Legislature Passes 2 Measures Saturday

AGREES UPON TAX POLICY, RIVER BILLS

AUSTIN, Nov. 10.—Two bills were finally enacted by the Texas legislature at its fourth special session today.

The senate adopted a three-conference report on the Hornby-Hughes bill setting up a permanent policy of discounts and penalties for tax payments. The house adopted it yesterday.

The Colorado river authority bill also was finally enacted today when the house voted to 73 to 39 to accept the same bill approved yesterday by the senate with only one dissenting vote.

Both house and senate recessed until 7 p. m. tonight. The constitutional limit of the session's midnight hour.

Opponents of the Colorado bill charged that under it are W. R. Morrison, San Antonio capitalist and second largest contributor to the Democratic campaign fund, will make a profit of $1,555,000 as a result of negotiations with receivers for the old dam.

"Teapot dome was bad; this is rotten," shouted Rep. J. C. Duvall of Fort Worth.

"It was conceived in iniquity and born in sin," said Rep. Penrose Metcalfe of San Angelo.

Final action on the bill practically cleared the docket today.

WORLD PEACE PLANS LACKS UNITY 16 YEARS AFTER ARMISTICE

By HARRY W. FRANTZ, United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—Sixteen years ago tomorrow at 5 a. m., two German delegates entered a railway coach in the Compiegne Forest and signed the armistice which led to cessation of fighting at 11 a. m., the same day. Then the world relaxed after its first universal war.

The Allied success at the same time was attributed to the unity of command and co-ordination of efforts.

The world peace movement on the present Armistice anniversary lacks the unity and centralization which had brought success to the allied arms, but scattered efforts are made on many public "fronts" and through diverse instruments to consolidate world opinion against a future war.

The sentimental optimism that the World War had ended war long since has disappeared but a decade of efforts nevertheless has suggested many diplomatic, political and economic approaches to the peace problem, which were not apparent when statescraft failed in 1914.

Despite strain in Eastern Europe, Manchuria, and the Chaco region of South America, developments in the last year have evolved new lines of procedure in future campaigns for peace.

In the realms of diplomacy, the outstanding events in the 16th year after the World War had their origin in the American republics. The Montevideo conference at the end of 1933 led to a great appreciation in the international legal rights of small nations, and the United States became a party to treaties eliminating any legal or claim to intervention in the internal or external affairs of other nations.

Among political efforts to preserve peace, the most original recent attempt has been the effort of the Senate Committee investigating the munitions trade to mobilize world public opinion in favor of some rational control of the arms trade.

Although the ultimate results of the investigation are not yet determined, the world has been informed more fully than ever before of the profit-making aspect of the international trade in death-dealing arms.

In the economic sphere, the world sentiment for peace has exerted sufficient influence to prevent recourse to force in obtaining financial settlements during the catastrophic period of the depression.

Regarding the world as a whole, the greatest economic threat to international tranquility—if not peace itself—has arisen from the disorderly status of exchange rates, which has enabled arbitrary control of currency values to be exerted as a device in obtaining international trade advantages. This situation ensued from the widespread abandonment of the international gold standard.

The inherent weakness of the world peace movement—its lack of unity and co-ordination—has been remedied in small degree, some observers think, by the rapid improvement in international press facilities.

Frank P. Graham, president of the University of North Carolina was named chairman.

Rattler And Hawk Fight To A Draw

FORT DAVIS, Nov. 10.—A large rattlesnake lost a battle with a hawk near here recently, but the bird was unable to make off with the prize.

Epy Miller, rancher, reported that the hawk carried the wriggling snake into the air, but he could not make headway on a straight flight and dropped the reptile.

Miller said the snake was 30 inches long.

Eccles Named Head Of Reserve Board

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—President Roosevelt today appointed Marriner S. Eccles of Utah as governor of the Federal Reserve board effective as of today.

Boys Bag Bobcat With Slingshots

QUANAHA, Nov. 10.—Armed with ordinary "bean shooters", two Quanhana boys bagged a bobcat four miles northwest of here.

The cat was sighted in the top of a tree. A well-aimed pebble from the sling struck him in the eye and he fell to the ground. He sought refuge in a hole but the boys drove him out and beat him to death with stones and sticks. The cat weighed almost 20 pounds.

Bobcats are sighted occasionally in Hardeman county, but rarely is one reported killed.

Wild Life Studied Through Windows

ALPINE, Nov. 10.—School children on the Kokernot ranch, 15 miles north of here, don't have to leave their books to study wild life—they simply gaze out of the school room windows.

The ranch is located in the heart of the Davis mountains and is ideally situated for wild animals. Deer in herds of 15 to 20 animals stroll by the schoolhouse. Squirrel play in an orchard nearby. Panthers have been seen on the ranch.

Martha Anderson is the teacher, and conducts classes of Mary Ann Kokernot and two Mexican girls.

The Clew of the Forgotten Murder

BEGIN HERE TODAY
 When CHARLES MORDEN, reporter for The Blade, is found dead DAN BLEEKER, publisher, employs SIDNEY GRIF, famous criminologist, to solve the murder. Morden had been investigating the affairs of FRANK B. CATHAY, wealthy and prominent, following the arrest of an impostor claiming to be Cathay and accompanied by a girl called MARY BRIGGS.

The day following Morden's death Cathay dies of poisoning. Griff learns Morden had visited the apartment of ALICE LORTON, pretty and unemployed. He confronts Alice with KENNETH BOON's account of the pair of killing Morden, and they are arrested.

MRS. BLANCHE MALOGE, for whom MRS. CATHAY and CARL RACINE, detective in her employ, have been searching, is located but refuses to talk.

Griff and Bleeker go to the hotel where Mary Briggs, now known as Stella Mockley, is staying. They find CHARLES FISHER, Cathay's lawyer, there. Fisher questions the girl.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXXVII
 FISHER'S voice rose belligerently. "Go on!" he said. "Come clean — who was that friend?" "All I know," the girl said, "is that it was someone who was called Frank."

"You're lying," Fisher told her. "You know more than that. Who was that friend?" "Just Frank."

Her eyes refused to meet those of the attorney.

"Who... was... that... friend?" Fisher said with slow insistence.

She raised her eyes to his, said desperately, "I can tell you this much, but he told me that he'd find me and kill me if I ever told anyone."

"Never mind that," Fisher said. "What is it you're going to tell me?"

"I can tell you," she said, "that Frank lived at Riverview."

"That he lived in Riverview?" "Yes."

"How do you know?" "Because of the telephone calls."

"What telephone calls?" "A telephone call that the man put through from my room here in the hotel."

"When did he put it through?" "Just last night."

"And he called this person in Riverview?" "Yes."

"Do you know the number?" "Yes," she said in a voice that was almost inaudible.

"What was that number?" "The number," she said, "was the number of Mr. Cathay's residence. I took occasion to look it up in the book. Then after I found it out I got frightened. I thought that perhaps it was something that was a lot more serious than I had at first thought. I didn't know what to do. I was commencing to get suspicious of this man."

"He didn't continue to go under the name of Cathay after you found out about the impersonation?" Fisher asked.

"No," she said in a weak voice. "What was his name?" "Malone," she said. "His first name?" "Pete."

"Who else did he call besides Frank?" Did he seem to have any other person here in the city that he was reporting to?" "Yes."

"Who was it?" "A woman."

"Who was the woman?" "I think," she said, "it was his wife."

"What was her first name?" "Her first name was Blanche."

She gave a sigh, dropped forward in the chair and put her hands to her face.

The lawyer continued his aggressive cross-examination. "Where did this woman live?" he asked.

"I don't know," she said. "None of that," he told her, "or it's going to be just too bad."

She dropped her hands from her face, jumped to her feet, screamed at him, "I don't know! I don't know! I don't know! I tell you I don't know! Don't you stand there and tell me I lie!"

Fisher stepped forward, put a heavy hand on her shoulder, pushed her back into the chair.

"Sit down," he said, "and tell me where this woman lives."

The girl pressed her lips together in stony silence.

"Go on," the lawyer said. "I'm waiting."

"I told you I don't know," she said doggedly.

"You're either going to tell us where that woman lived," said Fisher, "or you're going to go to jail."

"I think," Bleeker interrupted, "we may be able to..."

Griff whirled and clamped his hand on the publisher's arm.

"Keep out of it," he said.

"Go on," Fisher said, staring steadily at Stella Mockley. "You've got your chance—either take it or leave it."

"I've already told you," she said. "I don't know."

Fisher strode across the room to the telephone, jerked the receiver off the hook with an air of brisk finality.

"I want," he said, "to talk with police headquarters."

The girl gave a half scream, stared at him with eyes that were wide and round.

"Out on Elm street," she said. "922 East Elm street."

The attorney spoke suavely into the telephone.

"Never mind," he said. "I wanted to try and find out about a parking tag I received, but I guess I had better call in person."

He dropped the receiver back on its hook and turned to the girl.

"That's better," he said. "Now I want you to understand one thing. If you hold out on me on anything—I don't care how little it is or how trivial it is—you're going to go right to jail. Do you understand that?"

"Yes," she said, "I do now."

Literature And The Average Man

What opinion of literature has the man in the street? Which parts of it please him most? Material toward an answer has recently been provided by the readers of an English daily newspaper whose public is chiefly drawn from the working classes.

These readers have been seen selecting what they consider to be the finest and most appealing sentence in the English language and their choice has ranged from Shakespeare and Burns and the Bible to a passage of Sir William Temple's comparing human existence, in the manner of Ecclesiastes, with a "froward child."

Only rarely does the choice appear to have been dictated by admiration for the pithy expression of a sentiment whose validity would gain the general suffrage. One such selection is Burn's "Man's inhumanity to man makes countless thousands mourn"; and another is Shakespeare's phrase about finding sermons in stones, and good in everything. Most people, however, fixed on such passages as, "Or ever the silver cord be loosed, or the golden bowl be broken"; and Wordsworth's "Whose dwelling is the light of setting suns"; and Shakespeare's "Gilding pale streams with heavenly alchemy."

These latter hold perhaps the distinguishing mark of the highest literature, whose chief appeal lies, not in direct assertions, but in suggestions of a beauty not otherwise to be ensnared in words.

Moratorium On RFC Loans

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation, acting to ease the burdens of debtors and expand credit, has decreed a virtual five-year moratorium on the repayment to it of many loans.

Laying down a policy that "leniency be granted to all borrowers," Jesse H. Jones, RFC chairman, directed that in cases where the corporation's security will not suffer and where such action is desired, "extensions" be granted for as much as five years from next Jan. 31.

Mr. Jones told newspaper men that repayments of RFC loans are proceeding at such a rate as to indicate a continuance of liquidation.

"We should rather," he explained, "that debtors use some of their money for current purposes, and to that end we shall aid in refinancing their short term loans into five year paper."

In a note sent to all managers of the RFC loan agencies, Mr. Jones said: "Partial payments are preferable but forced liquidation is not in the interest of recovery, and we wish to be as helpful as possible to our borrowers in meeting their obligations of citizenship, as well as to play their debts to the corporation."

This policy is of a kind with the recent decision directing federal bank examiners to ease their stringent examination of banks, some of which complained they dared not lend except on a most conservative basis.

Japanese Folkways

When a Japanese feels cold he spreads both hands over the stove, whereas westerners start to warm their feet first. When a Japanese is very sad he bends his head on his chest, whereas foreign western custom is to let the head fall back upon the shoulder.

When a Japanese meets a friend with his wife, he greets the husband first, whereas according to western custom, the wife is greeted first.

When a Japanese invites a friend to a dinner party he always takes the last seat as host, whereas according to western custom the host takes the best seat at the head of the table.

In Japan when a husband, wife, and child go for a walk, the wife generally carries something and follows her husband. In foreign countries it is the husband who pushes the perambulator with the baby inside and follows his wife.

When a Japanese receives a present from a friend he never opens it in the presence of the donor, but according to western custom the parcel containing the present is opened at once.

In Japan many men are to be seen with closely cropped hair.

When twins are born to a Japanese family, the last one born is the elder, whereas according to western custom the first one born is the elder.

Some people repent because their sins are found out.

Some people begin to talk when they run out of something to say.

Most people are not wealthy enough to do wrong.

Remember that the other fellow is as busy as you are.

It is not devout to pray for what you shouldn't have.

A Postman's Lot Is Not A Happy One

UNDER THE DOME AT AUSTIN

By GORDON K. SHEARER United Press Staff Correspondent AUSTIN, Nov. 10 — The house leader for a Texas Centennial tax and the man who was its most outspoken opponent were seatmates in the legislature. W. T. Savage of Dallas and D. A. V. Shannon of Fort Worth were in the legislature through the session in this juxtaposition without once losing their tempers or their mutual esteem.

Rep. J. C. Duvall of Fort Worth, chairman of the house committee on revenue and taxation had his name first on the Centennial tax bill. When he spoke for 38 minutes on a point of order, Centennial advocates accused him of filibustering against his own bill. They changed their tune when he came back with a strong plea for its passage.

Billboards on the University of Texas campus urging co-eds to smoke more cigarettes were pictured to the legislators as a possibility under a proposal to let the state lease roads, grounds and building locations for advertising and give the funds to a Centennial celebration.

Some members went further and questioned the propriety of placing a well known bull and heifer sign on the University campus.

"I am sure the Texas company would pay a good price to have a Texaco star and their advertisement in neon lights on top of the state capitol," suggested Rep. Hatold Kayton of San Antonio.

Kayton, who made a fortune in outdoor advertising and retired, was a chief foe against placing sign boards on State highways. Supporting him against this "step backwards" was Rep. H. L. McKee, of Fort Arthur, who still is engaged in outdoor advertising.

W. W. Fitzwater of Bonham, a representative-elect, has a plan to end the depression. He is mailing it to those who will be his fellow members in the 44th legislature. He told the 43rd legislature about it in a speech. The nibbin seemed to be to raise the price of farm products. His description of the depression was: "We were going along at high speed then we had a flat tire. The way to get going again is to take the depression out of the flat tire." he said.

Frank Putnam, one-time candidate for the democratic nomination for governor, has turned Republican. "The New Deal," he writes, "is crucifying the cotton South and raising hell generally with business throughout the country."

A combination of Tammany grafters, millennialists and matinee idols now are in control at Washington," is his complaint.

Putnam, who has been in St. Louis for some time, has removed to Houston. A cold winter will not bother G. A. Atkinson of Sherman, assistant doorkeeper of the Texas house of representatives. Members remembered his 77th birthday and presented him a fine overcoat. The assistant doorkeeper of the house, accepting, expressed the hope that he become an assistant to St. Peter and let house members through the Pearly Gates. They deserve it, he said.

Robert I. Wells, who handles the complications of intrastate railroad rates like simple addition or multiplication, is giving up his state duties on Nov. 15. He has been cleared for rate expert by Port Beaupre. He was not an applicant for the post but was picked from 36 experts under consideration.

Did You Ever Stop To Think

By Edson R. Waite Shawnee, Oklahoma

The parking problem in the downtown districts of the average city gets worse instead of better. Most business streets are lined with automobiles during business hours, which makes it exceedingly difficult for those who go to town to trade. In fact, it drives business from downtown districts to suburban stores where plenty of parking space can be found. It's a fine thing, of course, for the suburban stores.

Most cities have some kind of ordinances about parking in business sections—a time limit—but they are lax in enforcement. The worst offenders are the businessmen themselves.

Yes, parking is one of the greatest problems in the downtown districts. All ordinances should be enforced. It would not be a bad idea to pass a new ordinance that any merchant or employee who parks his car over fifteen minutes in front of his own place of business receive a jail sentence instead of a fine. This would relieve the situation in most cities.

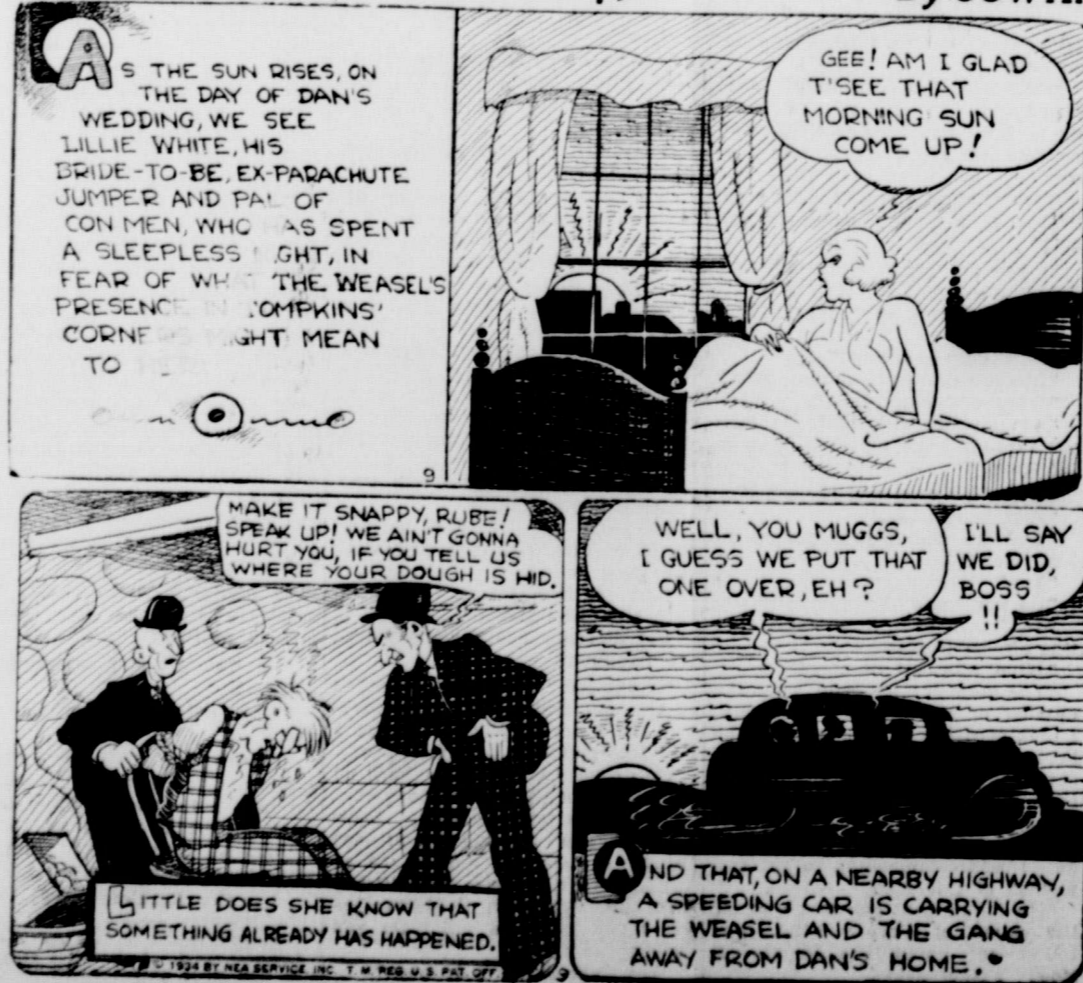

Play Series Aids In Morale of City

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Nov. 10 — There is an element of psychology in the city park and recreation board's dramatic activities.

Mrs. Estelle B. Marlowe, dramatics supervisor of the board, has planned for a series of plays to be presented during the winter at community houses in the city parks. The board believes that the proper type of plays will have an uplifting effect upon the citizenry — both by general moral influence and by the personal influence upon the characters themselves.

Gov't Planning To Confiscate Farm

FORT WORTH, Nov. 10 — The U. S. Attorney Clyde Eastus announced today he would file proceedings to confiscate a farm two miles south of Abilene on which C. Bloss was convicted of conducting illicit liquor trade.

Bloss was convicted yesterday in Abilene of violating the liquor tax act and given five year sentence. Eastus said testimony showed that Bloss supplied liquor dealers in 30 counties with corn whiskey in bonded liquor bottles which bore counterfeit labels.

MARRIAGE IS TRAGEDY FOR MANY WOMEN DALLAS, Nov. 10 — Marriage may be bliss for thousands of people, but it is stark tragedy for 1,600 women in Dallas county.

That is the number of wives in the county who have been deserted by their husbands. They were left to provide for 2,200 children, although often the mothers themselves have no means of support.

A great boon, Miss Douglas believes, would be the creation of a special domestic relations court, not attached with any other court, which have as its sole duty the looking after of unfortunate families which have been deserted by unfaithful husbands.

Such a court would be cheaper, she believes, and would do much to bring order and some measure of justice to this neglected field.

EXPEDITION TO SEEK PASS IN MOUNTAINS

MONTREAL, Nov. 10.—Charles C. Bedaux, sportsman and explorer, who failed in an attempt to blaze a new trail through the Rocky Mountains with a tractor expedition last month, will undertake the trek again, he said in an interview here.

Bedaux led a party of 36, including three women, through 960 miles of unknown territory between Fort St. John and Telegraph Creek, B. C., discovered a new pass in the mountains, but was forced to turn back when he had but 140 miles to go because of a run of bad luck.

The expedition left five caterpillar tractors behind. Two of them were smashed when they fell over a cliff, and a third was carried away by a turbulent river.

Bedaux blames the weather for the failure. The rain, he said, was so heavy that the expedition practically was swamped. Rafts had to be built for the motor tractors in order to cross flooded rivers.

Then 50 of the 130 horses taken along by the expedition developed hoof rot and had to be shot. The remaining horses were unable to carry the expedition's food and equipment, so Bedaux turned back rather than risk lives.

Bedaux said he would try the trip again within two years.

"I'll go through the next time," he said. "We have cut a six-foot trail for 960 miles. It will be easier then."

The three women members of the party, Mrs. Bedaux, Mme. Chiese and a maid said they enjoyed the trip despite the rough traveling, and plan to accompany Bedaux on his next attempt.

OUT OUR WAY

THE MEANING OF SERVICE

By FRANK L. TURNER
Pastor First Methodist Church

A woman once came to Jesus making a request that must have impressed him deeply. It was not a strange request, just that of a normal, ambitious mother who was greatly interested in the promotion of her sons. And I pause to pity the parents who are not concerned about the future of their child. It is one of the sad aspects of the complex life which we are living; too pre-occupied with material things to be very much interested in the spiritual advancement of children. This request was that her two sons should be granted the privilege of sitting the one on the right and the other on his left hand when he should come into his kingdom. The answer of Jesus is characteristic of his attitude toward the fundamental problems of life. Jesus answered: "It is not mine to give," and went on to explain that those places would be occupied by those for whom they were prepared by his Father, and gave the key to their possession in those rather striking words: "But whosoever will be great among you, let him be your minister, and whosoever will be chief among you, let him be your servant."

And Jesus touched the great fundamental principle of life: The road to greatness, along the path of character development and character is the product of self-forgetting service.

Whether we like to admit it or not, character is not a heritage, or jeany; it must be acquired. Man is born, neither moral or immoral, but un-moral. What he finally comes to be is the product of a life of right choices; of decisions as between self and others. And character can be rightly measured by the degree in which self is subordinated to the benefit of others. Service, self-sacrificing service, is the greatest single factor in character development.

Jesus, gave us the supreme example of service when, on the night of that last supper, he took a towel and basin and began the menial task of bathing his disciples' feet. That example constitutes a pretty accurate meter for us today. The question we ought to ask ourselves is, am I to be ministered unto, or to minister. Jesus gave the final answer. Go look it up, and be resolved to abide by his admonition. "There is a little couplet that ought to grace the office, or living room of every one of us it is this:

Lord, help me live from day to day
In such a self-forgetful way
That even when I kneel to pray,
My prayer shall be for others.

Help me in all the work I do
To ever be sincere and true
And know that all I'd do for you
Must needs be done for others.

Let 'Self' be crucified and slain
And buried deep; and all in vain
May efforts be to rise again,
Unless to live for others.

And when my work on earth is done

And my new work in heaven begun
Let this my motto be,
May I forget the crown I've won,
While thinking still of others.

Others, Lord, yes, others,
Help me to live for others,
That I may live for thee.

Soviet Announces New Dirigible Line

MOSCOW, Nov. 10.—One of the few commercial dirigible lines in the world will be opened early next year to span the 1,000 miles between Moscow and Sverdlovsk, in Central Asia.

Huge ships carry 18 passengers and mail, and will operate on a semiregular basis, making the trip from here to Central Asia in about 16 hours.

The ship, now under construction will have a gas capacity of 18,500 square meters, will be of a semi-rigid type, and will be powered by three motors of 250 horsepower each.

As the dirigible flights will be nonstop, only emergency landings are being provided. A mooring mast for the ship is being constructed at Sverdlovsk.

the behavior of any two valves of the heart," Davis continued.

"The current is amplified and sent through a galvanometer, the needle of which fluctuates with the current. The film, moving at the rate of two feet a second, registers in detail the action of the heart," told the meeting.

Human Heart Beat Recorded by Camera

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 10.—A camera which records pulsations of the human heart was demonstrated here at a conference of Homeopathic medical delegates.

Using a patient in a hospital here, G. Howlett Davis, Jr., of Detroit, inventor of the camera made photographs and explained workings of the machine.

"This little box," Davis said, "contains a sensitive button, which pulses in the heart when pressed against the chest. The vibrations are conveyed to a small laminated bar of ro-helle salts, which generates an electro-chemical current, commensurate with the heart action.

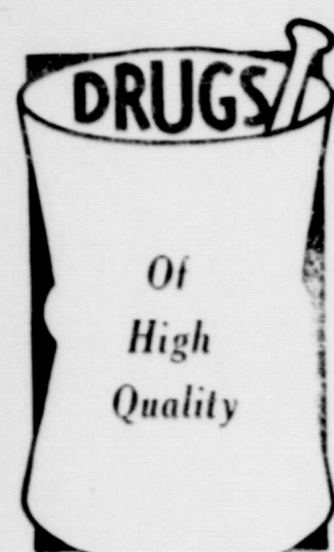

"The apparatus, which is equipped with double parts, can register simultaneously on the same film
