AN AUTHORITATIVE INDICATION.

An authoritative evidence of improving times is contained in the current statistics of service clubs. The annual convention of the 41st district of Rotary, in which jurisdiction the Cisco club is located, is now in session at Abilene. By all indications yesterday, when the assembly of presidents and secretaries was held, the attendance upon that convention will be one to cheer Rotary in the prospects for its future in this area. Increasing club membership, increasing interest and increasing activity are reflected by the atmosphere in which the group is holding its sessions. Reports from the outside world of Rotary brought to the gatherings by International Vice President Ed Johnson are of the same tenor. The membership of the organization is increasing at the rate of about 1,500 per month, he said. Likewise the number of clubs is increasing.

What this indicates is not a conversion of business men to the principles upon which Rotary or any other of the great service club organizations such as the Lions and the Kiwanis are founded. Quite to the contrary, those principles have been recognized since Jesus Christ became an international figure many centuries ago. The difference between a non-member and a member of a service club is not always a difference of ethical standards or of faith in the efficacy of the golden rule—granting that all clubs founded for the promotion of ethical conduct in business affairs go back to the golden rule for inspiration. The business world generally, in spite of the persistent presence of men of shady morals, accepts the virtue of the golden rule as essential doctrine. What membership in a service club does denote is community interest, unselfishness and a willingness to assume an individual responsibility for providing the doctrine of ethical business relationship with an organization. It takes an organization to put over anything, even a religion. The service clubs are to business ethics what the churches are to religion. One grows into appreciation of ethical standards in business relationships. One isn't converted by any miraculous visitation of a spiritual force. The increase in membership of these clubs, then, is due to no sudden acceptance of Rotary, Lions or Kiwanis principles. The increase is due entirely to a new force of optimism which is accompanying business recovery. In hard times, the average business man dropped his responsibility to the ethical salvation of his brothers—if he was conscious of any such altruistic motives in joining his club—as his first item of expense-paying. Concomitantly, he dropped a considerable amount of the optimism which is characteristic of such clubs. The decline in service club membership was considerable. That this decline has been arrested and the numerical strength of these clubs has started increasing indicates business improvement as certainly as any other statistics. Conversation of delegates to the convention yesterday was in a tone of confidence in better times ahead. Not one section, but all sections represented shared in this happy spirit. It looked like old times. Believe it or not, west Texas is coming back with a rush.

SALARIES IN GOLD

In the not remote past the gold in the American dollar was devalued or revalued, or whatever the experts chose to call it.

Now instructions to pay salaries in gold are expected to go out soon to agencies of the United States government in foreign countries. Congressional action on the legislative appropriation bill, including $7,000,000 to compensate the foreign service for reduced purchasing power of the dollar abroad is nearing completion. This will be good news to Ambassador H. H. Sevier, resident of Santiago, Chile, and Col. Alvin C. Owsley, ambassador to Rumania. Other Texas hearts abroad will be glad.

The new deal administration sent many Texans aboard as consular agents. They are said to be needing additional money. Of course, they could have resigned and returned to American shores, but patriots never resign.

ARMY ON CIVIL SERVICE LIST.

The federal civil service commission's monthly report shows 623,559 persons on the payroll for the executive branch of the government March 31. Of that number 81,569 worked in the District of Columbia. The postoffice department employs 267,198, including mail carriers and clerks throughout the country. The total represented an increase of 11,897 over the payroll Feb. 28. Herbert Hoover stepped out; Franklin D. Roosevelt stepped in. Regardless of the army of hungry demobets the country over civil service has not been dynamited by the Roosevelt administration.

Those who thought that the liquor problem was settled with repeal are beginning to see that a Pandora's box, thought sealed by national prohibition, has merely been legally opened up for first hand experience with the pestiferous insects it contains. The most significant fact that ought to be clear now is that neither prohibition nor repeal can settle the liquor question. A wasp stings as painfully whether he lights on the spot by permission or by stealth.

You see, if Californians hadn't made Japan mad, she might have let them have a few battleships.

How times change. The fathers couldn't endure the presence of redcoats; now we fearfully obey anybody in uniform.

But, darn it, when do other nations sacrifice their defenses to keep from hurting our delicate feelings?

Spirit of 1776: "Give me liberty or give me death."
Spirit of 1934: "Give me a profit and darn the liberty."

A typical American is one who boasts or feels wicked if he passes a little red light.

Obsolete saying: "Why, I could buy the cloth and make it for less than that."

Lots of Bareback Riding in This Year's Circus

Through the Editor's Spectacles

By GEORGE

I was absent from this task yesterday, attending a Rotary convention assembly in Abilene. I met T. Paul Barron, Midland publisher, who told me news of Don Sivalis, the big tank man who wishes he were back in Cisco and has many friends who wish that his wish would come true. Don Barron told me, he has been going right well at golf between tank sales. He's progressed to among the top six on the Midland ladder and is one of the club's chief assets in the sectional loop.

I have just turned from the telephone in an effort to discover what Don held while a member of the Cisco club. Unfortunately, no one seems to recollect how high or how low he was on the ladder. There is a distinct recollection that he played somewhere—but where no one can tell.

I suppose, in that event, one must give Don the credit for being a self-made golfer. He has arrived from obscurity into the shining light of notoriety. Prosperity in the tank business must have affected his enthusiasm for golf. They say enthusiasm is a prime prerequisite for success; that intellect, in other words, is worth only about 15 per cent in the formula. I have noticed that the state of one's business invariably affects the quality of one's golf. The player who is able to wear plus fours and two-toned golf shoes without owing Henry Drumwright or Nick Miller for them invariably plays a better game than the fellow of equal or superior ability whose thoughts are on the seriousness of the personal economic situation. The psychological explanation is probably that excellence at the game requires an attitude of dispassionate regard for other affairs and a large concern for the principles and tactics of the game itself. Who can concentrate on the antics of a small white ball or correctly apply technique to one's golf when one's mind is warped by outside influences. Few, indeed. Therefore, when a community wishes to develop a strong golf team it must first see that the members of the club are paid good salaries and enabled to wear their plus fours without embarrassment.

So Don's golf must be in part a result of the excellent business he is said to be enjoying in furnishing tanks for the oil development around Midland and elsewhere in west and southeast Texas. He has had to greatly increase his sales force in order to handle the business, Barron said.

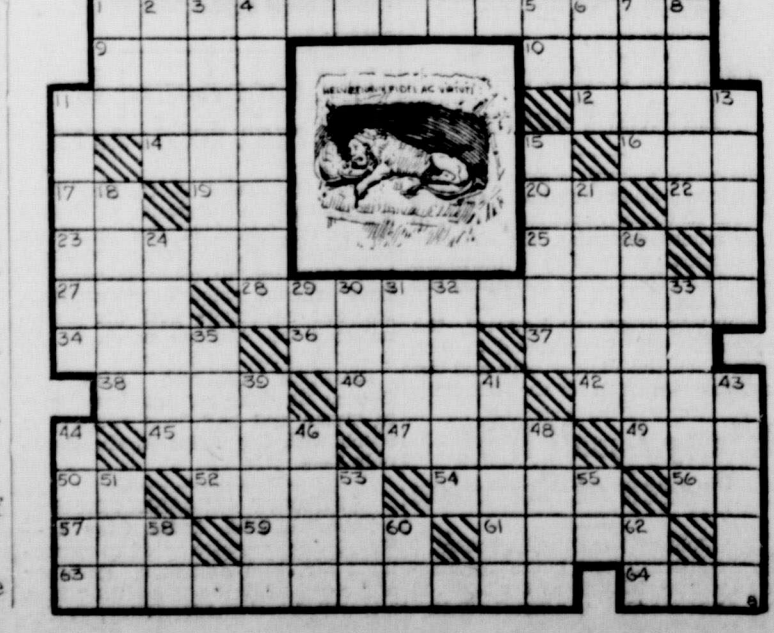

Perhaps that's an indication we'll all be playing better golf in the near future.

UNDER THE DOME AT AUSTIN

By GORDON K. SHEARER

United Press Staff Correspondent
AUSTIN, May 8.—Texas has become too big to be governed from Austin. Not that the state has actually grown in size but state activities have so multiplied that various sub-capitals have been set up. The state highway department has established 25 division headquarters. A division engineer is in charge at each. The state department of education has set up 22 divisions and has a deputy state school superintendent in charge of each.

The state railroad commission has opened a branch office at Kilgore for the east Texas oil fields. It also has supervisors stationed in more than a dozen oil fields.

State rangers have independent companies operating from Fort Worth, Fairbairns and Fort Stockton, besides the headquarters company at Austin.

Texas' size also has led to establishment of duplicating colleges. Identical courses in many subjects can be had at the University of Texas, Austin; A&M college near Bryan; Texas Technological college, Lubbock; College of Industrial Arts, Denton; College of Arts and Industries Kingsville, and the School of Mines, El Paso. Nine teacher colleges have almost identical courses.

It was not a realization of these administrative difficulties, perhaps, so much as a desire to keep the balance between slave and free states, that prompted early Texans to stipulate that the state might become five, when it joined the federal union.

Vice President Garner is one of the present-day advocates of such a division. He views the matter from the greater power a division would give in the United States senate, over which he presides.

It is not his first attempt to get into oil operation. The state supreme court ruled against him in an effort to force the state land office to recognize a vacancy in east Texas and permit him to bid upon it.

Pat Neff, Jr., son of the former governor, has been assigned one of the puzzle desks in the attorney-general's department. It is his duty to figure out all the complexities that arise under the state's conflicting and confusing fee laws.

June will be the last month for cheap payment of delinquent state taxes. Depression laws knocked off the usual interest and penalties and substituted lower rate for payments made before June 30. On July 1 old penalties and interest returned and they are then computed to the time of the delinquency.

For instance, 1930 delinquent taxes then will carry 30 per cent penalty and interest charges; 1931 delinquencies 24 per cent and those for 1932 18 per cent. Collection costs also are to be added.

DONNA of the BIG TOP

By BEULAH POYNTER

BEGIN HERE TODAY

DONNA GABRIEL and MADELINE SIDRAL, who call themselves "The Gabriel Sisters," are trapeze performers with Renfro's circus. When Madeline's mother who is blind wishes her to spend a week-end at his farm she persuades Donna to go instead. Donna, pretending to be Madeline, falls in love with BILL SIDRAL, Madeline's cousin.

CON DAVID, Renfro's trainer, is devoted to Donna but she regards him merely as a friend. Madeline loves Con and wishes to win him.

Donna falls from the trapeze and is injured. Madeline wires Bill to come for her and begs Donna to continue the impersonation. Bill takes Donna to the farm to recuperate. MRS. PLANTER, the housekeeper, is suspicious of Donna's presence and soon is able to get about in a wheelchair.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XI

NED TRAFFORD was surly and belligerent, irritable without provocation. Twice Renfro had caught him under the influence of liquor and threatened him with a "notice" if he ever caught him drinking again. But Trafford avoided Madeline and, as the days sped by, her fear of him lessened and gradually died.

Renfro had watched Madeline performing on the trapeze alone and, since business was bad and there was a prospect of Donna's return, he had decided to let Madeline remain in the show as a "single." One Gabriel sister did not make a feature act, but the cut in salary helped a little.

Madeline knew Con's interest in her was due to the fact that he could get news of Donna through her, but his very indifference only spurred Madeline's determination to win him.

During every performance she watched the animal trainer put his "cats" through their paces and she never failed to compliment him on his daring when he left the arena, his white silk shirt clinging to his body and beads of perspiration about his white lips.

"There isn't an act in the world that can equal it, Con!" she would exclaim ecstatically.

He was flattered by these attentions. The sting of Donna's reputation still rankled, though he loved her with all the fervor of his Latin temperament. Con was perfectly aware of Madeline's love for him, as was every one else in the circus.

NOW and then he invited her to dinner at a hotel or restaurant as a change from the fare in the mess tent.

A month went by, then six weeks. The heat became intense. Under the tents the air was heavy, almost intolerable. The poor animals, forced to stay in small quarters, suffered and snarled and roared and spit.

Under the glare of a thousand blazing lights the performers tried to concentrate on their numbers, to forget their discomfort and put forth their best efforts, but the acts moved slowly and without pep. A grizzly bear sickened and died. Renfro tore his hair and wailed that there was a flinx on the show and they might as well close.

His wife, who had heard the same wail many times, for once listened to him. Then she said, "Well, why don't you stop beefing and get rid of the flinx?"

"I wish to God I could! If you can tell me who it is I'll fire him quick enough."

"It's not a 'him.' It's that Madeline Gabriel."

"Oh, you've got it in for Madeline because she's alone. She's all right."

"Maybe she is, but she's a trouble-maker. Look at the way she's trailing Con! Look how she strung along Ned Trafford—"

"What?"

"I'm not a gossip, but I've not as blind as you are and I've seen a few things. I'd be glad to see Madeline go. It's not because she's a 'single' but because she's no good."

"If I thought that, I'd fire her quick as shooting. She was darned decent about going on with the act alone and—shucks, on your sure she and Trafford—"

"Why do you suppose he's gone to piece the way he has? He was crazy about Madeline but he knew enough to keep his distance if she hadn't led him on. If you don't believe me, ask anyone in the show. And watch her with Con!"

"I've seen them together but—I'll look into this!"

FORTUNATELY for Madeline, this conversation took place after an afternoon performance while she and Con were sitting at a table in a Chinese restaurant some distance from the lot. Madeline had received a letter that day written by Donna herself, the first letter she had written since the accident. Madeline produced it proudly and waved it before Con's eyes.

"Why the heck does she address you as Donna?" he demanded, his face darkening as it always did when the other girl's name was mentioned.

"That's a long story, darling. I'll tell you some day when I feel like confessing. Wouldn't you like to read what she has to say?"

"No. Maybe she'll write to me now."

Madeline frowned. She studied the inlaid pearl of the table before her and her quick wits began to dance. "No, Con," she said slowly. "I don't believe she will. I don't think you'll ever see Donna again."

"What makes you say that? She's coming back to the show, isn't she?"

"No, she isn't."

"You mean the injury was worse than we thought?"

"No. She—oh, Con, darling, I hate to tell you! I know how you love Donna and I know how terribly this will hurt you. But you knew you never had a chance with her, didn't you? You know that, while she was fond of you and always liked you, she wouldn't ever think of marrying you. You'll just have to square your shoulders and—"

"Get out the sob stuff!" he broke in harshly. "Spill it!"

"She's going to be married."

"To the cousin?"

"He's my cousin, not hers. You said you're going to be married."

Con sat motionless, his face slowly growing whiter and whiter. His hands gripped the arms of his chair and the knuckles stood out in ridges. Then he laughed. "Well, that's that! What do we eat—chop suey or chow mein?"

"You mean you don't care?" Madeline cried hysterically. "You really don't care?"

"No woman is going to ruin my appetite," Con answered.

But Madeline, trembling over the success of her falsehood, noticed that his foot led the table set touched. She suggested that they return to the circus lot before it was really necessary to do so.

Renfro was waiting for them at the dressing tent. "Come over here, Madeline," he said. "I want to talk to you."

THE ever-present fear of rejection tinged a two weeks' notice gripped the girl. She looked appealingly toward Con. "What's the matter, Con?" the animal trainer asked. "You don't object to Madeline slipping out with me once in a while, do you?"

"Not exactly. But she's the only girl alone in this show and she has to watch where she steps. I've been thinking it over. It's a responsibility—they're talking, I think you're a swell kid, Madeline, but hell! I broke the rule when I kept you on. It's too much trouble and I believe—"

"Listen here, Con. You caught the other man's coat sleeve. 'You mean they're talking about Madeline slip me? Well, go tell the lousy boys slips we're going to be married.'"

"Con!"

"And if that doesn't suit them you can get a new animal act and pronto!"

"Keep your shirt on, Con," Renfro cajoled. "If you and Madeline are engaged and all this is on the level we'll be tickled pink. No one thought either of you was serious, that's all. And you know a girl—"

"Yes, I know. It makes me sick the way nosy-bodies meddle with every one else's business. I thought you had more sense. I've a notion to leave your show anyway and—"

"Now, now, Con!" the manager soothed. "I've got to tell Mom the news. Gosh, she'll be surprised."

As Renfro disappeared into the dressing tent Madeline withdrew upon Con.

"Did you mean that? Or did you just say it to save my job?"

"Why shouldn't I mean it? You'll have me, knowing I do love you and probably never will we might make a go of marriage. I swear I'll always be on the level with you."

"Oh, Con," Madeline cried, battling against the arm that was limp against his side. "I love you so much I'd marry you even if you wanted to put me right into the cage of cats."

He looked at her, half-startled in harshly. "That is an idea. I'll make you part of my act!"

April Charters Total $1,331,000 Capital

AUSTIN, May 8 — Charters granted to new corporations in Texas during April had a total capitalization of $1,331,000, against $2,401,000 in April last year, a decline of 44.6 per cent, according to the University of Texas bureau of business research. The total April capitalization, however, was 3.3 per cent greater than the $1,286,000 in March of the current year.

The number of new charters granted totaled 113, against 139 in March and 124 in April last year, declines of 19 and 8.1 per cent, respectively.

Declines in numbers of charters as compared with March and with April, 1933, were shown in the following groups: Oil, manufacturing, banking and finance, transportation and miscellaneous. Gains were registered for real estate and building and for merchandising.

Permits to do business in Texas granted out-of-state companies were 24 per cent greater than for March and 44 per cent above those of April last year.

UNUSUAL EGG LAID
MEXICO, Mo., May 8 — Mrs. John Gola experienced something unusual while gathering eggs for her farm near here. She found a large egg in one nest, with a soft outside shell and a full-sized hard shell egg inside.

France Seeking New Prestige in Far East

PARIS, May 8 — With French colonial authorities preparing for a second "French Ottawa" conference, advocates of a bigger and better French empire are hammering away at France's new prestige in the Far East.

Frenchmen touring Far Eastern waters on the slowly increasing French merchant fleet are beginning to ask why the Far East is everything British. It is explained that in Europe the prestige of the British empire is usually English, and England is the dominant word, but once east of Suez, the word British is everywhere, the language, the customs, the flags, the commerce and the manufactured products are British and though they are made in the manufacturing north of England, they are British made.

The Depeche Coloniale has started a campaign along with other pro-colonial newspapers to correct this advantageous position of Great Britain as regards to France.

In all frankness, the colonial newspapers point out to the splendid ships which England runs between Marseille and India, to the beautiful Empress liners of the Canadian Pacific lines and to the palace liners which give the closest competition to the French liners on the Atlantic.

It is understood that the present Minister of Colonies Pierre Laval is attempting to organize a Far East development bureau to push French prestige to the limit, and especially to prepare the public for this second French Ottawa conference, which will be given another name, a French name, to kill the British propaganda thus implied.

Only 19 Failures Occur in April

AUSTIN, May 8 — There were only nineteen commercial failures in Texas during April, against 21 in March and 44 in April, 1933, declines of 9.5 per cent and 57 per cent respectively, according to figures compiled by the University of Texas bureau of business research from reports from Dun and Bradstreet, Inc.

Liabilities of the bankrupt firms totaled $235,000 compared with $435,000 in March of the current year and $470,000 in April last year, respective drops of 46 and 50 per cent. Assets of the firms that failed, totaling $109,000, were 66 per cent below those of March and 18 per cent below those of April last year. Average liabilities per failure were $12,368, a drop of 40 per cent from the $39,714 in March but an increase of 13 per cent over the $10,691 of April 1933.

Keep on the SUNNY SIDE

HAVEN'T you noticed that your happiest hours occur on days when you feel your best?

Have more of these happy days. You and all your family. Guard health while you have it. Keep on the sunny side of life.

The greatest enemy of health is common constipation. It may cause loss of appetite and energy. Certainly it kills enthusiasm! Yet it can be banished by eating a delicious cereal.

Laboratory tests show Kellogg's ALL-BRAN supplies "bulk" and vitamin B to relieve common constipation. Also iron for the blood.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is much like that in leafy vegetables. How much pleasanter to eat this delicious ready-to-eat cereal than to take patent medicines. Two tablespoonfuls daily are usually sufficient. Chronic cases, with each meal. If not relieved this way, see your doctor. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

ASPHALT BEDS OF WEST COAST AID TO SCIENCE

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 8.—The asphalt beds of California have been found to be "veritable necropolises" of animal fossils, and give many discernible facts about plants, animals and men of past geologic ages, according to reports of a study made for Carnegie Institution by Ebert W. Wilson.

These deposits, now for the most part of bituminous hardness, once were gummy pools of tar which, the report states, engulfed unwary birds and animals quickly once they became entangled, and preserved their skeletal remains for all time.

Yielded Material
The Carpenaria deposit, around which the report is centered, has yielded enough material to enable the drawing of definite conclusions concerning conditions extant in the region during the geologic eras represented by the animals entombed.

The occurrence of bones of shrews for example, according to Wilson, suggests moist places with abundant vegetation, such as are to be found along bank streams, in meadows, and in damp woods, especially of coniferous trees—an environment which these insectivorous mammals today find particularly agreeable.

Again, the presence of fossil remains of chipmunks and of tree squirrels points strongly, Wilson thinks, to a region that was at least partly forested. On the other hand, the presence of many fossils of kangaroo-rats indicates that the forest cover in the region of this asphalt deposit was either broken by areas of sparser vegetation or that there may have been fluctuations in climatic conditions during the period of accumulation.

Moreover, presence of larger mammals of extinct species belonging to the horse, bison and camel also suggests an open, semi-arid country.

It is to be noted, the report forth-was elected to the student council at A. & M. for 1934-35 Charles is known to many of the young people of Cisco. He is a nephew of Mrs. John W. Shertzer of this city.

Marguerite Barker of Sweetwater spent the week-end here with friends.

Lillian Shertzer and roommate, Marjorie Arp of S. M. U., were week-end guests of Lillian's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Shertzer.

er states, that Mr. Wilson's conclusions regarding the region, based upon the study of skeletal remains of animals, are in general harmony with those reached through study of plant fossils also to be found in great abundance in the asphalt deposit.

BLIND AS TRACK TEAM

WATERTOWN, Mass., May 8.—Matthew DeMartino, track coach at Perkins institution for the Blind, has devised a system by which the blind boys can run dashes, high jump and throw the shotput. DeMartino, who has normal sight, explained that in the dashes a wire is strung along the track with a ring fastened around the wire and a rope tied to the ring. The boys hold the rope and the ring slides along. To warn the athletes of the finish line, a tape is bound around the wire and some rope ends dangle down. The shotput and high jump were the hardest events to master. Lack of vision was the cause of the difficulty because it hampers the form.
