CURBING A TORCHBEARER

Raymond S. Mauk, fire insurance commissioner of Texas, is a young man, and mild-mannered. But last year he helped convict 18 persons on criminal charges, sending most of them to prison; and helped start grand jury investigations dealing with 38 other cases.

Commr. Mauk, looking over the huge toll of fires found many cases that looked suspicious. He decided that incendiarism or arson had taken rank not merely as a racket or pastime, but almost as an organized business.

The result was that he caused his department to assist in investigating 250 suspicious fires, and from the investigation, 40 indictments resulted, 17 other cases are awaiting grand jury action, 21 indicted people are awaiting trial, and 18 people have been convicted.

Since every legitimate insurer of his home or business plant pays a penalty in his insurance premium for the destruction of property by the incendiary, and since much property and lives are put in jeopardy by fires, this job of curbing the torchbearer in Texas is one in which Commr. Mauk and his department have the fullest sympathy and cooperation of all except the lawbreaker.

BORAH FOR WALL AROUND AMERICA

The Lone Eagle of the Idaho political crags at least knows the value of publicity. He is for "complete isolation of the republic." He would rebuild an American self contained. Perhaps he would like to go back to the oxcart period of history. Perhaps he would favor the abolition or elimination of the wireless, the radio, the plane and all the modern inventions of mankind.

Thousands of years ago the Chinese of that period built their famous wall to keep out invaders. Early in the year 1933 Japs armed with dynamite "blew a hole in the wall" and the remarkable landmark of ancient Chinese warriors and war engineers crumbled, and then the Japanese invaders "walked through."

Sen. Borah is a dashing statesman. He has made many marks. He traveled half the road and then quit. His own outstanding achievement was the final recognition of the Soviet republic. As chairman of the senate foreign affairs committee his voice rang around the international world. Since he has been demoted he has been on the fringe but not the center of the stage.

ECONOMIC PROBE BACKED BY ROCKEFELLER

New York is the headquarters of the Social Science Research council which has announced the creation of a commission of inquiry on national policy in international economic relations, to plan definite recommendations for the country's future guidance by Oct. 31, 1934. Pres. Robert M. Hutchins of the University of Chicago will head the commission and its inquiry will be financed by the Rockefeller foundation. It is said the study has the approval of President Roosevelt. Hearings will be held in important American cities including Dallas "and others to be named."

This is the Hutchins announcement: "Shall the United States run the risk of carrying forward a domestic recovery program without coordinating it with a consistent international policy? Without a sailing chart there is danger in attempting to go in several directions at the same time." Pres. Hutchins is recognized as one of the foremost university executives of America. He is a very young man and his admirers and followers have elected him to be a very brainy and far-seeing personage. Truth is, the American government has not had a distinct foreign policy for more than 60 years.

Now President Roosevelt has announced his foreign policy Uncle Sam is to keep his nose out of the internal affairs of all the nations of the earth—great or small. This is not a new policy. It was the policy of George Washington, the first President of the United States, and it is outlined in his farewell address to his countrymen.

SPLAWN IN—COLQUITT ON EDGE

Advices from Washington announce the appointment of Dr. W. M. Walter Splawn of Texas as a member of the Interstate Commerce commission—the only Texan named for that governmental agency since the creation by the congress of the commission. This Splawn has taken down one of the choice plums in the gift of the Roosevelt administration.

Now there is a well defined rumor in newspaper circles on the banks of the Potomac that a democrat from the east or the middlewest will be chosen to succeed former Gov. Oscar B. Colquitt as a member of the board of mediation. Colquitt is said to have strong backing for reappointment but Judge Grover Sellers of Texas has the backing of Sen. Morris Sheppard and Tom Connally. Colquitt's term expired Dec. 21, 1933.

Splawn is in. In bygone years many Texans were ambitious to serve on the powerful I. C. C. They failed. Splawn was born on a farm. He is a product of public schools and higher educational institutions of Texas. He is a former president of the university. He is a former member of the state railroad commission. This is plum picking time, and there are millions of hungry democrats the American world over, all demanding jobs at the public pie counter.

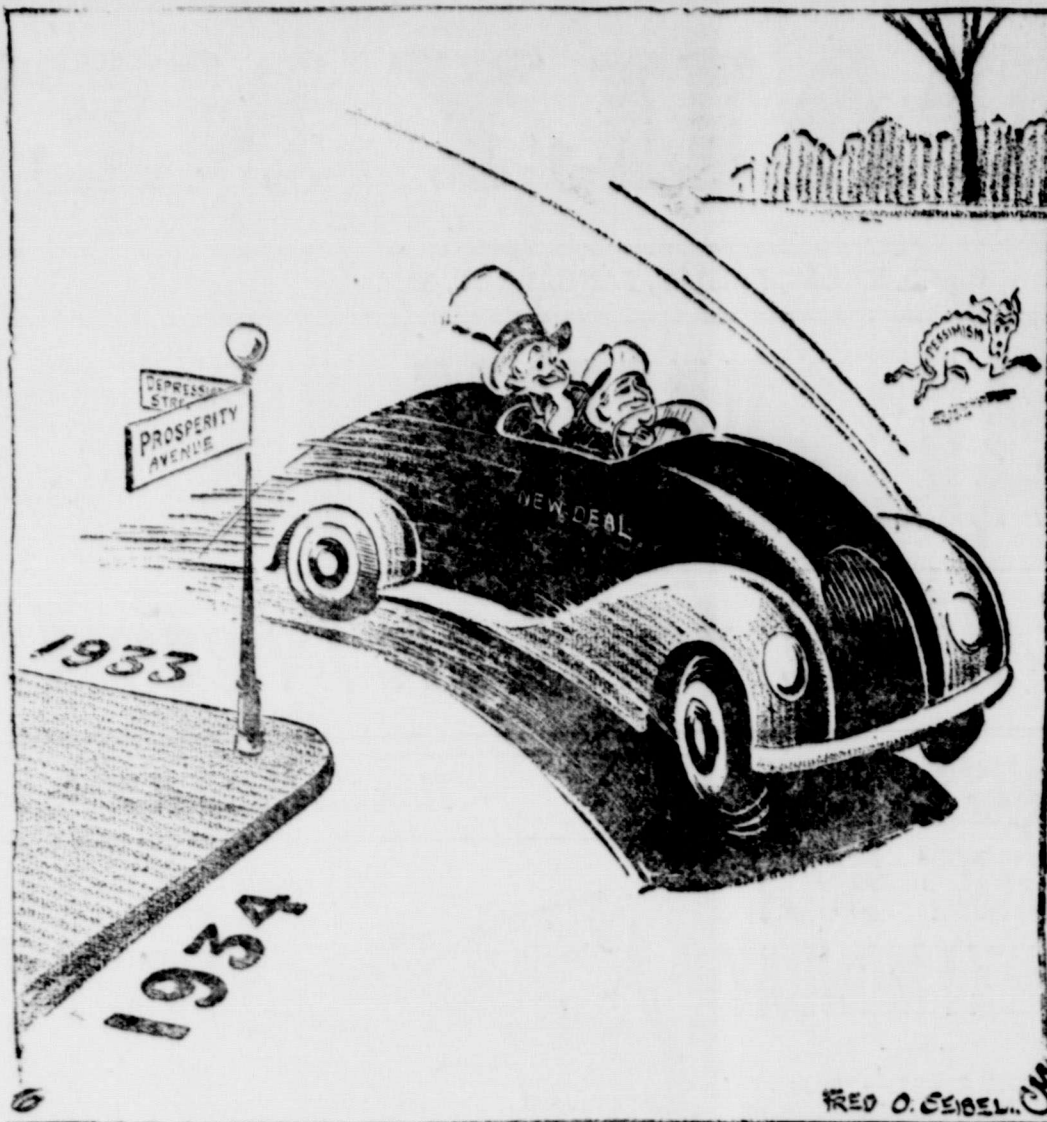

TEXANS AND THEIR TAX CONTRIBUTIONS

Uncle Sam's bureau of internal revenue has issued its annual report for the fiscal year 1933. Texans contributed to the federal treasury $34,167,496 in that year. According to the report $13,296,036 was paid in income taxes and the remainder, $20,871,469 was made up of miscellaneous taxes. Civilization comes high, but it is worth the price.

HIGH COST OF EDUCATION IN OKLAHOMA

Dr. W. B. Bizzell, president of the University of Oklahoma, is a native Texan. He won a very enviable record first as president of the State College for Women at Denton and later as president of the Agricultural and Mechanical college at Bryan. The Bizzell board of regents made a new depart-ture. Tuition fees for out-of-state students attending the university at Norman were doubled by the board. Effective next September non-residents of Oklahoma will be charged $50 a semester. There were 700 such students enrolled at Norman in 1933. Pres. Bizzell tells the reason why—"to bring the fees more in line with those of other universities." He is alleged to have told representatives of the Oklahoma newspapers "that many Texas students found it cheaper to attend the University of Oklahoma than the University of Texas." Hence the action of the board of regents. "Home first" appears to be the slogan of the Oklahoma university president and his governing board.

Through the Editor's Spectacles

An examination—even a cursory examination—of the license requirements of the revised fishing laws of this state convinces one as to where the bankers got the idea for the code that Chief Administrator Johnson turned down. These regulations, reminds a United Press news dispatch, were ushered in with the New Year. They are embodied in house bill No. 81 enacted by the 43rd legislature.

One may not even sell minnows for bait, according to the law, without payment of a state license costing $2 a year and $1.33 for the remaining eight months of the current fiscal year which ends August 31. Other licensing provisions are: Wholesale fish dealers must pay $200 annually instead of $100; Retail fish dealers in cities of 40,000 population or more must pay $20 annual license and leaders in either of lesser population $10;

Commercial fisherman's license hiked from $1 to $2; Persons renting fishing boats with motor or sails must hold a $3 license; Persons who rent skiffs for fishing must pay $1 license;

Guides who show fishermen where the best fishing is, must have a state license, while selling is taxed at the rate of $1 annually for every 100 feet of seine.

Before long some bright lawmaker will have the happy inspiration of charging a license to even look at a lake.

E. R. McDaniel, so I am told, has taken umbrage at some remarks of mine having to do with his penchant for chasing wildcats and shooting lions in Mexico. It appears I misrepresented Mr. Mac's taste in dogs, speaking of dogs as mindly speaks of her gowns. I am told that Mr. Mac is particularly sensitive on the feature of the ears. He is not so concerned for the chassis, whether it be blunt or streamlined, wasp-waisted or full. So far as this detail is concerned, the animal may choose his own style.

But when it comes to ear Mr. Mac will have a word to say. His recipe in dogs calls for ears. In fact, he wants a pair of ears with a dog attached. The ears want to be just long enough to keep clear of the ground while the animal has his smeller on a trail. He wants 'em floppy and big.

I am very happy to make this correction, because if there is any one thing I don't want to do in this column, it is to misrepresent the truth. I have endeavored to consistently hue to the line all along and never say anything about anyone that does not come from the heart out.

Use Cisco Daily News want ads a happy faculty of Dr. F. E. for result. Call 80.

Clark noted at last night's Lobo banquet, is resourcefulness in the use of table tools. The sight reminded me of a movie phantasy skit in which Marie Dressler, garbed as a large and garish queen sang a song reminding the audience that she was queen and could eat peas with her knife if she wanted to. In like manner, Dr. Clark may eat his sweet potato pie with a spoon in public, if he wants to. I don't know whether or not he forgot that he was in public and not in his kitchen, but he seemed so innocent and oblivious to the surrounding interest that J. C. McAfee who sat next to me and ate the last cracker in the dish with no more compunction than a mosquito inquired of me whether or not I thought the doctor knew any better.

Now we know who the drug store coaches in Cisco are. It took an outsider coming all the way from Lubbock to tell us. Evidently some body has been talking. However, I understand and that neither Leon Manev nor Jack Anderson nor J. D. Vernon are looking for new jobs.

The Daily News's account yesterday of the birth of a son to Principal and Mrs. O. L. Stamey, of the grammar school, gave the name of the baby, firstborn of the Stameys, incorrectly. The baby's name is "Joseph Donald." That is by authority of the father. Those things will happen in spite of "faith and high water" as my sire sometimes remarks. Being a minister with a positive opinion as to the proper places for certain very expressive words, he substituted the "faith" for the smoking term originally associated with the "high water."

S. R. Woods who recently became a father for the third time, marvels at Stamey's calm-mannered reaction to the supreme human experience. Woods is by nature more or less on the order of myself, nervously speaking. "Old Stamey," said Wood—the "old" being an affectionate term that has no reference to age—"is a lucky devil. He's the kind who, if he were run over by an automobile would get up with his pants pressed."

High Court of Last Resort Blazes a New Trail

By HUGH NUGENT FITZGERALD
Another five to four decision has been rendered by the supreme court of the United States. Indeed, it is one of the most important decisions of the court of last resort passed on to the American world for decades. Place this in the record: "The moratorium act of Minnesota held with in the law."

There is a body of liberals, five in number, in the court membership. There are four conservatives who walk in what is known as "the beaten track." There is a New Deal administration. There appears to be a new deal supreme court of the United States—having a majority of one.

Now that is the Minnesota moratorium act declared to be valid by a vote of five to four? The Minnesota law, the first emergency statute state or federal to be passed on by the court of last resort, extended the time for redemption of fore-closed property until May 1, 1935.

John H. and Rosella Blaisdel of Minneapolis sought to extend the time for redemption of property which had been foreclosed by agents of the Minnesota Home Building and Loan association. The Minnesota law was directly involved and the state court of Minnesota upheld its constitutionality. An appeal was taken. The loan company claimed the Minnesota enactment violated the constitutional guarantee against impairment of contract. Well, the high court of last resort had the last word. The Minnesota statute was declared constitutional. Again the court split along liberal or new deal lines. Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes delivered the majority opinion. He is a republican. He is one of the most distinguished Americans in or out of public life. Justices Brandeis, Stone and Cardozo sided with Hughes as did Justice Owen J. Roberts.

As for the minority four, Justice Eutherland read a strong dissent and Van de Venter, McReynolds and Butler agreed with him. The four dissenters are veteran members of the highest tribunal for the administration of justice known to the wide wide world. Sutherland and Van de Venter hail from the west. They are republicans. McReynolds of Tennessee is a democrat, and Butler of Minnesota was appointed to the bench by Woodrow Wilson.

Speaking of the majority, Brandeis was born in Kentucky but moved to Boston early in life, and when named by Woodrow Wilson an associate justice he was recognized as one of the leading liberals of America. Stone of New York is a republican. Cardozo of New York is a democrat. Roberts of Pennsylvania before his appointment to the bench was known as one of the leading corporation lawyers of America. It was a history-making event.

Chief Justice Hughes said in his opinion: "Emergency does not create power. Emergency does not increase granted power nor remove or diminish the restrictions imposed upon power granted or preserved." Then followed a long review of previous opinions and the chief justice summed up the tenor of his opinion with these words: "It is manifest from this review of our decision that there has been a growing appreciation of public need and a necessity for finding ground for rational compromise between individual rights and public welfare."

Chief Justice Hughes is regarded as one of the learned constitutional authorities of the republic. It would be well for all lawmakers, national and state and all the people who are interested in the new departure to place this excerpt in their scrapbook: "If by the statement that what the constitution meant at the time of its adoption, it means today it is intended to say that the great clauses of the constitution may be confined to the interpretation which the framers, with the conditions and outlook of their time would have placed upon their own statement carries its own refutation."

Under the Minnesota statute, Chief Justice Hughes said, all conditions remained under the moratorium the same as before its enactment. The Minnesota legislature with an exception of the time in which the property might be redeemed. Minnesota legislatures, including those enacted emergency moratorium relief acts. Two republicans and a democrat all far westerners, are sent. Two New Yorkers, a republican and a democrat, gave full approval of the Hughes opinion. Politics does not concern the supreme court of the United States. A public chief justice and two associate justices all from the Empire state of the East, declared for the new departure.

Married Flirts

by MABEL McELLIOTT
© 1933 NEA Service, Inc.

BEGIN HERE TODAY
GYPSY MORELL and TOM WEAVER are married the same day as LILA HOELING and DEBERK BLISS. Lila expects to live in luxury, but Gypsy intends to keep her job, teaching in a settlement house.

THE EVENING, ON THE WHOLE, WAS far from being a success for Gypsy. She tried flirting mildly with Marko, just to make Tom angry. But it was a thankless business. She didn't really want to quarrel with Tom. The very thought of it turned her just a little sick. They had been so happy. What serpent had entered, so suddenly, into their little Eden?

It was three o'clock. It was two. It was one. And the music went on and the smoke gathered in clouds and emptied, filled and emptied again. Her head began to ache and her spirits flagged. Looking from one face to another, she wondered idly how they stood it, night after night. Why, she was only 22, strong, almost without nerves, and yet she tired of it so quickly. Marko, who made the social rounds so briskly, was 50, and his skin was stretched tight around his eyes, he seemed untrifling. He must have unexpected stores of strength to draw upon. Marko, reflected Gypsy, was rather wonderful!

At three-ten (and how Gypsy blessed her for it!) young Mrs. Wilford said they must go—there was something about an early start on the morrow. They were going south. . . . Hot Springs. The party began to disintegrate.

Gypsy's own farewells to her hostess were the hollowest of perflous lies. She hadn't enjoyed herself at all. She was tired to death, she was almost ill with annoyance at Tom and jealousy of Hilda Blanchard, she was a little ashamed of herself for her mild flirtation with Marko.

And yet she said all the correct things. Lila must come to lunch with her downtown—soon. Oh, she meant that, all right. Lila was sweet, she was gay and interested, friendly.

Gypsy was almost speechless with fatigue when the taxi deposited her at their own door. Tom helped her out, without a word. Still silent, he unlocked the door and stood aside to let her into the dark apartment. Gypsy switched on the hall light, yawned, dropped her wrap into a chair. Then she hastily picked it up again. It was all very well for the idle daughters of the rich to behave so with their party clothes. As for her, she must take excellent care of the few she owned, because it would be a long time before she would be able to afford others.

"I noticed," Gypsy said, "that Hilda Blanchard held on to you all evening!"

ly folded and laid across a chair back. Tom, she reflected, was that rare bird, a tidy husband. At least, from all she had heard, such creatures were rare. She gave him a brief inquiring glance and saw that he still wore the frown he'd adopted when they had left the others. Was Tom going to sulk? Oh, she hoped not. Gypsy, herself, could never harbor a grievance. She had been taught never to let the sun go down upon her anger.

As she brushed her hair, she could hear Tom's vigorous splashing. She let her glance rove around the little room and what she saw she inevitably contrasted with Lila's exotic boarder. Involuntarily a sigh escaped her.

"Don't you feel well?" Tom was beside her.

"Just tired."

Well, there was no help for it. Maybe the circles made her look pale and interesting. She hoped so. She lost herself, as she rushed into her dark blue knitted dress, in a dream of intense dramatic interest. In the dream, she wasted away to nothing and her husband looked on, wringing his hands and begging to be forgiven.

On the subway she read her morning paper. It seemed to her there were more stories, although goodness knew there were always enough of them. She read them with newly sharpened interest. Mr. B. . . of Riverside Drive was marrying his beautiful secretary as soon as his Reno stay was over. Mrs. W. . . of Yonkers was getting her decrees and shortly thereafter marrying a Slavic nobleman. It was, thought Gypsy, frightening. Didn't anybody stay married nowadays? She had never thought of divorce, before this, in connection with Tom and herself. But her thoughts were morbid this morning. "Nonsense. Nothing has happened," she told herself, robustly. "Why, we haven't even had a crowd yet." No, but she had discovered how angry she could be with Tom. Why, last night when Lila Blanchard had been so possessive with him, she had wanted to claw her eyes out—and Tom's too, for being such a goose.

Jealousy, Gypsy decided, was a dreadful thing. It was so unsettling, it was such a bitter, bitter emotion. It was like a disease. She had had a taste of it, when Tom had taken Vera Gray to lunch. She had told herself, when that incident had blown over, that nothing like this would ever happen to her again. She would be calm, judicious, she would use her head instead of her heart.

BUT apparently Tom was the one of man women ran after. She looked gloomily down a vista in which she rescued him from dozens of affairs. "I can't stand it," she told herself, in despair, "I won't."

That evening, when Dinah had cleared away and was clattering happily in the kitchen, dropping aluminum saucers with vigor and slamming spoons down upon the metal topped table, the Weavers "had it out."

It all began quietly. Gypsy started it with a remark about Marko. Tom said something cutting, and she flung back at him, her good resolutions gone.

"I noticed Hilda Blanchard held on to you all evening," she said bitterly.

"That's good." Tom's face flushed. "You were listening to everything that old chap said. You didn't pay any attention to me?"

It was terrible . . . terrible. They quarreled in low voices, so that they should not be heard above Dinah's clamor, but even in the kitchen, she stopped slamming her hands about and stood to listen. Hilda akimbo, shaking her head in sadness.

"Such nice young folks, too," Dinah mourned.

"I didn't want to go, anyway," Tom stormed. "You made me. You were your idea. We don't believe with that crowd. We can't keep up with them."

"You liked it well enough, when you were there," she reminded him. "You had a good time. You danced . . . you flirted . . ."

"What would you have me do?" Tom demanded. He couldn't, he said, be rude to the girl. She was darned attractive, anyhow.

This turned the knife in Gypsy's side.

"Easy enough for her to be attractive," she flared. "She's probably got a personal maid, heaps of clothes, charge accounts everywhere . . ."

"Oh, so that's it!" Tom started up. "I suppose the idea is I'm spoiling your looks, (singing down to drudgery.)"

"No . . . no . . . I didn't mean that."

She began stormily to cry. She was so angry, so furious with everyone, the world, Tom, and herself in particular. What had happened to them both?

His manner changed. He came over and knelt down beside her, taking her small hands in his. He gave her a clean handkerchief.

"Don't cry, baby," he said, gently. "We're both being a little foolish, and all about nothing."

WHEN YOU'RE HEALTHY YOU'RE HAPPY!

The blame for "blue" days can be laid often to common constipation. It may bring loss of appetite and energy, sallow and pimply skins, even serious illness. Correct it by eating a delicious cereal.
Research shows Kellogg's ALL-BRAN provides "bulk" and vitamin B to relieve common constipation. Also iron for the blood.
The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is much like that in leafy vegetables. Isn't this better than taking patent medicines—so often harmful?
Two tablespoonfuls of ALL-BRAN daily, relieve most types of constipation. With each meal, in chronic cases. If not relieved this way, see your doctor. Get the red - and - green package at your grocer's. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

Lady Mosquito Is Maker of Trouble

HOUSTON, Jan. 12 — Women mosquitoes, like lady lions, are the trouble makers of their species. If papa mosquito of the anopheles family is buzzing about your head have no fear of being bitten or getting a malarial injection, advised Dr. C. P. Coogler who is conducting the governments war on malarial control here. For papa is a vegetarian and has nothing with which to bite you.

But when mama comes flitting around, beware! For mama has all the equipment necessary with which to give you a nice case of chills and fever.

You probably wouldn't be bothered much with papa anyway, Dr. Coogler said, because he dies an old man at the ripe old age of three days. His wife lives for several months.

The most frightening of all mosquitoes in this region is the most harmless, the doctor offered a solution.

"It is the megirhinis, a strict vegetarian," he said. "Its proboscis, like an elephant's, curls up when not in use. There is nothing on the end of it to pierce the skin, so it doesn't bite. To hear them singing you would think they were going to eat you alive."

Dr. Coogler offers a new pastime for veteran collectors — gathering mosquito eggs. "Some of them have nice little scallops and patterns, and are very pretty," he said.

It was Dr. Coogler who recently discovered chiggers biting on mosquitoes, giving them fits. If there's anything biting the chiggers he doesn't know.

"We haven't come to that yet," he said.

co more fame than its big dam has done. He recalled the names of several boys who had helped to make the Lobo name famous in high school football circles—Ceddy Grist, Ernie Wilson, Honk Irvin, "Goober" Keyes and "Chigger" Brown, etc.

Brief talks were made by both Coach Dexter Shelley and Ass't Coach W. C. Hodges who thanked the citizens for their cooperation, predicted a better season next year and expressed appreciation for the hospitality of the clubs in giving the banquet to the team.

Coach Shelley said that of the 15 players who received letters this season only five will return next year, but remarked that boys who are coming up from the reserves will provide some able material to fill the vacancies.

Coach Hodges paid tribute to the unsung scrubs who come out for practice all during the season, perhaps never so much as getting to "suit out" for a game. Boys who consistently do this, taking all the punishment that the first string players inflict in practice, are bound to make real players, he said.

The invocation was delivered by the Rev. Frank L. Turner, pastor of the First Methodist church.

Between addresses there was community singing led by J. J. Collins, with G. W. Colum at the piano.

Although plans had been made for election of Lobo captain for next season, the lateness of the hour caused the postponement of this

Modern Electric Cookery "Seals-In" Vital Health Elements of Foods

In contrast to old-fashioned methods of cookery, the modern Electric Range makes it possible to serve meals of surpassing healthfulness... as well as incomparable flavor.

... And the reason is simple. With electricity foods are cooked in a minimum amount of water, or entirely in their own juices. The heat is concentrated directly on the bottom of the utensil... so the steam rises, condenses on the cool lid, and drops back into the vessel... to be used over and over. Thus, all vital food values remain "sealed-in"!

Don't Pour Food-Values Down the Sink!

If you're using an old-fashioned method of cookery, the most valuable elements of your foods are going into the sink... with the water you pour off vegetables and meats!

For Health, for Convenience, and for Economy you should cook the modern electrical way. Prices and terms... right now... allow your purchase to fit into the family budget with ease. Ask for a demonstration of modern Electric Cookery today!

Call us for an individual investigation of your use of electric service, to determine the cost of cooking by electricity in your home. You may be surprised to know that there are many cases where electric cookery actually decreases the total of electric and gas bills.
