any moment to prepare a highly specialized remedy while at the same time the necessity of an intimate and extensive knowledge is much increased by virtue of the vast multiplication of official forms and preparations.

On the other hand, perhaps, the contraction in space necessary to carry the stock, and the saving of time in preparation releases him to the opportunity of conducting auxiliary businesses. And who doesn't want to make all the money possible?

Anyway, Cecil did not author the bill and the correction is noted.

The American Legion is feeling chipper over the prospects for the play which will be presented tonight and tomorrow night at the high school building. Tickets are on sale and reservations may be obtained at the Red Front Drug store.

There will be no charge of the reservations. The play, "Henry's Wedding" will be presented by a cast of 125. There will be an audience, at least.

HENDERSON March 2.—Indiscriminate thieves entered the home of Sam Broome, city officer, while he was on duty protecting property of other citizens, and helped themselves to his wardrobe.

While he was lamenting his loss his son came in to report his watch had been stolen during a baseball game at London.

Things are getting pretty bad, Broome declared, when crooks even prey upon officers.

Deduction for Losses Other Than From Sale or Exchange of Stocks and Bonds

Deduction for losses are divided into three classes, and to be allowed must follow closely the wording of the income tax laws. Losses are deductible if incurred (1) in the taxpayer's trade, business, or profession; (2) in any transaction entered into for profit; or (3) from fires, storms, shipwreck, or other casualties, or by theft.

Business losses result, usually, from the purchase and sale of merchandise. Such losses usually are ascertained by means of inventories, which are required whenever in the opinion of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue their use is necessary to determine the income of any taxpayer.

The term "transaction entered into for profit" means any kind of business proposition. For example, a taxpayer purchases an automobile to be used solely for business purposes, and which is sold at a loss. As this is a business proposition from start to finish, the loss is deductible.

But if he had purchased the automobile to be used for pleasure or convenience, the deduction would not be allowed; it was not a transaction entered into for profit.

A loss sustained in the theft of an automobile purchased for pleasure or convenience is deductible, as it falls in class 3. If, because of faulty driving but not of "willful negligence," an automobile maintained for pleasure is damaged, the taxpayer may claim the loss sustained, as it comes within the meaning of the word "casualty." Where damages result from the faulty driving of an automobile of the taxpayer collides, the loss occasioned the taxpayer likewise is deductible.

All losses are deductible only to the extent by which they are not compensated for by insurance or otherwise.

OUTLOOK FOR COTTON TRADE IS UNCERTAIN

AUSTIN, March 2.—Outlook for cotton is clouded by the many uncertainties affecting the industry both from within and without, according to Dr. A. B. Cox, director of the University of Texas Bureau of Business Research. Proposed legislation furnishes ground for a large part of this uncertainty, he said in his monthly analysis of the cotton industry.

"The Smith bill to sell farmers who reduce acreage an appropriate number of bales of government owned or controlled cotton with a guarantee of all the profit and no loss at present prices seems likely to pass," he pointed out. "Congressman Fulmer's bill to provide cotton classing service to farmers in local markets has constructive possibilities if properly worked out. It has passed the house. Legislation along the lines of some sort of domestic allotment arrangement is still being pushed with vigor, though opponents are also active. Various state legislatures are also proposing legislation but it is hardly possible that the separate states can agree on any sort of legislation to curtail acreage.

Solution Is Markets.

"More and more those interested in cotton are coming to realize that the solution of the cotton problem lies in opening up markets for our cotton on the one hand and of lowering our costs of production and distribution of cotton and especially cotton goods on the other. The former involves especially tariffs, war debts, and other hindrances to international trade. The latter involves the organization and operation of the individual farms and regional competition. Both cotton production and manufacturing are shifting from high-cost producing areas to low-cost producing areas. The Southwest and especially Texas stand to gain by these shifts both as cotton producers and manufacturers.

"The past three years have demonstrated clearly that agriculture in most parts of Texas can be built profitably around cotton as the major cash enterprise, supplemented with other cash enterprises, especially to supply local markets.

"It is generally conceded now that there will be an increase in the cotton acreage of the Southwest this year.

"Cotton consumption in the United States is still running ahead of last year's, consumption in January being 471,202 bales, compared with 434,721 bales during January last year. Consumption in the United States since August 1 is 2,811,486 bales, compared with 2,625,745 bales for the same period last year.

"According to Garstide of the New York Cotton Exchange, world consumption of American cotton is also running ahead of last year's. World consumption of all cotton is likewise ahead of last year.

Prices Decline.

"Both cotton yarn and cotton prices declined during January. Cotton declined at a greater rate than yarn so that the spinners margin advanced from 14 in December to an average of 176 for January. The average pence margin increased from 3.86 d in December to 3.97 d in January, though the trend of the pence margin in January was down. The average price of 32 twist yarn in Manchester during January was 9.22 d and the average price of Liverpool spot cotton was 5.25 d. The ratio margin for January last year was exactly the same as this year, 176, but the pence margin was higher, at 4.10 d.

"Total supplies of cotton in the United States on February 1, 1933, were 14,617,000 bales. This is 1,132,000 bales less than the supply on this date in 1932. This supply is still 4,000,000 bales above the previous seven-year average of 10,668,000 bales. The decline of 1,132,000 bales from last year to this year does not represent net decline in world supplies of American cotton, for European port stocks and afloat to Europe are 478,000 bales more than last year. According to these figures and also according to Garstide, the net decline in the supply of American cotton from last year is approximately 500,000 bales.

"Price calculations based on the average demand-supply-price relations obtained during the previous seven years indicate that the price is now too low. The reading from the Bureau price chart indicates a price for New Orleans middling 7-8 inch spot equal to that of February 14 was 6.07 cents. It seems to be apparent that factors other than the usual ones are now having considerable influence on the price of cotton."

Trial Offer At Druggists' On New Mouth-Wash That Saves Half the Usual Costs

It's the year's big news for millions of people who use a mouth-wash—a new antiseptic by makers of Vicks VapoRub—which does everything that any mouth-wash or gargle can and should do—at half the cost!

So that people everywhere could prove for themselves the quality and amazing economy of Vicks Vorozone—five million trial bottles were supplied to druggists below cost—1 a 25c value for 10c! The demand, however, has been enormous and many druggists report that their stocks are exhausted. If your own druggist's supply has gone, do not hesitate to get the regular 10-ounce size of Vicks Antiseptic. It is an even bigger bargain.

Furthermore, every bottle is sold with this positive guarantee. If, after a week's trial, you are not delighted with the quality and the economy of Vicks Antiseptic, return the unused portion and get your money back.

You can use Vicks Antiseptic in your usual way for all your customary uses . . . to counteract bad breath . . . as a daily mouth-wash or gargle.

In addition, Vicks Antiseptic has this unique advantage over other quality antiseptics. Born in a depression year, it is priced accordingly—big 10-ounce bottle at a usual 75c value . . . for only 35c.—Adv.

WHAT HAS HAPPENED Tony Pasqual, newly naturalized citizen, becomes acquainted with Bob Richards after he, Richards, tries to hold him up and gets him a job.

The next morning Tony was summoned to the Police Station to identify the murderer.

There was the usual police line up of men taken for all sorts of crimes, misdemeanors, and vagrancy.

That's the one, he declared. "You're sure he's the man?" "Sure, Captain. I saw him just like I see you."

He fell to the ground and was taken to the hospital unconscious.

The trial of Kid Paris had to be delayed until Tony could testify.

The attorney for the defense tried in every possible manner to shake Tony's testimony.

"Tony Pasqual, you are aware that the testimony you are giving is in contradiction of the testimony of the man I ask you again for the third time, are you sure that that man, he pointed to Kid Paris, fired the shot that killed Richards?"

Kid Paris was convicted on Tony's testimony, and from that day the Italian barber became a power on the East Side.

At a meeting of the big shots in the political club presided over by Big Joe Rierdon, Tony became the chief topic of conversation.

"That guy Tony is everywhere," "They think he's a Mussolini!" "They swear by him."

"Hearing these phrases, Big Joe exclaimed, 'Gah-gah-gah! If Tony's got that much power, what's he doing outside this club?'"

"He's kind of a fanatic. He's a Mike Sullivan started to explain, but Big Joe interrupted him.

"I don't care if he's an acrobat. He's got votes, ain't he? And that's what we need."

"I'll get him," George Pasano, the Italian captain, volunteered.

"Big Joe went with Pasano to Tony's barber shop and arrived at a moment when an inspector was calling the barbers' attention to a violation of the sanitary code.

"Not at all, Tony. You are in my district, ain't you? Then you're my friend and I always serve my friends."

"You're a good man. It's nice," Tony declared.

"Boss, Tony does a lot of good around here, don't you, Tony?" George asked.

"I know," Rierdon said. "He's a fine citizen. Why don't you bring him over to the club, George?"

"Will you go, Tony?" the captain inquired.

STATE FEEDING NEEDY AT COST OF 49 CENTS

Written by GIFFORD PINCHOT, Governor of Pennsylvania.

HARRISBURG, Pa., March 2. — Individuals cared for at community markets maintained by the state emergency relief board are fed a whole week and well fed, for a fraction more than 49 cents.

That is one reason why the state emergency relief board has established these markets. Its dollars go further.

The market at York feeds 12,000 persons a week. If these individuals were buying their own supplies, they would patronize stores over a widely scattered area.

The head of the community market tells grocery jobbers that he wants supplies for 12,000 people, he gets a remarkably low rate — lower in fact than the average grocery store can get.

Volume Aids Even in good times, prices depend on the volume of business.

The people generally are amazed at the surprisingly low cost of food distributed at community markets.

Take the weekly food ration for a child two to eight years old. It includes 3 1/2 quarts of whole milk, four eggs, 1 1/2 pounds of flour, a pound of oatmeal, one-half pound butter or oleomargarine, one-fourth pound of sugar, two pounds of potatoes, one-half pound of cabbage, one pound of carrots, two whole oranges, one-half pound of prunes, an ounce of cod liver oil, three-eighths ounce of yeast, one-fourth pound of Cocoa and 3 1/2 quarts of milk for various cooking purposes.

At each community market a public health nurse is found, who is glad to help housewives and others the way to get everything possible out of the foods, and the way to make the foods more palatable.

Health Nurse In times like these, men and women learn to do things that they did not think of doing in good times.

It is a little hard to endure some of the things that must be endured, but when times get better again, and until men and women get careless again, we will all know more than we ever did about saving money.

F. F. A. JUDGING CONTEST FOR STOCK SHOW

The annual F. F. A. judging contest for the West Texas area will be held at Cisco Saturday in connection with the Eastland County Livestock show, according to tentative arrangements announced by E. H. Arnell, Cisco vocational instructor in charge of the show, which opens today. Vocational boys from 14 schools in seven or eight counties in this immediate area, will participate in the contest.

The annual contest is conducted under the auspices of the West Texas Vocational Teachers association, which F. E. Tutt, Abilene, is president.

Each of the schools is entitled to send three teams to compete in four, possibly five, judging events. This is a district contest, therefore also several individual entries from each school, so that the total number of boys attending is expected to range within 100 and 150. The contests will begin at 10 a. m. Saturday.

The four divisions of the contest will be: dairy judging; livestock judging; plant production judging; and tractor judging. Poultry judging may be added to the list. Entries in the livestock show will be held in the dairy and livestock contests.

Merchandise Awards.

Awards of merchandise for the winners in the various added horse and other divisions of the show have been secured, Mr. Varnell said. There will be four classifications in awards as follows:

- Best team of mules, $5.
- Best team of horses, $5.
- Best pair of horses, either horses or mules, $5.
- A special weight-lifting device will be rigged up for this contest.
- Best stallion, $3.
- Best mare, $3.

The show will be held on the lot formerly occupied by the Wikstrom Lumber company on South D avenue where sheds and pens for livestock storage are being converted into excellent stalls for the animals. The building adjoining and also occupied by feed stores, will also be used. These are being cleaned up and put in condition for the show today.

The Eastland County Rabbit show to be held in conjunction with the livestock show, is to be housed in the lower floor of the telephone exchange on Eighth street. John Garrett, of Cisco, is local superintendent for this show. At a meeting last night pens and cages for the rabbits were prepared, and officials are confident that entries will number anywhere from 150 to 250.

Interest in the livestock show, as a whole, is greater this year than in former years and Mr. Varnell said today that the committee anticipates a much larger list of exhibitors than at any time heretofore.

Both local cattlemen and dairymen are cooperating with a will and most of them will enter their best stock in the various events.

There will, as usual, be a section reserved to the vocational boys whose exhibits will consist principally of lambs, hogs, baby beavers with a few goats. Boys of Ranger have indicated they will bring a number of hogs and at least two baby beavers from their chapter while Rising Star youths interested in vocational work, are expected to participate with entries.

Entertainment features secured for the two-day event include presentation of the high school Lobo band Friday afternoon at 3:30 p. m. by the American Legion Novelty Orchestra Friday evening at 7:30 and a program of boxing Saturday afternoon.

As a part of the city's preparation for the show the main business streets and most of the business houses are being decorated by the Oil Belt Decorating company. James Haynie, manager of the company, said this afternoon that most of the decorations will be up by tomorrow morning, in spite of the inclement weather which hindered the work.

POLL TAX CUT IS VOTED BY TEXAS HOUSE

AUSTIN, March 2.—Poll tax reduction to $1 was voted Tuesday by the house of the Texas legislature. The bill replaces a tax of $1.50 in some parts of the state and $1.75 in others. Payment of the tax before February 1 is a prerequisite to voting.

The part of the present poll tax stricken out is 50 cents for state general fund purposes and 25 cents that counties are permitted to levy for general county purposes.

SCHOOL ASS'N HEAD PREDICTS $8 FUND

AUSTIN, Mar. 2.—Not more than $3 per capita will be available in the state school fund for the next scholastic year, unless new revenue measures are adopted, H. W. Stillwell, Texas state superintendent of schools and president of the Texas State Teachers' association, predicted here.

Stillwell said he based his estimate on reports of the state auditor who estimated an apportionment of $9.67.

"I can't help but feel the auditor is optimistic," Stillwell said. "It is possible the ad valorem tax will not yield more than $6,000,000 next year against more than $11,000,000 last year." The average allotment per capita for the last several years has been $15.

Auditor Recommends Economy in Road Fund by Restriction of New Building

Pointing out that, with the 1933 budget estimate as a basis, collections for the county road and bridge fund this year will have fallen off one-third since 1929, County Auditor W. S. Michael has recommended to the commissioners court of the county that it discontinue the construction of new lateral roads and concrete upon the improvement of only one main road traversing each community.

According to the budget estimate, he points out, there will be this year, after deducting for time warrants, a balance of only $61,530 in the road and bridge fund for division among the four precincts.

His recommendations are contained in the following letter to the court:

Honorable Commissioners Court, Eastland County, Eastland, Texas, Gentlemen:

As the road and bridge fund out of which the expenses of constructing and maintaining our lateral roads are paid, is one of the most important funds of the county, I am submitting for your consideration an analysis of this fund for this year which I believe exhibits a fairly accurate picture of its condition.

As you know, practically all the revenue for this fund is derived from the 15 cents ad valorem tax levy and the motor vehicle license fees. Collections from these two sources for the calendar year 1932 amounted in round numbers to $1,306,000; for 1930, 1,241,000; for 1929, 1,180,000; for 1928, 1,050,000, and the budget estimate for 1933 is $895,000. These figures show that receipts have fallen off more than one-third in the last four years, which means, of course, that a corresponding reduction in expenditures must be made if the fund is to operate on a cash basis.

Out of the estimated receipts for this year time warrants amounting to $24,470 will have to be paid, which will leave a balance of $651,530 to divide among the four commissioners' precincts to pay on their debts incurred for road machinery and for other purposes, and to expend on roads. Using the budget estimate of collections as a basis and taking it for granted that the $41,530 will be divided equally among the four precincts as has been the practice for the past several years, the following statement shows the amount each precinct will have to expend on its roads this year.

Precinct No. 1:
Cash balance, January 1, 1933	$ 284.86
From road and bridge fund	$15,382.00
Total Funds Available	$15,666.86
Deduct machinery warrants, deficiency warrants and other claims maturing this year	18,637.18
Balance available for roads, NONE
Precinct No. 2:
Cash balance, January 1, 1933	$ 1,841.36
From road and bridge fund	15,382.00
Total funds available	$17,223.36
Deduct machinery warrants, deficiency warrants and other claims maturing this year	NONE
Balance available for roads	$17,223.36
Precinct No. 3:
Cash balance, January 1, 1933	$ 958.15
From road and bridge fund	15,382.00
Total funds available	$16,340.15
Deduct machinery warrants, deficiency warrants and other claims maturing this year	8,172.30
Balance available for roads	$ 8,167.85
Precinct No. 4:
Cash balance, January 1, 1933	NONE
From road and bridge fund	15,382.00
Total fund available	$15,382.00
Deduct road machinery warrants, deficiency warrants and other claims maturing this year	6,055.28
Balance available for roads	$ 9,326.72

The records in this office show that there are 225 miles of lateral roads in Precinct No. 1; 220 in Precinct number 2; 290 in precinct number 3, and 200 in Precinct No. 4, a total in the county of 935 miles.

SMITH WARNS OF INFLATION OF CURRENCY

WASHINGTON, March 2.—Alfred committee Tuesday that currency inflation was only "a shot in the arm" and would injure rather than help the country.

Smith favored recognition of the Soviet government of Russia declaring "There is no use trading with them under cover."

He also urged the enactment of a one per cent manufacturers' sales tax to help balance the budget, lower interest rates on Reconstruction Finance corporation loans and a public bond issue to finance the building of public roads.

Peering through gold-rimmed spectacles at the committee members who are seeking the causes and cures for the depression, the former New York governor said, "I'm against cheapening the dollar by reducing the amount of gold in it or the issuance of any kind of fiat money."

"Federal highway money is the most efficient aid for unemployment. You get the quickest action that way."

T. W. GREGORY DIES SUNDAY AT NEW YORK

NEW YORK, Mar. 2.—Pneumonia that developed from a cold he contracted while travelling here from his home in Houston, Texas, proved fatal Sunday to Thomas Watt Gregory, 72, United States attorney-general in the Wilson administration.

Funeral services were held in Houston Tuesday. Burial took place Wednesday afternoon at Austin. Gregory had lived quietly in Houston since 1924 when he left Washington after a stay of 11 years.

Small of stature and dapper in appearance, he was an unobtrusive figure. While he took no active part in state or local politics, his council was eagerly sought by men desirous of public office.

He was a close friend of Col. Edward M. House, another Texan who was Woodrow Wilson's friend and advisor.

Texas U. Patron.

Gregory's benefactions to the University of Texas, where he obtained his law degree, were well known, although no estimate has been placed on them. He was an enthusiastic supporter of that school's athletic organizations particularly its football teams.

The Gregory gymnasium at Austin was named in his honor.

Gregory was born Nov. 6, 1861, in Crawfordsville, Miss., the son of Francis Robert and Mary Cornelia Watt Gregory. His father, an infantry captain in a Mississippi regiment of the Confederate army, died in the service in 1862.

After attending private schools in Mississippi, Gregory entered Southern Presbyterian University at Clarksville, Tenn., where he was graduated in 1883. He studied law a year at University of Virginia, later entering the University of Texas law school at Austin and receiving his LL. D. degree there in 1885.

Declined Appointments.

Upon graduation he was admitted to the Texas bar and began practicing law in Austin. He served a year as an assistant city attorney of Austin. He declined appointments as assistant attorney general of Texas and as district judge.

In 1900 he formed the firm of Gregory & Batts, which was employed by the state to prosecute various corporations for violations of the anti-trust statutes. Eight years later he was appointed assistant U. S. attorney general in charge of investigation and prosecution of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad for violation of the Sherman Act. With this appointment began his Washington career.

President Wilson appointed Gregory attorney general of the United States on Aug. 29, 1914, and he served in the cabinet until March 4, 1919. His record as attorney general during the difficult years of the World War was one of distinction.

Following his retirement from the cabinet he was a member of President Wilson's second industrial conference, in 1919 and 1920.

He was a regent of the University of Texas from 1899 to 1907, and was a trustee of Austin Presbyterian Theological Seminary. He was the author of several pamphlets, including "The University and the State," "Economic and Industrial Conditions in 1919 and 1920."

He was married Feb. 22, 1893, to Miss Julia Nell of Austin.

Surviving besides Mrs. Gregory are two daughters, Mrs. George S. Heyer and Miss Cornelia Gregory, and two sons, Joseph and Thomas Watt, Jr.

J. M. LITTLE IS BURIED AT 4 P. M. TUESDAY

J. M. Little, 77, since 1880 a resident of Eastland county, died at 7:30 Monday night after a long illness. A broken hip, sustained Tuesday morning of last week when he attempted to arise from his bed, finally gravitated his illness.

Funeral services were held from the First Christian church Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock with interment in Oakwood cemetery. The Rev. E. L. Miley, pastor of the church, conducted the services and Green Funeral home was in charge of burial arrangements.

Grandsons of Mr. Little were pallbearers.

Mr. Little was born in Arkansas on May 17, 1855, making him only a few weeks short of 78 years of age at the time of his death. He came to Eastland county from Arkansas in 1880. In Arkansas he was married to Miss Sallie Wynn, who survives him. Three daughters and five sons also survive.

His last occupation, before retirement several years ago, was public weigher for Cisco.

COMBINATION TAX OPPOSED BY FERGUSONS

AUSTIN, March 2.—Gov. Miriam A. Ferguson and her husband have announced that the administration is opposed to a combination sales tax and income tax law.

Former Gov. James E. Ferguson added that any attempt to combine the two would probably result in complications.

No view on whether the Texas referendum should be delayed was expressed other than the remark that if Texas waits a couple of years people will be going to Louisiana to get their beer.

MADDOO WOULD CREATE SINGLE BANK SYSTEM

DALLAS, March 2.—Stabilization of the credit structure of the nation by the creation of one great unified banking system for the United States was advocated here Tuesday by William Gibbs Maddoe, senator-elect of California.

Maddoe said he will introduce a bill in congress providing for the conversion of all state banks into the central system. The move, he explained, would avoid complexity and confusion. He predicted such a system would restore business confidence. The tall Californian was en route by airplane to Washington, D. C.

Roosevelt Names Walsh to Cabinet

HYDE PARK, N. Y., March 2.—President-elect Roosevelt Tuesday named Thomas J. Walsh, of Montana, as attorney-general in the new cabinet.

DRYS TO ASK 30 ...

DALLAS, March 2.—The Central committee of the United Forces for Prohibition in Texas has agreed to ask for submission by the legislature of the national repeal amendment, but in an election separate from other matters.

W. N. Wiggins, recording secretary of the forces, announced Wednesday the decision to meet the challenge of wets for a popular vote on the repeal issue was reached in a committee conference.

The drays want the election held in November, 1933 rather than in the primaries of 1934, Wiggins said.

The announcement marks a distinct change in the attitude of the forces which were organized last year to fight repeal or modification in any form.

Wiggins said this opposition will be continued as far as resubmission of the state prohibition amendment is concerned until there has been a vote on the national amendment.

"Ready to Meet Them."

"The wets have been saying the people ought to have a chance to vote on the prohibition issue," Wiggins said. "So we are now ready to meet them on the issue, provided the question is referred directly to the people and the election held entirely separate from other matters."

"We want the question settled once for all in Texas on the single issue of prohibition."

The committee also outlined a plan for nominating wet and dry delegates to a repeal convention and for their election. There would be 150 delegates elected on a basis of legislative districts.

DRY FORCES WIN TILT IN HOUSE

AUSTIN, March 1.—Dry won in a first test of strength in the Texas house of representatives this afternoon when that body refused to set consideration of the ratification convention bill as a special order of business tomorrow. The vote was 56 to 68.

Today's house session was marked by final passage of the new gasoline tax bill. It retains the four cent gallon state tax, imposes a penitentiary sentence for evasion and authorizes the comptroller to use a percentage of the tax to enforce collection.

EASTLAND CO. TAX-PAYERS TO SAVE $700,000

AUSTIN, March 2.—Eastland county taxpayers will save more than $700,000 on their outstanding road bonds through the refunding act of the legislature last year, according to preliminary figures just compiled by the state highway department.

Gasoline tax revenues are providing the money for this act, beginning this year. The law sets aside one cent of the four cent gas tax, are more than $7,000,000 a year. Each month's portion of this income is to be divided in the proper ratio and paid against the maturities of each county for that month.

The ratio is to be set by the new Board of County and District Road Indebtedness, Gibb Gilchrist, its chairman, said that while payments already have been begun, the amounts thus far are too scattered to bear any real significance.

The highway department's records show that Eastland county has contributed $778,714.96 to the construction of designated state highways and bridges since the department was established in 1917. County officials have given state officials an estimate which covers a longer period, totalling nearly $3,000,000. The amount finally approved will be somewhere between the two.

The total expenditures of this type by all the counties of the state, since 1917, total $90,345,267 according to highway department records. Estimates of county officials are still larger but highway officials believe the ultimate total will be about $110,000,000. On the basis now set by the legislature, from 12 to 15 years would be required to pay it from the gasoline tax.

The Texas Good Roads association, which secured these figures from the department, pointed out that in addition to the one cent tax which goes to county bonds another cent goes to the state school fund, leaving but two cents of the tax for its primary purpose—the construction and maintenance of roads.

"Surely the motorists of Texas," the association's statement said, "are entitled to the remaining one-half of this special tax for highways and highways alone, unimpaired by any further diversions. It will provide barely enough money to carry on the highway program on a much-reduced scale."

EARLY CALL OF NEW CONGRESS IS EXPECTED

WASHINGTON, March 2.—President-elect Roosevelt is expected by democratic leaders here to call congress into a special session late this month in order to begin work promptly upon various emergency measures.

The date originally fixed was April 17. The session may now begin about March 29, it was learned today by the United Press.

WASHINGTON'S CALM TURNS INTO BUSTLE

WASHINGTON, March 2.—Washington's calm has turned into bustle as the nation prepared for the inauguration of a new president.

Democrats have waited 12 long years for a chance to look at Washington bedecked in honor of their candidate. Now that their chance was here this is what they saw:

One hundred thousand tourists shouldering their way into hotels in a vain search for rooms.

Miles of white washed pine stands which made the heart of Washington look like a county fair.

Hundreds of prosperous-looking individuals hurrying down hotel corridors with paper-wrapped bottles under their arms. (Note: Rye whiskey was selling at $4 a half gallon.)

Detectives watching all incoming trains for gentlemen with possible anarchistic tendencies.

Red, white and blue bunting waving in the breeze, but a little bedraggled from rain. The republican weatherman predicted snow for Saturday.

Mrs. Mary Thomson of Putnam is spending a few days here.

CHAPTER I

JANET HILL'S gray eyes raised and lowered hastily. Intently she studied the typewritten sheet that lay before her and intently—a little more severely than necessary—her fingers tapped out the words on the keys.

"It is to be remembered that the purchasing public—"

A sudden, impatient gesture and the typing ceased. Janet suppressed an exclamation. She had copied the words twice and the page was ruined. Oh, well—what was the use of pretending? No matter how busily at work she might seem there was no stopping the dark figure heading toward the entrance of the office.

The dark figure was that of a young man. He had gained the threshold now and paused.

"Mr. Hamilton around?" Janet looked up. She smiled and the smile was that of a serene, thoroughly businesslike secretary as she answered. "He just stepped out, Mr. Cressy. I think he's in Mr. Chambers' office. If you want to see him—"

The young man in the doorway raised a hand in protest. "No, no—it isn't important. As a matter of fact it was you I wanted to talk to, not Hamilton. That is, if you can spare a moment or two."

"Why, of course."

The young man slumped against the opposite desk, half-seated himself. He must have been in the later 20s—an average looking young man with sandy hair and agreeable features, a trim heavy build, a trim nose well-groomed. He said with a grin, "Seem to be awfully busy in here this morning."

"Not especially. I mean there's always plenty to do."

"But don't you ever think of anything except work?"

Janet moved uncomfortably. It was going to be the same thing all over again! For three consecutive Saturdays and on several evenings in between she had told Howard Cressy she couldn't accept his invitations for luncheon or dinner. No, not for a movie or a concert or a drive, either. She had used all the excuses from previous engagements to a headache, she couldn't buy a new excuse. Well, she would just use one of the old ones. Why couldn't Howard Cressy take a hint?

"Mr. Hamilton seems to be able to keep everyone busy," she countered.

"But you don't work Saturday afternoons, do you? You don't have to work tonight. How about taking a little drive out on the Madison road? There's a nice place—"

"The girl interrupted. 'I'm sorry, Mr. Cressy. I won't be able to go. I'm—' I'm having a guest this evening and I'll have to go home and cook dinner."

"So you can cook! Beauty and brains and the domestic arts! But aren't you going to invite me to one of those dinner parties? Don't I ever get a break, Janet?"

She was saved from making an answer. A rattle of papers, the sound of footsteps and Bruce Hamilton—broad-shouldered, tweed clad, his eyes framed in dark spectacles—appeared in the doorway. Bruce Hamilton looked like a college professor. Only when he dictated letters in a brisk, staccato voice when he barked commands into the telephone or when he flared into stormy arguments did the suddenness become the shrewd, tireless and dominating advertising manager of Every Home Magazine. Hamilton's dark hair was mixed with gray but the eyes beneath that pepper and salt thatch were young and challenging. Hamilton walked with a light step. Evidently the conference had come off as he wanted it.

The younger man had risen to his feet. He said quickly, "Oh, Mr. Hamilton, I've just had an answer from Fairbanks. He likes the idea of the contest. Think it will be a big circulation builder and wants to go in for it strong. Here's his letter if you'd like to read it."

"Thanks," Hamilton took the letter. He had half a dozen sheets of yellow paper on Janet's desk and said, "Miss Hill, I've made some revisions in that copy. Sorry to ask you to work overtime but it's best to get off in the first mail. Make two carbons, please. And will you start it at once and let the letters and that Bailey memorandum wait?"

"Yes, Mr. Hamilton."

"Now then, Cressy—"

The advertising manager sank back in his desk chair and looked up at the young promotion director. With Hamilton's arrival Cressy had suddenly become all business. The two men talked of figures and mailing schedules, the new contest and the circular going out next month. Their voices rose and fell, Cressy enthusiastic, Hamilton agreeing or arguing more calmly.

JANET was not listening. She had glanced at her wristwatch as her employer entered. Twenty friendly, confident way. They were practical eyes and the broad forehead above them was practical, too. Janet had cheeks and a throat like cream and her lips were the dark, rich hue of ripe cherries. It was unusual to see such creamy skin with gray eyes but any artist would have told you it was exactly right with the waving, light brown hair that glistened copper in the sunlight. Right, too, was the well-molded chin, the nose and generous lips.

And then, just when one had catalogued Janet's features and decided that here was a girl who was attractive and pleasant and sensible, one saw the freckles. Almost a dozen of them scattered across the bridge of that practical nose and across the practical cheeks. A dozen small but perfectly visible freckles of the same golden-brown as Janet's hair. Somehow the freckles discounted the matter-of-factness of that businesslike young face. They were likely to make you wonder how Janet Hill looked when she smiled. They made you want to wait and see.

SHE was 23 years old, 5 feet 5 inches tall and for two years she had taken dictation, typed letters, made appointments, executed errands and done a hundred and one other secretarial duties in the offices of Every Home Magazine. All this is necessary to a complete picture of Janet Hill but all this is, after all, quite minor. The one important thing to know about Janet was that she was engaged to Rolf Carlyle.

That, at least, was the way Janet looked at it.

They had been engaged for almost a year, yet the mention of Rolf's name was enough to set her heart beating a swift, exciting tattoo. That warming and quickening that made Janet wonder if all the world understood how she felt about Rolf—and blush at the thought.

It was being engaged to Rolf that made Howard Cressy's continued attentions so annoying. It was being engaged to Rolf that made working after hours—especially on Saturday—distasteful. But it was being engaged to Rolf, too, that had made the world a paradise Janet Hill had never imagined it could be, that made the once ordinary city of Lancaster suddenly the earth's garden spot, that made Janet Hill's hitherto commonplace existence a state of ecstasy beyond anything she had ever dreamed.

Oh, yes, it was like that—being engaged to Rolf. Janet was engaged and she was in love.

She and Rolf didn't talk so much about when they were going to be married. They didn't talk about it because it was the one thing that shadowed their dreamy happiness. They wanted to be married and they couldn't because they didn't have the money. That was why Janet sat in Bruce Hamilton's office from 9 o'clock until 5—and often long afterward—five days a week and for half days on Saturdays when she would so much rather have been bustling about a blue and white kitchen of her own. Give up her job to cook and wash dishes and mend and iron clothes? Indeed she would! She'd have been glad to.

For Janet and Rolf there couldn't be a blue and white kitchen, a one-and-a-half bungalow or even a tiny, cheap, third floor apartment. They couldn't be married because the combined total of their savings accounts was $214 short of $500.

CHAPTER I A

FIVE hundred dollars that total must be before Janet and Rolf could go to the courthouse and then to the church and solemnly exchange promises to love and cherish one another until death. It might not seem a large sum to a great many people. To Janet and Rolf it was huge, indeed. It was also the absolute minimum on which a matrimonial venture might safely be launched.

Janet knew this because she had read it in a magazine. It was Janet who had insisted the $500 must be in the bank before their marriage. There had been arguments. Dozens of them. Rolf had wanted to hunt up a preacher the very next day after that precious, insane bus ride on an April night when, with a dozen other passengers about them, he had somehow got out the all-important question to a girl whose whisper was inaudible but whose star-lit eyes said "Yes."

She had loved him for those arguments but of course she couldn't agree. Why, Rolf was earning $35 a week at the Atlas Advertising Agency and her own salary was $20. Rolf had a life insurance policy and boasted blithely of the $16.75 in his wallet—$3 of which he owed his roommate. With paper and pencils and a great many highly relevant interruptions they argued and added and subtracted—and arrived, at Janet's original statement. There must be $500 in the bank!

It wasn't, she pointed out, what the $500 would buy; it was what it stood for. Janet knew quite a lot about poverty. She knew Daisy McCullough who had worked in the Every Home office until, gayly and irresponsibly, she had married—and been divorced six months later. She knew Mrs. Frisbie whose husband was an invalid and whose little girl couldn't see. She had known Joe Platz, too, well enough to know a little faint when she read how they found his body in the river. Joe Junior had been buried the week before. Joe Platz had lost his job and couldn't face being a burden to his wife.

YES, Janet knew enough of poverty so that all of Rolf's pleading couldn't win her from her insistence that they must work and save before they could be married. Five hundred dollars was the lowest possible figure.

At first they had assured each other the $500 could be saved easily. In six months at the most! Rolf had made a budget of his $35 and showed Janet how to make one. Somehow at the end of the month the budget was there but the money wasn't. They had had wonderful times together but theater tickets and dinners and gardenias for Janet's coat collar had more than taken the sum Rolf had set down under the heading, "Savings."

So there were more sessions with pencil and paper, more adding and subtracting. Out of all this had come further arguments and then, gradually, the savings accounts had begun to swell. Instead of theater parties and fresh flowers and dancing at the Crystal Slipper there were long walks now and cafeteria meals and visits to the neighborhood movie house where tickets cost only 15 cents.

Rolf chafed at all this—but always came around to agree the object was worth it. He wasn't nearly as firm as Janet. Some of the other girls in the Every Home office thought Janet had been growing just a little shabby. They nodded significantly and agreed that a girl had to keep up her looks; even if she was pretty she was a fool to neglect herself and anybody could tell that old black hat was last winter's. Fresh collar and cuff sets didn't conceal the fact that Janet wore the same black frock almost every day.

If Janet Hill had heard these comments she would have laughed. How could anyone compare old hats and worn frocks with the glory of knowing that Rolf loved her?

The special reason she had wanted to leave the office at 12:30 that Saturday was because it was Rolf's birthday. He didn't know she was aware of this but what a celebration she had planned! Dinner, cooked on the two-burner gas stove by Janet herself. There would be a thick steak, mushrooms, creamed asparagus and salad with Roquefort dressing. The dessert had been made early that morning and was waiting in the ice chest. There would be flowers for the table and tall white candles. Janet would have to buy them at the dime store on her way home.

SHE had to shop, too, for the fountain pen and pencil set that was to be her birthday gift to Rolf. Janet had decided that was what the gift should be three weeks ago when he had complained about losing his last pen. There was the shopping to do at the grocery store too, the tidying up of the single room that, with the couch cover properly disguised the day bed, became a suitable place to receive callers. There were really a dozen demands on Janet's time that afternoon and there she was typing Bruce Hamilton's revised copy and his correspondence!

Howard Cressy had disappeared. Janet, intent on her work, was aware when her employer arose and left the office and that half an hour later he returned. That meant he had lunched. Hamilton drove all those who worked for him but he drove himself even more strenuously. He would probably remain at his desk throughout the afternoon.

"Finished?" He looked up and smiled as she laid the letters on his desk.

"All but the memorandum."

"Haven't had lunch, have you?" Janet said that she had not. Her employer rested his arms on his desk.

"Leave the memo until Monday," Hamilton suggested indulgently. "It can wait. Been keeping you overtime too much lately."

"I don't mind—" Janet began, but the half-hearted offer was silenced. Hamilton was in one of those rare moods when he realized that those who worked with him were human beings instead of machines. At such times he was kindness and consideration itself.

"It's a fine afternoon," he said. "Take a walk—get out in the park—treat yourself to a real holiday!"

She smiled and agreed, though of course she had no idea of doing any such a thing. The birthday party for Rolf would give her more pleasure than any outing could.

Janet put paper and pencils away, cleared her desk and drew the oilcloth cover over her typewriter. A moment later, wearing the year-old felt hat, her coat over her arm, Janet paused in the doorway.

"Goodbye until Monday," she said, smiling.

Two minutes later she emerged through the street door into the early afternoon traffic. A fine afternoon it was, as Mr. Hamilton had said. Late February sunshine shone down warmly. Across the street where there had been a patch of snow the earth was moist now and dark. The wind, cool and refreshing, struck Janet's cheeks and brought a delicate surge of color into the creamy whiteness. The girl drew a deep breath, swung into the procession heading east.

A BLOCK in the distance she could see the tower of the Security Building, the hands on its clock pointing to 40 minutes after one.

It had been nice of Mr. Hamilton to let her leave without finishing the memorandum. It gave her 20 minutes more than she had expected to have.

Suddenly the thought of lunching at the corner drug store became distasteful. Janet knew the menu there on Saturdays: pea soup, the sandwich "specials"—ham salad, pimento cheese, and egg-and-lettuce—and two kinds of pie. Yes, indeed. She could reject every item on that menu. And the coffee was never served with real cream.

"I've time to go to Rooney's," she decided hastily. "It's after the noon rush and there'll be quick service. Besides it's on the way to Hayslips."

Hayslips' jewelry store was the oldest in Lancaster and carried the finest stock. It was at Hayslips' Janet had determined to buy the pen and pencil set for Rolf. It wasn't really an extravagance—or maybe it was but surely it was justified! Rolf's present had to be the best.

At Rooney's the food was appetizing and inexpensive. The luxury of a quiet table and a few minutes' rest was too great a temptation to resist. So, instead of entering the drug store, Janet Hill turned at the corner.

It was that turn that changed everything.

Two blocks beyond—with the cafeteria only half a block further—was the Brewster Hotel. In Lancaster the Brewster had all the prestige of a Ritz-Carlton or a Mayflower. Janet had never crossed the threshold but frequently she had made reservations there for Mr. Hamilton. His wealthiest business associates stopped there when they came to Lancaster. Janet knew that the smartest luncheon and dinner parties, the ones described in the columns of the Gazette and the Times, were always at the Brewster.

"Meet me at the Brewster Coffee Shop," Mr. Hamilton would say casually in a telephone conversation. It would always be at least two hours before he returned from such a luncheon.

The Coffee Shop had a street entrance on the side of the building Janet was approaching. The name "Brewster Coffee Shop" was lettered neatly on a small glass sign that at night was illuminated. Janet, busy with her thoughts, was not a dozen yards from that sign when suddenly she looked up. Her heart seemed to stop beating. She caught her breath.

A girl in a dark fur coat was entering the Coffee Shop. She was slender, rather small, and she wore a red hat. Very pretty the girl looked, very gay and charming. She had turned and was smiling up at her escort. The young man beside her was Rolf Carlyle.

Uses Jazz to Put Smiles in Religion

KANSAS CITY, Mo., March 1.—The hot blaring of a jazz band mingled with the solemn notes of such old favorite hymns as "I Love to Tell the Story" in the Community church.

On the spot usually occupied by the pulpit, a young man, and woman beat out furious tap dances. "Heat Waves" was the predominant theme song. It was a composition of "Red" Nichols, orchestra director at a downtown hotel. It purports to combine the screaming of brakes, grinding of street cars, and swish of mops and other sounds of the heart of the downtown district.

The church presentation was sponsored by the pastor of the Community Church, Dr. Burris A. Jenkins. It was his effort, he said, to "bring radiance back into religion."

A member of Nichols' orchestra rendered his unique version of "Sylvia." It was followed by the orchestra's subdued playing of "I Love to Tell the Story" with the audience joining in the singing.

Briefly discussing the innovation, Dr. Jenkins said he would like to see religion filled with laughter.

Evidences of Advanced Civilization Are Found in Relics of Ancient Texas Race

AUSTIN, March 2.—Long before Coronado blazed his trail across the Staked Plains and north into Kansas, there flourished in the Texas Panhandle a advanced civilization which knew of communal houses, agricultural experimentation and the art of mining jewelry.

Floyd V. Studer, Amarillo anthropologist who has studied ruins in the Panhandle for 23 years, declares that a race of people different from the Pueblos inhabited the region from about 1250 to 1450, A. D.

He has found indications of systematic municipal life and of rural development fostered by advanced creative minds. He believes the people were nomadic Indians who settled on the fertile land along the spring-fed creeks in the Canadian River valley between the present state of New Mexico and Oklahoma.

Ruins of two communal dwellings of the civilization have attracted Studer in his research. One known as the A-C ruin is located about 45 miles northeast of Amarillo on Antelope creek. It contains 29 rooms, is 163 feet long and 50 feet wide. The other, known as the B-T-K ruin, is a mile south of the Canadian River at Tascosa. It has 33 rooms, is 120 feet long and 60 feet wide.

Life in these civic centers was unlike that in the pueblo cities, Studer declares. Distinctive pottery found in the ruins disqualified an earlier belief that this civilization was an eastern expansion of the Pueblos. Highly polished bone beads made of shells imported from the Pacific coast, turquoise pendants, necklaces, inlaid turquoise objects and other ornaments found in the dwellings testify to the nomadic habit and artistic temperament of the tribe.

Did You Ever Stop to Think?

That advertising is educational. From the ads you can get information as to new ideas and inventions which will lighten labor and make life easier and happier.

Electric power is the greatest servant of the people; it enters into every business and home, making life more healthful and longer.

The electric wizards are finding new uses for it daily. Electric power is washing clothes, used to cook, to heat, to cool the air to freeze water, it lights the world and is used to benefit mankind in a thousand ways.

Electric appliances are very necessary these modern days. They are used in the home, office, factory, all kinds of places of business and on the farm. They are time and money savers.

Electric power is the most helpful helpmate the world has ever known. Take the little electric wire away and we would go back to the days of long ago.

In the home the housewife is the one who makes life worth living. She is the essential part in the running of the home and life; she is the true partner in every sense of the word. Without her the work of the world could not be done. Her day is long and taken up with work and worry make her work easier and give her the more leisure hours she deserves.

Electrical appliances can be bought at a price that any one can afford, and their cost of operation is small.

This is an age of wonders. Every day new and more ingenious appliances are made available to us. Every advertisement should be read carefully and sellers of people can better know the many labor saving devices they have to offer. It always pays to read the advertisements!

HEADQUARTERS BUILDING OF WOODMAN CIRCLE COMPLETED

Members of Cisco grove No. 356 of the Woodman Circle have been invited to witness the dedication of the society's national headquarters building at Omaha, Neb. June 3 and 4. Mrs. Jeanie Willard, Denison, national vice president; Mrs. Dora Alexander Talley, Omaha, formerly of Garland, national secretary; Mrs. Henrietta A. Thomas, Fort Worth, junior past national president; and Miss Bessie Dolan, Taylor member of the national legislative committee, will take official part in the two-day dedication ceremonies.

Mrs. Della E. Fappington, Fort Worth, manager of this district, and other local officers and members are interested in the dedication. It is expected that the dedication will draw more than a thousand members from all parts of the country, including Texas state officers, field workers, drill teams and members. This event will mark the third anniversary of the dedication of the society's Home for Aged Members and Orphan children at Sherman.

There is an eternal fitness about the plan and setting of the building, in that it has a beautifully landscaped lawn to the north and east and a sheltered garden between the wings at the south. The general ensemble is somehow suggestive of femininity.

The building, 110 by 150 feet, with wings 42 feet wide, is ideally planned for light, comfort and efficiency in accommodating the more than 200 headquarters employees. Artistic simplicity is the keynote of the interior finishing, decorations, and furniture. A pneumatic tube system serves the various departments in the transmission of documents.

Of modified Georgian architecture the building is of pink and buff Kentucky Minn. stone, the slabs measuring three feet by 18 inches and numbering 6,000 in all. The quality of the stone is such that it took the workmen one hour to cut two inches, and to form the design on the flat plasters which gracefully trim and set off the steel window casements, it was necessary to go over it many, many times.

Refined in every detail, the new Woodman Circle headquarters building stands, a beacon light to the future of womanhood, a monument to its past accomplishments.

DON'T QUOTE ME

WASHINGTON, March 1. — Samuel M. Stone is president of the Colt Arms company, one of America's largest manufacturers of machine guns, revolvers and ammunition.

Yet he nearly jumped out of his shoes when a photographer's bulb flashed — noisily — in the House Foreign Affairs Committee room.

"Don't be scared," admonished Sen. Bloom, committee member. "It doesn't hurt to be shot with one of those."

The disregard for convention exhibited by Senator Huey P. Long again is brought out in a story reaching here from New Orleans, where he has been taking part in an election investigation.

A prominent official of a Louisiana airplane manufacturing concern asked the "Kingfish" to dinner at his New Orleans home.

At dinner hour a number of guests

had assembled, dressed in tuxedos or evening gowns. Decidedly tardy, the Senator arrived in golf knickers, open sack coat and teeless shirt.

Seated, the "Kingfish" punctuated his conversation by pounding fiercely upon the dinner table. So hard did he pound, in fact, that a bowl of nuts before him flew up, scattering the nuts in the Senator's face.

Before all had eaten Huey decided he ought to go home; so he rose and left precipitately.

His host said: "Senator, you haven't said goodbye to my mother" whose house it was.

"Oh, that's all right," said the "Kingfish" flinging himself through the door, "tell her goodbye for me yourself."

A Massachusetts leather factory has altered its machinery and is producing jig-saw puzzles, thus solving the puzzle of employment for 100 persons for whom the jig was up, according to a report to the commerce department.

GLENDALE, Cal., March 2. — David G. Burton was treated at police hospital for a nine-inch gash on his head. His bed, Burton said, had folded up while he was asleep.

HOUSTON, March 2. — The joint convention of the National Oil Mill Superintendents Association and the National Oil Mill Manufacturers and Supply association will be held here May 24-26. About 300 delegates are expected to attend.

SEN. THOMAS WALSH DIES SUDDENLY

Annual Eastland County Livestock Show Opens Friday

EVENT DRAWS LARGE LIST OF EXHIBITS

With a list of entries larger than has appeared in any previous show, the Eastland County Livestock show will open at 10 o'clock tomorrow in the former Wilkinson Lumber company site and the brick building adjoining.

Judging will start at 10 o'clock when all exhibits are expected to be in place. John Simpson, agricultural agent for the Texas and Pacific railroad, will be the judge. Livestock is being concentrated at the exposition ground today. Stalls have been arranged in the sheds where lumber was once stored. Although built for a different purpose these sheds, cleaned and remodelled by a corps of workmen during the week, are excellent for the purpose and will show the stock to good advantage.

New Department
A new department has been added to the show this year, showing mules and horses. Prizes of merchandise were secured. In listing these awards yesterday mention of a prize for the best saddle horse was inadvertently omitted. This award will be $3 in merchandise.

In addition to the exhibits a number of amusement features will add to the attractiveness of the show. These include boxing matches Saturday afternoon and music by both the Lobo band and the American Legion Novelty orchestra Friday afternoon and evening.

"Ducking Stool"
A "ducking stool" concession will be operated by the vocational class of the high school. It was announced by E. H. Varnell, Cisco vocational instructor and director of the show. There will also be other concessions to be carried on by the boys during the show.

Another feature will be the district F. F. A. judging contest, when boys from 14 schools over an area of several counties will compete under the auspices of the West Texas Vocational Teachers association. Between 100 and 150 boys are due to be here for this which will include five distinct contests as follows:

Dairy: cattle; hogs, sheep and beef cattle; plant production; soil conservation, and poultry.

The contest will begin at 8:30 Saturday morning, with the coaches meeting at the chamber of commerce to prepare the questions for contest in each division. Actual judging will start at 10 o'clock at the livestock show where stock on display will be used.

Five students from each school may judge in each division and no student may enter more than one division. Three of the five will be designated a team with the remaining two judging as alternates who may compete for individual honors, according to rules announced by F. E. Tutt, of Abilene, president of the association.

Basket Ball Finals
Finals in the basket ball contest conducted among vocational students by the association will be played at the Cisco high school gymnasium during Saturday evening.

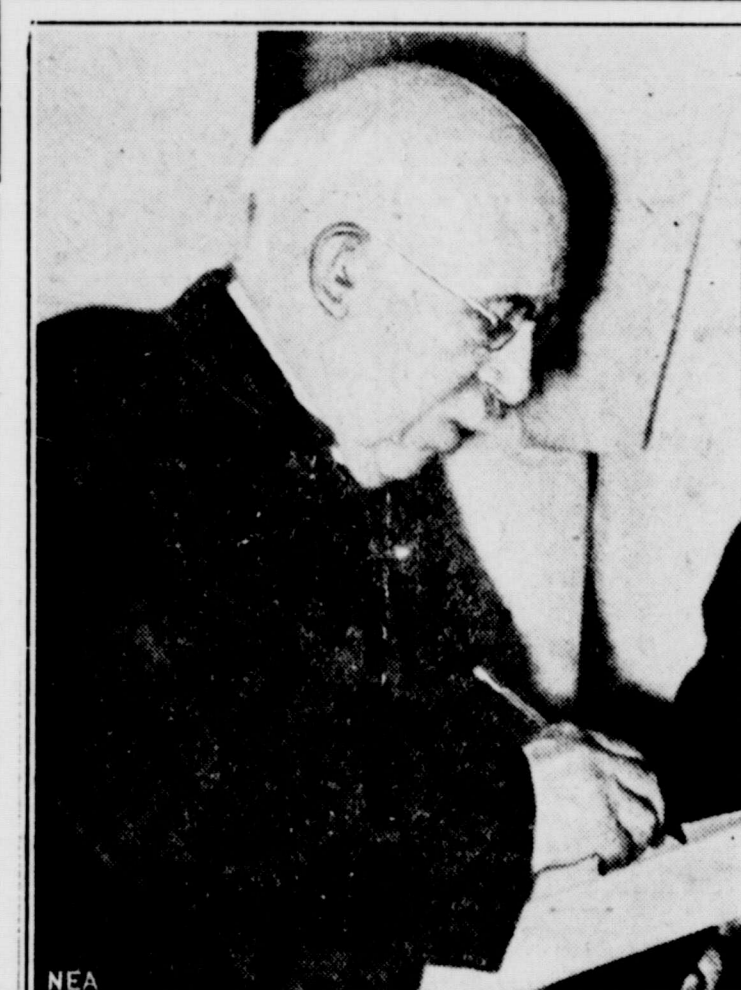

New awards secured for distribution among winners at the livestock show were announced today by Mr. Varnell as follows:

Texas company, five gallons of motor oil; Gulf Refining company, five gallons of motor oil; Sinclair company, five gallons of motor oil; Continental Oil company, five gallons of motor oil, and White Star Refining company, 55 gallons of kerosene (winner to bring container).

The proceeds from the operation of the ducking stool will be used to send judging teams of the Cisco vocational classes to the state judging contest at A. & M. college in April. Mr. Varnell said.

The business streets of the city were gay with bunting today in preparation for the show. Given the fair weather that is in prospect, large number of visitors from all over the county and immediate area are expected here for the two days that the exposition will be in progress.

Preparing Vigorous Dry Fight

Determined on even greater activity, to prevent 36 states from accepting the prohibition repeal resolution, Canon William Sheafe Chase, noted dry leader from New York, is shown above as he took notes on the vote as the House adopted the Senate repeal resolution.

DAILY NEWS REQUESTS FREE SEED FOR NEEDY GARDENERS

The Daily News is making an effort to secure distribution of assortments of free garden seed among farmers and urbanites here this spring. A letter written to Cong. Thomas L. Blanton by W. H. LaRoque, manager of the paper, requested that he take up this matter and secure quantities of free seed from some source to be sent here for distribution. The News has agreed to undertake the distribution and to give the necessary publicity. It is suggested that about 2,000 assortments would be required to supply those unable otherwise to be provided with the seed.

The Red Cross, which made such a distribution last year, will not do so this year, Cong. Blanton was informed in the letter. Mr. Blanton has taken the matter up with the Red Cross, with the assurance that he would assist in every way possible. He enclosed a copy of a letter which he wrote to W. M. Baxter, Jr., of the National Red Cross transmitting Mr. LaRoque's letter and urging that he give the request favorable consideration.

The News has not yet heard from the Red Cross but it is hoped that an appropriation will be made through which those unable to obtain seed this year may be supplied. Such a distribution would do much toward relieving distress by enabling

WASHINGTON, (Washington Co.) Tex., March 2.—On the site where the declaration of Texas Independence was written, a group of Texans gathered today to plan an exposition as a proper and fitting celebration of the centennial of the declaration.

Today's meeting was the first of a series that will be held in each state senatorial district by the Texas centennial committee to carry out its educational and organization plans for the celebration in 1936 of Texas nativity.

More specifically, today's meeting was to dedicate a new auditorium erected on the spot where a group of brave and half-frozen patriots met in open session March 2, 1836, in 39 degrees below zero weather, to defy the Mexican government, to denounce the fall of the Alamo and to declare independence. This little town of 300 persons,

BRITAIN OUT OF RACE FOR CISCO MAYOR

The race for the mayoralty of Cisco today had narrowed down to three persons. Birt Britain, former county commissioner who announced as a candidate several weeks ago has formally withdrawn from the contest with the announcement that the demands of his farm and other business prevent his making an active campaign.

This leaves in the field only Mayor J. T. Berry, J. B. Blitch and Crigler Paschall.

In a statement to the News this morning Mr. Britain said that the demands of his farm and other personal affairs are occupying so much of his time that he can neither conduct an active campaign nor be assured of giving to the affairs of the city, if elected, the attention that they deserve. He expressed his thanks for the support that has been given him during the period that he has been in the race as well as his regret that he could not continue as a candidate.

Mr. Britain entered the campaign shortly after the first of the year upon the insistence of many of his friends. Prior to that announcement he had served three terms as county commissioner from the fourth precinct, in which Cisco is located.

5-YEAR PLAN HELPS EDUCATE 29 MILLIONS

By EUGENE LYONS
United Press Staff Correspondent
MOSCOW, March 2.—Twenty-nine million Soviet citizens learned to read and write during the four and a quarter years of the first Five Year Plan, bringing the nation's literacy to 90 per cent, where it was only 33 per cent before.

This is cited as one of the outstanding victories on the "cultural front" summarized recently by the Commissar of Education, Andrew Bobnov, in an address at the session of the Soviet Zkz, or parliament.

Bobnov claimed that the cultural phase of the Five Year Plan has been over-fulfilled twice. He based the claim on the fact that expenditures for education and other cultural work scheduled at 7,628,000 rubles, had in fact, amounted to 15,500,000 rubles.

The excessive investment is not in itself a proof of achievement, since it is in part explained by currency inflation and high costs. It is a fact, however, that all the quantitative aspects of "culture" exceed original plans.

Where it was planned to make 17,000,000 people literate, some 29,000,000 were reached, he said, and 17,700,000 others, who were semiliterate, improved their writing and reading.

By the beginning of 1933 the Soviet Union, he stated, had 485,000 students in its universities, 913,000 in the so-called workers' faculties, and over 1,500,000 in the factory schools.

FOUR JURORS ARE SELECTED FOR THOMPSON-ALLEN TRIAL

ANGLETON, March 2.—Clyde Thompson, west Texas "thrill killer," and Barney Allen, convicted bandit, went to trial today on a charge of slaying Tommy Reis, Galveston hoodlum, at the state penal farm where all were confined.

Frank Judkins, Eastland attorney, retained by Thompson, and A. R. Ricks, Allen's court-appointed attorney, declined to reveal defense plans. Pleas of self defense were expected to be entered.

County Attorney Marvin Higgins has announced he will demand the death penalty for the men. A venire of 200 has been summoned. Four jurors had been selected by noon.

According to statements already obtained Thompson stabbed Reis with a crude bird while Allen held his arms behind him. The men said they wrested the dirk from Reis who had threatened to kill them.

BOETTCHER IS RELEASED BY HIS KIDNAPERS

DENVER, Colo., March 2.—Harrowing experiences of 16 days in a kidnaper's citadel today gave way to the sleep of exhaustion for Charles Boettcher II, Denver millionaire released after payment of $60,000.

He was set free last night in suburban Denver by two men who seized him from the side of his young wife the night of February 12 and drove all night and all day before placing him in a musty cellar, blindfolded with adhesive tape. His release started an unparalleled search marked by gunfire.

Boettcher was taken home to a joyful family reunion as he embraced his wife, an expectant mother while he told his story of being kept ignorant of the fact that he had been released.

Randolph Thespians Leave for Contest

Five students who compose the one-act play cast from Randolph college, will leave this afternoon for Wichita Falls where they will compete with Gainesville and Wichita Falls college teams for district honors.

Winners of the district tournament will enter the state meet to be held at Hillsboro April 28. This one-act play contest is sponsored by the Junior College Public Speaking association of Texas, of which Randolph is a member.

The Randolph play, under direction of Theresa Weddington Mc-Merrill, is entitled "Bedside Manners," written by Travis McCarty, who plays the leading role, and Miss Ethel Reles, Miss Nola Gentry and Roy Jennings complete the cast.

LEGION PLAY OPENS TONIGHT AT HI SCHOOL

Dress rehearsal for "Henry's Wedding" went off last night without a hitch and with encouraging indications for a bang-up performance when the big comedy sensation gets under way for a two-day run this evening at 8 o'clock at the high school auditorium.

The play, employing a cast of 125 persons, is said to be a scream from start to finish. The only public wedding of the season will take place as the final act to an evening of outright fun and the scenes depicting this are worth many times the price of 35 cents to be charged for admission. School children, incidentally, will be admitted for 20 cents.

After tickets are purchased seats may be reserved at the Red Front drug store without additional charge.

The play will be presented this evening and tomorrow evening. It is being sponsored by the American Legion.

ROTARY CLUB HEARS SINGERS FROM COMEDY

Diets from the comedy "Henry's Wedding" which will be first presented tonight at the high school auditorium under the auspices of the American Legion, entertained the Rotary club today noon when presented Mrs. W. W. Wallace and Mrs. A. E. Jamison in negro comedy character makeup.

The two sang popular negro songs to the great delight of the club, members of which encore until the women were forced to refuse in order, as they explained, to save a part of the numbers for the play.

Mrs. Troy Powell, accompanist for the play was at the piano for the program.

The rest of the program was devoted to an interesting "classification" talk by Dr. J. Stuart Pearce, pastor of the First Presbyterian church and the minister-member of the club.

President J. J. Collins reported that the club last week had an attendance of 93.05 per cent, which represents a considerable improvement.

DEATH OCCURS ABOARD TRAIN THIS MORNING

ROCKY MOUNT, North Carolina, March 2.—Senator Thomas J. Walsh, 73-year-old political veteran who was attorney-general-designate in the new Roosevelt cabinet, died suddenly aboard an Atlantic coast line train today while en route to Washington with his Cuban bride.

Physicians attributed his death to a "heart condition" or a hemorrhage of the brain.

Sen. Walsh was taken ill at Daytona Beach, Fla., night before last when he suffered an attack of indigestion, but his condition had not appeared serious.

Mrs. Walsh awakened about 6:30 a. m. today to find the senator lying on the floor of their drawing room unconscious. He apparently had arisen to take medicine or a drink of orange juice.

Mrs. Walsh called train attendants and stopped the train at Willson, only a few miles away. Physicians boarded the train, but found Sen. Walsh already dead.

Mrs. Walsh, widow of a Cuban sugar magnate, who was married to Sen. Walsh last Saturday, became hysterical. She was given sedatives.

Washington looked upon Walsh as one of the strongest members of the incoming cabinet. As a leading figure in the senate's investigation of the Harding administration oil scandals, the somber Montana senator established a reputation as a relentless prosecutor.

ROOSEVELT SADDENED BY WALSH'S DEATH
NEW YORK, March 2.—President-elect Roosevelt saddened by the loss of one of his strongest cabinet members only two days before he takes office, today described the death of Sen. Thomas Walsh as a grievous loss to the entire country as well as to the new administration.

"He was one of my oldest and most trusted friends," Mr. Roosevelt said. "To fill his place in the circle of my friends will be impossible."

SENATE ADJOURNS OUT OF RESPECT
WASHINGTON, March 2.—The senate adjourned immediately after convening today out of respect for Sen. Walsh. Important emergency legislation was laid aside until 9 a. m. tomorrow.

WTCC Convention to Be Held May 11-13
BIG SPRING, March 2.—Dates for the West Texas Chamber of Commerce convention here were announced today as May 11, 12 and 13.

President Wilbur C. Hawk, Amarillo, and Manager D. A. Bandeen, of Stamford, concurred with local chamber of commerce directors in setting the dates. Maury Hopkins, of Fairview, was named today as convention manager.

WALLACE AND THE FARM LEADERS.

Pres-Elect Roosevelt named Henry A. Wallace of Iowa as secretary of agriculture. American farm leaders, with one exception, have declared for Wallace, the young man who is said to face the biggest job in the history of American agriculture. Wallace is a young man. He is the publisher of farm journals. His father before him was a publisher of farm journals and secretary of agriculture in the cabinet of two republican presidents. Indeed, his father, Henry C. Wallace, died in office in 1924. His son was the successor of his sire as editor of farm newspapers and now he is the successor of his father as the head of the federal department of agriculture. Young Wallace broke away from the republican party in 1928. He declined to give his support to Herbert Hoover. He cast his ballot for Alfred E. Smith. In 1932 he was one of the organizers of the republican farmers' revolt and Iowa landed in the Roosevelt column.

John A. Simpson of Oklahoma is president of the Farmers' Union. All the other heads of farmers' organizations gave pledges of unlimited support to the Roosevelt choice. John A. Simpson was a bit caustic. Speaking of Wallace, this is what he said: "I don't know much about him except that he is the publisher of a commercial farm publication that is in receivership." Perhaps Simpson had his lightning rod elevated and F. D. missed the Simpson mark.

Give the young man a chance. He is courageous, able, honest, and he believes in marching ahead even if new trails are necessary. Age makes many men fossils. They never get away from the idea that the world is flat. They think as their grandfathers thought, vote as their grandfathers voted, pray as their grandfathers prayed. Wallace and millions of young men and women of America, born into a new age, refuse to remain in the ruts of a civilization that has passed away.

POTATO GROWERS AND THEIR LOSSES.

The federal department of agriculture has estimated that 1,600,000 bushels of potatoes were left in the field to rot, mostly in Minnesota and North Dakota and to a lesser extent in Western states. According to the department bulletin, 250,000,000 bushels were harvested, of which about one-half had been sold Jan. 1. Think of 1,600,000 bushels of food rotting in the ground and millions of Americans, idle Americans, furnished relief by federal and state governments and the community chests of the cities and towns the nation over. Yes, "there is something wrong somewhere."

PAYS TRIBUTE TO PRINTERS' INK.

Printers ink is the power that rules the business world. Printers ink is largely responsible for the success of wide awake business men the world over. Harvey Firestone is the latest to praise the wonderful drawing as well as educational power of advertisements. He is one of the leading rubber magnates of the world. Speaking of newspaper advertising and curtailment of production cost, he declared it helped him conquer the panic of 1920 and pay off a debt of $45,000,000.

Before the committee of 100 in the city of Miami, Firestone said that he owed that sum to banks when he returned from a trip to Europe in 1920 to find business in a slump. First he told his sales managers to go on a vacation. Then he placed full page newspaper advertisements in every city in the United States. What happened? Within two months he sold 18,000,000 tires and reduced his indebtedness to $32.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

WITH RODNEY DUTCHER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON.—The Washington correspondents will never quite get over the way in which Congress, with lightning-like speed, suddenly grabbed the prohibition repeal amendment and hurried it back to the states.
Every last man of the journalistic corps had that repeal issue buried so deep that it couldn't possibly be dug up until Mr. Roosevelt and his new Congress came along and resurrected it. So it is only natural that they should now be feeling a deep distrust of Congress in addition to the contempt with which they ordinarily regard it. When a lame duck Congress is interred as a dead duck Congress, it ought, in all decency, to stay dead.

It required a series of flip-flops and tumbles to turn the trick, but the quick passage in both houses appears to demonstrate with startling conviction that the surge of wet sentiment, temporarily quiescent, is sweeping even more powerfully than had been supposed. The wets have great confidence that they can get the states to ratify repeal in short order.

Meanwhile, the dries appear to be more than ever demoralized, and seem to have much less confidence than they had at the first of the year. The repeal resolution writes the provisions of the Webb-Kenyon Act, prohibiting transportation of liquor into dry states, into the Constitution, but that was a mere sop to a few fearful members of Congress and not in any sense a concession to the organized dries.

The dries are going to have a big meeting in a Washington church

early in March and undoubtedly will protest, but that doesn't seem to offer much hope.

Edward H. Dunford, the Anti-Saloon League's attorney and its strongest man who will be in charge of any possible legal moves to block repeal, has issued a flaming statement which merely accuses dries of turning wet and of wets turning wetter than they pretended to be. He promised that the people would defeat "traitorous" politicians.

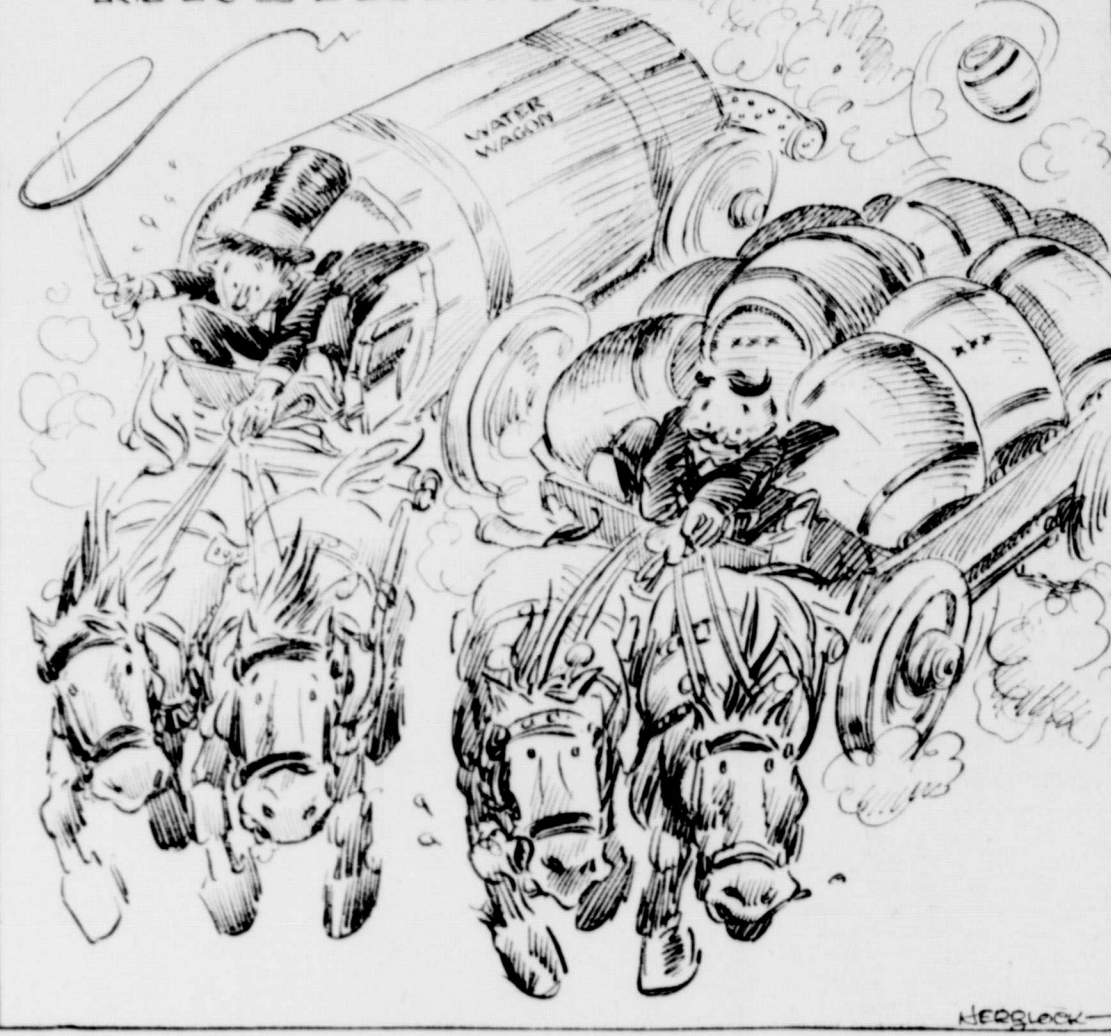

SOME people are actually blaming Senator Borah of Idaho, who is still dry. Borah voted against the Blaine proposal under which the Constitution would have banned the saloon, and the Blaine resolution lost by one vote. If the no-saloon amendment had gone into the repeal resolution the wets wouldn't have voted for it and there wouldn't have been any chance of repeal at this session.

But they might as well blame Democratic Leader Joe Robinson of Arkansas, who last year was roaring to National Chairman John J. Raskob that he couldn't "nail the skull and crossbones of an outlawed liquor traffic" to the Democratic masthead.

Borah voted against the no-saloon provision because he felt the saloon couldn't be suppressed unless liquor was suppressed, but Robinson suddenly went the whole hog for virtually "naked" repeal.
The section prohibiting transportation into dry states is Robinson's work. He compromised with Speaker Garner, who had promised the House wouldn't consider any repeal not absolutely "naked," but Garner had the better of the compromise.

Ladeez and Gen-tlemen---The Next Big Attraction

SPECTACULAR CHARIOT RACE ACROSS 48 STATES

000,000. Next, he cut his expenses and readjusted business. What happened—again. In less than four years he did not owe the banks anything.

Time, a weekly magazine, referring to the Firestone policy, makes this comment: "Managements throughout the land have been reporting to their stockholders how earnings fared during 1932. In many cases it was a question of how little the corporation had lost, in others big profits compared to much bigger ones in 1931. A few concerns were able to boast that, for them, 1932 had been a better year than 1931."

The magazine, speaking of the General Tire and Rubber company, says the company reported a $202,353 profit for the fiscal year ending Nov. 30; in the previous year it had lost $140,053; this year's profit was after all inventory had been written off and despite a 20 per cent drop in sales to $16,679,000 largely attributed not to a slump in volume of tires sold but to the decline in tire prices.

In addition to all this the company had paid back dividends equal to the amount of capital invested. Indeed, it is said to have paid that sum three times over. Men of vision know the value of advertising. They know the value of quality. They know how to come through in days of depression as well as in periods of prosperity. They know that printers ink is the power that rules in the buying world.

HIGHER RATES CUT P. O. RECEIPTS.

Chmn. Mead of the house post office committee has announced he will ask the next congress to reduce the first class postage rates from three to two cents. There is a reason for it. Chmn. Mead holds that the increase from two to three cents will bring $130,000,000 decrease in postage revenue this fiscal year. Mead is positive. He says this is the verdict of history: "The whole history of the postal service shows that attempts to wipe out or reduce the deficit in the postal revenue through increasing the rate of postage on letters has in every instance produced the exact opposite effect."

Through the Editor's Spectacles

By GEORGE

Cecil Lotief did not introduce the "drug store" bill in the Texas legislature, he writes the Daily News. The story, carried by the press services, was erroneous in attributing authorship of the naive measure to the energetic representative from the 107th district. Lon Alsop, who represents a constituency in the piney woods of East Texas was the sealer who viewed with alarm the encroachments of the drug stores upon other fields of business and sat about doing something about his views.

The bill would restrict drug stores to business more in keeping with the name. Instead of having a small prescription desk and a large soda fountain and lunch counter, the regulated pharmacy would be returned nearer the ideal of the straitlaced and pill-rolling days when the druggist, a sallow and grave individual in a white shirt front, manufactured his own pills and concocted fluids according to the Rx of the local physician. In those days most of the medicines that came out of the apothecary's shop were magisterial. They were concocted in the druggist's own laboratory, and for that reason, perhaps, the requirements of space for compounding the various elements overshadowed the ancillary enterprises that have invaded the pharmaceutical atmosphere. Today, however, much of the compounding is carried on by corps of skilled chemists who work in factory laboratories and the local druggist is saved the trouble of making up the standard preparations. It does not mean, of course, that his skill and knowledge in drugs is lessened any, for he may be called upon at any moment to prepare a highly specialized remedy, while at the same time the necessity of an intimate and extensive knowledge is much increased by virtue of the vast multiplication of official forms and preparations.

On the other hand, perhaps, the contraction in space necessary to carry the stock, and the saving of time in preparation releases him to the opportunity of conducting auxiliary businesses. And who doesn't want to make all the money possible?
Anyway, Cecil did not author the bill and the correction is noted.
The American Legion is feeling chipper over the prospects for the play which will be presented tonight and tomorrow night at the high school building. Tickets are on sale and reservations may be obtained at the Red Front Drug store. There will be no charge of the reservations.

The play, "Henry's Wedding" will be presented by a cast of 125. There will be an audience, at least.

Officer Robbed as He Protects Others

HENDERSON March 2.—Indiscriminate thieves entered the home of Sam Broome, city officer, while he was on duty protecting property of other citizens, and helped themselves to his wardrobe.

While he was lamenting his loss his son came in to report his watch had been stolen during a baseball game at London.

Things are getting pretty bad, Broome declared, when crooks even prey upon officers.

Deduction for Losses Other Than From Sale or Exchange of Stocks and Bonds

Deduction for losses are divided into three classes, and to be allowed must follow closely the wording of the income tax laws. Losses are deductible if incurred (1) in the taxpayer's trade, business, or profession; (2) in any transaction entered into for profit; or (3) from fires, storms, shipwreck, or other casualties, or by theft.

Business losses result, usually, from the purchase and sale of merchandise. Such losses usually are ascertained by means of inventories, which are required whenever in the opinion of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue their use is necessary to determine the income of any taxpayer.
The term "transaction entered into for profit" means any kind of business proposition. For example, a taxpayer purchases an automobile to be used solely for business purposes, and which is sold at a loss. As this is a business proposition from start to finish, the loss is deductible. But if he had purchased the automobile to be used for pleasure or convenience, the deduction would not be allowed; it was not a transaction entered into for profit.

A loss sustained in the theft of an automobile purchased for pleasure or convenience is deductible, as it falls in class 3. If, because of faulty driving but not of "willful negligence," an automobile maintained for pleasure is damaged, the taxpayer may claim the loss sustained, as it comes within the meaning of the word "casualty." Where damages result from the faulty driving of an automobile of the taxpayer collides, the loss occasioned the taxpayer likewise is deductible.

All losses are deductible only to the extent by which they are not compensated for by insurance or otherwise.

OUTLOOK FOR COTTON TRADE IS UNCERTAIN

AUSTIN, March 2.—Outlook for cotton is gloomy by the many uncertainties affecting the industry from within and without, according to Dr. A. B. Cox, director of the University of Texas Bureau of Business Research. Proposed legislation furnishes ground for a large part of this uncertainty, he said in his monthly analysis of the cotton industry.

The Smith bill to sell farmers to reduce acreage an appropriate number of bales of government owned or controlled cotton with a guarantee of all the profits and no loss at present prices seems likely to pass," he pointed out. "Congressman Fulmer's bill to provide cotton classing service to farmers in local markets has constructive possibilities if properly worked out. It has passed the house. Legislation along the lines of some sort of domestic allotment arrangement is being pushed with vigor, though opponents are also active. Various state legislatures are also proposing legislation but it is hardly possible that the separate states can agree on any sort of legislation to curtail acreage.

Solution Is Markets.

More and more those interested in cotton are coming to realize that the solution of the cotton problem lies in opening up markets for our cotton on the one hand and of lowering our costs of production and distribution of cotton and especially cotton goods on the other. The former involves, especially tariffs, the debts and other matters to international trade. The latter involves the organization and operation of the individual farms and regional competition. Both cotton production and manufacturing are shifting from high-cost producing areas to low-cost producing areas. The Southwest and especially Texas stand to gain by these shifts both as cotton producers and manufacturers.

The past three years have demonstrated clearly that agriculture in most parts of Texas can be built profitably around cotton as the main cash enterprise, supplemented with other cash enterprises, especially to supply local markets.

It is generally conceded now that there will be an increase in the cotton acreage of the Southwest this year.

Cotton consumption in the United States is still running ahead of last year's consumption in January being 471,202 bales, compared with 472,121 bales during January last year. Consumption in the United States since August 1 is 2,811,486 bales, compared with 2,625,745 bales for the same period last year.

According to Garstide of the New York Cotton Exchange, world consumption of American cotton is also running ahead of last year's. World consumption of all cotton is likewise ahead of last year.

Prices Decline.

Both cotton yarn and cotton prices declined during January. Cotton declined at a greater rate than yarn so that the spinners margin advanced from 174 in December to an average of 176 for January. The average pence margin increased from 3.86 d in December to 3.97 d in January, though the trend of the pence margin in January was down. The average price of 32 twist yarn in Manchester during January was 22 d and the average price of Liverpool spot cotton was 5.25 d. The pence margin for January last year was exactly the same as this year, 5.6, but the pence margin was high at 4.19 d.

Total supplies of cotton in the United States on February 1, 1933, were 14,617,000 bales. This is 1,132,000 bales less than the supply on the same date in 1932. This supply is all 4,000,000 bales above the previous seven-year average of 10,668,000 bales. The decline of 32 twist yarn from last year to this year does not represent net decline in world supplies of American cotton, for European port stocks and afloat to Europe are 478,000 bales more than last year. According to these figures and also according to Garstide, net decline in the supply of American cotton from last year is approximately 500,000 bales.

Price calculations based on the average demand-supply-price relations obtained during the previous seven years indicate that the price now is too low. The reading from the Bureau price chart indicates a price for New Orleans midling 7-8 which spot cotton of better than 6.75 cents. The actual price on February 1 was 6.07 cents. It seems to be apparent that factors other than the usual ones are now having considerable influence on the price of cotton.

STATE FEEDING NEEDY AT COST OF 49 CENTS

Written by GIFFORD PINCHOT, Governor of Pennsylvania.

HARRISBURG, Pa., March 2. — Individuals cared for at community markets maintained by the state emergency relief board are fed a whole week and well fed, for a fraction more than 49 cents.

That is one reason why the state emergency relief board has established these markets. Its dollars go further.

The market at York feeds 12,000 persons a week. If these individuals were buying their own supplies, they would patronize stores over a wide scattered area. Each grocer would insist on a profit. But when the head of the community market tells a grocery jobber that he wants supplies for 12,000 people, he gets a remarkably low rate—lower in fact than the average grocery store can get.

Volume Aids Even in good times, prices depend on the volume of business. The more you buy the less it costs. And these days manufacturers are glad to take orders for shoes, or groceries or clothing at cost.

The people generally are amazed at the surprisingly low cost of food distributed at community markets.

Take the weekly food ration for a child two to eight years old. It includes 3 1-2 quarts of whole milk, four eggs, 1 1-2 pounds of flour a pound of oatmeal, one-half pound butter or oleomargarine, one-fourth pound of sugar, two pounds of potatoes, one-half pound of cabbage, one pound of carrots, two whole oranges, one-half pound of prunes, an ounce of cod liver oil, three-eighths ounce of yeast, one-fourth pound of Cocoa and 3 1-2 quarts of milk for various cooking purposes. The total cost is about 49 cents. The average cost per day is a trifle more than seven cents.

Health Nurse At each community market a public health nurse is found, who is glad to tell housewives and others the way to get everything possible out of the foods, and the way to make the foods more palatable. In times like these, men and women learn to do things that they did not think of doing in good times. It is a little hard to endure some of the things that must be endured, but when times get better again, and until men and women get careless again, we will all know more than we ever did about saving money.

WAS GOAT MEAT SPRINGFIELD, Mo., March 2. — Guests at a dinner given by Tillman Nichols, superintendent of Springfield parks, praised the "venison" he served. Nicholson accepted the praise and after the dinner explained that instead of deer meat the guests had eaten goat.

OBEY the LAW

LEO CARRILLO in the role of DICKIE MOORE - LOIS WILSON

Serialization by arrangement with COLUMBIA PICTURES

WHAT HAS HAPPENED Tony Pasqual, newly naturalized citizen with a passion for his adopted country, becomes acquainted with Bob Richards after he, Richards, tries to hold him up and gets him a job. While Bob and Tony are talking in the Italian's barber shop, the mother of a young boy runs in crying that she has been robbed. The men put two and two together and visit a gambling house where they think they will find the boy, and the stolen funds. In the course of their trying to get the boy away, Bob Richards is killed. Tony breaks the news to Grace Chesler, Bob's widowed sister.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY The next morning Tony was summoned to the Police Station to identify the murderer. At the door, a sleek looking gorilla emerged from the crowd and handed him a note. Tony opened it quickly and read, "Testify against him and you die." Immediately the Italian crumpled the paper and threw it in the man's face. Then he walked stately into the building.

There was the usual police line up of men taken for all sorts of crimes, misdemeanors, and vagrancy. Tony and the Captain looked them over.

"Do you recognize any of those men as the one who did the shooting?" The Captain asked, as Tony scrutinized the faces before him. He stopped before the pudgy little Italian looking fellow.

"That's the one," he declared. "You're sure he's the man?" "Sure, Captain. I saw him just like I see you."

Tony had hardly left the door of the police station when he was greeted with a fusillade of shots.

Tony rose on his cot and pointed his finger at the defendant. (Based by Leo Carrillo and Lois Wilson)

He fell to the ground and was taken to the hospital unconscious. The trial of Kid Paris had to be delayed until Tony could testify. As soon as he was able, the pudgy little Italian insisted upon being taken to the court on his cot.

The attorney for the defense tried in every possible manner to shake Tony's testimony.

"Tony Pasqual, you are aware that the testimony you are giving now is endangering the life of a man. I ask you again for the third time, are you sure that that man, he pointed to Kid Paris, fired the shot that killed Richards?"

Tony rose on his cot and pointed his finger at the defendant. "That's the man who killed my friend Richards."

Kid Paris was convicted on Tony's testimony, and from that day the Italian barber became a power on the East Side. He helped men, who were afraid, and he was feared in the cause of the right and down-trodden. He fought their battles, joined their clubs, and got play-acting for the children. It was no wonder that in a short time the political boss became alarmed at his rise, and determined that the best thing would be to rally the Italian to his side.

At a meeting of the big shots in the political club at the local district political club presided over by Big Joe Rierdon, Tony became the chief topic of conversation.

"That guy Tony is everywhere," "They think he's a Mussolini," "They swear by him, and he's a—"

Hearing these phrases, Big Joe exclaimed, "Gah—gah—gah! If Tony's not that much power, what's he doing outside this club?"

"He's kind of a fanatic. He's a—"

Mike Sullivan started to explain, but Big Joe interrupted him.

"He's got votes, ain't he? And that's what we need."

"I'll get him," George Pasano, the Italian captain, volunteered.

Big Joe went with Pasano to Tony's barber shop and arrived at a moment when an inspector was calling the barbers attention to a violation of the sanitary code. Rierdon said that he would take the responsibility of the infraction.

"Thanks, Mr. Joe Rierdon," said Tony, after the inspector had left.

"Not at all, Tony. You are in my district, ain't you? Then you're my friend, and I always serve my friends."

"You're a good man. It's nice," Tony declared.

"Boss, Tony does a lot of good around here, don't you, Tony?" George asked.

"I know," Rierdon said. "He's a fine citizen. Why don't you bring him over to the club, George?"

Auditor Recommends Economy in Road Fund by Restriction of New Building

Pointing out that, with the 1933 budget estimate as a basis, collections for the county road and bridge fund this year will have fallen off one-third since 1929...

According to the budget estimate, he points out, there will be this year, after deducting the court warrants, a balance of only $61,530 in the road and bridge fund...

His recommendations are contained in the following letter to the court: Honorable Commissioners Court, Eastland County, Eastland, Texas.

As the road and bridge fund out of which the expenses of constructing and maintaining our lateral roads are paid, is one of the most important funds of the county...

As you know, practically all the revenue for this fund is derived from the 15 cents ad valorem tax levied on the motor vehicle license fees...

Out of the estimated receipts for this year warrants amounting to $24,470 will have to be paid, which will leave a balance of $61,530 to divide among the four commissioners' precincts...

Respectfully submitted, W. S. MICHAEL, County Auditor.

T. W. GREGORY DIES SUNDAY AT NEW YORK

NEW YORK, Mar. 2.—Pneumonia that developed from a cold he contracted while traveling here from his home in Houston, Texas, proved fatal Sunday to Thomas Watt Gregory, 72, United States attorney-general in the Wilson administration.

Funeral services were held in Houston Tuesday. Burial took place Wednesday afternoon at Austin. Gregory had lived quietly in Houston since 1924 when he left Washington after a stay of 11 years.

Appearance, he was an unobtrusive figure. While he took no active part in state or local politics, his counsel was eagerly sought by many of his political friends.

He was a close friend of Col. Edward M. House, another Texan who was Woodrow Wilson's friend and advisor.

Gregory's benefactions to the University of Texas were well known. He received his law degree, well known, although no estimate has been placed on them.

After attending private schools in Mississippi, Gregory entered Southwestern Presbyterian University at Clarksville, Tenn., where he was graduated in 1883.

Upon graduation he was admitted to the Texas bar and began practicing law in Austin. He served a year as an assistant city attorney of Austin.

He was appointed assistant U. S. attorney general in charge of investigation and prosecution of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad for violation of the Sherman Act.

Following his retirement from the cabinet he was a member of President Wilson's second industrial conference, in 1919 and 1920.

He was a regent of the University of Texas from 1899 to 1907, and was a trustee of Austin Presbyterian Theological Seminary.

He was married Feb. 22, 1893, to Miss Julia Nalle of Austin. Surviving besides Mrs. Gregory are two daughters, Mrs. George S. Hoyer and Miss Cornelia Gregory, and two sons, Joseph and Thomas Watt, Jr.

J. M. LITTLE IS BURIED AT 4 P. M. TUESDAY

J. M. Little, 77, since 1880 a resident of Eastland county, died at 7:30 Monday night after a long illness. A broken hip, sustained Tuesday morning of last week when he attempted to arise from his bed, aggravated his illness.

Funeral services were held from the First Christian church Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock with interment in Oakwood cemetery. The Rev. E. L. Mitty, pastor of the church, conducted the services and Green Funeral home was in charge of burial arrangements.

Mr. Little was born in Arkansas on May 17, 1855, making him only a few weeks short of 78 years of age at the time of his death. He came to Eastland county from Arkansas in 1880. In Arkansas he was married to Miss Sallie Wynn, who survives him. Three daughters and five sons also survive.

His last occupation, before retirement several years ago, was public weigher for Cisco. The surviving children are: Mrs. Elbert Ezell, Cisco; Mrs. T. L. Cooper, Eastland; Mrs. Clifton Hyatt, Olden; T. D. Little, Cross Plains; Edith Little, San Angelo; Everett Little, Abilene; E. M. Little, Abilene, and Weldon Little, Cisco.

COMBINATION TAX OPPOSED BY FERGUSONS

AUSTIN, March 2.—Gov. Miriam A. Ferguson and her husband have announced that the administration does not favor a combination sales tax and income tax law.

Former Gov. James E. Ferguson added that any attempt to combine the two would probably result in complications.

EASTLAND CO. TAX-PAYERS TO SAVE $700,000

AUSTIN, March 2.—Eastland county taxpayers will save more than $700,000 on their outstanding road bonds through the refunding act of the legislature last year.

Gasoline tax revenues are providing the money for this saving beginning this year. The law sets aside one cent of the four cent gas tax, more than $7,000,000 a year.

The ratio is to be set by the new Board of County and District Road Indebtedness, Gibb Gilchrist, its chairman, said that while payments already have been begun, the amounts thus far are too scattered to bear any real significance.

The highway department's records show that Eastland county has contributed $778,714.96 to the construction of designated state highways and bridges since the department was established in 1917.

The total expenditures of this type by all the counties of the state, since 1917, total $90,345,267 according to highway department records.

Estimates of county officials are still larger but highway officials believe the ultimate total will be about $100,000,000. On the basis now set by the legislature, from 12 to 15 years would be required to pay it from the gasoline tax.

The Texas Good Roads association, which secured these figures from the department, pointed out that in addition to the one cent of the tax which goes to county bonds, another cent goes to the state school fund, leaving but two cents of the tax for its primary purpose—the construction and maintenance of roads.

DRIES TO ASK 30

DALLAS, March 2.—The Central committee of the United Forces for Prohibition in Texas has agreed to ask for submission by the legislature of the national repeal amendment, but in an election separate from other matters.

W. N. Wiggins, recording secretary of the forces, announced Wednesday the decision to meet the challenge of wets for a popular vote on the repeal issue was reached in a committee conference.

The dries won the election held in November, 1932, rather than in the primaries of 1934, Wiggins said. The announcement marks a distinct change in the attitude of the forces which were organized last year to fight repeal or modification in any form.

Wiggins said this opposition will be continued as far as resubmission of the state prohibition amendment is concerned until there has been a vote on the national amendment.

"Ready to Meet Them." "The wets have been saying the people ought to have a chance to vote on the prohibition issue," Wiggins said. "So we are now ready to meet them on the issue, provided the question is referred directly to the people and the election held entirely separate from other matters."

"We want the question settled once for all in Texas on the single issue of prohibition." The committee also outlined a plan for nominating wet and dry delegates to a repeal convention and for their election. There would be 150 delegates elected on a basis of legislative districts.

WASHINGTON, March 2.—President-elect Roosevelt is expected by democratic leaders here to call congress into a special session late this month in order to begin work promptly upon various emergency measures.

WASHINGTON'S CALM TURNS INTO BUSTLE

WASHINGTON, March 2.—More than 140 democrats boarded the Texas inaugural special here Wednesday bound for the B. & O. Garment inauguration at Washington Saturday.

Democracy has waited 12 long years for a chance to look at Washington bedecked in honor of their candidate. Now that their chance was here this is what they saw:

One hundred thousand tourists shouldering their way into hotels in a vain search for rooms. Miles of white washed pine stands which made the heart of Washington look like a county fair.

Hundreds of prosperous-looking individuals hurrying down hotel corridors with paper wrapped bottles under their arms. (Note: Rye whiskey was selling at $4 a half gallon.)

Detectives watching all incoming trains for gentlemen with possible anaphrodisiac tendencies. Red, white and blue bunting waving in the breeze, but a little bedraggled from rain. The republican weatherman predicted snow for Saturday.

Mrs. Mary Thomason of Putnam is spending a few days here.

CHAPTER I

JANET HILL'S gray eyes raised and lowered hastily. Intently she studied the typewritten sheet that lay before her and intently—a little more severely than necessary—her fingers tapped out the words on the keys.

"It is to be remembered that the purchasing public—"

A sudden, impatient gesture and the typing ceased. Janet expressed an exclamation. She had copied the words twice and the page was ruined. Oh, well—what was the use of pretending? No matter how busy at work she might seem there was no stopping the dark figure heading toward the entrance of the office.

The dark figure was that of a young man. He had gained the threshold now and paused.

"Mr. Hamilton around?"

Janet looked up. She smiled and the smile was that of a serene, thoroughly businesslike secretary as she answered, "He just stepped out, Mr. Cressy. I think he's in Mr. Chambers' office. If you want to see him—"

The young man in the doorway raised a hand in protest. "No, no—it isn't important. As a matter of fact it was you I wanted to talk to, not Hamilton. That is, if you can spare a moment or two."

"Why, of course."

The young man slumped against the opposite desk, half-seated himself. He must have been in the later 20s—an average looking young man with sandy hair and agreeable features, a trifle heavy in build, a trifle too well-groomed. He said with a grin, "Seem to be awfully busy in here this morning."

"Not especially. I mean there's always plenty to do."

"But don't you ever think of anything except work?"

Janet moved uncomfortably. It was going to be the same thing all over again! For three successive Saturdays and on several evenings in between she had told Howard Cressy she couldn't accept his invitations for luncheon or dinner. No, not for a movie or a concert or a drive either. She had used all the excuses from previous engagements to a headache, she couldn't invent a new excuse. Well, she would just use one of the old ones. Why couldn't Howard Cressy take a hint?

"Mr. Hamilton seems to be able to keep everyone busy," she countered.

"But you don't work Saturday afternoons, do you? You don't have to work tonight. How about taking a little drive out on the Madison road? There's a nice piece—"

JANET HILL

"But don't you ever think of anything except work?"

Janet moved uncomfortably. It was going to be the same thing all over again! For three successive Saturdays and on several evenings in between she had told Howard Cressy she couldn't accept his invitations for luncheon or dinner. No, not for a movie or a concert or a drive either. She had used all the excuses from previous engagements to a headache, she couldn't invent a new excuse. pepper and salt that were young and challenging. Hamilton walked with a light step. Evidently the conference had come off as he wanted it.

The younger man had risen to his feet. He said quickly, "Oh, Mr. Hamilton, I've just had an answer from Fairbanks. He likes the idea of the contest. Think it will be a big circulation builder and wants to go in for it strong. Here's his letter if you'd like to read it."

"Thanks," Hamilton took the letter. He laid half a dozen sheets of yellow paper on Janet's desk and said, "Miss Hill, I've made some revisions in that copy. Sorry to ask you to work overtime but it has to get off in the first mail. Make two carbons, please. And will you start it at once and let the letters and that Halley memorandum wait?"

"Yes, Mr. Hamilton."

"Now, then, Cressy—"

The advertising manager sank back in his desk chair and looked up at the young promotion director. With Hamilton's arrival Cressy had suddenly become all business. The two men talked of figures and mailing schedules, the new contest and the circular going out next month. Their voices rose and fell, Cressy enthusiastic, Hamilton agreeing or arguing more calmly.

JANET was not listening. She had glanced at her wristwatch as her employer entered. Twenty friendly, confident way. They were practical eyes and the broad forehead above them was practical, too. Janet had cheeks and a throat like cream and her lips were the dark, rich hue of ripe cherries. It was unusual to see such creamy skin with gray eyes but any artist would have told you it was exactly right with the waving, light brown hair that glistened copper in the sunlight. Right, too, was the well-molded chin, the nose and generous lips.

And then, just when one had catalogued Janet's features and decided that here was a girl who was attractive and pleasant and sensible, one saw the freckles. Almost a dozen of them scattered across the bridge of that practical nose and across the practical cheeks. A dozen small but perfectly visible freckles of the same golden brown as Janet's hair. Somehow the freckles discounted the matter-of-factness of that businesslike young face. They were likely to make you wonder how Janet Hill looked when she smiled. They made you want to wait and see.

SHE was 23 years old, 5 feet 5 inches tall and for two years she had taken dictation, typed letters, made appointments, executed errands and done a hundred and one other secretarial duties in the offices of Every Home Magazine. All this is necessary to a complete picture of Janet Hill but all this is, after all, quite minor. The one important thing to know about Janet was that she was engaged to Rolf Carlyle.

That, at least, was the way Janet looked at it.

They had been engaged for almost a year, yet the mention of Rolf's name was enough to set her heart beating a swift, exciting tattoo. That warning and quickening that made Janet wonder if all the world understood how she felt about Rolf—and blush at the thought.

It was being engaged to Rolf that made Howard Cressy's continued attentions so annoying. It was being engaged to Rolf that made working after hours—especially on Saturday—distasteful. But it was being engaged to Rolf, too, that had made the world a paradise. Janet Hill had never imagined it could be, that made the once ordinary city of Lancaster suddenly the earth's garden spot, that made Janet Hill's hitherto commonplace existence a state of ecstasy beyond anything she had ever dreamed.

Oh, yes, it was like that—being engaged to Rolf. Janet was engaged and she was in love.

She and Rolf didn't talk so much about when they were going to be married. They didn't talk about it because it was the one thing that shadowed their dreamy happiness. They wanted to be married and they couldn't because they didn't have the money. That was why Janet sat in Bruce Hamilton's office from 9 o'clock until 5—and often long afterward—five days a week and for half days on Saturdays when she would so much rather have been bustling about a blue and white kitchen of her own. Give up her job to cook and wash dishes and mend and iron clothes? Indeed she would! She'd have been glad to.

For Janet and Rolf there couldn't be a blue and white kitchen, a one-clad bungalow or even a tiny, cheap, third floor apartment. They couldn't be married because the combined total of their savings accounts was $214 short of $500.

CHAPTER 1A

FIVE hundred dollars that total must be before Janet and Rolf could go to the courthouse and then to the church and solemnly exchange promises to love and cherish one another until death. It might not seem a large sum to a great many people. To Janet and Rolf it was huge, indeed. It was also the absolute minimum on which a matrimonial venture might safely be launched.

Janet knew this because she had read it in a magazine. It was Janet who had insisted the $500 must be in the bank before their marriage. There had been arguments. Dozens of them. Rolf had wanted to hunt up a preacher the very next day after that precious, insane bus ride on an April night when, with a dozen other passengers about them, he had somehow got out of the all-important question to a girl whose whisper was inaudible but whose star-lit eyes said "Yes."

She had loved him for those arguments but of course she couldn't agree. Why, Rolf was earning $35 a week at the Atlas Advertising Agency and her own salary was $30. Rolf had a life insurance policy and boasted blithely of the $16.75 in his wallet—$3 of which he owed his roommate. With paper and pencils and a great many highly irrelevant interruptions they argued and added and subtracted—and arrived at Janet's original statement. There must be $500 in the bank!

ROLF CARLYLE

It wasn't, she pointed out, what the $500 would buy; it was what it stood for. Janet knew quite a lot about poverty. She knew Daisy McCullough who had worked in the Every Home office until, savily and irresponsibly, she had married—and been divorced six months later. She knew Mrs. Frisbie whose husband was an invalid and whose little girl couldn't see. She had known Joe Platz, too, well enough to grow a little faint when she read how they found his body in the river. Joe Junior had been buried the week before. Joe Platz had lost his job and couldn't face being a burden to his wife.

YES, Janet knew enough of poverty so that all of Rolf's pleading couldn't win her from her insistence that they must work and save before they could be married. Five hundred dollars was the lowest possible figure.

At first they had assured each other the $500 could be saved easily. In six months at the most! Rolf had made a budget of his $25 and showed Janet how to make one. Somehow at the end of the month the budget was there but the money wasn't. They had had wonderful times together but theater tickets and dinners and gardenias for Janet's coat collar had more than taken the sum Rolf had saved down under the heading, "Savings."

So there were more sessions with pencil and paper, more adding and subtracting. Out of all this had come further arguments and then, gradually, the savings accounts had begun to swell. Instead of theater parties and fresh flowers and dancing at the Crystal Slipper there were long walks in the neighborhood movie house where tickets cost only 15 cents.

Rolf chafed at all this—but always came around to agree the object was worth it. He wasn't nearly as versed in economy as Janet. Some of the other girls in the Every Home office thought Janet had been growing just a little shabby. They nodded significantly and agreed that a girl had to keep up her looks; even if she neglected herself and anybody could tell that old black hat was last winter's. Fresh collar and cuff sets didn't conceal the fact that Janet wore the same black frock almost every day.

If Janet Hill had heard these comments she would have laughed. How could anyone compare old hats and worn frocks with the glory of knowing that Rolf loved her?

The special reason she had wanted to leave the office at 12:30 that Saturday was because it was Rolf's birthday. He didn't know she was aware of this but what a celebration she had planned! Dinner, cooked on the two-burner gas stove by Janet herself. There would be a thick steak, mushrooms, creamed asparagus and salad with Roquefort dressing. The dessert had been made early that morning and was waiting in the ice chest. There would be flowers for the table and tall white candles. Janet would have to buy them at the dime store on her way home.

SHE had to shop, too, for the fountain pen and pencil set that was to be her birthday gift to Rolf. Janet had decided that was what the gift should be three weeks ago when he had complained about losing his last pen. There was the shopping to do at the grocery store too, the tidying up of the single room that, with the couch cover properly disguised the day bed, became a suitable place to receive callers. There were really a dozen demands on Janet's time that afternoon and there she was typing Bruce Hamilton's revised copy and his correspondence!

Howard Cressy had disappeared. Janet, intent on her work, was aware when her employer arose and left the office and that half an hour later he returned. That meant he had lunched. Hamilton drove all those who worked for him but he drove himself even more strenuously. He would probably remain at his desk throughout the afternoon.

"Finished?" He looked up and smiled as she laid the letters on his desk.

"All but the memorandum."

"Haven't had lunch, have you?" Janet said that she had not. Her employer rested his arms on his desk.

"Leave the memo until Monday," Hamilton suggested indifferently. "It can wait. Been keeping you overtime too much lately."

"I don't mind—" Janet began, but the half-hearted offer was silenced. Hamilton was in one of those rare moods when he realized that those who worked with him were human beings instead of machines. At such times he was kindness and consideration itself.

"It's a fine afternoon," he said. "Take a walk—get out in the park—treat yourself to a real holiday!"

She smiled and agreed, though of course she had no idea of doing any such thing. The birthday party for Rolf would give her more pleasure than any outing could.

Janet put paper and pencils away, cleared her desk and drew the oilcloth cover over her typewriter. A moment later, wearing the year-old felt hat, her coat over her arm, Janet paused in the doorway.

"Goodby until Monday," she said, smiling.

"Goodby."

Two minutes later she emerged through the street door into the early afternoon traffic. A fine afternoon it was, as Mr. Hamilton had said. Late February sunshine shone down warmly. Across the street where there had been a patch of snow the earth was moist now and dark. The wind, cool and refreshing, struck Janet's cheeks and brought a delicate surge of color into the creamy whiteness. The girl drew a deep breath, swung into the procession heading east.

A BLOCK in the distance she could see the tower of the Security Building, the hands on its clock pointing to 40 minutes after one.

It had been nice of Mr. Hamilton to let her leave without finishing the memorandum. It gave her 20 minutes more than she had expected to have.

Suddenly the thought of lurching at the corner drug store became distasteful. Janet knew the menu there on Saturdays: pea soup, the sandwich "specials"—ham salad, pimento cheese, and egg-and-lettuce—and two kinds of pie. Yes, indeed. She could recite every item on that menu. And the coffee was never served with real cream.

"I've time to go to Rooney's," she decided hastily. "It's after the noon rush and there'll be quick service. Besides it's on the way to Hayslips'."

Hayslips' jewelry store was the oldest in Lancaster and carried the finest stock. It was at Hayslips' Janet had determined to buy the pen and pencil set for Rolf. It wasn't really an extravagance—maybe it was but surely it was justified! Rolf's present had to be the best.

At Rooney's the food was appetizing and inexpensive. The luxury of a quiet table and a few minutes' rest was too great a temptation to resist. So, instead of entering the drug store, Janet Hill turned at the corner.

It was that turn that changed everything.

Two blocks beyond—the cafeteria only half a block further—was the Brewster Hotel. In Lancaster the Brewster had all the prestige of a Ritz-Carlton or a Mayflower. Janet had never crossed the threshold but frequently she had made reservations there for Mr. Hamilton. His wealthiest business associates stopped there when they came to Lancaster. Janet knew that the smartest luncheon and dinner parties, the ones described in the columns of the Gazette and the Times, were always at the Brewster.

"Meet me at the Brewster Coffee Shop," Mr. Hamilton would say casually in a telephone conversation. It would always be at least two hours before he returned from such a luncheon.

The Coffee Shop had a street entrance on the side of the building Janet was approaching. The name "Brewster Coffee Shop" was lettered neatly on a small glass sign that at night was illuminated. Janet, busy with her thoughts, was not a dozen yards from that sign when suddenly she looked up. Her heart seemed to stop beating. She caught her breath.

A girl in a dark fur coat was entering the Coffee Shop. She was slender, rather small, and she wore a red hat. Very pretty the girl looked, very gay and charming. She had turned and was smiling up at her escort. The young man beside her was Rolf Carlyle.

Uses Jazz to Put Smiles in Religion

KANSAS CITY, Mo., March 1.—The hot blaring of a jazz band mingled with the solemn notes of such old favorite hymns as "I Love to Tell the Story" in the Community church.

On the spot usually occupied by the pulpit, a young man and woman beat out furious tap dances.

"Heat Waves" was the predominant theme song. It was a composition of "Red" Nichols, orchestra director at a downtown hotel. It purports to combine the screaming of trucks, grinding of street cars and swish of movie and other sounds of the heart of the downtown district.

The church presentation was sponsored by the pastor of the Community Church, Dr. Burris A. Jenkins. It was his effort, he said, to "bring radiance back into religion."

A member of Nichols' orchestra rendered his unique version of "Sylvia." It was followed by the orchestra's subdued playing of "I Love to Tell the Story," with the audience joining in the singing.

Briefly discussing the innovation, Dr. Jenkins said he would like to see religion filled with laughter.

Evidences of Advanced Civilization Are Found in Relics of Ancient Texas Race

AUSTIN, March 2.—Long before Coronado blazed his trail across the Etaked Plains and north into Kansas, there flourished in the Texas Panhandle a advanced civilization which knew of communal houses, agricultural experimentation and the art of making jewelry.

Floyd V. Studer, Amarillo anthropologist who has studied ruins in the Panhandle for 23 years, declares that a race of people different from the Pueblos inhabited the region from about 1350 to 1450, A. D.

He has found indications of systematic municipal life and of rural development fostered by advanced creative minds. He believes the people were nomadic Indians who settled on the fertile land along the spring-fed creek in the Canadian River valley between the present states of New Mexico and Oklahoma.

Remains of two communal dwellings of the civilization have attracted Studer in his research. One known as the A-C ruin is located about 45 miles northeast of Amarillo on Antelope creek. It contains 29 rooms, is 163 feet long and 50 feet wide. The other, known as the B-T-K ruin, is a mile south of the Canadian river at Tascosa. It has 33 rooms, is 120 feet long and 69 feet wide.

Life in these civic centers was unlike that in the pueblo cities, Studer declares. Distinctive pottery found in the ruins disqualifies an earlier belief that this civilization was an eastern expansion of the Pueblos.

Highly polished beads, beads made of shells imported from the Pacific coast, turquoise pendants, necklaces, inlaid turquoise objects and other ornaments found in the dwellings testify to the nomadic habit and artistic temperament of the tribe.

Two suggestions are offered as to why Coronado missed these people on his quest for gold. Drouth may have caused them to leave the prairies, sending them again on their roving existence; or warring neighbors may have forced them out, causing them to retreat into the southwest and possibly amalgamate with the Pueblos.

That advertising is educational. From the ads you can get information as to new ideas and inventions which will lighten labor and make life easier and happier.

Electric power is the greatest servant of the people; it enters into every business and home, making life more healthful and longer.

The electric wizard is finding new uses for it daily. Electric power is washing clothes, used to cook, to heat, to cool the air to freeze water, it lights the world and is used to benefit mankind in a thousand ways.

Electric appliances are very necessary these modern days. They are used in the home, office, factory, all kinds of places of business and on the farm. They are time and money savers. Electric power is the most helpful helpmate the world has ever known. Take the little electric wire away and we would go back to the days of long ago.

In the home the housewife is the one who makes life worth living. She is the essential part in the running of the home and life; she is the true partner in every sense of the word. Without her the work of the world could not be done. Her day is long and taken up with work and worry make her work easier and give her the more leisure hours she deserves.

Electrical appliances can be bought at a price that any one can afford, and their cost of operation is small.

This is an age of wonders. Every day new and more ingenious appliances are made available to us. Every advertisement should be read carefully and sellers of people can better know the many labor saving devices they have to offer.

It always pays to read the advertisements!

HEADQUARTERS BUILDING OF WOODMAN CIRCLE COMPLETED

Members of Cisco grove No. 356 of the Woodmen Circle have been invited to witness the dedication of the society's national headquarters building at Omaha, Neb., June 5 and 6. Mrs. Jeanie Willard, Denison, national vice president; Mrs. Dora Alexander Talley, Omaha, formerly of Garfield, national secretary; Mrs. Henrietta A. Thomas, Fort Worth, national past president; and Miss Bessie Dolan, Taylor member of the national legislative committee, will take official part in the two-day dedication ceremonies.

Mrs. Della E. Sappington, Fort Worth, manager of this district, and other local officers and members are interested in the dedication.

It is expected that the dedication will draw more than a thousand members from all parts of the country, including Texas state officers, field workers, drill teams and members. This event will mark the third anniversary of the dedication of the society's Home for Aged Members and Orphan children at Sherman.

There is an eternal fitness about the plan and setting of the building, in that it has a beautifully landscaped lawn to the north and east and a sheltered garden between the wings at the south. The general ensemble is somehow suggestive of femininity.

The building, 110 by 150 feet, with wings 42 feet wide, is ideally planned for light, comfort and efficiency in accommodating the more than 200 headquarters employees. Artistic simplicity is the keynote of the interior finishing, decorations, and furniture. A pneumatic tube system serves the various departments in the transmission of documents.

Of modified Georgian architecture the building is of pink and buff Kaeska, Minn., stone, the slabs measuring three feet by 18 inches and numbering 6,000 in all. The quality of the stone is such that it took the workmen one hour to cut two inches, and to form the design on the flat plasters which gracefully trim and set off the steel window casements. It was necessary to go over it many, many times.

Refined in every detail, the new Woodmen Circle headquarters building stands, a beacon light to the future of womanhood, a monument to its past accomplishments.

the Red Men" was conducted by Mrs. G. T. Huddleston. Sandwiches and salads were served during the social hour to Messdames S. B. Parks, C. A. Farquhar, Myrick, G. B. Langston, Blackstock, Lee Stevens, James Huddleston, B. Montgomery, H. Brandon one new member, Miss Ollie Mac Daniels, and one visitor, Mrs. Coe McLeRoy. DON'T QUOTE ME

WASHINGTON, March 1. — Samuel M. Stone is president of the Colt Arms company, one of America's largest manufacturers of machine guns, revolvers and ammunition.

Yet he nearly jumped out of his shoes when a photographer's bulb flashed—noisily—in the House Foreign Affairs Committee room.

"Don't be scared," admonished Sen. Bacon, committee member. "It doesn't hurt to be shot with one of those."

The disregard for convention exhibited by Senator Huey P. Long again is brought out in a story reaching here from New Orleans, where he has been taking part in an election investigation.

A prominent official of a Louisiana airplane manufacturing concern asked the "Kingfish" to dinner at his New Orleans home.

At dinner hour a number of guests

had assembled, dressed in tuxedos or evening gowns. Decidedly tardy, the Senator arrived in golf knickers, open sack coat and teeless shirt.

Seated, the "Kingfish" punctuated his conversation by pounding fiercely upon the dinner table. So hard did he pound, in fact, that a bowl of nuts before him flew up, scattering the nuts in the Senator's face.

Before all had eaten Huey decided he ought to go home; so he rose and left precipitately.

His host said: "Senator, you haven't said goodbye to my mother" whose house it was.

"Oh, that's all right," said the "Kingfish" flinging himself through the door, "tell her goodbye for me yourself."

A Massachusetts leather factory has altered its machinery and is producing jig-saw puzzles, thus solving the puzzle of employment for 100 persons for whom the jig was up, according to a report to the commerce department.

GLENDALE, Cal., March 2. — David G. Burton was treated at police hospital for a nine-inch gash on his head. His bed, Burton said, had folded up while he was asleep.

HOUSTON, March 2. — The joint convention of the National Oil Mill Superintendents Association and the National Oil Mill Manufacturers and Supply association will be held here May 24-26. About 300 delegates are expected to attend.
