As 1933 drew to a close, the president embarked on a further course of pointing to recovery. He announced the creation of the national emergency council for the purpose of co-ordinating the efforts of the federal government and political sub-divisions in that direction.

Campaign Promises

It was recalled as the old year faded that many of the major platform promises that Mr. Roosevelt made during his presidential campaign were carried to successful conclusion, an accomplishment that in the light of past performances of other administrations—was regarded as outstanding.

He provided in this connection, among other things, immediate banking reforms, tariff truces, assistance to agriculture through acreage reduction, crop loans, and mortgage loans; help for the "white collar" citizen by providing means for those in distress to save their homes through mortgage refinancing, and creation of the civil works authority.

For the youths of the nation Mr. Roosevelt lost no time in providing for an army of them to enter the civilian conservation corps to serve at $1 a day and board. The work they are doing will have its return, he believes, in the results of a planned forestry program.

By FRANK P. S. GLASSEY (United Press Financial Writer) NEW YORK, Jan. 1.—Commodity markets, which formed the arena in the currency battle of 1933 were fought, advanced approximately 40 per cent during the year.

The price level obtaining in the year 1932 has often been mentioned unofficially as the goal toward which the administration in Washington is directing its present campaign. The 1926 average of the United Press index was 171.52, indicating that a long pull is still ahead before the measurement of 7 years ago can be approached.

Although President Roosevelt and his advisers are admittedly not satisfied with the current plane of farm prices, it must be recognized that broad progress toward higher quotations has been made in 1933. Only five of the 30 commodities used in compiling the index were lower at the end of this year than on December 31, 1932.

UNDER THE DOME AT AUSTIN

By GORDON K. SHEARER
United Press Staff Correspondent
AUSTIN, Jan. 1.—Highway beautification is not a new topic for the state highway department. What now is being hailed as a novel step has been going on quietly for more than a year.

Records show that approximately 60,000 native trees have been preserved along road right-of-ways and that 200,000 native tree seedlings have been saved in road clearing for transplanting.

Beside this tree work, wild flower seed has been scattered along the roadways wherever it has been available. The seed scattering has not been entirely esthetic matter. State Highway Engineer Gibb Gilchrist explained that it has been done to provide a natural plant growth that will retard erosion as well as to provide scenery.

Native trees and plants only are being used by the department in its program. It would be incurring useless expense, department officials think, to set out a lot of shrubbery that later would have to be watered through drought periods in order to keep it alive. In order that the native trees have a good chance to survive any drought, holes for them are dug long before the trees are planted. They are allowed to fill in a wet season before trees are set out.

In all cases care is being exercised to see that the trees and other plants do not obstruct road vision. Benches and lunch tables have been placed at shady spots along many of the main highways.

Without any particular basis February 6 generally is accepted as the likely date for the opening of the proposed special session of the Texas legislature to consider additional relief bonds. No announcement has come direct from the governor about when a session will be held. By long custom, sessions begin on Tuesday. February 6 is the first Tuesday in the month.

SISTER MARY'S RECIPES

BY SISTER MARY
NEA Service Staff Writer

If you have yolks of eggs left from cake-making, you can save them from going to waste by making up a batch of noodles. Noodles always are a valuable addition to the emergency shelf, but the home-made ones especially are considered a treat when they are well made. Since it takes but little more time to make enough for several meals, add one or two whole eggs to increase the quantity and quality of the noodles. One tablespoon water is added for each egg yolk.

Noodle soup makes a splendid winter luncheon dish. Or noodles cut in tiny straw-like lengths add much to the soup of dinner, soups or bouillion. When noodles are served in the clear dinner soup, they should be boiled in salted water and drained before adding to the prepared meat stock.

A noodle ring filled with creamed meat or fish makes a delightful party luncheon dish.

A platter of fried noodles garnished with halves of hard cooked eggs and served with a smooth cream sauce is inviting and nourishing and can be quickly and easily prepared for any emergency supper or luncheon.

Noodles
Three egg yolks, 1 whole egg, 3 tablespoons water, 1 1-2 teaspoons salt, 2 2-3 cups flour (about).

Beat yolks of eggs, water and whole egg until thoroughly blended. Add salt and enough sifted flour to make a very stiff dough. Knead well on a lightly floured molding board. Divide into six parts and roll each part as thin as possible. Cover with a clean towel and let stand for 30 minutes. Roll each sheet separately. Like any jelly roll and cut in very thin slices. Shake out slices and toss lightly on board to dry. When thoroughly dry, store in covered jars or boxes for future use. When wanted cook 20 minutes in boiling meat broth or salted water. In calculating quantities it is worth

Tomorrow's Menu

BREAKFAST: Halves of grape fruit, cereal cooked with dates, cream, cinnamon rolls, milk, coffee.

LUNCHEON: Fried noodles in cream sauce with hard cooked eggs, pumpnickel, salad of celery, cabbage and pimientos, apple roll, milk, tea.

DINNER: Salisbury steak, mashed potatoes, creamed onions, endive salad with French dressing, cranberry and prune pie, milk, coffee.

keeping in mind that one egg or its equivalent of one egg yolk and one tablespoon water will make enough noodles to serve four persons with a generous amount of noodle soup.

Cut in Squares

Instead of cutting the dough into strips it can be cut in two-inch squares and used to make noodle balls. This is a good way to use left-over meat or the meat from the soup bone. Carefully trim off fat and cristle and chop meat very fine. Season well with salt and pepper and parsley or onion finely minced. Add one un-beaten egg and mix well. Add milk if necessary to make moist enough to stick together. Fill squares of noodle dough with prepared meat mixture and draw corners together. Dampen edges with a little cold water and press firmly. Drop into boiling salted water or meat broth and boil 20 minutes. Serve on a hot platter and garnish of parsley.

To prepare noodles for chow mein, sprinkle 2 tablespoons salad oil over one pound noodles and steam fifteen minutes. Lifting noodles carefully with a fork in order to separate well. Spread on molding board and let cool. Then fry until crisp and a golden brown in deep hot oil or fat. Drain thoroughly and use.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON — Bootlegging, supposed to have been ended by repeal, has become a great national occupation.

They're worrying about it here. Not only about liquor bootlegging, which remains a serious problem, but also about bootlegging in an increasing number of other industries.

Prices are responsible, just as high prices for legal liquor are keeping the old-fashioned hooch vendor of the prohibition era at work. Set a price through an NRA code or an AAA marketing agreement and usually there's temptation for "little fellows" to under-sell.

Sometimes the term "chiseler" is interchangeable with "bootlegger." Already, milk bootlegging has made the AAA revise its policy. AAA has been revising prices set by the cleaning and dyeing industry, because so many cleaners ignored the code and promised to continue to under-sell.

Bootlegging has also been reported in oil, lumber, and other industries under codes which carry price-fixing features.

SOME government agencies gave their employes a Christmas present by promising them they wouldn't have to work overtime during the holidays.

Another break for many of the clerks comes with an allotment of $1,000,000 of public works money for air-cooling systems in government buildings.

Workers in the Treasury, Interior, and State-War-Navy buildings are looking forward to their first comfortable summer.

RUSSIA and Japan are making this capital a diplomatic battleground. Possibility of war in the Far East caused them to select their new ambassadors with care.

Hiroe Saito, the new Japanese envoy, was picked from far down on Tokio's diplomatic seniority list because the military leaders had full confidence in him. The appointment is regarded here as significant of the war faction's strength.

The retiring ambassador, Katsuji Debuchi, was no favorite of the military clique and was called home.

Ambassador Troianovsky of Russia was picked for his knowledge of Far Eastern affairs. He was the Soviet ambassador to Tokio.

THE Department of Agriculture and AAA publicity staffs have become the most prolific of all government press agencies. The day's mail as this is written shows 16 releases from them as against 11 from all other sources, covering such matters as code and marketing agreement hearings, steam sterilization of greenhouse soil beds, new methods for check wires on corn planters, food and drugs law, and the control of bots.

COTTON PRICE OVER 10 CENTS; OUTLOOK GOOD

By M. L. BROWN
United Press Financial Writer
NEW YORK, Jan. 1.—The cotton industry recorded substantial progress toward recovery during 1933 under the stimulus of governmental efforts to raise commodity prices and a sharp rise in world consumption.

The administration's efforts to improve both the statistical and price structure of cotton yielded tangible results. Under the A.A.A. leasing plan, which removed from cultivation 10,400,000 acres of American cotton at an approximate cost of $111,000,000, the 1933-34 American cotton crop was shaved down to around 13,177,000 bales, or slightly above the 12,961,000 bales produced in the poor crop year 1932-33.

Foreign crops, however, mainly those in India, China and Egypt, increased and the world crop for 1933-34 is expected to total more than 25,000,000 bales, compared with 23,637,000 in 1932-33 and 26,535,000 in the 1931-32 season.

World carryover on August 1, 1933 was 16,247,000 bales, compared with 17,412,000 at the close of the preceding season. The decline was largely due to the small American crop in the 1932-33 season and to sharply increased consumption which rose to 24,802,000 bales for the season ended August 1, 1933. Thus, world cotton consumption approximated total production, the most striking and significant feature of the season, according to cotton authorities.

Most of the increased consumption took place in the United States, with much of it based upon purely speculative influences such as expectations of currency inflation, the processing tax and the growing belief that higher prices were in the offing. Nevertheless, a considerable portion was credited to genuine business improvement and increased consumer purchasing power.

Consumption also rose abroad and during August, September and October the world total was 6,391,000 bales, the highest level for the period in the seven years for which the

New York Cotton Exchange data. Prices reflected these factors, final 1933 levels showing a net appreciation of more than 70 per cent over the 1932 closing marks.

A year ago spot cotton sold New York at slightly above 6 cents a pound, compared with the current level of better than 10 cents. A peak of the 1933 advance was reached July 18, when, in line with a general advance in security and commodity prices, spot cotton at New York touched 11 1/2 cents. This was followed by a sharp decline, touched by the staple in almost a century.

During the closing months of the advance was halted as evidence appeared that the administration did not favor currency inflation. Monetary uncertainties and a lean in the upward business drive speculative operations. Indicated that the 1933-34 world cotton stock would rise to a new high record as a result of increased foreign production also dampened bullish sentiment.

Nevertheless, most cotton traders were of the opinion that 1934 would witness a sustained upward movement of cotton prices toward depression levels.

"Featuring" Mr. Sinclair Lewis

"Nobody likes to have his picture taken while he's eating. They always come out like this . . ." And Sinclair Lewis pulled a long face to illustrate what he tried to prevent when he walked out of the New York dinner in celebration of the 100th anniversary of the birth of Alfred Nobel, founder of the Nobel prize. Lewis, who won the prize for literature in 1930, is shown here as he appeared at the banquet table.

State Railroad Commissioner C. V. Terrell has established a reputation for being a glutton for work. During the holiday closing of the state capitol, he hunted up a watchman to unlock his office and let him get to work.

Gov. Miriam A. Ferguson's hay fever is not the only official attack of the sort. W. C. Morrow, president of the state court of criminal appeals, is a frequent sufferer from the malady. The latest hay fever victim at the state capitol is Attorney-general James V. Allred. Pollen from the many cedar groves near Austin is believed by some to be responsible for prevalence of hay fever at the state capitol.

Rep. Conde R. Hoskins of Gonzales makes bear hunting his favorite outdoor sport. He arranged a holiday hunt which accounts for a number of holiday absences from under the capitol dome. Tall stories are expected when the hunters return.

Extra time extended to motor car owners to take out 1933 license plates without penalty is having its reaction now. County tax collectors report unusual slowness in payment for 1934 licenses.

Reports reaching Austin also tell of a license plate racket. According to this report owners of motor fleets are being solicited to register their vehicle in small counties. This enables the county to retain a large amount for local road work. Registration in large counties with a limit on the amount retained, results in more money going to the state highway department. It has been ruled that payment legally must be in the county where the owner of the vehicle resides.
