SHIP OFFICER SUSPECTS INCENDIARISM

School Enrollment Shows Large Increase Over Last Year

500 PUPILS ARE PREDICTED IN TWO WEEKS

Enrollment in the Cisco public schools today was proceeding at a rate that caused officials to predict that within two weeks the number of students attending the 1934-35 school would approximate 1,500, a figure higher than that of any year in the boom period.

At the high school, Principal H. Anderson said that 375 students had been enrolled and forecast an enrollment of 450 by the end of the year. The 375 at noon compared with 340 on the second day of last year.

Opening routine went of smoothly throughout the system, said Supt. Jack. He announced that assignments of teachers would be announced early tomorrow morning and that teachers would meet the students in the rooms to which they were assigned for issuing books and running classroom work.

Among the pupils enrolling today are numbers of the Dothan students, who will be transported to Cisco from schooling under contract between the Cisco and Dothan boards of education. Numerous transfers as well as many families in Cisco contributed to the rising total of boys and girls applying to the Cisco public school system for education this year.

Former Surrenders In Fatal Stabbing

PORT WORTH, Sept. 11.—John Myers, about 50, a farmer living at Britton, surrendered today at district attorney's office in the fatal stabbing of T. A. Nichols, 25, of the Britton district. In a statement, Whaley said the stabbing occurred yesterday during a quarrel over a dice game. The incident was reported to officers today. After they left to investigate Whaley voluntarily surrendered.

Human Element Is Responsible Factor

There is a warning of imperfection in the Morro Castle tragedy Saturday that rudely upsets our smug conceptions of mechanical advance in ocean travel. Travel by sea is now said to be the safest of all forms of transportation, but the lesson is taught in the burning of the pleasure liner and the loss of more than 100 lives that no matter how far advanced may be the mechanics of travel or how excellent the safeguards, the human element is the responsible factor. Twenty-two years ago the world was stunned by a sinking of the magnificent Titanic on its first voyage across the Atlantic. More than 1,200 persons perished when a long sliver of steely ice slit open the bowels of that gay and crowded ship in a mist-shrouded midnight of the north Atlantic. It had been boasted that the ship was unsinkable, that its great hull might be punctured but water-tight doors would slam to and confine the invading sea to small compartments while life went on aboard the big vessel with hardly so much as a ripple of disturbance among the passengers. Conscious of these claims, those responsible for the safe transit of the ship to America gave scant heed to repeated warnings that icebergs were encroaching upon the sea lanes in unusual numbers. What of it? The Titanic was unsinkable. Even if she struck one of the big bodies of floating ice she would suffer no more than a damaged hull that could easily be repaired. Such an accident might serve to establish her safety beyond doubt to the advantage of patronage. However, the carelessness promoted by a sense of mechanical security and not a contempt for actual contact with a berg was responsible for the little concern that was paid the radioed warnings.

Along about midnight came a cry from the lookout. A luminous mass had erected itself out of the darkness directly in the path of the speeding ship. From the bridge the engine room telegraph signaled frantic orders for full speed astern. The big hull slid ahead with diminishing speed in the thrashing waters. A long quiver ran through the ship and she came to a stop, backing away from the obstruction. Officers ran below to see what damage had been done. Water was reported to be pouring in the hull and big bulkhead doors slammed to. For a while there was a sense of relief. Passengers awakened by the loss of motion or the tremor of the impact asked questions and were reassured by the officers. But it began to be apparent that all was not right. Reports came from below that the closed bulkhead doors were not keeping out the water which was rising in the hold at an alarming rate. The ship was settling perceptibly by the bows. From that moment on what had been gaiety became a scene of ghastly terror and insane bedlam. There were not enough boats for the passengers. The ship was unsinkable; why carry boats? Screams, wails, shouts, curses. Men and women trampling each other on the watery decks in a frenzy of mob terror. The ship's radio crackling out frantic appeals from star lit masts. The ship's band, knee deep in chilly water, playing "Nearer My God to Thee" with religious fervor. Then the sea peopled with living and dead and dying. Boats, crowded with survivors pushing hurriedly out of the whirlpool that was starting about the sinking ship. The great stern, with its flashing screws, lifting against the grim background of the iceberg. Volcanic mushrooms of steam and fire gushing out of the hold as the boilers let go. Then a vast gurgle of the sea as the black wreck slipped down in a rain of wreckage from the explosion that kicked up little white geysers in the dark water.

The ship that would not sink had been sunk by carelessness and one of those accidents that invariably overtake carelessness. Instead of sitting only one segment of the hold, as the boat of its safety counted upon, a long knife of ice, sharp as a giant razor, had ripped a gash under the sea halfway along one side so that the bulkhead doors were useless.

The story has been the basis of innumerable sermons and lectures, while the tragedy itself caused the establishment of the international iceberg patrol which keeps a sharp watch upon the movement of ice across the north Atlantic sea lanes and warns ships of its presence. There will not likely be another monumental tragedy such as the Titanic disaster, but there will be the constant threat of tragedy in other fields where a false dependence upon mechanical security breeds contempt for danger.

It is not known what caused the Morro Castle fire. Lightning may have struck an oil tank. A passenger may have thrown a lighted cigarette into inflammable furnishings. But whatever the cause, if humanly possible, it should be established and the lesson that it teaches should be utilized in precaution against the repetition of such a disaster among other ships.

Suggestion of Prosperity

The good business influence of a good football team was pointed out by Mitt Williams, manager of the J. C. Penney company store here, at the meeting of the Boosters the other night. He said that the enthusiasm prompted by a winning team and the community sense of proprietorship that such a team establishes helps business wonderfully. It is in the blood of people to like a champion. They enthrone over a cause that is, so to speak, a "going concern." A failure or a listless effort doesn't inspire them. The best leaders are men and women who personify or otherwise cast into tangible form the ideal of success, of motion, of getting somewhere. A dead Main street, a slovenly front of business houses, unkempt dwellings and alleys and lots—these do not inspire the invigorating sense of prosperity. Whatever form it takes, the suggestion of activity, the thought of success, ought always to be held out as a community suggestion.

LOCKED OUT

Speakership Race Boils Down to Ford and Stephenson

By RAYMOND BROOKS

Rep. J. B. Ford of McLennan county, only one of the four early candidates for speaker who declined to sign a petition presented them to urge Speaker Coke Stevenson to run against them next year, will "make medicine" at the democratic state convention in Galveston, attended by nearly all the new nominees to the 44th legislature. At present, the speakership race promises to be three-cornered, with Stevenson an assured candidate for a second term in the chair, Ford of McLennan and Albert G. Walker of Vernon. Walker has reached no final decision and may decide if Stevenson pledges large numbers of his colleagues, to stay on the sidelines. Two others, W. E. Jones of Jourdanton and R. Emmett Morse of Houston, originally announced agreed that if Stevenson makes the race, they will stay out.

It all boils down to a contest between Ford and Stevenson. Stevenson, in the opinion of every member, has made the house an outstanding speaker. He is regarded by his colleagues as perhaps the ablest speaker in decades. His two term speakership ambition goes back to a precedent early in the days of statehood. He has signed goodly numbers of the returning membership. So Mr. Ford took an outstanding place in the race when he announced last year and stuck to it against the proposals that everybody jump out of the way in favor of returning the present speaker.

In a house roll-call to show who will go to the Galveston convention Mr. Stevenson did not register his intention. Mr. Ford already had planned to be three and to contact every new legislator present.

It has been pointed out the race will be decided by the 65 new members who come into the house in January.

Last year, Mr. Stevenson won by about 10 votes over Rep. A. P. Johnson of Carrizo Springs, at the close of an intense campaign.

The incoming administration then indicated clearly its support for Stevenson, and helped him win.

Rep. Ford's ability as a legislator is recognized by the entire membership. Speaker Stevenson has appointed him to many major committee assignments, and to important places on conference committees which really determine the outcome of all major legislation. Ford is popular with all the old members.

by keeping the feast a month later, and by continuing a week longer than the usual one week. Yet this great religious celebration is represented as a good move for the nation. Jehovah accepted this good intention of the people.

We need clear thinking in all our decisions, political, social, and religious. Of course thinking must find expression in aggressive action or it does the thinker little good and his fellow men to boot. But there is as much disaster in the world from acting right without thinking as there is in thinking right without acting. The right action might be only what is right in our eyes and might be far short of the great standard of right. This is a good reason for doing things, not only because they are right, but for doing them "in such sort as it is written."

LETTERS FROM READERS

Editor, Daily News,

Dear Sir:-

The environment of humanity largely shapes the life of the individual. Such is the belief of our most eminent sociologists, in fact some writers go so far as to discount to a large extent all hereditary influences. To this the writer does not assent, but that environment largely influences us for weal or for woe, we must all agree. Such being the case, man's life in his attempts to so ele-

BEACH CLUB GIRL

BEGIN HERE TODAY
BOOTS RAISED IN MARRIAGE
RUSSELL LIND, handsome swimming instructor, because she doesn't want to face her parents' disappointment on learning she has been snatched by the younger set of Larchneck, fashionable New York suburb.

Russ goes to Miami, promising to send for Boots later. She gets a job in a big department store and takes a tiny room in Greenwich Village. She becomes ill with influenza and is befriended by DENIS FENWAY, young author. Fenway sees that Boots has a doctor and nurse and begs her not to worry about expense. After she recovers he asks her to tea at his apartment. There she meets beautiful KAY CHILLINGFORD who has a possessive manner toward Denis.

Just before her illness Boots received a telegram telling her Russ has been killed in a motorboat accident.
NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXVIII
THE routine of the shop began again. Hurry, hurry, hurry. Hurry to the street car, to the time clock, to the washroom. Hurry to lunch, hurry back. Boots' 19th birthday passed almost without notice. If she paused to think about the day at all it was to reflect that she felt at least 10 years older.

Occasionally she saw Denis. These were the bright spots in her life. Denis was working hard on the book. He gave himself a daily stint and kept to it religiously. And there were, of course, parties to distract him. So it was only a rare glimpse of his charmed life that Boots observed. Now and then he spoke fleetingly of Kay. She was going to be something or other in the Beaux Arts Pageant. Faywin was going to paint her. Faywin thought her exquisite. Or Kay was flashing off to Paris for a brief business trip. "She's a tremendously clever business person. You'd never suspect it," Denis said innocently.

Boots saw her name in the social lists. Miss Kathleen Chillingford. "Kay Chillingford swished into the Stork Club the other night, very o-o-l-a-l-a in a black net straight from the Rue de la Paix," wrote Willy Van Snydam in the Evening Streamer. Yes, Kay had a foot in both worlds. She was a success in business and a social light as well. It was merely because of this that Boots envied her. She assured herself of this fact a dozen times a day.

The Christmas rush was in full force now. The store was a nightmare of hurried clerks and frantic shoppers, ragged lists clutched in gloved fingertips. Extra clerks were hired; new stock was crowded in. You ran from one place to another like a driven thing.

Christmas came. The day was a ghastly one for Boots. She had bought a scarf and some gloves and sent them to her mother. Until the very last moment she had an expiring hope that her father would send for her, would ask her to come home for the holiday dinner. But Boots, was the nearest acquaintance, vate his mind, so that he may become a better man and a more desirable citizen, is a continual battle against his environment. The leaders of men have always been superior men, who by supernatural effort have raised themselves above their environment. In speaking of leaders we mean the men who have led their fellowmen in creating a better environment for society as a whole. These men, in raising themselves above their environment, realize that they have done something that cannot be expected of the average man—they are an exception to the rule—the average man will always be the creature of his environment.

The above paragraph is a prelude to a short article on the life and efforts of Upton Sinclair, who is largely now in the public eye as the democratic candidate for the position of governor of the state of California. Sinclair is a super-man and a leader of men. What he may accomplish is yet largely to be determined, but that he has a constructive program by thinking men cannot be necessary in an emergency or in the interim of a change between economic systems, but publication is a damnable thing and cannot be excused in an enlightened society. It will break down the morale of any citizenship and lead to a lower and lower degree of social degradation. Sinclair believes that man was intended to earn his daily bread, such was the intention of his Creator, and it is the duty of our organized society to see that he has the opportunity to earn his living. Man has created the machine, where by the production of plenty has become an easy matter, but the private ownership of the machine is starving man to death. The only solution is the public ownership of the machine, guaranteeing an equitable share in its production to all of mankind. "Rugged individualism" built the machine, but public cooperation must operate it for the benefit of society and such is Upton Sinclair's idea. Let us watch this man and his efforts. He is facing formidable opposition. The old order dies hard. It is reluctant to give up its throne. "Mankind has always crucified its saviors." Let us hope we will learn to recognize them while living, and co-operate with them in their efforts to make

"Thy kingdom come they will be on earth as it is in Heaven".

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SERVICE
"Man" was the subject of the lesson-sermon read in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, September 9.
The golden text was: "As many are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God" (Romans 8:14).

Among the citations which comprised the lesson-sermon was the following from the Bible: "So created man in his own image, the image of God created he him" (Genesis 1:27).
The lesson-sermon also included the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "God taught but one God, one Spirit, one makes man in the image and likeness of himself, of spirit, not of matter. Man reflects Infinite Truth, Love, and the nature of man, as understood, includes all that is implied by the terms 'image of God' (Genesis 1:27)."

Through the Editor's Spectacles

By GEORGE

Nick Miller stands beaming these days at the front of Miller-Lauderdale, gazing upward upon a new neon sign that beckons business with a suggestion of the old Broadway transparency. The sign has been up only a few days and its newness will not wear off for Nick for many, many more. It is an event when Nick buys. He usually sells. The day it was being hoisted aloft, Nick stood on the sidewalk jealously guarding it and steering off curious with nervous warnings they might break the glass tubes. These drew respectful distances.

A moment later, out of the Cisco Banking company where he is cashier, blundered Nick's technically silent partner, Dick Lauderdale. Opposite the sign said partner tripped a foot. When he was taken out of the previous contraption, the "and part of the "store" was missing.

Remarked Fred Grist when the lamentation was under control: "If it ever comes a hail in this town, two things are going to be broken—that sign and Nick Miller's heart."

The lubricating qualities of water are quite outside my chemical ken, but I can't deny that they have practical effects on some ordinary slow-moving things. I believe it can safely be said that nothing in the world can put so much energy into the catterine of this community as a clap of thunder and a spray of rain.

Back at one of the machines upon which this is composed into type sits "Brick", a name conveniently shortened from W. D. Brecheen. "Brick" owns a couple of hundred or so of fine Hereford cattle, and the problem of getting grass for them had furnished his anxious brow until it resembled the pattern of tracks that mother's "dominecker" hens used to make in the fine dust about the kitchen steps. Under the weight of anxiety he sat and pondered.

But Saturday, those furrows had dissolved into the blandness of a great peace. It thundered and a spray of glittering rain flashed through the open window. "Brick" was so excited that he changed magazines on his machine with the energy of a young athlete who didn't know what to do with his strength. The rain grew in volume and so did "Brick's" enthusiasm. By Sunday morning, after seven-tenths of an inch had fallen, he was making plans to get more cattle.

Such is the effect that rain has upon the west Texas spirit.

But they varied from the instructions by allowing many who had not made proper prepara-

BRAZIL SHIFTS SOCIAL CENTER WITH EMBASSY

By HARRY W. FRANTZ
United Press Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON, Sept. 10. - Brazil's recent purchase of a new embassy building at 3,000 Massachusetts avenue swayed the social scales toward that fashionable neighborhood in a long-continued rivalry for residential "balance of power" between two districts.

Behind the Scenes in Washington

BY RODNEY DUTCHER NEA Service Staff Correspondent WASHINGTON—Don't be surprised at anything that happens in this cockeyed situation involving General Johnson and the NRA.

THAT desire is so strong that the picturesque administrator's ambitions for an indefinite tenure are doomed.

HOOKS AND SLIDES

NEW YORK—Curt Montgomery, who spun these spinners for Columbia (ask Stanford), is going to spin 'em for the Brooklyn club of the National Football League this fall.

BETTERS on the sidelines here are laying wagers as to whether the president will be able to sidetrack the general with saving of face for everybody.

NEW YORK—Curt Montgomery, who spun these spinners for Columbia (ask Stanford), is going to spin 'em for the Brooklyn club of the National Football League this fall.

Each fall brings a new parade of stars, for the market for bum bonds isn't what it used to be. It's either wrestling or football for many of the more robust varsity men.

PASSION PLAY IN PICTURES COMING HERE

SISTER MARY'S RECIPES

BY MARY E. DAGUE NEA Service Staff Writer CHICKENS are at their best and cheapest at this season, so why not take advantage of the situation to give the whole family an unexpected treat?

If you cook a young roasting chicken with vegetables in casserole, you can send the whole thing to the table in one dish and save effort in cooking, serving and cleaning up.

One three-pound chicken, 1 tablespoon minced onion, 1 clove garlic, 2 tablespoons butter, 4 cups chopped tomatoes, 2 cups diced Italian squash, 2 cups potato marbles, 1-2 cup green peas.

CHICKEN A LA VOGLIAZZO One three-pound chicken, 1 tablespoon minced onion, 1 clove garlic, 2 tablespoons butter, 4 cups chopped tomatoes, 2 cups diced Italian squash, 2 cups potato marbles, 1-2 cup green peas.

All Styles of Football Are Likely to Be Seen Among Oil Belt Teams This Year

By FRANK LANGSTON Fans of the Oil Belt will be all in a muddle as to the style of football played in the district when the season opens this week.

with two linebackers, two halfbacks, and a safety—while others will use a 6-3-2. Classifying the offensive systems is more of a job, however, for there will likely be about as many as there are teams.

Tomorrow's Menu BREAKFAST: Baked apples, cereal, cream, crisp broiled bacon, graham and raisin muffins, milk, coffee.

Concordia Pudding One roasting chicken, 6 ears corn, 1 cup diced celery, 1 small onion, 2 sprigs parsley, 1-3 cup melted butter, 3 eggs, 1 cup chicken broth, 1-2 cup flour, salt and pepper.

CHICKEN WITH DUMPLINGS This is a simple and very appetizing way to cook and serve a chicken. Clean and disjoint chicken and cook in water to more than cover until tender.

Combination Coach Red Petty at Eastland will probably use a punt formation and a double wingback as a basis for his offense.

Ranger is another team that has the dopsters guessing. Reputed to have a powerhouse, inasmuch as only four lettermen, two regulars, were lost, the Bulldogs should be able to go along under almost any system.

Notre Dame Style Coming home to Cisco, the fans will be interested in the new Lobo machinery and the way it works.

Suicide Leap of Nine Childless Chinese Brides May Mean End of Ancient Custom

By DON KING United Press Staff Correspondent HWEI, Sept. 10 — Nine young Chinese girls who roped themselves together and leapt into the sea from the wall of Hwei, died as martyrs to one of the world's most fantastic customs.

Only on the "Festival of Tsh Chao" on the seventh day of the Seventh Moon, when two legendary Chinese lovers cross the Milky Way for their annual reunion, are childless wives permitted reunion with their husbands.

The last similar suicide pact was several decades ago. According to one of the oldest residents of Hwei, 16 girl brides filed the ultimate protest against this unnatural custom by diving together in a leap from the same wall to the same spot of the sea-washed rocks.

Of the nine girls who died together in this last tragedy, seven were blood sisters and cousins. They made elaborate preparations for carrying out the fateful pact.

This year it appears to be Cisco again. Coach Chapman brought it here in 1924 and later abandoned it, only to have Coach Curtis pick it up at Ranger.

One of the fundamentals of it is the backfield step-shift. Last year Coaches Shelley and Hodges used plays from the Notre Dame box and the short punt formation but did not include the shift.

same material, the same cut, same color. Stealing furtively to their homes at night, they met the moon-thrown shadows of the city's North Gate. There they danced their death robes.

China has progressed rapidly towards freedom and personal independence of the western world in the 15 years since the last martyrs to Hwei's cruel tradition died.

For the Tangpu, local branch of the Kaumintang Chinese national party, takes a grave view of the tragedy. It has instructed the city magistrate to employ all means to combat the ancient custom of separating married couples. It suggested by the Tangpu that punishment be meted out to the parents of the girls who figured in the suicide pact, as an example of continued observance of tradition.

DECATUR, Ind., Sept. 10 — An oriole's nest woven entirely of twine was found by Willis Foxworth here. The nest is about six inches long and three inches in diameter. At every turn the cord is cleverly tied to make an extremely strong nest.

MISS HELEN HICKS rose to the supreme heights of golf to win the women's championship of the U. S. A frequent smoker while on the fairways, Miss Hicks tells below how she guards against fatigue.

"Get a LIFT with a Camel!" HELEN HICKS tells her way of regaining youthful energy!

TENNIS STAR, Ellsworth Vines, Jr. says: "Camels have a refreshing way of bringing my energy up to a higher level. They take away that tired feeling." OLYMPIC DIVER, "When I'm tired," says Georgia Coleman, "I smoke a Camel and soon feel like myself again. I like their mildness and different flavor."

"The strain of championship golf puts a tremendous tax upon your energy," says Miss Helen Hicks, "but I can always restore my energy quickly with a Camel. It's a 'lift' that I enjoy often, as I can smoke Camels constantly without a sign of jangled nerves."

CAMEL ALL TOBACCO MEN KNOW "Camels are made from finer, more expensive tobaccos—Turkish and Domestic—than any other popular brand."
