Industrial Recovery Program Faces Two Serious Threats

RAILWAY AND AUTO STRIKES ARE IMMINENT

The federal government today faces two imminent threats to industrial peace that threaten the entire national recovery program.

In New York, the code authority of the automobile industry met under the eye of Adm. Hugh S. Johnson to work out a formula for collective bargaining.

The industry does not intend to recognize the American Federation of Labor as such, not to enter into a contract with it on behalf of its employees.

When a strike is called, it will be because the American Federation of Labor seeks to impose itself on automobile employees regardless of the wishes expressed by the workers.

The automobile manufacturers are compelled with the NRA in letting and spirit. They have collective bargaining rights.

For many years the American Federation of Labor has sought to organize the automobile plants and workers themselves refused to recognize their leadership.

The national industrial recovery does not say that the American Federation of Labor shall be the spokesman for all of the employees.

These aims are contrary to the principles on which the automobile industry has made its great contribution.

WORLD COTTON CONSUMPTION

World cotton consumption by mills totaled 24,969,000 running bales during the 12 months ended Jan. 31, 1934, compared with 22,676,000 bales during the preceding year of 1932, or an increase of 10 per cent, according to the federal bureau of agricultural economics. Consumption of American cotton during the same 12 months was 14,338,000 bales, also a 10 per cent increase. There is a heavy carryover of cotton and there is a sweeping reduction in the acreage to be planted in 1934.

There are wild rumors of war in Europe and Asia and Africa, but it would require a fabulous sum of the gold treasure to stage another world-wide conflagration. It may come some day. Man is a fighting brute at best. He began to fight at the beginning of creation and he has been fighting ever since, and most of the time for fancied wrongs or spurred on by greed, lust for power, acquisition of territory or other forms of wealth held by his neighbors. He thinks he is civilized but he is not. It may require the coming and the going of another 1000 years before a near-perfect civilized being walks the stage of action. He is moving upward and onward all the time, but his pace is 10 times slower than that of a snail feeling its way around a garden of green stuff.

MOTOR SALES EXCEED OUTPUT

With an accumulation of unfilled orders on hand sufficient to require full speed factory operations "for the next several weeks," the motor car industry finds itself in the position of being unable to catch up with retail demands, due largely to difficulty encountered in obtaining raw materials. The March total output has been estimated as 340,000 cars and trucks, which would be 172 per cent over March, 1933. Some motor car executives are "known to believe that the industry, as a major consumer of steel and iron, should be allowed a discount on large purchases. This is forbidden by the NRA."

Col. William Randolph Hearst, speaking through his chain of daily newspapers and magazines, has declared for the elimination of the NRA. His viewpoint is that recovery came about in all the economic crises of the past "without the NRA or codes of government." Col. Hearst had a pet taxing program all his own. He is for a federal sales tax instead of an income tax. The American congress declined to accept his cure-all in the early stages of a New Deal administration.

In all the economic crises of the dead years, fat years followed in the wake of lean years, but there was a different America in those bygone times. A World War had not been fought at a cost of $50,000,000,000 and the bonded indebtedness of states and counties and municipalities had not been piled as a crushing handicap on the taxpayers of America.

PAYING ANOTHER'S POLL TAX

It is a violation of the criminal statutes of Texas for one person to pay the poll tax for another. This is the ruling of the court of criminal appeals. A citizen of Hidalgo county was fined $100 for paying the poll tax of another citizen of the same county. The party of the first part contended that it was a loan and not a gift or a bribe. He appealed the case and the court of criminal appeals said the last word. The defense pleaded that the law sets up a penalty for lending or advancing money for poll tax payment while the most that was proved against the convicted person was that he made a gift of $1.75 to the party of the second part. This was the ruling of the high court of Texas: "It would be a serious reflection on the legislature for the courts to say that the offense could not be punished unless the money was loaned."

This may place a curb on the greed of many who hold to the ancient theory that a money bag or a sand bag are legitimate weapons in teaching "voters how to vote." In a democracy there should be a fair and a free ballot and a quick and correct count.

PLENTY OF FOOD

Figures released by those in authority show that an average of 15,000,000 pounds of food have come to Texas monthly since the beginning of food distribution. It is estimated that 30,000,000 pounds will arrive in March, hence the use of surplus commodities for families on the relief rolls will enable those in charge of distribution to feed the hungry 30 days after the coming of May 1 when a large number who have been receiving aid or employment will be separated from the rolls. It is said that shipment and storage of the vast quantity of food has been accomplished to date with loss of only 4000 pounds through spoilage or theft and at a transportation cost of $2000. Moreover, to insure against losses in the administration 15 auditors were assigned to handling commodity accounts.

May day is coming and May day the wide world over—wherever workers are organized will be a day of celebration—or strikes. Why should there be strikes in America with a marvelous recovery program on and the wisest of leaders in private industry and public service doing their level best to guide the ship of state into the harbor of safety?

YOUTHFUL TEXAN AND HIS PLUM

Douglas W. McGregor, 31, of Houston is said to be the youngest United States district attorney in the nation. Confirmed by the senate he was sworn in as federal government prosecutor for the southern district of Texas. He will take office July 1, succeeding Henry M. Holden, republican. McGregor has served as assistant in the office for several years. He is a product of the University of Texas. His great grandfather was a personal friend and close chum of Andrew Jackson when that king of fighting democrats was a political leader and the boss of the old Volunteer state. fought his duels and later became president of the United States. Texas-Tennesseans or Tennessee-Texans appear "to get the breaks" whenever the federal plum tree is shaken.

There's Really No Great Mystery About It!

Kentucky Editor Given Vindication by Lawmakers

By HUGH NUGENT FITZGERALD

Vance Armentrout, associate editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal, has been in the national picture for some time. He refused to reveal the name of a writer of a letter to the newspaper Point of View column carried by the Louisville morning paper. The letter criticized the speaker and rules committee of the Kentucky legislature. Then the house of the Kentucky lawmakers laid a fine of $25 and costs on the editor and in its report handed the press an olive branch. This is what the committee reported: "It had no alternative under the law but to find the newspaper man guilty of contempt, but that it recommended scruples against violating newspaper ethics by breaking a confidence. In other words, a newspaper man who would violate a confidence would be a story type of manhood. Correct."

The conclusion of the report is very appealing. A newspaper man who would violate a confidence would hold many jobs or get many assignments in future years. As for Editor Armentrout he refused to take it on the chin. That is, he would not pay the fine and costs. He invited the attorney-general of Kentucky to file suit and let the high court of Kentucky say the last word if necessary by either vindicating or condemning his refusal to place himself in the attitude of violating the confidence reposed in him by the chap who furnished the information on which the article was written and which criticized the speaker and rules committee.

If the unknown told the truth, why should the speaker and rules committee go on the warpath? If he didn't tell the truth then the columns of the Courier-Journal are open at all times to persons who feel that they have been wronged or have a fancied grievance against the press of their commonwealth.

UNCLE SAM INCREASING SALE OF GOODS ABROAD

Uncle Sam through his agents and the people of the United States sold more goods to foreign countries in January, 1934, than he did in the same month last year. There were three exceptions as buyers of American goods. Soviet Russia was the biggest, but the agents of the Slav government are said to be in the market on a trading proposition that will result in their buying and shipping home 500,000 bales of American cotton. Fair trade relations with foreign countries must come to pass if there is to be a market for American staples (from the soil or fabricated) in coming years.

Rivalries of nations and rivalries of the leaders of nations must be adjusted and fair trade laws established before the exports of American staples and merchandise and wares shall assume the proportions they did in bygone years.

FORD CONTINUES IN BIG INDUSTRIAL PICTURE

Henry Ford marches onward. He announced a restoration of the $5 a day minimum in all Ford motor plants in the United States and Canada. He bluntly stated that President Roosevelt is "stopping a good many harmful things that would otherwise be put over on the people." He predicted that commercial and industrial conditions will continue to improve through the year. He warned against "get-rich schemes whether they come from the stock market, the politicians or the so-called labor leaders." Speaking of American financiers, he said: "I believe the bankers cannot put anything more over on the American people—at least not in this generation—as in the last year the American people have learned so much about bankers that they are no longer afraid of them." He grouped together bankers and labor leaders. He did not qualify his words. This is what he said: "The bankers of the country would like to use the banks and the labor unions and anything else in their control to destroy competition. Most of these things come into collision with President Roosevelt."

Henry Ford was the second American billionaire. He was a trained mechanic—a machinist. Not more than 35 years ago he was taking down $2.50 a day. Look at him now.

AUSTIN, March 19 — As a turning point in the historic city vs. country tug-of-war in the legislature, the rural people have much to ward which they may look forward in the 1934 trend in the cities. Political groups im-memorably have linked the names "farm-labor" and other groups not political have combined the g names in suggesting a unity of interest in the workers of the city and the workers of the country of the senate.

The unity-of-interest is confirmed by the way candidates in city districts whose appeal in town is to labor is making a direct appeal to the rural votes as being the champion of both rural and city workers.

The small, compact Harris county state senatorial district this year has a political race on, in which the voters believe they can't lose. The contest for the seat which Sen. Walter F. Woodall will give up by making a race for lieutenant governor, is between Rep. John M. Mathis and Rep. Weaver Moore. Both are low house members.

Both candidates are wets, re-submission and repeaters, liberally who supported the racing, boxing and similar measures. Both are popular men, able speakers; both are lawyers.

Mr. Mathis has the advantage of long experience and mature serenity. He has a stinging wit to laug an antagonist down; but with a kindly twist that turns bitterness into a friendly laugh. Rep. Moore, youthful aggressive, effective, has enthusiasm and drive and much skill and cleverness in parliamentary strategy.

It seems nobody else will crowd into this race. Extensive comment at Houston recently has been that these two men, good friends who will remain friends through the campaign, will scrap it out, and that Houston will be satisfied, whichever holes out the winner.

A line or two in the news from Washington recently meant far more for Texas than anyone in the interior would realize at first. To get the significance of it, one should visit such port cities as Beaumont, Houston, Port Arthur and Corpus Christi, and the future port of Brownsville-Port Isabel.

The news story said President Roosevelt asked authority to negotiate tariff agreements with other nations, thus destroying the high tariff wall that has destroyed the American export business, and has caused the shipping centers to stagnate.

One of the world's greatest cotton-buying firms closed its Galveston office in 1928 as a result of the republican tariff program. The story of dwindling foreign trade is well-known. Now the New Deal proposal to right the condition, promises to revive the business of the port cities and very quickly to benefit the inland producing centers. If the exports shall not be in raw materials and agricultural commodities, at least the ultimate making of the export goods will reach back to the roots of all American commerce with direct benefits to the farm producers and the farm sections.

UNDER THE DOME AT AUSTIN

By GORDON K. SHEARER

United Press Staff Correspondent
AUSTIN, March 19.—Radio announcement that John Charles Thomas, metropolitan warbler, received a commission in the Texas rangers from President Roosevelt is correct but misleading.

President Roosevelt with all his emergency powers has not yet been given authority to appoint Texas rangers. The commission, honorary only, was issued by Gov. Ferguson and mailed to the president who delivered it to the singer.

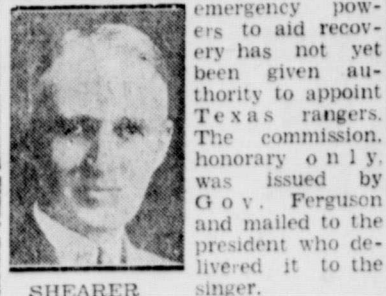

Reports that the "commission" had been withdrawn for a fancied slight to Dallas are denied at state Ranger headquarters here.

Thomas' "commission" has not been filed at Ranger headquarters so he is in no danger of being called out to help catch Clyde Barrow or some other gunman.

Austin was started this week to read in a locally circulated paper that a Texas governor once had been horsewhipped on the streets of Austin. The statements was in a history of Ben Thompson, published on the anniversary of Thompson's death, 50 years before. In it, Thompson is said to have been angry at remarks about him and to have retaliated by administering a "dose of cowhide" to Gov. Bell.

A search of state library archives revealed an account of the horse-whipping of a "Judge" Bell by Thompson. The "Judge" Bell by Thompson in the story, Gov. Bell at that time, 1872, was living in North Carolina after distinguished service in the Confederate army.

The recent special session of the Texas legislature did not, apparently, think well enough of its own acts to make an appropriation for their printing. As a result the secretary of state's office will not issue the usual printed and certified volume. Attorneys wanting copies of an act for court use will have to get individual certified copies. Several unofficial publications of the acts are put out but these are accepted by the courts.

Adjutant general Henry Hutchings, former 36th division brigadier general is about again after a serious back injury suffered when he was thrown from the seat of his automobile when it struck a road obstruction. Like Col. Gordon Johnson, killed at San Antonio by a tank on a polo pony, Gen. Hutchings had been through many campaigns only to meet with a serious accident in peacetime.

Attorney-general James V. Allred has placed Mrs. Bessie Allred, a sister-in-law, temporarily in charge of Austin headquarters in charge of campaign for governor. She is the wife of Ben Allred, brother of the attorney-general, who lives in Austin.

State Railroad Commissioner L. A. Smith claims to know more Texas personally than anyone else. Visitors at the capitol are surprised when he calls them by name and follows that up by asking special questions for many of their friends and neighbors. The late U. S. Senator Joe Bailey had a similar gift for remembering names and faces.

With all the oil regulation that has been piled up in recent years it is somewhat astonishing to hear that no permit is needed to drill an oil well in Texas, unless the drill proposes to put the well within prohibited proximity to another or too near his own property. The general rule is that a well must not be nearer than 150 feet to the property line, nor within 300 feet of another well. Distances are greater in some fields where special regulations have been made. Until a field develops 10,000 barrels production daily, it also is free from production limitations.

TREES SCORN ZERO
MANSFIELD, O., March 19.—Despite recent cold waves, while pedestrians and motorists fought the way through snow drifts here, trees, a peach and a dogwood, were optimistically blossoming at the home of Alvin Reed. Temperatures here fell as low as 40 degrees below zero while the blooms were defying the cold.

PUPPETS HELP CO-ED

PABLITO is handsome youth, works at the hotel Florida home of millionaire JIM FIELD. When Field's maid, LOTTIE, arrives, Pablito falls in love with her.

He knows nothing of his parents—a titled Englishman and a servant girl. He makes his home with the FIELDS. He wanted for a murder years ago. Noyes sees when a guest of Field's sees him, recognizes him. Pablito, dressed as a tenebrous, goes to a masquerade at Field's home, but loses a gun and tells Pablito to head the boat for Cuba.

The Field home search begins for Pablito who is believed to have killed JEFF FIELDS, and stolen the Jeffrie pearls. MARCIA TREADWAY knows this is not true but feels scornful. She tells the truth. Instead she leaves for Havana. Noyes has returned to a sea and shack he shared with Pablito.

Meanwhile SIR AUBREY, Pablito's father, begins a search for his son.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XVI

A FEW hours later Marcia Treadway, in Havana, entered the Ritz Hotel. Here, as darkness settled on the Prado and the outline of Morro grew vague, she rubbed her face with cold cream and settled on a chaise longue to think and decide what to do next. Obviously there must be certain ways to go about finding a person but she had never considered them before and found herself fumbling. If she consulted a detective she might bring Pablito closer to the authorities than she wished. There was no doubt by now that a description of him had been broadcast widely together with the facts of his supposed crime.

She frowned, rubbed away the frown, and then closed her eyes so tightly that small wrinkles stood out around them.

At that moment Lottie, Beau and Pablito were seated at a table in a small, dimly lighted room on an equally dreary street. Natives of the town crowded on the narrow sidewalk outside to see the strangers who had come there to eat.

A waiter, wearing a far from immaculate apron, stood ready to take the order.

"You are ready and well ahead for the carnival tomorrow," he commented, looking at the disheveled costumes of the three patrons. Pablito, knowing the Spanish mind, answered, "It is better to be too early than too late."

"True, Senor," the waiter agreed. "And many begin the night." He decided that Pablito, despite his light hair and eyes, was a native. None but natives spoke Spanish in this way, without accent. The other two were not Cubans.

HE recommended the "pollo con rizo," the fried bananas and a wine that had unusual age. Pablito ordered.

"Tell him to make it snappy," Lottie entreated, "or I'll eat the table cloth and get hydrophobia."

"It will be half an hour at the best," Pablito said. "Hurry is the one thing that does not thrive in this climate."

"What's the name of this burg?" Lottie asked then.

"Name it and you can have it," Beau told her lazily.

"Maybe we can find the name on the station," Lottie suggested since no one answered her question.

Beau responded energetically with, "My Gawd, there ain't no station! If a train run in here it would roll over on its back, snuffle twice, set to snoring and sleep forever. That's how much life there is around here. Pipe the line outside the window! Guess we're givin' 'em some excitement."

"Where we goin' from here, Beau?" Lottie leaned across the table.

"Havana," he answered. "Never hide when you're supposed to. It's always a give-away—hidin'. We're goin' to Havana and goin' to the carnival tomorrow. We'll get enough here to start. There's no danger here. I'll bet they don't get more than one newspaper a week in this town and the man who gets it is probably who won the lottery. Look active and alert, don't they?" he ended as he glanced toward the line outside, crowding and jostling one another in order to see the strangers better.

A GENTLEMAN who twirled his moustaches entered then and asked the trio to drink with him. Pablito thanked him and in turn asked if he refused who would read anything except who won the lottery. Look active and alert, don't they?" he ended as he glanced toward the line outside, crowding and jostling one another in order to see the strangers better.

"You oughta be able to pick up considerable loot tomorrow, Lottie," Beau stated. She nodded. "You any good at that kind of thing?" he asked, turning to Pablito.

"I don't believe so."

"Hell, how you goin' to make a living?" Beau asked.

"I'll look out for you, honey," said Lottie quickly and warmly.

"Oh, I'll get along," Pablito assured them with more confidence in his voice than he felt. It is not easy for men in hiding to apply openly for work, he realized. And there would be Noyes, too, now of course waiting for him at the hotel in Havana. Noyes would have to be fed and the problem was too big and he tried to dismiss it but refused to be cast aside, as problems will refuse to be forgotten when flesh is aching from weariness and the mind is whirling from lack of sleep.

"Go slow," Beau warned the others as the food arrived. "The audience outside is likely to suspect something funny if you don't see."

Lottie and Pablito did see and they ate with a slowness that was proof of a commendable and unusual will power. Beau drank to "success," Pablito lifted his glass but it was with a heavy hand.

Sancho outfitted Lottie, Pablito and Beau in a way which made them look like Cubans from one of the little villages—bit bulky where they should be slender and a smudge which there should have been room.

Beau turned before a polished mirror to groan aloud. He had earned his nickname early through his particular about his attire. Now he saw the lently brown shoulders so padded as to suggest pin cushions, wasp-waisted coat and a green and tan checked waistcoat. His shoes were a violent tan, and being the only shoes of Sancho's stock, Pablito chose a suit of amazing blue. Sancho and the guide who had been found at the cafe were entranced. Lottie was less awkward than the men in her ill-cut country things. She looked a bewildered rather sweet child of the provinces and younger than she looked in many hard years.

"No one now would know you whispered the self-appointed guide to Pablito as he considered Lottie's answer to his question about the matters of government. "You are changed, Lottie, changed! But God will guard you and guard you!"

Pablito doubted this, but he gripped the other's hand firmly as he said goodby and he began the new journey with a warmth at his heart. Ten miles later they were on the way to Havana.

T. and P. Announces Rail and Water Tours

Southwestern tourists are given a more convenient and economical means of seeing North and Central America as the result of a new agreement made between the Grace Steamship lines and the Texas and Pacific railway. It is announced by Frank Jensen, general passenger agent of the railway.

Under the new agreement tourists may start at any point on the Texas and Pacific railway and travel by rail to New York, thence by Grace line steamer through the Panama canal to California and back to the starting point by rail all under one ticket and at a considerably reduced cost, Mr. Jensen said. Tickets permit stop overs along the route.

This new rail and water agreement will also permit many foreign tourists from Central America and Panama to visit Carlsbad Caverns and other points of interest in the Southwest.

On the steamship portion of the journey stops may be made at Havana, Cuba, Columbia, South America, the Panama Canal, El Salvador

Gun Collection Is Stock Show Exhibit

FORT WORTH, March 19 — One of the most frequented exhibits of the Southwest Exposition and Fat Stock show this year was a collection of guns of notorious bandits.

Perhaps the most attractive was the machine gun on which the notorious Harvey Bailey slept, when he was captured near Paradise, Texas, in the famous Charles F. Urschel kidnaping case.

Machine guns, automatic pistols, sawed-off shotguns, some real, some artificial, lined the exhibit case.

One real pistol that created a large amount of curiosity was that allegedly used by Joe Newton in the daring $200,000 mail robbery at Rounout, Ill., in 1924. The pistol reputedly was the one used to guard mail clerks while the bandits looted the pouches.

Did You Ever Stop to Think?

By EDSON E. WAITS Shawnee, Oklahoma.

The men who express doubt about the future of your home city are not usually those who are best able to gauge its future.

It's time that a lot of politicians removed their "smoke screens" and let the folks at home know where they stand.

Sometimes here and there a merchant gets discouraged on account of poor business and thinks perhaps something is wrong with the goods he wants to sell. Many times the fault is his own because he does not advertise his wares so people may know what he has to sell. These merchants must snap out of it, come alive and go after business by newspaper advertising or they will soon be numbered in the business world as among the "dear departed."

There seems to be quite a number of "Loud Speakers" in this country.

We do not see anything in the international situation that war may not break out at any time, but it takes money and plenty of it to carry on a war on a modern scale none of the saber-rattlers have it.

Cities have reputations as people—some good, some bad.

A lot of newspapers are cursed what they print when in reality they should be blessed for what they do not print.

There are two sides of human nature — optimistic and pessimistic. There should be only optimists your home city.

Health Certificates Required by Law

AUSTIN, March 19 — For the protection of the public a law was passed in 1921 making it mandatory for every person who is employed in any public eating place, bakery, meat market, dairy or candy factory to secure a health certificate from a reputable physician. This law is intended to eliminate all persons having any communicable disease from handling any foodstuff. These certificates must be renewed every six months.

Typhoid fever, diphtheria, and amoebic dysentery carriers have been found numbers of times working in dairies, cafes, and other places where food is prepared or offered for sale. It is not too much for the consuming public to demand that those who sell them food shall be free from communicable diseases. If the examinations for food handlers are properly carried out, good will be accomplished in protecting the health of the buyer as well as giving the applicant for a certificate accurate information as to his physical condition.

The Texas state department of health has repeatedly advocated periodic physical examinations for the general public as it is during these examinations that many incipient diseases may be discovered and treatment begun in time to stop its developing to such a degree that treatment will not be helpful. Many deaths and much suffering would be eliminated if every one would have this periodic check. In the case of food handlers, only the diseases that are communicable will withhold the issuance of a certificate. The cost is money well invested and the consuming public demand that those they buy from have this evidence of good health.

MAY WITHDRAW COMPROMISE OFFER. WASHINGTON, D. C., March 19. —Railroad managers today threatened to press demands for a 15 per cent reduction in basic wages if the railway unions continued their refusal to accept present wages for another six months.

The conference committee of railway managers informed the union leaders meeting with them in the Willard hotel that if they refuse "to cooperate with the president of the United States in order to aid in effecting a national recovery during the year 1934," the railroads would have to withdraw their compromise offer, which was suggested originally by Mr. Roosevelt.
