Rickenbacker Says "Traitorous Elements" Guided FDR

SENATE GROUP AIRMAIL ACTION UNJUST

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 17.—Eddie Rickenbacker, famous aviator, told the senate post committee today that President Roosevelt had been led by "traitorous elements" in his official policy to act "contrary to American principles" in cancelling private mail contracts and ordering the government to complete a prepared statement Rickenbacker was interrupted by Chairman McKellar, who told him sharply he could not be permitted to attack the president or make a "political speech."

Rickenbacker's action touched off a fight among committee members and McKellar finally retired from the room while spectators and senators M. M. Logan, Dem.-Ky., and Ben Barbour, Rep.-N. J., applauded.

"I think I've earned my heritage as an American citizen," Rickenbacker began, rising to his feet. "Should I Purge Family?"

He believes that in fair play to our country, he should, in purging undesirable elements, purge his own family of those traitorous elements few in number, I hope, caused him to act contrary to American principles."

McKellar rapped on the committee with a cigar tray. "I have to ask you not to attack the president or make a political speech," he said sharply.

After a dispute among committee members, McKellar dismissed him. As Rickenbacker, his face flushed, rose from the spectators applauded him and he had gone.

McKellar stated in his closing remarks that the immediate creation of a separate federal airmail service is essential.

Opposed Measure
Rickenbacker agreed with Charles A. Lindbergh that air operators should have been given a "fair trial" before having their contracts cancelled recently.

McKellar said that the Interstate Commerce Commission supervises commercial airlines, and on that point he was in agreement with Colonel Bergh and Clarence Chamberlain.

Should Recognize Equities
A separate regulatory board, he said, should subsidize airlines that do not exist economically under the present rates of pay, and arbitrate pay disputes.

It will be a serious mistake, he said, "if the equities of the air transport operators are recognized and given pre-emptive rights on the routes which they have pioneered at great expense."

Other famous pilots who were mentioned were Capt. Rickenbacker and Capt. Harold "Red" Bull. Rickenbacker prepared a statement.

NRA Faces Crisis in Auto Strike Threat

WASHINGTON, March 17.—Industry's ability to govern itself was put to the test today as automobile manufacturers sought some means of averting a crisis with labor. The situation held implications of major import to the entire NRA set-up and the president's recovery program.

Upon the shoulders of the three-man-code authority of the automobile industry was placed responsibility for settling its labor dispute which today reached the point where the American Federation of Labor had ordered 75,000 men to strike.

It seemed likely, however, that some manner of a solution would be reached. Though no direct word came from the president, it was believed he was taking a hand in the situation behind the scenes.

William S. Collins, A. F. of L. organizer, said the strike would start Wednesday if agreement has not been reached by that time.

Might Spread to Steel
The serious nature of the crisis lay not alone in the effects the walkout may have on the revived business of the specific General Motors and Hudson Motor Car plants involved.

Nucleus of the trouble is the bitterly contested Section 7-A of the automobile code detailing the rights of workers to organize.

The interpretation and carrying out of these rights has been the subject of constant conflicts over company unions. Indicating the deep-rooted antipathy of the auto industry toward the A. F. of L. type of union was the industry's bitterly expressed opposition to the bill of Senator Robert F. Wagner, New York democrat, which would outlaw company unions entirely.

Equally fundamental in the present case is the whole question of the workability of NRA. Informal negotiations through NRA officers have failed to settle the issue.

The labor charges will be considered Monday by the code authority which will meet Tuesday with Recovery Administrator Hugh S. Johnson.

If these men succeed where all other resorts have failed, it was conceded they will have gone a long way toward proving the right and ability of industry to maintain its own order.

If they fail, most observers believe the NRA must undergo substantial reform, since it will have demonstrated failure to meet a fundamental objective.

8-YEAR TERMS ARE ASSESSED IN BOND CASE
SAN ANTONIO, March 17.—Three men found guilty by a federal court jury on charges of conspiracy in connection with the disposition of $500,000 in stolen government bonds today were sentenced to serve eight years each in the federal penitentiary at El Reno, Okla., and each fined $10,000.

The First National Securities Co., of Dallas, had the highest bid, Donald O'Neal and Co., of Dallas, made the second bid.

Seventeen other bids were for portions of the $4,000,000 bond issue. The commissioners announced they preferred to accept the bids for the whole block.

DILLINGER HUNT EXTENDS OVER U. S. BOUNDARY

PORT HURON, Mich., March 17.—Both sides of the international border were blockaded in a new hunt for John Dillinger, notorious outlaw, following the grocery store gun battle in which his companion, Herbert Youngblood, and Undersheriff Charles Cavanaugh were killed.

Nearly 500 peace officers concentrated in the surrounding "Thumb" section of Michigan, blockading all roads and stopping and searching each automobile within a radius of the city.

The intense vigil was maintained after Youngblood, dying from seven bullet wounds, said that Dillinger and three other men who accompanied him here following the wooden pistol jail break at Crown Point, Ind., was in this vicinity.

SALES TAX IS ORPHANED FOR THIS CAMPAIGN

By GORDON K. SHEARER
United Press Staff Correspondent
AUSTIN, March 17.—The sales tax, hailed as a political panacea for state financial ills in the last campaign, goes begging for support among this year's candidates for governor.

C. C. McDonald, Ferguson-endorsed candidate, in his platform favors taxes on mortgages, on capital stock, on intangible assets and on labor-saving machinery, but omits the sales tax.

Tom Hunter mentions it in his campaign documents. He favors a sales tax only on articles brought into the state to compete with home produced goods. How this sort of an interstate tariff will get by the federal constitution is not explained.

Declare Against Tax
Maury Hughes and L. H. Middleton, Fort Worth contractor candidate, both declare against the sales tax. They agree with President Roosevelt that the people with incomes less than $2,000 a year do two-thirds of the country's buying. The sales tax would hit such people.

Apparently taxation is in too hazy a condition to become the determining factor in the campaign. Whether prohibition is or is not to be a leading issue is viewed differently by the candidates themselves. Hughes says it is. "The influence of the next governor," he says, "will probably determine whether Texas is to become wet or remain dry." Hunter says the liquor question is not properly an issue for the race, but just an "ism" dragged out to divide the people.

Skimmed Prohibition
Jimmie Alford and Edgar Witt both skimmed it so lightly in initial announcements that they felt called upon to issue supplemental statements. Both favored leaving it to the people. Alford announced himself personally on the dry side and Witt said he would vote for repeal.

Hughes and McDonald are wet. Edward K. Russell, Anona, has been announced as a bone dry candidate. While the issue seems to be having little consideration for the first primary, many believe it may become the deciding factor in this week.

STRONG PUBLIC OPINION HELPS UTILITIES MAN

ATHENS, Greece, March 17.—The Greek government, surrendering to the amazing resistance of Samuel Insull, fugitive Chicago financier, against efforts to deport him to America, agreed today to give him his traveling papers and let him sail away on the steamer Maiotis. The government's decision in a complicated international situation was materially influenced by a strong public opinion which had viewed Insull's battles for liberty with admiration.

His last desperate attempt to evade the deportation order when he escaped a police guard and dashed through the Mediterranean on the ship, only to be ordered back to Greece by highly indignant officials, brought the aged ex-multimillionaire further sympathy.

Insull remained aboard the ship after his return to the harbor of Piraeus, and will stay on board, secluded until the steamer leaves the port Sunday morning.

The Maiotis hurrying back to the harbor of Piraeus after wireless messages had flashed through the air and a destroyer had been sent in pursuit, brought the fugitive back to Greek jurisdiction today.

Naval Escort
A strong flotilla of naval craft, headed by the patrol boat Paralos, met the Maiotis at the entrance to the port, where it should be turned over to the United States officials.

The other believing that Greece had fulfilled its obligations, was equally insistent that, so long as Mr. Insull left Greece, he should be permitted to make his own choice of routes.

Wife Goes Aboard
Only Mrs. Insull and the family's attorney were permitted to board the Maiotis, which will be prosecuted for perjury because of alleged "false statements" to the police.

She told detectives she saw Mr. Insull at midnight, Wednesday, whereas Mr. Insull had by that time eluded the police and was at sea on the Maiotis.

Mr. Insull's friends today declared that a Rumanian royal decree would soon be issued permitting him an asylum in Galatz for a period of five years. Their reports lacked official confirmation from Bucharest.

Mr. Insull was reported "highly distressed," but an official denial was made that he had gone on a "hunger strike."

Woman Faces Trial
Meanwhile, it was learned that Mme. Couyoumdjogiu, beautiful wife of a Bagdad date merchant, who has been Mr. Insull's guardian angel in his trials, will be prosecuted for perjury because of alleged "false statements" to the police.

She told detectives she saw Mr. Insull at midnight, Wednesday, whereas Mr. Insull had by that time eluded the police and was at sea on the Maiotis.

FUGITIVE AND WOMAN TAKEN NEAR HOUSTON

HOUSTON, March 17.—Earl (Baby Face) Joyner, 26, fugitive Texas gunman, robber and jail escape artist, was captured as he slept in a farm house near here today by Sheriff T. A. Binford, of Harris county, and a posse of officers.

The house where he slept was a former dairy barn now being used as a liquor distillery, the sheriff said. With Joyner was Estelle Davis, blond young Houston woman, who said they had been married for three years.

Joyner had been in liberty since last January when he opened the door to his cell in the county jail at Crockett and dug through a brick wall a few days after he had been sentenced to 40 years imprisonment for robbing the Farmers and Merchants State bank of Grapeeland. He also was wanted as a fugitive from the Louisiana prison.

At a meeting of the Randolph faculty Friday morning, plans were made for the observance of the annual Randolph day, April 20 and 21. This will also be "Homecoming Day" for ex-students. An extensive drive will be made to get as many former students as possible to be here at that time to help the college and the citizens of Cisco celebrate the day.

For many years April 21 has been recognized as Randolph day. Cisco citizens have respected this day and have refrained from placing other meetings and affairs at this time so as not to interfere with the full celebration. One of the most successful of these days was the one observed last year when about 500 citizens joined with the college in a big barbecue and other events.

President Tyndall has appointed the following faculty committee to work out the program for this year's event: Dean E. Buford Isaacks, H. R. Garrett, Mrs. Lee Clark, W. P. Bruce, and Miss Nina Watts. Dean Isaacks will have charge of the free barbecue; Mr. Garrett the athletic events; Mr. Bruce the homecoming phase; Mrs. Clark the plays and programs; and Miss Watts the social affairs. These faculty members will be assisted by other teachers and students.

The same general plan for the day will be followed as was carried out last year, including a free barbecue for the students, parents, ex-students, friends and citizens of Cisco.

Tuberculosis Tests Are Arranged For
City Health Officer Dr. W. P. Lee Saturday said that, responding to requests, he has made arrangements for a veterinarian from Ranger to be here to make tuberculosis tests of the students' cattle in the event a sufficient number of owners notify him of their intention to have their cows tested.

He asked these to get in touch with him at once. A time will be set when and if a sufficient number of owners so notify him.

A NRA CRISIS

The NRA has come to a critical period in the history of its authority as a remedy for the conditions which plunged American industry to its low level during the depression. The present difficulty, with devitalizing, not to say devastating effects threatened in widespread and paralyzing automobile strikes, was bound to come, because of the administration's insistence upon a means of insuring the equality of labor in the industrial picture. The aim of the NRA is a synthetic program, a harmonious progression of all parts toward a common end of recovered prosperity and an insurance of continued well-being. To carry all the elements of the program along and keep them in constant adjustment calls for a sense of proportion and fine balance that is almost superhuman. Yet, that is what the administration is proposing to do. It is quite certain that mistakes will happen. The wonder of it is that more are not made.

The present crisis is a recrudescence of the old rivalry between capital and labor, the two halves of industry. The issue is one of dominance. Capital, representing objectified ownership, insists upon its responsibility and therefore its right of direction. Labor, representing the agency which operates upon capital to produce wealth, demands its due and insists upon a recognition of its own rights. These issues between the two elements have long been recognized, and have been defined through generations of conflict over various features. Past conflicts have been generally situated within the confines of the particular industry or branch. The question that is apparent in the present contest is the right of labor to organize in a unity superior to subdivision among a variety of classifications. In other words, capital opposes the formation of a labor authority outside the boundaries of the units of industrial jurisdiction. Specifically, in this case, the issue is between the American Federation of Labor, which represents an amalgamation of labor sentiment throughout the entire field of organized capital investment, and the automotive industry. The automobile industry prefers not to deal with the federation for the reason that the American Federation of Labor, of which the body of the automotive industries labor element would form only a part, conceivably might outbalance it with an authority clearly established in national law. The industry conceives of the required basic equality between itself and its workmen as provided in a company-defined union. It feels itself subject to discrimination if, in order to contact its own workmen, it is compelled to go to an agency set up outside its own industrial area. The American Federation of Labor is simply following the expected course of seeking to extend and perfect its organization in behalf of the whole field of labor in the demands which form the other side of this disturbing picture. It was certain that the A. F. of L. would seize upon the legally expressed guarantees of the NRA to endeavor to sell itself to all areas of organized labor which hitherto, for various reasons mostly due to industrial opposition to extra-company unionization, had not joined forces with it.

By the expressed intent of the NRA, the workers involved are entitled to settle the issue. That is the basis upon which conciliation is attempted by Gen. Johnson and his aides. It is the real issue in the conflict. Whether or not the men want company unions or the A. F. of L. is a subordinate matter. The question is whether or not the NRA insistence that the worker exercise his own preference, untrammelled by domination or interference, is industrially practicable. Among serious obstacles to be overcome is the difficulty of assuring company officials that in relaxing their vigilance over their workers outside influences will not be improperly exercised; while the A. F. of L., on its side, is convinced of company tyranny.

Some settlement of the threatened strike is probable Monday or at least before the threat materializes. Unless this occurs, the recovery program will get a set-back that will reverberate throughout the entire country.

LOOSE STOCK

It sometimes takes a long while for the significance of a general fact or condition to percolate through the public consciousness. Most of us recognize the condition and agree on its implications. But, unfortunately, there is a difficulty in consolidating that agreement or mood of public thought. The condition is analogous to the state of unburned butter. The element is decidedly there in emulsion, but it has not coagulated into the mass. The disturbance of the beater is necessary to dash it together and consolidate it. Similarly, something of tragic or at least exciting consequences is often required to bring public opinion to bear in unison upon a public situation that needs correction.

Progress in the direction of unified public opinion upon enforcing the loose stock law and ridding the highways of the presence of roving domestic animals is being made. Mexia has taken up the cudgels through its junior chamber of commerce abetted by the Mexia Daily News. Eastland county has an anti-stock law; so do many other counties or cities. In this county the law was enacted by referendum. The result is therefore as purely democratic as it is possible to make a law, and should have more of the authority of the crystallization of the public thought and will than any mandate enacted by representative legislation.

Yet up and down the smooth, high-speed highways are grazing cows, mules, horses and even hogs which are apt to turn across the pavement in front of a motor vehicle traveling at 60 miles an hour as they are apt to wander from one side of a pasture to another in search of more succulent grazing. These anti-loose stock laws were enacted to be enforced. They should be enforced. It is, of course, unavoidable that some violations will occur under the most carefully guarded circumstances, but it is not justifiable that violations should be epidemic. The danger is particularly serious at night. It is bad enough in the daylight, but stock carry no lanterns.

History Repeating Itself in Political Procession

By HUGH NUGENT FITZGEROLD

History is ever repeating itself. In the long ago the warriors of the North and the warriors of the South on the battle plain settled the issue of secession and the age-old issue of human slavery.

After a bloody and costly war, the soldiers of the Northland returned to their homes the victors of the tragic era of American history. Those who had surrendered after costly sacrifice of blood and treasure and the wealth of a dead Confederacy put aside the rifle and the sword and the cannon and faced the future determined in a peaceful world to recoup their losses and if possible restore their fallen fortunes.

Well, the victors turned politicians. They had won and they demanded the spoils of victory. They controlled the offices of their respective states. They controlled the American Congress. They battled for pensions and they won all along the line. As for the veterans of the Southland, after reconstruction days had passed, they invaded the political field and they won the spoils of office but the meager pensions that were voted by the former Confederate states to their rifle bearers were at all times a ghastly reminder that war is hell for those who are the vanquished and as time rolls on hell for the taxpayers of any nation. A world war was fought. Millions of Americans were called to the khaki.

Now the age old battle is on again — to the victors of the spoils. For years and years to come the pension rolls of the United States will be loaded, so to speak, and the cost of it all will be greater than the original cost of participation of Americans on the battle plains of the historic nations of Europe and Asia.

FOURTEEN YEAR AFTER

Woodrow Wilson retired from office broken-hearted. He was the victorious war president. He went to his grave a disappointed man. He had won a place in history. All his splendid dreams for a war that would end all wars had been dissipated.

In the history of the Caucasian world today Washington holds the proud place of "Father of His Country," Thomas Jefferson, the aristocrat, as the greatest liberal who ever lived, who during his long and brilliant life always thought of humanity and never of self. His compatriot in wartime and peacetime was the immortal Lafayette of France. The world over wherever love of humanity and the right to live as a freeman exists, the name of Lafayette recalls the great figure of ancient days who, like the immortal Bayard, was "without fear and without reproach" — ever for humanity and never for self.

Warren G. Harding came in in 1921. He was nominated by a senatorial oligarchy of the old guard of republicans with the great manufacturing interests or powerful financiers of America behind him. A country editor, he had traveled fast as a practical politician, a good fellow who thought ever of Harding and his boon companions and let his country rock along as the skipper of the ship of state. He died broken-hearted. Those whom he had trusted betrayed him and brought dishonor upon his reign as the successor of Wilson.

Calvin Coolidge was the successor of Harding, a New Englander by birth, personally clean, ever ambitious, he rose from a minor office in a Massachusetts town to great heights — first, as lieutenant governor and next as governor of Massachusetts.

HOW THE PRESS MADE AN IDOL

Boston policemen deserted their posts and went on strike. A practical politician, Coolidge played a heroic part. He ordered out the national guardsmen and he was proclaimed the hero of the hour by the powerful newspapers of the country who were largely for the rule of the republic "by the few and not for the many." President Coolidge saw the drift of things. But he was a party man from start to finish and he held it his sacred duty to stand by his party right or wrong.

He was for the protective tariff system with its walls as high as the sky. He had a kindly heart, but he had the New England ideas and ideas of thrift and industry and he believed that every human tub should stand on its own bottom — "and the devil take the hindmost."

COMING OF HOOVER

Herbert Hoover was the successor of Coolidge. He was the son of an Iowa blacksmith. He was born under western skies. He was educated under the skies of California. His chosen profession was that of an engineer. He was one of the great engineer-promoters of his time. His mining career covered parts of Europe and Asia and Africa.

Woodrow Wilson had discovered him "abroad." In war days he was the chief of the huge relief organization to feed the hungry children of Europe which had been launched by the Wilson administration and the American people. His name became worldwide. He had untold millions to spend and when the war was over he was made secretary of commerce by the war president — immortal of the republic. He retired from office, a broken-hearted man. He was swamped at the polls and in the electoral college by Franklin Delano Roosevelt and the ballots of untold millions of American voters. Hoover had distinguished ability perhaps as an engineer and promoter.

He was personally honest. When the going was easy he found no difficulty in functioning either in public or private fields of endeavor but when the crisis was approaching and the crash came his countrymen voted him a complete failure because he lacked initiative, he lacked that splendid courage that calls for immediate action, he was ever thinking of self and a dazzling place in history and as a president, he was voted a misfit by millions of men and women who had cast their ballots for him when "The Happy Warrior" went down in defeat.

As for President Roosevelt, his place in history will be determined by the future. He has been in office a little more than a year. His recovery acts are largely experimental, but he had brains linked with guts and courage linked with patriotism. He tackled the job and all men who read and think know what has happened since the reins of power were passed from the son of an Iowa blacksmith to the son of a New York aristocrat with a setting or background of 250 years behind him.

POISONOUS CONCOCTION
WAUKESHA, Wis., March 16. — When police arrested John Dominiski on a charge of drunkenness they found a bottle of denatured alcohol in his pocket. The bottle was boldly labeled "poison." To make the mixture more palatable, police said, Dominiski had dissolved two aspirin tablets in it.

Through the Editor's Spectacles

By GEORGE

Once upon a time, so the legends go, there lived a king whose lust for gold was so great that he wished for the miraculous power to transform whatever he touched into the precious metal. Now no punishment could more ideally fit the wish than its fulfillment, as the gods well knew, so the foolish old king was granted his desire. In the first moments of possession of that tragic power, he delighted in its exercise and hastened to fill all the unfiled corners of his treasure house with gold. Whimsically, he turned some flowers into the golden metal and the artistry of nature so exquisitely captured was marvelous to behold. No doubt the king reflected upon the admiration the critics would probably admit when they viewed his handiwork in the palace parlor vases. Well, he went on exercising his power with great delight, exhibiting it upon blocks of wood and stone and iron and carrying them into the storehouse. Everything he put his hand upon changed into yellow bullion. He must have made several billions of dollars worth of gold with his supernatural chemistry before noon, when he began to get tired. After all, it was not necessary to make all the gold he wanted at once. He had days and days to enjoy his magical gift. There was no sense in trying to crowd all the pleasure into one forenoon. Besides, he was hungry.

So he went in and sat down at the palace table and picked up his knife and fork as kings in a hurry for vittles are apt to do. As he did so, he felt a subtle transubstantiation in the implements as he milled surprised to discover that they had turned to gold. In his hunger he had almost forgotten about his strange gift. But he paid slight attention to the change in the silverware. The food in the kitchen smelled mighty good.

By and by the attendants arrived and put vittles on his plate. He picked up a piece of bread, and instantly instead of light food it changed to heavy metal in his hands. He looked at it in consternation. He tried picking up a morsel on his fork and thrusting it in his mouth with a quick motion, but the food turned to a lump of hard metal. Well, there he was, in a devil of a fix. He couldn't touch a thing without turning it to gold. He was hungry but he couldn't eat. He had all the money in the world, but not a penny of it would buy food that would nourish his body or satisfy his craving. He was in danger of starving to death in the midst of vast wealth. You know the little girl in the yarn — how he turned his little girl into gold and was prostrated with grief until the goddess came to his rescue and freed him from his awful golden spell.

A family of California travelers in Cisco yesterday morning felt themselves in little better circumstances than King Midas. The man, who told officers he was the manager of a grocery store chain in Los Angeles, had a cashier's check for fifty dollars on a Los Angeles bank. For safety he had equipped himself with the check instead of cash when he left home, not doubting the check was readily negotiable. He and his family were en route to Memphis, Tenn. He had figured on cashing it at Fort Worth. But a necessary repair job on his practically new car had cost him all available cash. When the family of Mr. and Mrs. [Name], their two small boys, and a sister of the husband, reached Cisco, the man tried to cash the check. He learned for the first time that cashier's checks are little more reliable in exchange than an ordinary check. They are too easily forged, and identification is necessary before any bank will risk paying out a considerable sum of money on a piece of paper so presented, no matter how pretty and all right it looks. Swindlers have already used such checks to great advantage. Unable to furnish the identification requested, he was in something of the fix Midas was. He had money but it wouldn't buy anything. His children were hungry, gasoline was low, he had no cash in his pocket — not enough to wire the Los Angeles bank.

Constable Joe Hicks and Police Purdie came to the rescue. In their capacities as officers they were able to deal with the situation in the event the motive behind the proffered check did not prove the best. But Hicks was convinced that the stranger was honest. For one thing, the man actually shed tears in his plight, said he. While Purdie took the boys to a cafe and bought them milk, Hicks stood guard for a test-identification. "THE Silver Dart" has been found," Field announced as Marcia joined the group. "It was sighted by Jo Janvier who's headed for Rio in his yacht. He wired."

"Perhaps it was Noyes who did it," Marcia persisted.

"Yes?" Marcia asked. "Empty? Signal up — perhaps for help. It was well below Cuba."

"Oh, Lord!" Field broke out as Portney drawled a lazy, glum-slowed, "Rather good — come to think of it."

"Do you think he's in Havana?" Will they look for him there?" Marcia asked feverishly. She was certain that he must be in Havana or near there. This certainty persisted despite all the testimony that made it seem impossible.

"Hiding himself, Noyes heard nothing about the trap at the Field camp."

"You make my excuses to Norma and say goodby to her for me," she asked, turning to Field. "I judge she's too busy to see me."

"She's rather absorbed," he admitted, frowning. "Estelle's quite ill. This affair has upset her. It seems that she was fond of Pablo."

"I'm glad Marcia's getting out," Field stated bluntly. Then he forgot her and her interest in the late Mr. Jeffrey was all that he was usually his way. "I know he did, Marcia. His foster father is a murderer years ago. Jeff saw Noyes on one of the small keys and recognized him. He thought Noyes recognized him, too. Noyes must have told Pablo about it and the boy obviously decided to seal Jeff's lips once and for all."

"All that Therese Jeffries told her her pearls and rings."

run-off primary, if a wet and a dry respectively get into the final race.

That a run-off will be required is almost sure. Some enthusiastic Allied supporters can be found who think he will win a majority of the first primary votes. If he does he will be the first democratic candidate for governor to do so since the party adopted the majority rule, except candidates for a second term.

Nearest Approach Dan Moody made the nearest approach to winning in the first primary in an initial race for governor when he polled 409,732 out of a total of 821,234 votes cast. Both Moody and Pat M. Neff won their re-election nominations without a run-off primary.

For the first primary campaign, the candidates still seem to be "feeling out" on issues. Alford started off with a strong slam at lobbyists and lobbyists. Hunter consigned bribe-givers and bribe-takers to the electric chair. Neither is likely to get open opposition for none is going to brand himself an evil lobbyist, a briber or bribe-taker.

Mauri Hughes seized something more tangible to attack as an open-er. He delivered his first "cock" of the campaign at the state ranger force. If he becomes governor it will be either taken "out of politics" or be abolished, he announced.

Issues will become defined as the candidates get on the stump and get a reaction from their hearers. McDonald will "open" at Bonham when it gets "warm in April" meaning probably San Jacinto day. Alford will open at Bowie but has not set the day. Others are also expected to be on the stump by May.

CLYDE GARRETT STATES RECORD FOR NEW RACE

The people of Eastland county have been good to me. They have returned me to office on several occasions, for all of which I shall ever be deeply grateful. They have reposed a confidence in me which I appreciate beyond expression and in return for it all, I have earnestly and faithfully endeavored to render the county honest and efficient service, determined not to betray the confidence and trust placed in me. Believing that my past experience and my knowledge of the county's needs during these perilous times well qualify me to efficiently discharge the duties of county judge and because of my desire to render the county a real service and the fact that many of our outstanding and substantial citizens have solicited me, I am announcing for re-election.

Bond Relief

Two years ago, together with other west Texas county judges, I worked faithfully to secure the passage of the law which sets aside one cent per gallon of the gasoline tax to be applied on the payment of our county road bonds, the proceeds of which went to the building of designated state highways, the result being that the state is paying all the interest on said bonds and 30 per cent of the principal, the one cent per gallon being insufficient to pay more than above amount, however, we are now working to the end that the state assume the entire amount and it is confidently hoped that this will be accomplished within the next year or two. The state has not assumed payment of any of the county's bonds, but merely agrees to participate for a period of two years, one and one-half of which have expired, in these bonds the proceeds of which went into the construction of "designated" state highways. An agreement has been reached by the state and county that of our outstanding bonds, $2,000,000 were used in constructing state highways and the state agrees to participate in the payment of this amount as far as the gasoline tax will permit. The state's assumption of the above amount will mean the lifting of a terrible burden from our taxpayers and, if elected, I pledge my continued efforts along this line.

Tax Value Equalization

With other members of the commissioners' court, I have worked faithfully in an attempt to fairly and impartially equalize values for taxable purposes. Many corrections and adjustments have been made with the tax-payer when it appeared the circumstances justified same. This, also, shall continue to be my policy, if elected.

Since becoming county judge, due to reduction in values and tax rate, taxes have been reduced between 40 and 50 per cent. This fact can be verified by merely comparing tax receipts. Although the times have been distressing the last few years and many of our very best citizens have been unable to pay their taxes, Eastland county has been run on a cash basis; no juror, laborer or merchant having to carry script for their services or merchandise. While many of the cities and counties in Texas have been compelled to default in their obligations, Eastland county, because of the co-operation of its citizens, has promptly met every obligation, including principal and interest on bonds.

Aid to Farmer

I have stood for lending every possible aid to the farmer, poultrymen, stockmen, sheep and goat raisers.

Realizing that I was elected to serve the entire county, I have earnestly co-operated with representatives from all parts of the county in working with the highway department, sparing no time and distance, on projects which would mean the appropriation of funds, employment of men or construction of more highways for the county. Feeling that the locating of highways through incorporated cities should be handled locally, never, at any time, have I interested myself in these matters. I firmly believe that my intimate acquaintance and friendly connection with the highway department has been and will continue to be worth much to Eastland county.

Insane Cases

While jails over the state have been filled with insane people awaiting admission into our crowded institutions, by earnest co-operation I have been successful in getting our county's insane promptly admitted to the relieving relatives of the terrible embarrassment of having their loved ones confined in jail.

Likewise, I have been reasonably successful in getting promptly admitted to our various institutions those who were adjudged in my court to be tuberculars, epileptics and feeble-minded.

Concerning those of our county who have been extremely unfortunate from a financial and physical standpoint, I have tried to be very considerate and charitable and have had a part in seeing that many who were unable to provide it, had, not only food, clothing, shelter and medicine, but also hospitalization and surgical attention. In many instances emergency cases have been admitted to the City County as well as private hospitals permitting reimbursement to county where charity would not be accepted. Some criticism has been made concerning some of above policies but in each instance I used by best judgement.

It will be my purpose to give during the campaign, a more detailed report of my stewardship and to see personally every voter possible. But in the meantime, I most respectfully urge every voter to make a careful investigation concerning my official acts while serving you as county judge—an office which belongs to the people of Eastland county and not to the one placed there by them.

Sincerely and earnestly soliciting your support and influence, solely upon my merits and qualifications, I am,

Very respectfully yours,
C. L. (Clyde) GARRETT.

HOW IS YOUR WATCH?

DEAR SIR:

Your watch should be kept clean and the only one who can clean it properly is a jeweler. Your watch also should be oiled if you are to get the most use out of it.

One wheel in a watch makes 3 hundred beats of vibrations each minute or 18 hundred beats an hour. There is less than one drop of oil used in oiling the wheel and after the oil has been in the watch for a year or more it becomes dry and hard and commences to cut and wear the pivots and steel bearings. The watch should be given a good cleaning and oiling by a jeweler before it reaches this point.

When you think of how much you pay for a good watch and how little you pay to have it cleaned and oiled every year or two, you surely will see immediately that it is only right to send it to a jeweler regularly. We hope that you will be good enough to give us an opportunity to do this work for you.

We might add that we do dependable repair work of all kinds on clocks, watches, and jewelry. Also we clean precious stones and put them in new settings at low prices.

Did You Ever Stop to Think?

Carl E. Kirby, publisher of the (New Mexico) Range, says: Not one of the scores of big firms use newspaper advertising all the country would do so if it didn't pay. Naturally then, the question arises how do they make it pay? The answer is simple and easy: First of all, these well known newspaper advertisers have confidence in themselves, their merchandise and the quality of the service they offer to their customers. Second, they are unafraid, undisgusted and unswerving in their purchase by any and all clamor about the times, no business, etc. They know that the law of supply and demand and the law of averages have gone out of existence. They know that every sunrise means that certain percentage of people are going to buy things during the day for the purpose of living — eating, drinking, cooling, wearing, reading, heating, lighting, cooking, building, repairing, entertaining, going places, and they propose to go after their share of this trading. They know it to be an undisputed fact that more people see and read the newspapers than any other form of printed matter. They know that the newspaper is regarded as a living informational necessity and convenience in more homes than any other product of press, ink and paper. They know from experience, good dollars-and-cents records, that advertising placed in a medium which is bought and paid for, read and read, needed and used, is wanted and waited for, always going to pay. They know because they have made news- paper advertising pay. They use the right kind of advertising prepared according to newspaper reader requirements (ask a newspaper man who knows his job) and when they advertise, they advertise. They don't run just an ad and then quit. You will see them in there all the time. They do propose to let the public forget the word and price of their goods and service. And so their advertising pays, and they increase it!"
