NEW LAW GAINS $330,000 IN GAS TAXES IN JUNE

AUSTIN, Aug. 7 — Comptroller George H. Sheppard's gasoline tax enforcement "army" of detectives and auditors, created by the legislature last March, recovered the record sum of $330,000 in "missing" gasoline taxes during June, at an expense of but $15,600.

This was the gist of a summary of June activities released to the Texas Good Roads association today by J. W. McReynolds, division chief at the request of the comptroller. Comptroller Sheppard, elated, saw in the figures "proof" that if the people will help, Texas can save the predicted $4,000,000 a year in gas taxes heretofore stolen.

"Consider what this means to the taxpayers," the comptroller said. "It means that in February, the month before this new law was passed we were headed for a $2,500,000 decrease in annual gas tax returns; but now we have wiped that out and are moving at the rate of $1,500,000 increase.

For the LOVE of EVE by Lucy Walling

For the LOVE of EVE by Lucy Walling

CHAPTER I
It was a brief and hurried marriage ceremony, not at all the imposing affair Eve Bayless had dreamed her wedding would be.

EVE BAYLESS

Now the earnest young reactor was giving them his blessing. Dick's ring was on her finger, and her arms were around her husband's neck, his lips, possessive yet very tender, pressed to hers. Eve's heart melted. In that moment she was almost ready to give up everything for Dick. Her work, which she had coveted almost within reach, the career she had dreamed through her girlhood—these were moved to heap on love's altar as a sacrifice.

OUT by the time his roadster had nosed its way through the noonday traffic to the side entrance of Bixby's department store, where Eve was employed as copy writer in the advertising office, Dick's mood had changed. Eve, sweetheart, don't go back! Don't want my wife out earning her living. Let me take care of you, darling. You know—the night of marriage we talked about that—that's what I want. A little house with a fireplace and a garden and—a baby—plished in the allotted time and the brown costume and the corsage of creamy, fragrant-rosebuds with tawny orchids that Dick had sent, put away in her locker. Thank goodness none of the girls whom she knew at Bixby's had spied that corsage! They could scent a wedding months away.

EVE was relieved to find there was no one in the advertising office except Marya Vlad, the fashion artist, who was working at her drawing board in a corner by the window. Perhaps Marya was not so oblivious to what went on about her as she seemed. Perhaps her candid blue eyes were more penetrating than her fellow workers realized, but at any rate she was too courteous and considerate to ask questions that might prove unwelcome. She versation was on dangerous ground. It had been on the tip of her tongue a moment ago to tell Arlene and Marya about the wedding that noon in the Little Stone Church, but she was not yet ready for that disclosure. Too many things were crowding themselves into this day.

THE second of the most important events of Eve's life was to take place within two hours after her wedding. Two sharp sounds of the buzzer summoned her to the office of Earle Barnes, advertising manager of Bixby's. Although her work took her to Barnes' office many times each day, Eve felt half-sick with trepidation this time. She trembled involuntarily, and her head throbbled with a dull ache. Yet she strove to maintain an appearance of outward calm. A swift glance in the wavy old mirror hanging over the washstand in the corner reassured her, and the group gathered about Barnes' desk little suspected that the lovely, flushed face and eager bright eyes of the girl joining them masked real fright. Eve's chin was held high, however, and she managed a smile as she acknowledged the salutatory nod of white-haired Mr. Bixby, founder and owner of the store. So much depended upon the outcome of this conference.

Barnes drew up a chair for Eve, next to Alice Marshall, who was first assistant advertising manager. Mr. Bixby brought from his vest pocket a pair of Oxford glasses which he unfolded and adjusted on his dignified nose. "The better to see you, my dear," thought Eve, and she felt that with the aid of those powerful lenses he could pierce through to her innermost thoughts and discover her secret.

"Oh—how nice!" Eve managed to articulate. "It will give added interest and importance to the launching of your special column and ought to give you talking points for many weeks to come. Women read department store advertising primarily for the purpose of learning of bargains and new merchandise. I've always contended, however, that in addition advertising should be chatty and interesting in itself. Well, we're counting on you to make Bixby's advertising chatty and interesting."

CHAPTER I-A
MR. BIXBY frowned slightly. "Yes, you are to start tonight. I thought that point was definitely understood. As you know, Miss Marshall leaves Saturday. We want you here the following Monday.

"Go up to my office," Mr. Bixby went on, "and Miss Birney will take care of your expense money. She's wired for a hotel reservation and ordered your transportation. Take whatever time you need this afternoon to go home and pack or for shopping." With an indulgent smile he dismissed an excited yet frightened Eve.

Eve knew that this trip to New York meant that the management at Bixby's had almost certainly decided upon her as the successor to Alice Marshall. When she accepted the expense money for the trip, she felt she had sealed her fate. It was the thing she had wanted, of course. She had slaved to get where she was. Eve's work always had come before her pleasures and ever since she began working she had bent all her energy toward one goal—to become manager of an advertising office. This promotion was a long and important step toward that ambition.

The expense money exchanged for Traveler's checks and tucked safely into the charms bag with her precious wedding ring. Eve went to the Y. W. C. A. where she had roomed ever since coming to Lake City, and packed a bag for the New York trip. The small, shabby room at the Y that she had occupied these last busy, happy months of her girlhood already seemed a little strange, a little deserted. Eve had stayed on here even after she could have afforded more attractive and comfortable quarters. This decision was prompted entirely by economy. The building was conveniently near her work, and provided room and board at a very reasonable rate. Eve preferred to economize thus and put the money saved into pretty clothes and educational advancement. Eve was careful; thrifty. She did nothing without a definite purpose.

With a quick look to see that no one was near, Dick gathered her in his arms.

AS she packed for the trip Eve remembered regretfully that she really had very little beside her clothes to take to her new home. She had never as yet done so many things, bought pretty things to adorn her future home. Esther, her sister, had dozens of lovely gifts to take with her when she married. But Esther had had a long engagement to a home town boy, showers, engagement parties, and a wedding to which a wide circle of relatives and friends were invited. Those things meant so much to Esther. With Eve marriage was important, but so was her career.

Eve recalled how she had started at Bixby's. Determined to get a foothold as a copy-writer, she had made the rounds of all the agencies and all the stores in Lake City before she reached Bixby's. The fact that no one needed a beginner and frankly told her so, had not discouraged her but merely put her on her mettle. Then she did what she considered a daring, preposterous thing. She went to Bixby's, most exclusive store of all, and begged answer that he would always be waiting for her.

The November day had turned stormy and Eve brushed the snow from Dick's shoulders as they reached his roadster. How handsome he looked in his new navy-blue camel's hair overcoat. There was an air of unassuming prosperity about him. Dick tucked her in, pressed her hand and closed the door. When he slipped behind the wheel and started the motor Eve leaned over and kissed him. With a quick look to see that no one was near, Dick gathered her in his arms for a brief instant and as quickly let her go. She would tell him now. Might as well have it over.

"Happy?" he asked. "You know I am," she told him and managed to smile. They drove to Mission Inn for their wedding dinner. Eve was glad that Dick had selected this charming place. The evergreens outside the imposing, tile-roofed stucco building were mantled with Christmas-like whiteness. Inside, soft organ music came from the chapel. AT their table—a small one set for two—the southern California influence for which Mission Inn had been famed was even more in evidence. A starred ceiling of heavenly blue shut out the winter night and storm. Wisteria trailed along the eaves and hung in purple clusters. Brilliantly colored parakeets looked saucily at the diners from their ringed perches near the fountain. Here was a lemon tree in a green tub and there an orange tree or an oleander. The air was fragrant with exotic blossoms. On a wrought iron balcony above sat a senorita in yellow, wearing a black lace mantilla and a red rose in her hair. She was picking out soft melodies on a golden harp. Dick had reserved the table and ordered the dinner. Excited and worried as she was, Eve realized that she was hungry. She remembered now that she had eaten nothing since breakfast. She slipped the mushroom soup, with its unusual pliancy of flavor, for which the inn was famous and ate with relish the baked squash which was another specialty of the place. When the dessert arrived—frozen cream molded in the form of mission bells—she looked thoughtfully across the table at Dick. "Our wedding bells, Dick," she smiled wistfully. "I like it this way," he said. "Without all the fuss and excitement. Just we two in a world by ourselves."

GERKEN TO BE INSTALLED BY PAPAL LEGATE

PAMPA, Aug. 7.—The first visit of the official representative of the pope in the southwest will be made Aug. 21 when the Most Rev. Amelto Giovanni Cicognani, D. D., apostolic delegate to the United States will arrive in the panhandle to accompany Archbishop-elect R. A. Gerken of Amarillo to Santa Fe.

The papal legate will install Bishop Gerken of the Amarillo diocese as archbishop of Santa Fe on August 23. A special train from Amarillo to Santa Fe and return will carry prelates, clergy and the laity who will accompany the apostolic delegates and Bishop Gerken. The train will leave Amarillo Aug. 22, arriving at Santa Fe the following morning.

Catholics from all parts of Texas are expected to attend the installation ceremonies. It is understood that Bishop Lynch of Dallas in 1917 will be present.

The archdiocese of Santa Fe is probably the most famous in the United States. Interest in the installation has been increased by the announcement that the apostolic delegate would officiate. The Santa Fe archdiocese gained world-wide fame several years ago when Novelist Willa Cather published "Death Comes for Archbishop" dealing with Archbishop Lamy's resignation of the catholic church in New Mexico. Archbishop Lamy was the first to hold that office. Bishop Gerken will be the seventh.

Rise Similar

Bishop Gerken's rise to the see of Santa Fe in the 16 years he took the vows of priesthood has been compared with Archbishop Lamy's rise in New Mexico. Bishop Gerken was created Bishop in 1926. Before that time he was pastor of churches at Abilene, Ranger and other towns in the "oil belt district". He established a phenomenal record by building 10 churches in that time, dedicating one to the Little Flower. Since 1926, while bishop of the Amarillo diocese which comprises 36 counties, he built 35 churches, and the catholic population of the panhandle as multiplied several times.

ANTARCTIC EXPLORERS GIVE DATA TO U. S. WEATHERMEN

By HARRY W. FRANTZ
United Press Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—Early resumption of Antarctic exploration projected by Byrd, Ellsworth and others, is of special interest to American meteorologists from the standpoint of possible contributions to a better understanding of weather phenomena in the south temperate zone.

The observation of weather in high northerly latitudes has already aided in extending the range of advance forecasting in the United States and other north temperate countries, and similarly a better understanding of Antarctic weather would assist future forecasting in such south temperate countries as Argentina, Chile, Australia and South Africa.

Economic Necessity.
The vast agricultural interests of these southern lands make scientific weather forecasting of predominant economic importance to them, a fact especially appreciated in Argentina, which already has availed itself of observations from stations in South Georgia and the South Orkney Islands.

The direction of scientific attention to proposed Antarctic exploration was revealed by Willis R. Gregg, principal meteorologist in charge of the aerological division, United States weather bureau.

"Weather conditions in the Arctic and Antarctic very decidedly affect the temperate regions," he said. "Masses of cold air going out from the Arctic and Antarctic meet masses of warm air from the tropics and the inter-play causes the characteristic weather of the temperate zones, according to polar theory."

Additional Data.
"Additional data regarding weather conditions in both polar regions is therefore of special importance in studying the weather of the temperate zones, both from the standpoint of purely scientific interest and from the practical application to weather forecasting."

"If we had sufficiently detailed observations at a number of places in the polar regions, we would be enabled to predict weather in a general way further in advance. The United States weather bureau does not attempt to forecast weather longer than one week ahead. The possibility of this prediction is due chiefly to the availability of weather observations from Alaska and the Bering Sea."

With observations from Siberia, the range of prediction might be even further forecast."

RACE SEASON AT ARLINGTON TO BE FIXED

FORT WORTH, Aug. 7.—Date for the fall horse-racing season at Arlington Downs, between here and Dallas, should be forthcoming within a short time.

Seven thoroughbred horses owned by W. T. Waggoner, owner of the Arlington Downs, have been brought back from eastern and northern tracks to rest and train for the event.

The races can be held any time after August 31, when the recently passed horse-racing law goes into effect. It probably will be held late in September.

So long has it been since Texans have gone to the window and laid down their bets on horses, they may have become a bit rusty. Horse-racing was barred 24 years ago. The legalized "certificate system" is a softer way of saying pari-mutuels. Racing fans who have followed or attended races where they employ the pari-mutuel system will find the Texas betting quite similar. There are some striking exceptions. The better must be at the track to place his bet. Also there will be no posing of odds at the track.

● ABOVE—IN RATING THE POPULAR CIGARETTES, Shute says, "Camels are milder, and what is even more important to any golfer, they do not jangle the nerves."

● ABOVE—TWO CONTINENTS CHEERED when slender Densmore Shute, brilliant young American golfer, with wrists of steel and nerves that never wavered, won the British Open—the tenth American champion in ten years!

Steady Smokers turn to Camels

When it comes to healthy nerves, "DENNY" SHUTE speaks with authority. "I couldn't have won the British Open if my nerves hadn't been in perfect condition," says Shute. "Healthy nerves are essential to any golfer who wants to turn in a good score. The enjoyment of cigarettes has not interfered with my golf game because I have smoked Camels right along. I have tried all the brands and long ago found that Camels are milder, and what is even more important to any golfer, they do not jangle the nerves."

"Denny" Shute offers conclusive evidence that Camels are milder. That they don't interfere with healthy nerves. That smokers like Camels better, the more they smoke them. Consider the fact that Camels are made from costlier tobaccos—and switch to them yourself. You will also discover that Camels are better for steady smoking.

● RIGHT—"I'M NOT A CHAMPION GOLFER—not even a fair one, according to Mr. Shute's standards! I'm a young married woman, interested in home and children. But I'm inclined to be the nervous type. So I switched to Camels, for the sake of my nerves, and because Camels are definitely a milder cigarette."

How are Your Nerves?

IT IS MORE FUN TO KNOW

Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE tobaccos than any other popular brand. Leaf tobaccos for cigarettes can be bought from 5¢ a pound to $1.00...but Camel pays the millions more that insure your enjoyment.
