Ickes Sees Need For Federal Oil Control Legislation

SAYS ACTION NOW DEPENDS ON CONGRESS

BULLETIN
WASHINGTON, Jan. 8 — Legislation to prevent collapse of oil production control, threatened by the hot oil decision of the supreme court, was prepared today by Sen. Tom Connally, dem., Texas.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8 — Oil Administrator Harold Ickes today said the supreme court decision invalidating the hot oil provision of NIRA "emphasizes the necessity for special and adequate legislation for government control of the petroleum industry."

Indications were federal officials were considering a move to have Congress declare the industry a public utility and give the government complete control over production, refining and marketing. Admitting the adverse ruling of the court on section 9-C of NIRA "is a serious setback" Ickes said:

Rests With Congress

"While we intend to do the best we can, with the means still available to us, the basic remedy rests with Congress."

"The decision of the court, in my opinion, emphasizes the necessity for specific and adequate legislation to effect a rational conservation program designed to prevent the waste of oil and gas resources and to prevent the demoralization of one of our largest basic industries."

Rep. Wesley Disney, dem., Okla., considered introducing a house bill which would reenact, in accordance with the constitution, the provision declared invalid by the supreme court.

New Legislature Convenes For Vital Session

The Texas legislature today moved into the state capitol building at Austin, second in size only to the national capitol, to consider problems of greater variety and importance than any the body has yet been called upon to face. Action is anticipated promptly to halt natural gas wastage in the Panhandle. Oil operators have indicated that they will ask the lawmakers to take some action to prevent a "wide open" East Texas field, since the U. S. supreme court voided the federal control acts yesterday. Taxation, liquor laws, and other vital subjects demand early solution.

BOOSTERS TO HOLD MEETING HERE TONIGHT

W. H. Stanley of the Dallas Chamber of Commerce will be the principal speaker at the meeting of the Cisco Boosters at the Laguna hotel this evening. It has been announced.

Well known and liked here, Stanley recently held a business institute at the Cisco Chamber of Commerce building.

A large crowd is expected to attend the meeting and banquet, which will be held at 7 o'clock. The Boosters recently sponsored a banquet at which there was a capacity crowd.

The organization, formed in 1934 for the purpose of promoting and boosting Cisco, is being done through an advertising campaign through the working out of projects which will benefit the city and the comfort of motor travel abroad.

The national Junior Chamber of Commerce will send delegates to the meeting, which will be held at the Laguna hotel. It was announced here more favorable than ever before. Other junior chambers of commerce to send delegations will be Fort Worth, Breckenridge, Graham, Mineral Wells, and Weatherford. The West Ward Rhythm band will give several numbers at 8 o'clock. #### Two Students Hurt In Crossing Wreck

Two Randolph college students were injured yesterday afternoon in a train-automobile accident at the D Avenue-Texas and Pacific crossing as they returned to the city from the college. They were Miss Fern Warren and J. H. Latson, Jr., both of Cisco.

Miss Warren, daughter of Jay Warren, was reported this morning to be resting somewhat better after a sleepless night. She was suffering from shock and from deep gashes in her head and her right hand, besides minor cuts and bruises. She was thrown from the car.

Latson was able to leave his home this morning. He had a cut on the right knee and other scratches and bruises.

Latson, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Latson, Sr., who was driving the car, a Dodge coupe, said it was struck by the 4-20 eastbound Texas and Pacific passenger train.

Heard No Whistle

"I didn't hear a whistle," he said. "I looked up the track but couldn't see the train for the sun shining through the window."

"When we were on the tracks, I heard Fern scream, and saw that the train was almost upon us. I stepped on the gas to try to get across, but it hit us."

He said Miss Warren was thrown from the car. "I got out and put her in the car to take her to a doctor," he said, "but when it wouldn't start, put her into another car."

The Latson car was turned around and headed toward the college, inside the steel guards that separate the railroad property from the street. "The conductor of the train said it never struck us," Latson said, "but the damages to the car make it evident that it did."

Latson had left some companions in a Cisco barber shop and came to the college. He was bringing Miss Warren home when the accident occurred. Several people here were said to have seen the accident.

The car was badly damaged and a large hole torn in the right side of it.

PALSIED MAN SAYS GERMAN NEAR ESTATE

BULLETIN
FLEMINGTON, N. J., Jan. 8 — Joseph Perrone, who delivered a ransom note to Dr. J. F. Condon during the Lindbergh ransom negotiations today identified Bruno Hauptmann as the man who gave him the note for Jafis.

FLEMINGTON, N. J., Jan. 8 — Eighty-seven-year-old Mandus Hochmuth, placed a palsied finger on Bruno Richard Hauptmann today and identified him as the man with a ladder he saw near the Lindbergh estate a few hours before Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr., was kidnapped and murdered.

The aged and bewildered resident of the Sourland countryside walked across the tense and silent courtroom where Hauptmann is on trial for his life and laid a gnarled finger on the defendant's left knee. "That is the man," he said in a cracked voice. His attitude carried all the conviction he could muster.

"I saw his face like a man who had been a ghost. He was in a dirty green car. I saw part of a ladder."

First Surprise

Thus the state of New Jersey struck its first smashing surprise blow at the trial of the German carpenter who is charged with the murder of the infant son of Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh.

But the words of Hochmuth, who contended his eyes were good, failed to shake the prisoner. His stonelike face remained unchanged. Slowly he moved his head from side to side in a sign of denial. Otherwise he did not move a muscle.

The ancient Hochmuth testimony dropped two bombshells for the prosecution:

1—It was designed to place Hauptmann at the scene of the crime on the day of the crime, whereas he had denied he was in New Jersey at any time approximate to March 1, 1932.

2—It was designed to link him with the kidnap ladder.

PARIS LEARNS RIGHT DEFENSE FOR AIR RAIDS

By HAROLD EITTLINGER
United Press Staff Correspondent
PARIS, Jan. 8 — An officially sponsored pamphlet telling the people of Paris exactly what to do in case of an air raid is being sold by the thousand on all city newsstands.

Containing graphic and sometimes ominous illustrations, the book is prepared by the general secretariat for passive defense, a division of the prefecture of police, and is part of a campaign of education planned by the city of Paris. The city has also provided funds for the purchase of gas masks and other protective equipment, and is building a number of large shelters at various points throughout the city.

While the prefecture is organizing this campaign the National Union for Aerial Defense, a semi-official body, is training so-called monitors, who will direct the population in case of attack. Some 10,000 monitors are now being trained in cities throughout France and are organized in a military hierarchy with each prepared to do certain well-rehearsed jobs in case of a raid.

Rescue Exercises

The National recently carried out rescue exercises in Paris and plans others within the next few months.

Despite the careful instructions contained in the pamphlet, people are told at the outset that the best way to avoid danger during an air raid is to be somewhere else. This warning reads: "All means of defense will be brought into play to stop enemy planes. Nevertheless, some might pass. Don't wait for them to be above you. If nothing keeps you back, leave at the first serious threat. If you have relatives, family, a house or a cabin in the provinces, depart with your family. You can return when the danger is over. Don't load yourself down. Take only necessary food and clothing. Don't wait! Depart! To leave in time is to avoid the risk."

Next, underground shelters are described, and the reader is told how to prepare his in advance what food, medicine and clothing to place in it, and how to assure against fire or saturation with gas. One is then instructed on how to act if caught on the street by a raid, and warning is given that even if a shell bursts near one's temporary refuge he can still get away alive if he remains calm and follows instructions carefully.

Detailed information on how to act if one is gassed, burned or wounded follows. Most emphatic warning is given against panic. Victims of a raid are repeatedly cautioned against running or crying out.

STUDENTS AND RED SHIRTS IN MEXICAN WAR

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 8 — Passions aroused by the latest religious war in Mexico were at fever heat today and the city was heavily patrolled by police after a battle between students and red shirts in which at least five students were killed.

The disturbance began late last night and fighting continued until today. Five thousand students, after a big demonstration attacked and partly wrecked the headquarters of the red shirts, a fascist and anti-religious organization.

The student demonstration, held in the center of the city, was in protest against a recent riot in which five Catholics were killed and one red shirt lynched after the red shirts had attacked a Catholic congregation. Police made more than 20 arrests.

Shoot Five Ducks; Chase Down Sixth

Six ducks with one shot is the claim of Ernest Halkias of Eastland, Halkias said he shot five of the ducks outright, but had to "chase down" the sixth. The alleged shooting occurred recently on a Cisco lake.

This exploit tops that of K. H. Pittard and Oscar Clift, Cisco goose hunters, who are in the habit of chasing down their game with sticks. But then it occurred after the famed hit-and-run killing by the two and is a natural outgrowth.

East Texas Tomato Crop To Be Smaller

JACKSONVILLE, Tex., Jan. 8 — Tomato plantings in East Texas next spring will be 40 to 50 per cent below the 1934 acreage, according to a survey conducted by the Jacksonville Daily Progress.

There is due to the disastrous results of last season and the inability of growers to get financial assistance, the newspaper said.

The survey also indicated that Texas tomato growers are overwhelmingly opposed to government regulation of production and marketing.

Political uncertainties or currency fluctuations apparently interfered and through the working out of projects which will benefit the city and the comfort of motor travel abroad.

The national Junior Chamber of Commerce will send delegates to the meeting, which will be held at the Laguna hotel. It was announced here more favorable than ever before. Other junior chambers of commerce to send delegations will be Fort Worth, Breckenridge, Graham, Mineral Wells, and Weatherford. The West Ward Rhythm band will give several numbers at 8 o'clock. RANGER HALTS DEATH THREAT UPON ALLRED

AUSTIN, Jan. 5 — Ranger Walter Hale today arrested a motorist between Austin and Hutto on a description telephoned by a Mrs. Wilson of Taylor that she had heard the man, who had a Winchester rifle, threaten to come to Austin to kill Governor-elect James Allred.

Mrs. Wilson gave the warning when she arrived in Austin at the home of the Rev. Charles Robinson. Rev. Robinson at once notified Austin police, who notified rangers.

Mrs. Wilson told the Robinson family the man came into a filling station and luncheonette. He ordered a meal and began "raving," she said.

Allred had promised him a job and he hadn't gotten it, she quoted the man as saying. She said he announced he was going to Austin to kill Allred.

Women in the filling station called the proprietor, who attempted to reason with the stranger, and quiet him. The stranger then rushed out, got in his car and started toward Austin.

A man placed in Austin jail, said to be from Taylor, was described by police as "too drunk to talk."

BURNET, Tex., Jan. 8 — Acorns, formerly nothing but a waste product, are being used this year for hog feed.

Guthrie purchased 3,100 pounds of 60 cents per cwt. and reported that his hogs thrived on their new diet.

Other farmers took up the idea and now acorns are rapidly becoming a staple feed crop.

Labor Draft in Germany

Germany sees conscription into labor service corps begin for youths under 25. Recently employers have directed under heavy penalty to supply lists of all young employees. Those under 25 must give up their jobs to older men and go to the labor service camps, where the training, in addition to manual labor of every useful form, includes education in National Socialist ideals and ideas. As certain exemptions are allowed, the total number of youth affected is unknown — Chancellor Hitler maintains that through the labor service alone may enter by made to the community of the German nation.

Brazil's Maritime Strike

Brazil's merchant marine units lie idle in Rio de Janeiro's beautiful harbor in what is called South America's greatest strike. Syndicated maritime workers, from commanders to deck-swabbers, declare the tie-up will be enforced until their demand for higher wages is met. They estimate that 400,000 persons are on strike, but the Government says not so many are involved. The wharves pile up with mail bags for and from all parts of the world — When force produces suffering reason awakes and strike settlements get under way.

Canada's Business Gains

The beginning of 1935 sees Canada emerging triumphantly from its economic disabilities and setting some records over recent years. While many factors showed that the revival had commenced in 1933, the past year has gone far beyond it in practically every business and economic activity regarded as significant in a study of cyclical fluctuations. Out of the 94 factors considered in this connection only nine showed decline, while the others recorded gains amounting in some cases to more than 90 per cent. Most striking were the gains in Government bond prices and in productive operations. The former advanced to the highest point since the pre-war period, resulting in a marked betterment in the position of bondholders and creating conditions favorable to industrial production and to investment on a broader scale.

Paul Revere's Birthday

Boston and Massachusetts fittingly observe the 200th anniversary of the birth of Paul Revere. Governor Ely and Mayor Mansfield speak in Old North Church, in the belfry of which the lanterns hung that inspired the famous ride. In the Old State House are shown specimens of his work as silversmith, engraver, copper worker, gun maker and caster of cannon balls. He is credited with 43 trades and with making the copper sheathing for "Old Ironsides" and General Washington's false teeth. Not until Longfellow's poem in 1863 did the midnight ride emerge as his chief exploit — Paul Revere's greatness lay in meeting any need or emergency, whatever it changed to be.

Relief for Confederates

When any new tax revision plan is submitted to the voters as a constitutional amendment, it appears certain that temporary relief also will be asked for old Confederate pensioners. The pension fund, limited to a 7-cent tax, is insufficient now, but as the number of those on the rolls gradually declines, it again will be adequate. The state now is paying Confederate pension warrants only up through April 1933. Out of a revolving fund, it has been able to buy warrants, not discounted by the original holders, up through April, 1934. Until the past two years, the pension rolls have increased, due to broader admission of widows of veterans. The legislature also increased the amount of the pension paid to veterans and widows, until now the maximum check is $50 a month.

A five-year borrowing program probably would put this fund on cash and keep it there until lessened demands held disbursements within the 7-cent tax.

POLAND TO EYE NEIGHBORS AND STAND PAT DURING THIS YEAR

WARSAW, Jan. 8 — After a year of great activity, devoted to the promotion of normal relations with its immediate neighbors, Russia and Germany, the Polish Foreign Office is preparing for a period of comparative quiet in which to maintain and guard what has been achieved. The "back-to-normalcy - without-neighbors" movement, as it is referred to in Poland, was inaugurated by the appointment of Foreign Minister Joseph Beck, a close confidant of Marshall Pilsudski. Beck's predecessor, August Zaleski, was too closely connected with the Quay d'Orsay and the new foreign policy of Poland. Pilsudski decided that was to be conducted independently of, and if necessary even against, the wishes of Paris.

BAPTISTS INTERESTED IN THEIR PART IN EARLY TEXAS HISTORY

DALLAS, Jan. 3 — Baptists in Texas have a particular interest in the historical aspects of the approaching celebration of the Centennial of Independence in 1936 as it was in the blacksmith shop of a Baptist preacher that the Texas Declaration of Independence was signed March 2, 1836. The convention met in Washington, a small community on the Brazos river, and the best convention hall available to the delegates was the hope of the Rev. N. T. Byars.

Two Baptist preachers were among the men who met death with Pannin in the tragedy at Goliad.

Many of the early colonists were Baptists although, previous to the establishment of the Republic, all settlers were presumed to be Catholics, the official religion. Among Austin's famous first colony of 307 families in 1821-22, there were at least eleven Baptist families. Between 1822 and 1836, there were some twenty Baptist preachers in Texas and three Sunday schools and two churches.

Clad in buckskin and driving a team of oxen, the Rev. Joseph Bays, a hasty North Carolinian, in 1820 was the first Baptist preacher to appear in Texas. A few months later he held the first Baptist services in Texas at a two-story log house of Joseph Minds, near San Augustine.

In 1822, Freeman Smaller, another Baptist minister, carrying a rifle and a Bible, made his way on foot from New Orleans to the Red river settlement of Jonesboro, near the present town of Clarksville.

Sunday School in Cabin
 In a dirt-floored log hut with heavy logs for posts in San Felipe, in 1829, Thomas J. Pilgrim, a young college graduate, organized the first Baptist Sunday school in Texas.

Most unusual was Texas' first Baptist church, which actually migrated into Texas. The Rev. Daniel Parker of Illinois, while on a visit to Texas in 1832, constructed the Mexican colonization laws as forbidding the organizing of any other than a Catholic church but as not forbidding the "immigration" of one. He returned to Illinois, there organized his followers into a church and set out with them for Texas in wagons, holding services en route. In Claiborne Parish, La., seven additions were made to the wagon train church.

In Texas, the itinerants held services for over a year in Austin's colony, but with the gathering of clouds of the Texas Revolution, he moved to East Texas. There services were held in a territory embracing twenty counties, and nine churches eventually grew out of the organization.

In 1837, the famous Missionary Baptist church was organized in Washington-on-the-Brazos. The Old North church, near Waxco, Archer, had its beginnings when Ebenezer Isaac Rice preached when Ebenezer Isaac Rice preached when Ebenezer Isaac Rice preached...

2 LANGUAGES TO DIE WITH AGED INDIAN

By ERNEST A. POSTER
 United Press Staff Correspondent
 HANFORD, Cal., Jan. 8 — Two Indian languages will die when You-Mut, 79-year-old lone survivor of the Wowul and Chunut tribes of southwestern Indians, passes on to a happy hunting ground.

In a humble hut the aged princess, who speaks excellent English, Spanish and the language of the Tahe Indians, as well as her native Wowul and Chunut dialects, recalled her life for Frank P. Latta, central California historian and authority on Indian lore.

Latta is preparing a dictionary of the two languages, which will die in their spoken form with the passing of You-Mut. More than 6,000 words of the two dialects, in addition to 500 pages of notes, have been preserved on phonograph records.

A niece of Mah-Tay, chief of the once important Chunut tribe, You-Mut was born just after the discovery of gold in California in 1851. She spent her early years at a rancheria near Visalia, Cal. Indians already were neglecting their crafts, You-Mut said, and learned little of the arts of basket-making, pottery, and weaving. For a living she washed clothes and worked the fields planting grapes and cotton.

"Hello, stranger," You-Mut said to the visitor to her abode, where she occupies her time by separating seeds from raw cotton, later making yarn and weaving stockings on her primitive loom. Her eyesight has been dimmed by the years and she has "one bad ear." Otherwise, she feels "quite well," thank you, "except for a stiffness in her bones.

"They're all gone now. I'm all alone now. And my time won't be long," she remarked sadly, remembering the days when she worked in the fields with her Mexican husband.

You-Mut is very alert mentally for one of her years. Historian Latta observed. She has the greatest fund of Indian lore of anyone he ever knew, he said.

Both the Wowul and Chunut tribes were branches of the Yokuts or Mariposans that once occupied all of southern central California. The village bordered Tulare Lake, which has since dried up and been made into fertile vineyards and cotton farms.

The Yokuts still maintain a small village on their ancient camping ground near Lemore, Cal.

THURGOOD

"I don't know. I just decided to..."

Valeria was silent. Peter must not be allowed to put this ridiculous impulse into action. It might do her no excuse to be with him.

"Let's not talk about it," she said.

"It's settled," Peter said. "I've been waiting a lot of time when I could have been looking for Ann. And doing things she would like me to be doing."

"What things?" In the darkness Valeria's lips curved contemptuously.

"Working on a plan I have in mind about Kendallwood—if I can persuade grandfather it should be done."

"More of those tiresome plans for building up that horrid factory town, Valeria decided.

"Let's drive a while," she said.

"There's a wonderful moon to-night. Had you noticed?"

Peter hadn't noticed. He glanced up now, and thought the moon looked cold, remote, unfriendly.

Valeria was thinking. "He treats me as though I were an inanimate wall beside him instead of a woman."

Would he stop the car so that she could look at the river for a moment?

Peter looked at Valeria and smiled a little. But he stopped the car. lit a cigaret and looked at the moon, at the water. It was picturesque. The moon had turned the river to silver. Now and then soft clouds straggled across the sky. Then the moon would appear again and the water would pick up the silver sheen.

Valeria was dressed in white, a frock with many tiny ruffles blossoming into a little capelet over her shoulders. The tiny ruffles fluttered in the breeze against Peter's coat.

"Cigaret, Val?"

"No, thanks."

"Isn't the moon beautiful?" Valeria asked, as the silence continued.

"Yes."

Valeria sighed.

"Tired?"

"No. Not tired."

"What's wrong?"

She did not answer.

Peter turned to look at her. Her eyes met his and he saw that they were full of tears. Her lips trembled.

"Val! I'm afraid I've second-guessed you. It isn't that I don't appreciate all you've tried to do for me."

"But I haven't made you any happier. And I tried so hard. I wanted to do so much—"

"You have helped. I don't know what I would have done without you the last few weeks."

"Peter!" It was almost a whisper.

The breeze stirred her hair just then. She was so close that some of the loosened hair was blown against his cheek. Valeria leaned closer to him. There was a faint fragrance, faint but strong, like lilacs and flowers.

Peter turned again slowly, looked down and saw her soft lips raised to his. The soft, glistening lips he had kissed hundreds of times.

"But, Peter, I don't see how you could stop the work now. Things have been ordered, men engaged. There's the time Mr. Vincent has spent in planning."

"I'll take care of all the expense, but I'm going to stop the whole business. I'll close the place, or sell it."

"What is the world he has planned?"

ALIAN stared at her, but her face was in the shadows, half-turned from him.

"All right, I'll do what you want."

Doubtless, this independent post-coast Pilsudski the friendship of his. But he values more highly that he has achieved. Moreover, Marshal believes in a Franco-Polish rapprochement.
 According to the most reliable news, Pilsudski declared that when we signed the non-aggression pact with Soviet Russia, French press called me a Bolshevik, a traitor to France, because I signed a pact before France. CENTRAL AMERICAN NATIONS MAY BUILD INTER-AMERICAN HIGHWAY

PANAMA CITY, Jan. 6 — The long-dreamed-of Inter-American highway from the Rio Grande to the Panama Canal appeared near realization today as a definite scheme for construction by Central America "on its own" took shape.

Assured that sentiment from Panama to Mexico is unanimous behind a plan to build a toll road by an international highway corporation, Nelson Rousevelt, publisher of the daily Panama American, predicted actual construction would begin within a few months, and the 3,246-mile project completed within three years.

Where the project has languished under a decade of United States sponsorship, Rousevelt finds the Rio seven Republics below the Rio Grande ready to join in a co-operative effort to carry it out on their own resources, with the Yankee colossus entirely eliminated.

During a Mexico recent 30-day airplane trip to Mexico City, Rousevelt discussed the plan with officials in central capitals. Only final touching up remains to be done, and next month, the Panama publisher plans to pre-arrange to traverse the route, in preparation for a conference at San Salvador in March.

Various plans to finance the project — from gasoline taxes, to outright appropriations — have kept right appropriations in a blue print stage, the scheme in part to Central American sensitiveness to any suggestion of Yankee domination. The present plan cleverly makes the most of this inherent suspicion and prejudice, and turns an obstacle into a force to unite the interested countries. Shying at the slightest trace of dependence, Central America is ready to do it independently, and "show" the United States.

Seven Countries Represented

The scheme, for which enthusiasm is gaining, envisages the formation of a gigantic corporation whose investment would be amortized by tolls, set at a rate sufficient per mile to pay for interest and upkeep. Common or voting stock would be held by seven directors, representing each government with equal votes. The corporation would enter into uniform contracts with the governments for concessions to build, maintain and operate a toll road from the Texas border to the Canal.

The tolls would cover construction costs, maintenance, administration and interest at not to exceed four per cent of the estimated cost of $50,000,000. Rousevelt believes amortization would be complete in 40 years.

The corporation would issue bonds, backed by the integrity and legal responsibility of the seven governments, and forming a lien on the toll income of the body. These bonds would be exchanged gradually for payment for existing links in the project, cost of materials, etc.

The meeting planned for March in San Salvador will be unofficial, composed of one outstanding corporation lawyer and one outstanding highway engineer from each of

Woman Professor Foreign Correspondent During Hectic Days of Mexican Revolts

By LORENA DRUMMOND

AUSTIN, Jan. 8 — Miss Lillian Wester, instructor in romance languages in the University of Texas, has not always lived the quiet, reserved, conventional life of a teacher in a university community. She was for six years diplomatic reporter on the Mexican Herald, during its life the largest English language daily in Latin America. She is one of the few women who have acted as foreign news writers.

Miss Wester knew intimately three Mexican presidents and their wives, twenty foreign ministers, and the cabinet members of the Mexican Republic. She moved in the society of the once most glittering and pompous capital in the Western Hemisphere and reported news coming from twenty foreign ministers, and she interviewed some of the world's most brilliant men who at one time or another found their way to the Mexican capital. For one other story she received a message of appreciation from George V. king of England, sent through his prime minister and the Mexican legation. The story concerned a memorial service held in Mexico City for Edward VII, the king's father.

Republic Shaken

Miss Wester remained in Mexico City until 1913, when the United States government urged all of its citizens to return home because of a threatening revolution in Mexico. "Even though the city was at its height in splendor, the very foundations of the republic were being shaken in the years I was there," Miss Wester said.

She saw Porfirio Diaz, Francisco De La Bar, and Francisco Madero in ascendancy. She witnessed their power wane as rebellions seethed in the Mexican hinterlands; she saw the first two fall. Senor Madero, described by Miss Wester as one of the gentlest of men, was murdered in the presidential suite shortly after she left the city.

Miss Wester described the tension of the capital city during the last few months of her stay there.

Prosperity is returning — at least to American tourists.

The Foreign Travel Division of the American Automobile association has reported that 22 1-2 per cent more cars were shipped abroad in the ten-month period from Jan. 1 to Oct. 31 than in the corresponding period of 1933.

Likewise, travelers from 42 states had their cars "ferried" across the ocean to 52 ports in Europe, Asia and Africa.

Political uncertainties or currency fluctuations apparently interfered not in the least with the pleasure and comfort of motor travel abroad in 1934. Thomas P. Henry, Detroit, president of the association, said: "Facilities and ease of motor travel were more favorable than ever before he added."

Most American cars shipped abroad were light-weight and low-priced indicating a desire to economize on gas and oil. The average duration of tours this year was 60

Expect Approval

Rousevelt expects official approval by April, and actual beginning of work soon thereafter, possibly in May. He bases his optimism on the response he has already found throughout Nicaragua, Guatemala, Honduras, Costa Rica and Salvador. Present status of roads varies widely, and all countries are agreed only a co-operative organization can speed up construction.

The easy financing apparently solved the chief difficulty, and the idea, Rousevelt points out, is capable of extension to 12,000 mile highway connecting Alaska with Argentina.

Actual construction would be necessary only from Mexico City south, as the section from Nuevo Laredo to the Mexican capital is practically completed. Construction is advancing southward, and within two years should reach Aurora, Mexico. Completion of the Mexican section involves 1,728 miles, more than half of the complete crescent highway.

Advantages for All

Each of the countries would obtain advantages: immediately through payment of links already built, and relieved of responsibility for maintenance, thus enabling them to pay off foreign debts. Each would gain through sales of supplies, such as cement from Guatemala, tires, gasoline, oil and steel from Mexico. Employment would be provided for thousands.

Mexico is considered the logical leader for the project, because of its ability to supply so many required products; because of its established prestige and influence throughout Central America, and because it stands to gain in markets opened up.

The highway has many miles of roadway ready to be forged into links especially in Guatemala and Panama. Costa Rica and Nicaragua if left to themselves might need 50 years, so little has been done. Guatemala's total of 310 miles largely requires completion of short gaps and bridges. Salvador's total of 183 miles is about half done. Panama has 275 miles of all weather road finished, out of a total of 367 miles.

Nicaragua and Costa Rica have comparatively long and difficult stretches — 214 and 356 miles respectively. It is hoped to change the routing laid out by the U. S. Bureau of Public Roads of the Department of Agriculture, and this might lengthen the Nicaraguan stretch and the 87.4 miles in Honduras. Instead of following the rail line along the Pacific, the route would turn inland to Matagalpa, Nicaragua, now untapped, and thence to Tegucigalpa, Honduras, the capital off the main route.

An idea of the traffic possibilities and the potential tolls may be obtained by considering Panama figures alone. Motor transit across the Canal has grown more than 250 per cent since 1931, as Panama has extended its highway construction. In 1931 approximately 6,000 automobiles crossed each month — or 200 daily. This year the monthly average was 16,100 or 536 daily.

There are approximately 5,800 automobiles, busses, taxicabs and trucks in Panama, and more than 9,300 in the Canal Zone. Extension of the highway to other Central American countries and Mexico would be expected to add a tremendous impetus to pleasure and business travel, at a nominal charge per mile.

Estimates place the tolls at $5-000,000 a year, sufficient to distribute $500,000 for interest, $2,500,000 for amortization, and leaving $2,000,000 for administration and upkeep.

The motorist would be able to hop into his car and drive for a neighborly visit or for business to any capital in Central America, or to Mexico City. From the main arterial roadway would branch la-

DE VALERA TO BAN ENGLISH AMONG IRISH

DUBLIN, Jan. 8.—President Eamon de Valera's government is trying on a "catch 'em young" policy in its latest efforts to make the Irish Free State a hundred per cent Irish-speaking nation.

In future, English is to be banned altogether as a teaching medium in infant classes in all national schools where there is a competent Irish teacher. As a result, nearly every Irish youngster up to the age of nine will hear nothing but his own native bling Gaelic during school hours.

These measures to insure that "all God's chillun" — in the Free State — shall speak Irish, have only just become possible because until recently there were not enough teachers who could speak Irish themselves. More than one-third of the 14,000 school teachers in Southern Ireland are now certified as being competent Irish-speakers, and all those who have not yet acquir-

STATE HEALTH OFFICER LISTS MEASURES TO CONTROL RABIES

AUSTIN, Jan. 8.— Rabies is commonly supposed to prevail only during the hot months, but is in fact more prevalent in cold weather, according to Dr. John W. Brown, state health officer. More dog bites occur from April to September, than from October to March in this climate, because dogs run abroad more freely at this season of the year, and many dogs are killed needlessly. However, the heads examined at the state laboratory during the cool months show a high number as having rabies.

Rabies is primarily a disease of dogs and in this way is transmitted to man. It is kept alive in Nature mainly by the dog and the Gog family. Rabies in cats and skunks is comparatively rare and is but occasionally transmitted to man.

The saliva of rabid animals contain the germ of rabies. Rabies may occur in persons with extremely small abrasions of the skin contaminated with infected saliva. The incubation period of rabies in man is usually from 40 to 70 days, but it may be longer up to a year. The average period in man is forty days although this period is usually shorter in children or following bites on the face. The closer the bite is to the brain the more dangerous it is.

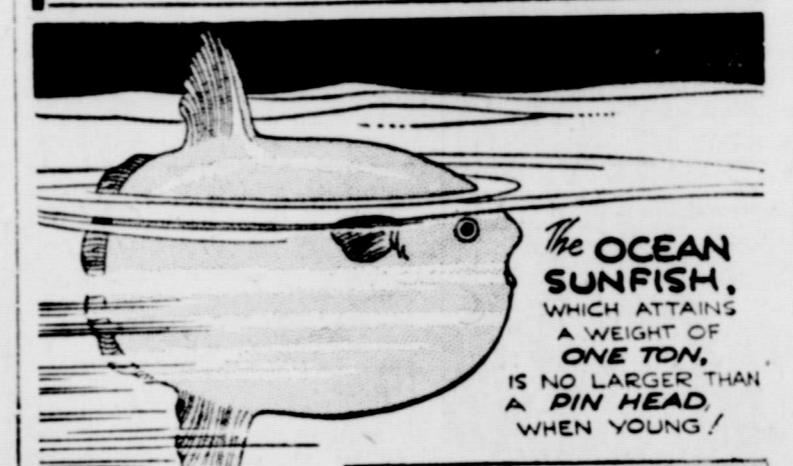

The disease may be controlled by means of intelligent measures directed towards the dog. It is mainly the stray dog that keeps rabies alive. Stray dogs should be impounded and ownerless dogs killed. Dr. Brown said. All dogs should be licensed and required to wear a tag. Owners of such animals should be held legally responsible for damage inflicted by them. All cases of suspected rabies should be promptly reported to health officials.

Care should be exercised in killing a suspected rabid dog, not to injure the brain, for if this is done it is impossible for the laboratory to make a satisfactory examination.

Soldier-Musician

THOUGH most of the members of the seventy-piece Ford Symphony Orchestra, heard every week in the Ford Sunday Evening Hour over a coast-to-coast network of Columbia stations, have appeared as soloists many times, few of them have a story connected with their appearances which equals that of Josef Karr, one of the organization's best violinists.

Karr, who was born in Munich, Germany, and did not come to this country until after the war, served in the German army as an infantry soldier for the four years of the conflict. In the summer of 1916, he was stationed with his unit on Mount Ormont, in the Vosges mountains. One evening, the commander of his company, knowing him to be a violinist, came to him with a battered old violin which had been picked up in one of the neighboring villages, and asked Karr to play on it. Karr put it to his shoulder and played, first, "Drda's" "Souvenir."

The German soldiers, hearing good music for the first time in months, burst into thunderous applause. But what was strange was that not all the applause came from the German trench. At least half of it came from the French trench, only 150 yards distant.

Karr played again, this time the beloved "Meditation" from "Thais." Again he was greeted with the same international applause. For the moment, war-time malice was forgotten, and for over an hour the strange concert in "no-man's-land" continued. Toward the end, Karr was playing largely in answer to requests shouted over by the Frenchmen.

A few days later, the two detachments were at each other's throats in a major engagement. And that Karr was a soldier as well as a musician is proved by his proud possession of the German Iron Cross, as well as two other military decorations for unusual heroism in action.
