ADDIS ABABA, Oct. 8. — A strong Ethiopian force has invaded Italian Eritrea and penetrated a considerable distance into the country, it was announced officially today. A brilliant operation sent a flying column across the northern frontier into Eritrea Saturday, it was disclosed, while an Italian army was preparing to storm Aduwa, which Ethiopian troops had been ordered not to defend in force. It was said on reliable authority that 15,000 men, largely cavalry, had been sent across the frontier.

ATLANTA CITY, Oct. 8. — American business industry, and agriculture have "actually made the turn" toward better times, Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins said today in a speech to the American Federation of Labor.

She placed particular emphasis on "the highly significant fact that the durable goods industries are forging to the front."

Miss Perkins urged both employers and labor to recognize the principal of "self rule and to act always in the public interest."

"I make a most earnest plea, not only to the country's wage earners, but to the employers and all other groups, that there be no weakening of the spirit of unity and of cooperation which we have so bravely been showing in our attack on the forces of the depression."

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Oct. 8. — Mrs. Mandy Calvey is going to apply for the old age pension if she can learn her age. Police haven't been much aid to her.

She walked into municipal court, gray-haired and wrinkled, and asked meekly: "How kin a body find out how old he is?"

Authorities were puzzled since flying weather was fairly good yesterday and a regular Los Angeles - Mexico City transport plane, leaving a few minutes behind Kurtz, landed here at 6 p. m.

LIQUOR BILL REPORTED IS MUCH MIXED

AUSTIN, Oct. 8. — A liquor regulation bill that in one clause prohibits by the drink sales and provides for them in others was reported favorably by the senate today by its state affairs committee.

Admittedly the section must be harmonized, but the bill was sent out to expedite action, without necessary changes.

Terms regulating by the drink sales permit only drinks not to exceed 24 per cent alcoholic contents in eating places where gross food sales exceed liquor sales. Sales may be made up to midnight.

An attempt to change the definition of an open sale, previously adopted by the senate was resisted. The dyes won the point by a vote of 8 to 7.

LIQUOR SALES IN DRY SPOTS ILLEGAL

FORT WORTH, Oct. 8. — Selling liquor in the territory that is dry by local option and without a permit is illegal, District Judge A. J. Power ruled today in dissolving a temporary injunction restraining sheriff's officers from seizing liquor in a store here.

Nathan Rubenstein, owner of the store, had begun to remove its contents as court opened this morning and at the conclusion of the hearing it had been cleaned out thoroughly.

CHICAGO, Oct. 8. — Striking farmers burned two railroad bridges and blew up a section of track in an effort to cut off Chicago's dwindling milk supply today.

The latest outbreak came just after Governor Henry Horner attempted to break the week-old strike by proposing a 30-day truce to carry out arbitration negotiations.

Members of the United Farmers of Illinois, sponsor of the strike, voted to continue withholding of milk until dealers increased the price paid to farmers.

Toy Balloons To Mine Skies Urged

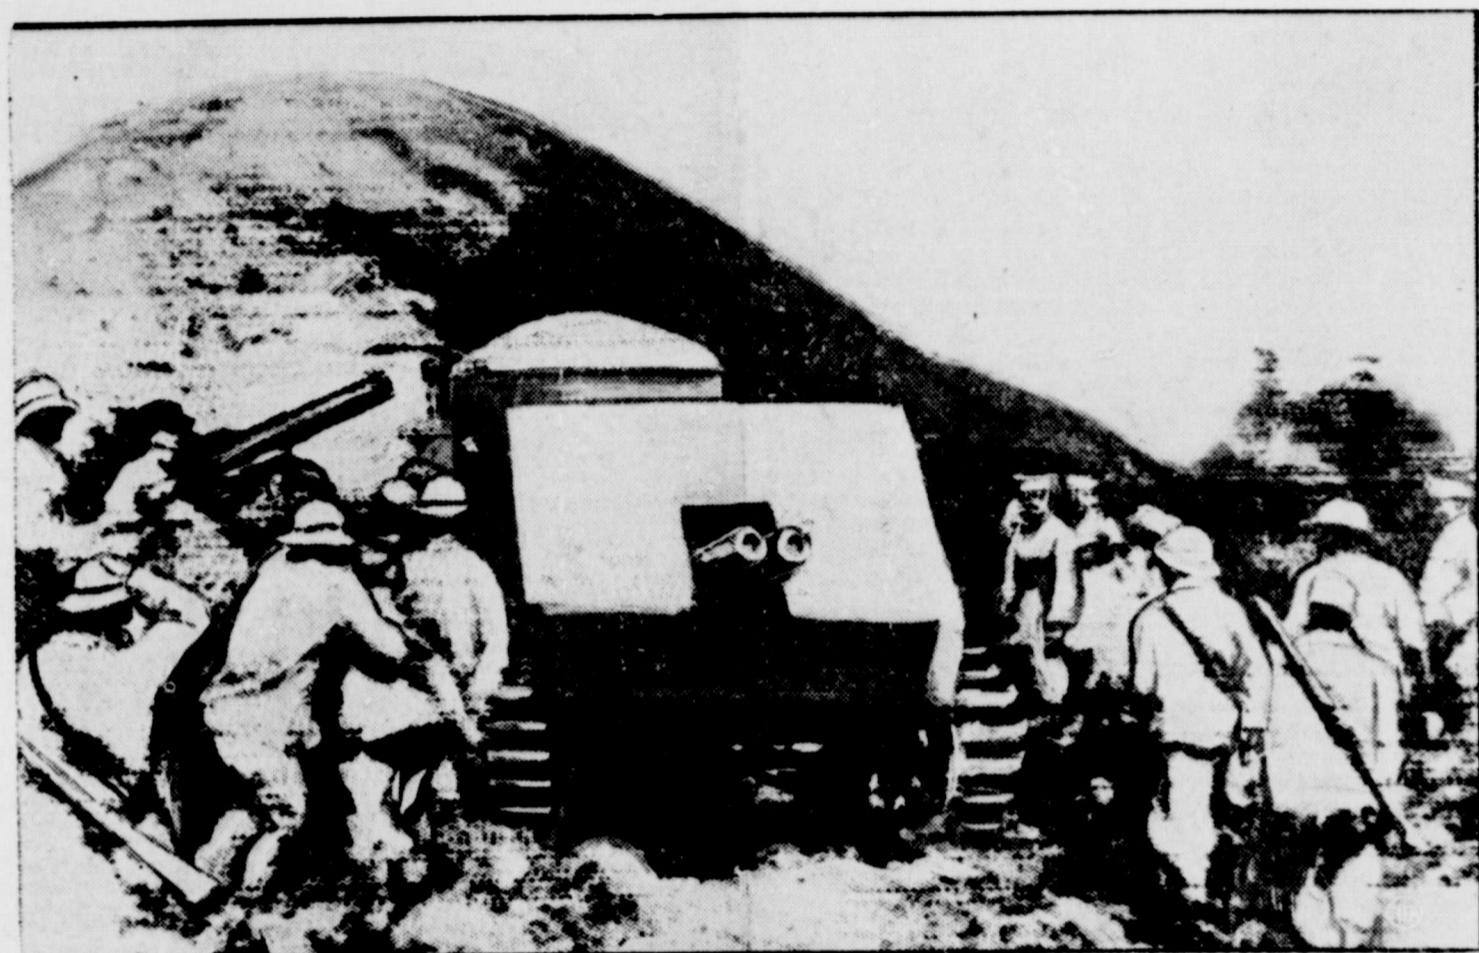

ADDIS ABABA, Oct. 8. — There's a fellow from Texas who wants to sell the Imperial government a million toy balloons. The idea is simple.

The North Sea was mined during the World War. This is purely an adaptation of the idea. The air is mined.

A bit of dynamite is tied to the balloon. It floats somewhere above the city, an airplane comes along, and . . . There's another fellow who wants to market almost any given number of metal sandals, to protect the bare feet of the Ethiopian army against a burning chemical.

According to high official sources, the government is not considering buying either.

Friday.

Appointment of five members to act as a board of managers when evidence is presented was asked of the house.

A vote to hear the charges against McDonald was 65 yes to 47 No. The house must now set a date for hearing the evidence and his answer to the charges. It may remain after the special session expires Tuesday for impeachment proceedings.

Jobless Musicians In Paris Increase

PARIS, Oct. 8. — The number of musicians of all kinds now out of employment in Paris is large. Mechanical music has displaced them in mist cafes and cinemas.

Evidence of their professional solidarity was furnished not long ago, in the boulevards, where groups connected with the Foyer des Artistes gave concerts in aid of their distressed colleagues. These concerts would attract considerable crowds in the Place de l'Opera, the Place de la Madeleine a nodther centers, in respect of which police permission was usually obtained. Many well-known singers and musicians contributed to this very cheap entertainment of the public.

The Charity Clothing Drive

The drive for clothing for Cisco's needy will begin this week. The drive, which will be carried on by the United Charities and Welfare association, will be for old clothes which are still good and which may be distributed to persons who can use them during the winter.

Much good has come from clothing drives in Cisco, conducted by this organization, in the past. Many garments which otherwise would have been allowed to hang in closets until they were no longer usable have been collected by the Welfare association and distributed to the worthy needy of the city, who have not been able to remain warm during the winter.

Much good has come, also, from the drives for funds which the organization has made in the past. During its earlier years it was one of the principal relief bodies of Cisco and was the only strictly local charity. With the coming of the federal relief agencies, however, the Welfare association dropped somewhat into the background, taking as its chief work the supplying of clothing and shoes to the needy.

With this year, however, there is to come a change. The president of the United States has pointed out that local and private charities will have to bear most of the burden of direct relief this winter, while the government is making an effort to cut the relief rolls by furnishing jobs to the employables. Thus it will fall to such local organizations as the Welfare association and such private organizations as the American Red Cross to carry on where the government has left off. The Welfare association will begin this week with a drive for used clothing.

The association was organized for this year at a meeting in the city hall yesterday. At this meeting H. L. Dyer was named president, being promoted from vice president. He succeeds J. T. Elliott, who has been a capable leader for the charity organization for four years. Dyer has had much experience in charity and it should be a case of one good man following another. A capable executive board has been named, including E. P. Crawford as vice president, Philip Pettit and Mrs. Charles Sandler as secretaries, and L. D. Wilson as treasurer. The organization is ready to begin its clothing drive. Will you be ready to cooperate?

League Attitude Against Italy

The League of Nations council of 13, with the exception of Italy, yesterday adopted a report terming Italy the aggressor nation in the Ethiopian dispute and consequent invasion, and binding themselves to press for League sanctions—commercial and financial boycotts—against Italy. The report is to be turned over to the League assembly on Wednesday and it is believed that that body will adopt it with little hesitation and that Italy will promptly withdraw from the League.

If such sanctions are rigidly enforced and Italy is unable to obtain aid from a nation which is not a member of

Behind the Scenes in Washington

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
 NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON—More than a year before election, the administration has counted on the 41 electoral votes of the six New England states and virtually kissed them goodby.

Everyone here admits New England is sore and the general idea is that hardly anything can be done about it. Optimists hope that business will improve to the point that Roosevelt can hold Massachusetts and Rhode Island, which he captured in 1932 while Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, and Connecticut were reasserting their traditional Republicanism.

Traveling recently in that northeast corner of the nation, your correspondent undertook to learn more about this state of affairs. There were many handovers of that brand of Republicanism commonly called "reactionary" and no area is more horrified by "the spending program."

But the big boil on the New England neck is the state of its textile industry and Roosevelt is generally blamed for failure to reduce the size and pain.

THE New England viewpoint was fully outlined to me by Basil Brewer, publisher of the New Bedford Standard-Times.

Brewer was one of many New Englanders who felt the cards were stacked against the northern cotton-textile industry when Roosevelt appointed to investigate conditions and problems a committee consisting of Secretary Hull, a low tariff man; Secretary Wallace, high tariff; and Secretary Hoover, whose background and interests are southern; and Secretary of Labor Perkins. The committee's report, Brewer says, was a "washout."

The south's low wages and abundant cheap labor supply, the AAA cotton processing tax, and Japanese textile imports are the chief sore spots, and the first factor is primary in the tendency of northern mills to move south.

RECENTLY the big Pepperell Manufacturing Co. reported a last-year business of about $23,000,000 and a loss of about half a million. The concern paid some $4,000,000 in processing tax and New England feels that if there had been no processing tax such a company would have had something between an even break and $2,500,000 profit.

The AAA replies that the tax is uniform among all mills and that losses would have been the same without it, because cotton textiles is such a fiercely competitive industry.

The Pepperell company recently estimated it could pay 10 per cent above southern wages and operate profitably. But the average textile wage differential between north and south is placed at from 15 to 17 per cent.

WITH NRA and its code-fixed differential out and an apparent strong New England prejudice against "tinkering with the Constitution," conservative business men feel organized labor could solve the problem by a hard organization campaign in the south—with fewer strikes in the northern high wage area, where its ranks are strong.

Here arises another complication, because cotton farmers averaged only $400 cash income last year (it was $242 two or three years ago), indicating a large cheap labor reservoir which would threaten a higher wage structure.

the League—such as the United States, Germany, or Japan—Mussolini likely will be forced to ask for peace at once, since he will have nothing to fight with or to feed the people back home. Of the three nations mentioned, one can erase the United States, since this country has already taken the attitude of keeping out of war by refusing to send war materials to a belligerent nation. Japan, while it has followed much the same sort of policy in Manchuria as Italy has in Ethiopia, is said to sympathize with the African country. Germany alone remains and there is considerable doubt that the Nazis would be willing to join forces with the Fascists against the world.

It appears that Ethiopia, rated as a puny country, hardly a fit adversary for Italy, might turn out to be the David that drove a stone through the forehead of a Goliath.

The GOLDEN FEATHER

by Robert Bruce

BEGIN HERE TODAY

JEAN DUNN, pretty, 21-year-old secretary, and BOBBY WALLACE, young automobile salesman, spend an evening at The Golden Feather night club.

ART LANNING, the proprietor, introduces them to Sandy Harkins, who explains he is in Dover on business. Sandy and Jean dance. When he asks if he can telephone her she evades.

Later Sandy has a mysterious conversation with two men who mention Jean's employer, Donald Montague, and hint they "may be able to do some business."

LARRY GLENN, federal agent, talks with Bobby and Jean. After they leave MIKE HAGAN, detective on the local police force, joins Larry, who shows him several photographs of a pretty girl and asks, "Ever see her before?"

Larry explains he is on the trail of WINGY LEWIS, bank robber, and hopes to locate him through this girl, EVELYN BRADY.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER VI

Donald Montague signed the last of the sheaf of letters that lay on his desk, shoved the little pile aside, and said, "There—that's done. He looked up at Jean and said, "Well, if you'll get these off, Miss Dunn, you might as well call it a day."

JEAN picked up the letters and her own desk. Glancing at her wrist watch as she did so, she exclaimed, "But Mr. Montague—it's only half-past eleven."

"What of it?" he asked with an air of paternal amusement. "It's Saturday, isn't it? I've a luncheon engagement and I'm not coming back this afternoon. You can use the extra hour, can't you?"

"Oh—of course—and thanks," she said, slightly confused. She withdrew, prepared the letters for mailing, and five minutes later was on her way out.

Born and reared in a small town, she knew moments when the great city was almost unbearably oppressive and confining; and she suddenly realized that this afternoon she must manage somehow to get out into the open country, away from the crowds and the noises and the bustle and confusion of Dover.

"I'd like to take a long hike across the fields," she mused. "Let's see—who could I get to go with me?"

She thought of Bobby; but she knew he would be working all day, and she also knew that an afternoon in the country would revive his romantic instincts and cause him to speak pleadingly of marriage and a little apartment. Today she didn't want to be proposed to.

Hastily she mentally scanned her list of girl friends. One or another of them, surely, could be induced to join the expedition. "I'll hurry home and change, and then start telephoning," she thought. She walked to the corner and caught her street car.

stream; at this point it was no more than a brook, not six feet wide, with firm banks. Jean boldly spurred directly toward it and took her horse across it in one graceful leap. Then she reined in, and came to a halt at the edge of the woods.

Sandy was beside her, looking at her admiringly.

"Say," he said, "you can ride, all right."

She was breathless, laughing, with little wisps of hair escaping from under the scarf.

"I used to ride almost every day, down home," she said.

"Good girl," said Sandy. "You did that jump like a champion."

Their eyes met in comradeship; then, with one accord, they turned their horses' heads and followed a shaded lane through the trees.

It was cool under the trees, and the horses' hoofs made no sound on the black spongy earth. Sandy rode with effortless ease, his long body relaxed loosely in the saddle.

"You must have ridden a lot yourself," said Jean, who nodded.

"I was brought up on a horse," he said. "Not here. Out west."

"Cowboy?"

"My folks owned a ranch."

"They rode on farther in silence. Presently Jean asked him, "What do you do, anyway?"

He looked at her coolly, for a moment, and then grinned.

"Oh, he said, "I just sort of travel around, from here to there and back."

"Lucky," said Jean. "It must be nice to not—to be tied down."

"It is," said Sandy.

They came out of the woods into an unimproved country road. It led them in a gently undulating course past the woodland, along the edge of a prosperous-looking farm and around a bend to an ancient wooden bridge over a small river.

They talked lazily as they rode. Sandy seemed a strange combination of frankness and reticence. He spoke of life on the western plains, of going hunting in the Osage hills, of nights under the stars in far-off camps; but he seemed to be reluctant to say much about the present, or about his reasons for leaving that open western country.

"You must want to get back there," said Jean. He looked at her soberly, and when he grinned, at last, there was something wistful in his eyes. "Yeah, I guess maybe I do," he said. "Reckon I will too some day."

They left the river and came out in a broad pasture lot. Beyond the level expanse of grass they could see the roof of the riding academy barn rising above a clump of trees.

"Another race?" said Sandy abruptly. Jean answered by leaning forward and spurring her mount forward. Again they went drumming across the springy earth, and again a wild sense of physical exhilaration and mental well-being took possession of the girl, so that she found herself laughing aloud, for no especial reason, when she finally reined in her horse at the far end of the meadow.

Sandy came up beside her and pulled his horse to a halt. Then suddenly he leaned over, slipped his arm about her shoulders, and kissed her on the mouth.

may be a reason, but in many cases it's just a habit. Some have their minds on the next meal and time passes slowly. Others do not ask the time for they might not like to be reminded of the few and passing hours.

Everyone should have a time-piece handy and be punctual in all cases, whether it's to school, to church, to work or to a party.

UNDER THE DOME AT AUSTIN

AUSTIN, Oct. 8—Thirty years ago a rather awkward member of the Texas house of representatives from Uvalde was lucky to gain recognition of the speaker.

This week, he could have chosen his own time to address both the house and senate. He declined the opportunity.

Lieutenant Governor Walter Woodul, Speaker Coke Stevenson and 15 house and senate leaders went to Uvalde to visit the former member, now vice president of the United States.

They wanted him to be in Austin Tuesday afternoon. "Him, I'm going fishing Monday and nobody will be able to find me Tuesday," vice president Garner told the delegation.

"I won't let anyone call on you for a speech," promised Speaker Stevenson. "We will not keep you up after 9 p. m.," pledged Woodul.

Both tendered use of their apartments in the capitol, newly furnished and improved. But they could not induce Vice President John Garner to change his fishing plans.

Senator Clint C. Small, Amarillo, twice candidate for governor, will not run for public office again. He so told fellow senators as he pushed along his bill defining an "open saloon."

"There is no politics in the bill," Small assured the senators. "I do not intend to run for office again—I probably could not be elected if I did. I am just trying to get what I believe is best for the state."

Small was a candidate for governor in 1930 when Ross S. Sterling was elected. He was candidate last year when James V. Allred won.

W. W. (Ranger Bill) Sterling tore up his copy of a photograph that pictured him with former mayor Jimmie Walker of New York, the mayor wearing Ranger Bill's tennishat.

The reason Sterling destroyed the picture was that the same day, Mayor Walker, visiting Harlem, put his arm around a negro's shoulder and said: "I am color blind."

Bill admits that it probably was good politics for the mayor of New York but it made him so mad he tore up the picture.

Other copies were preserved. One appeared last week in a national weekly, illustrating an article by Stanley Walker, former Lampasan.

At the time the picture was taken, Sterling was in New York for a Madison Square Garden Rodeo. The Harlem incident hasn't ended his admiration for other qualities of Gotham's wise-cracking little ex-mayor.

Sterling tells of a hitherto unpublished wise-crack of Mayor Walker, uttered at the time. When the hat picture had been taken, one of the busters rode a horse right up to the back of the mayor. He didn't flinch, but as the horse nosed Walker, Ranger Bill tried a wise crack of his own.

"Let's have no horse play," he said.

"And no back-biting," chimed in the mayor.

Ranger Bill after a term as adjutant general is now so busy with oil prospecting along the San Marcos river that for the first time in 28 years he missed the opening football game played by the Texas Aggies.

An Aggie game without Ranger on the sidelines is hard for Aggie-land to believe.

Tax bill authors have a tendency to estimate very liberally the amounts of revenue their measures will produce.

At a recent session of the house of representatives committee on revenue and taxation, five authors estimated that their bills would net at least $8,000,000.

Other committee members disagreed. Chairman Walter E. Jones suggested a sub-committee to estimate probable income.

"I refuse to be deprived of my right to make a guess," interrupted Member Bob Alexander, Childress. "I move that all members of the committee make a guess and we average them."

Members of the house of representatives have eaten crow twice since the special session began. First time was when senators refused to pass an expense bill until the house removed an amendment that limited senatorial drawing on the joint fund for house and senate.

When first pay-day came around without any pay in sight unless the bill was passed, the house withdrew the offending clause.

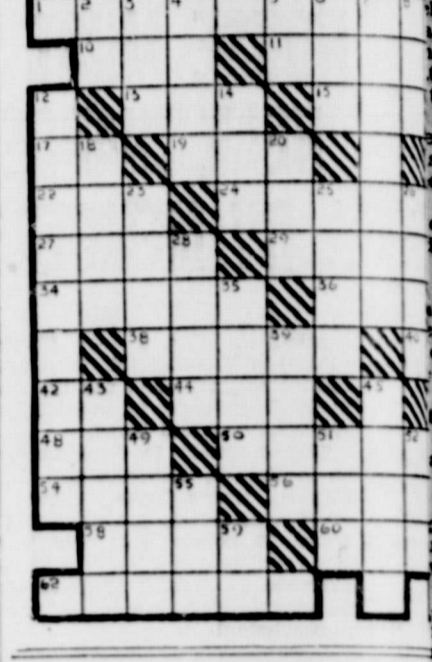

The senate's second chance to punish house members came when a circus visited Austin.

It was contrived that all circus passes were delivered to Bob Barker, secretary of the senate. To get circus passes, house members had to apply to him.

There was a steady stream of house members filing into the senate all morning of circus day. They

Cotton This Week Is Higher Grade

The cotton from representative farms in Texas classed this week as higher in grade but shorter in staple length than the cotton classed last week.

This week about 19 per cent is strict middling (white and extra white) in comparison with 13 per cent reported last week. For the season to date, 18 per cent is strict middling. The proportion for strict low middling and low middling is smaller than last week, 22 per cent this week against 29 per cent last week.

The average staple length for the cotton classed this week is considerably shorter than for the cotton classed last week or for the total cotton classed this season. Larger proportions are shown this week for staple lengths shorter than 7 1/2 inch and for 7-8 inch staple, while smaller proportions are shown for Spectacular. That was the word series.

The fans go for the sport itself. They like perfection. But when the dramatic, the spectacular can be thrown in, they like it even better.

When the Tigers came to bat in the last half of the ninth inning yesterday and Manager Mickey Cochrane got to second after there were two outs, the crowd was tense as it waited to see what Goshin would do.

The veteran Goose showed them. He stepped up to bat and smacked out a single that scored Mickey and sewed up the game for the Tigers to win their first world championship in baseball history.

Football is the same way. When Southern Methodist University a few years adopted its "aerial circus" style of play it not only played havoc with teams from other sections of the country, but started the turnstiles to clicking.

The fans liked the aerial type of game, in which the ball traveled from one end of the field to the other in an amazing flash of speed and showmanship. Other teams in the southwest conference continued to hand the Mustangs lickings, but SMU was the team known throughout the nation as one of the most spectacular on the gridiron.

The late Knute Rockne is said to have remarked upon one occasion that he used the famous Notre Dame style of play not so much because it was superior to any other in vogue, but because the fans were paying their good money to see his fighting Irishmen play football, and he wanted to put on a good show for them.

Rockne always did put on a good show, too, from the days when he was snaring passes in his own undergraduate days until the end of his career came in a dramatic plane crash.

Other sports have seen the importance of showmanship as a drawing card at the box office, too. Wrestling, which once held a very lowly place in the realm of professional sport, now packs 'em in, all due to the fact that a football player named Gus Sonnenburg forgot the few holds he had learned and remembered only how he had tackled opposing backs on the gridiron.

The spectacular move, unheard of before in the realm of the mat sport, revolutionized the game, and brought the flying tackle—pure showmanship—into vogue.

"Well Jim, I'm ready to go to town with you this morning."
"Why dear, what's the occasion?"
"Not an occasion Jim, just an opportunity and a little secret that I've been keeping for a few days until I had tested it out."
"I don't quite understand dear, what do you mean an opportunity just what did you test out?"
Well, you know Jim, Christmas is only a few weeks off and I have in my mind a special present for this family, besides I've found a sure way to get some extra pocket money for Christmas."
"Just what is the "special present for this family and how can we get that extra money for Christmas?" "We certainly can use it."
"Well, do you remember the other night when we were on the way to the movies with that nice newly married couple that live next door, don't you remember how Ethel winked at me and laughed?"
"Yes, I wondered why the hilarity."
"It's like this Ethel helped me start and I didn't want her to give my secret away just yet, that's why I told her to hush because I wanted to tell you myself."
"Tell me what, Helen dear."
"I wanted to tell you, Jim dear, that even tho we have only just completed paying for our new home we can have that new car after all; that is the "special present" this family is going to get for Christmas and better yet, we won't have to go into debt for it, either;—"
"How in the world—"
"It's like this, I've entered the Opportunity Club and have already secured several subscription payments, four of them for a year, three for six months and a number of three months too; all of which mount up to a considerable total of sales credits. In fact, so far I haven't had a single person turn me down."
"Do you mean The Daily News, American and Round-Up Opportunity Club? I've been reading about it in the paper and it's a fine thing."
"I'll say it is, Jim, for there are no losers in this as everyone is guaranteed a cash commission and that is where the extra money for Christmas comes in."
"That's fair enough."
"Isn't it? You see I've secured the Warren's subscription, and the Johnson's, the Stone's, the Smith's and would you believe it, even Norris's have taken it. I have promises from all the folks in our crowd and I want to ask you now about renewing ours for another year. What do you think? If you do whatever you can to help me, Jim, that new Chevrolet Master Sedan will be ours for Christmas and it won't cost us a penny."
"Certainly, I'll help you dear, go right ahead and send in our re-newal for another year and if you'll just give me one of those books now I'll sign up a few more for you when I see some of the boys."
"Jim, you ARE a dear and just the very best husband in all the world."

Beautification Is Planned Monday By Garden Club Here

Plans for a beautification program were outlined yesterday afternoon when members of the Garden club and those interested in beautification, met at 3 o'clock in the City Federation club house at 400 West Seventh street. Mrs. C. H. Fee, president, presided during the program. A round-table discussion brought suggestions from various members of the society. The club requests the cooperation of Cisco citizens in making Cisco one of the cleanest and prettiest towns on the highway. In order to do this, it was said that care must be given lawns, destroying rubbish, cleaning vacant lots, caring for dead trees and also trimming those trees that are not dead. It was also announced that crepe myrtle or rose bushes can be ordered, if desired, through the club from the committee, Mrs. C. H. Fee and Mrs. J. T. Berry. The club has asked that Cisco women save seeds and bulbs for an exchange which will be sponsored by the federation soon. The next meeting date will be the first Monday in November.

Woman's Weak, Nervous Condition Helped by Cardui

In thousands of cases where Cardui has been taken to help women overcome monthly discomfort, it has been reported to have been of valuable assistance. "Before I began using Cardui, I was so weak that when I closed my eyes I felt like I was going to fall," writes Mrs. J. W. Harris, of Pelzer, S. C. "I was very nervous and had a pain in my side. At times, I would have to go to bed. This made me more nervous as I had six children and there is always work on a farm. My mother had taken Cardui and told me to try it. I took six bottles, after which I was up and able to do all my work, washing and ironing. I have nothing but praise for Cardui." Of course, if Cardui does not benefit YOU, consult a physician. Adv.

Museum Finds Aged Maya Torture Ovens

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 8 — Mayas enclosed themselves in limestone ovens and endured terrific heat to sweat out body oils, Linton Satterthwaite, Jr., revealed upon his return from Guatemala, where the University Museum is conducting archaeological excavations. Eight of these ovens have been uncovered. The young archaeologist believes that with the exception of two similar ovens at Chichen, Itza, his discovery stands alone in Mayan archaeological history. Satterthwaite said the Mayan oven, or sweatbox, consists of an outer and inner chamber connected by sunken passages. A fireplace was built in the inner chamber where the patient lay after hot coils were raked out. The Indians lined the fire chamber with pieces of broken pottery. They apparently knew that limestone does not endure strong heat.

HOST AFTER DEATH

MONROE—The Rev. James Downey of St. Mary's church, Anchorage, who was found dead in his rectory, was host six days later to 100 fellow priests at a dinner following his funeral. A note found after his death directed that the meal be paid for from his estate.

WARRIORS ARE BEING TAUGHT NOT TO MASS

By EDWARD W. BEATTIE
United Press Staff Correspondent
ADDIS ABABA, Oct. 8. — The work for a definitely scattered type of battle has gone out to all Ethiopian warriors. "Don't mass under any circumstances; stick to cover wherever possible; concentrate on harassing rather than attempt directly to repulse an invader." These instructions for battle are believed to offer Ethiopia's only chance of success against modern arms. Granting that the defenders adhere to them, the tortured plateau will become their most powerful ally against an invader. Without them, the natural advantages would be lost and 20th century weapons and break havoc on their ranks. Schooled in Mass Attack The natural inclination of the Ethiopian fighter, according to foreigners who have witnessed year after year of civil war, is to overrun his opponent at the first opportunity. But the same observers believe that constant warnings by Emperor Haile Selassie and by foreign military advisors have convinced at least the leaders and officers that massing would be fatal. "It is hard to bombard a mountain," modern Ethiopians say. "You
