IT BUILT THE COUNTRY.

Farm loan and home loan anti-foreclosure measures are only the temporary, negative and relief side of a fundamental fact upon which Texas and the nation have based their growth.

That is the wide ownership of the soil as a prerequisite to contentment of a people and prosperity of a country.

Against the Iron Calvinistic theory of New England that governed men's lives and thoughts as well as their souls, only the widespread ownership of land, that spread colonization, at last was able to bring democratic rule to what was then the nation.

As long as the South and West, and Texas a republic and a state, engaged in homesteading of land to citizens, there was growth, the accretion of wealth, the spread of contentment, prosperity and democracy.

Rescue measures, such as laws to protect some of the home-owners and farm-owners, are urgently needed now, to save one of the bulwarks of the nation. It is hard to comprehend, with the basic fact so plain, why a people has permitted its government so far to drift as to levy the unconscionable burdens of past years upon the owning of homes and land. Texas has seen more than half its farmers become tenants.

The billions now being spent to create work for jobless people, if spent in tying families back to ownership of homes and farms, whether the loans ever were repaid, would go immeasurably further toward stabilizing conditions than it can in hiring still other thousands to overcrowded cities, and tending to make them permanent charges upon government bounty.

Of course, too much wheat and corn and cotton are grown now, one says. But those tilling their own farms would grow their own food. And the answer to overproduction is that, under past conditions, nearly all the wealth created by production has gone to others than the tenants who produced it.

BONDS OR NO BONDS.

Voters are generally aware of the fact that they are to go to the polls on the 26th instant of the present month. To most of them the election is concerned with the question of whether or not Texas shall have legal beer and whether or not it is the will of the state that the 18th amendment to the constitution of the United States be made a dead letter.

Few of them, comparatively speaking, are conscious of the other serious issues that will confront them for determination at the same time.

Among these neglected issues is the question of whether or not the legislature of the state of Texas shall be authorized to issue bonds for unemployment relief in Texas up to an amount not exceeding $20,000,000. It is well at this point, before entering into any discussion of the merits of the question, to make clear a distinction of fact, which is that the election is not to authorize the issuance of $20,000,000 in state bonds, but to empower the legislature to issue bonds for relief as needed up to a maximum of $20,000,000.

The voter will not have indebted his state to the extent of $20,000,000 if his vote for the bond issue amendment is of the majority, but he will have placed it in the power of the legislature to do for the state what it should and must do if it lays its part with the federal government in this war upon distress and need.

The word bond has become increasingly distasteful, particularly to our fast-built communities of the oil belt, during the current depression. We have come to see what over-enthusiastic expansion incurs in the way of tax burdens and obligations. But such experience as has been obtained from municipal enthusiasm should not weigh upon the present issue, because it is an issue of altogether different fabric. Texas, with more than a quarter of a million families in destitute conditions and half a million others rapidly approaching the stage of exhaustion of their resources, is faced with a question of do or don't. And either alternative provides its inevitable consequences.

The federal government has contributed and continues to contribute relief funds to Texas at the rate of $1,500,000 per month. This county has received its quota of that relief, expended through the medium of the RFC relief committee lately superseded by the Eastland County Rehabilitation and Relief committee. The administrator of the federal fund has said that unless Texas puts up a sum justly proportionate to the federal expenditure the federal expenditure will be stopped and the appropriations placed where there is a greater evidence of the sturdy quality of self-help, apophoristically cited as a prerequisite of divine assistance. Is that not equitable? Is Texas justified in expecting the federal government to bear the whole load? How much, outside of community chest and local relief expenditures, has the state of Texas during the past three years contributed to this war against the economic suffering of its citizens? In that time what has been the record of the federal government within the state? It is well to ask ourselves these questions as we consider the ultimatum that now confronts the citizens of Texas.

Briefly, here is the issue: The congress set aside 500 million dollars to be expended in assisting the states to carrying on relief and rehabilitation work. Half of this is to be expended in the form of direct relief and half to be matched by state direct relief funds. Under existing statutes the state of Texas cannot spend any tax receipts on direct relief. The amendment to the constitution simply makes it possible for the legislature, within a maximum period of two years to issue up to $20,000,000 in state bonds, proceeds of which, no commissions to be deducted, would be used to match half of the federal appropriations for relief of the state's destitute.

If the bonds are not voted, the burden of matching the federal funds will fall on local community relief organizations, municipalities and counties, and it takes no astute prophet to hazard a prediction of what would result. Texas wouldn't get any more federal relief money.

By authorizing the bonds, however, to be amortized by a tax other than an increase of the ad valorem burden, the state will be able, by legislative action, to provide the necessary matching funds and to spread the burden of financing this relief over a ten-year period.

Incidentally, the amendment provides for no more than $20,000,000 in bonds and fixes a definite period in which this maximum can be issued.

The issue of relief in Texas must be met. It cannot be evaded. The question of how the issue is met—whether by state bonds or by the haphazard, uncertain and highly improbable methods of local appropriations—is a question for the voter to determine on August 26.

Through the Editor's Spectacles

By GEORGE

I am averse to picking on one or two persons, exclusively. It is only fair to distribute this annoyance impartially over a wide area. But unfortunately, realities dictate the performance of the ideal and whether or not I wish it so, the verities almost compel my attention to be disproportionate.

Since this column was inaugurated there have been two outstanding characters to which its attention has gravitated. Just as a weather vane seeks the source of the wind. They are K. H. Pittard and R. N. Cluck.

With apologies to you readers, I again approach the subject of Cluck. Mr. Pittard is exempt today.

It appears that Cluck has become a Shriner. The Shrine is ratified Masonry. As I understand it, being not of that brotherhood as well as nothing else in fraternal generality, the Shrine is the privileged stratosphere of Masonry where humor is supposed to have the ruling hand.

In the doldrums of the depression something became seriously the matter with Humor and to save the day the order initiated Cluck. According to the Eastland county boys who attended the ceremonial at Fort Worth, the expedition was so successful that it will be repeated at intervals when necessary.

Each of the novices before initiation is examined for physical fitness to undergo the ordeal and the wind tempered to the lamb. Cluck, having a splendid physique, was pronounced fit by the physician. Later, seeing a novice who had protested ailments being tenderly dealt with, the Cisco novice perceived his mistake. He tried to backtrack.

"Doc," he complained, "I forgot to mention a while ago that I have had terrible pains under my arm."

next week is the result of my having said too much too soon. Ed Caffrey, whom I summarily challenged in the annual Cisco Country club's golf tournament, swung out yesterday and qualified with an 84. I thought he was speaking of nine holes and that is just about what I can do. But, it was 18 holes.

Now I can't get around 18 greens in anything under 110. I can't travel with a burd who uses only 43 or 44 licks to tour all the nine holes. Of that course, I should be made ridiculous. For the sake of my dignity and tender sensibilities I shall have to go visiting unless Ed gives me a handicap of at least 10 strokes over nine holes.

In the beginning of his career, T. C. Williams, Cisco school principal, is said to have had an ingenious faith in humanity. The vicissitudes of dealing with loud papas and managers since that fledgling era, however, have damped the youthful gullibility.

Facing his first roomful of students, T. C. sought a common denominator of spirit upon which he might erect a structure of idealistic educational policy. (If you folks don't know what I mean, forget it. I'm wondering myself. It doesn't have anything to do with this yarn, whatever it is, except to serve as an approach, and it does that well enough.)

Said Williams: "Now, if there are any dumb bells in the room will you please stand."

There was silence for a long period as no student arose. Finally in the rear of the room a long, freckle-faced, honest-looking son of the clouds arose.

"My boy," gushed Williams, "I congratulate you upon your sincerity. But you don't consider yourself a dumb bell?"

"No sir," replied the youth, "but I just hated to see you standing by yourself."

I have come to the sudden conclusion that I should take my vacation next week and diplomatically absent myself from Cisco over August 18th. My parents in far-off Louisiana need visiting and maybe I should go there.

The resolution is the child of chagrin—I, mean the resolution to absent myself from Cisco, not the resolution to visit my parents. The latter has been my intention all summer, contingent upon my being able to take up the necessary gasoline money. But the purpose to go pointed by the national government to head the women's state organization of cooperation in the national recovery program, has set out in her work. She is planning to create groups of women in each county, and, through them, committees or chairmen in each precinct, to carry on the women's share of the campaign. Mrs. Loving said she does not herself appoint the county woman's chairman; but that the local leaders will be nominated locally. After they are named, she plans to transmit to these local leaders the plans for the campaign designed to enlist all the women in the national recovery program. It is a big job. The program is detailed even to a house-to-house canvass to sign up every housewife, city and rural, in support of the president's ambitious and countrywide program.

Tree-Planting Is Part of Highway Commission Program

By RAYMOND BROOKS
AUSTIN, Aug. 8.—As a part of its complete highway program, the Texas highway commission has begun plans for placing of native Texas tree along some of the main thoroughfares of the state.

This, designed as beautification, will improve the fine Texas roads and enhance the pleasure of their use.

Natural scenic beauty, and the practical benefit of shade will make a definite part of the total sum of worth of the highways.

The tree-planting should be extended as far as possible. Local cooperation in various counties should be encouraged. Ultimately, every paved highway should be lined with fine shade trees. The work of setting out these trees will provide variety in the range of labor now being given employment.

Butler and his colleagues grappled with in May, that of trying to do substantial justice to state workers of the next two years of rising prices, even though state workers of the past two years got by without pay cuts while living costs were at the bottom.

STILL NAMES NOBILITY

MADRID, Aug. 8.—Use of titles of nobility is forbidden by law in Spain, yet it is interesting to note that many of the republican newspapers in their social columns continue using such titles with great gusto while in their political columns they use another name for the same person. Thus, a newspaper in its general news columns refer to Duke Santiago Stuart, but in its social columns it is always the Duke of Alba.

MOTOR LOVERS ARE TOLD TO VISIT MEXICO

By MERRILL E. COMPTON
 United Press Staff Correspondent
 DALLAS, Aug. 8—Motor loving North Americans are advised by Michael and Virginia Scully, authors, of Grand Rapids, Mich., to explore Mexico.

The Scullys record their experiences in motoring 3,000 miles in the sister republic to the south of Texas in a recent book, "Motorists' Guide to Mexico," published by the South-West Press, Dallas.

"The opening of Mexico's first system of motor highways means the opening of a new world to the American motorist," they write in their introductory chapter. With typical American salesmanship they endeavor to entice the motor tourist in Mexico by answering his chapter in such questions as: "But is it safe?" and "how are the roads?"

Of the former, they write, "we drove about 3,000 miles through the republic in three months. We encountered nothing but friendliness and courtesy, even from traffic police. We witnessed two arrests, both for drunkenness, and these occasions marked our nearest approach to violence and crime."

Draw Comparison.
 Answering the latter question, they draw a comparison with present day Mexico and the Mexico of 1923 which they said was then "as inaccessible as Australia to the American motorist." Armed with statistics, they support Mexico's claims to highway development.

Successful in answering these questions they advise with painstaking care the preparations for such a motor tour as their own, or for lesser distances. The problem of motoring, of motoring supplies and of getting about the country after leaving the Rio Grande is amply covered.

To Texans the book has more than customary interest. Texas is next-door neighbor to Mexico. No spot in the state is more than a good day's drive from the Scullys' suggested port of entry to Mexico, Nuevo Laredo. For tourists from outside Texas they advise two routes to Nuevo Laredo, either through central Texas via San Antonio to Laredo, or from Houston along the gulf-coast to Laredo.

Day-to-Day Guide.
 They write a day-to-day guide how to travel Mexico. Routes, hotels, automobile service stations, recreational centers, fishing holes, old temples to visit and marketing spots are located. Three chapters are devoted on Mexico City, covering in detail information about the hotels and tourists accommodations, the shopping that can be done and what attractions are to be seen.

Typical of their style in describing a section of the country is their narrative about Tamazunchale, which said in part:

"Until late 1931 this town of 2,500 people had never seen an automobile. If a citizen wanted to reach Mexico City, he rode for 12 days through the mountains burroback. * * * The automobile is still a big surprise to Tamazunchale. * * * But the bus line from Mexico City to Tampico runs through the town nowadays, and there are three gasoline stations, plus an adequate repair shop, to serve the motorists. * * * Tamazunchale lies at the base of the great climb. No matter if you have scaled the Alps, the peak 10 miles can offer you one of the real thrills and many of the most beautiful views of a lifetime."

At the end of chapters the authors have condensed factual information under the heading "For Your Information." It is a galaxy of facts covering the information as to the American consulates, banking facilities, garages, theaters, cafes and bars and other conveniences or necessities. Maps, both of highway systems and of cities, making the book useful. A collection of useful English and Spanish phrases in the back of the book.

Colorless Film Days Are Numbered

BERLIN, Aug. 8—The days of the colorless film are numbered; it soon will go the way the silent film went.

Dr. Gaspar has developed a new type of color film, which represents a decided progress in this field. He does not claim to have discovered a new principle, but claims that it took him ten years to achieve an improvement upon present processes which will turn color photography from an expensive hobby into a reasonable business proposition.

The principle which Dr. Gaspar adopted works thus: the film is covered with three sensitive layers, each of which, however, reacts only to light-rays of a certain color. The layers are tinged with the color to which they are susceptible. Thus, when the film is exposed, three different pictures are produced superimposed on each other, each containing only one color. Since, however, all colors in nature are but blends of three basic colors the three superimposed pictures will faithfully reproduce all natural shades.

 Natural GAS Remains
 Your Lowest Priced Domestic Servant

PRICES are going up. So say the newspapers and business experts... so say the price tags in the stores. Food, clothing, commodities in general, are moving steadily to higher levels to meet changing conditions.

But Natural Gas Service, always your lowest priced domestic servant considering the value received, remains at its same modest price level. Instead of advancing to keep pace with other costs, it now becomes by comparison an even greater value than before.

Yes, you can still cook a dinner for three people, make 33 cups of coffee, or operate a gas refrigerator from 8 to 10 hours for a gas cost of only ONE CENT for each of these operations, because Natural Gas Service remains your lowest priced domestic servant!

FEARFUL CUBA AWAITS MOVE OF PRESIDENT

HAVANA, Cuba, Aug. 8 — A terrorized capital today awaited the decision of President Machado, who was confronted with the choice of giving up his office or plunging his country into bloody revolution.

DRASTIC CURB ON EXCHANGES TO BE SOUGHT

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8 — Drastic legislation to curb stock speculation will be introduced in the coming session of congress, Sen. Elmer Thomas, Dem. Okla., announced today.

He was not satisfied with recent regulations applied by exchange officials and advocated prohibition of margin trading, buying and selling of stocks by floor traders, specialists and pools.

The nature of the new legislation, he indicated, would depend largely upon what further steps towards self-control may be taken by the stock exchanges.

JAPAN HOLDS ITS IMPERIAL NAVAL REVIEW THIS MONTH

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is another story in a series about the women holding important posts in the Roosevelt administration.

By FREDERICK C. OTHMAN United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8 — Some people call President Roosevelt "Mr. President." Some call him "Mr. Roosevelt." Some still call him "Mr. Governor." But Miss Margaret LeHand has a name for him all her own.

"She calls him 'F. D.'"

"Good morning, F. D.," says Miss LeHand when the president arrives at the executive offices. "This is ready for you to sign, F. D.," she says when she prepares a document for him.

All of that indicates that Miss LeHand is closer to him even than the members of his cabinet. The indication is correct. As personal secretary of Mr. Roosevelt, Miss LeHand knows more about the business of the United States than any other one person, the president excepted.

She lives in the White House and is regarded by the numerous Roosevelt family as a real member of the family. They take her on picnics and to parties. They confide in her and they call her "Missy."

Even the president calls "Missy" when he wants to talk to his super secretary.

"Missy" is a vivacious and charming woman. She is trim, well dressed and usually smiling. She has dark brown hair, tinged with gray, and blue eyes which sparkle when she talks about "F. D."

She was born in Somerville, Mass., worked in Washington as a government stenographer during the World War, later obtained a job in democratic headquarters in Boston and finally was hired by President Roosevelt in 1920 when he was campaigning for the vice presidency.

Mr. Roosevelt soon found her invaluable.

She worked with him during the busy years in Albany where he was governor of New York, accompanied him on his unprecedented airplane dash to the Democratic National convention in Chicago and then as a matter of course became one of the most important members of his official family in Washington.

Miss LeHand is an expert at drafting innumerable letters which do not require the personal attention of the president. She knows him so well that she always knows exactly what to say and how to say it.

Whenever a group picture of the Roosevelts is made, Miss LeHand is in it. She frequently lends the president her $1.50 fountain pen for the signing of bills. She considers it the most historic pen ever.

She was about to hand it to him on one important occasion when the movie cameras began to grind.

"Franklin," exclaimed Mrs. Roosevelt, "you fix your hair."

The president smoothed down his unruly locks, the efficient Miss LeHand produced her fountain pen and the ceremony continued.

"Therefore, we, B. W. Patterson, judge of the 88th district court of Eastland county, Texas, and Geo. L. Davenport, judge of the 91st district court of Eastland county, Texas, by authority vested in us under Article 1647 R. S. 1925, of the State of Texas, do hereby appoint and constitute the said W. S. Michael, the duly constituted and lawful county auditor of Eastland county, Texas, for the ensuing term of two years.

"Given under our hands this 3rd day of August, A. D. 1933.

"B. W. PATTERSON,
"Judge, 88th District Court."
"GEO. L. DAVENPORT,
"Judge 91st District Court."

Wets Claim Arizona As Certain Victory

PHOENIX, Ariz., Aug. 8 — Wet forces claimed a cut and dried victory today as Arizona voters balloted on repeal of the 18th amendment and nominated a democrat to succeed federal Budget Director Lewis Douglas as the state's only representative in congress.

Absence of dry convention delegates on the ballot led anti-prohibition leaders to notify James Farley, chairman of the democratic national committee, that the state was certain to become the 21st ratify repeal.

Dry forces were not represented on the ballot because they failed to secure enough signers on the petitions before the deadline.

Reach for a Lucky — for always Luckies Please!

I can't help feeling that "Toasting" makes a difference

I do not treat my choice of a cigarette lightly... for, as with other little niceties of life, my cigarette is a matter of intimate concern with me. After all, I do place my cigarette between my lips! And so, when I say "Luckies Please" — I am paying a tribute to that immaculate feeling I have when smoking a Lucky. And that is my own individual reason for saying "Luckies Please!"

because "It's toasted"
