JUST RESTORE REAL ESTATE SAYS HUNTER

Allred, Hunter and McDonald

they visited the market square, stores and the county agent's headquarters:

Allred	1599
Hunter	843
McDonald	672
Small	472
Hughes	428
Witt	326
Russell	34

An outstanding factor in this cross-section is that Allred polled more support than the combined total of the next two highest men in the race.

Allred got approximately 35 per cent of the total, Hunter and McDonald around 20 per cent apiece, and the remaining 25 per cent was divided between Small, with a little over 10 per cent, Hughes a little less than 10 per cent, and Witt considerably under 10 per cent.

The results here summarized represent one out of approximately 225 prospective voters in July.

A most significant factor was reflected in reports of the immense number of votes yet undecided, and those who were still hesitant between two or three of the candidates.

Not reflected in the statistical returns, there has been indefinite indication of an uprising in Sen. Small's strength. This, taken into consideration with the general rule that the undecided vote finally goes to some of the stronger candidates, may indicate some pointer toward the final outcome of the race, which the present figures do not purport to contain.

The returns have been segregated into three groups, those of east Texas, those of west Texas, and those of south Texas. Returns polled at Austin have been prorated equally into three groups, since Austin is the corner of each of the three districts.

By districts, the results were:

Allred		Hunter		McDonald		Russell		Small		Witt
East Texas	327	214	259	282	12	159	152	384	182	19	249
West Texas	695	152	200	208	3	64	66	290	208	3	64
South Texas	577	62	209	208	3	64	66	290	208	3	64

These results showed McDonald in second place in east Texas and in south Texas.

They reflected Hunter in second place, Small in third and McDonald in fourth place in west Texas.

A very large undecided vote was shown, ranging as high as 79 out of 400 in one county, and to the remarkable ratio of 173 undecided to 173 committed to any candidate, in another county.

To avoid any possible undue weighting of the results, none of the canvass was made in the home county of the candidates.

The figures relate to July 1 pre-place money in circulation in this state.

"To relieve real estate from this unfair tax burden, it will be necessary to revise our tax methods. Sources which have been escaping their fair share of the burden must be reached. In this war on the depression we must conscript part of the net earnings of those who have the ability to pay yet thus far have escaped their fair share of the burden. We will not take or destroy any of their capital."

HUGHES SAYS HE WILL HELP FDR PROGRAM

CONZALES, June 30—Agriculture has been saved by the farm policies of the national administration, and the state government should co-operate with President Roosevelt in every possible way to preserve stability in the industry, Maury Hughes candidate for governor, declared in an address here Thursday night.

"On March 4, the day of the president's inauguration, cotton sold for less than five cents a pound," he said. "Today, it is 11 cents. Wheat sold for around 25 cents per bushel, and today it is selling for more than 75 cents. Oats that had gone down to 15 cents a bushel are now bringing 40 cents. The cost of wool and mohair has advanced more than 300 per cent."

"If I am elected governor of Texas, I pledge to the people that I will put the full power of the state government behind the president's program to aid him in carrying out the promises of the platform that I helped to create. I shall recommend to the legislature the creation of every constitutional measure that will aid the farmers in receiving prices for the products in excess of the cost."

Pensions for the aged, also advocated in the democratic national platform, and better care of the state's wards in its eleemosynary institutions were advocated by Mr. Hughes.

Mr. Hughes also outlined his three-point program for law enforcement, promising if elected to work for a new state police force, to reform criminal laws to speed up trials and to work for adoption of the federal system of paroling and pardoning convicts.

Woodward Speaks At Moody Saturday

MOODY, June 30—Walter Woodward's campaign for attorney-general of Texas was brought before McLennan and adjoining counties late today when the candidate spoke for the first time in this section.

Several thousand persons heard his expose of the tricks of his opponents and his plain statement of his qualifications for the highest law office within the field of Texas elective positions.

"You have heard very little about the attorney-general race so far," he said, "compared to what I hope to be able to tell you in the final weeks of this campaign. During the next few years there will be more important civil litigation facing your highest state legal representative than ever before in history.

"We must have someone in that high office who can cope with the special interests which are trying to undermine the rights of the common people. My experience as a lawyer in active and very general practice during the past 25 years should give me one qualification my opponents lack," he said.

"We do not need new laws so much as we need adequate enforcement by competent officials of the laws now on the books. True, we must have changes in the laws, too, to fit conditions as they arise—but he should have in the attorney-general's office a man who understands the workings of the executive, the judicial and the legislative branches of our state government, said Woodward.

"The attorney-general primarily should be a civil lawyer. He must understand the law, be a lawyer of some kind. Since all three of the candidates are lawyers of a sort, I want you to know that I have practiced civil law for a number of years, that my two opponents are criminal lawyers."

Small Renews East Texas Campaigning

HENDERSON, June 30—Senator Clint Small renewed his east Texas campaign for governor here Saturday night with a call for a new deal in the oil industry and the threatening situation in the east Texas field.

Texas needs an oil and gas dividend entirely divorced from the railroad commission to regulate this giant industry, which, he said, has dethroned cotton as the financial king in the Lone Star state. Small denounced the practice of running hot oil and the "theft" of oil from royalty owners. Steps must be taken, he said, to enforce oil allowances, and he promised, if elected to do all in his power to bring into being a new commission composed of three members to administer the state's oil statute.

WITT GREETED AT CHINA SPRINGS BY HOMEFOLKS

CHINA SPRINGS, June 30—Homefolks of Lieut. Governor Edgar Witt greeted him here Saturday night in holiday spirit when he appeared as the principal speaker at a regional political picnic. It was Witt's first home county speech in his campaign for governor which he will close the night before the July 26 democratic primary election at a central Texas celebration in Waco.

Assured that with hardly an exception, the many Wacoans present and the hundreds of other neighbors of his home county are enthusiastically with him in the race, Witt dealt briefly with his usual campaign speech. Instead he spoke his appreciation of the people's campaign in his behalf which swung into action Saturday.

"Coming home from west Texas," said Witt, "I spoke this morning in Meridian. In the crowd were a dozen of my hometown friends. They were traveling in three cars, and the auto flew banners reading we're for Witt."

"There is no way, friends, to tell you how deeply I appreciate this un-announced campaigning on the part of my neighbors. Traveling up and down the state, telling to Texas my program for Texas, I have been given the assurance, in every section, of sufficient support to make me feel certain of my election."

F. D. R. SIGNS PRISON INDUSTRIES BILL

President Roosevelt signed a bill authorizing formation of a corporation "to insure more effective diversification of prison industries." This is what he said: "I am glad to approve this bill because it represents a distinct advance in the progress of prison industries. Without any important competition with private industry or labor, the government can provide increasingly useful work for those who need to learn how to work, and to learn that work in itself is honorable and is a practical substitute for criminal methods of earning one's livelihood." A vast army of welfare workers, reformers of prison methods and management and the labor unions of the country were among the backers of this bill which was enacted by the American congress in the closing days of the session.

Gen. Mgr. Lee Simmons of the Texas prison system ranks among the common sense penologists of the country. According to those who have watched his career as general manager that career bristles with achievements along the common sense and humane plan of handling convicts. It was different in days of old before reform legislation removed the scandals and brutalities attached to prison management. Thomas M. Campbell and Oscar B. Colquitt abolished prison contract labor and the bull whip and former State Sen. Ferdinand C. Wippert led in all the battles for the enactment of humane prison laws.

REP. DIES READY FOR OIL INVESTIGATION

Rep. Martin Dies of the Beaumont district has been named as special counsel for the house committee named to make an investigation into the needs of additional legislation to stop illegal oil production. Rep. Dies has prepared a questionnaire to be sent to every refiner, producer and pipeline operator in Texas, asking a wide range of questions on the existing situation and a definite expression of what each thought about the necessity of new legislation. Speaking of the survey to be made of the Texas field, Dies said to a Washington correspondent: "This survey ought to show the real feeling of the individual operator without respect to any conflicting claims that have been made by associations. We want to know what each oil man in Texas thinks. Thus we can pull aside whatever curtains of propaganda that have been erected and get our information directly from the men who ought to know." He added that a personal inquiry would be confined to Texas since Texas is at the heart of the problem, but would be broadened later to other states if necessary. He will open an office at Longview about July 8 and will meet the special house committee at Houston about July 18. The youthful congressman from the Beaumont district has a program that will keep him busy until late in the fall.

"HERE IS THE SIGNIFICANT FACT"

Kenneth Collins of New York is one of the high echelons in the army of retail advertising experts in America. He appeared before the newspaper advertising executives' association at the recent convention of the organization. Now advertising has ever been the life of trade—newspaper advertising. There has been a depression that began with the crash that began with the crash of 1929. Kenneth Collins reviewed the years of depression and the tremendous record made by the advertisers of America. This is what he said: "An enormous burden has been placed on the force of paid publicity in the past five years. It has been asked to perform miracles. It has been asked to get blood out of stones. It has been asked to produce money from people's pockets which were empty."

And then he told of the significant fact: "Throughout the depression retail advertising has produced about as great a volume of sales measured in units, not in dollars, as it did in the flush years of the 'Great Wind.' The records of countless retail establishments in America will verify the statement. It was not the fault of advertising that prices declined."

NEW HIGH RECORD

It is announced that the cotton textile industry looks back with pride upon its accomplishments since June 27, 1933, when it submitted its code of competition and embarked upon the administration's drive to spread employment and boost purchasing power by cutting hours and raising wages. George A. Sloan, chairman of the textile code authority, placed the achievements of the first year of operation under NRA before the American public. For instance: First to abolish child labor; first to submit a code and thus set the example for nearly 500 factories and mills; a 40 per cent increase in employment, and a 78 per cent jump in payroll as outstanding contributions to the recovery campaign of the New Deal administration.

Chmn. Sloan sounded a warning. He cited tremendous increases in the price of raw materials, and growing apprehension on the part of the business managers over the trend in recent legislation as factors disturbing the industry. In addition, he said labor had become increasingly militant in demand for higher wages and shorter hours than the code at present provides.

Think of it. In a year of the textile code method child labor was abolished, there was a 40 per cent employment boost and wages up 18 per cent. Now why shouldn't the textile industry "look with pride upon results"? And why shouldn't the chairman of the industry sound warnings as to "the dangers ahead?"

An Old Soldier Comes to the Front

Matthew Sloan New Katy President

By HUGH NUGENT FITZGERALD Matthew S. Sloan is a remarkable man. He is a product of Alabama. After his college days were over he moved to New York. At 53 he retired as head of the billion dollar New York Edison company and its affiliates. He did not "retire" from active life. He started at the last step of the railroad career as chairman of the board of Katy directors. This was a little more than two months ago. He made a survey of the Missouri, Kansas and Texas system. His policies appealed to the directors. He returned to New York from Texas. His directors made him president of the system, "without previous experience in railroad management." He covered Texas while away from New York headquarters. In his report to the board following his first survey of the newly elected president said "he found the road to be in excellent official condition, efficiently operated and serving a section destined to grow and develop more rapidly than any other part of the country." He was speaking of the great Southwest and of Texas the empire commonwealth of the sisterhood.

SEN. RUSSEK READY FOR NEW ORLEANS Sen. Gus Russek will leave his Texas home Monday for New Orleans to start serving his four months service in jail for misapplying funds of the First National bank of Schriener. In addition he was given a four-year suspended sentence by Fed. Judge T. M. Kennerley. Sen. Russek is chairman of the senate banking committee. He had a meteoric career in Texas politics. He won a seat in the senate by an overwhelming majority of the voters in his district. He was re-elected by a large majority. Judge Kennerley gave him a week on the day of his conviction to wind up his business affairs. From the senate of Texas to a New Orleans work house is a short but a very ragged journey. A famous American actress told it all at the finish of her career. She had won stardom. She had married and then divorced three American millionaires. After surveying the ruins of her career and the wreckage of her matrimonial ventures, she said to a New York reporter, "All that I have to say is that life is just one damn thing after another."

Through the Editor's Spectacles

By GEORGE

"Specs" today returns to an almost forgotten duty after sitting up nights with a special edition. One of these things is a pain in the neck while it's en route, but after the job is done it is a matter of pride. The edition was prepared and printed within a period of eight days, without increasing the staff and besides publishing the regular editions.

Meanwhile, lots of good stories for "this column slipped my notice" I don't know whether or not I shall ever be able to recall them, for once gone they are like smoke images that never assume the same shape again.

I almost got into difficulties over my remarks about the Johnson grass that ripples in the breeze over Belmont addition. Mrs. J. W. Mancill was on the point of throwing rocks at me about that story. She declared that only two reasons intervened to save me from being covered with stone bruises—the fact that no rocks were handy and the fact that the encounter occurred among the crowded, glass interior of the Dean Drug company store. Tossing rocks in a place like that would be extremely damaging.

However, Mrs. Mancill admitted that she had sold the tract and was no longer responsible for the Johnson grass. Her interest in the area is practical to the extent that its development as a residential area would enhance the value of other property she has in the vicinity. I hope for her sake as well as the increase in the civic and investment standards of this community that the development occurs. The addition is without doubt an ideal one for residential purposes, and if we can get the community ball to rolling in the right direction again, and get activity in the building trades loosened up through the medium of these government-sponsored housing and home repair agencies, we may see that development take place, not only in that part of town but throughout the entire community.

William Reagan was understood to be considering moving to Brady, Texas, where his brother, A. B. Reagan, has just been appointed postmaster, in the belief that he could now have his letters mailed free from that office.

The sister of a Cisco young man is the world's champion novice typist. She is Miss Mary Burger, 16, Athlete high school girl and the sister of Fremont Burger, clerk at the Laguna hotel. Thursday at the World's fair at Chicago, Miss Burger typed at the rate of 88 words per minute to win first place in a world-wide beginner's typing contest. Miss Burger is also the sister of Don Burger, former manager of the Laguna and now manager of the Lubbock Hilton hotel.

Last spring she won the state Inter-collegiate League typing contest by typing 84 words per minute, winning by an easy margin of 10 words over her nearest competitor.

If you don't think that's speed on a typewriter, set down at one of the things, write on it as fast as you can for a minute and then count the number of words you have written. And, remember, the typing must be accurate as to punctuation and spelling.

Tomorrow's Star Signals

By OCTAVINE

Tomorrow is a good day to sell people new ideas. Unusual things may happen and far-fetched ideas will appear. Mystery is prevalent. The mind is firm in the morning, but the evening is the most profitable.

TOMORROWS BIRTHDAYS

Try not to be so sorrowful. Travel philosophy, or higher learning will be sources of satisfaction to you during the last of May, 1935. Your elders and people of foreign countries should favor you at this time. You will pass through a period of social expansion from November 22 through December 1. Your finances should improve and you will be drawn to children, the theater, or romance. Danger July 31. Socially good August 1.

SOPHIE KERR'S SUPERB LOVE STORY

"STAY OUT OF MY LIFE!"

By Sophie Kerr

BEGIN HERE TODAY

When HOWARD JACKSON, young geology professor, of the small middle-western town of Marburg Jane TERRY, the prettiest girl in town, determines to win his heart.

Howard is attracted by Jane's friendly, AMY LOVELL, but Jane schemes to keep them apart. Then one evening Howard calls on Amy and almost immediately they fall in love.

Later that night Jane confronts Howard and accuses him of breaking her heart. When he tries to calm her she interprets his words as a declaration of love and announces their engagement.

A day later Howard is trying to explain to Amy what happened when Jane sees them together. She goes into a rage. Howard tells Jane he does not and never did want to marry her and that it is Amy he loves. Jane leaves. Amy admits her love for Howard and agrees to marry him.

Jane goes to New York and enters in a continental school. Meanwhile Howard and Amy set the date for their wedding in June.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER IX

"It's a great opportunity," said Miss Jardine, "even if it isn't exactly what you want. I'm more flattered than I can say that they've asked me to send someone. In those big organizations there's usually someone right in line to be moved up when a vacancy like this occurs." She looked at Jane thoughtfully, and went on: "Of course, you may not get it. My sending you won't guarantee that. They may have a dozen other girls applying. Then there's the difficulty that you haven't quite finished here—"

"I've practically finished," Jane reminded her, "and I've done the whole course in a little less than eight months."

"Oh, you've worked marvelously. They said there was no use sending anyone who wasn't exceptional. Kandel's is the finest real estate firm in the city, even if it isn't the biggest—but you don't even know the real estate vocabulary."

"It ought to be easy enough to learn," Miss Jardine's reluctance whetted Jane's desire, as Miss Jardine intended it to do.

Now that Jane was eager for the job Miss Jardine became a little serious. "I want to talk to you first. You're young. You're only starting. If you get it, this will be your first job and a first job often sets the trend of one's whole business existence. You must look it over carefully, from every possible angle, and make up your mind whether or not it's the right line for you. Don't be one of those women who simply work for the week's salary and never look beyond their noses. Now, after you're there a while and know the ropes maybe you'll discover that you haven't any flair for real estate. Maybe you won't like it. Maybe you'll be dumb about it, though I don't think that. But if it doesn't suit you, if it doesn't work out so that you like it, and want to go on with it, you must drop it, cut it off clean and dry and try something else."

"Miss Jardine, do you honestly believe I can get this job and do things—in business—like a man?" "I honestly believe that you can and that you will—unless—"

"Unless what?" "Unless you get yourself mixed up in some sentimental mess. That's where the average business woman loses out."

"What do you mean, exactly?"

"I MEAN unless you have a love affair that distracts you from your work and makes you unreliable and trifling, and inefficient."

"There's no danger of my falling in love, or marrying. I'm all through with that sort of thing."

Jane looked at the pencil's point. "Go ahead," she said.

Miss Jardine smiled. "At your age that statement's a joke. However, it's better than longing for romance and I'll do you the credit of believing that you aren't looking for a job merely as a raft to float you into matrimony. Now you dash along over to the Kandel Building and let me know what happens." She called after Jane: "It'll be a nice Christmas present to yourself to land this job—or did you intend to go home for Christmas?"

"Whether I land it or not, I'm not going home."

Go home! Something of her first rebellion and fury came back to Jane as she thought of that. Whether she got the job or not, if she were starting, if she were dying and could only live by going home, she wouldn't go. She came into the Kandel offices with her color flaming, her eyes defiant, and spoke to the important youth in the reception room so peremptorily that he heaped to announce her. And she entered Mr. Ovid Kandel's presence far more like Queen Vashti at her height than an anxious applicant for a plum of a job. Mr. Kandel was unaccustomed to such an approach and it interested him.

He asked the usual questions and Jane answered them almost offhand. Yes, she could type. Yes, she could take letters at any speed. Certainly she could write them without dictation given the gist. She could file, she could—suddenly she came alive to the situation, grasped the force and intensity of the man before her even as he recognized in her some of his own characteristics. Now she knew she wanted to work for him, that he could command her loyalty and aid and her blind ambition. "All of those things you've asked me," she said, interrupting him, "they're the usual secretary's stuff. Anyone can do them. You certainly require much more than that."

"As for instance?" asked Mr. Kandel, still more interested.

"You want someone who can handle people whom you don't want to see, but also don't want to antagonize. You want someone to supplement your memory, to save you time and effort and labor, to relieve you of detail. You want— you want another pair of hands and another brain that will be, as far as it's humanly possible, an extension of your own hands and brain," she concluded triumphantly, without the least recollection that she had stolen that speech entirely from Miss Jardine.

"Well, by gad!" exclaimed Mr. Kandel. "You've got the idea. You're hired."

"Oh no, I'm not," said Jane. "I don't know yet what the salary is."

"Thirty dollars to start. More in a year if you make good on that hands and brain stuff."

"No, that's not enough for me." "But you don't know anything about the real estate business. That woman over at the school told me so. You've got a lot to learn at my expense."

"Then you'd better make it worth my while to learn it." Mr. Kandel whistled. "What do you want?" he asked.

"Forty dollars to start and a $10 raise at the end of a year if I'm worth it."

Mr. Kandel settled himself for the pleasure of a dicker, with the double purpose of finding out whether the girl knew how to bargain, and of saving himself a third of the salary he had paid her predecessor. By dicker and by saving Mr. Kandel had largely made his great financial success. But Jane, in his own phrase, sat up to him. He was to her no more than Mrs. Berwyn trying to buy for half-price the left-overs of the china booth of the annual Marburg hospital bazaar. At the end of an exhilarating 20 minutes they came to an agreement, somewhat above his intention. Mr. Kandel was to pay $37.50 a week for six months. Then if satisfactory Jane would receive $40 and a $5 raise each six months after that until she had reached a maximum of $60.

"And by that time," said Mr. Kandel, "you'll probably own this business and I'll be out on the street panhandling for a cup of coffee. When can you start?"

"Now, if you want me."

"There's your desk. Hunt up a notebook and pencil and we'll get going."

Jane put her coat and hat on the chair nearest the desk, opened by instinct the exact drawer where the notebooks and pencils were concealed, looked at the pencil's point and came over to Mr. Kandel's side. "Go ahead," she said.

When they were nearly through a tall young man stuck his head in at the door and said: "We've got the Three-Sixteen matter straightened out."

As he entered Kandel joyously introduced him: "This is Mr. Thorpe, head of Rental and Management. If you ever want to rent an apartment, apply to him. This is Miss Terry, my new secretary, Roger, and a live wire, believe me. Sit still, Miss Terry—I want to go on."

So she waited and listened, and as she listened she looked at Roger Thorpe, who was quite worldly but attention. Three-Sixteen seemed to be an apartment house which had been having a series of mysterious troubles. Thorpe had at last traced these to the superintendent.

"The man's insane, a sort of religious mania," said Thorpe. "He's been working up a grudge against the families that dance and play cards and entertain and lead what he calls sinful lives, d'you see? That explains why the heat failed in some of them, and the queer noises on the roof, and the queer Miss Barstell's pantry and the plumbing trouble in the fifth and sixth floors."

"Good Lord, Johnson reported all that himself, said he couldn't understand it!"

"Yes, but the other day when he was here he said something about they were getting no more than they deserved and his eyes looked so wicked that I had a hunch. So I went up there and had a talk with him. We're lucky he didn't run amuck and commit murder."

"What have you done with him?" "He's been sent to Bellevue, and the back elevator man takes charge until we put in a new super. It's all been kept perfectly quiet. No body suspects what was the matter, nor where he is. I'm taking care of it personally."

As Thorpe left, he bowed to Jane. "I'm glad to have met you, Miss Terry," he said, in his pleasant even voice, and Jane knew that he had been fully conscious of her presence all the time.

Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Potter of Dallas visited Mr. and Mrs. W. Moore Friday and Saturday.

Mrs. A. E. Wilkinson of Dallas is visiting Mrs. W. F. Evans.

Mrs. E. Ford has gone to San Angelo for a visit with friends.

Matthew S. Sloan, who has been chairman of the board of the Missouri-Kansas-Texas Lines since April, this week assumed complete charge of the railroad's operations as well as its policies, by accepting the dual position of chairman and president. He was named president upon his return to New York after spending two months in traveling over the system. Mr. Sloan told directors he had found the Katy in excellent physical condition, efficiently staffed and well operated, and said he contemplated no changes in personnel.

According to J. C. King, Cisco agent, Mr. Sloan has announced to all Katy employees that he will devote his entire attention to the affairs of the railroad and that his chief aim will be to keep Katy progressively active in the development of the Southwest and to maintain and improve its record for efficient service. He will leave New York immediately to take over his new duties and plans to spend a major portion of his time traveling through the four states served by the Katy.

Mr. Sloan feels that only by knowing the territory it serves, and by enjoying close personal contacts with the business people of the Katy served communities, can he successfully direct the company's activities," said Mr. King. For that reason he has said that his headquarters will be "on the line," which in railroad parlance means anywhere on the system. Immediately after his election as chairman Mr. Sloan made a thorough inspection of the railroad and followed that with another intensive tour which took him to most of the larger Katy cities. He has declared that he is going to extend his get acquainted tour to include the entire system, so it is likely that he will be in Cisco in the near future.

May Retail Sales Make Good Showing

AUSTIN, June 30—Retail dollar sales in Texas during May made a favorable showing, according to Dr. F. A. Buechel, assistant director and statistician in the bureau of business research of the University of Texas.

Reports from 88 stores covering all sections of the state show an average increase in dollar sales of 11 per cent over April and 22 per cent over May, 1933. Sales for the year to date averaged 30 per cent above the corresponding period last year. Although every city from which reports were received made a favorable showing, those cities which were above the average compared with their showing in May and the year to date, 1933, were: Abilene, Corsicana, San Antonio, Temple, Tyler, and Waco. The "all others group," consisting of stores in smaller towns, again made the best comparative showing.

Of the various types of stores, men's clothing stores had the largest increase in sales compared with May last year, followed in order by women's specialty shops, smaller department stores, dry goods and apparel stores, and larger department stores. Compared with April, the smaller department stores made the largest percentage gain, followed in order by men's clothing, larger department stores, dry goods and apparel, and women's specialty shops.

Collections of outstanding accounts also were highly gratifying. In May 36.9 per cent of accounts outstanding were collected against 31.5 per cent during the same month last year.

CALF HAS DOUBLE NOSE
CENOSHA, Wis., June 30—A calf with a 100 per cent amplified sense of smell, and born with four nostrils is owned by Roy Trevelan, farmer near here. The calf's upper jaw is split with a separate nose on each side. Each nose has two nostrils.

REPLICA COTTAGE
KENOSHA, Wis., June 30—Fred Fremo, Kenosha contractor, whose hobby is constructing miniature houses, ships, and other models, recently completed a replica of Ann Hathaway's cottage. He presented the work of art to the Kenosha high school.

GOOD LUCK SHRINE
DEERFIELD, Mass., June 30—A patch of grass, 26 inches long and 18 inches wide, on Hilltop Farm, is becoming a good luck shrine. It produces four leaf clovers in strange profusion. Within an hour, Roland Howell and his sister Ida picked 117 at the spot.

What About Shade Trees in Your Home?

YOU wouldn't try to read out in the open, with the bright sun glaring into your eyes. When you take a book outdoors you seek friendly shade to give your eyes protection.

It is just as important to protect your eyes against glare when you are using them indoors.

Laboratory tests have proved that light shining in our eyes will reduce our seeing ability by as much as 80 per cent.

DON'T allow the direct light from floor or table lamps to shine in your eyes, if you wish to get the full value of the light you buy. Let light come from above or back of you whenever it is possible to do so.

Always have floor lamps, table lamps and lamps in wall brackets shaded to prevent glare. Even the lamps in ceiling fixtures should be shaded to give the soft, delightful charm of correct lighting. Thorough comfort cannot be enjoyed in any home where the light is poor.

Will you permit our home-lighting specialist to call and tell you whether you are using lamps of the right wattages for comfort, for eye-protection, and how to light your home throughout to show its attractiveness to the fullest advantage? This service is free.
