ENGLAND ASKED TO IMPOSE EMBARGO

EDEN, HOARE URGE CABINET TO TAKE STEP

By United Press LONDON, Dec. 2.—The advisability of imposing an oil embargo against Italy was understood to have been urged at a special cabinet meeting today by Sir Samuel Hoare, foreign secretary and Capt. Anthony Eden, secretary for League affairs.

The cabinet was reported to have discussed the possibility of the oil embargo might be delayed if Mussolini halts hostilities in Ethiopia and reopens negotiations with France and Britain on a basis of reasonable conditions.

It was stated the cabinet postponed a final decision pending clarification of the fate of Premier Pierre Laval's government in parliament tomorrow.

FRANCE HOPEFUL OF PEACE SOLUTION

PARIS, Dec. 2.—Government quarters refused today to abandon hope that a basis for negotiations of the Italian-Ethiopian crisis may be found before the League imposes an oil embargo on Italy.

Premier Pierre Laval's most recent talks to Vittorio Cerutti are said by French spokesmen to have done much to dissipate whatever misunderstanding may have prevailed on the outset.

Laval will embark on the next effort this weekend when he hopes to see Sir Samuel Hoare, British foreign secretary, here.

Founder of Britton Training School Dies

DETAILS FOR FUNERAL NOT KNOWN HERE

News has been received here of the death of O. C. Britton, founder and former head of Britton Training school of Cisco, now Randolph college, at Durham, N. C., Sunday.

Funeral arrangements were not immediately available, relatives said, this morning. The educator's wife is the daughter of the late John F. Patterson of this city.

Mr. Britton, described as "a friend of the country boy and girl," began his career as a teacher in Eastland county schools and founded the Britton academy, which offered academy work and courses in teacher training.

The academy was operated successfully for several years until Cisco made the educator an offer to come here and start a school. This resulted in the founding of Britton Training School on the present site of Randolph college in 1909.

Once 250 Students The school grew and in 1915 the standing was raised to that of a junior college. At one time there were 250 students enrolled.

The school was operated until 1917, when the outbreak of the war forced it to close. J. T. Elliott, former dean, today recalled that one day alone 17 students enlisted in the army service and withdrew from the training school.

Leaving Cisco, the head of the school went to Oklahoma and later identified himself with a text book concern. He has many friends and former students here, who recall him as an outstanding teaching personality and one who did much to further education for the "country boy" of this area in the early days.

MISCHIEF TO STOP DECLARE CISCO POLICE

Police today warned against what appeared to be "wilful destruction of property" which has been occurring during the last week in increasing volume.

The destruction of property, presumably by boys with air rifles and sling shots, included the shooting out of street lights, church and other windows, and other forms of mischief.

"We want to ask the parents of Cisco to keep a little closer track of their youngsters," Police Chief M. L. Perdue said this morning.

"If they don't, they need not be surprised if they have to come down here to find them in the city hall. This destruction of property has to stop."

Street Lights Broken He pointed out that during the last week many street lights have been shot out, as well as other damage done.

It was pointed out that the shooting of lights is not only costly but is dangerous as well.

Better Business In RFC Loan Decline

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—A sharp decline in industrial loan applications to the Reconstruction Finance corporation was cited by Chairman Jesse Jones today as evidence of business improvement.

Jones said borrowers were now going to banks and "there is no doubt that banks are really trying to lend."

The President Works Even on His Vacation

VIOLATION OF LAW IS DENIED BY GILCHRIST

AUSTIN, Dec. 2.—General denial that the state highway department is violating provisions of the prevailing wage law was made today by State Highway Engineer Gub Gilchrist in a statement to a legislative investigation committee.

The committee, appointed by the house, decided first to hear complaints, then to ask the highway department for explanations.

Meantime, the committee asked the department to disclose the source of information in "fixing prevailing wages."

Lawson Wilberly of the state labor department said the highway commission had declined to disclose their source when the labor department questioned the accuracy of wage scales on construction of a warehouse at Camp Mabry, near Austin.

Present law permits the body awarding contracts to determine the prevailing wage scale. Wilberly read a letter from the highway department to senators, opposing changes in the law which already had been adopted in the house.

Patman Vetoes Marching Order

Congressman Wright Patman is at his home in Texas. He did not take kindly to Senator William Gibbs McAdoo's advice to California legionnaires "to march on Washington and make a militaristic demand on the congress." Indeed, he shouts the advice given by the distinguished McAdoo. Rosy-cheeked Patman said another bonus march would be the one thing which might prevent payment of the bonus. In addition he added this suggestion or outline of what the legionnaires should do:

"Everyone concedes the bonus will be paid. We differ only on the method of payment, on which issue we anticipate a friendly fight, but a march on Washington would be disastrous."

Texas' Patman claims his bonus payment plan now is more "popular than ever despite American Legion and Wall Street opposition." That his bill goes before congress Jan. 13. Representatives of the American Legion, no doubt, will attempt to have stricken out provisions for paying the debt in new money. But if two billion dollars must be raised in taxes, chances for payment are less.

Borah As Presidential Possibility

Senator Borah is one of the widely known statesmen of the republic. In off years he is always an independent. He is a thorn in the side of republican presidents, or he was a thorn when there were republican presidents in control. He has had a long career in politics. He is an independent at all times except on election day and then he votes the straight republican ticket. He would crush all monopolists in off years and then on the day the ballot is the thing, he forgets all about the big protectors of monopoly and howls for enforcement of anti-trust laws. Regardless of all this, he is a bold champion of the rights of the states. He is making his plans for a nation-wide speaking campaign. He has announced in advance that he does not believe in a federal anti-lynching law. He placed his views in writing for the education of a most powerful group of negro citizens of America. He very boldly declared that the enactment and enforcement of lynch laws was the business of the state he would not sign a federal anti-lynching law if he were president of the United States. In other words he would veto if necessary to uphold the rights of the commonwealth as to its own internal affairs.

When the secretary reads the list of delegates elected to the republican convention next year the southern republican leaders will see to it that "The Lone Wolf" is "on the outside looking in" and that brother Herbert Hoover of California may be on the inside looking out. All states should have lynch laws and all laws should be enforced. A law should be a law and not a joke. Crime should be punished and lynching is a crime. Mobs, masked or otherwise, are a menace to law and liberty. There are established courts of justice and the representatives of organized gov-

Behind the Scenes in Washington

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NRA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON—Behind the scenes, fury and hallyhoos over Mr. George Berry's NRA conversion of labor and industry Dec. 5 is obscured the one real explanation of what the show is all about:

This administration, though unwilling to admit it publicly as yet, wants a national 40-hour work week, child labor legislation, and—if possible—a minimum wage law.

Purpose of the Berry conference is to drum up articulate support from industry for such a program in the next Congress. In a campaign year it isn't considered good medicine to seem to be shoving such legislation down industry's throat.

Insiders are uncertain whether a majority of the industrial representatives at the meeting can be persuaded to support industrial legislation of this type. NRA is dead and as good as gone. There's no thought of trying to revive it. But the big problems NRA was supposed to solve remain.

Unemployment, the biggest, is accentuated by everybody's realization that if 1935 production levels are regained within a year—as some administrationists expect—six or eight million people still will be out of work.

Such a labor surplus is sure to hold down wages and mass purchasing power while continuing the relief problem.

Code labor standards have been generally smashed except where strong labor unions could preserve them, and output per man per hour, meaning technological unemployment, increases rapidly.

WHAT Roosevelt would like is an admission by industry of the necessity for labor legislation. He doesn't want to kiss NRA good-by without leaving something in the statutes that will tend toward curing the unemployment disease and that can be amended later as need seems to require.

Unsympathetic with organized labor's demand for a drastic 30-hour week, he nevertheless feels the principle of a 40-hour week should be conceded by any reasonable industrialist and that a shortening of hours is still a vital need of the industrial system.

There are plenty of industrialists who agree with him—and there's reason to believe they're being organized for the December meeting. But they seem to be outweighed by the mass production industrialists who want no industrial legislation, led by automobiles, steel, chemicals, electrical equipment, and allied financial interests.

Outcome of the session is unpredictable as yet and it may just be a cat-and-dog fight between industry and labor. But the foregoing is what it's all about.

IF you read how the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad was turned down by the Interstate Commerce Commission for another REC loan and consequently was forced into reorganization, you probably also read that this was the first instance of its kind.

That isn't so. Several other roads, some of them large, have been turned down informally and without publicity by the ICC, with the result that they went into bankruptcy.

The big thing the ICC had in mind in promptly making public its decision as to the New Haven was that no railroad official would have advance information with which to make money on the stock market.

UNDER THE DOME AT AUSTIN

GORDON K. SHEARER

United Press Staff Correspondent
AUSTIN, Dec. 2 — Intensive training in criminology will be given in a school to be conducted at Camp Mabry, beginning Dec. 9.

There, 26 new members of the State Safety Department force will have a month's instructions before going to work.

SHEARER

26 selected on the results of the tests.

Besides the usual physical training and traffic instructions that have been given Motor Patrolmen at Camp Mabry, the new school will be expanded to take in general instruction on crime detection.

Gus Jones, San Antonio, an ace among Uncle Sam's "G" Men, will be one of the lecturers to the new "S" Men Jones planned and participated in the capture of George "Machine Gun" Kelly after the kidnaping of oilman Charles Urschel. Instructors from the University of Texas also will help teach the new officers. Courses will be given by various professors whose specialties can be useful in crime detection.

C. G. McCraw, former Beaumont official, will be in charge of the school.

A favorite complaint of highway delegations seeking to route a new road somewhere besides where the Texas highway commission and its engineers think it should go is "Nobody lives there."

The commission, with an eye to the future, usually answers that the state-approved location is straighter, cheaper, or offers greatest opportunities. One southeast Texas group hounded away at the commission to secure a changed route. They explained that the survey by Engineer Gibb Guichrist went through a "bottom country" where nobody lived. They admitted it was shorter and a better way to reach major cities in the area.

Commissioners silenced them by saying Texas has a 95-mile strip of paved highway without a single house along it. The road is state highway 130 from El Paso toward Carlsbad, New Mexico, through El Paso Hudspeth and east into Culberson county. The pavement extends 100 miles, but visitors say there is a house five miles from the east end. It cuts nearly 75 miles from the distance between El Paso, Carlsbad and Texas Panhandle points.

Texas legislators in off moments often give way to vocal calisthenics. One of the pastimes, singing, resulted in a recent locker room serenade by four young members of the House. They were Representatives Byron England, McKinney, Fred Harris, Dallas, R. Emmett Morse, Houston, and J. Manley Head, Granbury.

Leading songster of the senate probably is Roy Sanderford, Beiton. He led the assembly in singing "Home on the Range" at recent memorial exercises for Will Rogers. Senator Eph Davis, Brownwood, never is happier than when he can gather a quartet to harmonize "Old Faithful."

Representative J. T. (Doc) Roach, Lufkin, gives house members a chuckle occasionally with a very authentic reproduction of a settler's hen. More than once Roach eased the tension in sessions this year by slipping to the microphone and going "cut-out-cut-out" before Speaker Coke Stevenson could rap for order.

Another well known voice is that of Representative R. H. Holland, Houston. His booming imitation of a town crier—"I vote No-o-o-o! Mr. Speaker," never fails to get a laugh from the gallery.

House members do not propose to let the senate have all the oil portraits. Edmond Pizzella now is painting a likeness of Coke Stevenson, first man to be speaker of the house of representatives for two successive terms. It will be hung in the house at the next special session of the legislature. Gov. Alfred has indicated that will be in January.

Stevenson is popularly referred to as the "Will Rogers of the House."

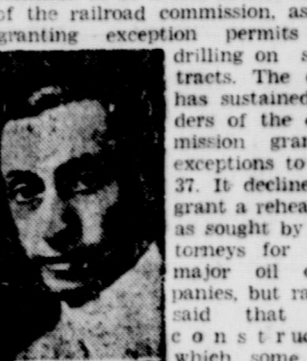

His kindly and witty remarks really surpass those which made Rogers famous, because they are delivered on the spur of the moment.

Rogers charmed Texas legislators on occasions when he addressed them by his cracks at local affairs, but before those speeches he talked to many officials and prepared the comments in advance of delivery.

Texas Topics

By RAYMOND BROOKS

BROOKS

AUSTIN, Dec. 2 — Supreme court has ruled that reasonableness will continue to be a test of oil orders of the railroad commission, as to granting exception permits for drilling on small tracts. The court has sustained orders of the commission granting exceptions to rule 37. It declined to grant a rehearing, as sought by attorneys for the major oil companies, but rather said that the construction which some had sought to infuse into its original in the Brown vs. Humble case was erroneous. It had remarked that acreage might be a factor in determining the production of a given well; but this week it declared specifically it had not held that acreage was the controlling factor. If it had ruled otherwise, the owners of large tracts would at once have dominated the fields, and either choked the small producers out of existence, or have destroyed the market — and they wouldn't have destroyed their own market.

The decision denying rehearing settled what promised to be a major's tempest in the oil industry.

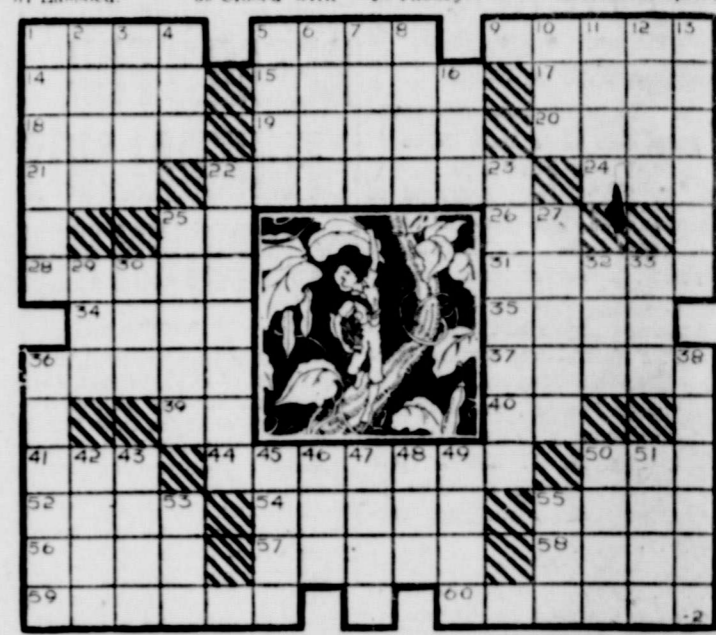

It will continue for the present to be an "age of plenty" rather than of scarcity in oil production. There will be more, much more, discussion in December of the proposals to raise Texas fields back to higher oil production, rather than further to restrict them. Railroad Commissioner Lon A. Smith has announced in advance his purpose to seek to enlarge the East Texas oil output and has figures to show that the field suffered more loss of pressure with few wells and the lowest production, than with more wells and more per-well allowable.

East Texas is producing 28 per cent of one hour's potential, or 1-16 of 1 per cent of what the wells would flow. Some fields are producing over half their potential and over half the wells in Texas of "marginal" classification and on pump, are producing all that can spread her wet dress on the brass fender and placed her shoes near the fire. Scott returned quickly, having contrived, somehow, to look immaculate without appearing stiffly groomed. He went to the telephone and called a number. Dana heard his voice protesting, "But this is an emergency, I've got to have a taxi. Get one out here and I'll make it worth your while." He hung up and called another number, with no greater success. Then he came to the door, and stood there, frowning a little. Dana sat on a footstool near the fire, the light bringing out the bronze gleams in her hair. She looked very slight and boyish with the man's robe belted about her feet lost in Scott's leather bedroom slippers. "All the taxi places say they have a waiting list a mile long. It means an hour's wait, at least." Dana said cheerfully, "Well, that's all right—now that I'm good and dry." "It was all kinds of an idiot to bring you here," Scott said slowly. "Regardless of the fact that you are an ornament to my hearthstone I'm going to have to get you home in a hurry. While we're waiting for your dress to dry and the cab list to shrink I'll stir up some eggs and make coffee. Sorry there's not much else to offer. The only meal I have here is breakfast, and I didn't foresee that my car would be in the shop at the same time the elements would choose to play the devil."

THE elements were still playing the devil, Dana thought. Rain was pouring against the windowpanes as though a giant hand were dashing buckets of water from above. Now and then there was a roar of thunder, followed by vivid streaks of lightning. But there was a feeling of security in the cozy, unpretentious room with the firelight playing softly on the salicy surfaces of old wood and bringing out the warm tones of the rug. "Let me help," Dana offered. "Can you cook?" "Try me," Dana boasted. "Nobody can make a better omelet. It's one of my specialties." "Just for that bragging I'm going to turn the kitchen over to you," Scott said. "All right. But first I'll call Grandmother and tell her not to worry." She got Aunt Ellen on the phone. The receiver against her ear crackled alarmingly, followed by an ominous roar of thunder. Dana said quickly, "I'm having dinner with a friend, Aunt Ellen. I'll be home later." It wasn't possible to go into details with a storm roaring about your ears. Besides it would require a lot of explaining to tell the whole story. No use worrying them all for nothing. When they heard just how it had all happened they couldn't blame her. Newspapers next day were to record that the storm was one of the worst that had struck the town in years, to describe the uprooting of trees and how tops were lifted
