PUBLIC NOT SUFFICIENTLY TAX CONSCIOUS

A serious difficulty with general programs of tax reduction is the fact that the public is not sufficiently tax conscious. After all the oratory about high government costs and the incessant exclamations against this levy and that levy which marked the depression period, such a statement may appear silly. The facts are that there has been and is a great deal of talk about high taxes, that libraries have been written upon the subject, and that during the taxpaying period the sentiment against this most necessary evil of government is almost unanimous, but also that during the rest of the 12 months the exclaiming and the agitation are mostly confined to a few groups or interests which are particularly conscious of the presence of taxes either as a business impediment or a large item of overhead in the ledger columns. Mr. Average Citizen goes about his business, glad that the tax issue has been settled for another year, and too much concerned with such things as grocery bills, rents monthly accounts, business problems and what-has-he to add the altruistic burden of government reform to his daily mental grind. Tax reform requires too much thinking. He knows he has to pay taxes. That issue was long ago conclusively settled. If it were a matter of getting rid of the payment entirely and removing a considerable item of cost from the complicated question of making a couple of ends meet, he would undoubtedly wax voluble and valiant in the fight. But taxes in some form must be endured if government is to exist. Mr. Average Citizen does not feel either a saving or an increase in his individual bill to the extent of more than a few dollars per annum, and this is not sufficient to stimulate him into raising the political devil about increasing bureaus and functions and costs. He may apathetically vote for some candidate who champions an apparently logical scheme to cut government expenditures and reduce annual levies, and of occasion, when a certain issue or personality is sensationalized, he may get steamed up over it. But these instances of high political blood pressure are invariably traceable to no concern for the public weal, but rather to something as far from this altruistic conception as personal pride and prejudice. When his blood is sufficiently stirred over a question to give him a voice, Mr. Average Citizen isn't thinking about the tax dollars he wants to save, unless that happens to be the dramatized issue. He's thinking about the principle of the thing, and he'll trade his prospects of tax-saving for that principle any time.

The general public, therefore, is usually apathetic over a reasoned course of reducing public costs. If there is one element demanding reduction, there is as much element elsewhere demanding new government services that cost. It is not until instances of rank graft and noisome corruption are laid bare that general indignation is aroused and a power of public opinion brought to bear with enough authority to force a remedy. But even then it isn't a mind for economy, but a mass will to inflict punishment that is satisfied.

Agitation for tax reform, then, is confined to particular interests or institutions which have to deal with taxes in large items and to whom a reduction or an increase represents an appreciable figure; to businesses through which large revenues, such as the gasoline and cigarette tax, are collected, and to newspaper and magazine editorial columns and college and university departments of government and sociology. Even in some of the latter, statements upon the question are softened, for taxation is the principal source of support for most of them.

If some method could be devised by which the average taxpayer would be kept continually aware of his financial obligation to the government, the chances are that he would be constantly concerned for the manner in which the public funds were being spent. At least he would think several times before demanding more public services.

CUBANS AS BUYERS OF TEXAS RICE

Texas is one of the rice producing states of the nation. Now it is said that Cuban importations of Louisiana, Texas, and Arkansas rice are expected to increase under the decree of the Cuban government granting a 40 per cent preferential to United States imported rice on the domestic consumption tax levied by Cuba on foreign rice. All the producers of American staples are seeking foreign markets. Americans are not a rice eating people. There is always a surplus of American rice. When there is no foreign demand American rice growers are in a slump. Cubans are rice eaters. Perhaps the New Orleans American growers of their annual surplus. The pockets fat pockets in the rice growing section.

Misfortune Also Makes Strange Bedfellows

Texas Republican Enters Governor Race

By HUGH NUGENT PIEZGERALD
A gubernatorial standard bearer for the Texas G.O.P. has announced his candidacy. Col. Rene B. Creager is the leader of the republican party of Texas. He has been as quiet as a field mouse in recent years, but as national committeeman of the party he will say the word at the proper time.

Doran John Haesly is the newcomer. He is a citizen of Dallas. He is ready to run under the republican banner. He is a dry. He favors retention of the Dean law. He is opposed to the submission of prohibition to the voters. Col. Creager is a wet. He was a repealer. Has he had a change of heart? Page Doran John Haesly as to his qualifications, his speed, his knowledge of the political game and why he is ambitious to make the run around the track in November.

Candidate Russell is a dry, an anti-repealer and an advocate of the retention of the Dean act. Candidate Russell is a democrat. He is going to make a house to house campaign from the Gulf to the Rockies, and from Gov. Bill Murray's pocket state to the lower regions of the Rio Grande. He may not harvest a great number of votes but the same was said of Tom Hunter two years ago. Col. Tom received more than 220,000 and knocked sky high the prophecy of all the political wizards who had rushed into the public prints while the campaign was on. Now what will happen to the Hunter boom of yesterday in the primary election the coming month of July?

WILBUR GLEN VOLIVA BOWS TO THE MODERN

Alexander Dowie was the founder of the Christian Catholic Apostolic church of Zion. He was the builder and the Mussolini of the town of Zion in the state of Illinois. It is a very important religious colony of Zionites. Alexander called hogs the scavengers of the earth. He barred tobacco from his territory. He taught the gospel that the earth was flat and not round, and his followers believed him. Fifteen years ago Alexander died. Wilbur Glenn Voliva his lieutenant, became the high priest of Zion. Now he has lifted the ban on pork and cigars. He has let it be known that beer guzzling and whisky soaking never will be tolerated. Use of cosmetics, chewing of gum by young women, wearing of short skirts and other conduct deemed unseemly by Dowie and continued by Voliva will be kept under the ban.

Voliva is going to hold revival meetings over the country. He needs coin. He plans to obtain sufficient funds to get Zion Industries, Inc., valued at $10,000,000 several years ago and embracing all the business and knocked sky high the prophecy of all the political wizards who had rushed into the public prints while the campaign was on. Now what will happen to the Hunter boom of yesterday in the primary election the coming month of July?

satisfaction for the time being. "What fools these mortals be!"

GNATS AS KILLERS OF HORSES AND MULES

Arkansas farmers are hard hit in the midst of their spring farming operations. In many sections of the commonwealth the worst scourge of buffalo gnats in years cleaved the skies and killed thousands of dollars worth of livestock. It is said that most of the livestock losses are caused by lack of knowledge of the gnat's characteristics. It appears to inject a toxic poisoning and is so small that the animals breathe quantities into the lungs, which are absorbed, exerting an additional toxic effect. According to veterinarians, once an animal becomes ill from the bite, no treatment appears to have any effect. Hundreds of horses and mules have been slain by the buffalo gnat killers.

Farming is more than a business. It is the greatest of all gambles. A farmer faces poisonous insects, pestilences, drought, famines, spring and summer floods and then come the grasshoppers and locusts in their season. "Back to the farm" may have its attractions but there has not been a wild rush from the urban centers to the rural centers "under the skies of Texas."

Through the Editor's Spectacles

By GEORGE

With two kidnappings and robberies within recent weeks, it begins to look as if Cisco is to share experience with metropolitan centers of the state in this type of crime. The breed of highwaymen who operate in fast cars—usually their victims—constitute the most serious present day menace to peaceful society, because they can strike and dodge with a swiftness that makes them difficult to corner. George Hartness' experience with one of the breed yesterday convinced him that the business of robbing people is a profession. The man who accosted him on the street, to all appearances in a perfectly normal manner of business, had the deed planned to its finest details. Mr. Hartness said:

be round, but King Pork and Queen Nicotine knocked two pillars from under his feet and made Zion a howling wilderness of doubt and dis-

DONNA of the BIG TOP by BEULAH POYNTER

BEGIN HERE TODAY
DONNA GABRIEL and MADELINE SIDDAL, who call themselves "The Gabriel Sisters" are trapeze performers with Trafford's circus. DON DAVID is the animal trainer. He is in love with Donna, who regards him merely as a friend. Madeline is in love with Con. When Madeline's grandfather writes asking her to spend the weekend on his farm, she persuades Donna to take her place. The grandfather is blind and BILL SIDDAL, Madeline's cousin, runs the farm. GRANDFATHER SIDDAL is a fine, lovable old man and Donna is ashamed of deceiving him. In spite of this she enjoys the visit and is sorry when the time comes to leave.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER V
THE star performers were having luncheon in the cook tent when Donna arrived at the circus lot. Madeline was sitting alone at the head of a long table. She called out airily, "Hello!" and Donna sat down beside her.

"Well, how did you get along?" Madeline asked.
"All right. I don't think they suspected anything."
"Still crazy about farm life?" Donna did not answer.
"How's the good-looking cousin on further acquaintance?"
"I'd be proud and happy if he were a relative of mine, but I'm too tired to talk about him or anything else."

Madeline shrugged her shoulders. "Of course you were bored, poor darling. Has the price of hogs gone up? How many quarts of milk does old Daisy give now? I suppose the chickens aren't laying well this year, and so much rain is going to ruin the crops! My God, don't I know it all! The same conversation every day! And the prayers—oh the prayers! She laughed scornfully. "I'd rather marry Ned Trafford than go back to a life like that."

"Yes, dear, I have. Your boy friend and I spent the Sabbath together."
"If you mean Con, he's not my boy friend. Nothing would please me more than to have him transfer his affections to you."
"I believe you actually mean that," Madeline said.
"I certainly do!"
Ned Trafford was standing near the dressing tent when the two girls emerged into the bright sunlight. He was a tall, heavily built man possessed of a florid sort of good looks. His hair, thick and dark, and coarse, curled tightly about his close-set ears and far down on his forehead. Under shaggy brows his eyes were bright china blue and penetrating.

THOUGH incapable of any love other than a sensual, possessive one, he was capable of a deep, intense hatred and at that moment he hated the slender, dark-eyed girl tripping lightly across the lot. Up to a certain point the affair with the young Gabriel sister had progressed beautifully. Trafford had visioned himself her husband and had not hesitated to brag of his conquest to others. When, abruptly, Madeline had waved him aside and given her attention to the animal trainer Trafford's at-fection had turned to bitter anger.

A wisp of a girl had made him the laughing stock of his crew! At one glance from the animal trainer Madeline had thrown him over. Trafford was sure Con David would never marry her; everyone knew Con was crazy about Donna. Well, he'd show her! Big Ned Trafford would show her she couldn't make a fool of him.

The two girls drew nearer and Trafford moved slightly, obstructing their entrance to the tent.
"Pardon me," Madeline said lightly. Donna gave a little gasp at what she read in the man's glowering face.
"I want to talk to you," he mumbled, looking down at Madeline.
"Sorry, but I can't stop now, Ned. Got to dress."
"You'll talk." He caught her wrist and pulled her close to him. "Trafford!" cried Donna.
"That's all right, Miss Donna. This girl and me have got to come to a showdown. She's been trying to make a monkey out of me and I won't stand for it."
"Let go my wrist, you brute!" Madeline gasped. "There's no need to try to make a monkey out of you. You're an ape already."
He flung her from him with a smothered oath. "So that's how I stand, is it?"
"Yes, that's how you stand. Because I tried to be decent to you, did you get the idea in your thick head that I had a crush on you? My God, a crush on you! A canvasman! A common, low-lived workman! And because I wouldn't come at your beck and call you beat all over the lot and make a bigger fool of yourself than you were before."

"Madeline!" Donna cut in.
"Oh, he makes me sick! You want a scene do you? She flung at him. "Well, after the bar act is over you can make as big a scene as you please, but count me out of it! I'm through with you. Now call it a day."
SHE brushed past him into the tent with the air of a tragedy queen. Trafford spat viciously, jammed his hands into his pockets and started towards the big tent. Donna called after him, "Ned!"
He paused.
"You made her sore, but she didn't mean it to heart. You mustn't take it to heart."
"I know where I stand all right," he muttered and continued on his way.
Donna, frowning and far more perturbed than she liked to admit, followed the other girl to their dressing room. Madeline was sitting before the mirror, rocking with peals of laughter. "Can you tie that? Because I spent the day with Con."
"Shut up!" Donna rasped. "I warned you! Over and over I warned you. That man has your life in his hands and—"
"Don't be silly!"
"Silly, am I? What's to prevent a screw coming loose while we're in the air? Who could prove Trafford had tampered with the apparatus? I'd rather be in the cage with Con's cats than in your shoes right now."
Madeline's laugh died abruptly. "You—say that as if you were afraid."
"I am." Donna's hands were unsteady as she smeared cold cream over her face.
Madeline, with slitted eyes, watched the other girl out on her

NEW POLITICAL PARTY WILL BE DRY CHAMPION

By JULIAN A. BEAMAN
United Press Staff Correspondent
PHOENIX, Ariz., May 1 — America's conscience is creating a new political party standing for a "de-sect dryness" and creating a nation free from crime, governed by honest officials and at peace with the world!

At least this is the opinion of R. W. Geary, Phoenix, who has just been elected federation secretary of the fifth group to join the nationwide movement of the commonwealth party.

There are 17 states at the present time where the new movement is gaining a foothold, according to Geary. He classifies them in the following manner:

States Interested
Michigan, strong; Ohio, thousands enlisted; Rhode Island, campaign now on; California, 650,000 votes in 1932; Arizona, organization completed in April; Connecticut, 10,000 votes in 1932; Massachusetts, beginning to organize; Washington (state), only talk of organizing and the same is true in the District of Columbia, Missouri, Georgia, Virginia, Delaware and Florida; New York, 200,000 votes in 1932; North Carolina, strong, and Tennessee, strong.

In all these states the movement is aimed at fusing the dissatisfaction of the old parties into a dry progressive party. In many places the name of the commonwealth party has not been adopted as yet, but probably will in the very near future.

Six-Plank Platform
The new party has a six-plank platform. First it is dry at heart and will wage a fight for destruction of liquor traffic. In furtherance of this it will seek provisions making the buyer of liquor equally as guilty as the seller, and also will adopt measures for the furtherance of education of children to the desirability of universal total abstinence.

In its second plank the new party will demand a division of the present taxation scheme. It will support the income tax, intangible tax, inheritance and excess profit tax and fight for a greater burden of taxes on those in the higher bracket incomes, protecting small wage earners and small home owners.

World Peace
The party will stand for world peace, cultivate the good will of foreign nations and favor reduction of armament expenditures.

Another plank will stand for severe penalties for dishonest public officials; wage an incessant war on crime, and support the Capper-Tarver bill to abolish alien representation congress.

A complete ticket will be placed in the field.

OMAHA, Neb., May 1 — Joseph Tarascio, bet Police Judge Palmer 30 days in jail that his car would not run faster than 45 miles an hour. He lost when a policeman speeded the machine up to 58. Palmer released and allowed Tarascio, accused of speeding, his liberty on payment of a $5 fine.

Very Much Improved After Taking Cardui

"I have suffered a great deal from cramping," writes Mrs. W. A. Sewell, Sr., of Waco, Texas. "I would chill and have to go to bed for about three days at a time. I would have a dull, tired, sleepy feeling. A friend told me to try Cardui, thinking it would help me — and it did. I am very much improved and do not spend the time in bed. I certainly can recommend Cardui to other sufferers."

Thousands of women testify Cardui benefited them. If it does not benefit YOU, consult a physician.

GUESTS!

WE LIKE to think of men and women — and children, too — who stop at Humble Stations as our guests. We have tried to provide everything that a guest might require — spotless restrooms, ice water, travel information, helpful service of all kinds. But we want our guests to be comfortable; if there is anything else you want, please let us know. This is important to both you and us. It is our policy to give you the right products at the right price with the right kind of service; as a practical buyer you want those things which experience has shown you are "right." We ask you to walk in our door and tell us what they are. We invite criticism, we invite suggestion. The door is open.

FANS CRITICISE HERRERA BOUT WITH JACKSON

By W. WINSTON COPELAND United Press Staff Correspondent FORT WORTH, May 1.—Fight fans are lauding the daring of Tony Herrera in signing for a bout with Pete Jackson, Pacific coast negro terror, but they are doubting its sagacity.

The El Paso boy, Texas' most outstanding contribution to the fight game, has nothing to win and everything to lose in a fight with Jackson, followers point out.

At present Herrera might have a chance at the world's junior welterweight crown if Jimmy McLarnin stamps out Barney Ross, the titleholder in New York during May.

But if Jackson lands a couple of hard ones on Tony's chin, which he is capable of doing, little birds will court a requiem for Tony's championship aspirations.

Both Ross and McLarnin have steered a wide course around Jackson. If that's the fight game, then Herrera should emulate Ross and McLarnin, his admirers believe.

But, according to sporting circles, was "handcuffed" in his two appearances, purposely making poor showings in an effort to trick Ross into a fight. The trick did not work.

That Jackson is no "slouch" is verified by the fact he knocked out Lew Massey, a top-notch, in two rounds. Massey stayed 10 rounds with Herrera.

Jackson is a popular fighter on the Pacific coast and the fight to be held in San Francisco, doubtless will draw a large crowd. The prospect of a fat purse may be one of the reasons for Tony's signing.

But, Herrera has earned his try for the crown, his supporters maintain, and his ability is attested by the recent evasion of a title fight by Ross. So, why risk a chance at the title? they ask. Tony is fast and clever; Jackson is fast and tough.

However, they admire the clean-cut young Texas fighter's fair play and nerve and wish him the best of luck—believing he'll need a lot of it when he steps into the ring against Jackson.

Wanted Luggage Hauled "It'll cost you 97 cents a hundred," Hartness said. "All right," said the stranger. "If you'll run out there right now I'll help you load it in the back of this car and we can bring it to town."

"It was no more than we do every day," the agent said this morning. "The idea of a robbery didn't cross my mind. The man got in the car with me, and on the way out I said something about the weather. He made some little reply; I don't remember what. But when we got near the tourist camp he said, 'Drive on straight ahead and keep in the road.' He had drawn a pistol and stuck it in my ribs."

At Fort Worth Hartness reported to his headquarters and to police. He said that they made the trip to Lake Worth in about two hours. The bandit wouldn't let him slow down, but forced him to keep the machine at top speed, he said.

Hartness said that the man took his money at a point half-way between Cisco and Eastland.

SEARCH CONTINUES AT FORT WORTH FORT WORTH, May 1.—Police continued their search here today for a 25-year-old man who yesterday abducted George Hartness at Cisco, robbed him of $344 and released him at Lake Worth near here.

Hartness was kidnaped about 8:40 o'clock yesterday morning, he said. He had left the Merchants Past Motor Lines depot on F avenue with his bank deposit made out. On Seventh street alongside the Burton-Lingo Lumber company the man motioned him to the curb.

Hartness slowed down and pulled over, passing the man before he could stop. He rolled down the coupe window on the right and the stranger came up to the car, folded his arms on the door, and said he had some luggage at the Blue and White tourist camp he wanted hauled into Dallas.
