Six Miners Shot as Deputies Open Fire on Picket Lines

SEVERAL ARE SAID TO BE NEAR DEATH

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Aug. 1.—Six miners were shot today when special deputies, attempting to force their way through picket lines at the H. C. Frick Coke company's mine, opened fire on the picket lines. Several of the wounded men were reported in serious condition. The shooting brought to eight the total wounded since day-break as pickets sought to enforce their determination to keep non-union mines idle until they recognize the national union.

MAN RESCUED AFTER ELEVEN DAYS DRIFTING

CORPUS CHRISTI, Aug. 1.—Jack Davis, 33, of Killeen, Florida, who drifted 11 days in the gulf of Mexico in a water-logged 19-foot sloop trailed by hungry sharks who fought over the body of his companion, William Bell, 19, when he slipped from the deck, was rescued today by coast guardsmen. Surfman Harry Page, of the coast guard, came upon the battered sloop and the half-conscious Davis before dawn today on the beach near Port Aransas. Davis, suffering from lack of water and food, told the guardsmen he slipped from the deck several days ago. He was unable to determine when his companion fell victim to a school of leopard sharks which followed the ship night and day. They left Florida July 13, bound for British Honduras, and encountered many storms.

Dairymen Choose Delegates to Meet

Cisco Dairymen this morning chose J. P. Alsop, I. N. Strickland, and E. B. Isaacks to represent them at the meeting of dairy committees in Eastland Thursday morning. At that time a code of ethics will be mapped out for presentation to the entire body. All the dairymen of this city are to attend the meeting at Eastland Thursday evening for the purpose of passing on the code which their committees are to work out, according to Miss Lucille Self of the Cisco Retail Merchants association. There will be no action taken as to the adoption of a policy among the dairymen of this city, it was said, until Friday, when a suitable code has been drawn up.

HEIRESS WILL LOOK FOR LOST GEMS IN INDIA

NICE, Aug. 1.—Over sixty years old and daughter of one of America's most colorful soldiers of fortune, Mrs. Helen Gardner Botha, of Nice, is organizing an expedition to India in search of the treasure valued at millions of pounds. Mrs. Botha, divorced wife of a judge in South Africa, is the only known offspring of Alexander Gardner, native of what is now Wisconsin, who served as artillery colonel under the Maharajah Ranjit Singh and died in Kashmir at the reputed age of 92, leaving a two-year-old daughter, in 1877. Aided America Gardner's father was a Scottish surgeon, who fought with Washington and Lafayette. At his death, Gardner lived in Srinagar, capital of Kashmir, and was virtually king of an extensive territory bestowed upon him by the Maharajah of Kashmir. His immense fortune, mostly in precious stones, which he had taken as tribute, was willed to his daughter, but disappeared before she was old enough to claim it, according to the story.

Courage Failed "I never have received more than $100 a year from my father's estate, and 35 years ago I gathered a party and went to Kashmir in an effort to recover my fortune, but my friends lost their courage and I had to give up the search. At the Lahore bank I found only a package containing my father's will. "This time I am determined to find the gems and money because I am convinced the treasure does exist. In any case, I consider I have the inherited right to claim revenue from the villages over which my father ruled."

Public Works Passes Billion Dollar Mark

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1.—The public works administration today passed the $1,000,000,000 mark in its campaign to find jobs for unemployed. Allocations from the $3,300,000,000 building fund reached $1,058,166,201 with announcement that $11,500,000 would be made available immediately for work on the 9-foot channel in the upper Mississippi river.

ROOSEVELT IS PLANNING WAR ON KIDNAPERS

HYDE PARK, N. Y., Aug. 1.—President Roosevelt turned today to federal action for suppression of the kidnaping racket. It was learned a recent cabinet meeting discussed a government drive against racketeers and it was reported Raymond Moley, assistant secretary of state would concentrate on drawing up a legislative program to be submitted to the next congress.

REFUSES TO REVEAL AMOUNT OF RANSOM

OKLAHOMA CITY, Aug. 1.—Charles F. Urschel, America's richest kidnap victim, today told how he was released by his kidnapers on the main highway near here last night. Calmly, he related full details of his abduction from the sun porch of his palatial mansion a week ago Saturday midnight, but he and members of his family steadfastly refused to reveal the amount of ransom paid. Officers began search for the Underhill gang, members of a gang under Wilbur Underhill, the "tri-state terror."

SLUMP DRIVES GERMANS AWAY FROM CITIES

BERLIN, Aug. 1.—The latest census, taken in June, 1933, revealed that the Germans more than ever are a nation of city dwellers. While according to the 1925 census every fourth German lived in a city above 100,000 inhabitants, this year every third German was found to be living in such cities. This shows that during the last ten years, the depopulation of the countryside to the benefit of the big cities has made further progress. However, a remarkable change has set in owing to the economic depression. The exodus from the countryside lasted only until 1930. From then on, the movement of the population has followed the reverse direction. Germans now are migrating from the cities to the country rather than vice versa. Thus, Prussian cities above 100,000 inhabitants lost 50,000 citizens in 1930 and 83,000 in 1931. Berlin's population during 1931 decreased by 46,000 owing to migration. This development strikingly contrasts with earlier years when country districts experienced similar losses. Thus, East Prussia lost 157,000 inhabitants between 1909 and 1925. Lower Silesia 72,000, Pomerania 55,000. In 1931, however, East Prussia gained 4,000 inhabitants. The main reason for the exodus from the cities is unemployment. Although the agricultural labor market is just as crowded as the industrial one, many jobless go to the country where their meager allowance buys more than in the cities, especially if their family possesses some land.

RECOVERY PROGRAM HAS 2 SIGNIFICANT FEATURES

"The first 90 days are going to be hard, but after we get over the first big push I believe that the president's program is going to mean better times." Such was the opinion of John H. Garner, owner of John H. Garner's department store here as well as similar stores in various other Texas cities, and a former resident of Cisco. He was in Cisco today conferring with Henry Drumwright, manager of the Cisco store. He pointed out that the recovery program has two significant features: "It eliminates the unscrupulous. It cuts out the 'sweatshop' proprietor and manufacturer who makes it impossible for the honest business man to run his business on an ethical plane and still keep in competition. Under the recovery program the unethical business man must come up to the level of the business man who wants to be fair and operate on a high standard. The low moral minority cannot now set the pace for the higher minded majority. "After 90 days we are going to see some excellent results, I believe."

NOTICE TO ADVERTISERS

In order that the newspapers be able to cooperate with President Roosevelt's recovery program, making shorter hours for employees, it becomes necessary that some changes be made regarding the reception of copy. On Mondays copy will be accepted up until 10 a. m. for that day. Other week days copy must be in the office on the day previous to publication. Copy for Sunday's paper will be accepted up until 1 p. m. Saturday. We trust that all advertisers will accept this change in the spirit of cooperation with the recovery act since it is made necessary by the shortening of the hours of our employes.

170,000 SIGN CODES TO PUT MEN TO WORK

(By United Press) Blanket code agreements became operative throughout the nation today with more than 170,000 employers immediately swinging into line with wage-lifting, work-spreading agreements, a survey by the United Press showed. The 24 regional offices of the national recovery administration reported that agreement tabulations were shooting up each hour. The Blue Eagle, symbol of cooperative recovery action, spread its wings over the country. Newspaper advertisements featured the emblem. Cross-road stores and huge department stores displayed the insignia in windows. Regional offices reporting certificates of agreement included Dallas, 1,128, and Houston, 12,228. More than a million new jobs were opened in the country's retail stores. Steady progress was reported in the campaign to bring the steel and oil industries under provisions of the national recovery act. Progress in the effort to bring some semblance of order out of the oil industry was registered in a new code drafted by NRA officials and representatives of the industry. The new code proposes a work week of 36 hours in the oil fields generally and a 40-hour week in the marketing end of the industry.

SMALL STORES MAY SHOW INSIGNIA

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1.—Owners of small stores who tend their shops by themselves and have no employees were granted permission today to display the NRA sign of the Blue Eagle. Many such shop-keepers had feared they might be placed at a disadvantage in competing with larger establishments which displayed the emblem. In order to obtain the Blue Eagle the one-man stores must sign the agreement the same as stores with many clerks. The minimum wage and maximum hour provisions will not apply in such cases as the store-keeper has no employees. Other sections of the agreement, such as a pledge to refrain from profiteering, will be binding.

MAKING THE BLUE EAGLE A LIE.

"Will we make the Blue Eagle a lie?"

On the front page of the Marshall Morning News Sunday was an editorial captioned thus. The recovery act, says the editorial, is designed to put six millions more men to work by the time the leaves begin to fall. "But it won't do so if we by this and that subterfuge evolve schemes to thwart the very thing that Mr. Roosevelt is asking us to do."

The editorial is as straight from the shoulder as a Dempsey left, as timely as quinine in a malarial epidemic.

"Let us be honest with ourselves," it begins, "with the president and our country. The president, in whom we profess to have so much confidence, tells us that if we honestly carry out the provisions of the recovery act that will put six million men to work before the leaves begin to fall. But it won't do so if we by this and that subterfuge evolve schemes to thwart the very thing that Mr. Roosevelt is asking us to do. Is his plan a good one? Most of us think it's good for the other fellow but for ourselves we begin to figure out some way to defeat it. The Blue Eagle has no place in the window of the man who evades. We have heard of half a dozen ways how this is hoped to be done. The president has but one object in reducing hours of labor and that is to give the millions of men out of work a chance to again be independent American citizens. He is not interested in your compelling your men and women workers to an eight hours work in six.

"If you, by scheming, put more work in your present employees and do not hire more men or women to make up for the shortened hours, why you are a scoundrel in this war against hunger and nakedness and war. And for God's sake, if you are going to do this, quit prating about standing by the president 100 per cent."

"The government is spending hundreds of millions of dollars on its public works program. Its spending program is being carried out by the cotton and wheat farmers. Millions of dollars are being loaned to municipalities for improvements, or home is to have the dread disease of doing all it can but deal fairly and quit side-stepping."

"Every civic organization, every organization worth its salt, should be organized to carry the burden. That is the plan and prevent recovery."

"There is a bright star, bespeaks a happier day. Let by selfishness and greed."

"Let's not side step. Let or tell him we won't. Let's a lie."

And that is just as much Marshall, Texas, or any other stripes.

There is only one way to success. That is to make the business mean just what it is in Washington. The other fellow you. If you don't do it you can count upon this: If the sacrifice that we are being lately zero compared to that make in that event."

Make the "Blue Eagle" mean everything that it is supposed to mean in your place of business, in your homes and in your offices and the campaign will go over. If it doesn't, there is only one place where the blame can rest. It will have failed because the "Blue Eagle" was telling too many lies.

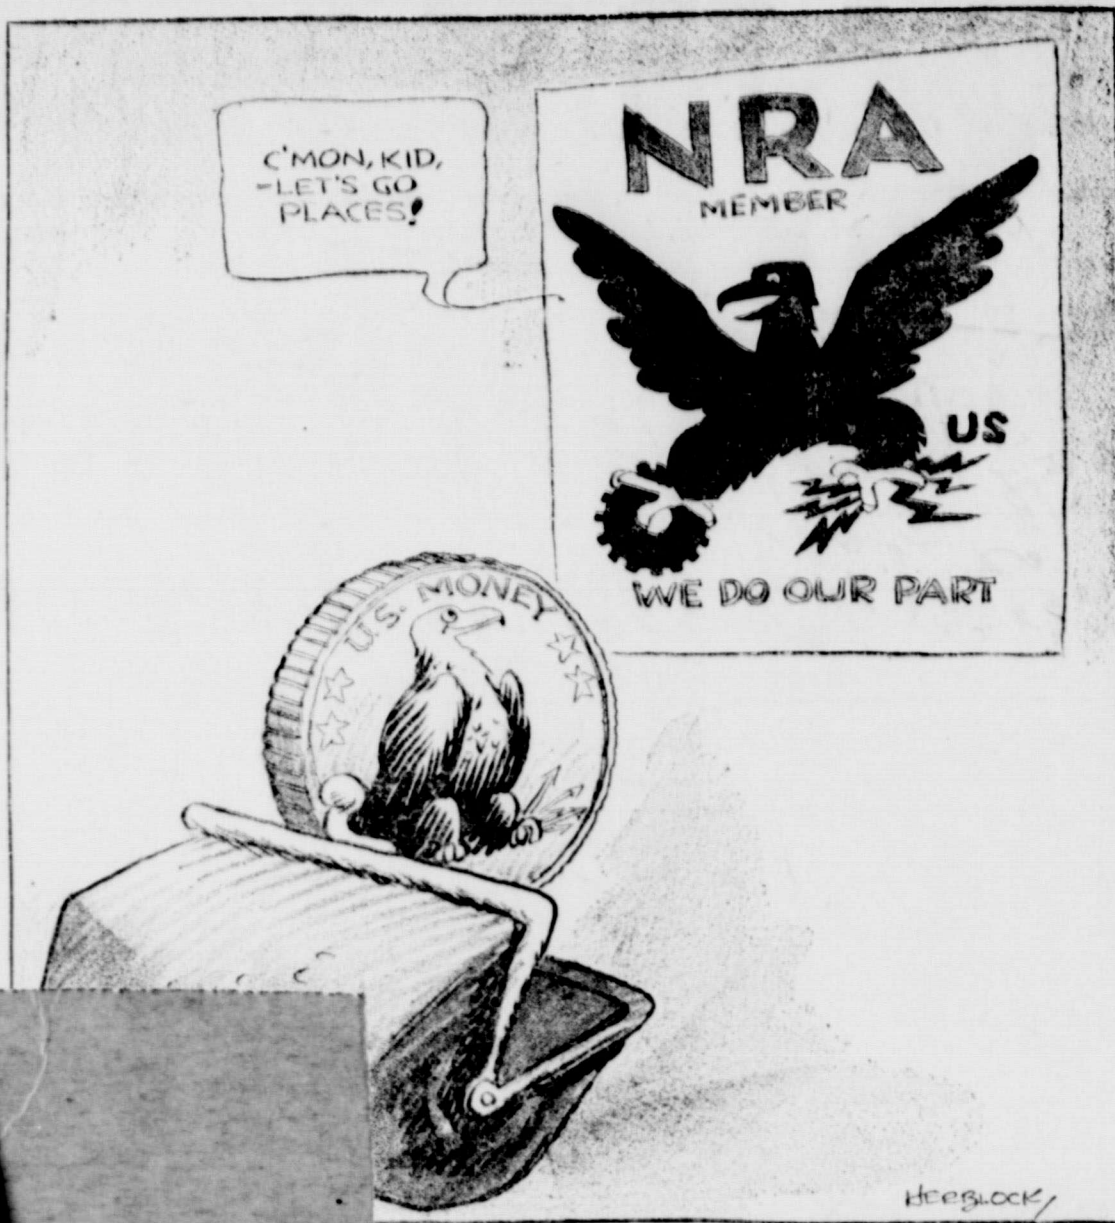

FIRST PUSH IS HARDEST.

The recovery administration's plan to cover industry indiscriminately with a blanket code while the various individual units dallied with individual codes seems to have stimulated things. It's a code of one kind or another, anyway, and a code that an industry or trade group prepares for itself has a better flavor than a code that is prepared for it, no matter how little or how much better the former may be than the latter and vice versa. The oil industry, as usual, made the mistake of not being able to agree and now it will have to accept a code cut to its order by a very impartial designer. It will be forced, like the little boy who swallows calomel under compulsion, to take the prescription whether or not the taste is much worse than the concoction upon which it could not of itself agree. Boys will be boys, and it seems it takes some people a long time to realize that, when it is known that a thing will have to be done, it is much better to do it their own way than to have the way prescribed for them. It saves a certain amount of pride in independence, anyway.

The retailers code has been ordered into effect. It covers a more numerous personnel than any other single code proposed or to be proposed. Its provisions, for all those who subscribe to it through their associations or individually, will supersede the present N. R. A. blanket agreement. Those who do not subscribe will have to operate under the N. R. A. "The first ninety days will be the hardest," is the opinion of John H. Garner, proprietor of John H. Garner's department store here and owner of department stores in many cities of Texas. "But this gives us something to work for, a chance to do something. We did not have that before. It was a sort of hopeless waiting for something to turn up."

The first push is the hardest. It will be hard on everybody to get the ball to rolling. Once it is under way it will move with its own momentum.

of trade for debts problems, helped occupy his attention.

No Major Worries Now. This year, Hoover has no major worries. He hopes he will be able to enjoy his birthday for the first time in many years.

His friends say he is "too tired" to fully appreciate his freedom. He has not recuperated from the strain of four years in the white house.

He spends most of his time inside his home atop San Juan hill. He usually takes his walks early in the morning or late in the evening, when the rest of the Stanford community is indoors.

His family hoped to make his 59th birthday the happiest of all. But no plans have been made.

YELLOWSTONE PARK, Wyo., Aug 1—As a fisherman J. E. Clark, Chicago visitor to Yellowstone National park, is persistent if nothing else. For five seasons Clark has been attempting to land a giant Loch Leven trout at Nez Perce creek and the Firehole river. Year after year Clark has stuck to the spot after the fish made away with hook, line and tackle the first time he snagged him. Clark now is planning to go after the giant trout with deeper fishing equipment.

Herbert Hoover had been president for five months when he celebrated his 55th birthday with a week end respite from farm board discussions. The holiday was spent at Camp Rapidan with Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, fishing and pitching horseshoes.

The presidential party returned to Washington August 12 and Hoover was back at his desk the 13th working to make up for lost time.

Tired Man. President Hoover was a very tired man in August of 1930 and was beginning to realize the thankless nature of the job he had undertaken. His 56th birthday was spent at Camp Rapidan, but the week end trip proved to be no holiday. There was a dispute to settle between the army and navy concerning control of the coastal air defense of the Canal Zone and Pearl Harbor, Hawaii. Prohibition was a standing worry and antagonistic reaction to the budget was at its highest point. Blame was being heaped on the shoulders of the president for signing the 1930 tariff bill.

Hoover, although at Rapidan, worked all day August 10, 1931. Election year was four months away, and anti-administration attacks had begun to fill newspapers and the mouths of stump orators who condemned the existing order of things. The president was blamed for posing as a miracle man in 1928 and of disclaiming the ability to bring back prosperity in 1931.

Final Presidential Birthday. The final birthday as president, in 1932, saw the republican convention praising Hoover, shouting testimonials of its confidence in his ability and integrity. But President Hoover, preparing for his acceptance speech, was tired and not greatly elated by party plaudits. He realized his convention victory did not necessarily indicate the country's choice.

He went to Camp Rapidan August 7, but even the weather seemed conspiring against him. A new heat record was reported August 8. The president was forced to return to Washington.

The day before his 58th birthday anniversary, he was attacked bitterly by a group of writers headed by Etherwood Anderson, stormy petrel of realism and labor, for evicting bonus seekers. A new worry, the exchange

Through the Editor's Spectacles

By GEORGE

If there is anything wrong with the following story Ed Caffrey is to blame.

Caffrey says that Doc Woods and Doc Graham took to the swimming pool the night of the bathing revue at Lake Cisco to get a closer view of the contestants. After they had gone to the trouble to don bathing suits and had swum across the pool to a strategic point, they discovered that they could not see without glasses. The process was all to be retraced and they witnessed the spectacle from the fringes of the crowd.

I notice the city commission has named a committee to suggest self-liquidating projects for loans from the public works administration. The projects ought to be of the character that will not only return permanent value to the city but stimulate other development.

Rising Star has the right idea. Talking with Will Tyler, mayor and banker, the other day I learned that Rising Star is to ask a loan for the sort of community processing center that will combine about every reasonable service that a diversified farming section would need.

There would be a cold storage plant, a peanut processing plant, a cannery, a poultry plant, potato curing plants, pecan market and a variety of other plants and services all grouped under one roof.

Rising Star reasons that if the proper type of farming will be done, the community leaders are certain that there will have to be a change in the fundamental agricultural plan and thought of the community. A change to meet new conditions. Truck farming, fruit farming and diversification along lines that will best meet the climatic and soil conditions of the community will be fostered and the community center is an effort to anticipate this development and to encourage it.

To make it go the cooperative association is being planned. The association would lease the community center and repayment of the loan would be made out of the rentals.

Such a community plant, providing every character of service that a farmer would nominally desire in the processing and disposition of his products will prove an excellent drawing card. More important, however, is the fact that the presence of such facilities will encourage a certain type of farming where mere lip service would fail.

Rising Star has done another thing of considerable community value this year. It planted a small plot of idle, rich ground to vegetables and has been raising so much food that not only needy families but citizens in general have shared in the distribution of the products of this community garden. The garden cut considerable cost off the relief bill of the community.

BARGAIN BRIDE

By KATHARINE HAVILAND TAYLOR

BEGIN HERE TODAY

ELINOR STAFFORD, 20, falls in love with BARRETT COLVIN, 35, but her jealous, scheming mother breaks up the romance by convincing Barrett that Elinor is a heartless flirt.

When Elinor's aunt, wealthy MISS ELLA SEXTON, dies she leaves her fortune to Barrett. Then drunken VANCE CARTER shoots BENTWELL STAFFORD, Elinor's father. Barrett inherits the money and lives in his home as a guest for a year but will give her the entire SEXTON fortune to divide among her relatives. Knowing the money may save her father's life, Elinor agrees.

The marriage takes place. Barrett, in spite of the lies Lida told him, finds himself more in love with Elinor than ever. Barrett has a ward, nine-year-old GEORGE MOORE, who is the son of his half-sister, MARCIA RADNOR. Barrett has promised Marcia never to reveal the boy's true story. Lida Stafford discovers the child's existence.

Elinor's father dies. Barrett takes her to Cuba and the trip is a happy one. After their return Lida tells Elinor about Barrett's ward, inheriting the boy is Barrett's son. Elinor asks him about the boy but, because of his promise to Marcia, Barrett cannot explain.

Misunderstandings between the two increase. Barrett decides to join an expedition to South America. Elinor finds a house in the country and plans to go there and make a home for the boy.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XLIV

BARRETT took the key from the lock of the door before he answered. Then he said, "I never have tried to hide the boy, Elinor."

She moved one hand nervously. "The child has a right to live in your home," she said insistently. "A real home such as Aunt Bessie's boys have. It's horrible to be shunted from place to place. I know all about that!"

He said nothing, staring dully out at the Sound. "Haven't he a right—a real right—to live in your house?" Elinor demanded.

"Perhaps," he conceded. She flushed with anger. "How can you doubt it?" she asked as close to stridently as she could speak.

Barrett made no reply to that. After they were seated in the car he asked, "Do you want to stop at the Tropics?"

"Not today unless you particularly want to."

"No," he answered. The necessary pretending before Bessie Trophe would be too difficult!

Elinor sat rigid. She drew away from him on turns of the road where, with the motion of the car, her shoulder might have brushed his. He felt this deeply. But he had no notion of her thoughts.

Elinor was thinking of the child to be born in that small house they had just left. Barrett's child. She had not told him about it. At first the secret had made her wildly happy but now all that was changed. It only made the situation in which she found herself more bitter, more hopeless.

Barrett turned to look down at her and saw tears in her eyes. "My God, this is cruel, Elinor!" he whispered.

"More cruel than you know," she answered.

He smiled grimly at that. "I think not!" he said surely.

FOR miles they traveled without speaking. When they reached home Barrett went to the library. There, alone and smoking hard, he tried to decide what to do about the expedition, whether it was best for her to have him out of the way. That would determine his course. Her feeling and her need. Nothing else seemed of any importance to him.

They dined almost in silence. Even before the servants they no longer pretended devotion to each other. The strain was too great. Higgins, oppressed and worried by the atmosphere, moved dejectedly. Scowling was very much amiss. Higgins could not understand it. These two young people should have been utterly and completely happy together.

The other servants were aware of the situation and this distressed the butler.

In the midst of the dinner Higgins answered the telephone and hurried back to the dining room. He said to Barrett, Mr. Radnor says he must speak to you, sir."

"Bring the telephone, please," Barrett answered in a tone of complete disinterest.

Higgins brought the instrument, plugged it in and set it at Barrett's hand.

"Yes," Higgins heard. There was a silence and then a shocked, "Oh, no, Dick!"

After a few more words Barrett stood up. "It's the baby!" he said. "Something's wrong. They brought him to town this morning for Winters to look after him and he's worse. Dick says Marcia's nearly wild. I'm afraid I'll have to go down—"

ELINOR said nothing but she had lost color. She sat staring at her plate. Her suddenly trembling hands nervously fingered the silver.

Here was a new peril—the loss of a child. That too might be before her. If she should lose her child she would have nothing—no one in the world—left! Marcia had Dick Radnor, a devoted husband who loved her with all his heart.

Another thought cut her heart with knife-like thrust. Was Gertrude's mother living?

Barrett turned at the door. "Goodby," he said wistfully. "Goodby," Elinor answered. There was no softening in her tone and he moved away heavily. Higgins, entering with the dessert, said cautiously, "Mrs. Colvin, may I speak to you about something that has been troubling me?"

"Certainly, Higgins," she told him but not as she would have answered a few weeks ago. The butler had never known anyone to change so completely in such a short time.

"I'm troubled about Mr. Colvin," he went on, rubbing his hands together in embarrassment. "He's not well. Mrs. Colvin, and could never now break his promise to her. He could never—"

Former Marshal Rates Hardin Greatest Gun Fighter That Texas Has Ever Known

AMARILLO, Aug. 1.—Fred Sutton, Kansas City, intimate friend of the old west's most notorious gunmen, as quoted in the Amarillo Globe rates John Wesley Hardin "the greatest gunman Texas ever knew."

In an account which touched on the history of such famous fighters as "Wild Bill" Hickok, Billy the Kid, Bill Hightman, Wyatt Earp, Bat Masterson, Henry Starr and half a dozen others, Sutton said of Hardin: "The greatest gunman Texas ever produced was John Wesley Hardin, the son of little parrots whose father was a minister. 'Wes' was born May 26, 1853, and was killed August 20, 1895.

"During his 42 years of life he beat the record of Billy the Kid, who had killed 21 men by the time he was 21 years old.

"Hardin was a fancy handler of guns, which were always single ac-

RISE NOTED IN POULTRY AND EGG SHIPPING

AUSTIN, Aug. 1.—Total interstate rail shipments of poultry and eggs during June were 131 cars, exceeding the 101 cars shipped in the corresponding month last year by 30 per cent, the University of Texas bureau of business research reports.

Shipments of live and dressed poultry, including turkeys, amounted to 84 and eggs to 47 cars, compared with 64 and 37 cars respectively in June, 1932.

The statistical position of both poultry and eggs in the United States from the standpoint of cold storage holdings is less favorable than on July 1 a year ago, according to the United States bureau of agricultural economics. Total case equivalent of both shell and frozen eggs was over twelve million cases on that date, against about nine million cases a year ago. The variation in cold storage age holdings of the different classes of poultry is quite marked. In some instances there is relatively little change from a year ago but the holdings of fowls are about twice those on July 1 last year.

Marketings of poultry and eggs during the coming months will probably be influenced considerably by feed prices which have risen sharply,

And since I am a woman, I do appreciate the fact that my Lucky Strike never offends my fastidious sense of daintiness. Men smile at my feminine reasoning. To them the character of Luckies' fine tobaccos seems more important. But my woman's intuition tells me that the purity of "Toasting" is never to be forgotten.
