"HICK" POLICE SCORE ONE ON DILLINGER GANG

WATERLOO, Ia., June 8 — Hick town policemen chalked up another victory today over the hard-boiled Dillinger gang with Dillinger's ace machine gunner in a morgue and rumors that Dillinger is dead substantiated by a death-bed statement. The gang's most feared killer, Tommy Carroll, died last night, a few hours after two city detectives knocked a gun from his hand, and shot him as he fled from arrest. Learning over a hospital cot, Federal Agent O. H. Dewey asked him: "Where did you bury John?" Carroll rolled his head to look the agent defiantly in the eye: "I hid him," he mumbled, "then he died."

Unpublished Letter of Charles Dickens Describes Evening Spent With Irving

ATHENS, June 8 — A leisurely evening spent drinking mint juleps and conversing with Washington Irving so impressed Charles Dickens that he described the experience to Charles Lanman, Georgetown, D. C., in an unpublished letter owned by Lanman's nephew, Dr. T. H. McHatten, University of Georgia. The epistle was written in 1862. "Your reference to our friend Washington Irving reawakened in my mind the impression I received of him at Baltimore the other day," Dickens wrote. "I saw his fine face for the last time in that city. He came from New York to pass a day or two with me before I went westward and they were made the most memorable of my life, by the delightful fancy and genial humor. "Some unknown admirer of his books and mine sent to the hotel a most enormous mint julep, wreathed

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 8 — A man dressed like Mahatma Gandhi strolled into the senate gallery today. ### President Dodging Duty of Making Repeal Promises Come True, McBride Charges

By LYLE C. WILSON
United Press Staff Correspondent
(Copyright 1934 by United Press)
WASHINGTON, D. C., June 8 — President Roosevelt is dodging the duty of making prohibition repeal promises come true, F. Scott McBride, chief Anti-saloon League strategist, charged today in an interview with the United Press. He predicted prohibition would "come back." McBride complained wets doubled-crossed the American people with repeal promises which have not been kept. He said Mr. Roosevelt did not "dare" compel local communities to clean up. The only 1932 democratic platform pledge binding on the national administration was for federal legislation to protect dry states, McBride contended, however, Mr. Roosevelt could intervene in the states or big cities and named Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and Chicago. Enabling Amendment "I don't know whether we ever will ask for another 18th amendment," McBride said. "But the liquor issue will be in the forefront of the campaign this year. "What we are asking is an enabling amendment to the constitution to permit congress to limit, restrict or prohibit the traffic in alcoholic beverages. That would keep it always an issue in the congressional districts. I would rather have that than another 18th amendment."

SECURITY FOR SOCIAL ORDER IS FDR IDEAL

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 8 — The pattern of a greater New Deal—a social order providing security for all through insurance against unemployment and old age and planned use of natural resources—was sent to congress by President Roosevelt. Regarded by the White House as one of the most important documents ever transmitted to Capitol Hill by this administration, the message encompassed the whole national economic picture and charted for the next congress the new reforms Mr. Roosevelt seeks. Security for the individual, the family, the home was the tenor of the communication through which the president wove the pattern of his greater New Deal. He suggested guarantees for the aged and jobless after reviewing legislation since 1933, calling attention to necessity for additional emergency measures at this session and finally bluntly warning that the lid on the "pork barrel" had been nailed down to stay.

Looking for Sound Means "Next winter we may well undertake the great task of furthering the security of the citizen and his family through social insurance," the president said. "Hence, I am looking for a sound means which I can recommend to provide at once security against several of the great disturbing factors of life—especially those which relate to unemployment and old age. "I believe there should be a maximum of cooperation between the state and the federal government. I believe that the funds necessary to provide this insurance should be raised by contributions rather than by an increase in general taxation. "Above all, I am convinced that social insurance should be national in scope, although the several states should bear at least a portion of the cost of management, leaving to the federal government the responsibility of investing, maintaining and safeguarding the funds constituting the necessary insurance reserve."

McBride listed broken promises as:
1. There would be no saloon.
2. Racketeering would be stopped.
3. Young people would cease drinking.
4. Bootlegging would be ended.
5. Political corruption connected with liquor would cease.
6. Federal revenue would boom. "Saloon is Back" "The saloon is back," McBride said. "Attorney-general Cummings recently reported there was more racketeering than ever. Joseph H. Choate, Jr., of the alcohol control administration, says there is tremendous illegal sale of liquor. "Now," said McBride, "the young folk cannot avoid liquor. It is everywhere. The pre-prohibition days were better when liquor was confined to the saloon. "Political corruption in big cities is more marked than before. "Mayor Kelly of Chicago doesn't dare order the illegal dives closed. Neither does the president of the United States dare order him to do it. If President Roosevelt got as busy enforcing the control law as he was repealing the 18th amendment he could do it. "McBride said he believed repeal was costing the government about as much as was gained on liquor revenue."

DEVELOPING A STATE OF MIND

The seriousness with which the large insurance companies are conducting an educational campaign against highway accidents, as well as accidents in other classifications, was demonstrated at the Rotary club yesterday where Haywood Cabaness, Cisco insurance man, distributed safety test sheets to the members to check their knowledge of the proper handling of a car in an emergency.

Each test sheet bore a series of questions dealing with emergency situations and the club members were required to check what they regarded the correct answers.

It is out of reason to expect that any person will be able to memorize such a minute formula for instant use in case of an accident, but the training of men and women to think in terms of safety during leisurely periods greatly encourages an instinct for cautiousness and a subconscious education in proper procedure that should materially reduce the chances for accidents. Most accidents can be prevented by training drivers to think in terms of the proper handling of their machines and the observance of proper rules.

EINSTEIN AND HIS BOOK

Prof. Albert Einstein is in Paris. He came to the United States as an exile from Germany and was accorded a gracious and friendly welcome from the American people regardless of creed or politics or of social standing or financial rating. Not long ago he moved on to France. He has issued a book—"How I See the World." In that book he has accused the United States by reason of its war debt policy "of contributing to the revenge spirit which is leading Europe to ruin."

This high authority of relativity, acclaimed by his fellows as one of the greatest scientists of the world of today, is mistaken. First, the United States saved the European world from ruin by an expenditure of $36,000,000,000 and the lives of the flower of its youth. Second, the United States bridged the Atlantic with ships to supply the materials of war, including food supplies for the soldiers of the allied armies, as well as food for the hungry women and children of all European nations. Third, it loaned billions of dollars first for war purposes and second to stabilize the nations of Europe after the signing of the Armistice and the treaty of peace.

Now the European nations are spending billions for naval monsters, terrors of the sky and standing armies. In his magnificent address to the graduating class of the University of Texas, Rev. George W. Truett said, "the greed of man, the lack of humanity or the Christian spirit in the hearts and souls of the leaders of Europe, led to an unholy war which almost wrecked civilization."

MUSSOLINI A BUILDER OF BATTLESHIPS Mussolini is one of the most remarkable men walking the stage of action. Italy will construct three large battleships with general specifications similar to those of the French battleships, which are said "to lead all the rest."

Another visitor to Cisco went away well satisfied today. He was Dr. Will Allen, formerly of Rising Star north of Rotan, who carried off two big blue cat which he plans to pickle for the edification of the Rotan window gazers.

The doctor said he will put the two specimen on display in a prominent show window at Rotan. Shrewd doctor. One must be careful of one's fish stories, even when they concern Lake Cisco, but a window display gives one authority.

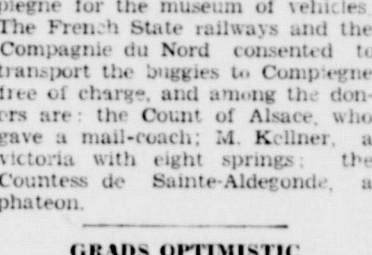

Speaking of big fish, most Cisco fishermen would be happy to see the large denizens of the lake removed. More than anything else, big fish are said to be responsible for the decline of good fishing in a lake as it grows older.

Trot line fishing and other measures which tend to cut down the number of the big fellows ought to prove a boon to fishing in Lake Cisco and Lake Bernie.

DONNA of the BIG TOP by BEULAH POYNIER

When Donna was out of sight Bill returned to the house. He was strangely restless and uneasy, sorry that he had let her go. Odd that she should have insisted on going to the Adameses through the snow storm when she had never been neighborly with them before.

"Looks like a blizzard," Bill said. "Reckon I'd better fix up some additional protection for the stock."

"That's right. I'll see whether I can get Adames on the phone." Mrs. Adams' voice came over the wire.

"I wouldn't worry," Miss Perkins said, in an effort to comfort him. "Maybe she decided to go to town and something held her up. She'll be home in a few minutes or she'll telephone—you'll see."

grasping the reins. He ought to have Miss Perkins get in touch with Doc Freeman that he could be on his way out the farm when Bill reached him with Madeline. No, he would take the time to stop and talk to Perkins. Every moment was precious.

Once out on the open road he drove slowly, his eyes searching searching for a dark object in the snow. Once he stopped the horse and leaped out of the sled, but the object he had hoped was Madeline proved to be only a log, half-erect with snow.

Either Madeline had gone before the Adames place or the car had been wrecked and towed away, in the latter case it did not seem plausible that she would not have been taken to the Adames house of that he would not have been notified.

A search with the aid of a pocket flashlight, however, yielded no results. Bill climbed back into the seat of the sled and started for home. There he would telephone to town and ask someone to send out a searching party.

"I hope so," Scarcely knowing what he was doing, Bill lifted a pile of mail that lay on the dining room table.

"That came while you were out in the barn," the nurse hastened to explain. "I forgot to say anything about it."

There were catalogs, circulars, a newspaper and a letter. The address on the letter was in unfamiliar handwriting. Bill unfolded the circulars to one side and picked up the letter, "Wonder who's writing me from Lebanon," he said.

"Mr. Siddal, what is it? What happened?"

"Nothing. Nothing. I'm going to town." He jammed Mrs. Perkins' anonymous message into his coat pocket.

The chug-chug of a motor engine killed the rest of the sentence. The car came into the driveway and stopped in front of the house.

Texas Topics

By RAYMOND BROOKS

AUSTIN, June 8 - One of the things the trend of social legislation may bring Texas is a law vitalizing that section of the constitution authorizing verdicts in civil cases from less than the unanimous vote of the jurors.

Whenever a nine- or 10-juror verdict bill is up, Texas has seen a score of corporation-minded lawyers rush to their feet in defense of the constitution and defeat of the bill.

EXPERIMENTS IN EVOLUTION OF BIRD FAMILY

WASHINGTON, June 8—Although it was a delicate job to trace the evolution of the bird from the aquatic, toothy creature of 150,000,000 years ago to the toothless little bird of today, Alexander Wetmore, assistant secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, has succeeded in classifying bird families trees.

On the basis of recent research, Dr. Wetmore introduced a number of changes in previous classifications. He divided the class into two classes, five orders, 34 families, 42 sub-orders, 25 super-families and 61 families.

Originally teeth complicated as bird's family tree appears, the secretary pointed out, it is comparatively simple to that of the reptiles and mammals, since its evolution has been confined to narrower lines. He believes that near the end of the Cretaceous geological period when reptiles began to vanish, all birds probably had teeth which gradually disappeared as the group entered the Tertiary period.

The first great flock of ancestral birds, Dr. Wetmore revealed, were the Archaeornithes, which included such winged reptiles as the Archaeopteryx and Archaeornis. Following them came the toothed birds of the New World—the first true birds recognized by fragmentary fossil records. They included the Hesperornis, Hageria and the Ichthyornis.

Representing a long advance, the various creatures of the ostrich family were classed as the most primitive of living birds. Near them were placed the extinct moas and close ahead such curious creatures as kiwis and penguins—true birds but not of the typical modern bird pattern.

Ranked as the highest branch of bird evolution, the great suborder of Passeres or songbirds was placed at the top of the family tree in the classification. This group includes 50 families ranging from larks to finches and buntings.

MANY FAULTS DISCOVERED IN SMALLER BALL

By HENRY SUPER
United Press Staff Correspondent
SAN FRANCISCO, June 8 — The new and smaller football which was adopted by the football rule makers for use beginning this season has been tested by Stanford university and found to be lacking. When the ball was made smaller and thinner the rule makers had hoped that forward passers with small hands would be able to throw it with more accuracy. At the same time it was believed that the change would not affect players with normal-sized hands, or make it harder to kick or pass the new ball. Stanford, in its spring training session that ended at Palo Alto recently, tried out the new ball for ten days and discovered that as far as the originals are concerned the old ball is better.

Claude E. "Tiny" Thornhill, Stanford coach, lists the following points against the new ball:
1. Spiral punts cannot be kicked with it.
2. Spiral passes cannot be thrown effectively.
3. It bounces crazily when it hits the ground.
4. It can be gripped better, but not thrown as well as the old ball because the players can't seem to control it.
5. It slips through the hands of pass receivers because it is thinner. Stanford received its shipment of the new pigskins some ten days before its spring training ended and was believed to have been the "first college in the country to have tried them out."
After trying the ball out, Thornhill and his players were convinced that it would take some heavy practice next fall to reach the stage of accuracy that had been achieved with the old and larger ball.
A good example of the trouble Stanford encountered was well illustrated during a day's practice. Bobby Grayson, Stanford's potential all-American fullback, a smart passer, heated balls all over the lot one afternoon, but only twice succeeded in competing his tosses, once to Jim Moscrip and again to Johnny Reiser.
Frank Obustiza, a star punter, was unable to get much distance with the new ball, while Stan Anderson, who has quick-kicked as much as 74 yards with the old oval, had difficulty in getting the new one off his toe.

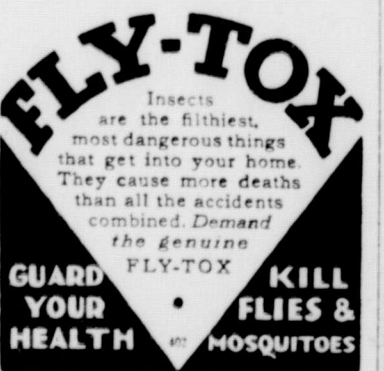

KEEPS GOOD TIME
DES MOINES, Iowa, June 8 — A grandfather clock, built in London, England, about 1783 still keeps accurate time for the household of Angus A. McLaughlin, Des Moines attorney. The clock was brought to Iowa in 1856 by McLaughlin's grandfather, who received it as payment of a $40 debt. The 151-year-old time piece was brought over the prairies by covered wagon when the McLaughlin family decided to move west from Ohio.

Bitter Strike Foe May Lead 100,000 in Steel Walkout

By NEA Service
A LABOR leader who hates the employees, in a convention, voted to strike unless their demands for union recognition were met. Steel company chiefs declare they will close their plants before they will grant recognition, indicating that a bitter struggle will ensue.
Tighe's hatred of strikes dates from his days as a puddler in Wheeling, W. Va. After five months on strike, when he was heavily in debt, his young son died. Tighe had only 75 cents in his pocket. Forty cents went for a wire to his wife's relatives. A $5 loan from a saloonkeeper friend paid a deposit on a burial lot and another friend, an undertaker, supplied the casket.
Tighe didn't place the blame for the tragedy on the strike, but he held it was a contributing factor and since that dark day he has fought bitterly against walkouts.
But his men have voted to personal feelings and lead them if the walkout comes.

PLAYED WITH RATTLER

TOOK PILLS FOR 30 YEARS, THEN CEREAL BROUGHT RELIEF

Mr. Forsythe Endorses ALL-BRAN for Constipation

If you suffer from headaches, loss of appetite and energy or any other of the frequent effects of constipation, read this voluntary letter:
"After taking pills and tablets for about thirty years for constipation, I started to take your ALL-BRAN three times a day according to directions. Today I can eat, sleep, and that is binding, and certainly feel fine."—Mr. E. Forsythe, Box 219, Youngstown, N. Y.
Science says ALL-BRAN provides "bulk" to exercise the intestines, and vitamin B to further aid regular habits. In addition, ALL-BRAN is rich in blood-building iron.
The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is much like that of leafy vegetables. Inside the body, it forms a soft mass which gently clears the intestines of wastes.
Isn't this pleasant "cereal way" far more healthful than using patent medicines—so often habit-forming?
Just eat two tablespoons daily. In serious cases use with each meal. If not relieved this way, see your doctor.
Get the red-and-green package at your grocer's. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.
