REPEAL, BEER,

Cisco, in common with the rest of Texas, tomorrow will go to the polls to vote on repeal of national prohibition, and four proposed amendments to the state constitution, one of them modifying the state dry law to permit the sale of 3.2 per cent beer and wine.

In addition Ciscoans will vote with the rest of Eastland county whether or not the county shall re-peal its dry status under the local option law that governed prior to statewide constitutional prohibition. It must repeal the local option vote of 1901 before beer or wine can be sold within the borders of the county, even if the constitution is amended to make room for legal beer and wine in Texas on and after September 15.

The vote on repeal of the 18th amendment is not a state issue to the extent that it will mean legal liquor in the event the state votes in favor of repeal. It would mean that Texas would be the 23rd state to favor repeal of the 18th amendment. Thirteen other states would then have to vote in favor of repeal before the national prohibition could be taken off the statute books.

Would Remain Dry. But even if national prohibition is repealed Texas would still remain in the dry column so far as hard liquor is concerned because the state constitution expressly forbids sale manufacture or transportation of alcoholic drinks within the state. alcoholic drinks within the state. STATE CONTROL The vote on 3.2 per cent beer for Texas is a vote on an amendment of the state prohibition amendment to the constitution so that beer and light wines will be declared legal.

The vote on beer for Texas and the vote on repeal of national prohibition are not related to the extent that defeat or victory for one will legally affect the other Beer is already legal under the national constitution. The vote on beer tomorrow, therefore, is of inkept Eastland county dry for almost state and nation goes wet.

OIL PRICE INCREASE.

The Humble's 10-cent increase in the prices of crude oil yesterday is interpreted in various quarters both in the light of the recent Standard refusal to join other purchasers in a general increase and in the light of the defeat of the New Jersey Standard interests in their opposition to the pricefixing clause in the oil code which becomes effective September 2. On the behalf of the Standard subsidiaries, however, it should be pointed out that the price increase of yesterday is in agreement with the policy which these interests proposed at the time they refused to join other purchasers in a larger increase, which policy asserts that a movement toward stabilization of the market should not be jeopardized by too sudden rises in crude price schedules, but that such price increases should be gradual and synchronized with the degree of stability that is achieved.

Be all this controversy as it will, the fact in which the public, whose well being is concerned with more prosperous times in the oil business, is interested is that prices have increased. Whether this increase was ulterior in motive or based upon sound industrial factors, it can be interpreted hopefully. On the one hand it would be a tribute to the effectiveness of the administration program for industrial recovery as applied through the medium of the oil code. If the large purchasers are now to be put in the character of attempting to sop the Cerberus, then the Cerberus must have

On the other hand, there are reasons to believe that a forecast of the future of the industry, as influenced by the forecast of the future of the industry, as influenced by the implications contained in Mr. heretofore has caused to be disbursted to the implications contained in Mr. ticipatory increases in price.

Unless we can be certain that both possible reasons for understanding the bonds, the News has endeavored constantly to inform $215,000 having been placed at the the increase argue the same end, we can have no faith in the its readers of the vital character of disposal of the former and present effectiveness of the industrial recovery program. We prefer, if at all reasonable, to believe that things are getting better To the Public:

TEST OF TEXAS FORESIGHT.

Tomorrow offers Texas both an opportunity and a test. In exceed $20,000,000 in state bonds adopted the bond issue method for Voters must decide whether their fellow-beings in this for the purpose of relieving those the purpose of adding to and assisstate shall go hungry, shall lack medicine in illness and garments to protect them from the winter's cold. They must decide whether Texans shall have that greatest privilege of all, of earning their livelihood, or must be unwilling helots to live, in helpless insecurity, on charity doled out to them in stingy driblets—and to live with even this food endangered by lack of means to pay for it.

And Texas cannot assure its jobless, its aged and huncry people even this $1.25-per-person dole after this week, inless its citizens go to the polls and provide a relief and relabilitation fund with which to do the job.

That is, if they vote the public works bond issue tomorrow, they will provide for feeding the hungry and creating jobs for those who can work. They will gain the right to continue sharing federal money for this relief work.

Texans know that so long as a dollar remains in the hands of any Texas citizen, or in the cash drawer of any Texas business corporation, people will not be allowed to lie helpless and starve. They know they must, in one way or another, pay the bill of feeding the hungry. They know, or should know, the bond issue will give them a period of 10 to 15 years in which to pay the bill, and a way to spread the cost very thin. They can readily see, that apart from relief of the misery and suffering of this winter, it will be good sound business sense to spread the relief load over a period of years; that it will be sound business judgment to put the relief work on a secure, adequate footing.

SETS DIFFICULT STANDARD.

Moore Lynn will retire Sept. 1 as state auditor, resign-

He is the first state auditor of Texas. The law creating his office was passed back in the Moody administration. Generally it has been regarded as the most progressive step the state had taken in a decade to check up on inefficiency, waste, and stealing.

Auditor Lynn established the worth and benefit of the office. He carved out an ambitious scope of work for the department, reaching out into the field of budgetary control 27 Armadillo. for cities and counties and the state, as well as the post- 28 Fleur-de-lis audit of state accounts.

The full title of the chief of this department is "state auditor and efficiency expert." As efficiency expert, Mr. Lynn set up uniform methods for handling expense accounts of all departments, made a most voluminous survey of the functions and work of each clerk in each state department.

Under laws passed in connection with that creating his office, he has begun to keep records of the fees paid all countv officers, the excess fees paid into the county treasuries; and the city and county and state budgets from year to year.

A further step to take and keep the auditor's department out of politics was recommended in the joint legislative efficiency and economy survey, and embodied in the administrative code. It proposed that the state auditor should not he accountable to the governor, but should be appointed by and answerable to the legislature.

Mr. Lynn, in closing his service, has established the new state department on a high plane, as little as possible under present conditions affected by politics. His successors will have a real mark to shoot at.

Creation of the department in which he has served meant the doom of the wasteful fee system of paying county officials; and even before that obsolete mass of privilege legislation is swept off the books, the work of Mr. Lynn and the senate fee investigating committee is saving the state more than $400,000 a year, by requiring county fee officers to take care against fradulent, padded and excessive claims.

John Mathis of Houston, beer bill author, whom members of the Texas Liberal Legion hoped to name as campaign manager. When Ferguson could not have the plum, he stepped aside and named C. C. McDonald of Wichita Falls.

McDonald and Ferguson hurried to Washington fresh with the aura of victory. Dan Moody, former governor, had been there too. Despite the Ferguson-McDonald visit plums at Washington continued to fall on anti-Ferguson men. If the Fergusonsponsored bonds lose Saturday, the state administration's last contact with Washington will be lost.

Actively opposing both bonds and repeal was Moody. Lined up with Moody in bond opposition was Former Postmaster General Albert Sidney Burleson.

Moody took the stump against repeal. Some saw in the selection of dry Oak Cliff, residential suburb of Dallas, as his speaking place, considable political acumen. Ferguson's dates were chosen with equal perspicacity. His home town heard him, and places where bond demand for relief work was strongest. At Abilene however, he faced the opposition of leaders of the West Texas chamber of commerce, but a barrage from the Forum in their direction preceded

For the LOVE of EVE by Lucy Walling

BEGIN HERE TODAY

EVE BAYLESS, pretty assistant to EARLE BARNES, advertising manager of Bixby's department store, marries DICK RADER, construction superintendent. He wants her to give up her job but she refuses. Eve does not want her employers to know she is married so they keep the marriage secret several months. At Christmas they announce it. They spend a brief vacation at the home of Eve's parents.

Back at the office MARYA VLAD, fash ion artist, and ARLENE SMITH, stenographer, greet Eve excitedly. Eve knows that MONA ALLEN, the new copy writer, distikes her and is trying to cause trouble for her.
