THIS NRA ARMY.

What is this NRA army that is being mobilized in Cisco? A great deal has been said about it, but so far most of the talk has touched the surface and has not reached the heart of the matter—most of it has been that an army is being raised and that men and women of Cisco have places in it and that it is going to fight the depression. But how?

In the first place, the organization is called an army as a matter of convenience and because too often in committees of such a general nature and such a large personnel the leaders are allowed to run things to suit themselves while the rest of the people stand on the sidelines and watch, and criticize if the running does not suit them, and do nothing more. In the second place, it is called an army because there is going on in this country and at this time a real revolution, a war against the depression.

Like all other armies, this one has a central organization. In this case it is composed of a man, as the general and a woman, as the lieutenant general.

Under the central organization are three departments of equal rank, but with different functions to perform. These, in turn, are subdivided so that every citizen will have a duty to perform in the fight.

Col. J. A. Bearman, at the head of one of the three branches of service, is to be known as Colonel Number One. His division is to be known as the "Man Power" organization. It will divide the city, make a block-to-block canvass during the closing week of the campaign, the date of which is to be announced later. It will check up on compliance with reemployments. It will make a survey of the unemployed, classifying them as to trades, experience, and qualifications, and assist in bringing the unemployed to employment. Finally, it will check up on proper use of the Blue Eagle by dealers and consumers.

Col. H. S. Drumwright heads the Number Two or Educational and Publicity division. It will be the duty of this part of the army to stir up ballyhoo for the cause and to inform the people concerning the purposes and the progress of the NRA. The campaign is to be carried on through newspaper, motion picture theater, and other forms of advertising.

While this is going on, Col. E. P. Crawford, head of the third or Interpretative division, will be forming a corps of speakers, an information bureau, and an appointment bureau, and sending them out as he finds it necessary. His department will interpret the various codes put into operation, and settle any questions that may arise within the local forces under the Blue Eagle. Any technical questions which lack a precedent here will be referred to Washington through Col. Crawford's division for citation.

This is to be an educational campaign. It will not be a system of coercion or espionage in any sense. President Roosevelt has emphasized the fact that the success of it depends upon the willingness of the people to fight the depression. It will, then, be voluntary rather than forced.

The army, in all three of its phases, will be for the purpose of informing the people of Cisco how they may help rather than forcing them into something to avoid a boycott by their fellow citizens. If the campaign is successful in the fight against the depression it will be because of the people's wholehearted and enlightened action.

BAD-MEN'S TEXAS.

Texas may feel satisfaction, not that it was chosen as the hideout of notorious criminals, but that its officers and people helped solve two of the most brutal crimes of recent times.

Texas, from the day of Sam Bass increasingly down to the present seems to be losing its reputation as a sanctuary for the killer and the desperado. The kidnaper, bank robber or gang killer who looks to the vast state as a safe hideaway will learn to take into account the trained manhunters such as Texas rangers and the San Antonio department of justice men.

Not only in Texas, with its death penalty for kidnaping for ransom, but the rest of the country as well, all seem to have proven kidnaping an unprofitable business, particularly when the kidnaper chooses the wide open spaces of the Southwest for his hideaway.

A few more death penalties for kidnaping and robbery with firearms, and a few more stringent penalties for the free-lance killers who kill for blood-just alone, will begin to weed out those beyond cure, and teach a needed lesson to the rare criminal capable of learning.

EVERYBODY'S JOB.

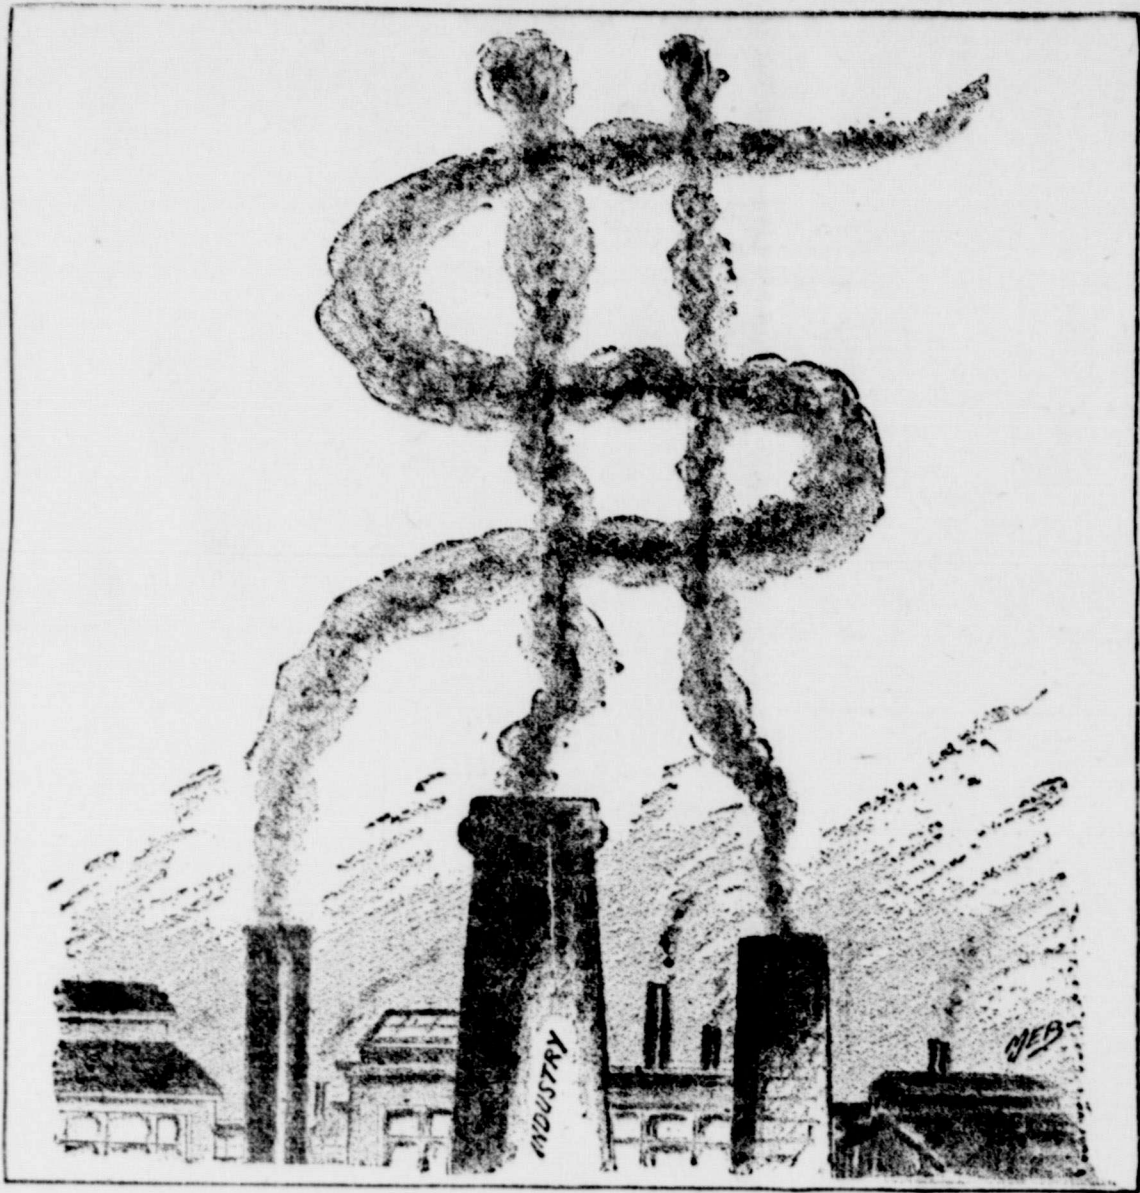

Cong. J. P. Buchanan and Texas business men have seen that Texas' need to have cotton pay the cost of its growing is a matter that affects the merchant and the business interest as quickly and as vitally as it does the farmer himself.

From Austin they have set in motion an effort to enlist the entire economic life of the South in behalf of prices for cotton that will free the farmer from virtual slavery, and unchain business in the cotton states. This has been to enlist business, the merchant and manufacturer, the dealer in commodities, the transportation and financial systems, in the drive to stabilize cotton at prices above production cost.

Mr. Buchanan has called for help from congressmen of other cotton states. The Austin group that appealed to Washington for use of the power of government in behalf of cotton and all its dependent industries, has appealed to all who depend finally on the well-being of agriculture—and that means practically everybody in the South—to join the plea.

Hard Fight Seen For Job on Board of Control

By RAYMOND BROOKS
AUSTIN, Aug. 17—A vigorous contest is going on for the six and a half year job as member of the Texas board of control.

Ray I. Tennant, former Ferguson appointee on the board is regarded by many as the probable selection for another term.

G. W. Chudej, president of the Ferguson Forum, is an avowed applicant for at least the half-year term to fill the vacancy that will exist when Adrian Pool this month resigns. He is receptive also toward the six-year term from next January 1.

Henry Meyers, Rockdale business man, is being frequently mentioned as a prospect for the six-year term.

Gus Doering, Austin banker, is circulating a petition in East Texas. Sam Reddy, a Temple man who reportedly has wide influence with the governor, after he and his fellow-townsmen, Frank Demmon, did such aggressive campaign work last year, has stated in Austin he was supporting a friend of his, but that his candidate already had been given a job in the home owners' loan corporation setup.

Meantime, Gov. Ferguson has given no intimation of the choice to be made. The only thing certain is that as in all such important state appointments, one individual will get what he considers that he deserved, and a much larger number, both of applicants and those who endorsed them, will get disappointed.

Pool's retirement to take a federal job as collector of customs at El Paso, will give Gov. Ferguson only one appointment on the board of control, since it happens that his is the term expiring at the end of the year.

SENATE WORKS OVER HOUSE TAX BILLS

AUSTIN, Aug. 17—The Texas senate cannot originate a tax bill but it can do anything under the sun to any kind of bill that reaches it from the other house.

Early this year the lower house passed an income tax bill, and killed all the different sales tax proposals before it. The senate killed the income tax bill.

Sen. Grady Woodruff of Decatur has announced he will favor the income tax to provide revenues to pay off the state bond issue. That is the first word so far from the income tax advocates, while several in the house have begun debating the form of a sales tax bill to be pushed whether the bonds are approved or rejected.

A controlling factor, perhaps, is that the governor is firmly in favor of a sales tax and against an income tax. But, when the governor submits the subject of taxation, it opens the entire field of taxation, and the choice of a bill, even in the face of a certain veto vests in the legislature.

The sales tax campaign, to be put under way actively at Dallas Aug. 19, is based on the theory that by its specific nature and its widespread of the tax load according to "capacity to pay" or spending capacity, those resisting higher production taxes, higher franchise or occupation taxes and the income tax, will rally behind the plan with enthusiasm.

An oblique support that will make itself felt will be behind the sales tax on the part of representatives of more than 30 state institutions whose salary scales have been riddled just at the time living costs are going up and the national government is demanding that workers be paid enough with which to buy necessities of life.

FEAR GAS TAX BE USED FOR RELIEF

AUSTIN, Aug. 17—Friends of Texas highways, who look beyond the $24,000,000 federal allotment as being less than an average year's construction budget, profess fear that the legislature may divert more of the state highway revenues from the gasoline tax for relief or other emergency purposes.

There is a state organization, headed by Col. Ike Ashburn, chairman of the Texas federal public works committee, whose efforts are directed to conserving the gasoline tax revenues for highway building. "Gasoline taxes," Col. Ashburn has pointed out "constitute simply road rent, and should not be diverted from that purpose. People willingly pay the four-cent gasoline tax—of which now only two cents goes to the roads—for road improvement and building; but they would not willingly bear the burden of other state functions by paying the only 50 per cent sales tax known to man."

Members of the highway commission have already suggested that higher costs will materially cut down the amount of road work that can be done with state highway funds in 1933 and 1934. This statement also added a word of warning against diversion of more of the highway fund than the one cent to pay off county road bonds, and the one cent for schools.

BLACKENED EYE

WATERTOWN, Mass., Aug. 17—Ardoin F. Casgrain, secretary of the Watertown chamber of commerce, found it hard to make his friends believe his explanation of a recent black eye. As a matter of fact, he was walking along a Maine road when a freak storm peppered the countryside with hail-stones the size of hen's eggs. One stone hit him just over the eye.

CISCO AMERICAN AND ROUNDUP

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON WORLD

BY RODNEY DUTCHER NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON—Sumner Welles, the ambassador to Cuba who told President Machado to quit, is likely to be secretary of state some day.

He would decorate that office handsomely. Tall, good-looking, straight as the traditional ramrod, he is a man of great dignity and aristocratic poise. He carries a cane, but wears no spats. He makes his associates here think of an ancient Roman pro-consul.

Welles is cynical and his sense of humor sardonic. But he won the cooperation of both chief factions in Cuba during months of negotiation designed to straighten out a political and economic mess.

He left his post as assistant secretary of state and went to Cuba backed by the personal confidence and friendship of Roosevelt and a record of personal achievement in previous Latin American negotiations. Those two assets lead his friends to believe that he may have the State Department's top job before Roosevelt stops being president.

Roosevelt sent Welles with a flexible program for settling Cuban troubles. His first success was re-establishment of constitutional guarantees for justice in the courts, civil law, free speech and the right of assembly.

It was inferred here, and at Havana that the tyrant Machado would feel called on to resign sooner or later. That prospect was hastened when workers, taking advantage of restored civil liberties, began to strike and precipitated the recent crisis.

POSTMASTER GENERAL JIM FARLEY has been so frank in expressing his views on Democratic patronage that his insistence on retaining key men from the old regime in his department here stands in striking contrast. The assistant postmasters general, holding political jobs, were let go. But men holding 15 or 20 of the top non-civil service jobs—such as the solicitor, purchasing agent, comptroller and chief inspector—were kept on the job or given other posts in the service. No man who had come up from the civil service lost out.

COTTON MILL HEADS UNEASY ABOUT EFFECT

By FOSTER EATON

United Press Staff Correspondent

ATLANTA, Aug. 17.—Cotton mill executives of the south are uneasy about the ultimate effect of the NRA textile code.

At the moment they are somewhat worried over the comparative lack of orders and the fact that large distributors of finished goods are stocked to the hilt.

The mills running under the code for the most part are not running on present orders, but the hope of future orders.

Another element of uneasiness is found in the code application of the heavy processing tax to meet the government's $120,000,000 payment to cotton farmers for destroying part of the 1933 crop.

The tax amounts to $21 per bale, and a bale today sells for about $50.

The president of a large Georgia mill, W. S. Dunson of La Grange, said his plant used 25,000 bales annually.

"Figure up," Dunson said, "the processing tax on our cotton annually will exceed our capitalization. That's the major job of financing and a real load."

Dunson explained that the processing tax would be passed ultimately back to the consuming public but pending sale of the goods into which the cotton is manufactured, the mills have to bear the cost of heavy tax financing.

"It would have been easier," Dunson said, "if the tax could have been split four ways and applied progressively over a period of months, to lighten the initial shock."

The fact that mills are not running on orders today is attributable to the rush of production during late spring and early summer, in anticipation of the code's adoption.

Another cotton tax—the floor stock levy on all inventory, with cotton the major item—has met with widespread protest among mill executives.

An unofficial movement has been launched to induce the president to reduce it.

Mill executives interviewed by the United Press generally manifested an eager desire to co-operate with the president in every possible way, but frankly expressed doubt as to wisdom of some features of the code.

600,143 Bales Of Cotton Used in July

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17.—The senate bureau has reported July cotton consumption at 600,143 bales as compared with 696,472 in June and 278,508 in July, 1932.

CISCO DRIES TO GIVE PROGRAM HERE MONDAY

Cisco dry forces will sponsor a community program at the First Methodist church here Monday evening at 8 o'clock, according to an announcement from Prof. W. F. Bruce, chairman of the education committee.

Some of the city's best dramatic and musical talent will have a part on the program, it was announced.

"The purpose is to arouse public interest in the election of Aug. 26," Prof. Bruce said. "The program is under the auspices of the local organization of dry forces, but it is the belief that the question should be thoroughly studied by every voter, no matter which conclusion he may reach."

He summed up his statement by saying, "Intelligent and unbiased public opinion ought to be relied upon to settle an issue rightly."

New Laws Governing Planes Announced

WASHINGTON, August 17.—New requirements saying that all forced landings of scheduled interstate passenger transport planes must be reported in detail have been announced by Ewing V. Mitchell, assistant secretary of commerce for aviation.

Previous regulations required only that the transport plane companies report the number of forced landings due either to bad weather or mechanical difficulties.

"The information will enable the department of commerce to reduce further the number of accidents in scheduled passenger operations," the announcement said, "by providing more comprehensive data with respect to conditions which might result in accidents."

"The information obtained from these reports will be made available to the operators and manufacturers," the department continued, "without divulging names or places, for the purpose of assisting them in eliminating mechanical failures."

3 DIE IN FIRE AT EASTLAND EARLY SUNDAY

EASTLAND, Aug. 17.—Three persons were burned to death and a fourth was in a hospital as a result of burns which he received in trying to rescue a child from the flames which consumed the home of James Tichenor early Sunday morning.

A fifth member of the family escaped uninjured.

The dead are James Tichenor, 45, geologist for the Arab gasoline corporation, Mrs. Helen Tichenor, and their 10-month-old son, Edward Barton, father-in-law of Mr. Tichenor was burned on the face and hands when he tried to rescue his grandson, Mrs. Barton escaped through a rear door just before the roof collapsed.

Mr. Tichenor formerly lived in Cisco, where he was engaged in the oil business.

Child in Crib

The body of the child was found in its crib in the room which it occupied alone. The remains of Mrs. Tichenor were found on the floor of the bathroom, it being believed that in the smoke she mistook the bathroom door for the door to the child's room and tried to reach it.

Mr. Tichenor, the last person to leave the home, leaped through a window, breaking the glass as he did so. His clothing was burning as he jumped. He died in a hospital four hours later, without regaining consciousness.

First arrivals at the scene of the fire said they saw the infant standing up in his crib and crying and that they tried to rescue him but were driven back by the flames. The houses on each side of the Tichenor residence were also destroyed. The cause of the fire was unknown.

Mr. and Mrs. Tichenor had entertained for a few friends Saturday evening. It was after midnight when the guests departed. The fire occurred about 4:30 Sunday morning.

A triple funeral was held at Eastland Monday afternoon.

The Eastland county commissioners court has ordered a local option election on prohibition to be held August 26 in connection with the general election. County Judge Clyde Garrett told the Daily News.

A triple funeral was held at Eastland Monday afternoon.

A particular subdivision of the county desiring a special election may upon petition have it granted either at the time of the general election, the judge said.

Our Weekly Story...

JACK HOLT "THE WRECKER" with GENEVIEVE TOBIN

Diminutive Sam Shapiro picked his way through the debris that had once been the Pacific Breakers Hotel. A large sign informed the demolition company that he was carrying on the ground, looked up at the emphatic wording and grinned.

"It's a good thing," he said, "Shapiro can't read English."

He picked up the bag and walked further over the ground that was littered with the battered ruins. He stopped before another sign upon which was printed, "DANGER."

"Him-in This I can read," he shrugged. "But why do I carry insurance?"

He walked past broken stone columns, cracked archways and terra cotta that had somehow managed to stand as though in an effort to preserve the dignity that had once been the building.

He dropped the bag and opened the catch. Noticing a doorknob hidden partially by a chunk of solid mortar, he quickly kicked aside the obstructing piece and retrieved the knob. He looked it over carefully, and then with a nod that bespoke favorably of the doorknob he tossed it into the bag.

Cramer, one of the wrecking crew, walked over to Shapiro. Glowering, he looked into the suitcase. "Salute, huh?" he growled.

Shapiro reached into his pocket and brought forth a small card. He handed it to Cramer.

Cramer read: "SAM SHAPIRO, JUNE. If you don't want it I want it." He tore the card in half and tossed it away.

"Come on—thank it!"

"Yes, sir—thank you, eh—Mr. Shapiro was suddenly polite. "I don't believe I got your name."

"Hiller," Cramer snapped. "Hiller," he growled. "Good-bye."

He reached for his grip, but now the case was some ten feet away—near one of the steam-shovels. He walked hurriedly towards it. As he did so, Cramer winked to the shovel operator, and as Shapiro bent over to pick up the bag the huge shovel swung directly behind the little man.

"I'm—I'm sorry," he mumbled. The doctor and Cummings came into the room. Shapiro, his face distorted with pain, pointed to his leg.

"My leg—seems to be a little—"

The doctor bent over and made a cursory examination of the limb. Taking a scalissor from his bag, he cut the lower part of the trouser leg.

The doctor straightened. "Compound fracture," he said; then turned to Regan, whispering, "and a nasty one."

Shapiro's voice was low. "Don't—don't let Sarah."

"Mrs. Shapiro," asked Regan. The doctor commenced to dress the injured leg. Shapiro's head breaking out into a cold sweat as the antiseptic hit the open wound.

A little later the doctor stood erect. "There you are. I guess that hurt a bit, huh?"

Shapiro managed a jauntily grimace through his pain. "It's all in a day's work, ain't it?"

"Plenty of guts, at that," said Regan, approvingly. "What's your name, buddy?"

"Sam."

"Well," said Regan, "you're jake with me."

Shapiro smiled wanly. "All right, Jake. Thank you."

"For saving my life."

Regan grinned for the first time. "That's all in a day's work, too. Forget it."

"Shapiro never forgets," said the little Hebrew.

"Okay, Jake," said Regan. "He turned to the doctor. "Clean him up, Doc."

As the doctor bent to finish his work, Shapiro strode out. He walked across the vast area that was being demolished by the wreckers and approached the street. He stopped as the rough of a girl's high-pitched angry voice reached him.

"Get out, you don't belong here! Get out!"

"German accent, answered, "Wait a minute! Dis is a free country, ain't it?"

"Yeah," the girl shot back, "but there's a quota now. This is my territory. Ask her."

Regan walked quickly towards the arguing couple.

TEXAS PUTS BUSINESS CHIPS ON SIDE OF N. R. A. PROGRAM

By JOSEPH L. MYLER

United Press Staff Correspondent

DALLAS, Aug. 17.—Texas today stood definitely committed to President Roosevelt's revolutionary policies in the drive toward industrial recovery.

Three outstanding recent developments proved the state has placed all its business chips on the side of the national program.

1. Texas cotton growers retired approximately 5,000,000 acres of their current crop from production.

2. Texas employers are flocking under the wings of the Blue Eagle of the NRA.

3. Texas retailers are stocking their shelves heavily in anticipation of a rush of buying as the president's drive for re-employment and augmented purchasing power gets under way.

Adherence to the blanket code agreements grew by thousands of employers daily as the first two weeks of the temporary re-employment campaign neared an end.

Indications were that approximately 80,000 employers, representing around 300,000 employees, will be operating under the blanket code by the end of the period.

Other thousands are expected to join the parade as the drive continues.

Most striking assurance of the faith of business men in the NRA was exhibited at the opening of the 1933 fall market season in Dallas.

Retailers from all over the South-west scrambled for goods with which to supply depleted stocks.

A. H. Bailey, president of the Dallas Wholesale Merchants' Association reported a spirit of high optimism among visiting retailers.

"Purchasers ran more than 100 per cent over the 1932 fall market season," Bailey said, discussing the first half-week of buying.

"Indications point to the most successful season in years."

The retailers themselves based their optimism on signs of fundamental business improvement. H. D. Schwarz of Hempstead, summed up the words of hundreds of other retailers when he said:

"Feeling among farmers is much better... they have made their crops with a minimum of expense and they will be able to pay off their debts with federal benefits from the cotton retirement campaign."

Typical of Faith.

Typical of the general faith in the future was that expressed by J. O. Matthews, Crosbyton merchant, who said:

"There is no reason to believe we will be left high and dry with our heavily stocked shelves. The merchants have done their part in accelerating the business program, and we believe the customers will be able to do his."

From many sources came news of easing credit conditions as farmers and business men made payments on old debts. Recently published bank conditions showed financial institutions of Texas were sufficiently strong to meet the heaviest credit demands.

From rural communities came reports that country banks were loosening up and making loans which this time last year would not have been granted.

Indexes reported by the bureau of business research of the University of Texas continued to point toward expansion in business activity.

Business failures during July, the bureau reported, totaled 41, compared to 70 in the previous month. Liabilities of failed businesses aggregated only $72,000. The figure for June was $2,596,000. In only three months since 1929, according to the report, has the record been brighter than that set in July.

New business ventures were more numerous in July than in the same month a year ago. New corporations receiving charter during the month, the bureau reported, numbered 159 with authorized capital stock of $3,256,700. The figures a year ago were 145 and $2,723,000.

WEST'S STATES HOPE TO BUILD FORT PECK DAM

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 17.—Missouri Valley States, hopeful of seeing river navigation become a reality, are watching intently the progress of a survey of the proposed Fort Peck, Mont., dam site.

Army engineers have ordered a survey to show the nature of sub-surface soil at the site. On the report to be made in Washington in October depends much of the future of the project.

Would Provide Channel

Erection of the Fort Peck Dam would provide a 9-foot channel at all seasons of the year for the Missouri river from its mouth to Sioux City, Iowa, to which point engineers believe river commerce would extend.

Aside from the development of commercial inland water transportation, construction of the dam would stabilize the river and so contribute to the government's program of soil erosion control, and in addition would permit development of huge agricultural projects in Montana.

Northern Counties Benefit

Counties along the northern border of the state, from the extreme eastern edge to the mountains in the west, would benefit by the agricultural development possible if the dam is erected.

The dam would back up water a distance of 1655 miles, and the huge storage capacity obtainable would stay the onrush of snow waters each spring, when the warm south winds turn the mountain valleys and the little streams that feed the mighty Missouri into roaring channels.

Dairy Cattle to Be Tested Next Week

Dr. W. R. Hodges, state veterinarian, will be here Monday and Tuesday to test cows of the local dairies, Dr. P. Lee, city health officer, announced yesterday.

Everyone selling milk or milk products is required to have his cows tested annually, in accordance with the state tubercular laws, Dr. Lee said.

There are some who are disposing of milk whose cattle have not been tested, in violation of the law, and some whose time is about up," Dr. Lee said. "These people must have the tests made."

The veterinarian may be reached at Dr. Lee's office or through local dairymen Monday and Tuesday, it was announced.

NRA UPHELD IN TEST CASE IN FEDERAL COURT

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17.—The Roosevelt administration's vast economic rehabilitation measure was fortified Wednesday by victory for the government in the first court test of the constitutionality of the NRA.

The decision upholding the emergency law was handed down in District of Columbia supreme court on an application of 49 Texas oil producers and refiners for an order to restrain the government from enforcing orders prohibiting interstate shipping of "hot oil."

W. F. Esser, counsel for the oil men, indicated he would appeal.

Utility Stock To Be Shown at Fair

DALLAS, Aug. 17 — No "carnival herds" of livestock are wanted at the 1933 State Fair of Texas, but instead a utility class of fine livestock which are needed on Texas farms will be sought, it has been announced here by A. L. Ward, general superintendent of the department, who explained that "carnival herds" are those bred for show purposes only. Ward predicted the largest livestock show at the 1933 State Fair ever held in the entire south. He pointed out that in keeping cotton production down, the average farmer would have to turn to livestock to replace cotton with feed, and that the breeders of utility animals knowing his would send their best quality livestock to the exposition to show instead of the "carnival herds." These animals which have been bred to bring a profit to the farmer will be the kind shown at the 1933 State Fair of Texas. In beef cattle classes types that can utilize feeds and produce a quality carcass will be shown, while in dairy cattle divisions those animals that have been bred to produce the largest amount of butter fat will be especially emphasized to visitors at the 1933 exposition. Visitors will also be shown the particular type of sheep and hogs which prosper and will bring a profit to Texas farms. "We have planned our entire livestock show," Ward said, "with a view to helping the farmers of Texas replace their cotton acres with feed-stuffs which can be fed to Texas bred livestock and bring a profit to the farms of this state. This is the only means Texas farmers have of

When Crack Express Cracked Up

Plunging from the tracks as it swung around a curve near Pittsburgh, Pa., the locomotive of the Duquesne Express of the Pennsylvania railroad overturned, dragging the tender and two cars from the rails. This photo was taken a few minutes after the wreck. The engine crew was injured and 300 passengers were shaken up.

the orange tints of her bouquet effecting a lovely contrast. The bride who entered on the arm of her father, A. W. Bull, was gowned in white, with trimmings of rhinestones. A short veil of tulle and a necklace of brilliants completed her costume. Her wedding bouquet was of white blooms. The groom's attendant was Henry Stroebel. The wedding party entered the church, decorated with masses of seasonal flowers and ferns, to the strains of Lohengrin's Wedding March. Mrs. Dorothy Prange at the organ. Preceding the ceremony, the children of Reverend Riese's Sunday school sang "Blest Be The Tie That Binds."

Rifle Shooting To Stop, Say City Cops

The police department today asked boys of Cisco to stop shooting small bore rifles within the city limits. "They've been shooting 22 rifles lately," police said, "and we want it stopped. It's against the law, and besides, it's dangerous. We know who is doing it, or at least we know some of them," they said. "We could go get them, but maybe if we ask them to stop they will do it."

CAFE BOYCOTT BRINGS PRICES TO OLD LEVEL

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 17 — Reacting to NRA and a state sales tax the cost of living shot up 60 per cent in one considerable quarter of Los Angeles, but promptly shot down again under an organized boycott. Today prices are back to the old level.

Offer Ten-Cent Meal In Los Angeles' Skid Row, shabby habitat of slipping men—one of the largest in the country because of the mild winters—the Ten-Cent Meal has been a rocklike institution for years. The scores of restaurants along the four or five blocks of dime flophouses and second-hand clothing stores have habitually offered several filling combinations at the price. The usual meal is soup, choice of entree, potatoes and another vegetable, bread and butter, coffee and dessert.

With the inauguration of NRA, plus the state sales tax, restaurant owners to the concerted hoarse indignation of the district's residents, posted placards announcing the new price of meals at 16 cents—five cents extra for added help, one cent for the state.

Boycott Immediate The boycott began functioning at once. Many patrons—odd-job laborers, old newspaper vendors, janitors and the like—protested on honest grounds. They were accustomed to eating only one full meal a day, keeping their living expenses—breakfast (no lunch), dinner, tobacco and bed—within half a dollar a day, and the new deal to them was a real hard-hip. Others—panhandlers, handstuffers, grifters, "hot pitch" men barflies and touts—resisted on principle. For two days the restaurants were deserted. The boys idled outside, ostentatiously eating from paper bag—they had filled for a dime with fruit and buns that had to be sold quickly and reasonably, or not at all. Proprietors Worried Inside, the proprietors—Chinese, Balkan, Afro-American and Nordic—gazed sourly at frozen cash registers. The glass indicator on the coffee urns, barometer of business, was amber to the top. The strike was short. A restaurant keeper cracked. By midnight, the word was out: At midnight the good old days would be back. Many denizens postponed the evening meal until midnight, when there was a rush of business, in response to the new placards: "Meal—10 cents Complete 'We Do Our Part'."
