TRUST AND WAVER NOT: Trust in the Lord with all thine heart; and lean not unto thine own understanding.—Proverbs 3: 5.

Mrs. Rainey a Wise Woman

Mrs. Henry T. Rainey, widow of the late speaker of the house of representatives, speaking through close friends, declared that she would not attempt to succeed her husband. A very wise woman Mrs. Henry T. Rainey. As the widow of the brilliant leader of his party, Mrs. Rainey will stand to gain all the benefits which tradition has developed for the immediate families of late congressmen. That is, she will receive a year's salary, which is $10,000.

And now it is said that Rep. Marvin Jones of the Amarillo district may go after the speakership prize. Rep. Joseph W. Byrns of Tennessee is the majority leader of the house of representatives. This is the latest from a friend of the favorite son of Tennessee: "There is not a shadow of doubt but that he will be elected speaker in the next congress to succeed the late Henry T. Rainey." Of course, the message came second handed, but Major Leader Byrns sent his message straight when he told reporters: "My friends understand that I am going to make the race, because they feel and I feel that I am in line for it. There is not a shadow of doubt about my election." If Byrns wins the speakership northern congressional leaders carrying the democratic brand insist that a northern democrat should be elected the majority leader of the house in the organization of the new congress. Same old slogan of all the ages: "The king is dead—long live the king."

Cost of Issuing State Bond Bonds

The legislature, called into session for the single purpose of issuing the remaining $9,500,000 state relief bonds to feed the destitute in Texas next winter, has established certainty that the session will extend at least to the 30-day period. It has, each house separately, undertaken to find out what went with the money already spent. It will drag through days and days of meaningless testimony, developing little ripples of excitement here and there, while members privately build political fences, and in the end will wind up with a great mass of record which will be stored away in some vault probably not to be disturbed until another capitol is built. The relief bonds will be voted and the legislators, a great many of whom are "lame ducks," will go home, having cost the state around $100,000 to issue bonds to feed the hungry.

The legislature was called to authorize the issuance of relief bonds. The public wants neither new laws nor investigations out of the present personnel. If any such object is to be undertaken it rightfully belongs with the new administration to do so. The cost of authorizing the bonds is an important item of unnecessary expense that might well be included in any investigation of the sort.

Texas Cotton Growers Paid Millions of Bonus

This from Washington should appeal to the cotton growers of Texas: "Rental payments to Texas growers by the government, $11,562,394." As soon as this payment, totaling approximately $50,000,000 to American cotton growers, has been completed and compliance with cotton acreage contracts has been certified payment of the second installment of $50,000,000 will begin to all who are engaged in cotton production in the cotton belt. In addition to these rental payments growers will receive a parity payment of approximately $25,000,000 next December. More than this, cotton has been pegged by the government at 12 cents per pound. This will enable the growers to hold the staple as the loans will be made direct by the government.

Maryland Negro Throws Hat Into Demo Ring

Baltimore is the proud city of "Maryland, My Maryland." For the first time in history of the commonwealth a negro is seeking election to state office on a democratic ticket. Joshua F. Henry, Jr., shattered a Maryland precedent by announcing as a candidate for nomination in the leading negro district of Baltimore. There are thousands of negroes in Maryland who vote the democratic ticket. They could not do it in Texas where they are barred from casting primary ballots by order of leaders of the democratic party and the lawmakers of the commonwealth.

Chicago is ever in the front ranks when it comes to first page sensational stories. On Aug. 26 a new paid attendance record was established at the Century of Progress fair, 209,756 persons having passed through the gates. It was a Sunday turnout of progress-minded people, and the previous high of 181,356 was established on the glorious Fourth of July of this year. Watch Chicago and watch its people. They are fast movers, and they are going to win in this battle for national recovery and a renewal of prosperity for the American people.

Sen. Patton Promoted to Seat in Congress

By HUGH NUGENT FITZGERALD

Sen. Nat. Patton of Crockett is among the list of state lawmakers who are highly elated and smilingly facing the future regardless of the depression or drought or other calamities, afflictions or "distasteful" real or fancied under bluebonnet skies. Nat has a congressional representative's nomination and certain of election. He emerged from the contest in the seventh district a victor over Roger Davis of Nacogdoches. He has a lot of legislative experience. He served as a state representative. Ambitious to go higher, he ran for a state senatorial post. He won. Then, he decided he would like a temporary change in climatic conditions and threw his hat in the ring as a candidate for the congressional post in his district. Now he will go to Washington in January and be numbered among the 21 representatives from the state which will celebrate its centennial celebration in 1936.

There is a Waterloo in the life of every man. The dean of the senate, after many stormy political battles, met his and went down smiling as he was buried by an avalanche of votes cast for the "Abe Lincoln of the Rio Grande." Politics is a fascinating game. There are times when it is a nasty game but life is a game and a gamble for that matter and youth ever has its fling in politics.

and all the professions and in all the fields of human endeavor. A man who has a flair for politics is wisest and happiest when he sits in the treetops, picks and backs his favorite and surveys through naked eyes the marchers in the passing show.

HIGHWAY TRUCK ACCIDENTS AND TAX DATA

A very interesting public document has been compiled and published by the Railways and Express Employees association of Texas. It carries the caption, "Texas Highway Truck Accidents and Tax Data, 1933."

It tells the story of a comparative accident record for the years 1932 and 1933. Number of accidents recorded in 1932, 717; number of persons killed, 341; number of persons injured, 867. These are the figures for 1933: number of accidents, 1,487; number of persons killed, 362; number of persons injured, 1972.

This is the introduction: "This book contains facts on how to save $10,000,000 every year; who pays the gasoline taxes; who builds the highways and who wears them out; where the truck taxes don't come from." And then this direct inquiry: "How many of your relatives, friends and acquaintances were killed or injured by trucks in 1933?" An imposing as well as ghastly array of alleged facts and figures are marshalled for the edification as well as the education of the reading public. There are pages devoted to the automobile taxes actually levied (state and county and independent district) against common carrier trucks and buses and contract carriers compared with similar taxes levied against the railroads in Texas for the calendar year 1931.

Texasans are tax minded at this time. They are carrying a tremendous burden. A campaign of education is necessary regardless of all the hulloohoo gobbledygook. Taxpayers demand the facts. They should be shown the figures. In January the 44th legislature will be organized. There are many new faces in both branches. Indeed, there was a revolution at the polling places of the commonwealth in the primary nominating elections of the year—and there may come a revolution in legislation.

WEAVER MOORE OUTVOTES VETERAN

Weaver Moore will be the successor to Walter Woodul in the senate of Texas. Houston is the largest of Texas cities. It contains the largest population and perhaps the greatest wealth.

Col. John Mathis is one of the veteran leaders of democratic politics in Texas. He has figured for almost 40 years in the political activities of the commonwealth and has been prominent in the legal world. He has terms to his credit as a member of the lower house. He has ever been an untrifling foe of prohibition. He carried his political pitcher to the well once too often.

Youth had its fling. Weaver Moore had served as a state representative. He challenged the veteran. He won by a majority of 5,000. He is one of the leaders of the young democrats of the commonwealth. He is an uncompromising foe of prohibition laws and enactments. He is an able lawyer, and a game politician. He is the brother-in-law of Dan Moody. Dan is a never-say-die anti. He has been a leader in recent legislative sessions—regular and special.

Many old timers expected Col. Mathis to win. Political wizards in the city of Houston declared that it would be a horse race and unsafe to place a wager on either man. Well, they were rotten prophets. It was a political upheaval, and many political upheavals have taken place in the larger counties and cities of Texas since the balloting began in July.

Through the Editor's Spectacles

Current drought conditions have performed a distinct service to Cisco. The statement may appear somewhat farfetched to certain of you, but the fact is that a condition that establishes the strategic situation of a community and the opportunities for that community performs a distinct service to it. The drought has proven the incalculable value of Lake Cisco to this community.

All through the northwestern area of the state where farmers look upon burned fields and burned pastures and cities contemplate with anxiety depleted supplies of water, Cisco is a topic of conversation, said O. R. Turner, Cisco grocer, who has just returned from a visit to that section.

"I wouldn't leave Cisco at all," said he. "This town is in a better position than any town I know of. People everywhere I went were talking about our water supply, about the work that is being done here and about the $4,000,000 that was sliced off our city debt—now how do you suppose they knew about that?"

Newspapers, of course, I told him. One should always give one's profession its dues.

"Well, even the farmers were talking about it," said he. "Cisco is everywhere the subject. They think we have a wonderful opportunity here. And after visiting around, I'm convinced of it, myself. I'm certainly not going to leave this town."

Perhaps I'm quoting Mr. Turner's conversation a bit too liberally, but there's a moral implanted that I want to get over. That is that Cisco has the equipment to survive where other communities do not, and that in this condition it has established itself upon a basis from which to secure the greatest benefits from the prosperity that, as experience argues, will follow.

The difference has been a bountiful practically inexhaustible supply of water.

I've said before, and repeat, that next year, all things being equal, will be one of the most prosperous that the farmer has experienced. With surpluses removed, with consumer demand increased by the improvement that is taking place throughout the country generally and with other favorable factors brought into account, prices for farm commodities are bound to rise.

Presence of hundreds of dead fish floating over an area in upper Lake Cisco led officials to believe this week that the place had been dynamited. The fish were removed by the lake patrol so that no contamination resulted, and the damage done was confined to the fish life in the lake.

The dynamiter is not a sportsman. He is the destructive agent of a selfish passion. The true sportsman gives the fish a chance because he enjoys the game. He matches his own skill with the skill of the fish in its element and he asks the thrill that a victory over the creature on this nearly equal basis gives him.

But the person who tosses a stick of dynamite into a stream, a lake or a creek gives the fish only the accident of a chance that the creature will be in some distant part of the water at the time. Not only does he take all sportsmanship out of the act, but he kills all the young life that would grow up to perpetuate the fish population and provide sport for other years.

There is a state law against dynamiting fish, and a heavy penalty is attached. Anyone caught dynamiting Lake Cisco or any other body of water where fish are grown for sport ought to feel the full impact of this law.

Farmers of western Texas are making preparations to plant the biggest grain crop in recent history, according to farm machinery salesmen, who are happy over mounting commissions. Wheat and oats this season were planted and harvested before the current drought—speaking of Texas—and prices received for the grain were and continue high. Oats, for instance, sold for 35 cents at harvest time and now are bringing 45 cents.

Plowing for next year's crop is under way in many sections. Many of the growers who harvested large crops last spring and consequently shared to the greatest extent in the grain crop prosperity, are buying tractors and gang plows to replace draft animals of which their land was denuded during the depression period.

This equipment is bought in the prospect of cultivating a large acreage in grains next winter and spring.

When Mrs. Wechsler returns from a trip out of town Boots reads her mother's learning about her withdrawal from the club. They are married and Russ takes his bride to his brother's apartment. It is a cheap and sordid place and Russ's brother and his wife, GLORIA, are disappointed.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXI AS the days melted into weeks Boots's realization of what she had done, the seriousness of the step she had taken that August morning almost overwhelmed her. She would have died rather than admit that her marriage to Russ had been a mistake; but there it was. Nature, for her own purposes, had thrown a veil of glamour over this particular young man. Moonlight nights, scent of roses in the hedges, the spell of physical nearness had blinded her to his imperfections. Now, quite suddenly, she saw him with clear eyes. He was a fine physical specimen, he was sunbrowned, he had excellent teeth and an agreeable smile. Beyond that, beyond the loveliness which had already begun to pall a little there was simply nothing; no bond between them. They spoke different languages.

She was not the first girl to come alive to this difference after marriage. But she was young and the lesson was a bitter one. Her stoic acceptance of the situation spoke volumes for her growing maturity. Although she celebrated her 19th birthday early in September she was years older—or felt it—in experience and wisdom. When she glanced young girls on the street she glanced at them curiously.

"Was I really that stupid and unseeing last year?" she often said to herself.

After that black afternoon when she had received from her parents a strapped and neatly addressed trunk and a brief, cold note advising her that her father did not wish to hear from her again she had had no further word from Larchneck. She seldom went over to New York now. She had no money to spend and Gloria, discovering that Boots had a real talent for housework, was leaving more and more for her to do in the shabby flat.

him angry. He hated, he said, "squalling women." But usually he was kind, in a thoroughly unimaginative way. To this girl who had been babied and petted all her life the experience of living as a member of this household was a devastating and maturing one. The old life, seen from this vantage, seemed now unbelievably soft and easy. What had she done with her time, her money? Why, even her old scanty allowance now seemed prodigal.

"We've got to get out of this place. We've simply got to," she murmured one warm morning in late September. She was alone in the flat. Gloria had left the house a few moments before on one of her periodical "shopping" orgies. Gloria was perfectly happy strolling down Manhattan's Fourteenth street, staring at the wax mannequins in the windows, sipping a hot chocolate and swallowing a double-decker sandwich at a crowded soda fountain counter. Lou and Gloria never managed to collect a penny. The installment collector was a familiar figure at the door of the flat. But Gloria came home from these expeditions triumphant in her spoils—a velvet hat "just like the uptown shops," a sleeky pink silk vest, a pair of gloves which would shrink hopelessly in the first washing. Bargains were Gloria's very breath of life. Her bureau drawers overflowed with lace trimmed nightgowns with frayed seams. There were half a dozen shabby pairs of high-heeled shoes tumbling about in gray curls of dust on the floor of her clothes closet.

"I can't live this way. I won't," Boots told herself, setting her lips stubbornly. This was the day Russ had gone over to Jersey to see some vague man "about a job." Boots had rather lost faith in these nebulous jobs. After she had hung the frayed towel beside the cracked dishpan she spread the morning paper out on the drain-board, open at the "help wanted" pages. Girl wanted . . . girl wanted . . . oh, there were 20 jobs open but she was eligible for none of them.

"Steno, college grad: dept. store." "Steno: some coll. operats slide rule." "Switchboard opr. mult. exp." "Alert, capable woman, over 27: executive ability."

SHE opened her purse, the dark blue kidskin envelope she had bought so casually last spring. It change purse was limp; she shook out its contents. Thirty cents, the quarter Russ had given her yesterday. The nickel she had saved. Russ had been shame-faced but blustering about it.

"Stick with me, kid, and you'll wear diamonds," he had said. He remembered hearing his father say that to his mother.

Thirty cents. Five cents for subway fare to the city. Five cents back. She could have lunch at some counter. Maybe the basement of the dime store. She'd do it. She would wait around till Russ came home, till Gloria came dawdling in with her bargain of the day. She'd go over to New York and see if there wasn't something—anything—she could do. If only she didn't meet anyone from home! That was the fear produce what they are going to consume, and thus take them off the backs of the taxpayers.

We are not proposing to apply this system to the whole people. We desire to make a start with the unemployed, who no longer have anything, and therefore are no longer of any use to the owners of private business.

When we first put this plan before the people we talked about a three hundred million bond issue to get started. But now in this emergency we see that we have to start more quickly, and we have figured out a way to start without a bond issue and with hardly any debt.

Begin With Factories It is necessary to have land on which the unemployed may grow their own food, and factories in which they may produce their own shoes and clothing. Let us begin with the factories.

There are close to 2,000 of them idle in our state, and most of the others are running on short time. They are running into debt; the owners are holding on.

We say to some of these owners: "Let the state take your factory on a rental basis for three years. We will pay your costs and your overhead and your organization can work for us."

We shall bring in the unemployed and put them to work at producing. We will turn out goods in a tremendous flood and note this crucial fact:

The goods will not belong to the private owner of the factory but to the people who do the work. Since they own the goods, they will be able to consume them, or exchange them with others who are producing other kinds of goods under the same system.

What about food?

Exchange for Food Our farmers today are producing a great surplus. We shall say to the farmers:

"Bring this food to our state depots and you will get warehouse receipts which will be receivable for taxes."

Tens of thousands of farmers are losing their homes today because they cannot get cash to pay their taxes. But they can pay with food, and the unemployed workers can eat the food, and very soon they will be turning out goods which the farmers want and will take in exchange for more food.

Around all our cities and towns are great tracts of land which speculators are holding for a profit. Now the speculators are troubled and cannot pay their taxes. The state will rent this land and put some of the unemployed at work on it, and presently we shall see flourishing gardens instead of burned-over weeds. All this food we will bring to our state stores and it will be exchanged for the factory products. Soon all can make plenty and comfort for all themselves.

All that is needed is a little state capital to get started, and also of course, a little brains and good will.

25 REPORT TO SHOTWELL FOR BRECK ELEVEN

BRECKENRIDGE, Sept. 1.—Twenty-five youths reported to Buckaroo field Thursday, and Coach P. E. Shotwell began preliminary work on his 1934 football machine. Calisthenics, punting, passing and the running of a few plays were in order for the first day.

All nine of the returning lettermen were suited out and ready to begin another season's grind. More boys, some of whom checked out suits yesterday but did not report for practice, are expected out this afternoon at 4:30.

Many Fans Look On
The other group that turned out for the opening session was as numerous as the foot ball candidates and is expected to increase rapidly as will the pigskin squad. That clan is comprised of Buck supporters who are anxious to appraise the high school aggregation.

The boys looked heavier than last year but are still lacking in that respect. In limbering up on two or three plays Shotwell had Captain Collins and Cudd stands; O'Rear and Holt, tackles; Pitzer and Russell, guards; Morris, center; Taylor, quarter; Clark and Moores, halfbacks; and Hall, full.

Five Regular Back
Nine of these lettered last year, but only five were regulars. They are Collins, Cudd, Taylor, Hodges, and Hall. O'Rear might have been a regular had he not been ineligible part of the season.

GOLD PIECE 100 YEARS OLD
ST. CLAIREVILLE, O., Sept. 1.—Among the personal effects of the late Mrs. Clara Tomlinson, milliner, was found a century-old $5 gold piece. It was minted 1834.

Ample Source of Credit Available

A convenient and ample source of credit for house owners who wish to join in the national trend toward modernization or improvement of neglected residence property is available in Cisco through the recently organized Federal Savings and Loan association.

This association, utilizing local savings to provide credit for home building or home buying, offers funds on monthly payment plan at a rate of interest governed by federal regulations and over periods of time that make the loans easy to handle.

Source of credit for the rehousing drive is primarily provided for by the government through banks and other private financial institutions which are approved under its plan of guaranteeing 20 per cent of the loan, but comparatively few commercial banks care to enter this field, which requires long term credit extensions, and the requirement against the borrower before he can secure credit from this source under government sanction are such that few borrowers can meet it.

The federal savings and loan associations, however, which includes that at Cisco, are equipped to meet these needs and may loan money for the purpose without requirements that interfere with the credit from commercial, or short-term, sources. Already three residence repair and modernization projects are under way in Cisco with funds loaned by the association.

Increase Over 400 League Football Teams Last Year Is Anticipated by Henderson

AUSTIN, Sept. 1.—Texas high school gridiron players of more than 400 interscholastic league schools already are in training for their annual attempt at the state championship. Roy Henderson, league athletic director, today predicted an increase over the 400 entrants last year. With September 15 as the deadline, 366 have already registered in classes A, B, and C.

Coaches at most schools in the state have conditioned their prospects in outdoor camps, starting with exercise and ending their sessions with fundamental drills. When the boys are called back to study Sept. 3 or the week following, the squads will be supplemented by a few hopefuls who missed the early training.

While it is a trifle early to make predictions on the 1934 season, Henry Fruka, coach of the champion Greenville high Lions, said at Texas Tech coaching school in Lubbock recently that prospects at his school were "pretty fair."

Interest is known to be greater this season than in 1933, and Henderson said the quality of football played in the league probably would be better. Schools are becoming accustomed to the eight-semester rule which went into effect last year.

The league director said opposition to the eight-semester regulation had been quieted. "Several of those who criticized it last year have given the rule unsolicited endorsement," he said.

Only one important change has been made in interscholastic league rules for the coming season. That limits a player to ten games before the Saturday following Thanksgiving. The team may play more games if desired, by leaving part of the team idle.

A player will not be allowed to take part in more than one game per week with this qualification: "If no game is played the week of November 5 but one on Monday, November 12, a holiday, he may play again Friday or Saturday, November 16 or 17."

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH
Sunday school at 9:45 a. m. E. P. Crawford, Supt. Dr. B. K. Tenny, Austin, will preach at both the morning and evening services in the absence of the pastor, who is on his vacation. Presbyterian Young People's league will meet at the regular hour.—J. STUART PEARCE, Pastor.

HOLY ROSARY CHURCH
Mass today will be at 8 a. m. by Rev. M. Collins. This is the fifteenth Sunday after Pentecost. The epistle read is taken from the Galatians V.25, VI.1-10; the gospel is from St. Luke VIII.11-16. The gospel tells of the miracle of raising from death to life of the only son of the widow of Naim. Christ also raises to spiritual life the repentant sinner.

not make a mistake. Theron lettered last season, while his twin brother, Thomas, saw the games from the stands. They are the same size and build and play football the same way. "There's not much difference between them as far as football is concerned," Shelley said at the practice Saturday afternoon. They finished almost together in the county 440 yard run last spring.

Most promising of the wingmen is Roy Burnham, young 186 pound sprinter. He is shifty and lanky enough for both a pass receiver and a bone-jarring tackler. Pete Barnes and Reuben Wende are likely looking candidates for linemen's berths.

In the backfield, besides the lettermen, outstanding men are Dick Stansbury, Glenn "Shorty" Collum, Bruce Groce and Bill Hays. Stansbury and Collum will likely battle it out most of the season for the quarterbacking job.

Fans who remember the Notre Dame type of close formation football used by Coach W. B. Chapman in the golden days of Lobo supremacy in the Oil Belt will be struck by the similarity of the game used by Shelley and Hodges this year. The formations are very much the same, and some of the plays appear to be identical, but the system has been dressed up to form a more deceptive style of play. It will likely be used both with and without a shift.

Open Here Sept. 21.
The Loboes will open their season on Chesley field September 21 with their traditional game against the Gorman Panthers. Following the opening game, they will play the following teams: San Angelo at San Angelo, Sept. 29; Sweetwater at Cisco, Oct. 5; Brownwood at Cisco, Oct. 12; Breckenridge at Breckenridge; Eastland at Eastland, Nov. 2; Ranger at Ranger, Nov. 12; Quanah at Cisco, Nov. 19; Abilene at Cisco Thanksgiving day.

Working out with the Loboes Saturday afternoon were Arthur Barker of last year's team and Robert Blackburn, former Lobo now playing on the McMurry varsity. Among those looking over the new material were Bill Smith, former Lobo captain and last year captain of the Texas Longhorns and all-Southwestern center; Bert Ezzell, center from the A. C. C. Wildcats; and Dick West, former sports editor of the Daily Texan.

Following are the names of those reporting for the Saturday afternoon practice:

Linemen: Reuben Wende, Darsey Bruce, Jim Bob McCanlies, Norris Littlepage, Burl Wagley, Thomas Graves, Theron Graves, Durwood Boyd, Brennan, Pete Barnes, Royce Rainbolt, Bill Witt, Vernon Shirley, Bert Shirley.

Ends: William Saunders, Roy Burnham, Robert Siddall, Bob Bacon, George Sledge.

Backs: Dick Stansbury, Bill Hays.
