"TREATY" TALK CORRECTED

The Texas Weekly, in its June 9 edition, takes issue with the group who cite a "treaty of annexation" between Texas and the United States as guaranteeing the state's sovereignty over its natural resources with the statement that there isn't any such animal.

"Without any reference to the issues involved," it says, "it is in order to point out, it seems to us, that there exists no treaty between Texas and the United States by which Texas was annexed. Texas was annexed by a joint resolution of congress, adopted by a bare majority of the two houses, 118 to 101 in the house and 27 to 25 in the senate, which was assented to by an ordinance adopted by a Texas convention of delegates.

To be sure, a treaty between Texas and the United States, providing for annexation, was negotiated in 1844, but it was rejected by the United States senate by the overwhelming vote of 16 yeas to 35 nays. And one of the reasons for its rejection, by the way, was that it transferred to the United States all the vacant public lands of Texas with the provision that the United States government would assume the public debt of Texas.

"The resolution provided that 'congress doth consent that the territory properly included within, and rightfully belonging to, the Republic of Texas, may be erected into a new state, to be called the State of Texas, with a republican form of government adopted by the people of said republic, by deputies in convention assembled, with the consent of the existing government, in order that the same may be admitted as one of the states of this Union.'

"The provision with respect to the public lands provides that the said state, when admitted to the Union, shall 'retain all the vacant and unappropriated lands lying within its limits, to be applied to the payment of the debts and liabilities of said Republic of Texas, and the residue of said lands, after discharging said debts and liabilities, to be disposed of as said state may direct; but in no event are said debts and liabilities to become a charge upon the government' of the United States."

"We do not think that the still vacant public lands of Texas have any different status in relation to the federal government from that of publicly owned lands in any other state, or that they have any peculiar status derived from this joint resolution of congress. Nor do we think that any of those lands now privately owned have any different status from privately owned lands in other states. But whether this is true or not, it is certain that this joint resolution would not have the full status of a treaty in the federal courts. Because it is not in any strict sense a treaty. The very circumstance that it was not ratified by two-thirds of the senate, but received only a bare majority of two votes in that body would deny it the status of a treaty.

Texas was perfectly willing to cede its public lands to the United States, as the treaty it negotiated with the United States proves, but it was not willing to do so and assume the public debt also. The Texans would have preferred the terms of the treaty, but, as is well known, the other arrangement turned out to be a better bargain for them, because in order to settle the controversy which subsequently arose over Santa Fe the United States paid Texas ten million dollars in government bonds for a small part of its territory. In the end, Texas got its public debt paid and retained its public lands, also. But nobody could foresee that at the time of annexation.

"However all this may be, we ought to stop talking about the 'treaty' by which Texas was annexed to the Union. The cold fact is that there was no treaty. There was simply a joint resolution of congress, assented to by the Texans."

DROUTH RELIEF

President Roosevelt has outlined a $525,000,000 emergency drouth relief for congressional leaders and the leaders agreed to rush it through before the approaching end of this session of the congress. They are in agreement that little time would be required "to put through the urgent appropriation." Perhaps the worst drouth in the history of many states has ruined the growing crops and brought financial disaster to a vast number of people. This is a rich nation. It is a powerful nation. It is a nation with a glorious task and its future will be glorious when the clouds of doubt or gloom have disappeared. Those who need aid should be given aid. Those who do not need aid should be turned away. There are drouth counties in Texas. There are drouth sections in states extending from the Panhandle of Texas to the Canadian borderline on the north. Preparedness is the order of the day.

HOME---HOME, SWEET HOME

Japs the Fastest Travelers in History

By HUGH NUGENT FITZGERALD

Cotton is the second money crop of Texas. Petroleum is the first and largest money crop. World cotton consumption in April was the largest of any corresponding month since 1929, totaling 2,160,000 bales. There was a decline in consumption from March to April. It was less than seasonal. World spinners used 1,148,000 bales of American cotton in April compared with 1,183,000 bales in March. The average decrease for this period for the last six years was 3.4 per cent, while the decline in consumption from March to April this year amounted to only 1.3 per cent. On a percentage basis, American cotton constituted 53.1 per cent of the total consumption of all growth in April. For the nine months ended April 30 consumption of American cotton constituted 54.8 per cent of the total consumption of all growth, compared with 57.6 per cent in the corresponding period of 1933.

Now the merry month of June is here, and the cotton statistician of the New York Times of a week ago predicted that Japanese weaving of new cotton this year will be very brisk and the demand heavy. Japan is a marvelous nation. Its scope is more than remarkable in many ways. Growth of the textile industry in Japan is one of the wonders of the earth. Japanese traders have made terrific inroads in all oriental lands. They are pushing the sale of textile goods in South American countries. They have invaded the isles of the seven seas. The swift pace of their manufacturing industries is almost staggering to the mind. There is a reason for it. There are 70,000,000 human atoms who battle for an existence in the islands which constitute the Japanese empire. Their struggles are running all the time and the increase in number of spinners is as significant as the sale of the Japanese traders moving around the world.

They have a magnificent merchant marine. They have Napoleons of finance in all fields. They are the Yankees of the Orient and they know the trading game. There is a vast army of Japanese mill workers. According to recent advices the wage scale at the maximum is 58 cents per day. Their working hours are 10. They employ women and children in their factories and mills. They were heavy buyers of American cotton in the depression years. They have kept their mills running day and night. They have smashed the preserves of the British textile kings in India—for two centuries the fat oyster of the Occidental manufacturers of the British Isles and on the continent of Europe. Japan is not preparing for war. She is already prepared if war should come. Japan is preparing for an industrial conquest of the textile trade of the Orient—and elsewhere.

FLORIDA DEMOCRATS SNUFF OUT WOMEN CANDIDATES

In days of old Richard Croker was the Tammany king of New York and nationally known as the most powerful of the Tiger leaders. His widow has a princely home in Florida. She is a democrat. She sought to wrest the fourth district congressional seat from J. Mark Wilcox, sitting member. Mrs. Croker was snuffed out in the balloting. She ran a miserable second in the count. Mrs. Hortense K. Wells was a candidate for the democratic nomination as United States senator. She is the democratic national committeewoman for the Everglades democracy. There was a huge vote polled, approximately 390,000. Mrs. Wells may have been a swift runner but as a vote getter she made a new low record. Her total was 7095.

"Women first" is the law of the seas. "Women last" was the law of the democratic voters of Florida in their first primary this year.

BATTLING FOR THE MARKETS OF THE WORLD

Uncle Sam has a department of commerce. It is housed in a $17,000,000 building in the city of Washington. Herbert Hoover as president put over the legislation for the construction of the building. Well, the new department of commerce has issued its annual World Economic Review for 1933. It is a startling report in a trade sense. It shows larger Japanese shipments of competitive articles to the United States; big export increases to Latin America; a Japanese victory over American manufacturers in the battle for the Philippine textile trade, and increasing sales in the British Isles and Africa and elsewhere last year. Uncle Sam is advised to keep his weather eye on Japan—not only in a militant sense but in the battle royal to capture the commerce of more than half the world.

Through the Editor's Spectacles

By GEORGE It's a perverse sense of humor that recognizes anything above tragic irony in a proposal to dig up trees to make a park in west Texas. But it was just such a proposal that was being effected at Lake Cisco today until city officials hit the ceiling in their indignation and put a stop to it.

As a technical proposition, the idea probably fitted in well with an aesthetic plan for developing the Lake Cisco parks, but as a reality it is a near crime. The trees were ordered removed in a plan developed for carrying out the relief work project for park improvement. They interfere with automobile parking room on the slope that dips from the descending roadway to the lake pavilion.

Fifty or sixty men were put to work on the site from, and including, the city zoo to the swimming pool, and embracing the entire park area. Monday Today Street Commissioner Joe Clements discovered a crew grubbing up some of the choicest of the precious trees. He was informed that the trees had been ordered removed so that more parking space for automobiles would be available.

Clements was amazed. He couldn't understand how a park could be made more attractive by taking out the most important element in it. So he got Mayor Berry in a hurry and the grubbing was temporarily stopped.

If it is permitted to be resumed the people of Cisco ought to rise up in civic wrath.

As important as is the relief project—a program for the expenditure of $7,000 in wages and for greatly enhancing the park values—it is not worth the trees that give the place its charm.

It is wise to cut out the saplings, reduce the number of small trees and thus encourage the better growth of the larger ones, but to deliberately grub up the best of the lot because they stand in the path of a geometrical arrangement of parking space is difficult to justify where it is hard to grow large trees and where they are so few and so valuable.

The incident suggests that the park area ought to be subjected to a thorough irrigation system in order to stimulate the growth of these trees. It also occurs that the knotty liveoak which forms the principal item of park flora should be supplemented with large numbers of more attractive and larger-growing trees.

In some places, irrigation of trees has been simplified to the most elementary of mechanics—a small stream winding in and out among a grove. Such a system seems quite feasible at the lake, as well as capable of a great variety of artistic employment.

Even the most experienced mu-means find giving recitals before a watchful audience—an audience that would know little more than the elementary values of music—a trying ordeal. The noise with which seven-year-old Gloria Graham, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. E. L. Graham last night at the First Baptist church carried off her first experience with a violin before a large crowd was convincing. I know comparatively nothing about music except that it says many beautiful and profound things that I enjoy, but even an ignorant person would have been convinced that the small player is a real musician and that she more than justified the invitation to hear her play. Ordinarily seven-year-old musicians effect labored combinations of squeaks, squeals and dis-orientances out of which, as a matter of diplomacy, his or her auditor evoke an apologetic promise for the future, but little Miss Graham left it to chance saying a lot of nice things about what she can do now.

Miss Drago's violin octette made, I believe, its first public appearance in supporting the small recitalist, and it was of course wonderful. Cisco can stand a great deal of education in the appreciation of good music, and it is by hearing such programs as this that this appreciation is realized.

F. D. McMahon, transferred to the superintendency of the east Texas division of the Humble Pipe Line company last week, received a convincing testimonial of the esteem in which the men of the west Texas division held him after ten years in charge of it when they gave him a diamond Masonic ring, costing in excess of $200, at a dinner at the Laguna hotel Saturday night. Dr. J. Stuart Pearce, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, of which McMahon was a member, presided and there were god-natured jibes and quips mixed with much sincerity as the group bade McMahon goodbye. The Humble boys had discovered that for the past two years, or since he had lost a Masonic diamond, he had prized McMahon had been regularly visiting the jeweler's where the gift ring was in stock, feasting his covetousness on it. They knew it would be a supreme gift.

MAILED PLAYMATE

ST. LAIRSVILLE, O., June 12 — Applying woodcraft and first aid principles, 14 Junior Girl Reserves rushed a 13-year-old girl, one of their number, to a hospital after she had been injured in a fall from a swinging grapevine. The girls had been picknicking in a rugged ravine when the grapevine on which Griesmer was swinging gave way, breaking the girls' grip in a fall. The girls found a plank fastened to a set of sweaters and jackets and tied her to a road. At the road ambulance was summoned.

STUDY NIGHT FLIGHTS

CHICAGO, June 12 — Flight which has been spending much of its time in the air, is now developing night flying. A. V. P. Davidov and D. Moscov just made a tour over United Air Lines' coast-to-coast route, studying air port methods in this country, including night flying. Because of great distances, night flying in the sea offers real possibilities.

DONNA of the BIG TOP by BEULAH POYNTER

BEGIN HERE TODAY

DONNA ARRELS, circus performer, falls from the trapeze and is injured. To please her partner, MADIELINE SIDDAI, Donna goes to Madeline's home to recuperate, pretending to be the other girl. She is ashamed of the deception but knows it will save her. Madeline and Donna are married.

MRS. PLANTER, housekeeper discharged by Donna, is her captor. AMOS SIDDAI, Madeline's woodchopper, has a stroke. Madeline's partner who has married DON DAVID, the animal trainer, is killed. Con knows of Donna's deception and decides to blackmail her. He comes to the nearby town and Donna agrees to meet him. He has her. He has written Bill an anonymous letter.

Donna departs, telling Bill she is going to a neighbor's. Instead she meets Con who threatens to cause trouble for her. Meanwhile Bill has telephoned the neighbor and learned that Donna has not been there. He has just finished reading the anonymous letter when she arrives.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XII

BILL and Donna stood facing each other in the warm, cheery sitting room that smelled of wood-fire and dried lavender and the faint odor of drugs drifting in from Grandfather Siddai's room. Through the double doors Minnie could be seen setting the table for supper.

Donna laughed nervously, pulled off the snow-covered hat, removed her coat and shook it; then crossed to the fireplace to warm her stiff, chilled hands.

"If she lies I'll know that damnable letter is true," Bill thought. "But she won't lie. There is no reason why she should. Anonymous letters are always vile untruths." Nevertheless he waited.

"I'm late," Donna said. "The drifts are something awful for such a—what's the matter, Bill?" Noticing for the first time his curtained parlor and tight lips, she went on, "Is Grandfather worse?"

"I was worried. That's all." She turned her back so that he could not see her face as she spoke. "I stayed longer than I intended. Mrs. Adams—"

"Oh, you went to the Adamses?" "Of course." She lifted her hat and flicked it with her forefinger. "I told you, I was going there."

"I know, but when you stayed so long I thought perhaps you had changed your mind." His voice was harsh, as cold as the air outside.

"No, I'm sorry if you were worried. You said you didn't mind my going."

"I didn't." His fist clenched and unclenched in an effort at self-control. "Thought maybe you might have gone to town."

piece of machinery from another." Donna's eyes widened. Her lips parted, but, noticing Minnie's stare of curiosity, she left the room. Her heart pounded with agonizing intensity as she climbed the stairs.

"He can't know—not so soon! Unless Mrs. Planter telephoned him—and I don't know that it was Mrs. Planter who saw us. Bill wouldn't listen to anything she said. Perhaps I should have told him I went to town. Maybe he telephoned the Adamses. Suppose he phoned! Oh God!"

The room reeled about her and waves of nausea rose in her throat. She braced herself against the dresser with the realization of her folly. The mesh was tightening with every step she took.

How hard Bill's face was! Like granite. If he found out about this lie and reacted so bitterly what would he do when he learned their whole married life had been a lie?

When she descended the stairs Bill and Miss Perkins were already at the table. Bill did not rise and he served Donna in silence. The nurse, inclined to be loquacious at meal time, found it impossible to keep up a conversation, with Bill glowering at the head of the table and Donna obviously ill at ease.

The anonymous letter burned in Bill's pocket. He was torn between a desire to completely ignore it and the suspicion that it held too much truth for his happiness. If only Madeline had not lied! Where had she been if not in town? And why had she denied for some reason she did not want him to know?

"No desert, Minnie," Bill said, shoving back his chair.

WITHOUT another word he left the dining room. In fur cap, coat and high rubber boots he strode out into the storm, taking a grim satisfaction in the discomfort of trudging through drifts that made him stumble. Battling with the tearing wind, pitting his strength against the elements gave him courage to face something he knew might change the course of his life.

But there must be some proof against his wife besides the vicious words of the unknown letter writer and the lie her lips had uttered. Even if he found out that the man mentioned in the letter was in Lebanon he would not accuse Madeline. Even if he learned that she had met this man he would not believe her unfaithful. She couldn't be. Not Madeline!

There must be some explanation of what had happened, but he lacked the courage to ask for it. He had intended to show Donna the letter and laugh at the whole thing, giving it the consideration such scrawls deserved, but the lie she had told made that impossible. With the suspicion growing stronger every moment that what the letter said was true, he could not hand it to Donna and say, "Isn't this a joke! As if such a thing would influence me!"

He walked on, trying to convince himself that the whole affair should be dismissed and forgotten.

trying to cling to his faith in a woman he loved more than anything else in life. But at the end of an hour the doubts still lingered and he was no nearer a decision than before.

That hour was as miserable as Donna's. She went with Miss Perkins to Grandfather Siddai's and sat there while the nurse served the old man his supper. She talked casually but all the time she was wondering where with her husband what had caused his sudden manner.

LATER the nurse confirmed her fears. When Grandfather Siddai the two women returned to the living room, Miss Perkins said, "Your husband was terribly worried. After he telephoned his friend and found that you had been there his face was as white as a sheet."

"I—I should have phoned him," Donna stammered, wondering the other suspected that she had not told Bill the truth. "What was delayed I—I intended to stop there on my way back but the storm kept me in town longer than I expected."

So Bill knew she had not been near the Adamses! He had tricked her into telling a deliberate lie. Her cheeks burned with sudden resentment against him.

If her conscience had been entirely clear Donna would have confronted him and demanded its reason for such a narrow attitude. Knowing she was treading the edge of a precipice, she could do nothing.

She was too restless to rest and the radio rasped her nerves. She could not keep her attention on what Miss Perkins was saying and her hands trembled too much for her to sew. She went into the kitchen and made some molasses candy, glancing every few minutes toward the clock and listening to the sound of Bill's footsteps.

When he came in she did not go to meet him. She heard him to the nurse's good night and ask Grandfather whether he was sleeping peacefully. Then he went up the stairs. When he did not come down again Donna realized he was not looking for her, did not care where she was.

Her reluctance to be alone with him grew stronger. It was not that she was actually afraid of the man whose truth becoming known so much as that she was in a state of panic causing her to lose perspective. She knew that, if Bill sat in judgment over a small lie, the truth would be reached when Mrs. Planter spoke—as speak she unquestionably would. The feeling that the man she loved and would have trusted to the end of the world had failed her was a deep hurt that nothing else could have been.

Bill, the steadfast, the true, the man of high principles and honor had never existed. Instead the husband was proving himself jealous, unreasonably suspicious, small-minded and intolerant. What difference could it make now their marriage did go on the rocks? (To Be Continued)

MRS. THORNTON COOPER ASKS COUNTY VOTES

The Cisco Daily News today was authorized to announce that Mrs. Thornton Cooper will be a candidate for the office of Eastland county treasurer, subject to the action of the democratic primaries, July 28.

Mrs. Cooper issued the following statement with her announcement:

To the Voters of Eastland County: I have never asked for any public office before, but I am announcing for the office of county treasurer, subject to the action of the democratic primaries, first election to be held July 28.

Being mindful of the task it is to meet the many voters of our county, and time being too short to canvass the county as I would like to do, and knowing that I will fail to see many of you, I take this method of letting you know that I am in the race and solicit your vote, your support and influence for the above mentioned office. I am married and have a small son six years old to support. We are living with my mother, Mrs. H. D. Holbrook, in Eastland. My husband Thornton Cooper, was rearer in this county, is an ex-serviceman of the late World war, is totally and permanently disabled, and has been for the past three and a half years in a veterans administration hospital. I was reared in this county, having taught school here for eight years. Have also had experience in the tax collector's office. I am qualified to do the work properly in the office of county treasurer and promise if you favor me with your vote, support and influence, and if elected, will render you prompt, efficient service at all times.

Hoping to meet as many of you as I can, and again thanking you for your support, I am,

Respectfully yours,
Mrs. (Frances) Thornton Cooper.

Deep Sea Diver Will Lay Telephone Cables

SUPERIOR, Wis., June 12 — H. A. Grove, retired navy officer and world's famous deep sea diver, has been engaged to lay telephone cables 38 feet below the surface of Superior bay.

Grove has had 20 years experience in deep sea diving. His deepest dive was 210 feet to the foundered steamer Lakeland in Sturgeon bay.

RAYMOND, Wash., June 12 — A three-hour-old calf fell in the Willapa river, battled the current and scrambled safely ashore 100 yards downstream.

YOUR GROCER HAS THIS SUNNY WAY TO BETTER HEALTH

Check Common Constipation with a Delicious Cereal

Food has a lot to do with how you feel and how you look. For instance, you need plenty of "bulk" with your meals to avoid the risk of common constipation.

This ailment frequently causes headaches, loss of appetite and energy. Yet, in most cases, it can be overcome pleasantly and safely by eating a delicious cereal.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN furnishes "bulk" in convenient and concentrated form. Laboratory tests show the "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is safe and effective. In fact, it is much like that found in leafy vegetables.

Within the body, the fiber of ALL-BRAN absorbs moisture, and forms a soft mass. Gently, this clears out the intestinal wastes.

In addition, ALL-BRAN provides vitamin B and iron.

Isn't this sunny way better than taking patent medicines — so often harmful? Two tablespoonfuls of ALL-BRAN daily are usually sufficient. Chronic cases with each meal. If seriously ill, see your doctor. ALL-BRAN makes no claim to be a "cure-all."

Enjoy ALL-BRAN as a cereal, or cook into appetizing recipes. Be sure you get Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. It contains much more needed "bulk" than part-bran products. In the red-and-green package. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

Ambassador Josephine Daniels, Home From Post in Mexico City, Having Busy Furlough

RALEIGH, N. C., June 12.—North Carolina's Josephine Daniels is one man whose career will have furnished at least two chapters in the nation's history.

He reached his first climax in 1913 when Woodrow Wilson appointed him secretary of the navy. Other cabinet members came and went, but he stayed on until the republicans defeated the democrats and took charge of things in 1921.

With the incoming of Franklin D. Roosevelt as the first democratic president since the World war, he again was recognized and given a post that had baffled many diplomats—that of ambassador to Mexico.

Daniels went to Mexico a year ago. He is home now on his first furlough. Upon his arrival in Raleigh, what did this ambassador-journalist do?

The first thing he did was to go to the office of the News and Observer and write an editorial. He has the remarkable ability to write and talk at the same time. While he was writing that particular editorial, he is said to have greeted at least two score of friends who trailed him to his former office.

After hitting around Raleigh for a day or two, he went to Washington to take part in the program incident to the unveiling of the Bryan

Memorial and while there he and Mrs. Daniels were White House guests. Daniels never lost his friendship for and his faith in the Great Commoner. Even when Bryan parted company with Wilson on the question of the eventuality of America's participation in the World war, Daniels did not throw him over, but maintained his staunch friendship for him.

The Bryan ceremonies over, Ambassador Daniels gave a senatorial committee in Washington the benefit of his testimony in regard to certain angles of this country's relations with Mexico, which have been extremely cordial since he went there. He then returned to his "Wakestone" home in Raleigh, which he built after his retirement from the cabinet.

A trip to his Alma Mater, the University of North Carolina, at Chapel Hill, was also on his vacation schedule and the crowning event of his sojourn in the States was reviewing the fleet at New York with President Roosevelt. He will return to Mexico late in June.

YOUNG OHIOAN TO SEEK AUTO RACING CROWN

By RALPH TEATSORTH
United Press Staff Correspondent
DAYTON, Ohio, June 12 — A young Ohioan, with a reputation for intrepidity, who sped to fame among the leading automobile racing drivers of the country last year, has fixed the 1934 national driving championship as his goal.

Mauri Rose of Dayton, who finished second to Bill Cummings of Indianapolis in one of the closest finishes in the history of the 500-mile classic on Memorial day, will follow the dirt track circuit this summer in an effort to overcome Cummings' point advantage.

His "Big Chance"

Rose began racing in 1927. Until last year, he was just one of the countless "unknowns" in the automobile racing game. His first big chance came when Howdy Wilcox was ruled out of the 1933 Indianapolis race by physicians.

Owners of Wilcox's car decided to substitute Rose, who never had driven on the great brick oval. Other drivers protested because of Rose's unfamiliarity with the track and his reputation for recklessness. But officials permitted him to enter.

Despite his inexperience, Rose drove a fine car and was in fourth place when engine trouble forced him out at 120 miles. Later in the race he relieved Russell Snowberger and brought his car from 15th place up to eighth at the finish.

Driving Drew Attention

Leon Duray, one of the old masters of the racing game, marveled at Rose's skill and daring. He obtained Rose to drive his car in this year's race. After the race Duray protested Cummings' victory on the ground he had gained an unfair advantage by not slowing down after an accident on the track.

Rose began race driving in July, 1927, at Bridgeville, Pa. In his first race his car crashed through a guard rail and his jawbone was fractured.

In 1933, Rose was rated ninth among the nation's drivers.

100 Japanese Are on 1936 Olympics Team

TOKIO, June 12 — Japan plans to send more than 100 athletes to the Olympic games in Berlin in 1936, according to present indications.

Field meets in Japan undoubtedly will develop many new stars before the Berlin event, and it is probable that several of the present stars will participate. Japan's athletes develop very early in their school life and one problem will be to keep some of those who now are holders of international records from going stale.

To widen the experience of the newer men, the athletic associations plan to invite several foreign athletes of note to visit Japan this summer and next for a series of contests. Some of the best American track and field stars are expected to give the Japanese a thorough workout.

The Far Eastern Olympics at Manila have given the Japanese teams valuable experience this year.

All circles are planning a vigorous campaign to bring the games to Tokio in 1940.

Yancey Is Planning Mayan Ruins Flight

BILLINGS, Mont., June 12 — Plans for an air expedition to study mystic Mayan ruins in Central America were announced here by Captain Lewis A. Yancey, trans-Atlantic flier.

Piloting an autogyro on an exhibition tour of Montana, Yancey revealed that he expects to lead three of the "windmill" ships into the Central American jungles in the winter of 1935-36.

The trip is to be staged under the combined auspices of Tulane university, an autogyro company and a sparkplug company.

Belez, Honduras, is expected to be the expedition's base and surveys are to be made from there 150 miles northward into the Yucatan jungles.

The planes will be equipped with much longer blades than regular autogyros and thus will be able to land in small openings in tropical forests.

Yancey first visited the temple cities of the Mayans, built centuries ago and abandoned during the Spanish conquest of the 16th century, on foot with a surveying expedition.

Two years ago he flew his autogyro into many of the "lost" cities, many times using old temples' terraces for landing fields.

Yancey was co-pilot with Roger Q. Williams when they flew the Pathfinder from Old Orchid, Me., to Rome, via Spain.

The clean Center Leaves are the mildest leaves They Taste Better!

We like telling you that Luckies are made of only clean center leaves. For the clean center leaves are the mildest leaves—they cost more—they taste better. And we're proud of the fact that these choice tobaccos receive the benefit of Lucky Strike's famous process—"It's toasted" for throat protection. But here's a point that's just as impressive: Luckies are round, firm, fully packed with long golden strands of fine tobacco—no loose ends. That's why Luckies "keep in condition"—why you'll find that Luckies do not dry out. Truly, Luckies are all-ways kind to your throat.

No one needs to tell her!

- Possessing a keen sense of values, she's too smart and intelligent to be disturbed by all she hears and reads. No one needs to tell her which is the best refrigerator. She has the ability to find out for herself. She knows how to shop and what to look for just as she knows how to play and bask in the sun. She's ready for her new automatic, but before she buys she's going to look at Electrolux and find out why her many friends have bought gas refrigeration.
- The constant, steady cold below 50 degrees which Electrolux maintains without machinery or motors, its permanent silence, its freedom from costly repairs and its remarkably low (about 25c a week) operating cost are things which appeal to her. She wants to test them; to prove to herself that such simplicity in safe refrigeration is possible. And when she does, she's intelligent enough to recognize more years of care-free, dependable refrigeration at the least cost in the gas refrigerator.
